Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Haugh are visiting their daughter, Mrs. G. Mentzel, in Baltimore.

Dr. J. J. Weaver, of Uniontown, paid our office a friendly visit on Tuesday.

During the past week we have had several of the heaviest rains of the season.

If we know where we are at, it strikes us that Taneytown is a little slow with the wedding crop.

Dr. James A. Steuart, Secretary of the State Board of Health is now in town, looking after our sanitary condition.

Dr. C. W. Weaver bought the Elmira J. Shriver property on New St., last Saturday. The price paid was $1250.

Dr. C. Birnie will leave on Monday on a trip to Omaha, Nebraska. Miss Fannie Birnie will accompany him as far as Ohio.

A merry party of young ladies and gentlemen from D. P. Creek, passed through town on Friday morning on their way to Gettysburg.

It is our desire that the ministers send us the marriages and deaths which occur in their respective charges.

Salesmen for Wilmore's analytical reference Bible are canvassing this section. The work seems to be complete in all details.

Arthur W. Coombs, a former citizen, paid us a short visit on Monday morning, while on his way to his present home in Gettysburg, Pa.

Rev. H. Max. Lentz of Florence, Kentucky, is visiting friends in town, and will likely preach in the Lutheran church on Sunday morning.

Until October 14th, the address of Rev. Oliver M. Ruark, of Middleburg, Md. Church will be, Box 61 Salem, Columbia Co., Ohio.

Rev. McSherry and family returned home on Thursday after an extended trip in Pennsylvania, in good health. There will be regular services in the Lutheran church on Sunday.

Mr. Hiram Few presented a fish (german carp) to Mr. W. W. Crapster of this place on Thursday, which weighed 7½ lbs. and measured 26 inches in length.

The Reindollar dwelling property on Middle street, will be sold this Saturday afternoon. This is desirable either for a residence, or an investment.

We must submit to our contemporaries. To the best of our knowledge there have been no large, or very fine cantaloupes grown in this vicinity this season.

The eclipse of the moon last Friday night was rather a poor affair, altho the makers can't give us a better one than that, they had better resign their job.

Our office has just issued for the Carroll county christian endeavor union, a very handsome pamphlet containing the constitution and By laws for the government of the County Union.

Some miscreants devastated the melon patch of Mr. Fogle near Copperville not long since. Not being satisfied with eating their fill, they spoiled all except a few. How human beings can act with so little sense we cannot understand.

We are sending a large number of RECORDS to subscribers in many of the far western states. There are surely many more who would like to have our paper, and we again ask their friends and relatives to give us addresses to which to send specimen copies.

A delegation of our Patriotic Sons paid a fraternal visit to the Littlestown camp on Friday night, and report having had a fine time. A number of members were prevented from going on account of circumstances. It is now in order for the Littlestown camp to return the visit.

Camp No. 2, P. O. S. of A., of Md., of this place, has further beautified its lodge room by the placing of 5 large silk flags, and three colored standard lights. When they secure several other contemplated additions they will probably have the finest lodge room in the county.

The last celebration of the season in this neighborhood, was held by Shaw's Union Sabbath school last Saturday. The exercises were interesting, the singing being very good, and the addresses instructive and edifying. The Taneytown Band furnished the music, this being its eighth and last engagement for this season.

The jolly merchant of Gettysburg, Pa., who recently placed an "ad" in the Record, Telegram, Patriot, and Heart and Hand for a "Wife Wanted", received 1675 applications from ladies all over the Union, who promised to make him good clerks, and all wanting to be merchants wives. If he does not find his ideal of a wife in this batch of applicants, it will not be the newspapers' fault. They have pressed the button, he must do the rest.

William Hawk living near town reports having lost forty-three chickens and one turkey from the pink eye disease. Poor chickens! They have numerous epidemics and the uncertainties of life to contend with, in connection with frequent visits from thieves—and the not so frequent, but equally dangerous visit of the preacher. Who would be a chicken!

The democratic primary election will be held in this place to-day (Saturday), between the hours of 5 and 6 p. m. The county convention will be on Monday the 24th, and the District convention at Towson on Tuesday October 20th, where a candidate to represent the second congressional district will be nominated. There is a contest in this county, between the Talbott and Henning families for the control of the Carroll county delegation to the Congressional Convention. The fight is becoming warm and the chances are the primaries will be exciting. Mr. Henning has always had many warm friends in this district and his ticket will likely win. The Talbott men say that no matter how the county goes, Talbott will receive the customary renomination.

NOTES HERE AND THERE.

It is currently reported that Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, will soon become Mrs. H. Kyd Douglass.

The Gettysburg Electric Light plant will be in operation in thirty days, but the electric road will not be operated again this year.

Mrs. Brown, wife of David Brown, a well known citizen of Cranberry village died on Wednesday from injuries received while jumping over a fence.

Burglars entered the Western Maryland Railroad Station at Cave-town and several thousand revolver cartridges and a large quantity of flour and cigars were stolen.

The Westminster trotting, driving, and pleasure association, have fixed upon Wednesday, October 3rd, as the date for its opening attractions. Rain interfered with the event which was advertised for Wednesday of this week.

NEW EXCHANGE.—We are in receipt of the CARROLL RECORD, recently established at Taneytown, Md. It is brimful of news, well made up and equally well printed. We shall heartily welcome it for its intrinsic worth.—Catoctin Clarion.

On Monday Peter Shank of near Greencastle received word that his horse stolen several weeks ago had been captured in Washington and also the thief. The horse chews tobacco when given it and was identified in this manner.—Village Record.

The attendance of students at Western Maryland College at the opening of the fall term this week exceeded any previous similar period in the history of that institution, the number enrolled reaching two hundred and twenty-five, of whom forty-eight entered at Levine Hall.

The daily Blue Ridge Zephyr which was started as an experiment by Editor Martin of the Waynesboro Gazette, may resolve itself into a regular Waynesboro Daily. The solution is left with the patrons, as proper support is all that is necessary to secure its continuance.

The Mayor and Common Council of Manchester have had the streets and alleys of that town resurveyed by Mr. Weldon B. Wooden, of Hampstead, who followed the lines of the original survey made by Richard Hooker about seventy years ago, when the town was laid out for Richard Richards.

On Thursday evening, Sept. 13th, 1894, a Y. P. S. C. E. was organized at Keyville under the direction of Rev. A. Bateman, of Taneytown and Rev. Patterson, of Union Bridge. 16 united themselves with the society, and others have promised to do so later on. It will be a Union Society, (not denominational.)

A score of the members of Company H, Ninth Regiment, of the National Guards of Pennsylvania, who attended the State military encampment at Gettysburg, are down with the typhoid fever in its worst form. Nelson Tearlson, a private, has died, and Privates Site and Barsley are not expected to live. The men are supposed to have drunk polluted water at Gettysburg.

The authorities of the Baltimore exposition have succeeded in securing the Grand Army of the Republic reunion for 1897. This will undoubtedly result in bringing to the city at that time a large number of persons who would not otherwise be present. The manager is also negotiating for the "49 mining camp" which was one of the attractions at the California mid-winter exposition.

The select Castle of Maryland, Ancient Order Knights of the Mystic Chain convened at Lonsdale on the 18th in their third annual session. The reports show the order to be in a very prosperous condition. Officers elected, of which J. W. Beck of Harney is select vice commander. The next session will be held in Harney on the third Tuesday in September 1895.

We have just read an interesting historical sketch of Union Bridge, which was read at that place on the occasion of the July 4th. celebration in 1876. The sketch is in the shape of a closely printed 8 page pamphlet of good size, and was written by Joshua Switzer, now deceased, who was a well known citizen of the town. Such histories should be carefully preserved, and re-printed from time to time, as they are apt to become rare even in the space of twenty years. A history of Union Bridge was also prepared by Rev. W. H. Luckenbaugh for the same centennial Fourth, which we will reprint in the near future.

Improvement of St. Joseph's Church.

The interior of St. Joseph's church, of this place sadly needs renovation, nothing in the way of improvement having been done to it since its erection in 1876. We are therefore happy to announce that extensive improvements to the interior of the building will be commenced on October 1st. Mr. Joshua Biehl, painter and decorator of Kingsdale, Pa., will have charge of the work and it is expected that it will be completed by November 1st.

In the mean time the edifice will be closed, and opened again only on the above date. Church services on the four or five intervening Sundays will be held in the rooms of the school house adjoining.

Taneytown Literary Society.

The Taneytown Literary Society will meet at my house on the last Friday (26th) of October, at 7 o'clock p. m. This postponement is owing to the temporary absence of the President and Vice President. The main object of the society is the mutual improvement of its members, and incidentally to afford the opportunity for pleasant social intercourse and amusement.

Its membership is not confined to any sect or class, and, while it makes no effort to persuade any one to join it, will heartily welcome any one who wishes to study, and aid in making it a success. All the expense attending it is five cents a month dues.

C. Birnie President.

WHEAT FOR HORSES.

Dr. Robert Ward says it is injurious. Tuberculosis Among Cattle.

Is wheat a good thing to feed to horses? Some of the farmers in Western Maryland have been giving wheat to their stock rather than sell it at the present low market price, and they have discussed the question very much for several weeks.

Dr. Robert Ward, a veterinarian, says that wheat is exceedingly injurious, and these are some of the reasons he gives for his opinion:

"Wheat, as every one knows, contains a large amount of albuminous matter or gluten. Now when this gets into the stomach of a small horse, the stomach reacts chemically with the gastric juices there. It is not assimilated as more digestible foods would be, but begins to ferment and give off gases, and the stomach becomes swollen and distorted. It is especially so in the case of the one which a cock takes advantage of when she mixes up flour for bread and sets it out to rise. The horse has a feeling of flatulency in his stomach after eating a lot of wheat, and when the diet is kept up for any length of time, the horse becomes a victim of horses dying from rupture of the bowels and similar troubles. If the wheat is burned or malted before it is given to the stock, it ought to be very fattening, for the process of fermentation has taken place before it gets to the animal's stomach."

"Wheat is almost but not quite as injurious to swine as to horses, because the hog's stomach is larger than a horse's. I am not sure that there is any danger in feeding it to cattle. The cow has four stomachs, and being a ruminant animal, with plenty of saliva, she brings up the food from her first stomach, remasticates it, and thus makes it easier to assimilate when it goes down again."—Sun.

On Tuesday the 18th, inst., Uncle John and his boon companion, Lee, after having inhaled a copious supply of Jersey Lightning started out to paint the town red. Keyville.

The farmers are very busy getting their crops in, and find it to be much better than they expected. As a general thing a good crop will be harvested throughout Carroll and Frederick counties. Some farmers have sown part of their crops of wheat and others are preparing the ground for the same and a large crop will be sown.

The festival which was begun by the Keyville Sunday school, on the 6th, was continued, owing to the inclement weather on last Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, when they were assisted by the D. P. Creek Band, which rendered some of their choice selections. We must say that for the short time they have been practicing they did remarkably well. Stick to it boys, and you will come out O. K.

THE TROLLEY CASE.

The Gettysburg Electric Road in Court before a Jury of Condemnation.

(Extracts from the Star and Sentinel.)

The United States jury of condemnation in the proceedings against the Gettysburg Electric Railway Company resumed its sitting on last Tuesday morning. The attorneys for the United States were District Attorney Ingham, and his assistant Robert Ralston, and for the railway, Messrs Heebner, Hart, and Willis. The point of difference between the contestants in the case is the value of the mile of track which the government desires condemned. The railroad claims that by taking this loop the whole road would in effect be destroyed, and that therefore the mile is worth $300,000. The government opposes this and says the road will not be appreciably injured by being compelled to take the new route, and that they are willing to pay liberally to the Trolley Company for its removal, but that damages should not be had for more than the value of the portion so removed.

Mr. Hoffer was the first witness called and stated that the contract price for the road was $195,000 to be paid in first mortgage bonds to Dr. C. C. Co. the contractors. This company failed after having paid a total of $90,664.53 for materials and work when they quit.

They had $150,000 of bonds, some of which were placed at $90,000 in a Trust Company. The company failed, the panic came on and "I did not try to place the bonds." The company and he furnished a total of $49,285.56 for various items. He said the total amount spent exclusive of money due was $149,101.05.

The gross receipts since May 1st, have been as follows: May $641.86, June $1097.55, July $1713.59, August $5123.24 a total of $9076.28. He considered a fair estimate of gross receipts from May to November would be $15,000, and considered $200,000 a fair valuation for the property and franchises of the company.

On cross examination he said he held all the shares except 25, which went to five or six friends to qualify them as directors. He owned $100,000 for stock in cash. Upon being closely questioned he said but $10,000 was actual cash. He gave his brother, the treasurer, a due bill for $90,000, and in consideration of his work for two years, the property and rights of way he secured, the same bill was handed back to him and he took stock for $90,000. Mr. Ingham thought this very liberal pay, but Mr. Hoffer explained that he had left a large business at home. All the real estate and right of way was cost $432.

The light Company has a capital of $25,000. This amount except the value of a few shares he paid in cash, which was invested in the line. Interest has been declared on the $150,000 of bonds held by him, but the $50,000 held by him as collateral are not entitled to interest and no demand has been made. The receipts from July 16th, to No. 1st, 1893 were $7,913.38.

In the event of the route of the road being changed he thought nothing of the receipts would be lost, and he did not consider the proposed route a feasible one. Millard E. Thomson and Frank B. Musser, two electric road experts testified that the plant was worth from $250,000 to $300,000 judging from its earning capacity, and thought the road would not pay expenses if the route was changed. They placed the actual cost of the concern at about $158,000.

William Wible, Adam Erster, Alexander Spangler, Calvin P. Krise, and others testified that in their opinion the change of route would very disastrously affect the business of the

To our Advertisers.

With the next issue our first quarter year will be ended. We would be much obliged to our advertisers if they will kindly pay their bills for advertising space by the quarter. The bills are now made out, and with the lot we have included a number which have not yet run three months as we desire if possible to have all our regular accounts come due at the same time, therefore a bill is ready for every present advertiser, up to September 20th.

JUST NOW Baltimoreans are trying to predict what extravagance they will indulge in, should the Orioles win the base ball pennant. Baltimore has always been a good ball town for a tail end club, but should they come out on top this season, something remarkable in the way of a demonstration will occur. Manager Hanlon is already spoken of for Mayor of the city, and for Governor of the state.

Record Breaking.

Ocean steamships are making every effort to break fast records across the Atlantic, and the passage of the Lucania from San'y Hook to Queens-town in 5 days 8 hours 38 minutes, which is the fastest time ever made between these points, will induce other vessels to try to lower it still further.

It seems to us that ocean travel is degenerating into simple racing, in which the travelling public takes additional risks in order that the pride of steamship owners may be gratified. Rapid travel is what the country wants without doubt, and when improvements can be made without endangering public safety, such efforts are in line with laudable progress, yet, it is generally the safest plan to make haste slowly unless there is absolutely no increased danger in increased speed. Record breaking for a horse, bicycle or yacht, is a sporting matter entirely. People who indulge in sport for either pleasure or money, must, in order to win, strain their powers to the utmost and take chances.

But a vessel or train of cars which transports hundreds of valuable lives for pay, should we think, be restrained by law if necessary, to consider first the safety and rights of its patrons, who in all probability do not care whether the trip is made a few hours shorter or longer than a previous record.

Political Duties.

An election of importance is approaching. It is therefore in order to call the attention of voters to the duty they owe their country, to the privileges which they enjoy, and to the responsibilities which are incident thereto. This is a question which every one should understand, in this "Government of the people by the people and for the people," and it is of the highest importance that every one should exercise the right given him to cast his ballot according to the dictates of his conscience, and not shirk the duties of citizenship.

No one has a moral right to stay away from the polls at any time. We always think when it is reported that a "light vote has been cast," that a number of people simply failed to do their duty. Political parties are all right, and are a necessity for good government, but the party to which a man belongs need not always be right, and in just such cases a man should, to be patriotic, cast his vote against his party rather than stay at home and dodge his duty, so that he may be able to say afterwards "I told you so." It is always bad policy, as well as unmanly to claim privileges of citizenship, and then disregard them, for the same reason that it is essentially vicious to claim any thing of value for which one is not willing to render an equivalent. We like to see vigorous active campaigns, where every person is registered on all sides who are entitled to vote, and where every vote is out which can possibly be brought out; then, the result is likely to accurately represent, the greater principle of the American form of government—majority rule.

The proper duties of an American citizen are not many, but are very important. The whole duty may be summed up in a single word, loyalty—to country, rather than party.

It often occurs that a man acts with a certain party for a long number of years so long that he can scarcely realize that any good can be connected with another party; and yet, the time may come, when his party does something, or advocates a policy, which he thinks to be wrong. It is then his privilege and his duty to rebuke his party by his vote. Not that he should advertise the fact, to the extent that he has left his party, but that simply for the time being, by his ballot, he exercised the right of true citizenship. In these coming elections, which involve the control of the next congress and legislation for two years, this right of citizenship should be exercised emphatically.

The voter's delight should be to promote his country's welfare, he should vote intelligently and not under party lash, and when he has done this, he has performed the duties of citizenship patriotically, to the best of his ability, and this is all that can be required of him.

Merchants' Association.

For several years the editor of the "RECORD" has seen the need of a Merchant's Association in Taneytown, and about a year ago the matter was spoken of at a business meeting and was generally commended, but for some reason nothing material was done. The reason for, and the advantages of, such an association can not well be enumerated in a short newspaper article, but we will state briefly a few of the principal objects.

The credit system in this town has been most outrageously abused, and business men of all kinds will likely admit it. Credit has been practically given without time or limit, and without any regular system which belongs to correct business methods. This is evidently wrong; it is worse, it is ruinous! More than this it really benefits no one, not even the person to whom credit is given, and only results in inevitable demoralization and uncertainty, and possible ruin for our business men.

An association can remedy this, and injure no honest man, by simply laying down certain rules and regulations, and enforcing them. The medicine may act slowly, but it will be sure, and will in the end give us a healthy and educated scheme of credit, for those who do a credit business.

What is the plan? Simply this, do as all wholesale city merchants do, establish terms, and compel those who buy from you to pay up when the time expires, or lose credit not only with your house, but with every one in the association. Every retail merchant must pay his bills in from 30 days to 4 months in accordance with the terms of the house from which the goods were bought, or get rated in the mercantile agencies as being slow pay. Merchants as a rule strain every effort to keep their credit good, because they know they must; the country purchasers would do the same if they knew they must—or get on the black list.

Particularly at this time, when business is so much depressed, and sharp competition pares down profits to the closest of margins, it is simply suicidal for any merchant to attempt to buy his goods on 30 days, and put them out without knowing when they will be paid for, if at all.

Too much credit is just as injurious to the buyer as to the seller; people often buy goods before they need them, and often don't need them at all, just because they can buy them on time. Credit encourages extravagance; unlimited amount and time puts a premium on dishonesty; and many a man can trace his ruin to the so-called accommodating storekeeper, who left himself or family buy too many goods without the cash.

Merchants of Taneytown, it is your fault! Stop it! You will do yourselves and the community a true and lasting benefit by establishing the true system of credit—but you can only do it by organization.

Another good reason for a business men's Association is, that by and through it, you can accomplish much good in promoting the interests of the town. Such an association would be composed largely of intelligent, responsible, and representative men, who can exert a strong influence in whatever direction they make an effort. Public improvements, new enterprises, and progress generally, are the fruits of just such energetic organized effort which may be expected from such associations.

It is simply an illustration that a bunch of sticks bound together is stronger than any number taken singly. "In Union there is strength."

Another feature of such bodies is the fraternal one. There is too much ill feeling displayed among dealers, and a friendly monthly meeting would have a decided tendency toward smoothing rough edges and destroying unnecessary friction. The business man is practically a slave, and largely because he chooses to be. He works longer hours than any laborer in the country, he has more to worry him than the President of the United States, and takes less time for recreation and pleasure than was ever intended by his Maker. Such a condition is likely to exist indefinitely if the remedy is not applied; of course, this proposed organization will not be a panacea for all our ills, and it may not be easy to form, but from our point of view it is worth the trial.

We have stated the main features as briefly as possible; of course we do not pretend that we have covered all points, but if by introducing the subject, and by offering our columns to the public for a further discussion which eventually leads to the formation of a Business Men's Improvement Association, we believe firmly that the CARROLL RECORD will have done this community a greater benefit than has been done it in many years.

The Tariff of 1894.

The above is such a threadbare subject, that we hesitate to give space to it, but the Youth's Companion in its last issue handled the question in review in its own incomparable style, which is so plain that we think our readers may gain a better knowledge of the tariff question than they have heretofore had, and we therefore reproduce the article.

"After a struggle almost unexampled in our parliamentary history for its length and bitterness, a new Tariff act has been passed and has become a law.

A few words will tell in outline the course of Tariff legislation during the last seventy years. A system of "protection" prevailed from 1824 until 1846, when the Democrats passed the "Walker" Tariff act, so named because Mr. Walker, Mr. Polk's Secretary of the Treasury, devised the scheme. Under this act nearly all duties were cut down, and the law has been called a "free trade" Tariff. Further reductions were made about ten years later; but just before the Civil War began the policy was reversed and a protective tariff was enacted. The duties were greatly increased during the war, in order to provide revenue. After the war, although numerous acts were passed removing or reducing duties, no general revision of the Tariff took place until 1883.

The changes then made were generally, though not always, in the direction of lower rates. In 1890 the McKinley act was based wholly on the principle of protection. It actually reduced the revenue from imports, because it made sugar free; but the rates on many articles were advanced.

All the acts from 1861 to the present year were the work of Republicans; the act of 1894 was passed by a Democratic Congress.

The Democrats have repeatedly taken the ground in their national platforms that the principle to be observed in making a Tariff is "revenue only." If they had been united in holding to this principle the Tariff act of 1894 would have been quite different from what it actually is.

Many Democrats, however, hold to the principle that while revenue should be the chief consideration, it should not be the only one. They would arrange the details so as to favor American productions. A few of them go further than this, and are, frankly, protectionists. A great many others of the same party, although hoping some time to attain free trade, fear that a sudden change of policy might bring disaster. Still others wish for protection to the industries of their own states, while favoring free trade as a general principle.

The result of these divisions is an act which its supporters wish to be regarded as a measure of "revenue reform," not as the act they wish to have passed. Probably not one member of either branch of Congress was fully satisfied with it. In the same way probably not one member of Congress in 1890 was completely satisfied with the McKinley act.

The bill which was passed by the House of Representatives was much nearer what the country expects as a Democratic Tariff than that which has become law. But the Senate is quite evenly divided, politically, and a few of the Democratic and populist member insisted on certain changes as a condition of giving their support.

The leading features of the new act are: first, a restoration of the duty on sugar; secondly, a large and somewhat general reduction of duties on manufactures, taking away a part, but not the whole, of the "protection," heretofore given to domestic manufactures; third, a step in the direction of "free raw material," by abolishing the duties on wool and on lumber and salt; and fourth, an income tax.

The condition of the Treasury, in these hard times, required a large addition to the revenue, and this will be given by the sugar tax. So far as the lower duties on manufactures, and the remission of the wool duties are concerned, these are in partial accordance, at least, with the policy of the Democratic party. The income tax, of course, is not a part of the Tariff proper.

The history of the remarkable struggle between the Senate and the House of Representatives is extremely interesting; but we cannot enter upon it here. The new Tariff act is certain to be the great topic of political oratory during the coming canvass for members of Congress, and perhaps in the still more important canvass of 1896 for the presidency.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

Washington, Sept. 17, 1894.

Interest in a primary contest for a Congressional election has probably never been so widespread in this city,

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report as was felt in the Breckinridge-Owens-Settle fight. This was attested by the crowds before the newspaper bulletin boards, and the queries by telephone and otherwise. Government officials and citizens generally awaited the result with great patience. There was no demonstration of public feeling over the news of Breckinridge's defeat, but the crowd remained until the latest report gave definite news of Owens' triumph.

The defeat of Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge by Owens is hailed with no strongly divided feeling by statesmen in Washington. Opinions have differed somewhat as to the outcome of the great contest. The two candidates have had their partisans here as well as elsewhere, and their canvass has been discussed with considerable ardent interest; yet it has been noticeable that the conservative sentiment among politicians has been antagonistic to Breckinridge. Most Democrats admit that Colonel Breckinridge had outlived his usefulness as a member of Congress after the scandal, and it is doubtful whether he would ever again have been assigned to an important Committee place had the result of the primaries in his district been other than the returns show to have been.

The Secretary of the Treasury acting under the Docketry Law to improve the methods of accounting in the Treasury Department, to-day dismissed from the service Jason E. Baker, chief of the National Bank Division of the Treasury, D. W. Herriott, assistant clerk in the Treasury office, and thirty clerks selected from various bureaus, whose salaries ranged from $720 to $1800, the dismissals to take effect October 1st. This is the first batch of dismissals under the Docketry Law. In all the law provides for a reduction of the force of the Treasury Department of about 150, but some of the changes have been anticipated by not filling vacancies.

Secretary Herbert returned to Washington this afternoon on the Dolphin from a month's inspection trip of the Navy Yards on the Atlantic Coast. While away the Secretary visited the Brooklyn, Boston, New London, and Norfolk Yards, and the Torpedo Station at Newport, Rhode Island. In the latter place he attended the lecture delivered on National law at the training school, and was much impressed with the progress made in this direction.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris has returned to Washington with the intention of making it her future home. She has leased a house on R street between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. At present she is busily engaged in getting her house in order, as well as settling upon a school for her daughters, whom she wishes to have near her. It is rumored that the widow of General Grant will spend at least a part of the coming winter with her daughter.

AMBITIOUS GIRLS.

SOME GREAT WOMEN WHO WERE PRECOCIOUS CHILDREN.

Some Notable Examples Which Go to Prove That Ability Is Apt to Reveal Itself as Early With Girls as With Boys—Some of Them Had to Struggle.

"I wonder if most famous women were as ambitious and gave signs of future greatness in their early youth as famous men?" asked a thoughtful looking girl, dropping her book, "The Lives of the Great Musicians," in which with delight she had been reading of the boy Mozart.

"Most great women have been precocious," answered her aunt, whose busy brain possessed the charming faculty of storing up all manner of interesting information against a rain of questions from her clever niece. "Let us go back to that sweetest character in English history, Lady Jane Grey, and we will find she was only 13 years old when that learned scholar and fine gentleman, Roger Ascham, found her reading Plato's 'Phaedon' in the original Greek while the rest of the family were off on a hunting party. But it was not with a knowledge of Greek little Lady Jane was satisfied. She spoke French, Latin and Italian fluently, writing them also, and translated easily from Hebrew, Chaldee and Arabic. When her father took her to court, they found with astonishment that this demure country bred girl was a far finer scholar than young Edward VI, then a clever boy under the first tutors in England. Yet with all her knowledge of literature and languages Lady Jane embroiled charmingly, sang to several instruments that she played very well, danced and wrote easily and gracefully.

"Felicia Hemans published her first collection of poems when she was only 14.

"Angelica Kaufman, the beautiful woman and gifted artist, who painted the portraits of royalties, when only 11 used her brush far better than her father, who was an artist by profession.

"Mme. Roland never remembered when she learned to read, for at 4 years of age she was greedily perusing any books that came to her hand. Dancing and music she readily acquired, but geography and Latin were her favorite studies. As a girl of 7 she would eagerly rise at 6 o'clock in the morning to get to her books, and so dearly did she love reading she carried her volume of 'Plutarch's Lives' to church when she was 11 years old and secretly read it during the long prayers.

"There is not a more touching story of a child's quick mind starved of its proper food than Caroline Herschel. Her mother was a stupid woman, who kept her daughter purposely so busy about household work she could neither study nor practice on her violin she dearly loved and in which her father wished to instruct her. It was with an aching heart and fearful eyes Caroline plied her needle, while her father and his sons held their little family concerts in which the girl longed to join. She begged to be allowed to study French with her brother, and dancing also, but this her mother forbade, though her gentle, clever father was anxious his Caroline should have a good education. It was not until later in life, when her beloved brother William, the great astronomer, sent for her to join him in England, she had any opportunity to exercise her fine mind.

"Mary Somerville says that as a little girl she had a very bad memory, and at 10 years of age was sent to a boarding school, where the chief lesson for each day was a page of Johnson's Dictionary committed to memory. She never excelled at school, and yet at home no one sympathized a little later with her desire to study Latin except an uncle, who gave her some valuable instruction. She was very much interested in two celestial globes the village schoolmaster taught her to use, and yet, on the whole, she was rather in awe of the big constellations, whose brightness reminded her of lightning, of which she was desperately afraid. At length she persuaded her brother's tutor to buy her an algebra and Euclid, which she studied at night until her mother, in horror at the idea of a girl wasting time on studies meant for boys, deprived her of a candle to read by, and her father feared she might go crazy. It was long after that she really found the course and sympathy to take up her great studies in earnest.

"It was as a pianist George Eliot was noted at her school, and with the most amazing ease she acquired languages, yet as a very little girl she showed no great promise, much preferring a romp with her brother to her books.

"Fannie Burney, who is also known as Mme. d'Arbly, published her first and clearest novel when she was only 15, and yet she was 8 years old before learning her alphabet and scarcely received any regular education at all.

"Rachel, you must remember, was a girl just turned into her teens when she borrowed a volume of Racine from a Jewish peddler in old clothes. On reading the great French tragedies she decided to become an actress, and this poor, pretty little Jewess, the youngest of seven children, who had begun life as a street singer, on her second appearance on the French stage was greeted as a great genius. So, you see, my dear, ability is apt to reveal itself as early with girls as boys, and these are a very, very few of the world's great women who loved books in the nursery and gave the most glorious promise while still in short frocks."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Messenger Girls.

And now there is talk of substituting girls for boys at the district telegraph offices. At the Chicago headquarters of one of these companies the matter is being seriously considered, and the experiment will undoubtedly be made. If the change becomes permanent and general, the humorous writers will have to sharpen their pencils for a new theme.

Central Asia Tales.

The English tale of "Cinderella" is found in the Siberian tale of "Papallaga," in the German tale of "Aschenputtel" and in the fable of La Fontaine about the milkmaid and her pail. The legend of "Beauty and the Beast" is also found in the myths of the Hindoo, Greek and Norseman. All of these tales had a common origin in central Asia.—New York Sun.

To tell our own secrets is generally folly, but that folly is without guilt. To communicate those with which we are intrusted is always treachery, and treachery for the most part combined with folly.—Johnson.

HE TOLD THE TRUTH AT LAST.

Had Not a Nickel to Pay His Fare, but a Conductor Trusted Him.

"Dead broke" is a relative term. Some men are "dead broke" on $10. Some don't call it "dead broke" until they reach a nickel. It's pretty "dead broke" when you haven't even the one nickel for car fare, want to get from Twenty-third to Fulton street, are in a hurry, couldn't walk for a fortune and know there's money waiting for you at the other end if you can get there.

This was the case with a young man one day last week, and this is how he got there. Boarding a Broadway car at Twenty-third street, among a crowd of others, he walked forward and took his stand beside the gripman. It was some time before the conductor reached him, when he fumbled for change, as though he knew he had it in vest and trousers pockets, finally remarking that since he couldn't find it he supposed he'd "have to get off." The conductor saw it in that light, too, and politely made way for the young man, who by this time had reached Thirtieth street.

Walking down a few blocks, he boarded the third car following, and this time the conductor called for his fare. Again he affected the searching process, and again the conductor waited patiently, while the car spun along until at last the young man anxiously declared that he must have lost his pocketbook. The conductor dinged the bell, deciding that the best thing to be done was to step off and look for it.

Eighth street was now reached, and again at Fifth street a fresh car was boarded. Another search after change was gone through and another kindly suggestion from a conductor looked for, but this one said: "Ain't got no money? How far are you going? Fulton? Oh, no; you'd better get off." And he got off after three elaborate bits of acting just 20 blocks below his original point.

"I guess I'll try the truth now," he thought to himself, and this time he stood out on the back platform and didn't make a first dive into his pockets. He had got sick of it, and it wasn't paying either.

"Look here, conductor," he said, "I'm dead broke. Haven't a nickel. Will have lots when I get to Fulton street. Will you give me your number and trust me to ride down?"

"Ride you do," said the conductor, and that conductor hasn't regretted it. He's got more than the fare since, and the young man who began on the Hes has learned a first rate lesson on the old fashioned policy of honesty.—New York Herald.

Fertilizing With Sugar.

There is a diversity of opinion as to the land most suited to the cultivation of melons. Sandy, light soil, very highly fertilized with phosphate and with salt, will produce an abundant crop of large, fine melons, but there are many planters who affirm that they should be planted on a good quality of soil without fertilizers of any kind, as the artificial ingredients contained in the fertilizers detract from the native sweetness of the fruit. They also claim that the highly fertilized vines bear all their fruit about the same time, making a short season, while vines planted in unfertilized soil will bear gradually one melon after another, affording fresh fruit for a long period, even until it is so late in October that the first frosts have killed the vines. An old planter of ancient days, fond of experimenting, fertilized the soil in which he planted his melon seeds with quantities of sugar, producing a most satisfactory result, the melons being of unusual size and sweetness. That was done in days when expense was no object.—South Carolina Cor. Philadelphia Times.

A Buttermilk Well.

Did you ever see a buttermilk well? I mean a well that yields buttermilk. No, there are no buttermilk wells about here that I know of, but I saw one out in northern Indiana once. It was connected with a creamery. There is no market for buttermilk there, and the inhabitants of the town, who can get all the buttermilk they want for nothing by simply going after it, never touch it. As fast as the great revolving churns have precipitated their wealth of golden butter the milky residuum is run off into the troughs that lead to the buttermilk well. From thence it is pumped up to feed hogs, being distributed by a system of troughs among the pens. These hogs are nicely kept to utilize the buttermilk, which would otherwise go to waste, and the fatness of these animals so fed defies words. Very little else is given them. Buttermilk pork is said to be superior, especially when supplemented with corn.—New York Herald.

Religion and the Regulations.

The following story reaches me apropos of soldiers changing their religion: A soldier applied to the usual form to obtain a C. O. for permission to change his religion. The C. O. was a little hazy about the regulations, but he was quite clear that there must be two parties to an exchange. "Very well," he replied. "I have no objection. But you must get a good man to exchange with you."—London Truth.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the school board Aug. 9 the movement was defeated which attempted to discourage matrimony on the part of the teachers of the Milwaukee public schools, in that it proposed the retirement from the force of teachers of all married women who had husbands upon whom they could depend for support and the nonemployment in the future of married women as teachers.

HEADQUARTERS for L. A. W.

Manchester.
The Westminster boys came to our place, met the home nine on their own grounds and had a good game of ball last Saturday afternoon while the merriment was continuing the night. They met the call of the game on time by the umpire, Rob. Shower, and went to bat with a will and determination to win, but ere the game had been half played, the visitors found that they were "not in it." Our boys really played ball, and although the rulings of the umpire were all in favor of Westminster, the score stood 11 to 5 in favor of the home nine. The attendance was good and the good plays were liberally applauded and the bad ones booed. After this game another was played with a change in the two nines. It was to be a 7 inning game, but at the end of the 5th. inning, with the score standing 10 to 12 in their favor, the visitors refused to continue playing.

We had a nice home wedding at the City Hotel on Tuesday evening. The contracting parties were Miss Blanche Frederick and Mr. Alonzo Kneller. The bride and groom were ushered into the parlor at 8 p. m. by Mr. Elmer Denner and Miss Ida Frederick as bridesmaids and bridesmaid, to the music of the Wedding March played by Miss Ida Roeder, and were met by Rev. S. M. Roeder, who declared them man and wife. After receiving the congratulations of their assembled friends, the invitation to the dining room was promptly responded to, where full justice was done to the refreshments that fully demonstrated the hospitality of mine host Frederick. The bride was dressed in brown cashmere, and the groom in the regulation black.

THE DEATH OF WASHINGTON.

STATEMENT OF HIS DOCTORS.

Discovery of Valuable Contemporary Data Relating to the Last Hours of the Father of His Country.

In the library of an old gentleman in this city, says a Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, has recently been discovered a copy of the Centinel of Liberty, published in Georgetown on December 30, 1799, containing an account of the death of General Washington, which differs materially from that furnished by Tobias Lear to John Adams, which is the basis for the statements given in the several biographies. It is contained in a letter written by a gentleman in Alexandria to a friend in Baltimore, and reads as follows:

"I mention to you the truly melancholy event of the death of our much-loved General George Washington. He made his last evening between the hours of 11 and 12, after a short but painful illness of 23 hours. The disorder by which he died is by some called crup, by others an inflammatory quinsy, a disorder lately so mortal among children in this place, and I believe not until a few years known to attack persons at the age of maturity.

"My information I have from Dr. Dick, who was called in at a late hour. Alexandria is making arrangements to show his high esteem for him. We are all close to our houses, and act as we should do if one of our family had departed. The bells are to toll daily until he is buried, which will not be until Wednesday or Thursday. He died perfectly in his senses, and from Dr. Dick's account perfectly resigned. He informed them he had no fear of death, that his affairs were in good order, that he had made his will and that his public business was but two days behind."

The same paper contains the certificate of the physicians who attended the General in his last illness: Messrs J. and D. Wescott: Presuming that some account of the late illness and death of General Washington will be generally interesting and particularly so to the professors and practitioners of medicine throughout America, we request you to publish the following statement.

Mount Vernon about 11 o'clock on Saturday. Discovering the case to be highly alarming, and foreseeing the fatal tendency of the disease, two consulting physicians were immediately sent for, who arrived one at 3.30 and the other at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. In the interim were employed two copious bleedings, a blister was applied to the part affected, two moderate doses of calomel were given, succeeded by repeated doses of emetic tartar, amounting in all to five or six grains, with no other effect than a copious discharge from the bowels. The power of life seemed now manifestly yielding to the force of the disorder. Blisters were applied to the extremities, together with a cataplasm of bran and vinegar to the throat. Speaking, which was painful from the beginning, now became almost impracticable, respiration grew more and more contracted and imperfect till 11.30 on Saturday night, retaining the possession of his intellect, when he expired without a struggle. He was fully impressed at the beginning of his complaint, as well as through every succeeding stage of it, that its conclusion would be mortal, submitting to the several exertions made for his recovery rather as a duty than from an expectation of their efficacy. He considered the operations of death upon his system as coeval with the disease, and several hours before his decease, after repeated efforts to be understood, succeeded in expressing a desire that he might be permitted to die without interruption.

"During the short period of his illness he economized his time in the arrangement of such few concerns as required his attention with the utmost severity, and anticipated his approaching dissolution with every demonstration of that equanimity for which his whole life had been so uniformly and singularly conspicuous."

"James Craik, Attending Physician, Elisha Dick, Consulting Physician." The signature of Dr. Gustavus Brown of Port Tobacco, who attended as consulting physician, on account of the remoteness of his residence from the place, has not been procured to the foregoing statement.

ST. PETER AT THE GATE.
St. Peter stood at the golden gate, With a solemn mien and an air sedate, When up to the top of the golden stair A man and a woman ascending there, Applied for admission. They came and stood Before St. Peter, so great and good, In the hope that they might be let in. And asked St. Peter to let them in. The woman was tall, and lank, and thin, With a scraggy beard upon her chin, The man was short, and thick, and stout, His speech was built so it rounded out.

His face was pleasant, and all the while He wore a kindly and genial smile. The choir in the distance the echoes woke, And the man kept still while the woman spoke.

"Oh, thou that guardest the gate," said she, "We two come hither, beseeching thee To let us enter the heavenly land, And may our harps with the angel band."

Of me, St. Peter, there is no doubt, There's nothing from heaven to bar me out, I've been to meeting three times a week, And almost always I'd rise and speak, I've told the sinners about the day When they'd repent their evil way; I have told my neighbors, I have told them all

"Bout Adam and Eve, and the Primal Fall, I've shown them what they'd have to do If they'd pass in with the chosen few; I've marked their path of duty clear— Laid out the plan for their whole life."

I've talked and talked to 'em, loud and long, For my lungs are good and my voice is strong. So, good St. Peter, you'll clearly see The gate of heaven is open to me; I haven't walked in exactly the narrow way— He smokes and he swears, and grave faults he's got, And I don't know whether he'll pass or not; He never would pray with an earnest vim.

Or go to revival or join in a hymn, So I had to leave him in sorrow there While I, with the chosen, united in prayer. Heate what the pantry chanced to afford, While I, in my purity, sang to the Lord; And if cucumbers were all he got It's a chance if he merited them or not.

But, oh, St. Peter, I love him so! To the pleasures of heaven please let him go! I've done enough—a saint I've been, Won't that atone? Can't you let him in? But by my grim gospel I know 'tis so. That the unrepentant must try below; But isn't there some way you can see, That he may enter, who's dear to me? It's a narrow gospel by which I pray, But the chosen expect to find some way.

Of coaxing, or feeding, or bribing you So that their relations can amble through. And say, St. Peter, it seems to me This gate isn't kept as it ought to be. You ought to stand by that opening door And never sit down in that easy chair. And say, St. Peter, my sight is dimmed, But I don't like the way your whiskers are trimmed; They're cut too wide and outward tress, They'd look better narrower, cut straight across.

Well, we must be going our crowns to win, So open, St. Peter, and we'll pass in!" St. Peter sat quiet and stroked his staff; But, spite of his office, he had to laugh, Then said, with a fiery gleam in his eye, "Who's tending this gateway, you or I?"

There wasn't a ghost of a show for him. Slowly he turned, by habit bent. To follow wherever the woman went. St. Peter, standing on duty there, Observed that the top of his head was bare.

He called the gentleman back, and said: "Friend, how long have you been wed?" "Thirty years," (with a weary sigh), And then he thoughtfully added "Why?"

St. Peter was silent. With head bowed down He raised his hand and scratched his crown; Then, seeming a different thought to take, Slowly, half to himself, he spoke: "Thirty years with that woman there? No wonder the man hasn't any hair! Swearing is wicked. Smoke's not good."

He smoked and swore—I should say, for he would smoke and swear. Thirty years with that tongue so sharp? Ho! Angel Gabriel! Give him a harp! A jeweled harp with a golden string, Good sir, pass in where the angels sing!

Gabriel, give him a seat alone, One with a cushion, up near the throne! Call up some angels to play their best, Let him enjoy the music and rest, See that on finest ambrosia he feeds. He's had about all the hell he needs. It isn't just hardly the thing to do To roast him on earth and the future, too."

They gave him a harp with golden strings, A glittering robe with a pair of wings, And he said, as he entered the Realm of Day, "Well, this beats cucumbers, anyway." And so the Scripture had come to pass, "The last shall be first and the first shall be last."

HER LITTLE FLOWER.
And She Sank to Rest Clutching the Tiny Treasure to Her Breast.

She found the tiny, tender plant when first it showed its trembling head above the travel worn slabs of granite that paved the narrow alleyway which was her playground. She gave a cry of delight when she saw the delicate shoot peeping out from between the cold gray stones, and from that moment it filled a part of her life that heretofore had been empty. She nourished it with water and jealously guarded it from the onslaught of roaming boys and the too near approach of cart wheels that came crunching through the alley, and often did her violet eyes tremble with suppressed tears as she saw the ponderous wheels rolling so close to her treasure.

Under her care and watchful attention it steadily grew, and when delicate leaves unfolded themselves and disclosed to her delighted eyes a blossom of sweetest her happiness was complete, and she sank beside it and feasted her vision on loveliness she had never seen before.

One day she did not come at her usual hour to moisten the thirsty plant, and it would doubtless have perished but for a gentle shower that came to kiss the drooping head. The next day she did not come, and the lonely plant got its only help from the leaking of a passing water cart. Far up in one of the narrow rooms she lay on a little cot panting for breath. Her once rosy cheeks were now pale and white, and the soft blue eyes shone with a sparkling glow. Her head tossed restlessly from side to side, and moans of pain crept from the drawn lips.

Occasional words broke from her, but of such an incoherent nature that none understood her until a boy came softly into the room and gazed at the suffering face curiously. "She wants her flower," he said as she moaned again, and like a flash he sped from the room, to return in a few moments bearing an almost withered plant in his hand. As he held it aloft the lustrous eyes saw it, and two tiny wasted hands arose from the cover and were outstretched to receive her treasure. She lifted it to her lips and rained kisses on the dust covered blossom, which seemed to answer her caress in a gleam of returning freshness.

She sank to sleep, still clutching the flower to her bosom, and awoke later with a calm look of contentment covering her features.

As the hours wore on she grew weaker and weaker until, when the shafts of morning's golden light first found their way into the quiet room, they fell aslant the cold, still form of a little girl, at whose cheek nestled a faded and withered flower, mingling itself in the faint smile that lingered yet around the perfect mouth.—Atlanta Constitution.

Washington's "Finest."
Here and there in the halls and corridors of the capitol the sturdy guardians of the public peace, clad in immaculate uniforms sit, silent and indifferent, ruminating, to judge from the slow and regular action of their jaws, upon the destinies of the nation, though caring for none of these things. Fine specimens most of them are, too—broad shouldered, healthy skinned, fair, quiet men, whose solid nerves nothing could surprise, whose firm but gentle mastication no political convulsion could retard. They are of a very different type from the burly New York policeman.

One can hardly believe that they are really colleagues of the colored functionary in similar blue cloth and brass buttons, who stands in all his glory at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue, monarch of all he surveys, whose slightest gesture could stop even a cable car and whose lofty stature and speckled clothes call forth the admiration of the colored nursery maid and can impose good behavior even upon fair haired little boys and make the soggy faced, blue eyed "toughs" look a little less as though they had bought the pavement for their own convenience and would refuse to let it even at a high price.—Marion Crawford in Century.
