The war situation in the east is apparently at a stand-still, the various interested parties being engaged principally in watching each other. Greece, so tar, has shown no disposition to recede from her stand, and the "wily Turk" has his hands full in playing the game for which he is particularly noted. It seems questionable, whether, in case of active hostilities between the two counties, the powers will hold to their determination to violently coerce Greece, as public sentiment, notably in land, would be strongly against such an extremity.

> The exact situation in Cuba is, at present, difficult to understand. The press in this country favorable to the cause of the revolutionists claims that Spain is virtually defeated now and that in the course of a few months the island will be evacuated. On the other hand, the situation is just as positively stated to be wholly lost to the Cubans, that there is but a mere semblance of war now carried on, that desertion from the ranks of the revolutionists is going on in a wholesale manner and that their cause never was entitled to American sympathy and intervention, and never had a ghost of a chance to succeed. It is quite probable, therefore, that if either prediction is correct, hostilities will end during this summer.

To cook Shad Roes.

The approach of the shad season brings forth many recipes for cook ing the roe. Here is a good one: Place the roe in a saucepan, cover with cold water; add one teaspoonful salt, one tablespoonful vinegar, one small onion cut into slices, three whole peppers and one sprig of parsley tied together with half a bay leaf, one clove and a small sprig of thyme; set the saucepan over the fire; as soon as it comes to a boil draw the saucepan to one side of the stove, let it simmer (not boil,) five minutes; then remove the roe, dry in a napkin; dip it in beaten egg and cover with bread crumbs; melt one tablespoonful butter in a small frying pan; put in the roe, cover and cook five minutes on each side, dress on a warm dish, and spread over it the following sauce: Stir one ounce of butter to a cream; add slowly one tablespoonful of lem on juice a few drops at a time, a haif teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and a half tablespoonful of fine chopped parsley. They are also nice served with French peas.

Our own Fault.

I have never belonged to that class who have contended that there were no hard times on the farm save what the farmer himself had made. On the contrary, I have been taken to task for my calamity howling when I have deplored the state that many of us are now in.

But truth now compels me to change my views as to dairying, and it is with great pleasure that I can stop my howling for the present at east. At last fancy creamery butter has reached a mark at which there is a fair remuneration both for the labor and capital involved in making it. Though Barnett is not, generally speaking, a superstitious man, this seemed so singular an occurrence that he stopped the train and sent a brakeman ahead to see if the way was clear. Strange to relate, the brakeman soon returned, reporting a landslide across the track in the mountain pass about 100 yards ahead. Hands were sent at once to clear the track, and in removing the debris they found another owl, no doubt mate to the first, caught in the crotch of an uprooted tree, crush-

Hair Coloring.

A correspondent, who writes that she is still young, asks if she can be told of anything "that will turn her hair white. It is said that white hair is now very fashionable." This may be true, as a lady recently returned from abroad regatherings there of silver tresses arranged in pompadour style, glittering with any amount of real gems set in various unique forms, and that many of the ladies so coiffured possessed notably vertised lotions, women now propose to try the effect of white locks. One would think that after seeing on every side the effects of hair coloring, the seared and streaked locks, the black and tan heads, the heads that look like a hurriedly prepared dish of scrambled eggs, and the dead looking Patti and Cleopatra cranieffect and lacked the style and accurate ums, women would learn the wisdom of letting nature alone in respect of John Adams, who lives at Tuckern, a little village in Kankakee county, Illinois, is growing younger every day. He is now eighty-five years of age, and until very recently he was more feeble than most men of his time of life. But during the past few months a remarkable change has taken place. While before he was nearly blind, he has now recovered the entire use of his eyes, and is able to read the smallest print with great ease. His teeth had all gone, but recently he has cut an entire new set and has suffered as much in the process as has any baby while teething. He was nearly bald, with a small fringe of white hair has grown again. It is of a dark brown color, and seems to be growing very rapidly.
