COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS.

Things Farmers Ought to Know Before Applying Them. The principal featurs of a farmers' bulletin on commercial fertilizers by E. B. Voorhees are brought out in the following summary: Commercial fertilizers are mainly valuable because they furnish the elelain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea ments—nitrogen, phosphoric acid and Remedy and in every case where it potash—which serve as food, not as stimulants. The kind of farming in the past and the demands for special products in the present make their use necessary in profitable farming. In order to use these commercial fertilizers profitably the farmer should know, first, that nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash are the essential manurial constituents; second, that the agricultural value of these constituents depends largely upon their chemical

ERRORS IN LIVING.

Man's Excessive Appetite and the Body's Capacity For Food. To the lay mind nothing seems to augur so strongly in favor of robust health as a hearty appetite. Furthermore, there would seem to be a strong conviction in the public mind, sanctified by tradition from time almost immemorial, that the more a man eats the better he is. The quantity of food that many people naturally eat is very large as compared with their actual physiological requirements. Add to this the presented to the palate by our modern culinary arts, the sharpening of the appetite by the anteprandial cocktail, the stimulus afforded the appetite by a bottle of good wine, and the result is often the consumption of an amount of food their highest capacity, especially when coupled with sedentary life, and, moreover, it lends an additional impetus to the evils springing from the use of improper quality of food.

The human elaborating and excretory mechanism was evidently adjusted for ordinary wear and tear to an average limited period of about 70 years. Under 40 per cent of extra work we must naturally expect impairment or breakdown of the mechanism much earlier. ANGER AND EGGS.

A Boston Man Says the Combination May Result In Death.

strange fact by the tragic and sudden several years ago. I accepted her husband's invitation to dine with them. Just as we were going in to dinner a servant did something that caused the lady to fly into a terrible rage. She had been irritable from some minor complaint for several days, and her husband calmed her ruffled feelings sufficiently for the dinner to be eaten in good temper. I noticed that she ate an anusually large amount of soft scrambled eggs. Fifteen minutes after we left the dining room she was a corpse. She died in frightful convulsions before the nearest doctor reached the house. The doctor was unable to ascribe the cause. A few months later I was visiting a brother in Connecticut, and one of his sons died under similar circumstances. Before Breakfast one morning the boy, who was about 15 years d, had a fight with a neighbor's boy. Before his anger had subsided my nephew was called to breakfast. He ate our soft boiled eggs. Had I known as much then as I do now I would have prevented it. In less than a half hour after breakfast the boy died with exactly the same symptoms that were present when my friend's wife died. This set me to thinking about the matter. "It wasn't long after this before a Beacon hill friend of mine expired suddenly after a meal. The doctors, as usual, were divided in opinion on the cause of death. Some of them contended that it was heart failure, whatever that is, and others are still holding out that it was apoplexy. Inquiry by me developed the fact that my friend was very angry when he sat down at table and that he ate five eggs. With these developments I searched no further for the cause of his death. He was angry, he ate eggs, and he died. If these are
