

Local and Personal.

This is meant to be a purely local news column, to which the editor reserves the right to accept or reject. Events of local importance, such as the death of a prominent citizen, accidents, cases of extreme illness, society and church happenings, marriages, deaths, etc., should be reported to the editor in writing, otherwise they may not appear.

The town is full of visitors—too full to attempt their mention singly.

The moon is young. Let us have light—particularly on Sunday night, if cloudy.

The school commissioners of Carroll county have appointed Mr. Roland Wolfe, of Union Bridge, and Miss Nettie A. Whitmore, of Westminster, to free county scholarships at Western Maryland College.

Some unprincipled scamp shot a 32 calibre revolver bullet into the panel of one of the side doors of the Lutheran church, one night last week. Vandalism of this kind should be punished to the full extent of the law.

Send this week's and next week's issue of the RECORD to your friends, as many of them will be interested in the proceedings of Synod. Single copies 3c, or two copies for a nickel. No "sample copies" will be mailed free.

The public school at this place, contributed $4.41 to the La Fayette monument fund, on Wednesday afternoon. Dr. G. T. Motter, one of the trustees of the school, was present, and made one of his characteristically proper addresses, which was greatly appreciated by the school.

Three or four houses, at least, could be rented here in the spring. It is too bad that the growth of the town is held back by the short-sighted policy of not meeting the demand for buildings. We are in the position of compelling manufacturing enterprises to locate elsewhere, simply because workmen could not be housed.

George Hill, the colored man who appropriated one of G. W. Withers's horses, recently, and who was jailed for the act, but escaped, has been captured and is again in confinement. Constable Myers, made the capture last Saturday night while Hill was at his mother's home, at Oldfields, Frederick county.

As may be seen on reference to our advertising columns, H. E. Slagenhaupt, who has been in the jewelry business here for several years, will remove from the place, having accepted a position in Lancaster, Pa. We are sorry to lose such a good citizen, and also this branch of business, and hope that the vacancy may soon be filled.

The popular host at Trevanion farm, Mr. Percy H. His appointment was made on the recommendation of Attorney-General Claiborn.

The Gettysburg Star says: The chestnut crop is reported to be the biggest that has been gathered for many years, and farmers and others are hunting buyers at from five to eight cents a quart. The abundance of the crop is generally accepted as a sign of a hard winter.

James Clark, an inmate of the Maryland penitentiary, aged about fifty-five years, is said to have had fifty-five wives before he was arrested four years ago for stealing. He is said to be one of the "smoothest talkers that ever wagged a tongue" and that his influence over women was remarkable. Although married so often, none of his wives ever prosecuted him for bigamy.

Mrs. Bettie Harrison Mansley Ritchie, widow of Judge John Ritchie, of Frederick died at her home, on West Church street, Thursday morning at 7 o'clock, from heart failure. Commissioner Scott, of Pennsylvania, has issued a ruling as to whether or not orders for selling or beneficial orders drawn by a trustee. The commissioner rules that orders for the payment of money going into the hands of third parties require stamps. The secretary may draw an order on the treasurer for the payment of money and deliver it himself to the treasurer. In which case it does not require a stamp. If, however, the secretary delivers the order to the payee who takes it to the treasurer, it must be stamped.

The jewelry store of R. F. Wells, in Hanstead, this county, was entered by burglars about midnight last Thursday night and jewelry to the value of $150 was stolen. Everything in the store was ransacked, and everything that was valuable was taken. A number of trinkets were found scattered along the street, where they had been dropped by the thieves.

Mr. Alexander Doyle, sculptor of the Key monument, was in Frederick on Saturday to discuss with a committee of the Key Monument Association a claim for a reduction in the price to be paid for the monument on account of damage to the capstone of the pedestal of the monument. A piece was chipped from the rim of the capstone in an accident while the monument was on the way to Frederick. On account of this Mr. Doyle offered to make a reduction of $250 or replace the stone. The Association will decide at a meeting to be held shortly which offer to accept.

Emanuel Stoner, of Westminster, whose grandsons, Paul and David, aged respectively 14 and 16 years, disappeared on the 14th, ult., has received a postal card from the former dated at Kansas City, Mo., in which he states that he arrived in that place on the 13th, inst., where his father, Dr. P. Stoner, immediately took charge of him and furnished him a full outfit of clothing, as he was in "rags and tatters." He separated from his brother David in Illinois, the latter having engaged to work for an electrician who was on the eve of starting for Florida to fill a contract. Nothing has been heard directly from David.

The annual banquet and reunion of the alumni of St. Mary's school, took place at the college on Wednesday. The students gave the old mountaineers a hearty reception and prepared a most enjoyable programme. The annual barbecue, with its attendant amusements, the reading of the paper, which every person enjoys, and the athletic sports, which immediately follow, were part of the morning's exercises. In the afternoon the sports were continued, and several of the events were closely contested. In the evening the students gave a musical entertainment. The banquet was held in the college refectory, which was tastefully decorated.

"OLD TANEYTOWN BOY,"

In a Reflective Mood Becomes Mildly Sarcastic.

It is very evident to me from what I have read in your paper of late that the hand of progress, or the spirit of improvement, as you please to call it, is about to sweep away all the old landmarks with which we are familiar—and the only ones I now know—when I left the village 45 years ago. When I return to visit you, if it ever be my good fortune to do so, I will require a guide to point out to me the old familiar spots, and to pilot me through the new streets and alleys of your new (city?) town. One privilege I suppose will not be denied me, and that will be the pleasure (?) of riding over your good old-fashioned mud roads, to get there.

And such city airs that I will be required to adapt myself to, will be quite trying to one's nerves. With your new water works, Fire Company, railroad, telephone and telegraph lines, city hall, Knights of Pythias, I. O. H's, and P. O. S. of A's do you wonder I feel almost afraid to invade your improved precincts? It was never dreamed, in my days, that such things could ever befall the old town. The old churches, with their old time high, straight backed seats, in which we boys sat, straight as well, a shoemaker—with our feet dangling six inches from the floor, and the old galleries strung around three sides of the interior, where the fellows could hide their muddy boots and squirt tobacco juice by the quart—unimproved—and the old lofty pulpits, half as high as the ceiling, with steps leading up on either side—lumber enough in it to build a barn—when good old parson Pritchard would stand with just his head visible, and preach all the boys and one or two deacons, to sleep, before he had reached "thirteenth," on his way to "tenthly."

And the grand, the lofty organ, perched up in the gallery of the old Lutheran church, among whose pipes the boys were wont to play hide and seek (as it was even in that day said in need of repairs) while good, pious, Solomon Stettin was making the close clipped hairs on our heads stand straight on end, while he was dealing the moving, and coming to life, of the few millions of House skeletons in the valley of Jehoshaphat, described by Mr. Ezekiel, I never did know whether that was a real organ, or only a dummy, as I never heard it emit a sound, harmonious or otherwise.

The only fellow who could "start a tune" in those days, was my very good friend "Sam" Crouse, and a hymn "wouldn't go" to a tune that Sam started it with, it was no use for the organ to try it. Sam was a "singing master" in those days—the professors now and he tried very hard to learn me to "sing by note" but I never got any further than "Old Hundred" and "Home Sweet Home." It never required any lessons in music, however, to learn "Old Uncle Ned," "Old Day Tray," and "Jordan" and a hard road to lay—by the way, I learned them from "Nick" Fritinger.

All these old landmarks, and old time friends gone, and in their place fine new churches, with their lofty spires, their fine brass carvings, their deep toned machine played organs, their trained choirs and operatic music, and their deep-toned bells ringing out their joyous hymns to the country around. Well it will be for me that I can go out into the old grave yard, and hide among the old graves, and weep over the departure of old friends, and the innovation of the new order of things. It will be the only old landmark left in our original beauty.

As for your last attack, which I must not overlook, is on the old public well, whose advent antedates the recollection of your oldest inhabitant. Ah! well, good bye old well, thy fullness has departed, thy cool depths and mossy sides have perhaps lost their freshness. The old, slinky, snake-like, mud-colored, hook-nosed, never again be hoisted from thy lowest depths, laden with the cooling nectar to quench the raging thirst of early rising lodgers of the old stone tavern hard by. Thy rivulets, the water works, standing high above the earth, filled with the wash of the creeks, (the home of the frogs and the snakes) towering many feet above the air, to be baked and roasted by the summer's sun, is to take the place of your cool and shady depths, from whence comes nothing but the pure liquid, filtered through old mother earth. Good bye—old well, forever good bye!

(We must disillusionize our friend O. T. B. still further, by stating that even old mother earth fails to filter "pure liquid" as in "ye olden time," and an analysis of our stand pipe water—snake and frog juice included—shows decidedly no purity. The water contained in the public well, that was.—Ed.)

A VALUABLE WORK.

History of Maryland Volunteers War of 1861-5.

We acknowledge our great indebtedness to D. J. Hesson, member of the last House of Delegates, for a copy each of the "History of Maryland volunteers, civil war 1861-5" and "Maryland Manual 1898." The former is a handsome half Russia volume of 84 pages, containing the records of Maryland troops who fought for the preservation of the Union, published by the state through the influence of the Department of Maryland, G. A. R. The work has been compiled by a commission composed of Gen. L. Allison Wilmer, Dr. James H. Jarrett and Col. G. W. F. Vernon, and is the result of a vast amount of pains-taking labor incident to the securing of accurate data concerning the records of 62,959 names of those who served from our state in the various branches of the service.

The work gives the name, rank, date of enlistment and date of discharge of every person in the service, also brief remarks to each name, stating whether wounded, killed or captured; also a condensed history of each regiment. Altogether, the work is one which must be of much value as a book of reference, and we shall take pleasure in furnishing any special information which it may contain.

The "Manual" is also a work of considerable interest, containing, as it does much legal, historical and statistical information relating to the state of Maryland. It was published by order of the House of Delegates.

La Fayette Day.

(For the Record.)

"La Fayette Day" at Piney Creek school was fittingly observed, and the following program carried out:

Singing, "America," remarks by the teacher; reading, "A short sketch of the life of La Fayette," by Russell Keplhart; singing, "Columbia," reading, "Our Country's call," by Myrtle Hyser; singing, "Our Country's call," reading, "What La Fayette thought of our cause," by Carrie Haugh; singing, "Native Land," reading, "What La Fayette did for our country," by Allie Clousher; singing, "The Red, White and Blue," reading, "La Fayette's last visit to Philadelphia," by Minnie Angell; singing, "The Star-Spangled Banner," speech by Elva Hyser; address by Rev. J. O. Clippinger; reading, "Autumn," by Goldie Hyser; singing, "The Farmer Boy," singing, "The old school house on the hill."

The collection amounted to one dollar. A number of visitors and patrons were present, and all enjoyed the exercises. The school room was nicely decorated with flags, flowers, and autumn leaves, and presented a very attractive appearance.

The day was appropriately observed at Walnut Grove school with the following interesting exercises: Singing, "Columbia, the gem of the Ocean," speeches by First grade pupils; singing, "Columbia," by native sons; speeches by Second and Third grades; singing, "Bringing in the Sheaves," speeches by Fourth and Fifth grades; singing, "Ring the bells of Heaven," essay by Walter Shriver; "Why we go to school," by Salie Fringer, Edna Feaser and John Overholt; address by Miss Maebel Lambert; remarks by the teacher, Harry L. Feaser, and after a collection, amounting to $1.00, had been taken up, "America" was sung, and the school dismissed.

It is composed of nine classes, and has 164 ministers, 304 congregations, 38,000 members, 385 Sunday schools, 4,069 officers and teachers, 29,451 Sunday school scholars, and 84 students for the ministry. The synod contributed during the year for benevolent purposes $57,191 and for congregational purposes $109,015.

Christmas Gifts for Soldiers.

President McKinley is determined that no American soldier shall be deprived of the pleasure of Christmas Day, because of his absence from his own fireside on that day. The War Department has been instructed to make all the necessary arrangements for supplying accommodations for government transports to return to their loved ones their great distance and the many week it requires to reach them, the soldiers at Manila will first be provided for, and Colonel Charles Bird, of the War Department, has been selected as the official Santa Clause. All persons who desire to send Christmas remembrances to any soldiers, regulars or volunteers; at Manila, will find Colonel Bird ready to assist them. No regulations or rules have been adopted for the occasion, but it is earnestly suggested that no such perishable stuff as candies or cakes be sent. It is hoped, too, that the limited amount of room available will be borne in mind, and that all presents will be packed square and most compactly. A limit of ten pounds for each man is suggested.

Linwood.

Farmers in this section are taking advantage of these beautiful autumnal days, to get their corn husked and cribbed. We had a fine rain on Tuesday night, and Wednesday was much warmer.

After our unusually healthy summer we have some sick neighbors: Mr. J. C. Shriver, with heart trouble; Master Charles Haines, of McKinstry, has scarlet fever; two of Bangs' children have diphtheria. They were pupils of Linwood school.

Mrs. Eliza Rabold and daughter, of Washington, are visiting Mrs. Caroline Englar.

Messrs. Ed. Rowe and Jasper Matthews, of Baltimore, spent Monday night at Mr. Rowe's sister's, Mrs. Lewis Messler.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Foutz have moved into their new home, and gave a dinner to a few of their friends on last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Senseney gave a house warming on last Saturday, to all their neighbors. It was quite enjoyable and social. The guests were royally entertained both socially and by the abundant supply of food.

Mr. Joseph Englar informed me he received a sweet potato raised on his farm, that weighed 4 pounds. That will match the 6th, 11th district peach; but then we know Linwood soil is hard to beat.

Mr. and Mrs. Stifely returned to Mr. Stifely's home on Monday night, where they were surrounded by the calatunip band of this town and vicinity. Quite a quantity of noise was made by the bells, dishes, drums, etc. There were two parties, quite a number of ladies with several gentlemen escorts, preceded the boys, and we are inclined to think the huskings were long "bang the band."

Mr. and Mrs. Messler entertained last evening, and all were abundantly served with refreshments. After 11 o'clock, the hours very delightfully left, after wishing the newly married "bon voyage."

Mrs. Clara E. Englar spent several days with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary A. Englar, of McKinstry, who has been quite sick.

Our mail carrier, while passing a team the other day between McKinstry and Linwood, had the misfortune to have his buggy torn up by catching a limb, otherwise nothing was hurt.

Mrs. Gertie McAlister is visiting her mother, Mr. Jacob Bohn, in Pennsylvania.

Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, Taneytown.

LUTHERAN SYNOD.

Opening of the 70th. Annual Session in Taneytown.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Progress made since its last meeting here, 14 years ago.

The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland which meets during this week in Trinity Lutheran church, Taneytown, is one of the oldest bodies of the Lutheran church in America, and was organized in 1824, the fourth organization of its kind in this country, and at the time of its organization embraced the states of Maryland and Virginia. This synod has now on its roll two-thirds as many ministers as were at that time, to be found in the whole Lutheran church of America.

The synod will meet in its seventy-ninth annual convention, is one of the oldest Lutheran congregations. It dates back more than a hundred years. Somewhere about the year 1787, the Lutherans of this community were gathered into an organization, and the Gospel was preached to them in the German language. From a score or two of members the congregation has increased during the years until now it stands as one of the strongest churches of the denomination in the state, with a membership of about 550. The German language, in which the first services were conducted, gradually, through the years, gave way to the English, the language of the country, until now scarcely one can be found able to understand a sermon in the German tongue.

The first building in which the congregation worshiped was a frame structure owned conjointly with the Reformed congregation. In 1813, the Lutherans separated and erected a plain but substantial brick church on present site. This building was in 1841 remodelled and enlarged. In 1871, thirty years later, the building was once more remodelled and enlarged. The present structure is of the Romanesque order of architecture, and is regarded as one of the most substantial churches in this part of Western Maryland.

The marked progress made by the Maryland Synod is shown by a comparison of data, taken from the reports of last year, with the report of 1884, when the synod last convened in Taneytown. At that time there were enrolled 71 churches, Baltimore, Revs. A. R. Long and Luther F. Miller will be ordained to the office of the ministry. Messrs. C. R. Streamer, Victor McCauley, and J. Z. Stup will be licensed by Rev. H. H. Weber, of York, Pa., secretary of the Church Extension Board, on the subject of "Church Extension," as by Rev. J. B. Mauser, of Boonsboro, on "Home Missions." These services are all of a popular nature, and the public is cordially invited to attend. Collections will be taken up at each service for the particular object under discussion at that service.

The officers of the synod elected for one year, and whose terms expired this Friday morning, are, president, Rev. J. G. Butler, D. D., of Washington; secretary, Rev. Victor Miller, Leitersburg; treasurer, Mr. W. H. James, Baltimore. Besides the regular members of synod, Rev. George Scholl, D. D., secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, Rev. A. S. Hartman, D. D., secretary of the Home Mission Board, Rev. F. P. Manhart, pastor of the Deaconess Mother-house, Baltimore, Rev. H. W. McKnight, D. D., president of Pennsylvania College, and perhaps others, will be present. This synod is distinguished in having on its roll the presidents of four bodies of the church: Dr. C. S. Albert, of the Home Board; Dr. Luther Kuhlman of the Foreign Board; Dr. W. S. Peas of the Church Extension Board, and Rev. W. E. Parson, D. D., of Home for the Aged, together with Rev. H. H. Weber, secretary of the Church Extension Board.

Butler, editor of the Lutheran Evangelist, Dr. S. Stall, associate editor of the Lutheran Observer, and Prof. P. M. Bickle, managing editor of the Lutheran Quarterly. To this distinguished list of dignitaries of the church who belong to this body, must be added the name of Rev. M. Valenreported in 1884 as given for benevolence was $14,116.40. Last year, the report showed that the congregations had contributed $34,194.44, or above $20,000 in increase, and more than double the former amount. While the number of pastors had increased 33 per cent, the gifts to benevolence increased 143 per cent, or while the percentage of gain in membership during the period was 70 per cent, the increase in benevolence was 142 per cent. Another evidence of advancement is to be found in a comparison of local expenses of the congregations of the synod. In 1884, this figure of maintenance of the work was put down as $20,881.07. Last year the total local expense column footed up $144,328.32, or a gain of about 45 per cent. These figures must prove to be interesting data of advancement along the whole line of church work by the Maryland Synod. It is evidently not going backward, at least in these directions indicated.

The sessions of synod will be open to all who may care to attend. During the day, routine business matters will claim the attention, with many interesting discussions along various lines of church work. The evening services are peculiarly adapted for the general public. On Thursday evening, the synodical sermon will be delivered by Rev. R. S. Patterson, of Woodsboro, on the subject of "Benevolent Education." Saturday evening, Rev. T. J. Yost, of Cumberland, Md., will deliver the address on Foreign Missions. Sunday morning, the regular church worship, with the sermon by one of the visiting clergymen. Sunday evening will be given worked without a hitch, and, ere the opening hour for service, entert

Another Lying Verdict.

The Annapolis jury, in the lynching case of Wright Smith, colored, rendered the regulation verdict—"shot to death by persons unknown to the jury." The news reports show that almost no testimony was taken, and that the "jury" was prompt in arriving at a verdict. This is the method of licensing murder in the capital of our state—the home of our Governor—and it's dollars against doubts that this is the end of the chapter; at the same time, we boast of our cultured, law abiding citizens, and send hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to civilize the heathen of foreign lands. What a farce!

We have not the slightest sympathy for the victim—who was likely a brute deserving death—but, true American citizenship rebels against the lynching of criminals, because it is murder, pure and simple, without a shadow of justification in law. Our state is too rapidly gaining a reputation for permitting this disgusting business. Besides, it is not to our credit—if the thing is condoned by the sentiment that such crimes demand instant retribution—to exercise the practice on colored people alone. Why not treat white brutes in the same expeditious manner. What difference should the color of the skin make, in such cases?

Why not, in any event, let the law take its course, and then, when it clearly fails to mete out justice, rise superior to the law? If justifiable at all, it would be justifiable then, to "take the law in our own hands." Lynching is summary vengeance, without any benefit to the outraged victim, and without leaving, as an effect, any appreciable deterrent influence for the benefit of the future.

The verdicts, which result from investigations by juries, in cases like the one at Annapolis, are bald lies, and no honest person mistakes them for anything else. These same twelve men, if charged with the duty of ferreting out the negro rasher, would have found the culprit about as quickly as they failed to find those who are murderers in the sight of God, and the law.

Danger in an American Characteristic.

The finding of the naval investigating board, that Commodore Schley had but little to do with the victory over Admiral Cervera's fleet, will not likely be popular with those who lionized the distinguished Marylander, and correspondingly commanded Admiral Sampson for omitting to give Schley all the credit for the result of the engagement. The verdict of the board, that it was "essentially a Captain's fight," and that orders for just such a contingency had previously been given by Sampson, is likely a correct statement, even though hero worshippers must be disappointed, to some extent.

The fact is, there never was any grounds for the assumption that Schley won the victory on his own orders; and, opinions to this effect rested simply on the fact that he was in the fight, with the Brooklyn, though not to the extent that the Oregon, Texas and Iowa were, while Sampson was ten miles away with the New York. This can be said without the slightest discredit to the ability or bravery of the man, and must be said in order to do equally brave and able men, justice. There is no necessity, apparently, to try to measure all American naval commanders, because all have proven their worth; besides, indulgence in the pastime is sure to result in injustice to someone.

The American impulse is always meant right, but, sometimes it runs away with level-headedness, and creates a dangerously enthusiastic public sentiment, in the nature of a stampede. The swiftness, with which we are credited, to "see the point," is a dangerous, as well as valuable, trait, and one which distinguishes us as a nation of "hustlers." It is this element in the character of our people which carries them to the front in business of every kind, and makes them the best soldiers in the world; and, as long as it is properly directed, works to our credit and advantage.

The "sober second thought," however, comes to us all, in a public way, more or less frequently, and is as generously regarded as the first one, leading us to do tardy justice when necessary, if not interfered with by that cruel power—politics. It is this power that is back of all the criticism heaped on certain government officials and army officers, not excepting the President. It is this power that shapes public sentiment against reason, is responsible for such injustice, and, some day, those who oppose republics, say, it will cause the downfall of our system of government.

We do not believe anything of the kind, as we have too much faith in American good sense and the ultimate predominance of our strong love for "fair play," even in spite of the lash of partisan politics; but, sometimes we cannot help but wish, that, as a people, we were a little less free with "spur of the moment" decisions, particularly when no great present danger exists for calling them forth.

A Local Option Failure.

Spring Grove, Pa., is a local option town, but a spirited interchange of views, pro and con, is going on in the columns of the Ripplet, published in that place, relative to the amount of beer drank there, and the extent of drunkenness in evidence. The argument seems to be abundantly sustained, that local option does not prevent drunkenness and disorder, taking Spring Grove as an example, and it is likely that the situation would be improved, in some respects, if there was a regularly licensed and decently kept hotel in the place.

Drinking on the sly, in stables and alleys and other shady places, is very much like other objectionable acts done in the same secret manner—worse than if done openly and under the form of law and legitimacy. Intemperance can't be legislated out of existence, any more than any other sin can, notwithstanding the apparently forcible, and highly moral, arguments, used in support of the theory. The only way to make temperance people is to reform their hearts—Christianize them—and this can't be done through legal enactment.

Nominations for Congress.

The following persons have filed nomination papers, in the office of the Secretary of State, as candidates for congress:

First District—Wilbur F. Jackson, republican; John Walter Smith, democrat, and James Swann, prohibitionist.

Second District—William B. Baker, republican; Richard B. Tippet, democrat, and Harry J. Hollingsworth, prohibitionist.

Third District—Frank C. Wachter, republican; Dr. J. B. Schwatka, democrat; John F. Hicks, prohibitionist, and William E. Whipkey, socialist-labor.

Fourth District—W. W. McIntire, republican; James W. Denny, democrat; Thomas S. Creney, prohibitionist, and Dr. John M. Cargill, (colored) independent.

Fifth District—Sydney E. Mudd, republican; John S. Cummings, democrat, and John E. Wetherald, prohibitionist.

Sixth District—Geo. A. Pearre, republican; Thomas A. Poffenberger, democrat, and Mr. Baker, prohibitionist.

Secretary of State Dallam has decided that the papers of Mr. Whipkey the socialist-labor candidate in the third district, are irregular, and his name will not be allowed on the official ballot unless he files a petition containing the signatures of three hundred voters. It is thought that Dr. Cargill's papers may also prove deficient on examination.

Our little boy was afflicted with rheumatism in his knee; and at times unable to put his foot to the floor. We tried in vain, everything we could hear of that we thought would help him. We almost gave up in despair, when one of our advisers us to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. We did so, and the first bottle gave so much relief that we got a second one, and, to our surprise, it cured him sound and well.—J. T. says, Pastor Christian Church, Neodesha, Kan.

Cuba and the Sportsman.

While Cuba offers such a haven to the invalid, it is a paradise for the sportsman, wild game and fish of all kinds being abundant.

Parties of gentlemen on horseback, with their pack of hounds, hunt the fleet-footed deer. It is a common thing for a small party to kill eight or ten deer in a day.

The wild boar is plentiful, and sometimes, if cornered, dangerous, especially the old master of the herd, called "un solitario," which will tear a dog to pieces or make a green hunter climb a tree, but a Cuban easily kills him with a machete. The island boar sometimes weighs 200 or 300 pounds, and has huge tusks, often five or six inches in length. The meat of the female is much relished by the natives. Wild dogs and cats, wild cattle, horses and jackasses abound. But the jutia, peculiar only to Cuba, which looks like a cross between a squirrel with a rat's tail and a rabbit, and which lives in the trees and feeds on nuts and leaves, is the great delight of the Cuban.

Fowls are in great numbers. Wild guinea hens and turkeys are found in flocks of from twenty-five to 100. The whistle of the quail and the flutter of the pheasant and partridge are heard on all sides in the rural and mountain regions. Ducks in abundance come over from Florida in the winter and return with the spring. Wild pigeons, with their white throats and bodies of blue, larger somewhat than the domestic bird, often, in hunting, the greatest sport to gentlemen who will be restrained within reason. In the early mornings the pigeons generally go to feed on the mangle berries when ripe, and which grow by the sea, or near some swampy place. I have known a party of three persons to kill 1,500 of the pigeons within a few hours. Robiches, tojosas and guano are found in the thick woods.

Mocking and blue birds, orioles, turpials, negritos, parrots, and a thousand kinds of songsters and birds of brilliant plumage flit from tree to tree.

The naturalist Poey says there are 641 distinct species of fish in the Cuban waters. Among those that delight the sportsman are the red snapper, lista, manta, gallego, cubera, surla and garfish. The sierra, which weighs from forty to sixty pounds, is extremely game, as is the ronco, so called because it snores when brought out of the water. For heavy sport, fishing for sharks, which are good for nothing, or the guska, which weighs from 400 to 600 pounds and is excellent eating, offers abundant exercise. It is a daily occurrence to see schools of fish, numbering from hundreds to many thousands, each fish weighing from one to four pounds, swimming around the bays and harbors waiting for a bait. Any American who enjoys good fishing can find his fondest dreams more than satisfied in Cuba.

Delicious shrimps, crabs and lobsters, oysters and clams abound. The lobsters have no claws and weigh from two to eight pounds. They are caught at night in shallow places along the sandy beach, a torch, harpoon and net being the necessary outfit. Some of the rivers abound in alligators, but few hunt them.—Field and Stream.

No Arbitration.

The Spanish members of the Peace Commission are said to be playing for arbitration of the questions in dispute by the continental powers. If this is the serious purpose of Sagasta, the Spanish Prime Minister, he is acting on the principle that drowning men catch at straws. He is a very small straw, indeed. There is no more likelihood of any matter growing out of the war with Spain being submitted to arbitration than of the sun flying from its place in the heavens to create a cataclysm in the universe. The warring States will not accept of arbitration. That is enough. No European country or combination of countries, without the request of the United States, would offer to arbitrate.

There are many who wish now that Russia had refused to go into the Berlin Congress, and had thus provoked war. She would not now be the colossal besting two continents and dictating the policy of Europe. The European powers are not a unit upon any subject to-day. If we were to propose arbitration, another would reject it on the account of the proposer. They have other matters of the most serious character to occupy their attention, and they can avert such a calamity only by the most ceaseless vigilance. They know that the answer of the United States to a proposal of arbitration would be an emphatic no. This country will not subject the fruits of victory to the hazards of European prejudice. The government knows very well what it wants, and intends to have it, and have it at once. Under the circumstances, to offer arbitration would be offensive, and would be intended as such. It is generally understood that England would not make such an offer, and by and by it made by other power and backed up by action, the latter would be at a tremendous disadvantage. A military attack would be the logical out of the question, and, in view of recent events, an attack on the American navy would be almost as foolish. Sagasta ought to be promptly brought to a realization of the fact that the United States, and not Spain, was the victor in the recent conflict.—American.

Keenan's Charge at Chancellorsville.

(For the Home Circle.)

To give time for the formation of lines and the placing of batteries, Major Keenan was asked to charge with his regiment of four hundred men, upon ten thousand of the enemy. Well known to the consequence of such a movement, with a smile upon his face, he said to his commander, "General, I will do it." There, at thirty-four years of age, he laid down his life and saved the army from rout. The armies met in conflict; terrific was the roar of cannonade and clang of arms, the loud, the din of war.

The former were advancing, they were coming like a wave. With the high courage shown by men of dauntless spirits brave.

Ten thousand of the enemy were moving on their knees. With ranks unbroken, valiantly toward the line of flame.

That force advancing must be met and stayed at any cost. Or soon 'twould be too late to hold them, and the day is lost.

The officer commanding to Major Keenan gave the word to "charge," to check them, and from rout the army saved.

Well Keenan knew that death was there, but with a strong deep faith.

Of resolution, nobly brave, he answered him, "I will."

His countenance was sad, and yet 'twas lighted with a smile.

Expressive of the earnest thoughts that thronged his mind.

There in the early prime of manhood he himself died.

A willing sacrifice to die upon that fatal field.

In those few moments left for thought what feelings thronged his mind.

From strong young life's ambitions, love and friendship called to part.

Swift memories across his mind are taking rapid flight.

The world with its many beauties fading from his sight.

Before them what a dread array of gleaming arms were seen.

The glistering of bayonets and sabers' vivid sheen.

With lustre bright the sunlight from the polished metal shines.

And hounds the stern, fierce, fearless men, in long unbroken lines.

Four hundred men to charge ten thousand in an onset dire!

Four hundred men to melt away like frost-work in the fire!

Into the carnage-smoke and tumult—dash of glittering steel.

And the thundering of cannon, and the cracking muskets' peal.

They checked the movement of the foe, but there were very few.

Survived of those four hundred strong, heroic soldiers true.

No men more gallant ever sank upon the battle plain.

And Major Keenan, cold in death, is numbered with the slain.

Spilled Children.

(For the Home Circle.)

Mr. Editor, your sweeping call for recruits may get you into trouble, because, others like myself, may enlist, who come scolding; or, like your excellent writer, "B." in last issue said—"preaching." Yes, one gets tired of preaching—scolding, but more than tired of those things which call it forth. So, what will we do about it? We don't want to be a "scold," yet would like to right some things, which, somehow or other don't want to be right without it, and may be worth it.

Just now, I have in mind, spoiled children. There is just one I have in mind, a spoiled one, and that is the mean, spiteful, tongue-tied, precocious youngster, who is usually adored and abetted by someone in its family, equally mean tongue. The ordinarily spoiled species is found everywhere, and is so common, as well as harmless, as not to call for any special sermonizing. As common, too, is the abnormally spoiled few—few, fortunately—and it is of this lesser number that I wish to speak to parents, principally, who are responsible for the building of these unsound, crooked and treacherous foundations of character.

Everybody who has a spark of youth, sunshine and good humor, in his or her character, loves to see and hear children act and prattle like the children they are by nature intended to be. The "angelic" little ones are usually found only in Sunday school books—and we're glad of it, because they're unnatural. I do not for an instant object to children, or their romping, noisy and mischievous ways, but I do most utterly abhor—not a man, but a child, for the very reason that the absence of parental restraint, which is only unlimited license, and which is about as sure as anything can be, to cause bitter tears of regret to flow from the eyes of weak, foolish fathers and mothers, later on.

The child as naturally needs training, cultivation and careful restraint as anything in plant life. Theoretically, there isn't a bit of difference between a child's life, and that of a flower or tree—both need proper training to grow into perfection. In addition, the child needs a display of firmness, which seems cruelty—harshness—but which, in the case of the direction of vegetation, for instance, is simply good gardening or farming.

How utterly silly—nay, wicked—it is for parents to allow their little ones grow up without respect for parental authority, which means, inevitably, lack of respect for the parents. How blind, that they take rebellion and exhibitions of temper and disobedience, for "smartness." How worse than foolish to train the baby lips to impudent sayings, and the baby mind to be scared at "bugaboos." The strangest of all, is that real good people, as the world goes, have the worst children—not only as babies but as grown up children. You have only to look around in your community to prove this.

Who doesn't know the pettish, forward, squalling-without-cause child? The youngster who is commanded not to do this or that, under penalty of a whipping, but which does the forbidden, and don't get the promised punishment? Who disobeys every command, and is rewarded with kisses and smiles because he disobeys? Which is apt to get everything it wants, by merely asking for it, or taking it, and is sure to gain its point, if it cries? O, yes? We all know them, and feel sorry—sorry for the child, and contempt for the parent.

Indeed, Mr. Editor, my first letter is already long, and I have scarcely yet commenced. The subject has not had an introductory, but I think I will have to stop, at least for this time. Maybe, later, I will paint some pictures, using special studies in the class named, but would rather draw out opinions on the same subject, as I am not given to writing.

Hints for Home Circle.

Lately we were told of a plan to keep fruit from ripening too fast, especially pears. Having a nice lot of large Kieffer pears, we tried the plan with some of them, and if it proves a success we will be able to treat our friends to a dish of fresh pears at Christmas. Wrap each one in paper, while they are yet hard, and put them in boxes or some drawer, away from the light and air, in a cool north room, not the attic or cellar.

Apples are very scarce, but we were fortunate in getting one bushel of York Imperial. We also took the same method to keep some of them, but in selecting the most perfect ones for the purpose, we were most forcibly impressed with this thought: If we were to be as carefully examined, which we will be some time, alas, how many of us would have to be rejected on account of some flaw or other, not all alike, but some little thing we call them, and think no one knows it anyhow; but just a speck here or a bruise there, caused us to lay the apple aside and so it was not only the badly rotted ones, which were not chosen, but oh! so many with only one defect. Let us watch ourselves more.

Loves the Country.

(For the Home Circle.)

Maurice is a cheerful, restless little fellow, not six years old, until next December. His home is in a large city. He is the youngest of three children. His sister is fifteen. Both are too large and too much engaged in school and business to give the attention which their baby brother demands, and they are often annoyed and vexed by his numerous prattling questions. He often got into mischief and disgrace, and was dubbed "Peck's bad boy," or, more commonly, "Peck." He disliked the nick name very much, and said, "I am going to be a good boy, and then no one can call me Peck." He does not swear or use any ugly words; for he says "it is a sin." At home, he has only a very small paved yard, and part of a cellar to play in. He had no playmates, but a foxterrier and a land tortoise were his devoted companions. The little dog was given away, since Maurice left home, and the poor old tortoise will soon be in a dormant state.

His mamma will not allow him to play in the street. Once, he let himself out and ran away, and came very near being crushed by the electric cars on the avenue. He is so full of animal spirit, and childish glee, that at times it gushes forth in great noisy volumes. His parents, and grandparents try hard to check him, but they might as well try to make the ocean billows stop rolling and swelling, or the wind cease blowing. The pent up exuberance of a jolly healthy boy must overflow.

He was in the country several times, for a short period, with his mamma, and was so delighted with the freedom he enjoyed in the large yards and orchards, and the access he had to the nice fruit. He spent two weeks in the country last summer, and on his return home his thoughts and conversation were frequently about the country, and the diminutive size of the city yard, without any shade trees. He wished for summer to come again so he could go to his "grandfather's country."

When the hot days of July came, Maurice's mamma sent him to the country with his cousin Minnie, who was in the city on business. He was highly pleased with the ride on the steam cars, and expressed annoyance, when they alighted at the station, where cousin Minnie lived. He remained two days and nights with her but was not quite satisfied with their town yard, and besides, made the folks weary with his wallings about an earache, which he thought he had. He cried to go to his grand-father's home, about two miles away, and his cousin Minnie gladly sent him by a man who was going in that direction.

It was on the evening of the "Glorious Fourth," and friends had provided little Maurice with a package of torpedoes, a few firecrackers, some caps and a dilapidated toy pistol with which to celebrate the day. He used them all and greatly amused himself and a few youngsters, who came to witness the demonstration, in the front yard. After that, we all sat and watched the colored rockets and the roman candles that were displayed over a little southern village, several miles away. Maurice thought they were beautiful and said, "They beat my fireworks." At ten o'clock, his grandma took him upstairs to his room and put him to bed, and he never awoke till eleven o'clock the next morning.

He set out to have a good time in the country, and he has been a very happy child all the time, and now, it is over three months since his arrival. He often says, "I don't want to go home, for the yard is too little, and the cellar too dark." He has lived out of doors, except when he ate and slept. Has a good appetite and always ready for the three meals. He does not eat anything between meals, nor fruit. He retires early and sleeps well, and has not been ill one moment since he came. He is a great questioner, and often puzzles us older heads with his wise queries about the moon, the stars, the clouds and many other objects. He has learned to count and make the numbers from one fifty, and is very proud of his ability. He can spell, and read a little, but is not overly fond of his book and still.

I will relate a little dialogue which I overheard one beautiful morning, between Maurice and Nellie, a little girl of ten summers, who lives close by. They were swinging in the hammock on the front piazza, when Maurice exclaimed, "Oh, Nellie! let us swing high up to the sky." "Oh, no, we can't do that," replied Nellie. "It is too far away," "Nellie, what is up in the sky?" the boy asked. "Oh, the angels are up in the sky," hastily answered the girl. "What angels?" queried the lad. "My, boy! but you ask funny questions," exclaimed Nellie pettishly. Maurice goes to Sunday school, and had learned that Mr. Angel was the choir leader, and his children were scholars; and no doubt the little fellows thoughts associated with angelic Angels with the heaven-ones, and he again asked, "Nellie, what angels?" "Oh, the angels with wings," again she said. "What kind of wings," again the boy asked. "Oh, white wings," said Nellie. Again he asked, "How many wings has an angel?" "Two, of course," replied Nellie. "You ask so many questions."

"Well, Nellie, how do you know the angels have two white wings? You can't see any, can you?" queried Maurice. "Oh," replied Nellie. "Then how do you know?" he persisted. "Because—because I read it in the Bible," she said. "What else did you read in the Bible about the angels?" Nellie answered very wearily, "I don't know, what funny questions you ask me." And before Maurice could play any more questions, Nellie ran down the steps to the gate, calling back, "Good-bye, I am going home with brother Willie."

To Make Scandal.

(Published by Request.)

This will make up the compound. Take a grain of falsehood, a handful of run about, the same quantity of nimble tongue, mixed with a little deceitfulness, a sprig of the herb backbite, a teaspoonful of don't-you-tell-it, six drops of malice and a few drachms of envy; add a little discontent and jealousy, and strain through a bag of misconstruction, cork it up in a bottle of malevolence, and hang it up on a skein of street yarn; keep it in a hot atmosphere, shake it occasionally for a few days and it will be fit for use. Let a few drops be taken before walking out, and the desired result will follow, to all who may wish the genuine compound.

How to Prevent Croup.

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this country and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More than 100,000 bottles of this cough medicine combined—J. M. NICKLE, of the Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa.

To be Remembered.

To remove a refractory screw from wood heat a piece of iron red hot and hold it on top of the screw for a minute or two; then the screwdriver will easily take out the screw if used while the screw is warm.

The Cleanest way to drive water bugs or roaches from bureau drawers or closed shelves is to sprinkle powdered borax over and around the shelves and cover with clean paper.

Kerosene oil is the best of furniture polishes. It cleans, makes a fine polish and preserves from the ravages of insects.

Half a teaspoonful of sugar will nearly always revive a dying fire, and it is always a safe thing to use for this purpose.

To clean gloves, put the glove into a bowl and pour naphtha on it, squeezing it up in the hand and seeing that every part is thoroughly wet; so long as this is accomplished, not a great deal of naphtha need be used. Three or four tablespoonfuls have been made to clean a pair of gloves.

Lay the wet glove on a clean cloth and use another for the rubbing, which should be gently confined until the glove is dry, using fresh parts of the cloth as it becomes soiled and not neglecting any portion of the kid surface, or there will be streaks to show for this oversight.

Open the window for a few moments, and you may wear those same gloves, without the slightest odor from them, in the course of an hour or two.

To remove the smell of new paint, lay a bunch of hay in the room and sprinkle it with a little chloride of lime; close the room for several hours, and when it is again opened the smell of paint will all be gone.

It is better for house plants if the soil be loosened about the roots once a week. This allows the air to reach the roots, and assists the evaporation of the excessive moisture when they have had too much wetting. Always have the water as warm as the temperature of the room when using it upon the plants.

Rubber plants require to be nourished, and if a tablespoonful of castor oil is occasionally poured into a little trench made around the stalk and covered with the earth, it will be found very beneficial to the plant.

And do not neglect to give the leaves a frequent sponge bath of milk and water. With such care the plant will be able to send our new leaves during the winter season as well as in the summer months.

Raw potato parings are capital things to use in the lighting of a fire. They save a quantity of wood and encourage the fire to burn up quickly and brightly.

Never draw the curtain in your bedroom, particularly during the daytime on a sunny day. Sunlight is one of the factors of essential to health, and a room wherein the sun shines is pretty sure to be one that will invigorate the body during sleeping hours.

Don't Neglect Your Liver.

Live troubles quickly result in serious complications, and the man who neglects his liver has little regard for health. A bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters taken now and then will keep the liver in perfect order. If the disease has developed, Brown's Iron Bitters will cure it permanently. Strength and vitality will always follow its use. Brown's Iron Bitters is sold by all dealers.

HOW TO CURE CATARRH.

Information as to Diet, Drinks, Bathing, Clothing and General Care of the Body.

A pure diet of fruits, grains and nuts, and if milk is used let it be taken in the form of buttermilk or kefir. Avoid animal fats and greasy dishes, condiments, meats and all indigestible food stuffs. A dry diet, which must be well chewed, is preferable, and the two meal a day plan of eating. Drink freely, but not at mealtime. Three pints a day is none too much in hot weather.

At bedtime take two or three times a week a warm full bath for cleanliness. On rising each morning take a cool or cold sponge or shower bath. Gradually lower the temperature. Rub the skin well, and in cold weather apply a little vasoline or cold cream.

Take a sufficient amount of exercise daily to produce perspiration, and be very careful to avoid taking cold after bathing, changing the clothing if necessary and cooling the skin by a cool sponging. There is no danger in a cool bath while perspiring unless there is considerable fatigue as well as free sweating.

The clothing must be carefully adjusted to the weather and season. It must not be too warm. Rather light clothing, both day and night, tends to health and vigor of the skin and the system at large. Wear linen underclothing next the body. Open, loose texture is best. Woolen clothing may be worn over the linen as may be needed for warmth.

The clothing of the feet is especially important. Warm shoes with thick soles are needed. The tops may be of leather in summer and felt in winter, if needed for warmth. Avoid rubbers except for brief wear when exposed to moisture underfoot. When rubbers have been worn for an hour or two, the shoes and stockings as well as the rubbers must be removed, for the reason that they are damp from retained perspiration and the feet will be chilled by evaporation after the rubbers are removed if dry clothing is not supplied. The same principle applies to the wearing of mackintosh cloaks and other waterproof clothing. The feet must be kept dry and warm. Special attention must be given to the feet and legs. Avoid too warm clothing of the neck by means of furs, etc.—Dr. J. H. Kellogg in New York Voice.
