The convention was harmonious throughout and was without the suggestions of "cut-and-dried" affairs which have followed previous meetings of the kind. Several counties had come to Baltimore with "favorite sons," and late Tuesday night it was a possibility that the names of Messrs Edwin Warfield. Murray Vandiyer, Henry Williams and Buchanan Schley might go before the convention. Early in the morning, however, the friends of these gentlemen got together at the Carrollton Hotel and concluded that as Colonel Smith had.

of the convention.

The nomination of Mr. Smith was by acelamation, also that of Hon. Is and Dr. J. W. Hering for Comptroller.

The platform adopted was a plea for harmony, opposition to a large standing army, a denunciation of trusts, the declaration that negro voters are a menace to peace and order and that safety and protection from all these evils can be found in "a return to political power of the Democracy which represents the vast majority of the intelligent manhood of the state."

Make the occasion one of such promounced success.
