ENTERED AT TANEYTOWN POSTOFFICE AS SECOND CLASS MATTER

SATURDAY, NOV. 3rd., 1900.

Leave Capital Alone.

In the discussion of the money question, it is a very frequently expressed opinion that capital does not need any favorable legislation, or any special consideration; that capital is able to care for itself, and that legislation should rather be directed against, than for it. In some respects, it is true that capital can care for itself, it is wholly true that it will care for itself, and in this fact it will reason why it needs protection.

It may be said that there are two classes of capitalists. The one invests in mortgages and other rock-ribbed securities, with the object in view of safety and a certain fixed rate of interest. It is made up of those who do not care, especially, for enterprise, but reduce the taking of chances to the minimum, rather preferring long time investments and low rates of interest, to speculation. Without meaning any disrespect, it is truthful to say that such investors are largely selfish, and of very little real benefit to a community—they can take care of themselves.

The other class is made up of those who prefer to invest in industrial securities—the promotion of enterprises—those who take greater chances, with the object of making a better percentage than the class first mentioned. They are the people who "make the wheels go round"—give employment.

The first class is apt to thrive best when people are compelled to borrow—to place mortgages. The second class thrives best when money is easier—when the country is not so rocky. As the feeling of security and good times pervades the country, money comes out of hiding to exercise itself, and to add to itself. As discontent increases, as credit becomes strained, as business gets slow, so does money begin to gravitate toward its place of safety, out of circulation and into long-time, low-rate, investments.

This is an inevitable law—it is self-preservation. Money—capital—is bold, when not attacked, but the veriest coward on the appearance of danger. This cannot be changed. It is simply human nature, after all, to protect—to hold fast—to that which is, in the estimation of most people, next in value to life—money. This needs no explanation. It is too generally understood.

Governmental policies, therefore, are closely scrutinized by capitalists, before making ventures, as one examines weather signs before arranging to take a trip. Capital does not need favorable legislation as much as it needs to be left alone. Not necessarily "left alone" to form itself into trusts and monopolies, but to read the signs of trade, of business, of values, without the danger of having these avenues obstructed by undefined and unnatural possibilities, and the ordinary signs given new and strange meanings.

As capital gravitates—as the two classes of capitalists mentioned in the preceding paragraphs—so does the whole country prosper and so does the whole people become interested in the subject of finance. Why? For the reason that there can be no widespread prosperity without widespread employment of labor; and because there can be no widespread employment of labor, without, at the same time, the employment of large amounts of capital.

Those who attempt to array labor against capital are the worst enemies of labor. There is not the slightest doubt of this. Capital can bury itself in the ground, in vaults, at no interest, or a very small interest, and still live. Labor—when spoken of as the opposite of capital—must be active, and earn, or it dies. It must earn, that which is either hidden, or active—as the case may be—money. Therefore, as capital is employed, as it becomes confident and aggressive, so does labor also become confident and aggressive, and we enjoy what is commonly called, "good times."

The time may come, when it will be necessary to place more restrictions on capital, than now. The time may come when capital will lose its cowardice and become a menace; but this time has not yet come. When it does, there is no doubt of the ability of the American people to equal the situation and discover the remedy. In the meantime, it is short-sighted policy to fight the source of prosperity—capital, it is equally shortsighted to threaten it, and thus cause it to be withdrawn from use—out of reach of labor.

The "Superior Race" Scored.
The following paragraphs from the Afro-American editor, a newspaper published in Baltimore, by, and in the interest of, Negroes, are keenly sarcastic, but nevertheless true in their interpretation. The General race undoubtedly owes a duty, which is only partially performed, to all who, because of their racial characteristics, are naturally unfortunate. The "superior" race, however, lamentably fails to measure up to its possibilities, not alone in the education and elevation of Negroes, but in many important opportunities within its own ranks.

We could never quite understand the prejudice against color alone. Extended the same prejudice to all who are responsible for their own ignorance, and to all who in any way are unworthy of the benefits and privileges of American freedom and liberty, then we understand, and agree to, the sentiment. We have seen foreigner, darker of skin and more ignorant than many native born Negroes, who are accepted as having rights under our government not to be accorded to the latter, on no stronger grounds, apparently, than race prejudice, all of which, in our estimation, is distinctly to the discredit of our Christian citizenship. The following are the paragraphs referred to:

"Of course it will not be denied that the white man is of the 'superior' race. The truthfulness of such a statement is authenticated by himself. He says so himself, and surely he ought to know. But, one's indorsement is not always reliable. On account of the weakness of humanity one is a little inclined to be partial in writing his own certificate of character. But in kindness to the 'superior' race we are wont to accept its doings as illustrative of its boasted supremacy and superiority. The Anglo-Saxon, by much practice therein, has become so accustomed to praising himself in this particular, that it would be very difficult for him to see himself as others see him. From a superior race we naturally anticipate superior treatment. From a race conscious of its own innate supremacy we are rather inclined to look for gracious condescension on its part in order to pass along the great gifts which it has in its hands."

An exchange which comes to us from the South gives us a sample of the magnanimous superiority which characterizes this superior race. We are told that New Orleans has decided that the Negro boy and girl must not be carried beyond the Fifth Grade in the public graded schools of that city. What a princely exhibition of superiority upon the part of the "inferior" race! They are superior and have many centuries the start of us, and yet they do not graciously and industriously throw in the pathway of the "inferiors" every conceivable obstacle. The City Council of Richmond, decided some time since that the city government will not hereafter accept the bid of any contractor who will not pledge not to employ any skilled Negro labor. This action was subsequently rescinded, because it was found to be plainly unconstitutional. And yet the white race is the superior race!

Now, Figure It Out.
The following table is provided for those who want to do a little figuring on the result of next Tuesday's election. The figures show the plurality vote and the electoral vote of each state in 1896; that is, the first figures following each state show the plurality in thousands; the last, the electoral votes. For instance, Alabama gave Bryan a plurality of 75,570, and 11 electoral votes; in the table, 76 stands for the nearest full thousand, and 11 for the electoral vote—hence, 76-11. The margin to the right is for inserting the electoral vote of this year.

Brave Explorers
Like Stanley and Livingstone, found it harder to overcome malaria, fever and ague, and typhoid disease germs than savage cannibals; but thousands have found that Electric Bitters is a cure for all malarial diseases. If you have chills with fever, aches in back of neck and head, and tired, worn-out feeling, a trial will convince you of their merit. W. A. Null of Webb, Ill., writes: "My child suffered for more than a year with chills and fever; then two bottles of Electric Bitters cured them." Only 50 cents. Try them. Guaranteed. Sold by R. S. "Sure Thing" Politics.
The portrayal of an election day scene, says a writer in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for November, in the home ward of an expert in "sure thing politics" illustrates the methods pursued for two decades by the politicians in New York politics, who has had conferred upon him the highest offices but two, within the gift of the American people. His headquarters were a saloon. Off one end of the bar was a small apartment called his "set-ting place." Here the Boss met his "heelers," compared notes, issued orders and furnished funds with which to procure votes. The Boss kept open house. With poll book in hand, a bundle of ballots in one coat pocket, and a wad of one, two and five dollar bills in the other, he would stand looking out of the window, checking off the names of voters as they appeared, or were about to leave the polling box. He knew personally every white and black man in the city and of course all in his own ward. Singling out some man in the crowd of loiterers, as the line of voters began to lose its length, he would clutch him by the arm, march him across the street to a coal yard or back to a sequestered spot behind the box. There he would "reason" with him, using persuasive talk at first; financial arguments if necessary. Now and then he would shout, "Here, Bob! Here, Tom! Here, Charlie! go and get So-and-so; tell him he must come here and vote or his name will be Denis with one 'n'."

"So-and-so" would be discovered, dragged out of some grogshop or dive hustled into the line of voters and guarded by Bob, Tom or Charlie until he reached a point opposite the box. Then this friend and counselor would hand him a ballot and bid him deposit it in the box without even so much as a chance to scan the names upon it. After his duty was done, the voter could call upon the Boss, or one of his lieutenants, and get the amount agreed upon, in cash, or a ticket calling for a similar sum on presentation at the Boss's bank.

This Boss had the business of buying votes as thoroughly systematized as that of buying and selling "gigs" and "straddles" in the polley shops of the metropolis. The price of votes usually ranged from $1.50 to $25. It was gauged partially by the purchasable material, and partially by the reports which came in hourly from the various wards, as to the number necessary to insure victory. The market went up or down in sympathy with reports from those wards, and investigation as to the price paid in one ward would elicit the ruling figures of purchase all over the city.

Our Porto Rican Trade.

Apparently, the Porto Ricans are not being ruined by the tariff of 15 per cent of the Dingley law duties imposed on imports into the island. According to a compilation made by the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, the value of merchandise shipped from Porto Rico to the United States during the last five months amounted to not less than $3,316,333, against $1,169,128 for the corresponding period of 1897, the year prior to the Spanish-American War, and when trade had not yet become affected by increasing friction between the two countries. At the same time the American exports to Porto Rico show an increase from $768,802 to $2,807,900. These gains effectually dispose of the assertion that the tariff serves to paralyze the activities of the islanders and prevents recovery from the devastation caused by last year's hurricane. It also refutes completely the aspersion cast upon the administrative system inaugurated by Americans since annexation and not regarded as an emphatic vindication of established economic policies.

Allowance must be made for the circumstance that the given figures trade a shifting in the foreign trade of the island, the Spaniards having governed the colony on the principle of exploitation. Under Spanish rule Porto Rico was a reservation, from which all other countries were excluded by means of differentials. Some proportion of the island exports which now enter the United States no doubt formerly went to Spain, but there has been an increase in the aggregate. As will be noted, we not only send more goods to Porto Rico, but have augmented our purchases, the balance in favor of the island for the five months being over $500,000. This, together with the fact that all the revenues which accrue from imports are expended on internal improvements, evidences our disinterestedness and magnanimity.—Herald.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly has a large subscription list; but it should be larger. Its management is more energetic, its plans better than ever before. As an added stimulus toward an increase, the Monthly offers no less than two hundred and sixty-four (264) prizes in cash to the men and women, boys and girls, who show most energy in securing new subscribers. This offer means that time and energy shall be well paid for. The price of the Magazine is one dollar a year. Its contents appeal directly to people who care for good and timely literature. A few spare hours a week will add to your income substantially. If you want work that will pay you, write for terms to Frank Leslie Publishing House, 141-147 Fifth Ave., New York.

The Unsantarian Pin.

A story was recently told by "The Sanitarian" to this effect: A mother was engaged in pinning up a child's skirt with a safety pin when the child broke off. At that moment she was interrupted, and left the pin as it was. The youngster then climbed up on his father's knee, and in doing so inflicted on his father's leg a slight scratch. Two weeks later a serious wound had developed, and this eventually led to the child's death. It is believed that the point had become contaminated in some manner, and caused blood poisoning. The victim was a thoroughly healthy man prior to this accident.

This case probably has many parallels. Look jaw, one of the most terrible of maladies, usually begins with a slight wound in the foot that contains a little dirt. The microbe of lockjaw flourishes in common earth, and it is a wonder that more boys who run about barefooted in summer do not acquire that disease in consequence. Erysipelas and other disorders are communicated by barbers who, without making any apparent effort, nevertheless pick up disease germs from one person and inoculate another with them by means of a razor. On this account the barber should be the subject of compelling laws by law to wash their razors with carbolic acid or some other disinfectant every time those instruments are used.

Apropos of the instance here specified, "The Sanitarian" urges its readers to be particularly cautious about using any but fresh pins. Pins are so cheap that this practice would not be wasteful. The old proverb, with the intention of encouraging painstaking economy, says: See a pin and pick it up, all the day you will have good luck. But the marker of that proverb ignored important sanitary considerations. However, if an old pin is dipped into carbolic acid or some other disinfectant, it will not be so dangerous. It is again as usual the case otherwise: "The Sanitarian" remarks:

A lady goes to her dressmaker to be fitted. She stands before the modiste and the mirror, and if the garment is too large pleats are taken in here or there and fastened temporarily with pins usually held for only a few minutes at the mouth of the modiste. Is the latter young and healthy, or old and diseased? Is her mouth sweet and clean? Are her teeth and gums diseased?

The same pins are probably used to fasten up the parcel when it is sent home to the lady. The pins are then used to fasten up the parcel when it is again and again by herself or her family, and, for convenience, often put or carried in their mouths. What disease germs are thus transferred? From one person to another in this careless use of pins?

There are many other indecent, even disgusting, uses made of pins. One often sees people picking their ears or teeth with them. They are frequently used for removing splinters from the hands, for picking pimples, puncturing blisters and for fastening bandages over sores or wounds.

The Ideal Bed-Chamber.

"The importance of the sleeping and bathing arrangements of a house is not half appreciated," writes Maria "Arlosova" in the November Ladies' Home Journal, giving some suggestions as to furnishing the house. "Every bedroom should be provided with the essentials for healthful sleep and a light on the wall. As far as possible, the room should be kept free from anything that would tend to contaminate the air. It should be as large as one can afford, and the windows so arranged that they may be opened at the top and bottom. If possible the floor should be bare and the rug so arranged that it may be taken out-doors with ease for cleaning and airing. Everything about the room should be lighted with the best candles or fitted with strong casters, so that it may be readily moved; the springs ought to be firm and strong, and the mattress of a kind that will not allow the heaviest part of the body to sink. The bed of the sleeper to lie in a cramped position. My own preference is for a cheap hard mattress next the springs and a light one of hair or wool above it of any kind of a firm mattress is better than one that is too soft. Above all, do not overfurnish the bedroom."

Eating Raw Food.

A great many projects to improve man's eating habits have been proposed, some with much sense, and some of doubtful propriety. Occasionally one hears of a scheme of this class which is really a good one. Such, for instance, is the proposition of a certain Professor Tyler of Indianapolis, that people eat only uncooked food. "The Philadelphia Medical Journal" reports that the professor attacks both his logic and his facts. Professor Tyler argues in this way:

A gosling becomes a goose in a year, and lives to be a great many years old. It is not slaughtered prematurely. Man takes twenty years to develop, and ought, therefore, to live to be four hundred years old. The goose eats only uncooked food, this applies to only a few progress hints, he probably would! Of course, this is the worst sort of nonsense. Again, the cells of meat and vegetable food are destroyed by cooking, and dead cells are deprived of nutrition. Well, it is astonishing to see how many millions have thrived on baked bread, roasted beef, boiled eggs and fried potatoes for countless generations. Not only is all this argument untrue, but there are excellent reasons why the professor's recommendation should not be followed. "The Philadelphia Medical Journal" says:

The subject of how and why when man became a cooking animal is a curious and interesting one in anthropology, but it leads the inquirer far back into the dim regions of remote antiquity. We doubt not there were good and natural reasons for it, and we advise our readers to cling to this ancient usage, and leave it to our friends in Chicago to eat raw flesh and uncooked vegetables, Tapes, Tenn., in exploring Mammoth Cave, contracted a severe case of Piles. His quick cure through using Bucklen's Anal Ointment convinced him it is another world's worth of relief from hemorrhoids, inflammation, and all Bodily Eruptions. Only 25c at R. S. McKinney's.

When the Child "Plays Hooky."

Children sometimes pretend to be ill to escape going to school. Feigning illness to escape duty is called in the army "malingering" and is always punished when detected. The child who habitually complains of head-ache just before school time should be put on a sofa in a darkened room, not permitted to read, nor look at pictures, and have a hot-water bag placed at his feet. If the ailment is real this is the best treatment for the early stages; if it is feigned the silence and solitude soon become so boring to the child that he is glad to do anything to escape from them. Other affected patients should be treated as if they

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE BEAUTIFUL LADY WHO REIGNS AT THIRLSTONE CASTLE.

Women and the New Era—Cutting the Hats—Do Women Admire Ugly Men?—The Luncheon Table—Women as Dramatists.

The Viscountess Maitland is one of the aristocratic beauties of English society, belonging to the set that includes the Marchioness of Granby, Lady T. Granby, and others who make friends of the great artists and are more or less skillful with their own brushes and colors. Lady Maitland is a tall, blond young Scotch woman, the daughter of a judge, and by marrying the young viscount she entered the famous Lauderdale family, than which there is none better known in Great Britain.

In a "confession" book which is owned by the handsome and accomplished queen of Thirlstone one of the questions asked is, "Do women admire ugly men?" The empress of Russia answered this as follows: "Yes, I believe that generally women admire ugly men—unless handsome ones are out of their reach."

Queen Margherita of Italy gave the following witty reply: "From 20 to a woman loves a handsome man, from 50 to 60 she admires a handsome man, and after 50 she worships a man in any shape or form."

"Miss Henry of Battenberg wrote: 'Many ugly men are very lovable, undoubtedly—but, then, so are many handsome men. However, handsome is as handsome does, and a woman who looks at only his good looks to fall back upon would have a poor chance of winning any right minded girl's affection.'"

"The man of the hour," says the "Luncheon Table" contributor, "is the man who is not only handsome but who has a good character. What quality do women most admire in men?" the queen of Portugal herself wrote in her book: "Purity in a man is surely as grand and as desirable as beauty. The most contemptible of all beings is the man with a 'ricketty reputation,' sneering at the woman who is not exactly one of the beauties of the hour."

It is well known that the Princess of Wales admires "modesty" in a man more than any other quality. The following smart little anecdote relating to this subject is given for the first time, and it can be relied upon as being perfectly true: The Princess of Wales, at the end of the Sandringham garden parties, looked at the men who were invited, and remarked, to a very quiet, demure looking, almost insignificant middle aged man, a friend, or rather, an acquaintance, "I am going to be married, and you are the man I have chosen to marry." "After a few commonplace observations the trio broke up. 'I hope your royal highness will marry the man you have chosen,' remarked the princess' acquaintance, 'but, really, that gentleman you have just introduced me to is awfully milk and water. I don't think he would have the courage to win a woman's heart.' "Oh, indeed?" quietly replied the princess. "Well, Captain—might not he have the courage to win a woman's heart; but, alas! he has not the courage to win the Victoria cross!"

The Luncheon Table. For any luncheon, however elaborate or however simple, to set the table in the same way, says Harper's Bazar. There must always be flowers or fruits or sometimes both in the middle of the table. The simple reason for this is the season. The flowers may be arranged in a fishbowl. And just here it may be well to say that there are very few things more charming and effective on the table than flowers. They take up and reflect the light in the most fascinating way and show the stems of the flowers. One other thing to be remembered is that the flowers should be arranged in a bowl filled with mullin lace, covered with dew, makes a charming study in color, and in country houses it is often used for this purpose. It is a simple and appear on most of the fashionable tables, although lovers of the beautiful lace on crystal, fine pieces of Venetian glass or even on quaint bits of pottery for their flowers.

People with little to choose from, therefore, need not be aghast at a face which compels them to gaze across the table. The simple reason for this is the season. The flowers may be arranged in a fishbowl. And just here it may be well to say that there are very few things more charming and effective on the table than flowers. They take up and reflect the light in the most fascinating way and show the stems of the flowers. Women as Dramatists. Alice lives, the author of "The Village Postmaster," in an article in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly says: "Is playwriting a good thing for women? Yes, it is, as long as it is for men. Men are willing after the play is written to work about ten times as hard as a man would get it accepted. There will be manuscript after manuscript, and the woman who has been through the mill with her eyes open will agree with me. Here are some of the reasons: The manager is a man, and he is a man of the world. All the capital at present in use for producing plays is controlled by men. Most managers have more confidence in a man than in a woman. The writer, therefore, who is a woman, why? Because up to the last ten years you could count on the fingers of one hand all the successful women dramatists who ever lived. The only woman writer prepared to the male, was not in 10,000. Men are willing after the play is written to work about ten times as hard as a man would get it accepted. There will be manuscript after manuscript, and the woman who has been through the mill with her eyes open will agree with me. Here are some of the reasons: The manager is a man, and he is a man of the world. All the capital at present in use for producing plays is controlled by men. Most managers have more confidence in a man than in a woman. The writer, therefore, who is a woman, why? Because up to the last ten years you could count on the fingers of one hand all the successful women dramatists who ever lived. The only woman writer prepared to the male, was not in 10,000. Current Items of Local News, of Special Interest to Home Readers.

Mrs. Henry Galt is on a visit to relatives and friends, in Washington, D. C.

Miss Clara Wilbide, of this place, has a cactus on which there are 135 flowers in bloom.

Mr. J. T. Shriner on the Emmitsburg road, is seriously ill from a stroke of paralysis.

Halloween passed without the usual amount of pranks, and corn-throwing. No objections have, as yet, been filed.

The Sharetts wood lot, near Westminster, was sold at public sale to Theodore J. Mathias, of near Taneytown, for $30.10 per acre.

On Nov. 1st, Mrs. L. D. Reid, Mrs. H. Ohler, Mrs. J. Smith and Mrs. W. F. Clingan spent a very pleasant day at the home of Mrs. Chas. Ridinger, near town.

Farmers can have their places advertised against hunting, for 50c., by having their names placed under the trespass notice in another column. The notice will be published regularly until December 31st.

Unusual demands for advertising space, this week, have caused a temporary disarrangement of the news features of the RECORD; but, as we so seldom curtail reading matter to this extent, we trust our readers will not complain.

Don't forget that the democratic ticket is first on the ballot this year, instead of second, as it had been. The law says the party receiving the highest vote in the state, at the preceding election, shall be entitled to first place. The Republican ticket is second.

"Your paper is certainly a newsy sheet, and a welcome visitor to my family, every week. Do not wish to be without it, although my business keeps me very much employed, yet I find time to always go through the CARROLL RECORD—Edwin E. Bishop, Hanover, Pa.

Oliver Newcomer, a young farmer, of this district, fell from a farm wagon, on Tuesday, and broke his right arm near the wrist. He stepped on the endgate of the wagon bed, which was unfastened, with the result that he was thrown to the ground, and stated. Mr. Newcomer has just recovered from an attack of typhoid fever.

The Republican meeting held in this place last Friday night, was a "stayer." A. A. Blakeney, candidate for Congress, spoke both inside and outside of the Opera House, as only half the crowd could get inside. About 1200 people were present. Addresses were delivered by A. A. Blakeney, of Baltimore county, Hon. Philip B. Low, of New York, F. M. Goodwin, of Baltimore, and Jos. D. Brooks, of Westminster. The Double Pipe Creek and Taneytown bands were present, and a number of campaign songs were rendered by local talent.

Miss Lizzie Yingling, a highly respected lady of this district, died on Wednesday morning, after an illness of but one day, of heart disease. Funeral services were held in the Reformed church, this Friday morning, and interment took place in the cemetery at Silver Run.

A very pleasant surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Stuller, of Trevauxon, on Tuesday evening of this week, in honor of their son, Edward. The evening was very agreeably spent in conversation and games until 11 o'clock when an attractive and elegant collation of refreshments were served. About forty-five visitors were present, all of whom enjoyed the occasion.

The whistle on the Steam Mill will announce the election returns, on Tuesday night, if they are definite. If McKinley is elected, it will give a succession of toots and fancy yells; if it is Bryan, the sound will be a long drawn whistle, with a doleful tendency. Don't think the town is on fire, when you hear it, but, read the returns from the above description, then turn over and go to sleep again.

Last Sunday morning, while Mr. Absalom Smith, of Bridgeport, was doing his morning work at the barn, he was attacked by a large bull, belonging to Wm. T. Smith, and was thrown to the ground with such violence that the thigh bone of his right leg was broken at the hip joint. Considering Mr. Smith's great age, it is feared serious results may follow. At this writing, we are glad to say, he is doing as well as can be expected.

On Thursday, Nov. 1st, the nephews, nieces and friends of Mrs. Sarah Ann Fair gave her a surprise dinner in honor of her 71st birthday. Among those present were Mrs. Sarah Ann Fair, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith, at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so had been the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is no longer it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

The Proper Tribunal. Mrs. Snuggs—Do you suppose that Queen Wilhelmina and her betrothed ever have lovers' quarrels? Mr. Snuggs—I suppose so. Why do you ask? Mrs. Snuggs—I was wondering if they would be referred to The Hague board of arbitration for settlement.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Warfieldsburg.—The recent warm weather has greatly improved the growing wheat in this locality. The late seeding has come up nicely and is looking fine. Corn husking has been pushed forward during the past week of fine weather.

A protracted meeting is in progress at Stone Chapel and much interest is being manifested. Rev. R. Kolb is in charge of the meeting. Elder J. A. Saxton the pastor of the Church of God at this place, the past year, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last. His departure is very much regretted by the congregation. Elder L. F. Murray, the newly appointed pastor, will take charge on the first of November and will begin a series of meetings on Nov. 11th, at 7:30 p. m.

The Rolling Position.

Where are you going in such haste, neighbor? "To the railway station." "For had, for I was going to tell you a piece of news." "Oh, dead! Now I'll lose another brain!"—Fleeging Blatter.

A Dread. I am a bold campaigner who fears nothing—'less proved of sore—Save one thing, which I'll name to you, And that I fear full sore. A gleam would settle 'er the land Where daily I rejoice; A national grief would take command If I should lose my voice. Who steals my thunder finds; Ofttimes with an unmeaning crash 'To noble careless minds. I ask but to vociferate, I seek no proffered choice, And should my voice awake a state If I should lose my voice.

Only Fifty-two Hundred Cars! That last March 01, 02. These 5,200 cars of oleomargarine made and 4,000 of them sold contrary to the laws of the various states last year do not cut much of a figure in the butter trade. The 193,490,000 pounds of oleomargarine only means a little over $24,000,000 out of the pockets of the dairy men and into the pockets of the milk and of bogus butter and their tools, the retailers and restaurant and hotel keepers.

The value of the raw materials that went into the 104,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine last year was about $7,000,000—that is the oleomargarine makers paid the cottonseed oil pressers, oleomargarine-all makers and packers that much for the fat they got from them. By the time the milkman's profits are figured out the farmer will find that he received for his share of this not more than half that amount—not over $4,000,000 at the outside. This means about 4 cents a pound for the value of the product which the oleomargarine man purchases of the farmer to make an article that fraudulently displaces a product of the farm, which will net him from four to five times that amount the year around. The net loss to the farmers of this country last year as a result of the sale of oleomargarine is at least $20,000,000.—Chicago Produce.
