

MUCH VIOLATED LAWS.

Liquor on Election Day, and Betting on Result of Election.

There are two laws on our statute books, relating to elections, which are violated regularly, with but little attempt at concealment. The selling of liquor, possibly, is not indulged in to any extent, if at all, but the law is just as severely enforced as if it were.

SPECTACLES FOR VOTERS.

Republican Campaign Committee Providing against Poor Eyesight.

According to the Baltimore News, the new election law has been a blessing in disguise to the spectacle-makers, who will profit by Mr. Gorman's desire to go back to the United States Senate.

The Republican party will have purchased about 100 gross of spectacles by the time election day comes, in order that their voters who have had trouble may have plenty of facility in dimly-lighted booths to see the names on the tickets they will have to mark.

It is estimated that a large number of these spectacles have been sent out for use in the schools for illiterates, and on election day there will be about a dozen pairs of spectacles in each voting precinct.

Mason & Dixon's Line, Again.

Editorial Record: So much that is erroneous has appeared during the last month in the newspapers regarding the resurvey of the Mason and Dixon line that I desire to call your attention to the present position of the work in order that the people of the State may be thoroughly informed.

The Mason and Dixon line was originally surveyed in 1763, and the present boundary line between Washington and Allegheny counties, covering the intervening period were thrown up around wooden posts. Little has been done during the intervening period to preserve intact or repair the broken and displaced monuments, while the heads of iron and wooden posts beyond Stealing Hill Creek, for the most part, long since disappeared.

The present resurvey of the line, provided for by an act of the General Assembly of 1890 to co-operate with the State of Pennsylvania in the resurvey of the line, was completed in 1897, and a similar appropriation has since been made.

The names of candidates of the Union Reform party, William A. Parker for Comptroller, and Geo. S. Shepard, for Clerk of Court of Appeals, will appear on the official ballot.

MORE ABOUT THE NEW ELECTION LAW.

The provision of the new election law which declares invalid, all ballots, other than those which extend outside of the squares designed for the X marks, is apt to prove very unpopular, and it is not to be thrown out, besides, it gives the election officers a very excellent opportunity for "crookedness," during the count.

It is said that the intention of the provision is to prevent specially marked ballots, or those marked for purposes of identification, but this explanation is unsatisfactory and unconvincing. No longer can the "intention" of the voter be taken into consideration during the count, but the physical precision with which the mark is made, is of first importance, according to the law.

The instructions to the judges, from which the above interpretation is drawn, is as follows: "If the voter has marked more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or if there shall be any mark on the ballot which does not extend outside of the square opposite to the name of a candidate, his ballot shall not be counted."

Apparently, voting has become a sort of precise mechanical performance, in which a keen eye and firm hand are absolute essentials. Instead of its being simple and popular extension of the will of the people, it has become more like a prize puzzle contest. If you happen to escape all the difficulties, and mark your ballot eleven times, after the right names and with scrupulous exactness, you can then say that you have exercised the privilege of American citizenship, but, the difficulty is, no one ever knows whether he has voted as he wanted to, or not.

Already, many voters in both parties have expressed their thorough disgust with this "professional" tinkering with voting forms, and the indignation of the people is being expressed in the most forcible manner. The single ticket system would be returned to, at least, the provisions which aim to disfranchise voters because of their poor eyesight and nervousness, and because they cannot keep their heads a directory of the names of all candidates, and, in consequence, their names are not on the ballot, and will sooner or later be declared unconstitutional, or rescinded.

No man can foretell, with any degree of certainty, the result in this country this fall. It is certain that both parties will cast many improperly placed votes, and that the result will be the heaviest losers. Considering the closeness of the vote between the two great parties in county, the uncertainty of the materialization of the hopes of the framers of the present law, the unknown number of voters who will not vote, and the changes made in each district by the registration this year, it will be a wise plan for candidates to save their money for campaigning, and take chances. A vote promised, or even bought, this year, may not be delivered, notwithstanding the desire of the voter.

Experimental tests among all classes—from college professors to illiterate—have developed a surprisingly large percentage of improperly marked ballots, which, under the law, will be rejected by the judges at the count; in fact, it now seems reasonably sure that those who think they "know it all" will be rejected by the judges at the count, and will be left with nothing but preliminary instructions. This subject will be continued, in the next two issues of the RECORD, and a number of the dangers pointed out.

It is now said that the official ballot for this county will be in two columns, the names of the candidates in the first column, and the names of the voters in the second. This is a great mistake. The latest sample ballot, which is headed, "For use in instructing Democratic voters," contains the names of all candidates in one column, and the three amendments in another. It is not clear how the names of the voters will be placed on the ballot, but the form which will be used on election day, the uninitiated is unable to say.

The W. C. T. U. Convention.

(For the Home Circle.) The Maryland State Convention of the W. C. T. U., closed its sessions on Thursday, October 3rd, and we were able to attend, having a bright spot to refer to in the future. The good time we had, the pleasant people we met, the new impetus given to the cause of Temperance, the new ideas gained, the enthusiasm of the speakers, the appetizing dinners and suppers which the ladies of Westminster provided.

We were told, early in the meeting, of the diversity of talents that are given to each individual, and that the combining of these gifts in you and me would bring perfection. Oh! let us each study our own special gift and use it to the best advantage. It seemed to be thought that in the Local Unions every detail of the work should start, and the individual responsibility was spoken of, over and over again. The heartiest response I feel that next to home, should come the duty to the W. C. T. U. We should be ever on the watch, ready to do everything that will tend to suppress the great evil that more than any other brings disgrace and misery throughout our fair land. It is not merely a moral question—the trouble is that not enough Christian people are interested sufficiently. It should be one of the duties to see that the pastor of each church preach at least two temperance sermons during the year.

The education of the children was strongly urged, and in order that they are taught properly, every teacher should consider it important to have a knowledge that will enable her to give this instruction in the best way. If the work is to be carried on in the future, it is not necessary that the children of today be prepared to take the places of those who may be called to the front. Every young person should make it worth while that she or he has really lived for the uplift of the human family. Speakers from the Epworth League and Christian Endeavor societies assured us that they were willing to work hand in hand with us in the good work.

It had been said that there was enough sentiment, but a lack of method, in the work, but while the church permits its members to patronize the saloon, there is not even sufficient sentiment. There are many who oppose the saloon, and yet think it no harm to keep a little liquor in the closet for use in the stomach's sake; this leads to its use for other purposes. Let us have no compromise. The use of only the unfermented wine in the communion service was also alluded to. We should let our legislators know that we are awake on the subject of law, and that we expect them to cooperate with us. The subject of the right of franchise was warmly advocated, that we too might assist in the making and carrying out of the laws of the new country being full of possibilities, but that woman had lessons to learn that she might be able to accept this new privilege when it comes. She must first want to vote, she must know how to do it intelligently, she must be good enough and thus able to use her influence in the right direction. Dr. Lewis, of W. M. College, said, that 80 per cent of the graduates of our colleges were girls, the number of boys was far behind—they were too busy in the pursuit of money and politics to care for the lot of the spiritless and the weak. The nicotine habit was said to aid greatly in deteriorating the mental condition of our young men. Mrs. Lake, the eloquent Catholic orator, used some very convincing arguments, one of which seemed to be quite appreciated. In speaking of the creation of woman, as "twas said from a rib taken from the man, she said had God intended she should be a slave he would have taken a bone from the ankle that she might run on errands for him, but that as it was taken from the side, there was evidence that it was to be treated as should a journey side by side with him, and that his arm should be extended to protect her. A DELEGATE.

Very Silly Stuff.

There was certainly one serious flaw in the funeral services at Canton and that was the selection sung by the Euterpean Ladies' Quartet, the words of which, whatever may have been the music, are unspeakably insane and babyish: "Somewhere the sun is shining, Somewhere the song birds doth dwell; Hush, then, thy sad weeping, Good lives, and all are well. Somewhere, somewhere, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere, Land of the true, where I am new, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

"Somewhere the load is lifted, Somewhere the open gates are ritted, Somewhere the angels wait, Somewhere the music is sweet, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere, Land of the true, where I am new, Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

They are a disgrace to the Sunday school hymnal from which they were presumably taken. Such stuff can be reeled off by the yard.—N. Y. Independent.

An Immortal Fable.

An elderly giraffe, born in foreign parts, was in the habit of entertaining with his conversation a large coterie of friends. By agreeable persiflage and well-chosen anecdote he did much to relieve the tedium of old hours in their menagerie life. The lion, silent but singularly accurate, would listen for hours to tales of what would have been his native land if only he had been born there.

Corpuscles are disease fighters. When disease gains a stronghold it denotes an absence of corpuscles. The chief object of Yager's Sarsaparilla With Gelyery is to increase the number of healthy corpuscles. It removes all impurities from the blood and destroys the disease germs. Pure blood is supplied to the nerve centers and the whole body invigorated and given new strength to fight the battle of life. CULLINGS FROM FICTION.

The man who knows a woman knows the world.—A Summer Hymnal. The people who help us most are those who make light of our achievements and have faith in our possibilities.—"Sir Christopher."

For things never come quite right in the world. The threads seem to slip out of our hands as we are going to tie the knot.—"Sister Teresa."

As a rule, the men whom men draw and the women whom women depict are nearer the truth, for it is a blessed law of nature that men and women shall view one another through the eyes of the imagination.—"A Point of Honor."

The President. An anonymous writer in the American Printer of New York says: "The ideal proofreader for a small printing outfit is an accomplished printer, a sensible person, a person understanding the scope and limitations of the English language, one completely holding the true office of punctuation, one with a keen and true appreciation of literature, a storehouse of exact knowledge, a perfect grammarian, a perfect spellier and with a fund of humor sufficient to enable him to do his whole duty along these various lines without making for an early grave. If he does not really know everything, he ought assiduously to be able to scout out an error and to know how to get at the truth. If he reads the proofs for a weekly newspaper also, he ought to know all about local affairs and all about the town or city in order to prevent the reported marriage of the girl who merely acted as bridesmaid and untangle the mixed topography of the reporters' articles."

Henry Ward Beecher's Wit. On one occasion Mr. Beecher was in the midst of an impassioned speech some one attempted to interrupt him by suddenly crowing like a cock. The orator, however, was equal to the occasion. He stepped, listened till the crowing ceased, and then, with a look of surprise, pulled out his watch. "Morning already!" he said. "My watch is only 10. But that does not mean I am late about it. The instincts of the lower animals are infallible."

There was a pair of laughter. The "lower animal" in the gallery collapsed, and Mr. Beecher was able to resume as if nothing had occurred.

Don't Drink During Meals. Be careful to limit the amount of water and fluids which you take during meals, since large quantities of these, especially tea water, hinder digestion. Not more than one glass of water should be taken during each meal. In order to quench the thirst which is so apt to clamor for water at meals an eminent authority suggests taking a glass of hot water fifteen or thirty minutes before meals. This acts especially well in the morning as it cleanses the stomach.—Ladies' Home Journal.
