We are informed that some of our ladies have combined to catch the chicken thieves that have been operating around this place. They say that they intend to do so.

On last Sunday, Mr. J. W. Shriner of Hanover, Pa., spent the day visiting friends in this place.

Miss Cora Shriner is visiting friends in Hanover.

Mr. Geo. Valentine was about the first farmer in this section to get his harvest put away. He finished hauling in all but one load of rye before the rain on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Douglas Newcomer, who has been visiting at Newark, Miss Anna Reck, who has been visiting at Oakland, have returned home. These ladies are fashionable milliners.

Bark Hill.—Harvesting is at its height. The grain is fine and plump, but rather short in the straw. On low grounds it stands very thin. Corn shows up well. There will be some heavy showers on Wok week since the 10th inst., which will do much good. Will our readers give us a remedy for the enemy at the root and stalk of the horse radish?

Mr. E. Grant Shoemaker visited his mother, Mrs. Adeline Appler in Baltimore, last Saturday. Mrs. A. is contemplating going to Europe. An operation was performed for the removal of a fleshy tumor of the breast caused by falling down stairs.

Mr. Delphy, wife and daughter, of Middleburg, were Sunday guests of his brother, George Delphy and family.

Mr. Levi Rowe and daughter, Ella, were visitors at Rocky Springs, Frederick county, from Saturday until Sunday.

Mr. John Rowe, Sr., has removed from his old home to his daughters', Mr. Solomon Saylor, who resides with his son-in-law, Mr. Daniel Leekins, has been very ill the past week, but is slightly improved under the treatment of Dr. L. Kemp.

Mr. James Clemson and wife, of Clemsonville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Myers, at Park Dale.

Mrs. Ida Strasburg, Mrs. May Ohler and children, of Union Bridge, were Monday guests of their sister, Mrs. Joshua Catzendafer.

Mrs. Layina Senseney is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Roop.

Mrs. H. Dottorer and daughter, Clara, and Mr. M. D. Smith, visited Mr. Preston Duvall, of Dennings, P. O.

Mrs. M. Mouri Routsom, who has been spending some time with her brother, Mr. Ezra Smith, of Chambersburg, returned home this week.

Mr. Norman Eckard, who has been principal of the Brooklyn High School, is home on a vacation.

Children's-day service will be held in the M. P. church, of this place, on Sunday, June 29th., both morning and evening. All are welcome.

Sunday, June 29th., Rev. J. D. Clark will preach on the following subjects: 10.15 a. m., "The Christian's Woodboro.—The Woodboro Band gave a grand concert last Saturday evening, on the street, which was enjoyed by much of the town.

Mr. Theodore Lowe, of Hanover, Pa., paid a brief visit to his family here last week.

Mr. Clarence Troxell and family, of Montgomery Co., moved to this place last week.

A luncheon meeting will be held in the Lutheran church next Sunday evening, June 29th., by the Children's Band. A very interesting program is being prepared.

The new grocery store will be opened at this place, in the near future.

SATURDAY, JUNE 28th., 1902.

THE OROGNATION of King Edward has not excited much interest in this country, nor has the "American contingent" shown up to any great extent in London to "blow in" American coin in honor of the event; and, for both facts, our countrymen of Anglo-manic tendencies are to be congratulated.

TRUTHFULNESS in dealing with the public outweighs all other considerations. Why should I be any the less careful about the statements I make in talking to the public through the press than when speaking face to face? I speak to each individual who reads my advertisement; my relation to him is a personal one. I must win his confidence. I can only do it by telling him the truth. Not only must I take good care that I do not mistake, but I must so word my advertisement that he cannot be self-deceived by it.—Dean Alford, before the N. Y. Sphinx Club.

THE HON. Wm. J. Bryan absented himself from the banquet given by the Tilden Club, of New York, and is now out in a published statement in which he says, "the democratic harmony meeting was simply an ovation to the chief guest, former democrat, Grover Cleveland." Before this choice bit of withering sarcasm the great democratic party will likely fall into little pieces. He it forgotten that there never was a real democrat in the country aside from Mr. Bryan?
According to Mr. Bryan, there is no need for "harmony" meetings—the only right thing to do is to again nominate him for the presidency.

Leader and Boss.

There is as much difference between leader and boss, as between politics and partisanship; more, in fact. The first is a necessity, the second, a menace to the perpetuity of free government. Just where leadership ends, and bossism begins, may be uncertain ground, and this may be as truly said of politics and partisanship. Let us see whether we can define, briefly and simply, these two prominent public characters—about which so much is time.

The true leader is the true politician because he is the champion of the science of popular self-government. He attends the primaries, of course. He knows his people and fully understands their capacity and needs. He encourages, from the primary delegate to the Presidential elector, the selection of representative men. He studies the popular sentiment and aims to centralize the forces of that sentiment into a great power.
He is the commander who receives his instructions from the ranks, and uses his own superior talents in such a way as to best illustrate the motto, "United, we stand; divided, we fall."
The leader may attempt, as a duty, even to create a public sentiment, when by so going he secures the greatest good to the greatest number.
He may, it is true, profit by his leadership, on the principle that "The laborer is worthy of his hire"—he helps the people to win, in the way in which they desire to win—he leads, because of their choice and his own superior qualifications.

The boss is the apostle of self-championship. He is neither for party nor people, as a prime object.
He uses them only as they can be made pay tribute to himself. He, too, attends the primaries, because from this source he easily secures the power which ultimately gives him possession of the greater ends. First, the boss; next, "the ring." He needs active helpers—those whom he can use because of a mutual interest; he wants the prize at the pinnacle; others are as eager for those lower down.

He also knows the people; how they can be best commanded, or directed—driven, if necessary. The boss and his ring are prolific of promises. Their motto is "You carry me, I'll carry you." The people receive consideration, not for their desires—for their good—but, for their votes and the good of the ring. Generally, the operations of this combine is successful, because the people have other business which they consider more important than politics, while the other business of importance to the boss and his henchmen is politics.

In the first picture the people are led; in the second, they are driven—sometimes by silken ropes, yet which but cover the steel within. The first is representative of the idea that all power is of "Divine origin"—that all law and power represents the majesty of the people; the second, the better known latter-day precepts, that,
"The end justifies the means," and "To the victor belongs the spoils." The one has his ear to the ground that he may be the leader of a great clamor for justice to the masses; the other that he may use the suffrage of the people to the aggrandizement of himself and his kind.

The Old Home.

Among the many delightful sentiments cherished by the American people is that of the periodical visit to "the old home"—the place of birth and childhood. Often, after many years absence among strange and strange scenes, and possibly after the old place has many times changed owners, the busy man drops his cares, his plans for money-getting and makes a pilgrimage to the "scenes of childhood," there to day-dream and sing from the innermost depths of his soul—

"Backward, turn backward, O, time in thy flight."
The old house, which, once upon a time, was "home," seems not so grand an edifice now; the old trees in the orchard, somehow, have deteriorated in the quality of the fruit they bear, and the hills and meadows, the swimming hole and fishing banks, look familiar, but, somehow, so much smaller and less romantic than they used to be. We grow enthusiastic over the remembrance of some of our youthful escapades, and feel a tingling in our veins of the spirit of the "bad boy," and yet we cannot dismiss a feeling of disenchantment.

After all, it is the old objects—the hills, streams and nooks—which impel us to leave the old home, even after many years? We are apt to be mistaken on this point. We wonder why our boyhood pleasures seem as a discount now. We want to be rapturous over the old place, but there's something missing and a feeling of sadness creeps over us. Ah, no! It is not the old buildings, now, nor was it the newer buildings in the long ago, that really held our love and comprised the happy world of our youth.

What then, was it? The human associations connected with the home place. The memory of father, mother, brothers and sisters—the sweet heart, perhaps—and all these have gone, some, possibly, to "the other shore." It was the happy home associations then, and the recollection of those associations now—the "rest of us," and the present visitor dreamer.

There is no home without pleasant human associations. No patriotism, for mere area and topography. Not for mere country, in its inanimate sense, but, for its people. We are patriotic—we love our country—for the sake of its magnificent history, for the glorious deeds of its people. A veritable garden of Eden peopled with anarchists and ignorance would be neither the "old home," nor the country we love. Hence, we sing:
"My Country, 'tis of thee Sweet land of Liberty Land where my fathers died Land of the pilgrim's pride."

Two Kinds of Bad Men.

The parcelling out of the Federal offices in Maryland, under the supervision of Senator McComas and the Republican delegation in the House of Representatives, has constituted the most naive exhibition of what is usually kept "inside politics" that we remember to have been made in this or any other State. That the Republican party is being damaged every day by the developments is too evident for comment. The scramble over offices is always an injury to the party that has the dealing out of them, but in this case the injury is peculiar, and of a twofold kind. In the first place the injury within the party is of a specially intense sort, because the quarrel is so open and so bitter. In the second place, persons not usual, and arouses in their bosoms more than the usual amount of resentment. And among the independent voters of the State with democratic leanings the long-drawn-out spectacle of the needling personal squabble over the offices is calculated to do a vast amount of damage to the Republicans—and the Republicans cannot get on without a large measure of support from this quarter.
How much stronger the party would be to-day if President Roosevelt had been advised by the party leaders to make no change in any office that was filled by a competent man we leave it to the junior Senator and the Republican Representatives from Maryland to consider.

The case of Mr. Sydney Mudd is always one of the queer elements in the Maryland Republican situation. This gentleman is so unquestionably a black sheep in politics that he has formed a large part of the stock-in-trade of the Democratic campaign speakers in every election contest for years in this State. He has been played up as a trump card to match the Gorman card on the other side.
But there is really no resemblance between the two cases. Mr. Mudd is a gentleman who is perfectly content to enact the part of "bad man." He makes no pretensions to political morality. He would probably like to be a member of the United States Senate, but there has not been at any time the remotest chance of his getting there, nor is there ever likely to be. He is just prominent enough to serve as a bugaboo candidate during campaign time, and it has been one of the periodical tasks of the News, recurring as regularly as election, to ridicule the notion that the candidacy was anything but a bugaboo. After election his Senatorial ambition is never again heard from, until the Democrats bring it out of the rubbish box when the next campaign comes round. It is not men of the Mudd type that are dangerous in this State. It is the smooth politicians like Gorman and John Walter Smith, and their henchmen like Miles and Wilkinson, who are the source of real danger in this city and State.

As for the scramble over the Federal offices, we are frank to say that, offensive as the spectacle is, we like much better a fight carried on in the open than a condition in which the same kind of work is done, and worse, but in which everything is hushed up and stifled because there is nobody in the party who has the spirit to call his soul his own. And that is what was always the case throughout the period of Gorman's sovereignty in the Democratic party of Maryland.—Balt. News.

How to Avoid Trouble.

Now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over, and if procured now you save you a trip to town in the night or in your busiest season. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful medicine in use for colic, cholera, and all the ills of children and adults. No family can afford to be without it. For sale by The Cigarette Habit Among Students.

The deleterious effect of cigarette smoking upon the mind of students has received a fresh emphasis from Dr. Herbert F. Fisk, the head of the preparatory department of the Northwestern University at Chicago. The Doctor has been investigating the effect of the habit upon the boys under his charge, and the result is so startling that he has requested boys who cannot or will not break off from the habit to withdraw from the school.
There are about three hundred boys in the preparatory department, and it is reported that two out of every nine confessed that they smoke cigarettes, and not one addicted to the habit is in good standing in his class.

The Doctor has prepared statistics covering a period of several years, showing that of the boys who smoke only two per cent were among the twenty-five per cent of students who stand highest in class scholarship. On the other hand, thirty-seven per cent of the smokers are among the twenty-five per cent lowest in class scholarship. It is stated that other educators whose attention has been drawn to the subject have gathered statistics which fully corroborate those of Dr.
Fisk.

When volunteers were called for in the war with Spain, reports say an unusually large per cent of young men offering to enter the service were rejected on account of injurious effects to their systems resulting from cigarette smoking. These facts justify legislatures of states that have interdicted the sale of cigarettes, among which is Tennessee; but it is difficult to prevent the sale of cigarettes or material out of which the smoker can manufacture them.

There are many ways in which the law is evaded. In some of the states, New York, for instance, it is made a criminal offense for a person to attempt to commit suicide. If boys and young men will persist in the cigarette habit, which renders so many of them mental wrecks if it does not put them in their graves, ought they not to be dealt with as New York deals with a fellow attempting suicide?—

Republican Dailying.

The news from Washington confirms the views of those who believe that no legislation in behalf of reciprocity with Cuba is possible at this session of Congress. The expedient of negotiating a treaty embodying the reciprocity feature apparently promises no better or more prompt results than the original plan. The majority party in the Senate seems to be drifting on the sea of dissension, and neither protest from the press nor interpretation of public sentiment through the medium of state convention platforms has sufficed to arouse the leaders from their lethargy.

There have been some recent developments which, while they do not directly unfold new arguments in behalf of the administration's attitude toward Cuba, nevertheless, strengthen the national capital new reasons for avoiding further delay in this matter.
Spain has been one of the first countries of Europe to recognize the new republic wrested from her dominions, and it is not improbable that this is more than mere formality, and it is altogether probable that Spain will endeavor to encourage trade relations with Cuba.

The prospect that American superinecy may further such purpose, may drive the trade of Cuba away from the United States into other channels, naturally aggravates the critics of the drifters at Washington. Spain has done a very proper and commendable act in recognizing the new republic, and if she follows this with policies that will give her the trade of Cuba, the people of the United States will not be disposed to blame her; but they will not hold blameless those in this country who aid Spanish interests by failing to advance American interests.—Balt. Herald.
