The coupon feature of the present law should be abolished. It adds to the cost of the official ballot, serves no useful purpose, and the act of de-taching it from a ballot is claimed to furnish opportunity for fraudulent defacing of the ballot.

To Extinguish Chimney Fires.

Chief Engineer Horton, of the Baltimore Fire Department, reported this week that the burning of zinc, soda or sulphur in a stove or furnace would extinguish a chimney fire and also clean the chimney. He has been making a series of tests for some time in this direction and has found this simple solution of the chimney-fire evil to be very effective and success-

According to the Chief, it is the fumes that extinguish the flames and cause the soot to fall. He said it was not a new discovery, especially with sulphur, but that it was a means by which any householder could prevent an embryo fire.

This, perhaps, is thought to be the best, as good roads would be necessary to haul children to school as proposed by some. The determined oposition offered by Jos. B. Ager, master of the Maryland State Grange to one of the provisions of the Shoemak er road bill had its origin in the fact (it is said) that the geological survey had ordered some work done near here which cost a large sum of money without benefitting the road.

While speaking of roads it may not be out of place to give our experience with our road here from the Experiment Station to Hyattsville, tance of about two miles. We find in looking over our books that in widening, grading and graveling the road have spent since August 1899 about $1250, not having charged any thing for our horses the first year. It was asserted by some that the road could never be made to stand bad weather, and it certainly was the most unpromising piece of road that we ever saw. After grading the road so as to properly drain it, gravel being plenty, we graveled it heavily at the worst places and each year followed it up wherever the road showed signs of giving away. The road is now in such a condition that it can be trayeled comfortably under all circum stances. John the Baptist was the forerunner of Christ. He came to prepare the way of the Lord, and he did it by preaching the doctrine of repentance from sin. But true repentance not only includes sorrow for sin, but the giving up of sin. In repentance a sinner, "out of a true sense of his sin and full appreciation of the mercy of God in Christ, doth with grief and hatred for his sin turn from it uso God, with a full purpose of and endeavor after a new obedience." The Jews in John's day claimed that they had sought shelter from the wrath of God, and John called upon them to prove it by bringing forth "works worthy of repentance." Repentance means not only a changed inward life, but also a changed outward life. We prove our repentance of sin by giving up sin. "The wicked forsakes his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts" when they repent and turn from sin unto

Under the preaching of John many were convicted of sin and cried out unto him, "What shall we do?" "The people asked him, saying, "What shall we do, then?" He told them to be unselfish. "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none and he that hath meat, let him do the same." John prescribes no senseless penance, but the kindly exercise of unselfish service toward others in life. The publicans said, "What shall we do?" and John replied, "Exact no more than that which is appointed you." The publicans were the tax collectors under the Roman government. Their saying. "What shall we do?" and John replied, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages." In the discharge of their duties they exercised undue brutality, frequently made false accusations against men and caused trouble concerning their wages. Hence John calls upon them to give up their besetting sins. And these illustrations answer the inquiry of the topic. The test of a man's repentance is his willingness to give up "the sin that so easily besets him." The people, the publicans, the soldiers, were not guilty of the same offenses. Their sins differed according to their temperaments and professions. But each was called upon to give up the sin that was peculiar to him. This is the only test of repentance. "By their fruits ye shall But in the experience of David it is also suggested that service in the interest of others is "a work worthy of repentance." "Restore unto me," says the psalmist, "the joy of Thy salvation and uphold me with Thy ree spirit. Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto Thee." If truly repentant we become interested in the repentance of others. The saved man wants to help save some one else. This is God's plan. He saves us that we may help save others. If repentant let us prove it by our personal abandonment of sin and interest in the spiritual welfare of

What Is Happiness? Happiness is the greatest paradox in nature. It can grow in any soil, hy under any conditions. It defies envi ronment. It comes from within. Happ ness consists not of having, but of be ing; not of possessing, but of enjoying It is the warm glow of a heart at peace within itself. A martyr at the stake may have happiness that a king on hi throne might envy. Man is the creato of his own happiness; it is the arom of a life lived in harmony with hig ideals. For what a man has he may b dependent on others; what he is res with him alone. What he obtains life is but acquisition; what he attain is growth. Eggs in Winter.

A distinguished state lecturer on poultry once said: "It is just as easy to produce eggs in winter as it is in able." As to the relative degree of profit in the two seasons there is no question, but there may be doubt as to the other point. Still, it is certain that proper attention would result in that proper attention would result in hat proper attention would result in large increase in the supply of eggs The experience of poultrymen, generally has proven that the following ules will insure a good supply of eggs in winter and, as to that matter, in

In the first place one should know what breed is the best egg producer. The Leghorns are supposed to lay the largest number of eggs of any, but the Minorca lays the largest in size of any small breed. Others think the Silver Wyandotte is the best all pur pose layer. Either of the above breeds would be a safe selection. Pulbreeds would be a safe selection. Pullets hatched in the early spring are best for the next winter egg producing purpose. I deem it unnecessary to press the importance of having comfortable shelter for the birds and of housing them in it regularly at nights, and during bad weather in day time. Common sense will teach day time. Common sense will teach

The question of food is next to be considered, and it is of the very highest importance. Without proper feeding, winter eggs need not be looked for. It always pays to feed green cut bone if you want eggs. Give it three or four times a week, morning, remembering to place the bone in the machine so that it will be cut across and not lengthwise. About half an hour afterwards give the birds a mixture of oats, wheat, barely, buckwheat and peas; some or all of these mixed, and strewn into straw to force them to scratch for it-for exercise. Every few days a mixture of bran and middlings with clover leaves should also be given. For green stuff turnips, carrots, sugar beets and cabbage cut up are highly important; and let them have the scraps from the table. With this regime and remembring to supply the fowls with plenty of pure warmed water and grit uch as sand, beaten charcoal, finely broken earthen ware and such like and you may expect plenty of eggs.—

Plain Talk about our Boys and

I wonder if every mother who reads his department is particular enough about keeping her girls as girls, and not letting them fill their heads with onsense about love and marriage. When I see, as I do too often on our best streets, in the residental sections, young girls of twelve and fourteen nanging about the walks and street corners after dark, even up to nine or ten at night, I sigh for the old laws about the curfew, and wish the legis-lators would atone for the lack of sense in mothers by enacting them over again.

Young girls who are allowed to goon the streets alone or with their com panions after dark, have every excuse for "going wrong" and can scar-"It's no wonder the Gospel seems I am almost tempted to say I do not not safe. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that trouble often begins that way. I could talk very eloquently on this subject, if I could have your private ear, but I hope I have said enough to set you thinking if you have not already thought. Besides I want to quote something I found in a small Western paper, which was uncredited. I do not know who wrote it, but it is vigorous truth: "A raw boy without a dollar, pres

And by the way, don't force your servant to take up with that way of entertaining company. Give her a warm, bright, comfortable place to sit evenings and insist that she entertain her friends there. Too many girls have "gone wrong" just that way, and then said, "O, if I could only have had a place where I could have taken him, it would have been alright." MAKES ROADS DUST PROOF

New Invention For Giving a Clean Surface to Highways. The municipal councils of Frankfor and Dresden, Germany, after making exhaustive tests, have adopted the new means of keeping down the dust of highways, called "westrumite." Westrumite is the invention of German chemist, by name Van Westrum, who, being practically expelled from his own house, which was on the highway in a suburb of Berlin, by reason of the dust raised by passing motors, set himself to find a remedy and found it in a preparation of petroleum and ammonia, which is soluble in water, says the New York American. It is claimed for westrumite that 5 per cent of the liquid added to 95 per cent of water is sufficient to lay the dust on any ordinary road and that, having once been sprinkled, the road will not need a fresh application for a period varying from two to four weeks, according to the amount of traffic on it. It is claimed that the material is a disinfectant; that it prevents both dust and mud and consequently to a great extent wear and tear. It is noninflam mable and nonpoisonous, and it does not stain the clothes should it fall upon

The first cost of treatment of a thirty foot road is less than $50 per mile, and subsequent treatment will cost one-half that amount. The effect of continual application is cumulative, and the road improves considerably under the treat-

It is a point in favor of westrumite that there is no need to close the road during its application. All that is required for it is from two to four hours

One frock from a Parisian maker is appraised at $700. As it is a fairly plain tailor gown, the price seems extortionate. The frock is of soft cloth of aubergine color, and the velvet trimming is of the same tint. The richest embroidery is used to finish the coat, and this embroidery combines a variety of colors. The collar is edged with ruching, and the cuffs are finished with a fall of fine lace. In addition to the velvet bands and embroidery there are about twenty solid gold buttons.

Instep Evening Frock. A great many evening dresses are cut in instep length, and very pretty they are and very convenient. Coming just to the instep, they show the high heels that are worn with the dinner gown and the very graceful arch of the foot. Indeed it is due to her vanity and the pretty shoes of the season that woman wears the instep skirt.

The instep skirt is a feature of the restaurant gown, as well as of the street dress, and is also worn for the evening and for the nicest of occasions. No more is it preserved for the rainy day skirts and the trotting costumes.

A novel garment affected just now by the belles of Vienna and Paris is a small, tight fitting coat made of suede kid. It is worn with very smart traveling gowns, and its appearance is thought to indicate the revival of fitted coats in general. One pretty facing of the kind noted was of pale yellow suede, just the part of the ration with other feeds in thing to set off brunette beauty.

Dressing the Hair. The latest fashion of dressing the hair is to have a thick, waved piece of hair brought well forward on the forehead and the sides somewhat brushed upward, and the Parisiennes lightly pin this lock of waved hair to the bandeau of their hat, thus avoiding any ugly break. The French women always prod and poke their hair about after their hat is put on, so that all the indentations of the hat should be grace-

Advice For the Farmer Who Wants to Produce Milk and Butter. The farmer who keeps cows to produce milk or butter needs a dairy cow. If beef is the object in view he wants an entirely different cow. It is impossible for him to produce both successfully and with profit from the same

Often I have this question asked me by our patrons: "Where can I get cows giving a large quantity of rich milk?" There are two ways of getting such animals-one by purchasing, the other by growing them yourself. A man who starts out to buy high class dairy cattle will soon learn that the man who understands his business is not selling his best cows until their days of usefulness are past.

When a man offers to sell a cow that promises to be a good milker for any reasonable price the buyer is apt to discover after he purchases her that she deceives her looks and that she has some secret fault which will show itself later on.

Dairymen who are excellent judges of cows will sometimes get hold of first class animals; but, as a rule, they will buy them from men who are not acquainted with their business and with whom the possession of a cow of this kind is an accident. Even then only a few of these cows will come up to his requirements or give anything like the satisfaction of those that he might raise himself, and I think that when he counts the time and money that he spends in experimenting in this way he will come to the conclusion that the best way for the dairy farmer to improve the quality of the herd is by raising his own stock. It does not take so many years to grow up a herd in this way as one might suppose.

In raising up a herd himself there are several advantages to be derived, the principal one of which is that he is able to control the breeding. Milking qualities are hereditary, and the heifer whose sire's dam and grandam are good milkers will be a good milker

In raising calves for the dairy ways feed for milk instead of beef, and the heifer intended for the dairy should not have the same treatment in feeding as the heifer intended for calf production only. The dairy cow is better as a lean animal than as a fat one, and she should be kept during her youth in such a way that she will not lay the product of her food on her ribs, but put it in the pail.—Dairy and Cream-

A Text For Short Sermons. It would surprise some people to learn how few farmers strain the milk they send to the creamery, says Creamery Journal. The opinion is quite general that the creamery separator is a combination of separator, aerator, bad odor extractor and general cleanser, which is true to a certain extent. But no separator can remove impurities which have been dissolved in milk. Here is a point which it will pay a good many butter makers to preach to their patrons upon.

The first essential for the production of good milk is healthy cows, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. Th work of the lungs in purifying the blood for the manufacture of milk is too near the danger line to use the milk from a tuberculous animal. It is also important that the milker should be in perfect health. Germs of disease are thrown off in breathing and coughing, and epidemics have been known to start in this way. The feed should be sweet and free from must and any abrupt change avoided.

A great deal of criticism is made as to silage feed, but where it is made a proportion the flavor of the milk will be benefited. See to it that the watering place is clean and free from slime and fertilizer.

It seems to be a difficult thing in dairy management to secure cleanly conditions in a cow stable. About ninetynine out of a hundred are far from sweet and clean; the offensive odors contaminate the breath, blood and tissue of the animal, and consequently a first class article of milk cannot be produced. The barns should be dusted often and whitewashed at least once a year not only to give them a good appearance and make the stable lighter, but to purify them and kill any germs of disease that may have collected on the walls and ceilings.

Quiet and Milk Secretion. As the milk glands are under direct control of the nervous system, any conditions which affect the nervous system will react upon the milk producing glands. Any undue disturbance of the normal distribution of the nervous force will divert some of the blood supply from the milk glands to some other part of the body and thus diminish the milk flow. The well known phenomenon of "not giving down" the milk is the gland brought about by some sort of excitement. The udder is not a container in which the milk is ready stored which, as has already been pointed out, the greater part of the milk is elaborated while milking or suckling is in progress by virtue of the agitation produced. Unless the cow is in perfect repose this secretion will not take place normally. The lesson to be derived treated with the greatest gentleness single shaded plume curls upward on ment, especially during the time of
