Deputy Marshal Manning, of Baltimore, has been instructed by the board of police commissioners to issue special orders to all members of the police department to rigidly enforce the law against the sale and exploding of fireworks. The approach of the Glorious Fourth is the cause for the special order, and especial attention is called to the sale and firing of the deadly toy pistol. One ten-year old boy has already been shot with the wadding from a toy pistol and it is the intention of the police that the celebration of the approaching Fourth be attended with as few casualties as possible.

Christian Endeavor Topic Cards.

The RECORD office is now prepared to furnish topic cards, in lots to suit the needs of each society for the six months beginning July 3rd. The cards are neat six-page folders, containing not only the topics and the pledge, but the list of leaders and Committees of each society, with name of church and pastor. Sample and prices furnished on application.

FOREIGN RIFF-RAFF COMING.

The Necessity for more Strict Immigration Laws Clearly Apparent.

To the average person, "The evil of Foreign Immigration," is a familiar, but commonly misunderstood expression; at least, it is not regarded as an 'evil," except in the imagination of the few, with the result that no great public expression against immigration has been made sufficiently strong to compel Congress to take radical and decisive action. Patriotic American societies have worked assiduousy to create this sentiment, and it is to be hoped that in the light of present events their efforts will at last bear fruit. The following news re-port from the N. Y. Tribune shows the necessity for prohibitive legisla-

The Colorado Method.

If the Colorado plan of settling strikes was generally adopted, there would be short work of lawlessness and interference with business, growing out of the obstructive and destructive tactics of labor unions. After having stood the miners' strike for several months, and all sorts of unlawful methods adopted by union labor to gain their ends by preventing non-unionists from working-ineluding dynamiting and loss of lifethe military of the state was ordered to bring about law and order. Apparently, this is being most effectively done. The leading method has been to arrest, and forcibly deport from the state, hundreds of union miners, with the warning that they should not return. This procedure has been called into question as being in conflict with a provision of the Constitution of the United States against depriving any citizen of life. liberty or property, without due process of law General Bell tersely replies that he

The amount necessary to make the trip from the east, to the average person, represents an important sum, and in many cases one difficult to replace. Especially to young men, who are presumably in pursuit of sufficient means to establish themselves in some business at as early a date as possible, the expenditure of the required sum for the purpose, should be carefully weighed. If one is to succeed, ultimately, sacrifices must be made in early life; and while it is never desirable, nor praiseworthy, to practice penuriousness, nor to skimp onesself of pleasures and of opportunities of "seeing the world," still, the tendency is rather toward one extreme or the other—to spend too freely, or to pinch too closely. There is a proper middle course to choose. Some will make the visit in order to "keep up" with some body else; possibly those who cannot afford the indulgence will follow those who can afford it; or possibly one poor judge of the proper thing to do will influence others in the same station to do likewise. There should be no mistake in this. Nobody should be influenced to go, against his or her better judgment, simply because some friend or neighbor goes. Another thought is worthy of consideration-and this, too, is directed to the young. Be careful how you importune your father or mother for money. Very many parents too easily make extreme sacrifices in order to please their children; indeed, it is not uncommon for them to go into debt, to leave honest bills unpaid or some needed improvement remain unmade, in order to furnish the funds for the pleasure of their children. The selfishness of the child, on the one hand, is encouraged by the weakness of the parent, on the other. In a word, there should be no regrets attending the trip, whether it of the candidates for President and vided with a suitable lock to lock the be made by old or young, on the score of expense. # Strikes and Crime.

The horrors of the Colorado miners strike, including the murder by dynamite of twelve non-union miners at one time, should call the attention of the whole country to the diabolical character of results from strikes, and necessarily through the influence of organized labor. It is not true to say that such crimes are not to be attributed to the labor unions; if not directly responsible, they are nevertheless accessories, which practically amounts to the same thing.

Even the official organ of the Colorado miners has been compelled to make this admission: "The sentiment is growing against the Western Federation of Miners on Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 19.

Topic.—What Paul teaches about rising above discouragement.—II Cor. iv, 7-18. Few lives, perhaps no life, have ever been lived into which discouragements did not come. Sometimes the discouragements are temporal, and sometimes they are spiritual. The mere obtaining of a livelihood is to thousands be set with discouragements. If every person now living and ever to live were assured of even the necessities of life-home, food and raiment-for all the days of his life, to how many discouragement would give place to hope and joy! The struggle for existence is such a bitter one that, directly and indirectly, it brings discouragements to many. And when we strive to do more than exist, to accomplish a great work in life, to realize a fond and cherished dream, how often discouragements beat thick and fast upon us! The same conditions exist in the spiritual realm of life. No child of God ever tried to serve Him without meeting with discouragements. "The natural heart is enmity against God," and it is hard to go against nature. The environments of life are not always conducive to spiritual growth. "Is this poor world a friend of grace to help us on to God?" No one has ever found it so. Nor shall we. Christianity is a struggle. It is following Christ, who traveled a steep and rugged road; it is taking up the cross even as He took it up and carried it to Cal-

But in spite of the varied and manifold discouragements of life we need not despair, for we can rise above them. Some think not and fall beneath above them. Others try to do so in with signal success, but Paul teaches us that there is a way by which we may rise above the discouragements of life. And the apostle spoke from an abundant experience. He had demonstrated his theories in his own life. He was no pessimist preaching optimism; he was no novice, declaring in ignorance that which he knew nothing about. He knew from experience, and therefore he spoke. For he says that he was "troubled on every side, yet not distressed; perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed." What an array of discouragements-troubles, perplexities, persecutions and depresthem all. His troubles were not allowed to distress him; he did not despair because of his perplexities; he was persecuted, but God did not forsake him, nor did he succumb to depression, whether it was mental, or spiritual. He arose triumphantly above all adversities, and so may and should

But Paul also teaches us how we may arise above our discouragements. (1) By the power of God. Prayerful trust in God is absolutely essential to success in this work. It can be done bow of ribbon as its only trimming. only by "leaning on the everlasting arms." (2) By keeping in mind that if to be successful they should be worn we suffer with Christ we shall also only by the youthful and with dainty reign with Him. "We are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh." (3) By remembering the relations between the temporal and eternal. Our afflictions of us only see the temporal. Paul kept | ferable pain from indigestion, stomach his eyes upon the eternal and was sup- and bowel trouble. Death seemed inported by looking "not at the things | evitable when doctors and all which are seen, but at the things which | dies failed. The large and the small hat are in equal fayor this season. For semi-dress occasions the small or mediumsized turban or sailor is perhaps in better taste, but the vogue of the wide, drooping shoulders in costumes and wraps will undoubtedly make the picture hat more popular than ever.

The blending of delicate pink and blue is a feature of many hats, and in the association not only of small flowsions-and yet the apostle arose above ers but of ribbons as well is this discernible. Green also is a favored color, and for the hat to complete green toilette or to be worn with a lack or dark blue or a natural-colored pongee or Shantung gown, it is a most attractive shade. Green trimmings-plumes, aigrettes, breasts and ribbon velyet-provide this smart touch when the hat is black, blue, ecru or white. Brown and green is Being called upon to transplant a arge tract towards the end of May, 1903, this expert determined to work at night, and in order to be sure that no mistake was made he transplanted a Holland linden, which had been in his own nursery for five years, at 10 o'ciock at night. He carefully watered the tree, and the branches, which hore buds, were treely moistened. The linden did not appear to suffer from this transplanting and continued to grow normally, without showing any signs of weakness.

Encouraged by this success, he performed the work of transportation entirely in the night-time. The Greatest Enemy of Good Roads

Among the elements and forces of nature there are several enemies of good roads, but the greatest of them is water. It washes away the material of the road. It soaks into the road and softens it so that the wagon whells cut into the surface, making ruts and holes It permeates and softens the foundation so that the surface of the road sinks or breaks up. In the winter the water that is in the road freezes, expands and loosens and disintegrates the road material.

The most important thing in the building of roads is to lessen or prevent the ravages of water; yet no feature of the work is so neglected as this. Many local road supervisors seem to give no consideration to the question of drainage, and the result is a regular mud blockade during several weeks or months of the year. The following are a few simple rules the observance of which would go far

First-The road should be located and constructed as to avoid steep grades, down which the water rushes during heavy rains, tearing up and washing away the road material. Second—The foundation of the road should be thoroughly drained by open side ditches, which will carry off drains should be laid in the foundation itself. Third-The surface of the roads should be hard and smooth and have best that ever represented the Ann sufficient slope toward the sides to

Digging Up Money.

Hagerstown, Md., June 10.—A pot of money found by several workmen on the lot of Henry C. Foltz while digging for the foundation for a new use will be the subject of a lawsuit. Mr. Foltz, as owner of the lot, claims the money, while the workmen, who dug it up and in whose possession the money now rests, claim it is theirs legally. An 8-year-old grandson of Mr. Foltz grabbed $19 of the treasure while the workmen were counting it and turned it over to his grandfather. Mr. Foltz says the sum dug up was between $100 and $200. The workmen refuse to state the amount.

Mr. Foltz claims he made an ora agreement with Frederick Burger, the contractor, that he was to have all treasure dug up. Mr. Foltz expected some money would be found.

Samuel Powells, attorney, informed him that the finders had the legal right of the money as against the owner of the lot, Mr. Foltz. The lot on which the money was found was formerly owned by Jacob Binkley, a wealthy, eccentric, old bachelor, who probably hid the money during the Civil War for safekeeping. He lived with his two unmarried sisters. As the old man was dying he told in incoherent language that he had buried a lot of money in an iron chest and pointed in the direction of the place where the treasure was buried, but he expired before he could explain clearly the location. It is thought the iron chest still is buried somewhere on the lot. Some years ago Jacob Kendall bought the property. He dug up on one occasion $1,400 and at another time $800. On several other occasions small sums of money were found buried in tin ans under an old blacksmith shop.—

The Stingless Bee.

Apiculturists have been experimentng to determine whether a comparatively rare stingless bee that is a native to North and South America could be bred to replace the common honeybee. The former, according to the investigators, was found to use no wax in the construction of the nests, and the honey stored by them is greatly inferior to that of the common honeybee. The domestication of this species apparently does not look very promis-

Artificial Snails. As escargots, or snails, are not much

eaten in this country, the discovery that artificial snails are made will not worry American epicures. In Paris it is different. Public knowledge of this enterprise came about through the suit of a Paris workman against his employer for injuries received in manipulating a machine for fabricating snails It was explained that the employer bought empty snail shells from the dust men and ragpickers. Having cleaned out the shells, the defendant and his people filled them with "mou" -that is to say, lights, or cat's meat. This soft, spongy stuff before being crammed into the shells was cut into corkscrew shape by very improved machines. When the shell was filled some liquid fat or grease was poured into it and the trick was done. The fabricated snails were sold usually at 20 centimes

Time to Smoke In Australia. Builders and contractors in Australia have hit upon a successful plan to oblige their employees by allowing them to stop during working hours

At 10:30 in the morning the whistle blows or the bell rings, and the foreman calls out. "Smoke!" Instantly all work is stopped, and the men take out their pipes and smoke for about five minutes. At 3:30 in the afternoon they are allowed to smoke again. The time so lost is made up by the extra energy with which the men work after they have had a smoke.
