Figuring on the Result.

There are all sorts of figuring on the result of the election, while a good many do not figure at all, but are willing to back their favorite on the general result, without knowing or caring how it is to come about. Figuring, however, is not only interesting, but develops intelligence, and there is a systematic way of going about it which renders something like a reasonably safe conclusion not impossible.

For instance, let us begin with the table of states and electoral vote of each:

Alabama	11	Nebraska	3
Arkansas	9	North Carolina	12
California	10	New Hampshire	4
Colorado	5	New Jersey	12
Connecticut	7	New York	32
Delaware	3	North Dakota	3
Florida	5	Ohio	23
Georgia	13	Oregon	3
Idaho	3	Pennsylvania	34
Illinois	27	Rhode Island	4
Indiana	15	South Carolina	9
Iowa	13	Tennessee	12
Kansas	10	Texas	18
Kentucky	13	Utah	3
Louisiana	9	Vermont	3
Maine	6	Virginia	12
Maryland	10	Washington	5
Massachusetts	16	West Virginia	12
Michigan	14	Wisconsin	13
Minnesota	11	Wyoming	3
Mississippi	11
Missouri	18
Montana	3
		Total	476

Necessary to choose.

Now, let us begin by counting the solid south, with Kentucky and Missouri, safe for Parker, making in all 159 votes, or 80 short of the number necessary to elect. Then, set aside the following sure republican states—California, 10; Illinois, 27; Iowa, 13; Kansas, 10; Maine, 6; Massachusetts, 16; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 11; Nebraska, 3; New Hampshire, 4; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 23; Oregon, 3; Pennsylvania, 34; Rhode Island, 4; South Dakota, 3; Vermont, 3; Washington, 5; Wisconsin, 13; Wyoming, 3. Total, 217. The Republicans then have to get 22 votes to win.

We now have left the following states, more or less doubtful—Colorado, 5; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 3; Idaho, 3; Indiana, 15; Montana, 3; Nevada, 3; New Jersey, 12; New York, 32; Utah, 3; West Virginia, 12. Total, 100. Should Maryland be considered among the doubtfuls, then Parker would be 88 votes short of election.

Now, pick out the 22 votes Roosevelt needs, as that is easier than counting 80 for Parker. If Roosevelt can't get 22 out of the lot, Parker wins. On the face of it, Roosevelt seems to have decidedly the best show, unless something like a "tidal wave" sweeps the country and takes all the doubtfuls the same way. Parker must have New York, or he has no show at all, while Roosevelt can easily win without it, providing he carries Indiana and Connecticut, or New Jersey.

Numerous combinations can be figured out, and we again ask interested readers to give us their conclusion on the result, in time for publication in our issue of November 5th. As yet, we have received but two replies, which seem to prove one of two things; either our editorials are not very generally read, or there is but little interest manifested in indulging in pre-election guessing, to the extent of backing judgment with published figures.

The Silent Candidate.

Judge Parker, through his course in not making campaign speeches, has drawn on himself many charges, the most of which are no doubt entirely unjust. As the silent candidate, he has been the mark of those who say he is not the ability to defend his candidacy, and that he has no new and live issues which will bear the light of public criticism, and at the same time promote the chances of his election; it is also said that his course is discouraging enthusiasm in his party.

There is the other side to the question. No matter what course Judge Parker had pursued, he would have been criticized. Had he spoken profusely during the campaign, he would have been accused of undignified efforts in his own behalf; his remarks would have been twisted out of all semblance to their intended meaning, and there would have resulted a vast amount of unnecessary, as well as unjust, criticism; besides, he would have been tempting fate, in the judgment of those who believe in such things, that campaigning candidates have usually been defeated.

We are inclined to think, therefore, that Judge Parker has adopted the proper course, for the sake of propriety. A presidential candidate should not be especially looked for "whooping it up," any more than it is necessary for him to be a sphinx. He is just a man—a man who has been chosen, presumably because of his fitness—representing a great party, but more than that, he is a man, who, because of intelligence and dignity, is supposed to be fit to become President of the United States, and such being the case, there is something very inharmonious in the idea that he is expected to conduct "whooping it up" during the campaign.

Should a President be the president of and for his party, and should the office be one to be sought for its emoluments to the individual or party, then, speech-making and hippodroming might be appropriately indulged in, the same as one strives for a prize of any kind; but, as long as it is the Presidency of the whole people that is to be considered, in our judgment it rests with the whole people to put up the campaign and do the electing, and not the standard bearer.

Safety of Travel.

A coming question for the next legislature will be some action relative to the use of the public highways by horseless machines and vehicles of various kinds, especially in the rural districts. It has already come to pass that it is not safe for travel or business, carried on by the use of horses, to be indulged in by women or children on our public roads, and even strong men have not been found equal to the situation of caring for teams, so as to prevent accident and loss of life.

If it became so that women and young folk generally are to be practically prohibited from driving on our roads, through the probability of encountering danger in the shape of snoring and formidable modern means of locomotion, the country will have arrived at a point when a privileged class has been given power to wrest from the general public one of its dearest and most valuable privileges, that of free use of our public roads.

This question must be faced as we find it, and as it is likely to be. There can be no new justly established by the few to interfere with the older rights of the many; notwithstanding the arguments in favor of scientific motive power, and the injustice of limiting its use, the fact nevertheless remains that popular sentiment, if given a chance, will be overwhelmingly in favor of the common people and the common use of public highways of every description.

Rain after a Battle.

The question whether rain is caused by the concussion which occurs in a battle is again under discussion. The only answer based on facts which can be given is that sometimes it is and sometimes it is not, the phenomenon depending on the condition of the atmosphere when the battle is raging. The atmosphere is sometimes in a condition when a very slight thing will cause a precipitation, while at others the condition is such that the most tremendous efforts fail to get a response from the clouds. At Liaoyang there was a flood after the fighting, which compelled the soldiers of both armies to wade in mud for several days, and during the battle of Sahke River there were violent thunderstorms, with great downpours.

This does not establish a general principle. There have been great battles which were not followed by rain, though, so far as information is available, but as there have been very often followed by rain. This shows a tendency of nature to precipitate rain, but the atmosphere must be in sympathy, or there will be no rain. This is confirmed by the experiences of the vinegrowers in Austria-Hungary, Italy and France. While they have attracted rain and driven away hail by their devices often than they have failed, and have thereby saved many millions of dollars, their success has simply shown that when atmospheric conditions were favorable they were able to assist nature, and when they were not favorable they were helpless.

Meteorology is not yet a science in any scientific sense. There is scarcely a principle in it established beyond recall, and its votaries are more dogmatic than those in any other science. This is perfectly natural. It is so in the beginnings of all sciences, and at the outset of most enterprises. The less that is known, the more there is taken for granted. The relation of battles to rain is a curious and interesting phenomenon, but it is greatly hampered by the lack of accurate statistics. Several governments have made experiments for the purpose of producing rain, but none of them has been satisfactory. With the fact to go on that battles do not always produce rain, the main object of such experiments ought to be to test the condition of the atmosphere at the time they are made, so as to show when under what conditions it will be possible to bring rain. The experiments of the peasants in Austria-Hungary and the vinegrowers in Italy and France have been directed to the practical object of saving their crops, and their success has been satisfactory to them, as they continue their system from year to year.—Balt. American.

Safeguard Against Accident.

The best safeguard against accident is to use good judgment in directing every act. But accidents will often occur in spite of every effort to prevent them. The best safeguard against injury resulting from accidents is Elliott's Emulsified Oil Liniment, the most serviceable accident and Emergency Liniment ever made and is the most satisfactory Liniment for use in the family and on animals ever offered. Large bottles 25c. R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

The Political Situation.

Reports to the Herald from correspondents who have been investigating the progress of the Presidential canvass in the debatable States reveal an active lining up of the opposing forces. The last two weeks of the campaign will be days of very hard work, and in some of the States the result bids fair to be extremely doubtful until election night.
In New York the battle is going on with great vigor. The all-engrossing topic is the State election. It is admitted still that Mr. Higgins will run far behind the Republican national ticket. He has, however, made some headway, and this seems to have been reflected by the betting. Mr. Roosevelt is a strong candidate, and hope for the Republican State ticket rests entirely on the expectation of the Oedell organization that Roosevelt will have a plurality large enough to "pull him through."
For instance, it is estimated that in 19 counties in Western New York Roosevelt will have a plurality of 65,000, 2251 less than McKinley had in 1900, and that Higgins will be 12,000 behind. Such a cut in the rest of the State might throw the Republican candidate for Governor 80,000 to 100,000 votes behind in the State.
The Republicans seem to have Indiana at present, but Democratic conditions have improved since William J. Bryan took the stump for Parker, and the Democrats are making every effort to swing the State in the last weeks of the campaign. Seventy-five per cent. of the gold Democrats are supporting Parker. The Bryan Democrats have been solidified. Party conditions are, therefore, normal. The Republicans will have to fight hard to hold the State.
Connecticut is inclined toward Roosevelt, and this is admitted even by the supporters of Judge Parker. The Bryan element in that State will refuse to support the Democratic ticket solidly, and the Bryan men are even now planning to reorganize the party immediately after the election.
In New Jersey the Democratic State ticket is stronger than the national ticket, and the contest is largely on State issues. If this were not a Presidential year, the Democratic candidate for Governor would probably be elected. The Republicans give Roosevelt 35,000 plurality, and Stokes for Governor over Black, from 13,000 to 15,000. Independent believe that Roosevelt will have a large plurality. The Democrats claim the State for both State and national tickets.
Maryland is apparently going Democratic. There is a strong drift in that State toward Democracy because of the ## Progress of the Wabash.

The purchase of a large wharf property on the eastern side of the harbor by the Western Maryland Railroad Company is an interesting announcement made in the Sun Monday morning. The acquisition of this property indicates that the Wabash system is expecting to do business along the water front of Baltimore, and that it does not propose to remain inactive while its rivals get possession of all the wharves. The Brown's wharf property, just purchased by the railroad, is extensive and most favorably located on the water front of the inner harbor. It can be reached by Western Maryland cars over the tide-water extension from Hillen Station, a portion of the track, we believe, having been laid years ago and in use.
