The charitable gifts of 1904, so far as have been recorded, reach a total of eighty-eight million dollars, about seven million dollars less than for the previous year. The two largest givers were Andrew Carnegie, whose share was almost eight millions, and John D. Rockefeller who gave five millions and a half. What ever may be said against the methods by which some men have accumulated their wealth, it is plain that they are learning to give more freely than was the case a few years ago. مرِّه مرِّه مرِّه

Rational Cattle Feeding.

Mr. Edward Van Alstyn delivered an address in Taneytown, last Thursday, on the subject of "Rational Cattle Feeding" which contains many excellent ideas. ----An Interesting Sketch of Asheville and "Biltmore."

(The following very interesting letter is from Jos. L. McKinstry, son of Evan B. McKinstry, of near McKinstry's Mills, who is in the service of the U.S. Navy, at Pensacola, Florida. We should be eased to have the writer tell us someing about the country which Ponce de Leon thought contained the "Fountain of outh."-ED. RECORD.)

"I am sending you an account of my rearn trip South which is devoted prinipally to Asheville and Biltmore as they were the two most interesting places I visited en route. I left Baltimore at 9.42 Monday morning, Jan. 2nd., for Washington where I boarded the 11.15 express or Asheville, N. C., due to arrive there at 12.30 a. m., on Tuesday.

From Charlottesville to Lynchburg the country is very hilly and even mountainus. At Greensboro, N. C., the first delay occured; here we were obliged to wait an hour for the train from Raleigh. Sev-eral other delays combined to bring us o Asheville at 3.30 instead of 12.30 the time we were due to arrive. As a result it was four o'clock in the morning before got to bed at the Glen Rock Hotel. Additional interest was given to the Jackson-Smith contest on the Eastern Shore for the seat in the House of Repentatives from the First Congression district of Maryland on Thursday by the announcement that the ballot boxes in a number of the counties, notably Some set and Worcester, where charges of fraud and trickery have been made by Mr. Jackson and vigorously denied by Mr. Smith, will be opened. Inasmuch as the contest is being conducted under authority of Congress, no State issues are involved. The House of Representatives is the sole judge of the qualifica-tions of its members, and its right to have the ballot boxes opened and the

The Comic Valentine.

As St. Valentine's day is approaching it seems timely to call attention to the annual insult to the beautiful idea which inspires the observance of the day, which is represented by the so-called "comic" valentine. These artistic (?) productions are not comic, in fact, but are coarse, vulgar and cruel. Primarily, they are intended to hurt the feelings of recipients, and are worse than vulgar; they should be prohibited entry into the mails, and their use in every way discouraged

Under the assumption of "freedom of the of the laws now bearing upon the subject, press' the characters of our foremost men are daily assailed, frequently without the least just foundation, and the tendency is to spread a harmful influence, if not positive wrong. Let us try to encourage the growth of a public sentiment antagonistic to all insulting and debasing caricatures, no matter where found. The Power of Advertisers.

The hitch between the Baltimore News and a combination of its advertisers, makes clear the fact that the reduction in price of a great newspaper to one amount to the sum of one hundred dollars. cent, places the publisher within the power of advertisers; that it places the advertising department superior to the news department—business, ahead of independence. No great amount of logic nor perception is needed to prove this, for everybody knows that a great newspaper | address before the Merchants and Mancannot be published for one cent a copy, and that without advertising such a which was not relished by the managers

In recent years, the great department stores have not only, in a large measure, forced the small retailers out of business, but at the same time have secured the power mentioned over newspapers; while the latter, through the one-cent selling price, have contributed largely to this power and without benefit to themble the one-cent price. The question arises, therefore, how much is the cost of advertising increased thereby? Adof advertising increased thereby? Admitting that the low selling price increases circulation and cost of production, it necessarily follows that the advertisers, first, and next, the public, are paying the increased expense. It is true, of course, that the greater the circulation the greater the value of making the improvements and the de advertising, still it is not quite clear that the advertiser is not paying more than his equitable share in the production of the newspapers of the country. We admit our inability to discuss, intelligently, this phase of the subject, but we do know this; that if a newspaper really shall be a partisan body, if they can people, and by them will be brought to means that its news features and editorial independence shall rank first, it must not place itself wholly at the mercy of a combination of its advertisers.

All of us, in a measure, are profiting from the work of "hewers of the way," and for this one reason, perhaps, our disappointment should be the less keen that our own efforts do not seem to be properly appreciated. After all, judgment is at the end; and it is well for us that it is not by the world. Taking this view—the proper one—popular applause can be ignored, and yet, it is human nature to accept the truth regretfully.

Somehow, the pure life, the earnest application, the delving brain, the tireless energy, the existence filled with sacrifice, seems not to fulfil the mission it is entitled to fulfil, and we do not feel that true to your declaration that 'politics this is a murmur against the Divine order of things; it is rather regret that thus do not feel that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of the carry-dor of things; it is rather regret that the carry-dor of the carry-do der of things; it is rather regret that human nature is so heartless and unresponsive, so sparing of bestowing rewards. There are not enough bouquets thrown, nor gold-headed canes presented, in this selfish, jealous world of ours.

Many men are, without doubt, deterred from doing a meritorious thing by the thought-"What's the use?" The stolid indifference of the public is relack of improvement in the world.

Probably we have travelled so far from the beginning of things, that beginners are no longer remembered? Probably we have grown so intelligent, so highly crttical, that even greatness passes at a discount?

Baltimore's Strength.

The Review of Reviews for February contains an interesting illustrated article entitled, "Baltimore one year after the Fire." The article is especially gratifying in the great financial solidity shown, grate to this country shall produce to the In- and in the remarkable fact that failures, and loss of business due to the fire, have been insignificant. It says;

> "Those who are laboring for a community of greater magnitude and progress than the Baltimore of the past have a substantial foundation for their efforts. Considering the amount of the city's wealth which was absolutely lost through the calamity, it seems marvelous that its credit has been so well sustained. In the space of thirty-six hours its assets had been depleted to the extent of sixty-five million dollars in value. Yet the resources of the local banking houses were such and feeling of confidence so general that no interruption to business was caused, except by the fire itself. In the period which has elapsed not a single failure has been due to it where the liabilities exceeded twenty-five thousand dollars, and the total liabilities of firms who have become insolvent on account of the disaster have not aggregated one hundred thousand dollars. In a general way, Baltimore has always had the reputation of being a rich commun-

HOWARD J. SFALDING, 866, 4

By REV. S. H. DOYLE. Topic.—What I owe to Christian Endeavor.—Ezek. xlvii, 1-12; Ps. xxxvi, 8. (Christian Endeavor day.)

On last Thursday Christian Endeavor was twenty-seven years old. A quarter of a century and two years ago Dr. Francis E. Clark and a few of his young people were gathered together in Williston church, Portland, and in *the providence of God organized a young people's movement that has been the religious wonder of the world for over a generation. And on this then I caution Late to close them as with a cereal are fond of nuts in such twenty-seventh anniversary we are asked to consider our indebtedness to Christian Endeavor. That we owe a debt to this great movement, if we are a part of it, cannot be doubted. Indeed, this is so whether we are a part of it or not. The world is indebted to Christian Endeavor. Outside the Christian church itself few movements in the world's history have had such a widespread influence as Christian Endeavor, and it has always stood for the betterment of the world in the conservatism from evil and consecration to good of millions of its young people. The world's moral, spiritual, intellectual, social and political life has been touched and uplifted by this marvelous movement of God. The church is indebted to Christian Endeavor. Christian Endeavor has been in the church, of the church and for the church, and almost every aspiration of the church at large and every department of local church work has been blessed and advanced through Christian Endeavor. And who can doubt the personal blessings that have come to those who have been a part of this great work? Millions could rise in their places in the Christian church today and say, "We are indebted to Christian Endeavor." Our indebtedness to Christianity may best be realized by a recollection of what Christian Endeavor has stood for and what it has done. It may well be likened to the stream in Ezekiel's vision. In this vision the prophet saw a stream of water flowing out from under the temple of God. It ran in all directions-north, south, east, west. It ever increased in depth and volumeankle deep, knee deep, to the loins and at last a great and impassable river, bearing blessings to every form of life the world over. This has been the history of Christian Endeavor. A stream of beneficent influence in the beginning, it has ever increased in depth and volume until it has spread to the nations of the world and has been for the preservation and the healing of the nations. What blessings have flowed from this ever advancing and increasing stream - definite pledged service, deeper devotional life, increased loyalty to Christ and His church, personal participation in public services, new missionary zeal and inspiration, helpful interdenominational affiliation and co-operation, denominational enthusiasm, new ideas and methods of religious work and with countless other blessings, a new meaning to consecration, which has revolutionized the lives of thousands of those who, while Christians before, knew not the joys of consecrated personal service to their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ! And the stream is ever widening and deepening, and may it continue to do so until the whole world is won for Christ! But debts should be paid. Do I owe Christian Endeavor a debt? Then I should pay it. And how? What better way than by a still deeper and truer consecration of ourselves to the Master and His service in Christian Endeavor? As we have received let us give out. Thus the desert paid the stream, and the trees the desert, and the people the trees. Everywhere life produced new life, and blessings be came the channels of increased bles ings. "Freely ye have received; free give." Thus best can you pay wh you owe to Christian Endeavor. One of the constant problems of life is o try to cultivate breadth without shalowness, just as we want to try to cultivate depth without narrowness. It seems to me that thanksgiving, with the comgood fortune, were in the various churches of this country, can be accepted as in a peculiar measure typifying the American spirit in religious thought that for our good fortune these men have been able to combine fervor in doing the brethren, who do it with certain differences in the non-essentials.

and the people who sincerely wish to do the Lord's work will find ample opportunity for all their labor in fighting the common enemy and in assuming toward their fellows of a different confession an attitude of generous rivalry in the effort to see how the most good can be done to our people as a whole.

Influence of Soil on Shape and Texture of Hoofs.

An English agricultural journal says that the nature of the soil on which horses are bred and reared has a cerdent Roosevelt. The regular morning tain influence on the shape and quality of their hoofs. Horses bred in hilly districts as a general rule possess comparatively upright and small, but very strong and tough, feet, while the hoofs of horses reared on marshy and low lying land are of exactly the opposite The President, after recalling how the character, being usually big, more or

There is, of course, a considerable amount of difference in the quality and shape of the feet of individual horses bred under exactly the same conditions of soil. But, broadly speaking, the shape of a horse's foot is in all cases governed to a greater or less extent licted that it was destined to be one of by the class of soil on which the animal is bred and reared. Damp soil causes the production of soft, spongy horn in the feet of young horses, and dryness, on the other hand, favors the growth of tough and closely textured

The feet of growing horses reared It is an important thing for the people on soft, spongy and damp soil are very apt to become overgrown or badly shaped, owing to the insufficient amount of wear which the horn is subjected to on such soil. In consequence of the horn continually growing and not sufficient of it being worn away the hoofs readily become overgrown, and if this is not remedied by the use of the drawing knife they eventually assume a bad shape.

When young horses are reared on dry uplying land, where the soil is best kept and the most intelligently comparatively firm and hard, the horn planned. of the hoofs wears away at a much escent as a dream if it does not rest on more rapid rate than it does in the case of spongy and soft soil, and there is much less risk of the feet becoming overgrown or assuming a bad shape. In practice this is simply borne out by the fact that the percentage of cases of badly shaped feet is much bined earnestness, the liberty, of the great body of the pastors who, for our and firm soil than it is among those smaller among horses reared on dry that have been bred on soft and

THE ANGORA GOAT

We have not heard so much of late on the old question of oily and nonoily goats, but this is more a matter for the consideration of the breeder than it is for the mohair buyer, says S. B. Hollings in American Sheep Breeder. Heavy, soppy fleeces shrink to a large extent when clean scoured, and it needs a very expert man to estimate correctly what the shrinkage will be when they are presented to him. One large buyer in Bradford is strongly opposed to the oily goat and says that there is always a lack of luster in such fleeces. However, the hair is always sound and good, but there is no more need for an excess of yolk in mohair than there is in wool.

While Angora goats can spend most of their time out of doors during fine weather, they, like other animals, must have a place of shelter to which they can resort during storms and blizzards. Prolonged cold, rainy periods are fatal to Angoras unless sheltered. - Wool Markets and Sheep.

Angora Conformation. The Angora goat, like other farm animals, must be considered with reference to size, conformation and constitution. The type to which the breeders should lend their efforts should weigh from 100 to 140 pounds, body quite round and broad throughout, hips and shoulders of same height for low shoulders indicate low vitality; the hips not sloping in a pronounced degree, legs strong, but not long, and eye bright and quick. The fleece should. cover all parts of the body, except inside the upper legs on the thin skin. A sheep that is not properly sheltered | A topknot is pretty, but does not indiinches and be so dense as to yield a fleece of eight to ten pounds. BELGIAN POULTRY.

Work of Societies In Promoting the Industry. Belgium exports annually from nine to ten millions of eggs and about one hundred and forty thousand to one hundred and sixty thousand dollars' worth of poultry. The breeding of farm poultry has made great progress in Belgium since breeders have understood that it is to their interest to practice in the poultry industry the national motto, "Union makes strength." In 1896 the eight agricultural societies then in existence were amalgamated and the National Federation of Belgian Agricultural Societies was formed. Today there are thirty-two af-Iliated societies and clubs, aggregating over 4,000 members. The aim of the federation is to encourage breeding in the several branches of agriculture and especially to develop and increase the production of the different national breeds and to introduce foreign varieties for breeding purposes.

To that end aid is given by offering cash premiums for the best specimen exhibited in the shows held by the different affiliated societies and clubs; by Egg Eating Hens. I have kept poultry for twenty-five years and have always been troubled more or less with my fowls eating their eggs, says a New York farmer in American Agriculturist. Last spring it got very serious, as they ate at least fifty eggs per day. Inquiry among different breeders for a cure brought no information except to cut off their heads. I fed 100 fowls four pounds of salt pork at two different times and found it effected a cure. It likewise proved successful with ten neighbors who tried it.

The kind of a bird to head a breeding pen is one approaching closely to standard requirements certainly, but this is not all, says an Illinois poultryman in American Poultry Journal. He must possess vigor that he may be the parent of healthy, growing stock. He must not be a sick bird cured, but one that has never been sick; one whose growth has been continuous, whose step has always been elastic and whose eye has always been bright.

Do not allow your fowls to contract the unsightly disease of scaly legs. Well bred fowls will not usually be bothered with scaly legs as it runs in rundown scrub stock.

Housing Fowls. It is a debatable question in our neighborhood as to whether fowls should be allowed to go out in winter after the cold weather really sets in says an Ohio woman in Commercial Poultry. Some affirm the fowls should decide the matter; that the poultry house should be left open in daytime, so they can go out if they wish. I have tried both ways, keeping them shut in all winter and also letting them go out in moderate weather. I am undecided which is the better way. I get fewer eggs when they go out, but the loss in eggs may be counterbalanced by the better health of the fowls. The Laying Nest. The best nest that can be adopted is a soap or candle box open at one end, leaving a strip two inches at the bottom of the opening to retain the nest material. This should be cut fine instead of being used in a bulky rough condition. Cut hay is excellent, and before placing this hay in the nest put in an inch of dirt. Dust the hay with insect powder once a week and renew the material at least once a month so Agriculturist. This may be true of Maryland Stock Powder.

Manner In Which This Popular

Breed Was Obtained. The black is the oldest variety of this popular breed of fowls and was introduced to the public in 1886 by William Cook of England, says American Agriculturist. It was several years later before the breed was seen in this country, but it has become very popular in the past year or two. The Orpingtons in general appearance resemble the grain adhered to the clover, and they American breeds, but are possibly somewhat larger in size. Keep Down Lice and Mites. An Iowa correspondent of American Poultry Journal recommends the fol- males. lowing methods of dealing with lice and mites in the poultry house: Keep the houses clean and free from foul odors. This can be done by cleaning out the droppings not less than once a week and sprinkling air slacked lime about the floors and on the dropping boards. It is surprising how quickly this lime will take up the dampness and free the premises of foul odors. Have the walls of the houses as smooth as possible and free from all loosely fastened strips and boards behind which lice and mites can find a harbor. All nests and roosts should be made movable, so that they can be easily taken out and sprinkled with kerosene once every week or two weeks at the farthest. The kerosene (the cheaper grade is just as good) is more effective and more lasting if a small quantity of crude carbolic acid is added. In addition to this the walls of the houses must be given an application of some good lice killer. The kerosene and carbolic acid preparation above referred

The Breeding Male. No owner of a good bird, the inheritance of which is known to be what it ought to be, and, although not a show bird of the highest class, but still capable of attaining a little success in that direction, is justified in discarding him as a breeder without giving him a test, says H. L. Aller in Reliable Poultry A male bird capable of transmitting to his chicks the qualifications which go to make up his breed type with great uniformity is almost beyond price to the breeder. Such a bird is unques tionably often disposed of by the best breeders without having been given a trial, some one of his brood brothers with something to his advantage as a show bind, but lacking in prepotency, having been selected instead. Teaching Hens to Eat Clover. When I first fed cut clover in their mash the hens would eat the grain out and leave the coarser pieces of clover and some of the finer ones, says a Maine breeder in Commercial Poultry. I fed for several weeks and had to throw away a large part of the clover. At last I got a bag of fancy middlings nearly as fine as flour and used a good quantity of this with the other grain making the mash quite "doughy." The would eat all to get the grain. Mating Turkeys. No matter what variety of turkeys may be selected for keeping, they should above all things be strong, vigorous, healthy and well matured, but not akin, says G. E. Mitchell. Better secure the females from one locality and the male from another to insure their nonrelationship rather than run the risk of inbreeding. In all fowls it is well to remember that size is influenced largely by the female and the color and finish by the male. Securing overlarge males to pair with small, weakly hens is not wise policy. A medium sized male with good, fair sized females of good constitutional vigor and mature age will do far better than the largest male with the smallest fe-

Her First Railroad Ride.

An old lady from Beaver county took her first railroad trip last week. She noticed the bell cord overhead, and, turning to a boy, she said: "Sonny, what's that for?" "That, marm," he said, with a mischievous twinkle in his eye, "is to ring the bel! when you want somethin " Shortly afterward the old lady reached her umbrella up to the cord and gave it a vigorous pull. The whistle sounded, the brakes were pulled on, the train began to slacken its speed, windows were thrown up, questions asked, and confusion reigned among the pas-

Effect on People Who Are Used to the Sea Level.

"It is dangerous for me to go to bed." That announcement by a stylishly bany hotel office startled William Maher, one of the proprietors, who was standing at the counter.

"What is the trouble?" asked Mr. Maher when he recovered his voice. "The room is filled with electricity," replied the woman. With the long quiet evenings before him he conceived the idea of whittling a seven foot black walnut log with a penknife. Four years he spent at the amusement, often getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning to take his sharp knife and whittle at the log. He put a little time at meals and in the evening. Recently he went to Hagerstown and brought the result along in a glass case, and it is now on exhibition there. > A Great Cantalever Bridge. A cantalever bridge under construction across the St. Lawrence at Quebec will contain a longer span than any bridge yet erected. The bridge consists of two approach spans of 210 feet each, two shore arms, each 500 feet in length, and a great central span 1,800 feet in length. The total length of the bridge is 4,220 feet, and although in extreme dimensions it does not compare with the Firth of Forth bridge, which is about one mile in total length, it has the distinction of having the longest span in the world by ninety feet, the two cantalevers of the Forth bridge being each 1,710 feet in length. The total width of the floor is 80 feet, and provision is made for a double track railway, two roadways for vehicles and two sidewalks. In a cantalever of this magnitude the individual members are necessarily of huge proportions, the main posts, for instance, being 325 feet

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.] The schedule of railroad rates for the benefit of visitors to Washington at dent Roosevelt recently made public augural committee on transportation is very generous. Special rates also will be extended to bands and all musical organizations. The public, not included in the military organizations, will have to pay only one fare for the round trip.

Tablets In China. President Roosevelt has had his attention called to the agitation started by the Military Order of the Dragon, composed of officers of the United States army who were engaged in the Boxer uprising in China, to suitably commemorate the part taken by the United States in that struggle as well as to the talk in the Society of the Army of Santiago as to marking commemorative places in Cuba. Nearly all the European countries have marked their part in the Chinese struggle

For Inauguration Balls. The action of congress in granting the pension building for the purpose of the inaugural ball is somewhat similar to the celebrated "Patti farewells." Four years ago the pension office bill was passed "positively for the last time," and yet it has been passed again "positively for the fast time," according to many of the leading members of the house who voted favorably after hours of debate. There is a feeling that perhaps congress is not fooling in its farewell to the pension office bill and that the District of Columbia must secure a building of its own between now and inauguration day, March 4, 1909.

Diseases In Animals. The president has transmitted to congress the annual report of the bureau of animal industry of the agricultural department. The report shows an increase of 43.7 per cent in the number of American cattle exported and an increase of 116.5 per cent in sheep exported in 1904 as compared with 1903. States rifle in case it is possible. A Difficult Job. Eugene F. Ware's retirement from public life led to no great strife for the position of commissioner of pensions. It is anything but a sinecure and has seldom been filled to the entire satisfaction of pensioners and others having business with the bureau. In order that the numerous laws governing the granting of pensions may be properly administered the pension bureau requires a chief of good judgment, one whose sense of justice is well balanced and who will not only protect the government, but at the same time give the claimant his full rights. An Unusual Incident. There was an unusual scene on the senate floor the other day when Senator Morgan, seated in his chair, his flaming red bandanna handkerchief ever and anon going from his desk drawer to his mouth, his legs crossed, easily read a long speech. It was on the statehood bill. The senator's voice was firm, resonant and reaching for half an hour, but toward the end his words became almost unintelligible. At one period of his address Senators Knox, Alger, Elkins, Proctor and Teller were in a group talking softly to one another. Probably it was the first time in history when five RYDALE'S TONIC Load lowa Horses! A REAL CURE FOR MALARIA.

It has recently been discovered that the germs that produce Malaria, breed and mul-tiply in the intestines and from there spread throughout the system by means of the blood. This fact explains why Malaria is hard to cure by the old method of treatment. hard to cure by the old method of treatment.
Quinine, Iron, etc., stimulate the nerves and build up the blood, but do not destroy the germs that cause the disease. Rydale's Tonic has a specific effect upon the intestines and bowels, freeing them from all disease breeding microbes. It also kills the germs that infest the veins and arteries. It drives from the blood all poisonous matter and makes it rich and healthy.

Will arrive at my stables in Hanover, on Friday, February 10, 1905, another carload Drivers and Draft Horses. Call and see them.
