Honest and Dishonest Money.

The discussion for and against the acceptance by the church, from individuals, of money dishonestly made, or secured, goes entertainingly on; and, while no conclusion will be reached, the full ventilation of the question is likely to be beneficial, rather than otherwise, for questions involving conscience, and discrimination between right and wrong—honesty and dishonesty—cannot very well leave, as a result, a public opinion less alive to the higher distinctions than before. Even discreditable debaters often leave good ideas in the minds of their hearers.

We do not profess to be able to decide so momentous an ethical question, and shall not try. We will simply ask, what would be the position of the church should the question be decided negatively? Would it not be the loser of revenue from the following, and from hundreds more, who are not strictly honest?

Business men who misrepresent their wares, and give short weight or measure. Farmers who sell wool to market, selling screenings for good wool, and who sell their cattle and water them before they are weighed for sale.

Mechanics who kill time and do poor work at so much per hour. Physicians who give bread pills and colored water for imaginary ills, and charge for it.

Dress-makers who never have any goods or trimmings left, but who "find things" and charge them on the bill.

Dairymen who feed their cows on molasses and corn, and "milk" the milk, and then sell it.

Lawyers who win fees by the use of methods more dishonest than those of the criminals they appear against.

Politicians who accept bribes and "take off's."

Brethren who lie about the age and qualities of animals which they sell or trade, and consider it smart to do so.

Skintfints who will always take the last cent, and withhold the last cent, in deals of all sorts.

All people who fail to pay for their newspapers, and other things, because they can't be made pay by law.

But, what's the use. If the church had to depend solely on honestly made dollars—honest, morally and legally—the surface of churchdom would present a seamy appearance, to say the least; and, what sort of magnet would it be that could separate the clean from the unclean in the collection baskets?

Be Fair to the Publisher.

The subscriber to a county newspaper owes to the publishers of that paper something more than the subscription price, and this "something" may be stated in two words—fair treatment. The rules and content of the newspaper should be considered, and the individual should adapt himself to them accordingly, for the time being. For instance, in cases of the expiration of a subscription, the removal of a subscriber from one location to another, and the continuance of the paper in the name of a subscriber who may have died, and its acceptance and use by another, involves obligations to the publishers of the paper from those who must of right be considered subscribers, for they receive and use the paper.

As a rule, county papers are continued after the time to which they are paid; the supposition being that on their expiration the subscriber will order discontinuance, or, if not, that his acceptance of the paper afterwards is equivalent to a re-subscription. This is such a common rule that ignorance of it is difficult to substantiate. Therefore, when persons who receive a paper on an expired original subscription, they are morally, if not legally, bound to pay for the same, and cannot evade the debt without being rightly chargeable with dishonesty.

No matter what the circumstances may be, no person has an honest right to accept and read a newspaper—unless it be a legitimate gift—without paying for it. The placing of a paper in a post-office box, or Rural mail box, even when without orders from the box holder, does not relieve him from responsibility. If the paper is not wanted—if it will not be paid for—the proper and only right thing to do is to notify the postmaster, or carrier, not to place the paper in the box again, and this official will notify the publisher, according to postal laws.

The RECORD has stated, frequently, that it always discontinues a subscription, on request, whether made at time subscription is given, or at the end; the date of expiration is always given on the name label, for the information of the subscriber, solely. We have always pursued the fair course, in such matters, but occasionally instances turn up in which the other party is not so fair. Some will receive their paper several months over the time, and some a year, and then order discontinuance and claim non-liability for the debt due us. This is strictly dishonest and dishonestable.

For Clean Advertising.

The Massachusetts legislature has taken the initiative in a direction which has already too long been neglected—that of purging the newspapers from the circulation of unwholesome, if not indecent, advertising copy, chiefly of the sort displayed by patent medicine concerns. While the movement does not seem to be designed to inquire very closely into the merits of the preparations, nor to reduce the prices used, it will aim to make the advertisements fit for publication and reading, and is therefore a step in the direction of decency, if not complete honesty.

The RECORD has always refused to advertise so-called medicines for the treatment of certain diseases, and the class of papers which take this position on the increase. Legislative action, or organized public sentiment, can greatly aid to the present number, for without doubt the great majority of newspapers desire to be considered decent, and fit for every member of a family to read, but may lack the nerve to turn away the revenue which attaches to such business.

The activity of the Postoffice department in investigating, and declaring fraudulent, some of the nostrums advertised, is also having a good effect, notwithstanding the howl that such action raises in certain quarters that the Department is overstepping the bounds of its rightful authority, and the baseless charge that the action is inspired by the Medical associations of the country in the interests of individual practitioners.

The general public has a duty to perform in the matter, and it should awaken to it. If, for instance, every person who thoroughly tries a remedy, and with the slightest benefit, would simply write the publisher of the newspaper advertising the preparation the exact facts in the case, the probability is that he would aid in bringing about the suppression of many preparations which possess little or no merit, and are first and last designed wholly to make money for their proprietors.

A Tried and True Friend.

One Minute Cough Cure contains not an atom of any harmful drug, and it has been curing Coughs, Colds, Croup, and Whooping Cough so long that it has proven itself to be a tried and true friend to the many who use it. Sold by J. McKellip, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

The New Automobile Law.

This law specifies that every owner of a motor vehicle, the resident in the State and every non-resident owner whose vehicle is driven in the State, shall file in the office of the Secretary of State a declaration duly verified that such owner is competent to drive the motor vehicle for which application for license is made.

The sections of the motor vehicle license law governing the speed of such vehicles specifies that a speed of one mile in 10 minutes may be maintained on any public road or turnpike, and through any town or village. The law also specifies that drivers of motor vehicles must heed the requests of anyone driving or leading a horse to stop if the horse is frightened. A speed of one mile in 10 minutes must not be exceeded where a street or highway has a sharp curve or at the intersection of streets or roads.

Commenting on this matter a country exchange of recent date said: "The automobile law that passed the last Legislature and is now in force, is of interest as they are called, show a disposition at times to monopolize our public roads. This law requires all automobilists who own and operate automobiles in the State to secure a license and display its number on his auto and declare their ability to manage their machine. The law also requires that no greater speed than six miles an hour shall be made on the public roads, and that the auto must be stopped or slowed down when requested by the driver of a tumbler horse. For violation of any of the provisions of this act the offender is liable to arrest and punishment. Some of our owners of automobiles are aware of the terrifying effects of their machines on timid animals and use the precautions required to limit the danger attending the meeting and passing of horses on the public roads. There are not a few, however, mostly non-residents, who recklessly rush by all persons on the road, regardless of the danger to innocent people—often times driving their machine less than six miles an hour, and are not deterred by the officers of the law and others, and when necessary to halt on a public road, the offender's coat sleeve would not offend the proprieties of the occasion. The public roads of the counties are the public property of their citizens and they should not be deprived of their enjoyment by the improper use of automobiles."

The Old Time Way.

Our Grandmothers gave us powders and teas, because they knew nothing of modern medicine and methods. In this age of progress and discovery, when the coated, compressed tablets are fast superseding the old time powders and teas, Rydall's Liver Tablets are compressed chocolate coated tablets, and are as low, pleasant in effect, always reliable. They contain ingredients that cannot be used in powders or teas. Ingredients that have an effect upon the liver that never obtained from the so-called liver powders, etc. A trial will prove their merits. R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Attitude of the Ministry Toward Public Evils.

The city of Philadelphia has long had an unenviable reputation for unsavory political conditions. It has been written up in magazines as a lurid illustration of a ring-ridden municipality. The power of the "organization" hitherto has been invincible against assault. Just now it is witnessing an uprising of public opinion because of the evidence furnished of an alliance between the "machine" and the most forbidding elements in the community. It is the allegation that crime and vice in their most revolting aspects are enjoying political protection, that is responsible for the present agitation for reform. Mr. Steffen's description of the city, as "corrupt and contented" will have to be modified. It is no longer "contented." Whether the discontent is deep enough and widespread enough to secure better conditions remains to be seen.

The noteworthy thing about the present movement for reform is that it is headed by the clergy of the city with remarkable unanimity. In every community measures for better public conditions have the general sympathy and active support of the ministers. But in Philadelphia they have taken the leadership. The initiative came from them and the methods for arousing sentiment and keeping it alive are of their devising.

There are many people who think that the preachers of a community ought to have nothing to do with questions that are inextricably bound up with politics. Their business is to proclaim the gospel, not to meddle with matters whose issues may, perhaps, have to be decided at the polls. Is this true? It is to be granted at once, of course, that they are not called to speak on the general governmental policies that divide the great political parties. They have no mission to proclaim the superiority of Republican doctrine over Democratic, or vice versa. When they undertake to deliver public judgments on questions of this sort, they are intruding in a sphere which they are not called upon to enter and where they can have no claim to speak with authority. To take advantage of their peculiar privileges and opportunities to engage in a purely partisan propaganda, is universally recognized as a grave impropriety.

But there are public questions whose moral aspects overshadow the political. Indeed, in the large and worthy sense, they are not political at all, even though party names and cries be injected into the strife. The national questions that separate parties, and to which parties owe their being, are in no sense involved. A man's view on the tariff, the currency, the scope of Federal authority, the national regulation of corporations doing interstate business, have nothing to do with the administration of the police department of a city, the prosecution of criminals, the letting of contracts, the handling of public moneys. These, and similar things, are the functions of municipal administration, and the question at stake is whether or not honesty and efficiency and regard for the moral interests of the community are to rule in their discharge.

This is the issue that has been increasingly coming to the front in the municipalities of our land. With unparalleled plainness and definiteness of specification in recent years, it has been charged that the government of many of our cities has become an organized conspiracy for plunder, that fraud and jobbery are everywhere apparent, that blackmail and intimidation are a rule, and that the administration maintains a profitable league with speculators, gambling dens, brothels and the vicious resorts of every kind that find a great city. The point to be determined is whether this sort of thing, so indefinitely corrupting to public morals, is to continue.

For pastors to keep silent on such an issue would be a strange procedure. It is no answer to this to assert that the function of the minister is to preach the gospel. The gospel is not a sublimated theory of the universe, remote from the daily life and practical activities of men. It is not simply an expedient for getting men to heaven at last. It is good news of salvation, here and hereafter. But it is also a rule of life. It is the power of God unto salvation for the individual, and also for society. Its mission is to enshrine righteousness in the single soul and also in the corporate life of men to effect personal regeneration and also social regeneration; to break up incriminated abuses, to eradicate wrongs, to reshape and reorganize society in harmony with the thought and purpose of God. Not only public customs, laws, policies, administrations are permeated with the new life which the gospel has brought into the world, can we look for the new earth pervaded and ruled by righteousness. So long as these forms of human activity are divorced from any recognition of divine law, we will still see not all things put in subjection to Christ. On the contrary, we will see the most conspicuous, influential dominating institutions of society hindering the work of the church and barring the way to the coming of the kingdom of heaven.

Upon such issues as municipal conditions in this country present, therefore, ministers of the gospel may well have something to say. They are representatives not only of the grace of God, but of his righteousness, and fidelity to their trust demands that they proclaim, as did the prophets of old, God's fiery indignation against wickedness in high places, and that they summon the people with authoritative voice to do battle for the right. It is a singularly ineffective pulp that summons the sinners against the sins of Sodom and Gomorrah, but has no rebuke for the sins that are under its eyes. About party names or about the theories of government and administration for which the names stand, preachers have no message to deliver, but they do have a message concerning wickedness, no matter what flag it flies. The Church is in the world to cleanse it of evil and fill it with good. Its mission is destructive as well as constructive. It cannot be content to preach abstract righteousness while the community is dominated by concrete corruption. The fearlessness of pastors in Philadelphia and elsewhere, in addressing themselves to the work of moral reforms adds to their weight and influence in the community. It shows that they feel the responsibilities of their position as moral teachers and leaders when they are found actively fostering all movements that look to the overthrow of the destroying evils around them, and to the establishment of righteousness in high places and low.—Lutheran Observer.

The New Outdoor Magazine—The Country Calendar.

The first number of THE COUNTRY CALENDAR is an inspiring sign of the return of Americans to our door life. This new magazine of the Review of Reviews Book Company is a high-class production, not only in its large size, beautiful "dogwood" cover and sumptuously tinted half-tone illustrations, but also in its showing of such contributors as Ex-President Grover Cleveland, John Burroughs, Prof. L. H. Bailey, Secretary James Wilson, Dan Lee Sharp, Henry C. Howland and others. Moreover the magazine gives a unique interpretation of the serious and instructive side of country interests in its authoritative and extensive editorial pages and in its "departments," which later give personal experiences and expert information about Gardening, Stock and Poultry, and the editor's aim in these departments is evidently to provide a clearing-house of knowledge for successful country dwellers and to exhibit through competent specialists whatever is new and beautiful in the science of outdoor life.

Rheumatic Pains Quickly Relieved
The excruciating pains characteristic of rheumatism and sciatica are quickly relieved by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The great pain relieving power of the liniment has been the surprise and delight of thousands of sufferers. The quick relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

The suggestion of Commander Booth-Tucker, of the Salvation Army, that the United States in its efforts to discriminate in immigration should make the inspection on the other side and not after arrival here would, if adopted, at least work greatly to the advantage and convenience of those contemplating emigration to this country. It would seem practicable to establish examining boards at certain European ports, whose certificates to immigrant applicants should be accepted on this side as accredited passports. In this manner certainly a great many needy people would be saved the loss of passage money across the Atlantic, not to mention the humiliating disappointment of being rejected at the portals of the new country which they are seeking to enter.—American.
