How to Secure Good Roads.

The Brownlow bills favoring National Brief Items from County, State, aid for systematic highway improvement will be re-introduced in the 59th. Congress. We believe that this is the only true method of securing this greatly needed benefit—good roads. States and Mary Snadow, said to be the largest counties cannot possibly put up the necessary funds without going into debt law, now in operation in Maryland, will never be popular and will never succeed in accomplishing wide-spread benefit, for the simple reason that the cost per mile of such roads is too great.

It is estimated that 25,000 visitors were in attendance, all of whom will return to their homes full of delight with everything except the weather. The plan of financing the convention by issuing shares of stock at $1 a share, tried for the first time purely as an experiment, has proven a success. Chairman W. C. Perkins, of the finance committe, said that the total cost of the convention would amount to about $22,000. It must be remembered that not one of the 7,000 local workers received pay for his or her labor, although many of them the money raised by the society comes from its publications.

Arthur P. Smith, president of the Maryland Teachers' Association, delivered an address at Pen-Mar, on Tuesday, in which he had the following to say about "Another topic which is now promi-nent in the educational world is that of compulsory education. Three years ago a law was passed by the General Assembly of Maryland requiring the attendance of all children between the ages of 8 and 12, but the action of the law was limited, unfortunately, to Baltimore city and Allegany county. I remember that at the conference of the educational leaders at Annapolis during the session of 1902 the question was discussed vigorously, many opposing the adoption of such a law at that time on account of supposed inadequate facilities for handling the larger numbers of children that would be forced into the schools. Neverheless, the law was passed, but limited in its action. Steps were taken in Allegany county to enforce the law. During the two years of its enforcement the enrollment in the schools was larger and the punils largely remained.

Union Bridge.—The body of William Speake, of Hagerstown, who was killed by being thrown from a freight train, on one of the bridges of the W. Md. R. R., near New Windsor, on Saturday morning of last week, was brought to Union Bridge and left in charge of undertaker, Frank J. Shriner, who pre-pared it for burial. The body was crushed and bruised in a horrible manner, nearly every bone crushed or broken, and the skull crushed in. It was a sad spectacle. The body was shipped to Rocky Ridge on the Fast Mail Sunday morning. Mr. Speake leaves a wife and two children.

This statement is, absolutely, true. but it adds little to her strength, and the but it adds little to her strength, and the notion that it will add to Japan's standing in the negotiations because it is Russian territory is a mere sentiment. It belonged to Japan before Russia seized it, and is in reality a recapture, because Russia forced Japan to give it up.

Japan is not likely to base her peace terms on either a sentiment or a fiction. They will be based upon the situation itself. The wonderful events of the past seventeen months need not be recited. They are as clearly known to the Russians as to the Japanese. Japan is the victor in the tremendous conflict and there is not the slightest prospect, so far as human foresight can penetrate, that the relative positions of the combatants will change. It is not necessary to do anything to make her position stronger. So far as the peace negotiations go, she is impregnable. Her only anxiety probably is as to the good faith of Russia. While the latter was doubted by many some weeks ago, there does not seem to be any ground for suspicion now. The terms of Japan may differ considerably from the guesses that have been made. More attention may be given to strategical and less to material advantages than many have supposed possible.-

Last year a chauffeur in the employ of the Massachusetts highway commissioners bumped over a crossing in Westfield at such unreasonable speed, as to arouse popular resentment, and he was properly subjected to a fine, and then the town passed reduced speed regulations. Many hundreds of automobiles passed through the town sensibly and safely, until the other day another foolish if not fool automobilist from Albany ran full tilt into two farm wagons standing at the curb, and after settling with the farmers for the damage done, was allowed to go scot free. Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 16. By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The message of the flowers. Matt. vi, 28-34; Jas. i, 9-11. The universe speaks of God. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." But not only in its greater parts does the universe speak of God and teach us useful lessons concerning Him, but in all its parts this is also true. The and His goodness.

advantage of the fact that nature is earliest times truth concerning God has been illustrated by the beautiful have been learned of God, and in all nature messages have been received from God. This being true, it is assured that men would have seen messages in the flowers. If, as the poet says, there are "sermons in stones," much more can we expect to find messages in the flowers, nature's most have a language. They convey messages from man to man, and much more do they speak and teach of Him | II Tim. iii, 16; II Pet. i, 21. who made them and decked them in all their beauty and gave to them their sweet fragrance.

1. The flowers teach a lesson on faith "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." How do they grow? No one knows or can explain the mystery of their growth. We know that they grow, but no one can explain their growth. In the realm of religion as in the realm of nature there are many things that we cannot explain or understand, but we can believe in them. "We walk by faith and not by sight." Religion is of faith, nor is it unreasonable to believe what we cannot fully comprehend. We know that the muscles of the arm are under the control of the will, but how the mind acts upon the body in using the muscles of the arm no man knows. The fact is evident; the philosophy is unfathomable. By religious experience we know many things that we cannot explain, but we can believe them and wait for God to make them plain to us.

2. The flowers teach a lesson on divine Providence. The lilies grow without toiling or spinning because God cares for them, and if He care for the lily, which today is and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more care for His own children? If God takes care of the flowers we can rest assured that He will care for us. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III, THIRD QUARTER, INTER. NATIONAL SERIES, JULY 16. Text of the Lesson, Isa. lii, 13, to lili, pared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We are granted two lessons in this dewdrop as well as the star tells us of which, as of all Scripture, is the that God is and speaks of his power sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow (Luke xxiv, 25-27; I Pet. i, Religious teachers have always taken | 10, 11). Isaiah is a little Bible, an epitome of the whole, divided into simply unwritten theology. From thirty-nine parts and twenty-seven parts, like the books of the Old and New Testaments. It also begins with things in the world about us. In almost sin and ends with the new heaven and every natural phenomenon lessons earth, and the name signifies "The Salvation of Jehovah." If the prophet had actually seen the sufferings of Christ he could not have written more correctly than he has done in this portion, but it was not the prophet, but the Holy Spirit, who wrote through him, and therefore it is so correct, for we firmly and unwaveringly believe beautiful adornment. The flowers that the Holy Spirit wrote all the words of this book, the whole Bible. See II Sam. xxiii, 2; Jer. xxxvi, 4, 6, 8;

That the words "Behold my Servant," with which our lesson opens, refer to Christ is plain from Isa. xlii, 1-4; Matt. xii, 16-21. His exaltation is seen by comparing verse 13 of our lesson with Phil. ii, 9-11, and by reading "startle" instead of "sprinkle" in verse 15 (see Rev. Ver.) we see how His exaltation will affect the nations and their rulers, many of whom seem to know nothing of the coming glory of Jesus of Nazareth.

The marred form and visage of verse 14 make us think of the scourged back, the scourge possibly tearing the face also; the crown of thorns, the pierced hands and feet. Yet who believes it—that is, truly receives it and lays it to heart? (John i, 12.) To how many of those who hear is it the power of God unto salvation? (Rom. i, 16.) This portion of Scripture will be Israel's national confession in days to come, just as chapter xii will be their national anthem, but is it not true of the vast majority of those who have heard of Christ that in their eyes He is still despised and rejected, not esteemed, not desired? When on earth He was truly the "Man of Sorrows," for no one ever had so many or such varied ones, but they were not His except as He accepted them for our

Any sinner who believes God our days that we may apply our hearts | can therefore say: "God laid my sins on Jesus: He was wounded for my transgressions and bruised for my iniquities, Job xiv, 2; Ps. xlvi, 1-11; S. of Sol. ii, and I, receiving Him, am healed with 1, 2, 10-17; I John iii, 15-17; Isa, xl, 1-8; His stripes." LITTLE BREECHES. I don't go much on religion,
I never ain't had no show;
But I've got a middlin' tight grip, sir,
On the handful of things I know.
I don't pan out on the prophets
And free-will and that sort of thingBut I blieve in God and the angels,
Ever sence one night last spring.

I come into town with some turnips,
And my little Gabe come along—
No four-year old in the county
Could beat him for pretty and strong—
Pert and chipper and sassy,
Always ready to swear and fight—
And I'd larnt him to chaw terbacker

The snow come down like a blanket
As I passed Taggart's store;
I went in for a jug of molasses
And left the team at the door.
They scared at something and started—
I heard one little squall,
And hell-to-split over the prairie
Went team, Little Breeches, and all. Hell-to-split over the prairie!
I was almost froze with skeer;
But we roused up some torches,
And sarched for 'em far and near.
At last we struck hosses and wagon,
Snowed under a soft white mound,
Upsot dead beat—but of little Gabe
No hide or hair was found.

By this the torches was played out, And me and Isrul Parr Went off for some wood to a sheepfold That he said was somewhar thar.

We found it at last, and a little shed
Where they shut up the lambs at night.
We looked in and seen them huddled thar,
So warm and sleeply and white;
And thar sot Little Breeches and chirped,
As peart as ever you see,
"I want a chaw of terbacker,
And that's what's the matter of me."

How did he get thar? Angels.

He could never have walked in that storm:
They jest scooped down and toted him

Miss Day canned her fruit in the jars, one set in a pot of boiling water over the fire, and another in a pan of water in the oven. To do this she simply packed the fruit in the jar, and made a syrup of sugar and water of the desired sweetness. When the syrup was at the boiling point she poured it over the fruit. For the oven canned fruit she kept the oven at 300 degrees, and left the cover off the cans. On the can cooked over the fire she set the cover lightly. In canning a quantity she would set the cans in a washboiler of water, wrapping them in cloth to prevent the glass from touching. BARNYARD GENEALOGY.

I'm'a rooster incubated And an unsuccessful hatch;
I think my comb's on crooked
And my feet are not a match. My crow is so discordant
That it dwindles to a cackle;
For comparison of feathers There is not one I dare to tackle.

Though at many little drawbacks I confess I sometimes quail, I don't envy all the strawbacks Who can perch upon a rail And crow until they're winded Bout a question of their birth to the titled poultry scratching On the surface of the earth.

I do so often wonder

How they make a good impression,
And again I have to ponder Just to frame the right expression, for in social life a rooster Must depend, like humankind, Upon some gallant booster Who can tout him as a "find."

But all things have an ending. As for me, I am not proud;
I will pick my way, depending
On a cackle that's not loud, And when the cook beheads me I don't think the guests will stoop To try to learn the pedigree
Of the rooster in the soup.

CARE OF BOOKS.

Marginal notes are usually superfluous and undesirable. Corners should not be turned down or leaves folded in halves.

Exposing books to heat or strong sunlight warps the binding. Never bend back the covers book, but keep them both level. Do not turn a book on its face or place any weight on an open book. Never open a large book from the ends or cover, but from the center. Bookcases should not be placed against outside walls on account of the probable dampness. A blunt knife of ivory, wood or metal should be used for cutting new books.

If any liquid be spilt on a book, wipe realization of their responsibility to it off at once gently with a soft cloth or absorb it with blotting paper. Do not dry it by a fire. case they become shabby.

The average American man is so much more polite, agreeable and considerate to the average woman that all other men seem rough and indifferent by comparison. In this department if in no other the American man has no rival. He is the best mannered creature in the world to the casual human being-especially female human being -he brushes elbows with in the course of the day's march. He doesn't use half as many "Thank yous" as the French or bow and smile so much, but he will give himself trouble to open doors, to hail carriages, to get up and Ter his seat in omnibuses, to help beparceled women on to trains and hold the baby while the mother helps off the rest of her off spring .-- New York World.
