At present the greater portion of the county is 'dry,' some of it having been made so at the special local option

In the whole county last year 46 liquor licenses were granted. Of these 34 were for Frederick city. Of the other 12, nine were for "ordinaries," or hotels, one for a storekeeper and only two for saloons. The 34 licenses granted in Frederick city included, besides barrooms and saloons, numerous grocery stores, at which whiskey, wine and beer are sold. The city's revenue from these licenses was $4,370, while from all of the licenses in the county the state received $2,644.50.

"If they let the city decide this question for itself," said a local liquor dealer, "we may pull through, but if they ring in the county districts on us I am afraid we will be snowed under."

This is also the opinion of a man whose business has caused him within the past few months to visit every district in the county, most of which he canvassed thoroughly. He took advantage of the opportunity to sound sentiment upon the liquor question, and he declares confidently that if the question is put up to the people the county will go "dry" by an overwhelming majority. A similar opinion regarding the probable A similar opinion regarding the probable vote in Frederick city is held by a man who is considered a judge of public sentiment. ## CARROLL COUNTY COURT.

other Counties, to be tried During this Term.

The February term of Court opened on Monday, with Judge Thomas on the bench. The docket contains 44 trial cases, 12 appeals and 34 originals. The most important cases are several re-moved from other counties. One is that of the County Commissioners of Howard county against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. This case originated through a fatal accident several years ago to Dr. Hill, of Catonsville. His widow brought suit against the Howard County Commissioners for damages and the case was removed to Frederick county, where she was given a verdict for a large amount. The Commissioners now claim that the death of Dr. Hill was caused by the negligence of the Railroad Company and is suing to recover the amount for which the county was mulcted. The trial of

Other cases of importance to be tried are: John W. Riley against the Manyland Electric Railway, suit for damages for injuries to the plaintiff, removed from Anne Arundel county; Melown against the Mayor and Common Council of Union Bridge, two cases damages for personal injuries, and the Emmitsburg Water Company against the Burgess and Commissioners of Emmitsburg, removed from Frederick county. The jurors for the term are: Joshua F. Shorb, Noah E. Cutsail, of Taneytown district; Robert W. Fleagle, Jonas E. Myers, of Uniontown district; Benjamin Frank Shriver, Christopher C. Wisner, of Myers' district; Henry Clinton Shipley, Thomas M. Ireland, of Woolery's district; George W. Walbert, John C. #### Death of Mr. Ephraim Haines .

Mr. Epbraim Haines, a prominent farmer, of Medford, and ex-Sheriff of Carroll county, died on Thursday evening, of paralysis of the brain. He had been ill for several weeks, from a com-plication of troubles, and was stricken with paralysis on Thursday morning. He leaves a widow and five children, as follows: Harry, a fireman on the W. M. R. R.; Roy and Carroll, and two daughters, Ella and Emma, at home.

Mr. Haines was the second son of the late Moses Haines, who lived for many years near Linwood, and was a prosperous farmer. He leaves five brothers, Luther, Samuel, John and Thomas, all living near the old home neighborhood, and James D., of Taneytown district. A sister, Ella, died about twenty years ago. Funeral services will be held on Sunday, meeting at the house at 12 o'clock, etery. Mr. Haines was in his 61st. year.

Louis M. Motter, 94 years old.

Louis M. Motter, of Emmitsburg, father of Rev. Isaac M. Motter, president of the County School Commission, quietly celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday last Saturday. He was born in Emmitsburg, February 8, 1815, and, besides being a lifelong resident of that town, has lived all his life in the same house.

He is a son of the late Lewis Motter and was formerly a well-known tanner and farmer. He retired from active business life about 20 years ago, but has kept keenly interested in the promotion and advancement of his native town. He married Miss Alice Rudisel, daughter of Ludwig Rudisel, of Taneytown. died about ten years ago after a married life of 58 years. He has two sons and two daughters—Rev. Isaac M. Motter, and Mr. L. Edward Motter, of Kansas, who is now on a visit to his father, and Mrs. A. A. Hack and Mrs. G. B. Kesser, both of Emmitsburg.

Donation to Pastor.

Last Saturday afternoon, Feb. 6th. Mr. Joseph Baust and wife, of Frizell-burg, Md., drove to the parsonage of the Church of God, in Uniontown, and presented their pastor and family a very fine donation, from the members of the Church of God and their many friends of said place, amounting to about twenty-three dollars. We will in this public way return our thanks to all who took part in said donation.

Recollections of Lincoln's Second Nomination, in Baltimore.

Mr. W. L. W. Seabrook, of Westminster, is the only surviving delegate, from Maryland, to the convention held in Baltimore, which nominated Abraham Lincoln as candidate for President for his second term. We give, below, a portion of an article on the occasion by Mr. Seabrook which appeared in Thursday's American:

"It was my good fortune to be a member of the Maryland delegation to the convention which placed his name for the second time before the American people for the highest office in their gift, and I am the last survivor of the fourteen delegates who represented the state on the occasion. These delegates were elected at a state convention, held in Baltimore in February, 1864. That dis-tinguished and brilliant Marylander, Henry Winter Davis, had taken a strong stand against the renomination of Mr. Lincoln, and it was understood that some of the gentlemen likely to be named as delegates were in sympathy with him. But the Unionists of the state, generally, could not be swerved from their confidence in Lincoln's ability and steadfast purpose to prosecute the war for the preservation of the Union to a triumphant conclusion and this sentiment was almost unanimously shared by the delegates to the state convention.

"The impression I retain of the na tional convention, which met in the old Front Street Theater, June 7, 1864, is that it was a business assemblage from start to finish. The speeches, without exception, were terse and free from rhodomontade and there was no wild nor long-continued applause. There was a solemnity and dignity about the proceedings which must have impressed spectators with the fact that the delegates realized the gravity of the condi-tions which confronted the nation; that they were engaged in nominations and serious business and had no time to de-

"I was named as the Maryland member of the committee to notify the can-didates officially of the action of the convention, and it was resolved to pay a personal visit to Mr. Lincoln in addition to the formal letter to be addressed to him. The day following the convention, therefore, the committee left Baltimore for Washington in a body and went to the old Willard Hotel. Mr. Lincoln was the old Willard Hotel. Mr. Lincoln was notified of our presence and sent his private secretary, Mr. Nicolay, to arrange for the interview, which, we were informed, would take place in the East Room at an hour specified. In the meantime George William Curtis was selected to write the official letters of notification.

"His restlessness, I am sure, was caused by the apprehension that some-thing might be said of a character dangerous to the cause of the Union in which he was bound up, body and soul. He seemed much relieved when the ceremony was over, and as each member of the committee was presented to him, grasped his hand, shook it cordially and expressed his pleasure on our presence, with a word of exhortation to be firm in sustaining the cause of the Union.

Two Big Battleships Assured.

Washington, February 8.—There is little doubt that Congress will authorize this session the construction of two of the biggest battleships in the world for the United States Navy. The House has already passed the naval appropriation bill, which includes the appropriation for these two fighting monsters, each of which is to be of 26,000 tons, and it is now certain that the Senate Naval Committee will make a favorable report on the same proposition.

It is expected that there will be some opposition on the floor of the Senate when the bill comes up for consideration, but advocates of the greater Navy are confident that the program will be carried through successfully.

The Senate committee will also sustain the action of the House in introducing into the naval bill legislation restoring the marines to the ships and annullng the recent executive order of the President, transforming the "sea-soldiers' into a land organization, only required to go to sea in emergencies like any other infantry.

LINCOLN HOLIDAY DEFEATED.

An Attempt to Defeat the Lincoln Road fails, but kills the Legal Holiday.

The House Bill, making February 12 (Lincoln's Birthday) a legal holiday, was defeated, on Tuesday, not because of objection to the holiday, but because it was connected with an effort to kill the proposed Lincoln memorial highway.

The House originally passed the bill providing for the holiday, but, on its being sent to the Senate, that body hung on to it an amendment providing for a survey for the Lincoln memorial road and sent it back to the House.

Mr. McCall, who had charge of the original bill in the House, offered the following resolution, on Tuesday; "I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Library be discharged from further consideration of House resolution 247, and that the Senate amendment be disagreed to." Owing to the watchfulness of several members, among them Mr. Goulden, of New York, this rather Mr. Gonlden, of New York, this ranker indefinite resolution was recognized in its indefinite resolution was recognized in its Building.

5. The forenoon parade of veteran solutions of the G. A. R., the ment, therefore, were placed in the position of being compelled to vote against making February 12 a legal holiday, which they also favored, in order to defeat Mr. McCall's resolution which, if passed, would have defeated the Senate amendment providing for the survey of amendment providing for the survey of the highway. They took the ground that the defeat of the holiday was less objectionable than the defeat of the road objection der, which will be too late for legalizing the holiday for this year.

Speaker Cannon is unalterably opposed dent-elect from to all highways, at government expense, especially at this time when the expenses exceed the income a half million daily, and this likely means that neither this Congress nor the next will take favorable action on the proposition.

Mr. McCall introduced a bill at Tuesday's session which explains his action. The bill would appropriate one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the erection of a monument in Washington as a memorial to Abraham Lin-

A commission of seven is created to prepare a general design for the monument and $10,000 is provided for the expenses of this commission. The measure provides that the commission shall consist of chairman of the Senate and House Library Committees, the Secretary of War, the superintendent of the Capitol Building, Daniel S. Burnham, of Evanston. Ill.; Charles F. McKim and John M. Carnre, of New York.

To Investigate Educational System.

Gov. Crothers met his special commission on "Education and Manual Training," in Baltimore, last Saturday. He urged that they go into every phase of the educational work of the stateappropriations, teachers' salaries, purchase of books, etc. He said:

"I do not want to alarm you, but I commission involves more than any commission that has been appointed. except possibly one. You take up not the public school system in all its many details, but it contemplates going over the educational facilities of the State, wnether they are entirely maintained at the public's expense or not. It will require you to look into the question of appropriations to private institutions, because appropriations made to the institutions are made just like the general appropriations are made, frequently by some individual in the Leg-islature who is greatly interested in some project in his own county or section, and the appropriation is made very often through his energy and activity, without any regard to the part it is going to play in the educational system of the State The public school system has wonderfully developed. The high schools are doing great work, and so are the manual training departments. I do not say it as a fact, because I have no information to warrant it, but I feel that perhaps there are appropriations made o institutions in the same locality are doing the same work that a high school is doing. If that should be the case, prudence and wisdom suggest that the appropriation to the private isntitu-tion should be withdrawn.

"Another matter: I have always be-lieved that the public school teacher's salary ought to be looked into—not as a compliment to the particular teacher, but as one of the most important public servants that the State has. The idea must be the improvement the teacher, not so much that they shall have more money for their services or that they are not worth any more, but you must have a corresponding improve-ment in the grade of the teacher, so that they will become above the average, and for that they will get an increase in their compensation. This is a department of our Government the opportunities of which are not exceeded by any other department. Improvements have gone along steadily in our State education until the system is a very creditable

Preparing for Taft Inaugural.

Washington, Feb. 6.-With inauguration less than a month away, the plans are beginning to assume shape. They indicate that Mr. Taft will have the most imposing inauguration ever given an American President. It is planned to make things "different" from previous inaugurations, and this includes the parade, the decorations, the beautifying of the Pension Building and the fireworks.

The program of the inaugural period is divided into five important features and some others of lesser degree of interest:

1. The military division, under command of Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, grand marshal.

The civic division of the parade, with Maj. Thomas P. Morgan as marshal. 3. The great display of fireworks on the White Lot, below the White House;

the illumination of the streets in the down-town section, the dome of the Capitol and the Washington Monument; drill and display of pyrotechnics by the Republican Flambeau Club of Min-

OUR GOVERNOR is getting the reputation for talking a great deal-a great deal more than his party leaders relish-and it is altogether probable that when the legislature meets, some of his choicest plans will "get it" where the chicken got the axe. One thing is sure; he has cut out a great deal of very new work, the like of which is not fashionable in Maryland politics.

IT IS NOTICABLE, we think, that most of the papers in Carroll county have very little to say, either for, or against, the Anti-saloon League plans, due to the fact that party representatives do not know, as yet, which end is loaded. There's plenty of time, yet, to tackle the question, especially as doing so is attended with more or less danger-to somebody. Wait till Mr. Anderson gets after the legislative candidates!

... Hero Worship.

The American people as a whole, are perhaps less hero worshippers than any other nation, and yet no people on the face of the earth are more deeply attached to their truly great men, though sometimes such recognition comes late, as in the case of Abraham Lincoln. There is not much American applause over a mere name, and even when a son will multiply themselves many times name becomes associated with great over deeds, appreciation is inwardly deep, of progress, I protest against the Governrather than outwardly demonstrative.

We want to wait and try a man, thoroughly, before we praise him greatly, and we are very likely to wait until he is dead. Our great men are usually so closely identified with national politics that we fail to praise them, while still active, for fear that by so doing we can buy an automobile, but to a good by R. S. M. will be helping them to a higher place on many people who can not afford to buy town, Md. will be helping them to a higher place on the ladder. We are willing to laud all great men on "our side," but no others, necessary products of the farm. I say "necessary," because it is necessary if consequently it is necessary for a man to be on the "winning side," to gain much popular greatness while still alive. This is a heartless situation, but largely the true one. We have not yet risen to the height of praising virtue and ability, the height of praising virtue and ability of the height of praising virtue and ability of the height of praising virtue and ability of the height of the hei

It is perhaps best to regard men, as men, and that when some are selected by the Allwise ruler to carry out His will, not the instrument, but the One above all, is really entitled to the praise and honor.

Selecting The State Roads.

There is supposed to be no politics in the location of the State Roads, and we hope that this may be true, though a no politics, for instance, in the selection ern farmers now obtain. of the roads in the counties, it will likely be because those who manage such things are either afraid to try it, or do not know just how to make the most party advantage out of it.

We have heard some rumors of what particular roads are to be improved, that "there is nothing in it," and we trust that they are right. The decision of the Road Commission, on February 18, will likely tell the story.

It is almost too much to expect that $5,000,000 will be spent in the state, through political channels, without giving the party spending it all the political advantage possible, and we say this in no partisan spirit, for all parties do it, when they have the opportunit. There is this problem to solve, however, and it is a ticklish one: Would the party in power derive the most advantage in building the roads in strong democratic districts, or would it be the best policy to try to gain new adherents by invading republican districts?

But, this is the narrow view of the question, after all, for the greatest party advantage ought to be-and no doubt would be-derived through locating the roads strictly on their merits, and with the object of doing "the greatest good

> Senator Tillman was humorously condemning the police of Washington because they did not enforce the laws against auto drivers-that they "ought not to run over people and frighten them"'-to which Senator Bailey replied;

"I want to say to the Senator from South Carolina that I am very much less concerned about whether they run over that I do not believe there is any true progress in a course of commercial or political conduct that substitutes a product of the factory for a product of the farm; and I believe, in the larger sense, that this country will be infinitely worse off when it withdraws its population from the farm, because they can not prosper there, and concentrates them in the great cities. That course of events has already progressed so far until the cities are overcrowded and the farms are not sufficiently cultivated. When we aggravate that condition still further by taking our rural population and concentrating them in the cities, then all the vices of idleness and extravagance and all the crimes of murder, theft, and ar-

And at the risk of standing in the way ather than outwardly demonstrative.

The English are proverbially slow to ency by rejecting what the farms pro-

I want to say, besides, Mr. President, if I sought any political advantage, I would not want a very much better issue in a congressional election in the rural districts. districts of America than this naked proposition of the product of the farm against the product of the factory.

It was stated in the House of Representatives the other day that the secretary to the President has announced that if the appropriation of $12,000 for autowe are a commercial people, in more as the House has restored it, it is the in-world according to the fashion, and people in high places sometimes set the fashion. When the President turns his horses out to die, then everybody who wants to imitate the President does the same thing, and the example extends itself down, not only to everybody who Thus you are depriving the farm the farmer is to have a profit.

Senator Tillman made the following interests. A baseball player, or prize stance, in the product of the form, take the horse as a concrete example, which he is advocating and so earnestly press ing. If it is bad to have automobiles substituted for carriages, then it is fearare not sure that, after all, this is an un- ful to have railroad's substituted for wagons, because if we did not have millions of horses to carry them, and some of them never could reach the market at all.

I do not hesitate to assert, that if it were not for the railroads the West, which is blossoming like a rose, would not have reached out until we have even crossed the desert after having gotten to its borders. But for the railroads transport-ing the products of those very farms those States would be prairie today and be inhabited by buffaloes, or their products would have rotted on the farms hope that this may be true, though a and the price would have been probably little hard to believe. If there will be a third or a half less than what the west-

Coming to the other proposition, it does not follow at all that the use of the automobile in the way it is used now is going to concentrate our population in the cities, for the simple reason that I happen to have had the necessity as well as the pleasure of visiting London during the last year. I did not see half a dozen automobiles, and there is no and it would be unfair to repeat them, on the evidence we have, but the idea of a vicious and poor element of men anywhere else on the globe. Therefore, were to be given the advantage. There are others, however, who are emphatic tor's position is entirely untenable and illogical, and he will have to confess it before he gets through.

Senator Bailey came back forcibly, as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina ought to have extended his knowledge a little more than his personal observation. Within the last twenty days I have read an extract from one of the principal publications in Great Britain, in which it is asserted that the progress of the various motive power has been such that if Great Britain were to become involved in a war today she would be unable to mount her cavalry; that the breeding and raising of horses has been discontinued to such an extent in the Kingdom of Great Britain that she could not mount her cavalry if a foreign army were to attempt to invade her shores. That is not what I say; it is not what some American agricultural paper says; but that is the assertion of a great publication to Great Britain.

Now, Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator that there is no argument more fallacious than that based on an analogy, when the analogy is either carried too far or stops too short; and as to the assertion of the Senator that because I protest against displacing the horse from work which he can do, and do just as well as these machines, therefore the same logic would have compelled me to have resisted the construc-tion of railroads; with all deference to the Senator, when he talks about lack of logic he lacks it woefully right at that

In the first place, the horse could not have carried the great commerce which we now produce on our farms and in our factories; and the extension and development of the railroads have helped, as he well says, to make a market for the very things which the horse produces and which the farmers produce with the aid and by to labor of the horse.

But this is not a proposition to extend markets for farm products. Of course I know there is a kind of argument which crowd them into the cities you have less competition in the production of farm products and a greater consumption of them. In other words, they tell us that if you take people from the farms and production in the country and increase the consumption of the farm products. There is some force in that; but we come to the other fatal objection—that as you take people from the country where the free and pure and where they breathe a kind of spirit of patriotism and crowd them into the narrow tenements and dark places of a city, you convert a good citizen too often into a riotous one. Mr. President, I have had some experience in this regard; I was raised in an agricultural country; all my life I have lived among an agricultural people; and I can tell what kind of folks I going to find in a house, if they will let me first go through the barnyard. If I go through there and find the cattle well tended and find the horses and the mules sleek and well kept and I see them comfortably housed and I see the vehicles are such as men of spirit and women of refinement love to use, I know that when I go into the house, though I may not find the walls covered with paintings, though I may not find the house decorated with fine furniture, I will find the kind of men and women and children there that make a republic great and permanent. On the other hand, if I go there and find the cow's horn off, the horse's hip down, and the buggy looks as though it were ready to fall the first time anybody gets into it, I know I shall find the same kind of people when I get into the house. The test of a farmer's prosperity, I will say to the Senator from South Carolina [MR. TILLMAN], is always the live stock with which the farmer surrounds himself. I may not be able to maintain that when the horse disappears from the farmer's economy.

INDIGESTION ENDS.

Misery From Your Disordered Stomach Goes In Five Minutes.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of a case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will occasionally take a little Diapepsin after eating.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Biliousness, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. Each triangule will digest all the food you can eat and leave nothing to food you can eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour. Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking today and by tomorrow you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address.

Fellow-Countrymen:- At this second appearing to take the oath of the presidential office, there is less occasion for an extended address than there was at the first. Then, a statement, somewhat in detail, of a course to be pursued, seemed fitting and proper. Now, at the expiration of four years, during which public declarations have been constantly called forth on every point and phase of the great contest which still absorbs the attention and engrosses the energies of the nation, little that is new could be presented. The progress of our arms, upon which all else chiefly depends, is as well known to the public as to myself, and it is, I trust, reasonably satisfactory and encouraging to all. With high hope for the future, no prediction in regard to it is ventured.

On the occasion corresponding to this four years ago, all thoughts were anxiously directed to an impending civil war. All dreaded it-all sought to avert it. While the inaugural address was being delivered from this place, devoted altogether to saving the Union without war, insurgent agents were in the city seeking to destroy it without war-seeking to dissolve the Union, and divide the effects, by negotiation. Both parties deprecated war, but one of them would make war rather than let the nation survive; and the other would accept war rather than let it perish. And the war

One-eighth of the whole population were colored slaves, not distributed generally over the Union, but localized in the southern part of it. These slaves constituted a peculiar and powerful interest. All knew that this interest was, somehow, the cause of the war To strengthen, perpetuate, and extend this interest was the object for which the insurgents would rend the Union, even by war; while the government claimed no right to do more than to restrict the territorial enlargement of it. Neither party expected for the war the magnitude or the duration which it has already attained. Neither anticipated that the cause of the conflict might cease with, or even before, the conflict itself should cease. Each looked for an easier triumph, and a result less fundamental and astounding. Both read the same Bible and pray to the same God; and each invokes His aid against the other. It may seem strange that any men should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing their bread from the sweat of the other men's faces; but let us judge not, that we be not judged. The prayers of both could not be answered-that of neither has been answered fully. The Almighty has His own purposes. "Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh." If we shall suppose that American slavery is one of those offences which, in the providence of God, must needs come, but which, having continued through His appointed time, He now wills to remove, and that He give to both North and South this terrible war, as the woe due to those by whom the offence came, veteran, of Kemp, Tex., that a plot ex- shall we discern therein any departure from those divine attributes which the believers in a living God always ascribe 'that developed a cough that stuck to do we pray-that this mighty scourge of me, in spite of all remedies, for years. war may speedily pass away. #### PRACTICAL DOUBLE CORNCRIB

Well Arranged For Granary and Other Storage Purposes.

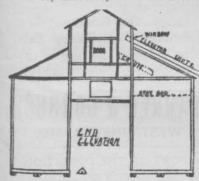

A convenient double corncrib may be fifty feet long, with eight foot wings and an eight foot driveway through the center. The space over the driveway may be used as a granary, access to the same being through large windows in each end of the building. Oats are particularly we'll suited to be stored in a place like this on account of their lightness as compared with other grains. The roof should be of the hip design, and on the lower slant cupolas every ten feet should be made, through which the end of the conveyor or elevator may be inserted. In place of the four cupolas one may be substituted which will ran the entire length of the roof, being closed by a hinged door.

The second illustration shows the end elevation of a double corncrib, which is described as follows: This plan is for a 24 by 36 building, with a dog house roof extension, which has four windows on each side, used as holes to run corn into, also for light. A chute at the end of the elevator conducts the corn into the bin. The chute is made portable, so that it fits in either space. The dog house has a door at either end, so that a conveyor can be used if desired. The dog house extension has three good features, First, it furnishes plenty of light and a good circulation of air: second, it affords an opportunity to fill the crib from bottom to roof and from end to end, and, third, it furnishes a fine place to hang and dry seed corn. The foundation is made of concrete, 6 by 6 started below frost line, and the inner walls and driveway are also to be made of solid concrete. The dimension stuff is a matter of choice. For outer sills select 6 by 6, and for the inner or the solid walls 2 by 8 answer the purpose very well, laid down flat, with a 2 by 6 set on edge and studding cut out so they come out flush with the outside of the wall. For siding take the bevel edge crib sidng, leaving a space of one and onehalf inches between the boards.

Apples In Boxes. This subject would be threadbare With all the discussion it has had of late were it not for the urgency of the facts. The apple barrel is by no means a satisfactory package, especially to the shipper of good apples, and in spite of obstacles the apple box is making Progress. A larger proportion of last year's apple crop was sold in boxes than ever before. These facts came most painfully to the attention of eastern apple growers when all through the winter months Oregon apples in boxes sold at good prices in all eastern cities, while New York and New England fruit was a drug in the market. It was a situation which could leave no doubt in the eastern apple grower's mind that something has to be done. Naturally the eastern grower, Who sees his market thus cut out from under him, thinks first of boxing his own apples. He considers also the fancy packing, trademarking and other selling devices at which the western men are so clever. All these schemes he must adopt, imitate or improve. But there is one thing more, and a very important one, which must be taken into the account. The eastern grower must grow better fruit. Eastern apples are conceded to be of better quality than Pacific coast stock, but the eastern grower has relied quite too much on this single fact. The western apples are allowed to have the best color and finish, but again the eastern grower has taken this estimate too much for granted. The high quality of New York and New England apples must be preserved, augmented and then advertised. The fruit must be carefully hand thinned on the trees in order to get a uniform grade for box packing. The color and ap-Pearance must be improved by better are. Western methods of co-operative Dacking, shipping and selling must be adopted. These are large reforms here pointed out, and the eastern farmer is a hard subject for reform, but these improvements have all got to be made. Otherwise the Oregon apple grower will appropriate the entire eastern market, and the eastern apple growers will go into the milk business.

LOOK AFTER YOUR FENCES. D. M. MEHRING.

Woven Wire For Inclosure the Latest

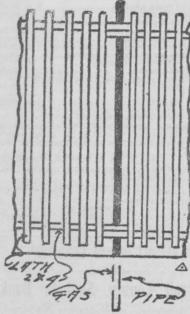

The matter of farm fences is one of the principal improvements of the farm. A farm without good fences never is valued very highly, even though the fields be clean and fertile. On a great many farms the fence proposition is always a serious one with the owner. Too many farmers are indifferent regarding the keeping of their fences in repair. There is usually plenty of work to be done on the farm fences. They are continually getting out of repair, and unless looked after they get into bad order and entice the live stock to cross them. The matter of farm fences has already gone through considerable evolution in the last ten years. Very seldom does one ever see the old rail fence, commonly termed the "worm fence." The rail fence is fast becoming obsolete, even in the timber districts. They never were a thing of beauty, but their construction lent a quaintness to many homesteads. Another fence that is passing rapidly is the hedgerow. A hedge fence when properly cared for is one of the beautifying acquisitions of a well kept farm. When it is not properly trimmed and cared for it is an eyesore. Hedge has grown unpopular on account of the large amount of work required to keep it in proper condition and also on account of its drawing the soil fertility from the ground for a considerable distance where planted.

Barbed wire is also another thing that is meeting with disfavor with the most progressive farmers. It is a very cheap and durable fence, but if it i not kept in perfect condition it is the most dangerous thing about the farm, especially where live stock is kept. On a great many farms barbed wire fences have cost the owner many times more than what it cost to construct them in the damage done to live stock. Many a valuable colt or horse has been rendered practically worthless by it. The damage done to cattle has not been so great, but there are instances where many valuable dairy cows have had their udders practically ruined by barbed wire.

The coming fence-in fact, it is already here-is the woven wire. It has everything to commend it. It is sightly when properly put up and does not permit of grassy or weedy fence corners. Wire fences take up very little land and permit a very high deat the top and 8 by 8 at the bottom, gree of farming. Crops will grow right up by the side of it, and the keeping of the fence rows clean is little labor. Bad fences are often responsible for bad feeling between neighbors. Woven wire fences are the easiest of all fences to keep in repair. If they are put up right they are nearly always in good condition. A little attention paid to them once in awhile is all that is necessary to keep them in first class order. The best way to maintain a woven wire fence is to have a barbed wire stretched on top the posts. This prevents the stock, especially horses. from throwing their heads over the fence or breaking down the wire.

Portable Fence For a Chicken Yard.

A simple portable fence, a good thing for the chicken yard can be made by nailing laths on the edge of 1 by 3 stringers. Where it is possible to obtain them, lengths of old mas pipes may be driven in the ground the right distances about to pass through the holes boxed in the ends of the stringers. The height of the fence is governed by the size of chickens to be yarded. Ordinary wooden lath is four feet long, and it may project six inches above the upper stringer and six inches below the lower stringer, which would bring the stringers three feet apart for a fence four feet high. Three-quarter inch gas pipe is one inch outside diameter, which would require one and one-eighth inch holes through the stringers. Cut the gas pipes five or six feet long, according to the soil. It wil! be necessary to put the fence in place and drive the gas pipes through the holes, because after the stakes are driven once or twice they become battered on top, or you can saw through from the ends of the stringers and mortise out to form an open seat.

Fertilizing the Orchard.

It might be said that it is always seasonable to fertilize the orchard or garden. Manure placed on this soil this winter will partially decay and its riches soak into the soil for the use of the plants next year. It not only serves as a fertilizer in the orchard, but in winter it acts as a soil protection and regulates sudden freezing and thawing. On hilly land it checks soil erosion.

Pennsylvania Has More Than 50.000 In 677 Granges.

Hon. W. T. Creasy Succeeds Hon. W. F. Hill as State Master-Important Measures Adopted at the Recent State Grange Meeting at Altoona.

One of the greatest grange organizations in the United States is that of Pennsylvania which held its annual meeting at Altoona recently. State Master Hill returned from his trip abroad to attend the international institute of agriculture at Rome, Italy, in time to attend his state grange meeting. In his annual address he remarked that there had been great progress in the state during the past year in made by the grange the past ten years, $3,000 dues is now paid to the national grange whereas ten years ago it was less than $1,000.

Secretary J. T. Ailman said that there was only once before when as large a number of new members were admitted as during last year, when 7,797 joined. There are now 677 granges in the state, thirty-nine organized or reorganized during the year; also five Pomona granges.

The executive committee recommended that the grange fire insurance companies be increased and their work extended into new fields. But little progress has been made in the forming of a life insurance company, all propositions seeming to be too expensive or intrirate. They said that the grange banks in Pennsylvania had been a success and that the reports from all of them were encouraging. The legislative committee reaffirmed the position it had previously taken in favoring the township road law vetoed by the governor. This law required that the state should pay 50 cents for every dollar of cash tax raised by the townships and abolished the $1 per capita tax. The committee believed that the state highway department should be reorganized and the present law be made more flexible to suit varying conditions. Some method should be found to reduce the cost of highways if the townships must share the expense. It favored no expenditures of state moneys that were not equally distributed among the counties, and especially so when a $4,000 auto owner pays only $3 tax and the owner of a $4,000 home pays $60. The committee expressed itself as unalterably opposed to involving the taxpayer in an interest bearing bonded debt. On the school question it said that a township high school should be established in every district and agriculture and manual training should be taught in these schools. Among the speakers at the public session was Hon. Willet Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture. On the refusal of Hon. W. F. Hill to become state master Hon. W. T. Creasy of Catawissa was elected to that office. E. B. Dorsett of Mansfield was re-elected lecturer, and J. T. Ailman of Thompsontown was re-elected secre-

Among the resolutions adopted were these: Indorsing compulsory teaching of agriculture in township schools; favoring the enlargement of the existing transportation facilities. It was decided to make no change in the names of grange banks, but no discrimination should be made in favor of or against any particular bank. Another resolution provided for a local option department, which will be in charge of Rev. J. W. Johnston, but which is to be supported entirely by voluntary contributions, and $500 was raised immediately for the work. This plan, while it gives the emphatic moral support of the Order to local option, does not sub ordinate the demands for other temperance legislation. The newly elected officers were installed at the last issue says this of the grange: "The national grange is a true representative of rural interests. It has a right to speak with authority on many subjects of vital importance to farmers. It is a more conservative body than it was thirty years ago and accomplishes more by reason of conservation. Certain great corporations would not agree that its demands and utterances are other than radical, but that lived stock and the accident of favoris a highly unimportant fact. They are reasonably conservative in the es timation of the great mass of wealth producers and thus have weight. The American people will not put their trust in any reckless radicalism, but want a leadership that is sincere in its interest with plain, hardworking, prudent people, who want a square deal. The grange stands for that as it understands it, making very few mistakes, and it is gaining in influence."

PIPE LAYING DEVICE.

Caisson For Lowering Tubes Into Position Under Water.

Various methods have been adopted for handling and lowering lengths of pipe into position under water, but this patent caisson affords many advantages. The illustration shows a section of sixty inch cast iron pipe being ly flooded. When empty the caisson supports twenty-four tons, but when filled with water it will sink with such a load. The section of pipe is made fast to the cradled top of the caisson, which turns when released from the barge and fills with water. When the bottom is reached the divers adjust the section to line and grade, calk the joints and then cut the caisson loose. It is then hauled up and pumped out in readiness for another trip.

SNOW AS A FERTILIZER.

Experiments Show That Its Value Has Been Overestimated.

From experiments conducted at Ottawa, in Canada, it appears that there are some slight grounds for the widely accepted opinion among agriculturists that snow is a direct fertilizer, says the Pharmaceutical Journal. It ts found to centain total nitrogen equivalent in round numbers to about a pound per acre of land covered by an average winter snowfall in that district. The amount of nitrogen as free ammonia was high, but fluctuated greatly from .082 to .589 parts per million. The nitrogen as albuminoid ammonia ranged from .033 to .078 parts per million, and the nitrogen as nitrites and nitrates ranged from 027 to .390 parts per million.

The average of twelve determinations from Feb. 21, 1907, to May 4 was: Nitrogen as free ammonia .256, as albuminoid ammonia .052 and as nitrates and nitrites 163 parts per million. The value of snow as a direct fertilizer content is concerned, to be greatly overestimated. It is intended to con tinue the experiments both in summer and winter to determine definitely the manurial value of both snow and rain

Value of Ferns. On many farms in this country there are areas, more or less extensive, covered with ferns. This plant has not been regarded as of value except for decorative purposes, but, says Leslie's Weekly, it has a practical value of which few people in the United States are aware. An American consul reports that in parts of England fern leaves have long been employed in packing fruit, fresh butter, etc., for market. Formerly grape leaves were used for this purpose, but the fern leaf is said to be far superior to that of the vine for keeping articles wrapped in it fresh and wholesome. The fishermen of the Isle of Man pack their fresh herrings in ferns, which keep the fish fresh until it reaches the market Potatoes packed in ferns keep many months longer than those packed in straw. Fresh meat also is preserved for a protracted period when swathed in fern leaves. It is said that the preservative quality of the fern is due to the large quantities of salt in its composition. The strong odor of the fern also repels larvae, maggots, etc.

Factors In Long Life. The theory of Metchnikiff that old age results from poisoning by bacteria in the colon and may be avoided by certain rules of diet is not supported by the studies of Professor H. Ribbert, director of the Pathological institute at Bonn. Death from old age is due to anatomical changes, atrophy of the nerve cells, and these changes are an inevitable result of the physicochemical course of living matter. No proof of special effect of diet is obtainable. The most careful inquiry shows the meat eater as likely to become a centenarian as the vegetarian. and the use of tobacco or alcohol signi-

In the novel tool tempering apparatus of W. Rosenhain, as exhibited at a soiree of the London Royal society, the metal is heated in a vacuum tube, and at the required temperature, shown by a thermo-electric indicator, is quenched by admitting water. ### HOW THEY PARTED.

A Few Weeks of Married Life Was Enough For Them.

And they were married and lived happily ever afterward? Well, hardly. It wasn't two days after they had refurned from the honeymoon when he dashed downstairs with a shirt in his hand and exclaimed:

"Queen of queens, light of my life, I Ove you as a woman was never loved before, but if you don't mend the butonholes in my shirts when they come from the laundry a calamity is going happen around here."

Two or three days later she met him at the front door when he returned from the office, and there was a savage gleam in her blue eyes as she said.

"My king of kings, man whom I adore as man was never adored before, let me give you a little piece of advice. If you don't wipe your feet on he doormat hereafter you'll think you lave been struck by lightning."

All went well for a time, but one Morning he picked up one of the bisuits she had so proudly placed before im, and as he carefully looked it over and studied its size and shape he remarked:

"My beloved, my jewel of the first water, my princess that I would willingly lay down my life for, you are all the world to me, but hereafter when you put these English walnuts on the table I wish you wouldn't forget the nuteracker.'

She awaited her opportunity and got back at him one night when he came home from the club in a hilarious con-

"My prince of princes," she said as she led him around the bedroom by the ear, "I worship you every minthe of the day, but right here and Now I am going to take away your atchkey and teach you to stay home by your own fireside seven nights a

It was only two days later that he Caught her using his best razor on her Corns, and as he took it away from her he said:

"Helpmeet of helpmeets, woman with eyes that the stars might envy, my very soul is yours, but if I ever atch you doing such a trick again I'll reak all the furniture in the house and see that your poodle meets with a "lolent death."

She did not reply, but when he came ome that night the kitchen fire was ut, and he found a note reading:

'Apollo of Apollos, Beau Brummel of Beau Brummels, man whom a queen hight fall down and worship, I have sone home to mother, and divorce proeedings will be started at once." He lost no time in getting pen and

NO. 4442 EQUITY.

In the Circuit Court for Carroll County sitting as a Court of Equity.

Vs. Anna L. Dayhoff and others, Defendants. SUPPLEMENTAL ORDER OF PUBLICA TION.

Joshua T. Reinamon, Plaintiff

SUPPLEMENTAL ORDER OF PUBLICA TION.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate situated in Carroll county in the State of Maryland, of which a certain Melinda Reinamon late of Carroll county in the State of Maryland died seized and possessed and which has descended to the parties to the cause as next of kin as tenants in common.

The bil states that Melinda Reinamon departed this life in Carroll county, Maryland, about four or five years ago, intestate, seized and possessed of certain real estate fully described in Exhibit "A" filed with the bill leaving surviving her as her only heirs at-law and next of kin, to whom said real estate descended as tenants in common, the following named children and grand-children, to-wit: Joshua T. Reinamon, Anna E. Dayhoff, Rebecca C. McNulty, Birnie A. Reinamon and Elmer W. Reinamon, children, and Carrie Dutterer, Samuel Reinamon, Mary Reinamon, John Reinamon, Joshua Reinamon and Margaret Reinamon, children of Samuel J. Reinamon and ceceased son of intestate who predeceased his mother, and Melinda Nau, or Noel, John Reinamon and Jesse Reinamon, children of Abraham M. Reinamon a deceased son of intestate who predeceased his said mother.

That all of the parties to said cause are

Noel, John Reinamon and Jesse Reinamon, children of Abraham M. Reinamon a deceased son of intestate who pre-deceased his said mother.

That all of the parties to said cause are adults above the age of twenty-one years save and except Joshua and Margaret Reinamon, children of Samuel J. Reinamon, deceased who are infants under the age of twenty-one years and who are non-residents of the State of Maryland and now reside with their mother in the State of Pennsylvania.

That all of the parties to said cause are non-residents of the State of Maryland save and except the said Joshua T. Reinamon and Birnie A. Reinamon.

That the aforesaid real estate consists of one and three-quarter acres of land with improvements and is not susceptible of partition without material loss and injury to the parties entitled to interests therein, and that, in order to make division of said interests, it will be necessary that said real estate be sold, and the proceeds thereof divided amongst the parties according to their respective interests.

The bill then prays for a decree for a sale of the real estate and the division of the net proceeds amongst the parties entitled thereto according to their several interests, and also for further and other relief.

It is thereupon, this 18th day of January, A. D. 1909, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll County sitting as a Court of Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Carroll County, Maryland, once a week for four successive weeks before the 18th day of February, 1909, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of March, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

LINCOLN'S CENTENNIAL.

"O, slow to smite and swift to spare, Gentle and merciful and just!

Who, in the fear of God, didst bear The sword of power-a nation's trust!" Bryant to Lincoln.

The 12th, of this month brings the centenary of the great and ideal American, ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

So much has been written and said about Lincoln that to contribute anything new or fresh concerning him is well-nigh impossible.

Of course you have heard and thought of Lincoln as a lawyer, and as an inimitable story-teller, and as a gifted orator. You have likewise heard and thought of him as a wise legislator and far-seeing statesman. But have you ever thought of him as a deeply spiritual man, naturally religious, in essence one of the most devotional natures America has produced, perhaps the most religious in spirit of all rulers since Oliver Cromwell? Yet his religious life had its limitations, for he was not a member of any church.

Concerning this latter fact Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler has recently written an illuminating word:

"During his presidential days in Washington, Lincoln was a regular attendant and pew-holder in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The pastor of that church was a man possessed of a very high order of intellect and spirituality. But with all of his personal excellences as a most godly minister of Jesus Christ, he did not gain a strong personal hold upon Mr. Lincoln. He had very wide personal intimacies with many Southern clergymen and laymen, and he went to the White House more than once to intercede with the President for lenient treatment to some of his Southern friends who were under arrest by authority of the Government. While he could go there to plead for leniency to those who were in rebellion, he never went to the White House to plead the cause of the slave, or to stand by the President in his strong, earnest anti-slavery convictions. Mr. Lincoln respected his pastor as he could not help doing, but that pastor never got the key to Lincoln's big, warm, freedomloving heart. I have always believed that if the President had been under the minsympathy with his aim at emancipation, open declaration of his faith in the Lord | the altar of freedom. Jesus Christ. It has even been said that Lincoln gave as a reason for not uniting with the Church that he was not prepared to subscribe to any entire denominational creed; that if they only asked know, was pronounced by the hostile him to subscribe to the two great commandments-to love God with all his state paper of the century." This, his heart and mind and strengh, and his last great production, contains those fellow men as his himself-he would be willing to unite with the Church on such gave it such a solemn dignity and such conditions. "Whether that were true or not, I still | tality. feel that had he been, during those four years, under the constant loving oversight of, and in association with, a pastor who had won his way into his heart, he might have been brouget into the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ."

No one who even causually reads his biography can fail to see that Lincoln ever felt the presence and purpose of God in his life. In his early days, while he was yet an unknown lawyer, he declared

"I know that there is a God, and that He hates injustice and slavery. I see a storm coming. I know that His hand is their country, and then his own life was in it. If He has a place aud a work for me-and I think He has-I am ready. I am nothing, but truth is everything."

How like the old hand-in-hand leading of the prophets is this expression of his faith! Not with him, as with so many, was trust in God a mere form of words. No man in the public life of America has had a stronger faith in Divine guid- They well may be termed a fitting exance, and in the ultimate triumph of right over wrong.

Perhaps none of Lincoln's speeches reveal his sublime trust in God so clearly and at the same time so pathetically as The port is near, the bells I hear, the people does his Farewell Address on leaving his home at Springfield, Ill., to assume the duties of the Presidency. "My Friends," he said to the large crowd gathered to bid him good-bye, "no one, not in my position, can appreciate the sadness I feel at this parting. To this place and the kindness of this I lived for more than a quarter of a century, and have passed from a young to an old man. Here my children were born, and here one of them lies buried.

THE CARROLL RECORD I now leave, not knowing when or whether ever I may return, with a task before me greater than that which has developed upon any other man since the days of Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail. Trusting Him who can go with me and remain with you and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend us, I bid you all an affectionate farewell."

> Again. Just before singing the Emancipation Proclamation. Lincoln said to his cabinet:

"The time for the annunciation of the emancipation policy can no longer be delayed. Public sentiment will sustain it; many of my warmest friends and supporters demand it; and I have promised my God that I will do it!

We are told that the last part of the sentence was uttered in a tone so low that it appeared to be heard only by Secretary Chase. He asked the President to repeat the words. Lincoln then replied:

"I made a solemn vow before God that if General Lee was driven back from Pennsylvania, I would crown the result by the declaration of freedom slaves." It is known to all men how faithfully he kept that vow.

Of Lincoln's magnanimity and tenderheartedness we have not space to write. All are acquainted with this feature of his character. The incidents of his kindness to friend and foe alike are so many and so rich that he would select but a single illustration of this luminous trait is bewildered by the vastness and wealth of available material at his disposal. The touching incident that occasioned last year's sensation in the RECORD will readily be recalled as a type.

Lincoln has left us at least three literary compositions-his immortal Speech at Gettysburg, his famous Bixby Letter, and his Second Inaugural Address. They are classic and will stand as long as language endures. His Gettysburg oration is the high water mark of American sententious eloquence, and together with his Second Inaugural Address appears elsewhere in this issue. Let us advise you to clip them unless you have them in permanent form.

The Bixby Letter. was a hard letter to write, yet nothing could be more beautiful and compassionate than it is:

Terrible was the tragedy of that April night, 1865, which suddenly removed from his high place of state and action the great President-a martyr to justice, liberty and law. And yet it may be true that Lincoln died at the right time for his imperishable fame. He had conducted an immense nation through the most tremendous civil war ever waged and never made a single serious mistake. It was fitting that after such a career his own life should be the last to be lost in the struggle. He had called over 200,-000 heroes to lay down their lives for laid down beside theirs amid national mourning. Do you wonder that here there come forcibly to mind the stirring words of Walt Whitman who was tenderly attached to the martyred President? Who can read these verses of the rugged poet without being touched by the sob of agonized grief that breaks from them? pression of the nation's lamentation: O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

Four score and seven years ago ou fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final restingplace for those who gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow-this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. work which they who fought here have But I cannot refrain from tendering to thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather ordered the carriers to stop. Then these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotionthat we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain-that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom-and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth. November 19, 1863.

GARBLED TEXTS.

It was a small country Sunday School, and at roll call every separate and individual member was charitably supposed to have provided himself, or herself, by arduous labors, with an illuminating verse from the Bible for the edification of the attendant roomful. Bobby, the minister's son, was notoriously deficient in this respect, and relied trustingly on the benefactions of his sister.

"Sister," he whispered, as inexorable fate approached him-"sister, tell me a cells, imparts life and tone to the entire verse." But his sister only shook her head. Time pressed; Bobby returned to the attack.

"But you must tell me one. Papa'll be to me in a minute, and what'll I do? Please tell me one."

But the springs of sisterly charity had gone dry. "Every tub must stand on its own bottom," she said.

The minister had reached Bobby's name. Bobby's face wore its accustomed smile. Bobby was indiscriminating. It cannot be said that this Biblical lore was in any wise profound. It sounded right enough to him. He rose in his place. "Every tub must stand on its own bottom," he said.

And thereafter, it is recorded, Bobby stood up longer than had been his wont -and it cannot be said that he did it joyfully.-The Circle for February.

"LINCOLNICS."

I say that no man is good enough to govern another man without that other man's consent. I say this is the leading principle, the sheet-anchor of American Republicanism.

Let us have faith that right makes might; and in that faith let us, to the end, dare to do our duty as we under-

When divine or human law does not clearly point out what is our duty, we have no means of finding out what it is but using our most intelligent judgment of the consequences.

Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong.

I hold it a sound maxim that it is better only sometime to be right, than at all times to be wrong.

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the

Every man is said to have his peculiar ambition. Whether that be true or not. I can say, for one, that I have no other so great as that of being truly esteemed of my fellow men, by rendering myself worthy of their esteem.

After listening one day for some time to a client's statement of his case, Lincoln, who had been staring at the ceiling, suddenly swung round in his chair, and said:

"Well, you have a pretty good case in technical law, but a pretty bad one in equity and justice. You'll have to get some other fellow to win this case for vou. I couldn't do it. All the time, while talking to that jury, I'd be thinking: 'Lincoln, you're a liar,' and I believe I should forget myself and say it out loud.'

When I think I am in the right, I am mighty hard to shake off.

I know the Lord is always on the side of right, but God is my witness that it is my constant anxiety that both myself and this nation should be on the Lord's

One day, during the war, when Lincoln vas with the troops who were fighting at the front, the wounded, both union and confederate, began to pour in.

As one stretcher was passing him, Lincoln heard the voice of a lad calling to his mother in agonizing tones. Lincoln's great heart filled at once. Forgetting the crisis of the moment, he soldier, he asked: "What can I do for you, my boy?"

"Oh, you will do nothing for me," the lad replied, "you are a Yankee. I can't ram's head." hope that my message will ever reach my mother."

Lincoln, in tears, his voice full of tenderest love, convinced the young soldier of his sincerity and the lad gave his good-by words without reserve. Lincoln ordered them copied, and directed that they be sent that night, with a flag of truce, into the enemy's lines. This was done, and through the magnanimity and humanity of the great President the hearts of a son and a mother were made glad.

Why Sunday-Schools Succeed.

Investigation directed toward the discovery of reasons "Why One Hundred Sunday-Schools Have Succeeded" has brought out reports on many interesting methods of insuring growth and progress. The February Delineator contains, among other recipes for success, one from Plymouth Congregational Church, Denver, Col., which lays stress on the cradle roll. Sixty-five new babies were enrolled in three months, and the beginners' department increased so that it was necessary to enlarge the room. Each Sunday, primary children give names of new babies to be called upon by the cradle-roll superintendent. Receptions are held for mothers. Athletics are an aid in attracting boys to the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, Salt Lake City, Utah, and the enthusiasm of instructors builds up the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, Topeka, Kan. At the Delaware Avenue Baptist Bible School, Buffalo, N. Y., the superintendent is "Uncle

ANCIENT SURVEYORS.

Their Methods Depicted on the Old Tombs of Egypt.

In an address delivered before the Royal Geographical society Captain H. G. Lyons, director general of the survey department of Egypt, told of the work of ancient Egyptian surveyors. "At every period of ancient Egyptian history," he said, "the land was measured and recorded with considerable accuracy. Property was dealt in regularly, and an elaborate system of registration was maintained. No map of landed property in ancient Egypt has come down to us, but on the tomb walls we meet with representations of land measurers at work. Their methods of land measarement are represented on the walls of the tomb of one Menna at Sheik Abd el Qurna, in Thebes, a land overseer and inspector of the boundary stones of Amon.

"In the scene depicted are shown two chainmen measuring a field of corn with a long cord, on which are knots or marks at intervals which seem to be about four or five cubits in length. Each also carries a spare cord coiled upon his arm. Beside them walk three officials, who carry writ ing materials and who are accompa nied by a small boy carrying writing materials and a bag in which are probably documents and plans referring to the property. An old man and two boys also accompany the survey ors, and a peasant brings a loaf of bread and a bunch of green corn.

'A similar scene is pictured on the walls of a tomb belonging to a certain Amenhotep, also at Sheik Abd el Qurna. Here only one man accompanies the chainmen, each of whom, as usual, carries a spare cord. The figures are larger than in the tomb of Menna, and, though they are now much damaged, it is possible to see clearly that the cord terminated in a

A MAN OF ACTION.

He Got Out of His Tight Corner With Flying Colors.

He was a husband who, when he left home for a week or so on a business trip, invariably took with him a photo C. & P. 'Phone. of his wife, and in the letters that he wrote to her he always made a great point of this portrait and dwelt upon the fact that the sight of it was the only thing that kept his spirits up when he was far away from her.

One day, however, he left the home and forgot to take the portrait with him. But he was not going to let a little thing like that worry him.

Down he sat and penned his customary amcrous epistle, in which the portrait played its usual part. It was not until the letter was posted that he remembered that the portrait had been left at home in a conspicuous place where his wife could not fail to dis-

The fat was indeed in the fire, but he was a man of action and determined to get out of his tight corner somehow. He remembered the shop where the photo had been taken and promptly wired there for another copy, which he had put into a beautiful frame especially adapted for traveling.

On his return home his wife "handed out the freezing mixture" to begin with and then dissolved in unquenchable tears. When under cross examination she admitted that the cause of her grief was his cruel deception, he produced the newly acquired photo and then asked her, in a hurt voice, how she could possibly have suspected him of working off mere tarradiddle on his little wife.-New York Mail.

The Eternal Feminine. A photographer was called upon not long ago to make some pictures of an old lady of seventy years or so, but of surprising agility and quickness of perception. The picture man was there fore somewhat surprised to find that no words of address could induce the old lady to speak until after the oper: tion was completed. Then she put her fingers into her mouth, whence she withdrew several wads of paper.

'You wouldn't have me photograph ed with my cheeks falling in, would you?" she asked the photographer. "I just stuffed some paper in my mouth to fill out."-Harper's Weekly.

Lesson VIII .- First Quarter, For Feb. 21, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts vi, 8-15; vii, 54, to viii, 3-Memory Verses vii, 55, 56-Golden Text, Acts vii, 59-Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

We have in this book of the Acts the distory of the beginning of the church, the body of Christ, gathered from lews and gentiles by the Spirit through the apostles and others who Were used as well as the apostles, such As Stephen and Philip, men who were thosen and set apart to oversee the ministration of funds to the poor, but who, being filled with the Holy Spirit, Were used mightily in preaching the Word. Our Lord Jesus said concernng His church, "The gates (wisdom, Wer) of hell shall not prevail against (Matt. xvi, 18), but He did not say lat hell would not fight against it, out just the contrary. So He instructd the prophets centuries before (Jer. 19; Ezek. ii, 6). There are always nemies without, but sometimes the trouble gets within the church, as in de case of Ananias and Sapphira. ow it is a case or many cases of dissatisfaction on the part of some being ministered to from the common fund. The twelve therefore called the disclples together and appointed seven men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom to see to these matters, Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Chost being what we would call chairman of the committee. The apostles gave themselves to the word and prayer, and the disciples multiplied greatly, and many of the priests followed. So, whether it was prayer and preaching Or serving tables, the Spirit wrought and God glorified in them. We must be Spirit filled for every kind of service, even the lowliest, if we would truly serve the Lord. Happy tre those who can look up into His face and say, "For any manner of service wholly at Thy commandment" (I Chron. xxviii, 21). To accept meekly and cheerfully whatever He appoints us and hear it or do it "unto the Lord" and "before the Lord" is all He asks of us and to continue therein till He alls to something else. Stephen, havng accepted the lowly and difficult service, is soon found working miracles and so speaking that those who heard were unable to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake. Such manifestation of the power of the risen Christ so stirs the adversary that Stephen is arrested and brought before the council, and false witnesses ay to his charge things that he was wholly innocent of. While he was being thus treated like His Lord the Lord must have been smiling upon him, for the reflection was seen in his tace, which seemed to the council like the face of an angel.

Being permitted to speak for himself, he rehearsed the national history from braham, through Isaac, Jacob, Jo-Seph, Moses, and on to David and Soloaon and the temple, and then to the mmortal Son of David, the true temple. He enlarged upon the ill treatment of Joseph by his brethren and of Moses by the people whom he was Sent to deliver and then accused them their face of being the murderers of Jesus, as their fathers had been of the prophets. Those to whom Peter preached were pricked in their hearts and asked what they should do, and thousands repented and received Jesus as their Saviour and Lord (ii, 36, 37). but these were cut to the heart and snashed their teeth, stopped their ears, Cast Stephen out and stoned him to Spirit filled Peter got 3,000 Souls, but Spirit filled Stephen got stones enough to kill him, and in each ase God was glorified. Although the young man at whose feet the withesses who stoned Stephen laid down their clothes continued his murderous Career a little longer, perhaps when we have clearer light on the connection between Stephen's death and Saul's Onversion we may see that Stephen, rough Saul, won more souls than Peter. The ways of the Lord are ofen to us a great deep, but we are sure that "as for God His way is perfect" xviii, 30). Spirit filled Stephen ooked up steadfastly into heaven and the glory of God and Jesus and has able to pray for his murderers, ford, lay not this sin to their charge. We look up into heaven as he did and see Jesus there for us, we will not see our persecutors nor feel much the Stones that are thrown at us. We may 80 8ee Jesus and hear His voice that be shall be blind and deaf to all else. This seventh chapter may be said to begin and end with "the God of glory"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 21, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.
Topic.—"Prigrim's Progress' series.—II.
The Slough of Despond.—Ps. lxix, 1-4, 13-18; xl, 1-3.

In leaving the City of Destruction Christian was directed by Evangelist as to what to do, and he started on his march to the wicket gate. On the way he met two men, one Obstinate and the other Pliable. He told them his purpose and urged them to accompany him. Obstinate, as his name indicates, refused, but Pliable, as also indicated by his name, was easily persuaded to journey with him toward the kingdom where they were to have everlasting life, wear crowns of glory and garments of splendor, all was to be pleasant and free from evil and where they would associate with heavenly creatures.

Conversing about these things as they walked, "they drew nigh to a very miry slough that was in the midst of the plain, and they, being heedless, did both fall suddenly into the bog. The name of the slough was Despond.

The Slough of Despond represents the discouragement and fears of those just starting upon the Christian life. They start with buoyancy, perhaps thinking that they are to be "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease." But they soon learn their mistakes. All temptations come back. The way is sometimes rough and hard, and they become despondent. Instead of rejoicing they feel, as the psalmist expresses it, that they are in a mire of clay, that they are vile and loathsome, and, like Christian, they seem to sink deeper and deeper into the mire of the slough. And happy are those who if they get into such a condition rise above it by the grace and help of God. But He is able to help us, and in the deepest hours of despondency we should trust Him, for He is thereabout to raise us up into the clear light of firm faith, as "the darkest hour is just before the dawn."

Pliable in the Slough of Despond became offended and angry He railed at Christian, saying: "Is this the happiness you have told me of all the while? If we have such ill speed at our first setting out, what may we expect between this and our journey's end? May I get out again with my life you shall possess the whole country alone for me." Then he made a desperate struggle and got out of the mire next to his own home, toward which he went, and Christian saw him no more. The picture of Pliable is a familiar one. How many start toward the heavenly city and soon become discouraged and turn back! But this is against divine teaching and typifies a weak character. Christ has said, "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God."

Christian after the departure of Pliable was left to struggle alone in the slough. But he did not become discouraged. The burden upon his shoulder made the struggle difficult, but he kept on, striving to reach the bank nearest the wicket gate. At last he reached it, but could not ascend because of the burden upon his back. Then appeared one named Help, who took him by the hand "and drew him out and set him upon the sound ground and let him go on his way." But before his departure Help explained to him that the slough could not be filled up because after conversion sinners still had fears and doubts and must pass through these that their faith might become firm and strong. Christian's attitude toward the Slough of Despond is the proper one and should be an example to all Christians. We should struggle on and pray on, and Help will come. "God is our refuge and strength, a present help in all time of trouble." 'I waited patiently for the Lord," says the psalmist, "and He inclined unto me and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of the horrible pit and the miry clay and set my feet upon a rock and established my go-

Correcting the Records.

Two years ago the Christian Endeavor societies in Congregational churches gained several thousand members, according to the year book statistics, and we looked in vain for any reference to this cheering fact. Last year, according to the same authority, the societies lost several thousand members, and one religious paper referred to it five times, and others have copied it with evident satisfaction. Our friends may be interested to know that the alleged loss was due to the correction of a mistake in the previous year's report and to a further mistake in this year's list by which a loss of forty was made into a loss of 204. Last year the net increase in societies of Christian Endeavor was 1,266, with nearly 50,000 members. During the summer months, when church work is almost at a standstill, over 200 new societies were organized.

Changing The Day

By Raymond Campbell

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Alphonse set the coffeepot close to Sheldon's hand and retired to the bar, there to indulge in a glass of beer. The dinner rush was over, and he was certain that no one would come now until after the theaters let out.

Meanwhile the two young people at the table would surely chat for half an hour or so, which time Alphonse might spend with profit in discussing with the fat bartender certain nice points in the mixing of cocktails.

Meanwhile his two patrons sipped their coffee, and Sheldon lit the cigar that Alphonse had brought. When he dined alone the cigar came from the corner box on the five cent end, but when the young lady came Alphonse always brought a perfecto from the box in the ice chest with an elaborately casual "The usual, monsieur."

This was intended to impress the guest with the belief that Sheldon habitually smoked fat perfectos with red and gold sashes. Tonight Alphonse's elaborate politeness was ignored by the usually genial Sheldon.

"Now for the news," he began as the waiter headed for the bar. "I couldn't wait for Saturday to tell you, though It is only two days off."

"Isn't it funny that we always fall back on Saturday night?" commented Bess. "I don't know when we have been out to dinner in the middle of the week.

"Never, I guess," agreed Sheldon. "You see, Saturday is a sort of holiday. I get my salary, and you get your check from the publishers, and we're both happy and content, even if not in agreement. "We would be in agreement if you would only stop considering a proposal as an essential feature of the Saturday celebration," reminded Bess, with a show of severity. "You must go and spoil it all by proposing, Fred, when I've told you long ago that to marry would spoil my career. I am making a little name for myself in the art world, and I can't keep house and paint too.'

"And I've told you," retorted Fred, "that I would not stop asking you to marry me until you said 'Yes.' I guess I've proposed to you sixty times in the last sixty weeks, Bess, and I'm good for sixty times sixty if I have to hold out that long."

"Did you ask me out to dinner to propose to me?" demanded Bess.

"Not primarily," he admitted. "What I wanted to tell you was that my big chance has come at last. Benny Groll has made a good contract, and he needs a man to put a little money and a lot of time into the business. I have more experience than money, but Ben wants me, and he'll give me a half interest if I'll come in. It's what I've been working and waiting for ever since I came to town, Bess, and this is to celebrate my good luck."

A slender hand was stretched across the table and grasped his own.

"Dear boy, I am so glad," she said sincerely. "You have worked hard, and you are entitled to your reward." "Which is why I am going to ask for it," retorted Sheldon. "I am going to break my usual custom and propose on Thursday instead of Saturday, Bess. I want you to work for. dear. It will be pretty hard camping out with the construction gang and working on the job with the field corps. I want to come back to camp every night and feel that I have done another good day's work for you."

"Work, like virtue, should be its own reward," paraphrased Bess. Sheldon shook his head impatiently. "I know all that," he said, "but that sounds better than it works out. want to feel that when the job is done and Groll & Sheldon become a firm of importance Mrs. Sheldon is proud of what her husband has done.' "I shall always be proud of what you do, Fred." reminded Bess. "We two are the only ones from the old town in all this big city. We have always been chums, and of course I shall be proud of your great achieve-

"That's not what I want," said Fred impatiently. "Of course I am going after this chance, no matter what, and I'll work as hard without your prom-ness to the labor, Bess, if you tell me that I may work for you.

"Won't you take a career by proxy. dear? Do you want to work to the end of your days and live the loveless life? Aren't there times when you want to give it all up and just stop worrying about checks that the publishers do not send and canvases that don't sell, though you know that they are as good as some that bring big money? Don't you tire of your career sometimes, and don't you feel as though it would be nice to let some one else do the worrying?"

"And if I do?" she asked, with an odd little note in her voice.

"Then let me carry the burden," he pleaded. "Let me do the planning for you. In six months from now I shall be at the top of the heap and making money, but you can make those six months of toil very pleasant, dear, if you will only listen to your heart-and "I have listened to you," she reminded, with a light laugh. "Why, Freddy. there has not been a Saturday night in more than a year that you have not urged me to marry you. I'd like to. dear, but there is my career."

"Does it all pay?" he demanded. "Is it worth all the worry and the contriving?

"Perhaps," she said uncertainly, and Sheldon pressed the advantage.

"Wouldn't it be nice if you didn't have to scrimp and scrape and plan the spending of every penny?" he demanded. "Wouldn't it be nice to have a real home instead of a three room flat, to eat regular meals instead of chafing dish messes and to-well, to have me across the table every night instead of just Saturdays? It would be our own table, too," he reminded. "and not a table d'hote."

"Perhaps." It was spoken so low that Sheldon had to lean across the table to catch the whispered word. But he did catch it, and his face beamed satisfaction "And you will marry me?" he cried delightedly. This time he did not hear, but he knew that the coveted answer had been spoken, and he caught the hand that toyed nervously with the cup.

He spoke no word, for none was needed. Their eyes told each other messages that never have been put into words, spoke a language that only lovers know-and Sheldon was con

"I was only taking chances," he explained, with a happy laugh. "I thought it out last night when I-was almost certain that Benny would put the deal through. I figured that you always felt as I did when you had money in your pocketbook on Saturdays-and that you'd feel as I do two days before pay day. It was worth taking a chance by changing the day.'

Bess patted his arm affectionately. "I wish you had found that out before," she whispered. "It is only from Saturday to Tuesday that I cared about a career."

Cards and Their History.

Cards are square shaped pieces of pasteboard printed with various devices and employed as a business medium by money changers. They are usually made up in packs of fifty-two. one for each week of the year. A good many people play cards for pleasure, in which case their opponents are said to be buying experience. In most card games the rule is that the cards may be cut, but not otherwise marked. This rule is not strictly observed in games in which only three cards are used. Indeed, the marking of cards has attained a high degree of perfection since the introduction of numerous card index systems. Fashions change in card games as in everything else. Old maid, for instance, is nowadays seldom played in the best clubs. Playing cards should not be confused with those sold on cricket grounds, which are rather larger, or with visiting cards, which are smaller.-Fry's Maga-

This should be a year of solid progress for Taneytown. There is no indication of "hard times" for anybody, values in property are on a fair basis, and everybody has work. The light plant will not only make business but benefit properties, and in addition will give the town a new advantage to offer as a permanent place of residence to those who are undecided about locating. There is no reason why building should not go on, nor why extensive improvements should not be made, as the town is bound to go forward, and not backward.

In November last the cough again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was, indeed, marvelous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared and has not manifested itself since." This remedy is for sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

As Rural Life Should Be.

President Roosevelt gets down into the furrow in his message to Congress trans-mitting the report of the Country Life Commission. Here he is evidently happy and his views on the improvement of country conditions are least likely to arouse a controversy. The President has absolute confidence in the American farm and the American farmer, including the farmer's wife. He complains that the farmer does not magnify his calling more general and wider associations among the representatives of grange interests. He points out that the process of organization in other industrial and economic callings has been carried to a far point, and exhorts the agriculturalist to emulate the co-operative system found in European countries.

The social side of country life, Mr. Roosevelt remarks, call for the develop-ment of social interests among country residents and in this connection he points to the sections of the report that lay emphasis on churches, schools and roads. He advocates extension of the Young Men's Christian Association work in rural communities. He evidently has in mind the three-fold aspects of man, the physical, the social and the religious, and he is satisfied that by the development of these co-ordinately the material interests of the farmer would be advancel. He emphasizes the position taken by the report that the government, whether state or national, can only show the people how they may go about the tasks of organization and communica-tion, with the best and quickest results. The improvement of the system of agriculture is held to be the most important task to which the sentiment of rural communities can address itself. So he holds up the ideals of good farming by good farmers. He adds a warning to the effect that the great recent progress made by the cities is not the full measure of American civilization, which rests on the wholesomeness and attractiveness of life in the country. Mr. Roosevelt might have pointed to the return to the land, found in the recultivation of abandoned farms in New England, as evidence of a growing perception of the elements of superiority in the farm life over the conditions under which many farmers' sons have to work in cities.

The competition between city and country must be determined in the issue by the ability of the farmer to enter into the general channel of the country's development. So many questions are arising that border closely upon the farmer's vital interests; questions of wastage, of forestry, of transportation, of reclama-tion of inundated areas, of water front city residents. There can be no doubt but that such factors are gradually revolutionizing the conditions under which the farmer will carry on his vocation in the future.—Balt. American.

Throat Troubles Weaken the System. A serious illness is often brought on by a neglected sore throat.

All throat troubles invariably weaken go unchecked.

A gargle made with twelve drops of Sloan's Liniment in half a glass of water will break up a sore throat. Sloan's Liniment is an excellent remedy for tonsilitis, croup, asthma and bron-chitis. Applied freely to the outside of the throat and chest, it draws out the inflammation, reduces the swelling and relieves any soreness. Twelve drops of this Liniment in half a glass of water makes a splendid antiseptic gargle.

Mr. Albert W. Price, of Fredonia,
Kans., writes:—"We have used Sloan's Liniment in the family for about a year, and find it an excellent relief for colds and hay fever attacks. Two drops of the Liniment in a teaspoonful of water will stop coughing and sneezing instant-

it was getting worse Anti-Jap Legislation Defeated.

The anti-Japanese bill before the California legislature, which has been giving the National administration so much concern, was defeated, on Wednesday, by reconsidering its former vote and finally rejecting the measure by a vote

The fight for the suppression of the bill was won only after many hours of heated debate on the floor. The struggle started at 10.30 a.m. on the presentation of a resolution by Assemblyman J. P Transue, of Los Angeles, affirming the right of the State to govern its schools, but withdrawing the Japanese segrega-tion measure because of the President's objection to it, and lasted until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when Grove L. Johnson's motion further to reconsider his defeated school segregation bill was de-

The school bill is still to be considered in the Senate, as it has been presented there by Senator A Caminetti, but there is little chance that the measure will be approved when brought up.

"I am highly pleased with the action of the Assembly to-day," said Governor Gillett. "The East has been deeply concerned in the measures pending here, and I feared that if the anti-Japanese would have a disastrous effect.

A New Lincoln Story.

What is believed to be a new story of President Lincoln is told by Ex-Vice President, Adlai E. Stevenson, in the Woman's World (October, 1908.) It runs Several months before Lincoln issued the great Proclamation of Emancipation which gave freedom to the whole race of negro slaves in America, my friend, Senator Henderson of Missouri, came to the White House one day and found Mr. Lincoln in a mood of deepest depression. Finally the great President said to his caller and friend that the most constant and acute pressure was being brought upon him by the leaders of the radical ement of his party to free the slaves.

"Sumner and Stevens and Wilson simply haunt me," declared Mr. Lincoln, "with their importunities for a procla-mation of emancipation. Wherever I go and whatever way I turn, they are on my trail. And still, in my heart, I have the deep conviction that the hour has not

Just as he said this, he walked to the window looking out upon Pennsylvania Avenue and stood there in silence, his tall figure silhouetted against the light of the window pane, every line of it and of his gracious face expressive of unutterable sadness. Suddenly his lips began to twitch with a smile, and his somber eyes lighted with a twinkle something like

"The only schooling I ever had, Henderson," he remarked, "was in a log schoolhouse when reading-books and grammars were unknown. All our reading was done from the Scriptures, and we stood up in a long line and read in turn from the Bible. Our lesson one day was the story of the faithful Israelites who were thrown into the fiery furnace and delivered by the hand of the Lord without so much as the smell of fire upon their garments. It fell to one little fellow to read the verse in which occurred, for the first time in the chapter, the names of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Little Bud stumbled on Shadrach, floundered on Meshach, and went all to pieces on Abednego. Instantly the hand of the master dealt him a cuff on the side of the head and left him wailing and blubbering as the next boy in line took up the reading. But, before the girl at the end of the line had done reading, he had subsided into sniffles and finally became quiet. His blunder and disgrace were forgotten by the others of the class until his turn was approaching to read again. Then, like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky, he set up a wail which even alarmed the master, who with rather unusual gentleness inquired:

'What's the matter, now?' "Pointing with a shaking finger at the verse which a few moments later would fall to him to read, Bud managed to quaver out the answer:

'Look there, marster,-there comes them same dam three fellers again.' "
Then his whole face lighted with such smile as only Lincoln could give, and he beckoned Senator Henderson to his side, silently pointing his long bony finger to three men who were at that moment cross-ng Pennsylvania Avenue toward the door of the White House. They were Sumner, Wilson and Thaddeus Stevens.
