The long talked of, but never acted on, change in the date of inauguration day, will likely be made at the next session of Congress. General sentiment favors the change, and it will likely be made to May 1.

It has just been made public that the expenses in connection with the last illness and burial of President McKinley, amounted to $42,518. Of this amount, $30,800 was paid to physicians, $2,385.15 to undertakers, and the remainder for hurses and miscellaneous expenses.

There are at least 200,000 idle men and women in New York City, who want work. Many of these are farm laborers who have drifted to the city only to be disappointed in getting work there. The situation is serious, and has resulted in many men deserting wives and children.

Only Good Pikes Needed.

The building of $10,000 a mile highly surfaced roads, by the state, would be a great mistake and one not countenanced by tax-payers. A good substantial pike, costing half as much, would be much better and more durable for all purposes. The people do not want automobile Two more counties in Indiana voted dry, last week. Out of thirty-one counties that have voted under the local sound stone roads with a good enough Option law, but one voted to license the surface for heavy hauling and ordinary

The Engineering Record, an authority on questions of this sort, says that it is folly to build roads at a cost of $10,000 a mile if they are to be used much by automobiles. The Massachusetts Highway Commission, which has probably paid as much attention to good road building as any other body in this country, corrob-orates the Record. A member of this Commission points to a road that was resurfaced in the spring at a cost of $5000 a mile, and which was cut to pieces by automobiles by fall. The Record further points out that we are just beginning the use of the automobile. It says the shop cost of an automobile capable of going forty miles an hour while carrying five people is $750. In a few years good second-hand automobiles will be sold, it thinks, for a few hundred dollars. This is the situation which it argues the road-builders must meet.
The idea that the Meadow Branch pike, for instance, is not good enough for a state road, does not meet the views of tax-payers. This road is amply good for all purposes, except perhaps for auto use, especially if it was widened to about 30 feet. Only tourists and pleasure seekers of various kinds want state roads equal to city park drives, and present. these are not the people who pay the bulk of the taxes with which to keep the roads in repair after they are once built. Moreover, there would be no better way to kill future appropriations for road building than by building roads too fine for wear with the first $5,000,000. There ought to be no plans so scientific adopted which contemplate a better road than a good 30 foot pike, properly graded and

When we laid you, my dear husband in the cemetery far away,
Lone is the house and sad are the hours,
since my dear husband is gone;
But oh, a brighter home than ours
In heaven is now his own.

By his Wife,

We have lost our darling father, He has bid as all adieu, He has gone to live in Heaven, And his person is lost to view. On that dear one, how we loved him, Oh how hard to give him up; But an angel came down for him, And removed him from our flock.

It is sad that one we cherish Should be taken from our home, But the joys that do not perish Live in memory alone. All the years we've spent together All the happy golden hours, Shall we cherish in remembrance Fragrant sweets from mem'rys flowers.

Farewell dear father, sweet thy rest;
Weary with fears and worn with pain;
Farewell till in some happy place
We shall behold thy face again.
Tis ours to miss thee, all our fears
And tender memories of thee keep;
Thine in the Lord to rest, for so,
He giveth His beloved sleep.

Peaceful in thy grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our song will know.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
And in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed."

Safe from templation, safe from sins pollution
She lives, whom we call dead.

ROADS NOT SELECTED YET.

The State Commission to Make a Personal Inspection of Certain Roads.

The State Road Commission at its meeting, on Thursday, did not adopt, as permanent, any of the tentative routes in Carroll or any of the counties. The Commission has announced that it will make a journey of inspection over them, in order to detetermine their respective merits, as well as try to arrive at the truth concerning statements made by rival claimants.

These investigations will begin, next week, through the use of automobiles, and at the next meeting of the Commit-tee the various roads are likely to be finally selected. It is distinctly noticable that county political leaders are fighting shy of the road question—at least as far as public influence is concerned-and they are apparently not taking sides for fear of making enemies; besides, they realize that there will be trouble enough, anyway, in the disappointed sections, and they mean to try to let the State Com-mission shoulder the blame. Those who have been appearing before the Com-mission are largely business men and farmers, seldom seen at political func-

For Good Nominations.

(For the RECORD.) editorial of last week, that I wish to give expression to sentiments now felt in both parties which have too long been withheld. The independent voters now feel compelled, as never before, to assert themselves. The times demand better men for office—this is common talk, the politicians are not filling the offices to the satisfaction of the voters, but party spirit has been too strong for men to see the defects before. The past history of primary elections and county conventions has relegated the best and most decent men, and the result is "graft" and unfaithfulness in many offices. The voters now know this, and the reasons for it, hence their objections to politicious and their tools. objections to politicians and their tools getting the nominations. It is an outrage on the better element. Everybody knows how the primaries are run. The few who want office, regardless of their fitness, go through the district and urge certain men whom they can control to come to the primary. They do not go to men who think for them-selves and urge them to come. Oh, no! They do not want them, nor want them on the Central Committee. They have agreed among themselves as to the distribution of places—they have no places for good men. They distribute to their dupes "right" tickets, and others who attend the meeting, on finding it "fixed" or away in disgret and refuse to attend go away in disgust and refuse to attend afterwards.

Many self-constituted leaders stand around the polls on election day almost as though the vote would not be out unless they were there, but in reality their influence amounts to little except for the money they spend and the whiskey they supply. They have no weight with our best men, nor would they dare approach them relative to their personal business

As we have a general county election this Fall, it is up to our representative citizens to take notice and break up former practices. If the delegates nominated for the legislature are not our best men in the Democratic and Republican parties, it will be the duty of voters to take the best men from each and make one ticket. Let us see to it that we act for the good of the state in this matter.

Then, there is the liquor interest. We know that it is an octopus that the peo-ple have a right to settle with, by voting for or against; therefore, the men sent this Fall should be those uncontrolled by any class, or interest, save for the public good. Let the people assert them-selves by proclaiming their independence of party, but advocates of good men regardless of party, and no question there will be better men nominated than here, tofore. Let us boldly say we will not vote the ticket if it contains the names of unscrupulous politicians or unworthy nounces the inactivity of the owners in not properly fighting the scale and other fruit tree pests. He says, in part:

"It is a pitiful sight to see the fruit trees of Frederick County dying by the thousands through wilful neglect when dollars a bushel, and if you recall the peach market of last summer, they sold for from one to four dollars a bushel. Other fruits found a ready market, and with all this, many of our farmers sit idly and mourn the loss of the trees killed by the San Jose scale, without doing anything to prevent their injury. Farmers, for the sake of right, which you owe yourself and family, awaken from the stupor, open your eyes and investigate your losses.

You frequently have heard the Bible quotation used, "Am, I my brother's keeper?" How many of you are keep-hot-bed or breeding place for scale.

How many have wilfully neglected orchards by the side of your neighbor, who has tried to prevent the destruction of his trees by syraying?

Let me tell you people, the law of right to your fellow-man, and the laws of the State of Maryland, demand the spraying of hedge fences and infected fruit trees, and all law-abiding citizens, from a principle of right, abide by the Laws, both common and divine.

Our State has spent quite a little sum of money in experimenting with different solutions, and believe the lime and sulphur solution to be a remedy to control the San Jose scale. Washington County is getting this solution by the carload Are we going to continue to let our fruit trees go and die?

You can write the State Horticultural Department and get a free book on how to treat your trees. Let me insist on the good farmers, for the sake of the good wife, to spray your trees. Have some fruit for the children, both in the city and county. Every boy likes an apple, every girl can eat a peach. Now let me say, "Love your neighbor as yourself,' spray the hedge, and look at the fruit trees and think."

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

was so much in accord with your The Problem is, How to lower Duties, and Still Raise More Revenue.

Washington, March 8.—The tariff bill has been completed. That is to say, the first draft of it has been finished and the Ways and Means Committee is now engaged in going over its work and perfectng the same.

While figures on the various schedules are hard to get in detail it is known that the general policy of the bill is not to open the doors to foreign imports. On some articles where the Dingley tariff was manifestly too high, in some cases was manifestly too high, in some cases being entirely prohibitive, the duty has been lowered but in the main the principle of protection to American industries has been followed with fidelity.

At the same time the committee has had a consistent eye upon the necessity for more revenue, and it is believed the bill if adopted as the House reports it will add somewhere between $60,000,000 and $75,000,000 per annum to the income of the Government over that afforded by the Dingley law.

The most radical innovation, according to the general understanding of the bill, as rumors of it have crept out of the committee, comes in the imposition of a tariff of possibly as high as 4 cents per pound on coffee. At least it is said the committe hopes to raise $40,000,000 from this source, and to do that the present rate of importation of coffee would figure about 4 cents.

A tariff on tea is also said to be among the proposals agreed to, by which some-thing like five or six million may be raised. Another proposition on which it is expected to raise possibly $5,000,000 a year is the Federal liquor license. This for many years had been $25 a year. The bill, it is believed, will make this $50. Cigarettes will add something like $7,000,000 to the revenues.

The much talked of reduction on steel and iron will probably bear fruit in a reduction on steel rails and structural steel of 50 per cent., but pig iron will probably not be lowered materially. as the duty on that has never been prohibitive. Lumber will stand at $1 per thousand, it is thought, although there are members of the control of the standard of the s bers of the committee who would like to reduce it to nothing.

The wool schedule will suffer no change except in the case of carpet wools and shoddies, neither of which are produced in this country. In these therefore a reduction has been made.

It having become manifest to the committee that the duties derived from customs under the new bill would not produce the revenue expected, they turned to the expedient of reviving the war revenue act of 1898, which placed a tax on telegrams, bank checks, playing cards, and all stocks bought or sold. That feature of the war revenue act is incorporated in the measure as drafted, it is will be a solution of the state of the st

Mr. Chas. E. Klein, State inspector and State Forest warden, has an article in last week's Frederick News, in which he calls particular attention to injury to Producte County cochards and described will yield to the President's committee will yield to the President's

President Taft is seeking to have a copy of the bill delivered to the Senate Committee on Finance before the special session begins in order that they may begin work on it at once, believing that much time will be saved thus and that apples are selling at from one to two the extra session will be materially curtailed.

Although no announcement has been made by the House Committee on Ways and Means regarding any of the schedules of the tentative bill, it has been learned on unquestionable authority that as a concession to the shoe men because of the placing of hides on the free list, the duty on shoes will be considerably re-

Whisky and beer will remain as they are at present, if the sub committee recommendations are enacted into law. It has felt that whiskey was already carrying all the tax it could stand, while ing an Osage Orange hedge, with limbs in the case of beer the prohibition move-probably 15 feet, literally covered with San Jose scale? This fence acts as a plained, had cut down the consumption of beer, and it was felt that it would be a hardship to impose any further tax.

The committee, it is easy to perceive, has been greatly worried over the state of the revenues of the country, and it is stated by men the best acquainted with the finances of the country that nobody need be surprised if a bond issue Sunday, and on their way home will say, "Didn't the preacher hit those fellows session of Congress. This would indiright and left?" but never think any of ready cash today than most people have supposed because if the special session provides for a bond issue it will mean that the issue will be made during the present year.

Senator Beasman on Appropriations.

State Senator Johnzie Beasman, of Carroll county, who is a member of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate and is the chairman of the Governor's Commission on General Appropriations, believes that much money might be saved the state and much fuller knowledge of state expenditures made possible by the elimination of special appropriation bills for state institutions.

"Under the system which has been in vogue in the past," said the Senator "many of our institutions have received sums of money from the treasury in the General Appropriation Bill, and then have applied for and received additional by special legislation, I do not think this system a good one.

"By making two appropriations for the same institution, but in different ways, the people are confused and even the members of both bodies do not always know how much money is being spent for this asylum or that. All this money should be included in one bill. Then all the institutions would know what the other receives and the people would be better able to tell.

"It may be that my commission will suggest something better along this line to the Governor when we have had another meeting. I don't know when this will be, but it will not be very long. There are several other matters of appropriation which we will consider, too, and counsel the Governor on. I think there are many opportunities for economy."

Death of Mrs. Harry C. Myers.

Clipped from a Canton, Ill., paper, "Mary V. ## State Dairymen's Association.

The next meeting of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association which will be held in Donovan Room, McCoy Hall, Johns Hopkins University, Monument Street, Baltimore, on Wednesday next, March 17th., promises to be largely attended by farmers, dairymen and others interested from all parts of the State. There will be two sessions, a morning session commencing at 11 o'clock, at which the Constitution and By-Laws will be presented for adoption, and after which business, short addresses and dis-cussion of dairy subjects will follow. The afternoon session, beginning at 2.30 o'clock, will be given up to addresses by prominent speakers from a distance. by C. B. Lane, from the Dairy Division of the U. S. Agricultural Department of Washington, D. C. Among these will be an illustrated lecture

Mr. Lane who has charge of the Market Milk investigations for the government, is well known as an investigator and the author of many up-to-date government publications and contributions on dairy practice in current literature. His illustrated lecture on "The Milk Question" will present all the latest knowledge on good milk production. The Association is particularly fortunate in being able to secure such a thoroughly posted man to place before it the results of the government investigations.
Mr. H. E. Cook, a well known dairyman of Denmark, New York, will also deliver an address, and Mr. A. R. Eastman, of Waterville, New York, former President of the New York State Dairymen's Association, has been invited. Prof. C. W. Melick of the Agricultural Experiment Station will deliver an address on "The Importance of Suitable State Dairy Laws," after which a general discussion and suggestions from members will follow.

The State Dairymen's Association was organized in December last by the election of the following officers: President, S. M. Shoemaker; Vice-President, A. W. Nicodemus, Jr.; Secretary, J. #### President on Negro Suffrage.

That portion of President Taft's inaugural address relating to Negro suffrage, and to the right of states to impose honest educational qualifications, must meet with the indorsement of honest men, generally. It indorses the southern states in adopting qualifications to restrict suffrage to the intelligent, but throughout he makes it clear that such qualifications should honestly apply to

Especially in view of the amendment to come before the voters of this state, this Fall, President Taft's opinions are worth reading. They are temperate, logical and convincing, and Maryland would do well to act in accordance with them. The President said;

"While the fifteenth amendment has not been generally observed in the past, it ought to be observed, and the dency of Southern legislation to-day is toward the enactment of electoral qualifications which shall square with that amendment. Of course, the mere adop-tion of a constitutional law is only one step in the right direction. It must be fairly and justly enforced as well. In time both will come. Hence it is clear to all that the domination of an ignorant, irresponsible element can be prevented by constitutional laws which shall exclude from voting both colored and whites not having education or other qualifications thought to be necessary for a proper

The danger of the control of an ignorant electorate has therefore passed. With this change, the interest which many of the Southern white citizens take in the welfare of the colored race has increased. The colored men must base their hopes hounded and belittled when in office, on the results of their own industry, selfrestraint, thrift and business success, as well as upon the aid and comfort and sympathy which they may receive from their white neighbors of the South.

There was a time when Northerners who sympathized with the negro in his necessary struggle for better conditions sought to give him the suffrage as a protection, and to enforce its exercise against the prevailing sentiment of the South.

he movement proved to be a failure. What remains is the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the right to have statutes of States specifying qualifications for electors subjected to the test of compliance with that amendment. This is a great protection to the colored man. It never will be repealed, and it never ought to be repealed.

If it had not been passed, it might be difficult now to adopt it; but with it our fundamental law, the policy of Southern legislation must and will tend to obey it, and so long as the statutes of the States meet the test of this amendment and are not otherwise in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States, it is not the disposition or within the province of the Federal Government to interfere

Personally I have not the slightest race prejudice or feeling, and recognition of its existence only awakens in my heart a deeper sympathy for those who have to bear it or suffer from it, and I question the wisdom of a policy which is likely to

Meantime, if nothing is done to prevent, a better feeling between the negroes and the whites in the South will continue to grow, and more and more of the white people will come to realize that the future of the South is to be much benefited by the industrial and intellectual progress of the negro.

branches during the term of the Sixtvfirst Congress

The readjustment of the tariff schedules, even if no other legislatve measures shall be introduced at the extra session, is not likely to be accomplished without a somewhat varied and extensive expression of views. Even if the committee which has the preparation of the new bill in charge should be prepared to report shortly after the called session gets under way, the oratorical tourney must pursue its devious course according to the precedents. The leaders of the majority will not fail to be mindful of the fact, however, that a long drawn out delay in tariff readjustment will operate seriously to the disturbance of business.

Already a more or less developed attitude of hesitancy in certain branches of industrialism is being charged up to the uncertainties arising from the pending changes in import rates. The manufacturing industries of the country cannot readjust to the new rates until the rates are definitely known. There is therefore urgent reason why the special session should make speed in tariff readjustment and pass the new measure "as promptly as due consideration will permit."-Balt.

He could not lie down and it was necessary to have him in the arms every moment. Even then his breathing was difficult. I did not think he would live until morning. At last I thought of my mother's remedy, Chamberlain's lough Remedy, which we gave, and it afforded prompt relief, and now three days later, he has fully recovered. #### Dolliver on the Attitude of Congress.

Senator Dolliver's lecture to Congress in the last hours of the session was a timely reminder of the feeling of the country toward the executive and legislative branches of the Government. The Senate had under consideration a resolution which, it had been repeatedly stated in debate, looked to conservation of the dignity of the upper house. Mr. Dolliver got down to the fundamentals the disposition to petty nagging at a retiring President is not calculated to increase the country's impression of the dignity or the purpose of Congress.

In both houses of Congress more time has been devoted by the people who direct affairs to quarreling with the President than to the great affairs which have been demanding att jajon. Mr. Dolliver se of the famous "big stick."

HOUSE FOR GRAIN.

Rat and Mouse Proof For Storage Purposes.

A well built and handily arranged granary is without doubt one of the most necessary buildings on the farm. The grain house shown in the illustrations herewith has many advantages. It is rat and mouse proof and has ample storage room for farm implements. The grain may be loaded from the bins to the wagon without any labor, and the interior arrangement is such that it is not possible for grain to heat and mold or become sour.

The building may, of course, be built any size. The six posts that carry the structure in the drawing, which pro vides for a building 20 by 36 feet square, are 8 by 8 inches square and twenty feet long, sat on a good solid half inch holes punched every eight inches on the top and bottom and the holes covered with screen wire. This may be soldered on or wrapped with wire. Four one inch holes are bored in the floor of the bin and also covered with screen wire. The open ends of the pipe and the holes in the floor allow a free play of fresh air through the grain at all times and also allow the moist, heated air to escape. No grain will mold in one of these bins. Not even buckwheat, the worst grain We have to heat, will be damaged.

Prolific Fields.

Perhaps the hardest point for the unprofessional man to understand is that two fields of soil may look alike. but one will yield seventy-five bushels of corn and the other nineteen. This very example may be seen at the Urbana (O.) experiment farm, where one field has been grown to corn exclusively for thirty years without manure or fertilizer of any kind. Last year it gave up less than nineteen bushels to the acre. Not ten rods away, with everything else the same, over seventy-five bushels to the acre were harvested, only because the necessary plant food had been replaced in the form of stable manure, etc., and because rotation had been practiced, using clover as one of the crops in the rotation scheme.

Starting a Balky Horse.

There is most always one horse in every lot that refuses to budge when time is called. A horseman who has had experience says: "We have seen a bad case conquered by the driver getting out of the wagon and patting the animal on the head for a minute. Then he picked up a stone, lifted u one of the animal's front feet from the ground and gave each nail a light tap and a smart tap on the frog. Then he dropped the foot quickly, jumped into the wagon and told the horse to go, and he did."

LOST FERTILITY OF SOIL.

Some of the Errors of Many Western Farmers.

As a general thing farmers seldom are concerned about the fertility of their soils so long as they raise good crops. But just as soon as the crops show decided signs of failing they begin to "get busy" in restoring the lost fertility. This is about on a parallel with locking the stable after the horse has been stolen.

It would be far more profitable and considerably easier to conserve the fertility than to endeavor to restore it after it has been lost.

For years it has been the boast of parts of the west that the fertility of the soil in those sections was so strong that no manure was needed. But it seems that today there is trouble brewing. An expert says:

"In many sections of the corn belt the day has come when farmers need to pay more attention to maintaining the fertility of the soil. This they should have done years ago. They should have learned the lesson nature taught the farmers in the east and south before the fertile prairies of the west were opened to cultivation. That they did not profit by the experience of eastern and southern farmersnamely, that continuous grain culture and continuous neglect of conserving farmyard manure and applying it regularly and in the most economical manner to their soils—is evident from the present lack of fertility in many of the corn belt states, where the soils at one time were so productive as to lead people to think that their exhaustion was practically an impossibility."

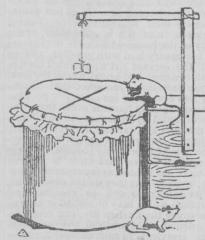

It is pertinent also to here refer to the trials conducted by the Cornell agricultural station to demonstrate the losses to stable manure when exposed to leaching and weathering. A pile of manure that contained elements worth $5.48 after being exposed for five months was worth only $2.03. Leaving manure in piles in the field is an antiquated method that should nevresults in fertilizing the spots where the heaps lie too heavily, giving them fully three times as much of the fertilizing elements as they need, while three times as much ground receives less than it needs or not enough to make a showing. Where manure is allowed to lie in heaps on a field for a few weeks or a month it is an impossibility to spread it so as to get an even distribution of organic matter and A permanent stair should be built of the elements of fertility. It is preferable to spread the manure direct from the wagon with a fork, although The outer walls are covered with this is by no means an up to date way manure be saved, provided, of course. The bins are made seven feet high enough bedding is used in the barn ment, the plant food of which amounts The floor is sloping, as shown, and to nearly one-half of the total in the Carefully conducted experiments thousand pounds of live weight of the valued at from $25 to $60 per head per year. The valuations given are as follows: For cows, $29; horses, $27; sheep, $26; calves, $24; pigs, $60. This valuation takes into consideration only the actual amounts of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium contained in the manure from these animals, valued in accordance with the present prices of these constituents in the form of commercial manures or fertilizers. It does not take into consideration the value of the manure as a human builder due to its large organic matter content. From this it should be plain to any one that the economical handling of farm manure is one of the very important factors in maintaining the fertility of our soils.

A Homemade Mouse Trap.

If you have got no cat and find the mice in your house getting altogether too bold for comfort, or if you would like to keep some mice for pets, we can tell you how to make a trap in which to catch them.

Over the top of an earthenware jar fasten a piece of writing paper, tightly binding it with a string or elastic band. In the center of the paper cut a cross, as shown in the illustration. Set the jar in the closet and suspend by a string a piece of toasted cheese over the center of the jar. If there are any mice in the closet the bait will attract them, but just as soon as the first mouse reaches the center of the paper he will drop into the jar and the paper will fly back into place again. ready for the next comer. #### PURE BRED BEEF CATTLE.

There are many farmers who seem to think that pure bred cattle are too much pampered, too highly fed and are too delicate for average farm conditions. Such is not the case, for pure bred cattle receive only such care as the average farmer can and should accord to his live stock, and, so far as high feeding is concerned, only a few show animals are so treated, and they not to the point of injury, writes an Ohio breeder in the Rural New Yorker. Owing to their rational treatment almost all pure bred stock are constitutionally strong and vigorous and are quite capable of giving a good account of themselves on the pastures and in the feed lot.

The ultimate object of all pure bred beef cattle breeders is the production of excellent beef, and as soon as all beef producers are convinced that pure bred cattle can make good in competition with grades and scrubs in the feed lot and on our pastures there will then be an unlimited demand for pure bred cattle.

In our county there is a young man who has stocked up with Angus cattle with the object of raising pure bred beef. There are three excellent herds of Angus cattle here, and by watching the local cattle sales this young man was able to secure the foundation of his herd at quite low prices. He is raising these cattle under ordinary farm conditions, but keeps all his females registered, so that there need be no trouble about registration should he get sale for some of his young stock for breeding purposes or sale for some of the steers to feed for the fat stock shows. However, for the most part he has so far made the production of beef his prime object and expects to continue to do so. He recently sold several for beef at 25 cents per hundredweight advance over prices of other cattle at the time these were cannot help but be a good object lesson for any neighborhood. It will show what such cattle are capable of and that the registration of an animal does not necessarily imply that it is too fine to make profitable beef. High grade cattle are more profitable than the commoner kind and if one raises his own calves and is not interested in dairying why not raise pure bred cattle for beef? Do not think that they are too fine or too costly for you on your farm, for if you are capable of succeeding with common stuff you really deserve the best, and you will find that pure bred cattle are well suited to your conditions.

Value of Pure Bred Stock.

The purchase of first class pure bred stock is one of the first lines of investment to be considered by the stock farmer who does not already possess such stock. No argument is needed to emphasize the added value of pure bred animals. They may produce no more, but their selling value is far more than their added cost of produc tion. The greater esteem in which they are likely to be held by the owner will usually induce better care, which in turn will bring better returns. So many farmers make the mistake of shifting about from one breed to another, while the few who stand by one and strive to improve their herd seldom fail to attain success. The beginner may well afford to start with a few pure bred animals rather than a larger herd of no particular breeding.

Improving the Herd. Dairymen who cannot afford to buy pure bred animals should buy a male calf and when raised have their best native cows served. By this method they can improve their herds at the least cost. Some Dairy Pointers. Feed is too expensive to use sparingly. You get no returns for the subsistence mation. It's what you feed above that that really makes you money.

The difference between the average farm cow and a really good cow is usually the difference between 150 and 350 pounds of butter fat every year. No two cows can be fed just alike and still be fed to the best advantage It's knowing the individuals that pays. Some say that cows are worth more than breed, but it is well to remember that the cow makes the breed. Many a poor cow bears mute yet eloquent testimony of the high price or feed.

Every dairyman needs more alfalfa. He needs it for hay and hog pasture. The winter calf needs special care, but he pays well for it.

CONCRETE SILOS.

Fireproof and Practically Frost Proof When Properly Constructed.

It is desirable to prevent the freezing of silage in the silo during cold weather as far as possible, and the silo of a construction to prevent freezing to the largest degree is the preferable one, other things being equal, says a bulletin issued by the Iowa experiment station. It is difficult to make a comparison between the merits of the various types of silos in this respect owing to the inability to find them under like conditions. Freezing of silage is due to loss of heat, first, through the silo wall and, second, to the air in contact with the feeding surface. The first loss may be reduced by using a nonconducting wall in the silo and the second by preventing the circulation of air above the silage in the silo.

It may be impartially said that as far as the prevention of freezing of silage is concerned the stave, stone, single wall brick and concrete silos are of equal merit. When properly made, however, the double wall concrete silo is perhaps the most nearly frost proof of all. The conducting material between the walls consists only in small metal ties, and the circulation of air may be cut off by the insertion of horizontal tar paper partitions. When the top of the silo is open and a free circulation of air permitted it is almost impossible to prevent the surface from freezing in severe weather. A personal investigation of silos in cold

The freezing of silage does not necessarily mean a loss, as it may be thawed out and made fit for feeding and when properly attended to need not rot or mold. The frozen silage may be often thawed by mixing with the warm silage at the center of the silo. It is generally considered dangerous to feed frozen silage. In order to secure a first class concrete silo it is necessary that good materials, well mixed in the right proportions, be used in preparing the concrete and that the whole be skillfully handled. If these requirements are fulfilled the writers upon investigation are confident that no better silo can be erected than one constructed of concrete. The investigations, however, would indicate that it is not advisable for the man with no experience with concrete construction to attempt the building of a concrete silo. The expense involved is too great for the individual farmer who has not previously constructed buildings of concrete to experiment. The work should be turned over to the concrete contractor under a guarantee that only a first class silo be built. Among the desirable features of the concrete silo or any masonry silo may be mentioned that it is essentially fire proof. A silo was found in use in Wisconsin which had withstood a fire that burned all the surrounding build-

How Long Are Cows Profitable?

In my opinion, a milk cow remains valuable as long as she breeds and continues to give enough milk and butter fat to pay a reasonable dividend over and above cost of keep. The oldest cow I have is nine years old, and I don't remember having kept any until older. I find my cows after their eighth year begin to taper off in quantity of milk produced, though they would last longer if they had not been "crowded" so hard in former years. My experience and observation of Holstein cows lead me to believe that the decrease is gradual from the high point of efficiency, much as the increase from "heiferhood" on is gradual, but that the period of lactation is not shortened in the slightest.

I believe a good cow, one that has paid good dividends all her life, should be kept until she can no longer pay for her feed. And if she has been an exceptional cow she should be kept as long as she will breed, as calves from such a cow have every chance to become as good as or better than the dam, and great cows are not as yet very common.-R. B. Young in Farmers'

Prevents Frozen Troughs.

If your stock fails to drink all the water pumped into the trough remove stopper and water will run back into Your trough will then never be full of frozen water.

Feeding the Brood Mare.

The brood mare should be liberally fed, but not to excess. She should have the best quality of well cured hay, oats and bran. Never feed hay that has become heated, nor musty oats or bran that has soured.

Local Option Defeated in Pennsylvania.

What is known as the Fair Local Option bill was defeated on second reading Tuesday night in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, by a vote of 137 to 66. The bill was introduced by Representative Fair, of Westmoreland county, and authorized the electors of any borough, township, or ward of any city to vote upon the question of the sale of liquor Not in years has the House of Representatives been so crowded to hear a de-bate on an important bill. Both sides of the local-option question were represented by hundreds of adherents, who came to Harrisburg from all parts of the State. The crowds began arriving shortly after 6 o'clock, and when the hour of 8 o'clock arrived there was not an inch of space left in the chamber. cheap rate excursion to Baltimore and The side aisles, the Speaker's platform, the press gallery and the public gallery Mrs. Marcella Shank, of Le Gore, and | were also crowded, a large percentage

The defeat was expected by the temperance people, as no campaign had been made through the state leading up mont, spent Wednesday with Mrs. Ed. to the passage of a local option measure at this session. The real battle will be fought out between now and the election effort will be made to secure local option.

Acetylene A Safe Light.

It is the business of the fire insurance underwriter to take cognizance, in his conservative way, of every new process, or industry, which affects the fire hazard in any way and to adjust his rulings to changes of condition. If these be in the direction of greater safety, he will encourage them; if of increased hazard, he will do the reverse.

No innovation can come much nearer to the heart of the underwriter than a new method of illumination. Candles came into general use long before the underwriters were organized and, however great the hazard they cause, they are hardly under the jurisdiction of the underwriter. Acetylene, on the other hand, a development of the last dozen years, and now so far advanced that its brilliant light encircles the globe, and that its use in the United States alone exceeds twenty billion candle power hours per annum, has grown into popular favor under the complete control of the National Board. The advance of the new illuminant has been permitted only after its competent committee of consulting engineers have rigidly held to every detail of requirement, which they, as representatives of the Board, have themselves

Acetylene does cause a certain measure of fire hazard, it is true. But so also does the man who throws his lighted cigarette into the waste basket, or the lady of the house who cleans her gloves or her canary bird with gasoline, and so did the servant girl who lighted the fire with benzine, and about whom the local paper unfeelingly remarked that "nothing had benzine of her since!" So likewise do lighting hazards arise from the use of liquid hydrocarbons in any form, of matches and candles, and of electric lighting. But when we recall that acety lene is used in so many homes, largely in country places, that when a million burners are lighted, as occurs every even ing, replacing as they do the candle with all its dangers as well as gasoline and kerosene which may be spilled or used to that acetylene in such cases diminishes It seems to us that we may assert with positiveness that the introduction of acetylene does produce a distinctly lower fire risk than existed in the same ties before. If not, wherein lies the danger? Certainly not in the carbide, which is transported at the lowest freight rates, transportation companies that it can be handled literally without hazard. It certainly does not reside in the water, the only other substance which is required for the generation of the gas; it is there-Now, to the front of the generator we find is subject to constipation, sick headache, only the pipe system, laid in accordance with underwriters' rules, fitted with a minimum of leakage, because this gas general played out condition, ought to being more concentrated than other take advantage of this opportunity."

illuminating gas, every owner looks carefully after his pipes as a measure of the commonest economy. Then come the burners, about which, it has been pointed out that if a full sized burner should by any chance be left open in a sleeping room, and should the occupant fail to be roused by the odor, or be unable to escape from the room, he would die of starvation before the air would become irrespirable. Compare this with the in-evitable result of leaving the coal gas burner open in a small sleeping room for a few hours; and then recall that even if a large leak should occur, from a broken fitting or a disconnected pipe, the ordinary house generator could only de-liver the result of a single charge, probably not over a hundred cubic feet, whereas a similar leak in a city supply pipe has behind it the entire contents of the

Now if the hazard is neither to the front nor to the rear of the generator, we have only the generator itself yet to inspect. The acetylene generator is the only illuminating contrivance which has enjoyed, from its inception, the guidance of the underwriters. The industry has paid the tax and heartily co-operated with the underwriters in their efforts to attain their ideal. Safety devices lock and interlock the different parts exactly as prescribed by the underwriters. Their trained guidance has determined the thickness of the metal employed, the feeding devices, escape valves, means for preventing over-feeding, for stopping the action of the machine should any detail be out of order, etc., etc. Their primary idea has been to produce an ideal machine, so nearly as possible perfect for inside installation, and it may be truthfully said that they have developed a gen erator which assures a smaller risk than the illuminants it replaces.

Sherman Shocks the Senate.

Washington, March 6 .- James S. Sherman, the new Vice-President, has given the Senate two distinct shocks in the days has presided over the "elder states-

Instead of the somber black Prince Al-Dert coat that has been the regulation Uniform, or "working clothes" of Viceresidents from time immemorial, the enators were surprised to see in the hair a man in a common business suit. was not a quiet pattern, but a check lesign that seemed to cry out in assertive lashion, the kind of suit that Mr. Com-mercial Traveler, Mr. Grocer or Mr. Any ther Man might wear to his store any ime he felt particularly young and lively. Mr. Fairbanks never appeared in the Senate unless attired in a frock coat of the most approved cut and darkest black. But not so Mr. Sherman. He came Ontrast to Mr. Fairbanks' usual bouquet of flowers placed on his desk.

The second shock was when Mr. Sherman, who has been a mere member of the lower house, showed his ignorance of Senate traditions.

The manner in which the Senate determines the presence of a quorum was made plain to him in the Senate yesteray when Senators Lodge and Bailey oined in calling attention to the fact that there had been no record of the resence of a quorum since the Sixtyirst Congress assembled at 12 o'clock on the Fourth.

Vice-President Sherman, who is fami-Representatives, replied that the Ournal of the 4th. contained the names Senators who were then present and hat they constituted a quorum of the

This statement was shocking to Senaors, with whom the manner of asceralning a quorum is a tradition not to be ghtly ignored. Mr. Sherman was inormed that a quorum in the Senate is shown by the calling of the roll and the actual response of Senators, and not by nerely having their presence noted by clerk. The roll was then promptly called. Thus did Mr. Sherman learn his first lesson in Senatorial procedure.

Deer Killed near Hanover, Pa.

The following item, dated at Littlestown, Pa., March 9, to the Gettysburg News, says;

"A large four pronged buck deer, seen near here on Monday, was killed later;" ater in the day near Hendrix station, on he Western Maryland railroad by a reight train. The buck was one of a air that had been seen here about a week ago. Monday morning it got on the tracks of the Hanover and Littlesown trolley line and had to be chased off twice to prevent its being killed. It was then chased by dogs to near Hendrix where it was again almost killed by the morning passenger train. Engineer ichelberger chased it away, however, and saved its life again. A freight which followed killed the pretty animal and it Vas taken into Hanover. Dr. R. H. Russel, agent for the Society for the revention of Cruelty to Animals deolded to dispose of the carcass by giving it to the Catholic institution at McSherrysown. It is thought that the buck came om the mountains in the vicinity of Emmitsburg.

Recognized Their Old Friend. The late Sir John Steell, who was Sculptor to Queen Victoria, was modelng a bust of Miss Nightingale when an officer of one of the highland regiments which had suffered so cruelly in the Crimea heard that the bust had lust been completed and was in Sir John's studio. Many of the men in his company had passed through the hospital at Scutari, and he obtained permission from the sculptor to bring Some of them to see it. Accordingly a squad of men one day marched into the studio and stood in line. They had ho idea why they had been mustered in so strange a place. Without a word of warning the bust was uncovered, and then, as by one impulse, the men broke rank and with cries of "Miss Nightingale, Miss Nightingale!" surfounded the model and, with hats off, cheered the figure of their devoted hurse until the roof rang. So spontadeous and hearty and so inspiring was the whole scene that in after days Sir

Hard to Kill. A distinguished entomologist, J. C. Warburg, writes: "When I was still new to collecting, in the south of France I discovered one day, to my great joy, a large female of Saturnia Dyri hidden away in some bushes. The Specimen was the first I had ever aught, and I decided, on account of Its large body, to stuff it (a quite unhecessary operation; I have kept dozens since unstuffed). The moth was arst apparently killed by being forced Into a cyanide bottle, where it was then emptied and the cavity filled with cotton wool soaked in a saturated solution of mercuric chloride. The Insect, pinned and set, was discovered next day attempting to fly away from the setting board."

THE CHURCH DEBT.

A very interesting article entitled "The Church Debt Doctor" appears in the March issue of The Circle. The first part refers to how church debts are contracted, and gives some excellent advice on the general subject; while the and holds out its hand. Why not clear, last part refers to "ways and means" of getting rid of them. The article is by Rev. Samuel W. Purvis. He says;

Let me suggest the management of three kinds of debt: First, a large debt, respect for the church. as one incurred in building or in extensive renovation; second, current debt, as in running expenses; third, small, of one's income. He had a carpenter erect a gigantic wooden thermometer in the Sundayschool room for the afternoon meeting. The speaker was a big, jolly fellow, with a trick of interesting boys and girls. The way the mercury rose in the thermometer as the Sunday-school classes pledged their amounts was a wonder.

Two girls attending the School of Design drew an enormous white elephant. made up of blocks containing smaller elephants, with figures from one dollar to ten dollars on their backs, for the Christian Endeavor Society. The inscription underneath read: "We have an elephant on our hands. Will you carry part of him home?" As pledges came in the secretary cut off the blocks of smaller elephants until the big fellow had completely disappeared. Each one carried home a miniature elephant to be hung up as a souvenir. Various other organizations of the church met and agreed on the amount to be contributed. When the day was done the figures showed as

THE CARROLL RECORD To prevent this dread calamity many and desperate resources are used. From the cafe, ice-cream parlor, oyster-saloon method to the donkey-party, bridgewhist, minstrel-show method there are many variations. They would make a fit chamber of horrors.

Some of the methods I neither might, would, could, or should tell. They range from the indecent to the idiotic. Guessing at whose ankles are passing a low curtain or drinking hard cider through a straw in a "country fair" held in the same room where the Holy Sacrament is administered may be an enterprising way of raising money, but it is incongruous, to say the least. Too far east is west. And when you think of it all being done in the name of the Lord Jesus it seems impossible.

But why should the Church of Jesus Christ go through the world hat in hand, like a beggar? It is not only a detriment spiritually but it is also mighty poor financiering. The State demands taxes, the lodge dues, the club assessments, but the Church coughs apologetically straight giving? It is remarkable how even "outsiders" will respond to a frank and direct appeal, and a dignified attitude in such a matter must command

If you are tempted to despise small amounts remember the penny-in-the-slot places and the nickel moving-picture shows. Ask some one on the inside if it pays? If you question the value of collectors ask the instalment house or the industrial insurance people or, indeed, any mercantile house. Humanity gives more in small amounts frequently than in large amounts occasionally.

The plan is called "The Calendar Club." If there is a young woman's organization like the "King's Daughters," with about sixty members, it is just the organization to handle this excellent scheme. The president represents the year 1909. She selects twelve persons to represent the months-"Miss January," "Miss February," "Miss March," etc. Each month selects four weeks, known as "Miss First-Week-in-January," "Miss Second-Week-in-January," "Miss Third-Week-in-January," "Miss Fourth-week-in-January," "Miss First-Week-in-February," etc. These forty-eight "Weeks" each select among the members and friends of the church seven "Days"-Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, etc. Then all Year, Months, Weeks and Days are asked to contribute "a penny a day." Each "Week" collects from her "Days," seven persons. Each "Month" simply superintends her four "Weeks." While the president, "Miss 1909," looks after her twelve "Months," calling them together every so often to hear their report. The thing is so simple, the amount is so small that it hardly seems worth while. But, bless Days amount to 397 persons, each contributing one cent a day! Multiply 397

George Fitch on Taft.

In the March American Magazine, George Fitch writes on Taft. McCutcheon of Chicago is the cartoonist. Following is an extract:

"One cannot cord up too much information about the president of the United States. The common citizens who have hired a president 'sight unseen' and have turned the welfare of the country over to him for a period of four years may be pardoned for an omnivorous hunger for details concerning the history, character, habits, dimensions, disposition, beliefs and relatives of their new employee.

"Summing up in brief the architect's figures on William Howard Taft, we find the following:

"Dimensions: Height, six feet; frontage, enough to allow seven watch pockets in a row across his vest; depth, about four times that of William J. Bryan; capacity, 16 hour' work a day.

"Foundations: Clear down to bed rock. College education, law school education, newspaper education, seven years in Cincinnati politics without settling an inch.

"Besides being an excellent remedy for colds and throat troubles, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is unequaled as a cure for croup," says Harry Wilson, of Waynetown, Ind. When given as soon as the croupy cough appears, this remedy will prevent the attack. It is used successfully in many thousands of homes. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Cotton Fabrics Must be "Shrunk."

In eagerness to get the Summer sewing out of the way, do not, suggests the Newark "News," lose sight of the fact terials before they are made up often saves much work in the end. Then hang it on the line, by one of the selvedge edges. Care must be taken to stretch it just as smoothly as possible. If the material has colors which are apt to run, the precaution of using a salt water solution should of course, be

When on the line see that it is not exposed to the full rays of the sun, for this may tade the material sadly.

When the material is shrunk and dried, one's work is not done, for the ironing process is quite as important. The goods should be ironed on the wrong side, and ironed perfectly smooth and perfectly dry. Then it should not be handled for an hour or two.

If braid, tape or embroidery is to be used as trimming, it is well to take the precaution of shrinking it, else after the garment is laundered there will be unsightly "puckerings" here and there.

If the wash material is one of the softer weaves-such as cotton voile, batiste, organdie or handkerchief linen-it is never wise to shrink the goods before sewing. If these materials are shrunk, it is quite impossible to cut out a garment satisfactorily and the sewing process is rendered most trying.

While shrinking fabrics takes time and care, it saves the letting out of seams and lengthening of skirts after the dress is laundered.

"It is amazing what perseverance will achieve," said an Englishman, "Even misdirected perseverance has achieved marvels. There is the case of Robson, the great Notts cricketer. Robson during his Australian tour was determined one sorching afternoon that his side shouldn't do the hard work of fielding. Well, when the Australian captain spun the coin Robson shouted, 'Woman!' Then, seeing that heads lay uppermost, instead of acknowledging defeat Robson said, with perseverance and nonchalance: "'Well, we'll go in."

Thomas, tenth Earl of Dundonald, at his death vice admiral in the English navy, tells in his "Autobiography of a Seaman" of an incident on board the Hind, on which he served as midshipman. The pet of the ship was a parrot, the aversion of the boatswain, whose whistle the bird learned to imi-

"One day a party of ladies paid us a visit aboard. By the usual means of a 'whip' on the yardarm several had been hoisted on deck. The chain had descended for another. Scarcely had its fair freight been lifted out of the boat alongside when the parrot piped, 'Let go!'

"The order was instantly obeyed, and the unfortunate lady, instead of being comfortably seated on deck, was soused in the sea. Luckily for her, the men were on the watch and quickly pulled her out, and, luckily for the parrot, the boatswain was on shore or this unseasonable assumption of the boatswain's functions might have ended tragically for the bird."

How Prisoners Converse.

A man who was sent to jail recently for three days for a small offense was greatly impressed with the precautions taken to prevent the prisoners engaging in conversation. There seemed to be warders everywhere, and no one was allowed to utter a word.

On the Sunday he was in the church the psalm given was the "Old Hundredth." Beside him were two old jailbirds, and instead of the orthodox words beginning "All people that on earth do dwell" this pair sang a hymn of their own in conversational style, which went something as follows: First convict sings:

"How long are you in for? I am doing sixty days. I nearly broke a copper's jaw. Sing low or else they'll maybe hear." Second convict replies:

"You are a lucky pic-can.
I've got twel-elve months to serve. Tried to break into a house. Some'dy must have gi'en me away."

By this method they exchanged histories during the singing.-Glasgow

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL,

Lesson XII.—First Quarter, For March 21, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review - Golden Text, Acts viii, 4-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association. ol, "It came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them and carried up into heaven." During the forty days, in which He appeared to spoke of the kingdom of God and commanded them to wait till they should have received the Spirit, that they might by His power go forth and bear Witness unto Him in all the world. LESSON II.—The descent of the Holy 16, 17, "I will pray the Father, and He will give you another comforter, that He may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of Truth." Ac-Cording to the type in Lev. xxiii, just lifty days after the resurrection of Christ the new first fruits began to be Peter, but the power the Holy Spirit, also promised by Jesus Christ Himself. LESSON III.—The beginnings of the Christian church, Acts ii, 22-47. Golden Text, Acts ii, 42, "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers." By the Spirit of God, through the word of God, Si mon Peter so preached Jesus Christ crucified and risen again as Israel's Messiah, the Son of David, that 3,000 Lord, put all their possessions into a common fund.

LESSON IV .- The lame man healed, "His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know." The risen and ascended Christ wrought through Peter and John in the healing of the man who had been lame from his birth, and this Striking object lesson gave Peter an-Other opportunity to proclaim Jesus Christ crucified and risen again, as the One whom Moses and all the prophets had foretold as the seed of Abraham.

LESSON V.-The trial of Peter and John, Acts iv, 1-31. Golden Text, Acts ly, 31, "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness." Ever since sin entered the world mankind, as a whole, have been against God and on the side of the devil, and religion, so called, has been more largely on the line of Cain than of Abel, the god of this and true God.

LESSON VI.-True and false brotherheart and soul the believers lived to-Sether in the bonds of a risen Christ, Counting nothing as specially their own if only He might be magnified. But the great deceiver, the father of lies, could not stand such powerful testimony to the truth and got in some of his work to the loss and everlasting disgrace of two names.

I.ESSON VII.—The apostles impris-Oned, Acts v. 17-42. Golden Text, Matt. v, 10, "Blessed are they which are per-Secuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Religion imprisoned the faithful followers of Christ and beat them and forbade them to speak the name of Jesus. but the Lord by an angel brought them out of prison and commanded them to Speak to the people and strengthened them to testify again before the rulers. LESSON VIII. - Stephen, the first Christian martyr, Acts vi, 1, to viii, 3. Golden Text, Acts vii, 59, "They stoned phen, calling upon God and saying. Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Not apostles only, but men willing to serve tables, become faithful witnesses to this risen, living Christ, and one of them is the first to be honored by laying down his life to seal his testimony The religious ruler of this world is not only a liar, but a murderer.

Lesson IX.—The gospel in Samaria, Acts viii, 4-25. Golden Text, Acts viii, "The people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip Spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did." God works in spite of all hindrances and makes even the wrath of man to praise Him. The per-Secution scattered the preachers and Sathered more souls to the Lord, some doubtful, but many real believers, and It is one of the humble committee of Seven who is used.

LESSON X.—Philip and the Ethiopian, Acts viii, 26-40. Golden Text, John v. "Search the Scriptures, for in them be think ye have eternal life, and they they which testify of Me." Something is wrong in the holy city when man can go there and to the temple worship and not learn of Him who greater than the temple. Some one heaven cares, even He who told them it was a den of thieves, and by angel and by His Spirit gave light Philip to the eunuch. LESSON XI.—Aeneas and Dorcas, Acts 31-43. Golden Text, Acts ix. 34, and Peter said unto him, Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole; arise and make thy bed. And he arose imhediately." We are on earth to make manifest that Jesus Christ, who healed the sick and raised the dead, is still the very same Jesus, giving life to dead souls and causing helpless men and women to walk in newness of life.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 21, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE. Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—III. The wicket gate.—Matt. vii, 1-114.

This portion of Bunyan's book carries us from the Slough of Despond through the wicket gate to the house of Interpreter. After Pliable had returned to his house and Help had lifted Christian from the Slough of Despond and conversed with him somewhat Christian walked solitarily toward the wicket gate.

Straight was the gate and narrow the way to it, and Christian should LESSON I .- Acts i, 1-14, the ascension have followed in the narrow way toof our Lord. Golden Text, Luke xxiv, ward the gate. But instead he was deflected for a time from his course. On his way he soon met Mr. Worldly Wiseman, who dwelt in the town of Carnal Policy, which was near by the the disciples only, at least ten times He City of Destruction. He had heard of Christian, and he recognized him. especially by the burden on his back. They entered into conversation, and Worldly Wiseman tried to persuade him to return to his home and pointed out the dangers on the way to the City Spirit, Acts ii, 1-21. Golden Text, John of Destruction. He even claimed to know how he might get rid of his burden. Christian confessed to him that it was his great desire to be rid of the burden. Worldly Wiseman then directed him to the village of Morality. where dwelt one named Legality. Christian was loath to leave his pathgathered, the human instrument being way, but was finally persuaded to do so by Worldly Wiseman and started Who came as predicted by Joel, but to it and must needs go over a hill to reach it, and as he approached the hill it seemed so high, its sides to lean over, and his burden grew heavier, so that he was greatly per-In the journey of the Christian life almost every Christian must meet the ypes here represented in Mr. Worldly Wiseman of Carnal Policy and Legality of Morality. One urges him to take life easy and to enjoy the teceived Him as their Saviour and world, and as "the children of evil are wiser than the children of light," so far as this world is concerned, the argument used is usually a strong one Acts iii, 1-26. Golden Text, Acts iii, 16. and hard to resist. Worldly Wiseman seems respectable and prosperous, and his voice is very presuasive, and he leads many astray. But we should stand out against him, "for we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." Mr. Legality of the town of Morality is also a dangerous enemy of the soul. His advice is that through our personal righteousness we may be saved. There are many moralists and legalists. They depend upon their own uprightness for salvation and eternal life. But this is a false basis for salvation. God tried the law, but man did not and now cannot keep the laws perfectly, and hence cannot thus be saved. "But what the law could not do * * * God has World taking the place of the living done through His Son"-that is, provided for salvation and entrance into the City of Zion. The folly of leaving lood. Acts iv, 32, to v, 11. Golden the narrow way through the advice Text, Prov. xii, 22, "Lying lips are of Worldly Wiseman to visit Mr. abomination to the Lord, but they that | Legality was well represented by leal truly are His delight." With one Christian, and we should profit by his example.

In Christian's perplexity Evangelist appeared again and, hearing his story, warned him of his danger and started him on his way to the wicket gate. Here he was received by Mr. Good Will, who, after hearing of his experiences, started him forward again. The gate is Christ Himself, through whom we enter into the gracious acceptance of God and finally into the kingdom. "I am the door. By Me if any man enter in he shall be saved."

"Oh, Taste and See."

Rev. Henry W. Hunter, Christian Endeavor superintendent of Missouri for the Christian church, relates the following pointed anecdote. The boy is Paul Alexander, and he lives in

This boy when six years of age had a recitation to give before a teachers' institute, entitled "Grandma's Cooky Jar." In learning the piece he said to his instructor, "I'll say it so they will taste cookies." A gentleman said after the performance, "That boy made me hungry.

"My brother Christian," adds Mr. Hunter, "let us so live Christ that men may want to 'taste' of Him and His goodness. Make the world around us 'hungry' to live His life and pattern after His ideals." This is the way we should talk in our Christian Endeavor prayer meetings.

Dallas Wants 1911 Convention.

Dallas, Tex., is going to leave no stone unturned to get the international Christian Endeavor convention of 1911. Eighty-three of the workers met at a banquet lately to discuss plans for this purpose, and similar meetings are to follow. A special train or two will carry Dallas and Texas workers to St. Paul, and if hard work and hustling can attract a convention to their state it is likely to "go." At the banquet several fine addresses were given, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

The Extension Campaign.

The Christian Endeavor societies have started on a fivefold campaign to cover Christian Endeavor extension -missionary activities in meetings, study classes and giving: evangelistic endeavor for training personal workers, Christian citizenship and temperance and a publicity campaign to increase the circulation of religious papers and missionary publications.

Moreover, she half thought she loved him, and because she was a product of the city and had dug deep in the printed philosophy of life she wanted he brain to sit in judgment on her heart.

"I know what you would say," imperiously declared Jim, the lover. "I herself. am nearer the animal than you. When fatigue follows a satiated joy of working my recreation is rest-physica comfort and sleep. I find nothing to grip me in books written by men whose lives have been cramped and narrow, by men with water in their veins instead of strong, red blood."

him wonderingly, with his eyes glowing with love of her.

"Leave me alone, Jim. No, not a:: other word. I must think; I must think. Good night, Jim." And sh watched him go out of the door and across the prairie.

Years before a palmist had told the girl that her head would rule he heart. He had called attention to the peculiar formation of the lines of her left hand and had pointed out the head line that ran straight across the palm obscuring and dominating the lesse: line that represented the heart.

In a meacure she believed it. All her life she had been intensely men tal and had plunged far into the writings of men and women whose apostolic missions are of discontent.

When she collapsed physically unde: the strain of her labors as teacher in a city school the physician had imperatively ordered her to get to the open country if she longed to live.

Alone in the world, she could not in dulge in idleness, and, being exiled from the schoolroom, she was at a loss which path to take. A friend suggest ed that she enter a homestead in the west, and it had appealed to her.

Her savings were sufficient to pay for necessary labor in clearing and breaking the land until the crops were ready for harvest, and she had confident assurance that her work would some day repay her. As an investment, both financial and physical, it delighted her. Stuart met her in the office of the locator in the little town which was the railroad station nearest to her des tination. One learns to read men and women at first sight in the big, puls ing west, and no half trust is given.

She was in need of guidance, and her new found acquaintance became her counselor and friend. When she spoke of getting men to help her build the two room frame house that was to superintendence

Thus two years had slipped away. Her health had returned, the glow in her cheeks told that, and the life in the open had re-enforced her for her old vocation-if she cared for it.

She believed it was her career, though the glamour of existence close to the heart of nature held a charm she could not deny, and there was conflict in her mind as to the better choice.

Then came Stuart's love. She had grown to like him much, but with a reservation that he did not measure up to the ideal she had cherished. She mightier in his love had asked her sur- believed she demanded mental sympathy no less than physical caresses.

To make a perfect union the man must appreciate with her the books that held her, and they would penetrate together the mysterious paths of an answer was not a negative reply to learning to wisdom. Therein was Stuart lacking.

Slumber would not come at bidding the night Stuart told his love. She tossed fretfully as she tried to evade the problem before her. Like memories of pain, it refused banishment.

"Do I love him? Is he necessary to me? He is dear as a friend, I know but beyond that-what?" she said to

When sleep came it was troubled dreams intruded and she thought she saw herself and Stuart galloping side by side over the prairies to the westward. Behind them was an ocean of fire; the crackling of flames sounded in her ears; she could feel the hot wind, born in the heart of the burning grass, blister her neck.

On and on, with the margin of safety growing narrower until within a dozen jumps of the furrow that would balk the fire. Her horse stumbled in a gopher hole, regained his poise, blundered again, and she was thrown to the prairie

"Jim!" she cried.

The flames were upon her now. He slid from his horse, gathered her in his arms, holding her face close to his breast to shield her from suffocation, and staggered across the safety line with the angry flames turning to a sullen, dead red, as if crying out maledictions on her rescuer for depriving them of their prey.
"Jim, Jim!" she shrieked in her de irium. "Suppose I had lost you!"

There was a rapping at the door. Consciousness slowly returned to her; she shook recollections of the nightmare from her. "What's the matter, Edith? Are you

"No; I'll be out in a minute. Wait."

And she hastily dressed. "You're ill," he exclaimed when she appeared. "You are ghostly pale." "Oh, Jim, I've had such a dream!"

"Dreams are silly things, Edith. Surely you would not let one frighten you!" he soothingly said.

"But this one did. And, Jim, I know now," and her head dropped to hide the flush of her cheeks.

"Yes?" said Jim, not comprehending. "What you asked me yesterday." "Sweetheart! And your answer?" He eagerly ran to her. "Yes, Jim, I love you." And in the embrace that followed disappeared the artificialities of troublesome philosophies in the depth of an emotion primi tive and elemental.

Mushrooms.

There are several popular tests of the edibility of mushrooms which are not at all reliable. The commonest of these consists in putting a silver spoon or coin into the saucepan. It is very often believed that unless the metal grows black the mushrooms may safely be eaten. The test, however, is absolutely unreliable, the sole reason for the blackening of the metal being the presence of sulphureous gases, the product of the decomposition in stale fungi. whether poisonous or not. Other beliefs, more or less local, assert that an agreeable smell, a ringed stem, growth in open ground, etc., are sure indications of wholesomeness, but unfortunately each of these conditions is consistent with possible danger to life. On the other hand, it is true that many 9-19-tf FREDERICK, MD. poisonous varieties have a very repulsive smell, which of itself is sufficient to warn the mushroom gatherer of his peril. There seems to be only two ways, after all, of distinguishing between harmful and harmless fungi. The first is to study the subject from the botanist's point of view. This is not possible for the ordinary man, who can always and everywhere rely upon the experimental method if all else fails. "Eat it," said the boy philosopher. "If 't's a mushroom it won't hurt yer, ar' if it kills yer-well, it ain't."-London Globe.

Hugo's Gallantry to a Young Girl. During the latter years of his long life Victor Hugo was very fond of surveying mankind from the vantage ground of the top of an omnibus. He used to make long excursions through the gay city perched on the top of the homely bus, which he seemed to prefer to any other vehicle. An amusing and characteristic anecdote of the great poet, who was most courteous and attentive to the better looking sex, is related by the Paris papers. One fine day as he was enjoying a ride under these conditions a fascinating young woman climbed up to the summit of the tram car on which he was seated and steered her way toward the only vacant place, which happened to be the one next to him. She was about to take possession of it when a sudden joit sent her instead into Victor Hugo's lap. As soon as she had recovered herself the pretty girl turned to the poet and, her fair cheeks suffused with crimson, said, "I beg your pardon, monsieur." "And I," he replied gal-

The recent snow which played havoc with wires of all kinds, and caused a number of deaths of persons and horses from coming into contact with "live" electric wires, has a tendency to create satisfaction with gas for lighting; even if it is not quite so desirable as electric light in some respects, it is much safer to both life and property.

Lawyer Wm. A. The second production of "Pauline" was again interfered with by bad weather and roads, but it was nevertheless greatly enjoyed by a good sized audience. It will not likely be reproduced again in Taneytown, but Mr. Reindollar expects to take his Company to both Union Bridge and Emmitsburg, after Easter, as both towns have made a request for it. These towns will be very fortunate in having the operetta, and should not fail to patronize it very liberally, as it is a high-class entertainment.

A Piano Recital.

(For the RECORD. A very pleasing piano recital was given by a number of the pupils of Miss Anna Galt, Taneytown, at her home, on last Saturday afternoon. Notwithstanding the bad weather, the parlor was filled with those taking part and their friends, and several out-of-town guests. The numbers rendered reflect great credit on Miss Galt and her pupils, and showed earnest and faithful work on the part of both, from the youngest who opened the recital by playing without notes, to the ne who ended the program with several delightful selections.

At the close, at the request of Dr. Goff, Miss Galt entertained the audience with a beautiful and well rendered "Lorely" which was warmly applauded. The following numbers were given:
