Mr. Roosevelt was indignant to think that these women had been bired out to him instead of men, especially as they had been carrying huge bundles of camp dunnage on their heads for a hundred miles, but the fact is that his escort consisted of the leading women in Somali society, each one of them consumed with class pride at being permitted an honor her humble sisters

Two large automobiles, with which will be established a passenger line between Thurmont and Gettysburg, Pa., have been received at Thurmont and will be put in service shortly. The cars have 30-horsepower motors and seats for 12 passengers and are painted a bright red. One of the cars will be run between Thurmont, where the automobile line will connect with the trains of the Washington, Frederick and Gettysburg Railway, and Emmitsburg, and the other car between Emmitsburg, and Gettysburg, the two cars meeting at Emmitsburg. The car running between Thurmont and Emmitsburg will pass Mount St. Mary's College.

Vice-President Herr, of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture, at a recent meeting of the Board, declared that a carnival of graft had been pursued, in connection with the recent quarantine on account of the foot and mouth disease among cattle. Veterinarians, with headquarters at Lock Haven, Mr. Herr stated, had gone over Clinton county condemning herds of cattle right and left, in which some of them had not a single head infected with the disease. Owners of herds of inferior stock, he said, thus found means to dispose of it at handsome profit, the state paying high prices for the slaughtered animals. Some of the veterinarians, Mr. Herr said, were not only incompetent, but were dissipated, and drunken orgies were held during the slaughter of the stock. Although they were paid good salaries, some of the veterinarians, he said, farmed their jobs to the limit.

Sunday School Convention.

HIGH BIDS FOR ROADS.

Road Commission Surprised at the High Cost per Mile of State Roads.

Members of the State Roads Commission opened wide their eyes on Thursday, when they tore open their envelopes containing the proposals for the construction of good roads under the act of the last General Assembly appropriating $5,000,000. The bids were high—very high—although, in a few cases, they are within the estimates of the they came within the estimates of the commission.

Proposals were received only for the construction of stone or macadam roads. One proposal was received for Dor-chester county for building a shell road. tion. There are several graduates in the county and a class of seventeen reported in Manchester. would cost only about 10 per cent. less than the stone roads. As the latter are far more durable than shell roads, they will, of course, have the preference. No bids were received for gravel or "sand pitter" roads. The bidders said they were unable to make any calculations on the latter, because of their inability to obtain estimates of the price of tar. Members of the commission are not in a position to say what their course will be -whether they will accept the lowest bids for stone roads or whether they will ask for proposals for shell, gravel and sand pitter roads, though the last named are not in tavor.

The proposals included everything in connection with the public roads to be improved, grading, material and its transportation, culverts, drains, bridges. labor, rolling, etc. The average depth of the roads is to be six and one half inches. The depth will be greater according to conditions.

Judging by the high bids it is safe to say that under the $5,000,000 appropriation there will be a considerable falling off in the total mileage contemplated. It looks as though another appropriation will be necessary to carry the mileage up to expectations. The distribution of the fund is according to mileage in each county.

The variations in the cost per mile in the several counties are due to their reof officers, which resulted as follows:
Pres., Rev. S. C. Hoover; Vice Pres.,
Rev. J. W. Long; Sec.-Treas., Miss
S. G. Maseheimer. Closing remarks,

Frederick Republicans Nominate.

The Frederick county Republican convention, last Saturday, nominated a full county ticket, elected members of the State Central Committee, and passed resolutions, as follows;
Clerk of the Court—Harry W. Bowers,

Register of Wills-G. Lloyd Palmer,

Lewistown. Sheriff—William G. Grimes, Johns-County Treasurer—Daniel Z. Padget,

Buckeystown. County Commissioners—Charles W. Zimmerman, Frederick; Charles W. Johnson, Jackson, and Lincoln G. Din-

House of Delegates—Clement C. Ausherman, Frederick; John C. Castle, Middletown; William O. Wertenbaker, Hauvers; John P. Harris, Urbana, and

Peter L. Harget, Ballenger.
Frederick County State Central Committee—Charles T. K. Young, Frederick; John D. Keller, Middletown; Col. John R. Rouzer, Thurmont; William B. Cutsail, Woodsboro; William L. Richards, Brunswick, and Dr. Charles Wachter,

The resolutions pronounced the franchise amendment as the vital issue of the coming campaign and condemned it; condemned the division of State road funds and advocated the construction of the or-dinary macadam roads by the State; denounced the Primary Election law; denounced the efforts of the last Legisla-ture to infringe the local rights of Fred-erick county in the jury selection, the roads and licenses; resented the sending of detectives by the Governor to the Republican primaries and indorsed Hammond Urner for chief judge.

Brethren's Annual Meeting.

The Dunker church, officially known as the Church of the Brethren, is meeting in its two hundred and first annual conference, at Harrisonburg, Virginia. This conference is the supreme body of the church, controlling its affairs in every part of the world. The general conference of no other church in Christendom can show so great a proportionate attendance as is shown by the Brethren. But little over one hundred thousand strong, perhaps twenty thousand of their members coming from all parts of the United States' and from all quarters of the globe, will be on hand to attend the conference.

Great preparations have been made for their accommodation. A huge tabernacle with a seating capacity of about eight thousand, dining-rooms where thousands can be fed at a single sitting, lunch counters hundreds of feet long, and many other structures have been erected especially for the occasion. The conference conducts all these places itself, the profits derived therefrom going into the general church fund.

At the first day's session there were only about 1200 in attendance. The feature of the meeting was an address by Rev. W. T. Keller, of Hagerstown, Md., in which a plea was made for specially trained ministers. The speaker cautionsound. Bible services occupied a great-

The Dedication at Gettysburg.

Gettysburg. Pa., May 25.-Arrangements have been completed for the dedication on the battlefield here next Monday afternoon of the monument erected by act of Congress to commemorate the services of the regular army of the United States in the Gettysburg campaign of June and President Taft will be the central figure in the ceremonies and will deliver the oration. Miss Helen H. Taft, the president's daughter, will unveil the monument. The president will arrive here Monday morning from Pittsburg and will be met by a committee of prominent citizens of the historic and will be escorted by United States

Secretary of War Dickinson will deliver an address and transfer the monu-ment to the Gettysburg National Park Commission. The memorial will be accepted by Lieutenant Colonel John P. Nicholson, chairman of the commission Following the placing of laurel wreaths at the base of the monument by the oldest regimental or battery commander in the Gettysburg campaign attending the dedication, President Taft will review the troops on the field. The monument is a beautiful shaft 85 feet high surrounded at the base by a broad granite terrace. It stands Hancock avenue a short distance south of the High Water mark of the Battle of Gettysburg. This monument represents all of the forty-two cavalry, artillery, infantry and engineer organizations of the regular army that participated in the campaign. In addition there has been erected a small monument seven feet high for each of the commands at the ocation it occupied during the battle. The largest central monument and the forty-two smaller memorials are all appropriately inscribed.

Our greatest and best men, whether as private citizens or public officials, are those who are always ready and willing to adopt the wise plans and suggestions of others. SPLIT ON FREE LUMBER.

Republicans and Democrats are Badly Divided on Free Raw Materials.

Washington, May 24.—The movement to have rough lumber put on the free list was defeated in the Senate this afternoon by an overwhelming vote of 56 to

After a day of debate the vote was taken shortly before the Senate adjourned on the amendment offered by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, which sought to have stricken from the bill the rate of $1 per 1,000 feet on sawed

Both parties were split on the vote. Only 10 of the 25 votes in favor of free rough lumber were cast by Democrats, while the other 17 Democrats present and voting were in favor of a duty. Fifteen Republicans voted for free lumber and 39 for the duty. It was the largest insurgent vote thus far polled largest insurgent vote thus far polled against the Aldrich forces, but the attitude of many Democrats in favor of a duty completely negatived the strength which the free lumber Republicans had been able to muster. Another oddity about the vote was the fact that two of the insurgents—Messrs. Dolliver and Borah—voted with the Aldrich committee in favor of the $1 rate contained. mittee in favor of the $1 rate contained in the bill as reported to the Senate.

The two Maryland Senators were on opposite sides of the question. Senator Rayner was one of the two Democrats who voted for free lumber. On the other hand, Senator Smith, of Maryland, cast his vote in favor of defeating the Mc-Cumber proposal. Senator Culberson, the minority leader, voted for free lumber; Senator Bailey, his colleague from the Lone Star State, against it. Tennes-see was divided—Senator Frazier voting and Senator Taylor "no." was Georgia-Senator Clay voting for free lumber and Bacon against it.

The same party conditions exist with reference to iron, sugar and hides, and many items under the heading of "raw materials," notwithstanding the fact that the Democratic national platform declared specifically for "lumber, and free raw material." Senator Bailey, of Texas, even went so far as to declare that he would leave the Democratic party, before he would be bound by a platform which dictated exact tariff schedules. He said;

"Yielding absolute obedience, to any declaration of principles, I refuse to allow any set of delegates elected to a national convention solely with reference to the candidacies of men, to legislate for me. It is their business to enunciate principles, not to establish schedules, and if they are not willing to trust their candidates to apply those principles then they ought to withdraw and I, for one, would leave the Democratic party be-fore I would allow them to dictate

Representing the cane sugar producing State of Louisiana, Senator Foster was gerous to one who was not spiritually ule. Although a Democrat, he made a plea for the protection of the sugar in-

Mr. Foster declared that the trust had Hall, nothing to do with the sugar production of Louisiana. Denouncing the trust as having outraged every principle of honesty in trade he still appealed to the Senate not to strike a blow at the sugar industry in order to punish the trust. "They should be punished," he said, "like criminals. Put stripes on them, but do not strike down a domestic industry.'

Closely following his colleague, Mr. McEnery spoke in support of the same principles as had been upheld by Mr. oster. Although a Democrat, Mr. Mc-Enery made no effort to conceal his protective predilections. "A tariff for revenue only," he said, "was never contemplated by the builders of our great constitutional structure.'

"It is gratifying that at this session of Congress we notice a great change of opinion among Democrats who are voting for a duty on raw material, although at one time free raw material was considered a cardinal principle of the De-mocracy. I hope that the conditions of the country, its necessities and the liberality generally that is prevading all classes of the people may dictate to Democrats the abandonment of all the absurd theories of free trade and cause them to come in with the great body of people and vote a liberal protection for all the manufacturing interests of the country, to make it as independent as the fathers declared it should be of all foreign nations.'

Running Trains by Phone.

Pittsburg, May 23.-The Gould and Harriman interests handling the Wabash lines at Pittsburg, have decided to try the use of telephones for dispatching trains and doing all their railroad work on one line, with a view to doing away with the telegraph, if possible. With this object in view, the West Side Belt Railroad, one of the subsidiary lines, has been fitted from end to end with a new telephone service and today the first work of running the line by phone Orders were issued verbally by the train dispatcher to the several operators, instead of being sent by telegraph.

These orders were issued word by word, station names and figures being spelled out letter for letter, the dispatcher writing the order in his book as he transmitted it to the operators, thus reducing his speed to his and the operator's ability to write it down. Then the order is supposed to be repeated by the operators as fast as each would ordinarily talk, or much faster than is possible by the telegraph. The same method of checking is used as with the telegraph; in fact, there is no change in the rules governing the handling of train orders as between the telegraph and telephone.

One advantage claimed for the tele-phone system is that persons crippled in phone system is that persons crippled in the road service can be made operators a foreign make of automobile except without knowing telegraphy.

Senator Heyburn Raps Autos.

In the Senate, last Friday, Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, delivered a fierce diatribe against the automobile. He was sternly serious in his attack, but the galleries and many Senators roared with 'I had hoped," he said, "that the Committee on Finance would see fit to raise the tax on automobiles. No greater imposition upon the people ever entered this country than these big snorting machines that have been driving the people out of the homes they have owned and destroying life and property.

Mr. Heyburn drew a vivid picture of the automobile as an "engine of death." He said that they had virtually preempted the roadways of the country, as well as the streets of every city. never dreamed that any sensible court in this land would hold that these prodigious machines would ever have equal right on the roads with other vehicles, he said. "The roads were not made for them. The roads were made by the labor and taxes of the people who now have to stand off or flee when these engines of destruction come along. Carriages driven by women are tossed aside by them ruthlessly.

'And people laugh at it," said Mr.

"Laugh?" said Mr. Heyburn with rising eloquence, "They shout with glee when they see the farmer flying through the air. It is the subject of jest in every newspaper. Fun is made of the farmers being distributed by the automobiles all over the country. These machines ought to be taxed 100 per cent. It is nothing through pride of ownership."

SATURDAY, MAY 29th., 1909.

SENATOR DANIEL, of Virginia, startled the Democrats of the Senate, last week, when he commenced a speech with these words, "I want to protect American interests. That is my policy. I don't care what name you call it, I am for it." Later on, in the same discussion, Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, supported the principles favored by Mr. Daniels. Senator Bailey, of Texas, while denying that he is a protectionist, nevertheless opposes "free raw material," and often votes with the Republicans for protective duties.

How We Feel About it.

The RECORD cannot avoid at least a mild suggestion af self-congratulation ness, to a large extent, and it is largely over the introduction of a satisfactory such articles that the Senate tariff debate light system for Taneytown. Not so has shown up as producing--somewhere much on account of a feeling that we between the manufacturer and the conhave had some share in bringing about sumer-too much profit-and a profit the improvement and luxury, but that not chargable to a protective tariff. .... A Question of Profits.

During the tariff discussion in the Senate it has apparently been proven that in the case of many articles imported, and in some of the tariff schedules, the relation of the duty to the retail price to the consumer, is of very doubtful application; in other words, that the amount of the duty bears little real relation to the retail cost of articles.

It was shown, for instance, that the highest priced razor imported was valued at 48¢, which, plus the duty, would amount to about 70%, yet some of these razors retailed as high as $2.50 and $3.00. In glass and china ware, the manufacturer's or importer's price, was shown to be very small, while the retail price was often 300 or 400 per-cent more. The tendency of the argument was in the after putting a duty of 5 cents a pound direction of showing that the dealers made too much profit, and that it was not the tariff which put up prices. This sort of argument, of course, was antagonized by the Democrats, who at once tried to make it appear that the "apatite" was not the good old-fashioned "apatite" was not the good old-fashioned ing to prove that the jobbers and re-ryitreous, sea-green, brown, blue-black, tailers were robbing the country; that white," and so forth, "transparent to and more wages for American labor. It however raised some very practical questions which will not down without more than passing thought. In a large measure it exploded the theory that the lowering of tariff rates is sure to lower the retail price to the consumer, and it was pretty clearly demonstrated that even when there is no trust, or actual combination, the regulations of trade and prices is such that the consumer is not likely to get the benefit of small reductions, unless there is an abundance of sharp competition.

It also compels the further thought that it is partly the fault of dealers throughout the country, in certain lines of merchandise, that the Mail Order houses have been given the opportunity to build up their immense business. They used many of the small items, on which the customary retail profit is large, as "baits" to draw the larger business, arguing, no doubt, that the people, once positively convinced of the "bargains" in these small items, would conclude that the larger ones were corresponding bargains.

They have also taken the advantage of this further trade fact. There are always certain items, not rapidly sold, articles in season for but a short time, which must bring a large profit to justify their being carried in stock. By listing such arlicles at a moderate profit, these Mail Order houses, by drawing trade from a large scope of country-indeed, from the whole country-are enabled to undersell the small town retailer, as a natural consequence.

These two classes of articles have been the foundation of the Mail Order busichaser, but how high they can be made The RECORD has, during the past in order that the goods may be readily years, persistently agitated for a water sold and trade not driven away-then

But the people are not left entirely without hope, for there is included in the free list manna, joss sticks, ipecac, nux vomica, dragon's blood, asafetida, and balm of gilead. These may be said to be in the nature of countervailing duties on apatite. I do not object to any of but there is one still farther on which I shall move to strike out; that is leeches. I think there will be a great increase in their production under this bill, and that the supply will largely exceed the demand. Spunk is also put on the free list. Calling upon Congress for a form of tariff protection that will guard all American homes from the ravages of the cocaine habit, thousands of medical men, philanthropic workers and the principal drug houses in New York City are supporting the recommendation of the American Health League for federal control of the deadly drug. Mr. Taft Enforcing Economy.

The considerable reductions in the estimates of the Government for the next fiscal year bear evidence of President Taft's determination to reduce the exenses of the Federal establisment. By his direction the War Department has presented estimates less by $10,000,000 than the appropriations made by the last Congress. And though many bureau chiefs contended that the interests of the navy would require at least $150,000,000 for the fiscal year 1911, Secretary Meyer is expected to send in estimates of less than $130,000,000. For the fiscal year which begins the first of next July. Congress appropriated $138,000,000 for the

This reduction in expenditures, the President believes, can be accomplished without impairing the efficiency of any branch of the service. Neither will it necessitate abandoning the building program for the navy, as the estimates include provision for two new battleships of the largest type and a number of torpedo boats and other auxiliaries.

Mr. Taft has directed that the same policy be carried out in other departments. He is determined that, so far as lies in his power, the Government during his Administration shall live within its income. -Sun.

Extensive Tree-Planting.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will during the present year, greatly extend the tree-planting enterprise upon which it has entered as a method of providing against the continuous wear and tear of its roadbeds. With the completion of the work contemplated for the present spring the road will have a number of scattered young forests which will in the aggregate represent about 3,430,000 of growing trees. The trees that have been selected for planting this season probably indicate, as to variety, the general run of the railroad's forestry enterprise;893. 000 are red oak, 40,000 Scotch pine, 29, 000 locust, 14,000 hardy catalpa, 14,000 pin oak, 5,000 European larch, 3,000 chestnut, 3,000 yellow poplar, 2,000 black walnut and 1,000 white pine.

It does not require a very extensive acquaintance with forestry life and variations to understand why so many varieties have been chosen. It is not because the needs of the road demand so many different kinds of wood, but because the trees must be chosen to correspond with the character of the soil in which they are to be placed. The chestnut and the red oak, for instance, are not generally found growing naturally in nearness to each other, though the oak is far less choice as to its feeding-ground than the chestnut.

The forestry enterprise of the Pennsylvania should be suggestive, not only to West, North and South, with him in his other railroads, but to states and even county divisions. The American has before suggested that every Maryland countv should obtain and reserve a forest area. In every county there are lands which could be procured at comparatively small cost for such a purpose. If these areas have been depleted of a natural arboreal growth they should be replanted. We shall never restore our destroyed forests until we begin to take serious thought about the matter. - American.

PEACH TREE PLANTING.

Selecting Trees For the Orchard the First Season.

An interesting bulletin on peach growing has been issued by the New Jersey experiment station at New Brunswick. The bulletin contains excellent advice to peach growers.

The bulletin says that a tree three to four feet in height which is well branched and will caliper five-eighths of an inch is more desirable than a tree four to five feet which is of the same diameter. The ideal type of peach tree for planting out is a one-year-old tree which will caliper one-half to fiveeighths of an inch, is well branched and about three to four feet in height. Some fruit growers prefer the largest trees which can be obtained if they are well branched. These will make a good growth if not too severely injured when dug. The large trees have a more extended root system in the nursery row, and a larger proportion of this is broken off when the trees are dug than is the case with the smaller trees.

On the other hand, one should not buy the smaller grades of trees which measure one to two feet in height unless they are to be planted upon especially good soil, as they often fail to make a satisfactory growth, and it generally means an extra year of cultivation before they come into bearing. And, although a smaller proportion of the root system of small trees is broken when they are dug in the nursery, they are somewhat more likely to be injured from becoming dry in transit than larger trees, as the roots are very small and quickly dried out. In general, then, trees of a medium grade are better to purchase. First class trees should not only be of the proper size, but free from scale, root galls, borers and peach yellows.

As for pruning trees before planting. the following advice is given:

Two to two and one-half feet above the bud is about the proper height to

PEACH TREE HEADED FOR GOOD SHAPE.

"cut back" peach trees for planting. Good trees can be formed when cut back to eighteen inches, but anything more severe than this is not to be recommended. Trees headed three feet and higher are at a disadvantage from the beginning and in exposed locations are likely to be whipped about and loosened from the soil by the wind. If the trees are well branched and of medium to large grades the side branches should be cut back to about three inch stubs rather than cutting the trees to a whip, as the buds upon the well developed side branches are usually stronger than the buds upon the trunk and will make a better start. The lighter grades of trees with only weak side branches will of necessity be pruned to whips. At the same time that the top is cut back all injured and broken roots should be cut smooth. Peach trees grown upon deer soils sometimes have long taproots. These can be cut back to six or eight inches without injuring the trees, and it makes the setting much easier.

The first cut taken from this bulletin shows method of pruning the trees | profitable in proportion. It is just as before planting. The center tree is on such a tree the first season.

GOVERNMENT FOR FARMERS.

Legislation In Australia Makes the Dairy Business Profitable.

It may interest American farmers to know that in Australia the government has come to the aid of agriculture in a satisfactory manner. This is particularly true of dairy farming. The provincial government maintains at Calgary the largest and finest dairy station and cold storage plant in all the west. A few years ago the farmers of southern Alberta became dissatisfied with the private creameries then in operation and asked the government to take charge of the business. The government is especially solicitous for the prosperity of farmers, and the public policy has no purpose that precedes their best interest. Therefore the request was taken up, and government creameries took the place of the old private concerns.

These creameries are equipped upon the most modern plans, and, being conducted with no thought of profit, but solely in the interests of the farmers, their operation has been of enormous benefit. They are called "co-operative" and really are just exactly that. A chain of them has been established through the country sufficient and efficient to serve the whole farming community. They are subject to the control of their patrons, through boards of directors, and under government management.

Most of the patrons separate their milk at home by means of hand separators and take their cream to the government stations, say three or four times a week. There it is carefully tested, weighed and credited up. At the end of each month each patron gets credit for the equivalent of his cream in butter and receives a cash advance equal to 10 cents a pound. Thirty or sixty days later a check for the balance is sent him from the department of agriculture direct-that is to say, the government actually takes his cream, makes his butter and pays him the market rate in cash and a government check. This is neither paternalism nor socialism. It is a farmers' government, doing business with and for the farmers. In other words, ft is simply business, and good business at that, for all concerned. The average price paid at government creameries in 1908 was 25.43 cents.

Of course these creameries have to be maintained, and this is accomplished by making a charge of 4 cents a pound. One cent of this goes to a fund for the purchase of buildings and machinery, of which the farmers become part owners to the extent of their contributions. All this would mean little if it did not secure the best market advantages for everybody concerned, but it does mean that and in a fuller sense than could be secured through any other process. The government has consolidated the market and conducts the sales, all in behalf of the producers. The butter is sold through government agencies, principally heretofore in British Columbia and the Yukon district, but of late in growing quantities to Japan. A large export trade in butter from southern Alberta has sprung up in the Japanese market.

Profit In Geese.

There is no fowl that will respond to treatment or furnish better results than the waterfowl. It will mature just as rapidly away from streams as near them. A generous supply of drinking water is all that is required There are many places on a farm that are worthless for cultivation that could be utilized with excellent results for goose raising. Many farmers are profiting by this and adding to their incomes annually. The care and attention necessary for raising geese are very small when compared with the returns, and the cost of food is also proportionately small in comparison with the cost of food used for other birds bred for market. A goose on range will gather the largest portion of its food, consisting of grasses, insects and other animal and vegetable matter to be found in the fields and

PURE FARM SEEDS.

A Bill Now Before the New York

Legislature Bears on This Matter. A very important resolution was adopted by the New York state grange relative to pure farm seeds. The essence of it has been embodied in a bill now before the legislature. As this is a matter of importance to farmers in every state, we reproduce the resolution as adopted and suggest that Patrons watch the progress of this measure in the New York legislature and give it the benefit of their influence. This is

loss and the detriment of their lands;

Whereas, We are informed by expert testimony that the demand by American farmers for seed that is low in price is the chief cause of this dishonest practice;

the chief cause of this dishonest practice; therefore, be it
Resolved. That we invite our sister granges throughout the country to place these facts under consideration to the end that by the creation of a strong public sentiment congress may be led to enact such legislation as shall put an end to this and all similar frauds upon the American farmer; and,
Resolved. That we urge upon our brother farmers everywhere to consider career farmers everywhere to consider carefully, in the light of these facts, the folly of buying cheap seeds.

Following are the provisions of the

No person shall sell, offer, expose or No person shall sell, other, expose of have in his possession for sale for the purposes of seeding any seeds of cereals, grasses, clovers or forage plants in quantities exceeding one pound unless every receptacle, package, sack or bag containing such seeds or a label securely attached the protein in a plain indelible. ed thereto is marked in a plain, indelible manner as follows:

(a) With the full name and address of

(b) With the name and the kind or kinds of seeds. (c) The percentum of purity of the sam-

(c) The percentum of purity of the same ple.

(d) With the common name or names of the weeds the seeds of which, if any, are present in the seed sold, offered, exposed or held in possession for sale.

For the purposes of this act such seed so offered or exposed for sale shall be deemed to be free from prohibited seeds if they do not exist in greater proportion than five of any one kind to 1,000 of the seed being sold, offered, exposed or held in possession for sale. The provisions of this act shall not apply to any person selling seeds direct to merchants to be cleaned or graded before being offered for sale for the purposes of seeding nor to seed that is held in storage for the purpose of being recleaned and which has pose of being recleaned and which has not been offered, exposed or held in possession for sale for the purpose of seeding nor to seed marked "Not Absolutely Clean" and held or sold for export only. This act shall take effect immediately.

CO-OPERATION IN MAINE.

Grange Does a Business of $136,000 a Year and Owns Its Gristmill.

We learn through the Maine Farmer the following particulars relative to cooperation in Houlton grange and why co-operation is successful. The writer says:
"The first important thing is to se lect the right man to conduct the business-a man who is honest, efficient and who has a good business tact. The next thing is to have the Patrons loyal to the grange store, and if some goods should be bought when they were high in price and then before they were sold should fall in price and the store in the city that bought on the low market could undersell the grange the Patrons would need to buy of the grange store even if they did pay a little more on these goods.

"Our plan is to put a per cent above the total cost. All goods, excepting flour, sugar and grass seed, are sold at 5 per cent above cost; grass seed 2 per cent, which pays for the extra help to handle it just for a short time in the spring. Flour and sugar we handle at cost, with no per cent added.

"When we commenced business we had only $136 as capital and did a $10,-000 business on that amount. Last year we did a business of $136,000 and added to our capital over $4,000. We have a good gristmill run by electricity.

"Our store and insurance company is a great saving to the farmers of the county. There are now quite a number of grange stores in the county. Patten grange is about ready to start one. They will issue grange notes at 6 per cent interest, and they will be taken by the members of the grange."

A Good Training School. You hear a great deal about the farmer not being able to fill public positions. But he hasn't had the chance. There are now 40,000 young men, whose ages range from fourteen to twenty-one, who are presiding at grange meetings, taking part in the discussions and ritual work, that are being well trained and will be qualified to send to legislatures, to fill gubernatorial chairs and to congress .-National Master Bachelder.

Wide Awake grange, Ontario county. N. Y., has purchased Gibson hall in Phelps to convert into a grange hall. The price paid was $2,200.

It is expected that the Vermont state grange will hold its next session at Burlington Dec. 8-10.

SELECTING A JACK.

Points to Be Considered In Purchasing a Well Bred Animal.

The high prices which have prevailed for some time in the mule market have prompted many farmers to look into the subject with a view to turning their attention to the production of this valuable draft animal. Considering the perplexities connected with the purchase of jacks, the following suggestions from a Missouri breeder cannot be otherwise than interesting and valuable:

"I wish to call the attention of all those in the market for a jack to some pertinent facts regarding the purchase, of such an animal for breeding purposes. My experience covers an extended period in the business, and I therefore feel qualified to speak. A jack under fourteen hands high cannot be registered. It is also important the resolution:

Whereas, It appears from information presented to this grange that the traffic in clover seed and other farm seeds includes large exportations of the best American grown seeds in Canada and the countries of Europe; and,

Whereas, It also appears that these foreign countries maintain and enforce stringent inspection laws against the seeds of the United States, which does not maintain inspection laws against the seeds imported from those countries; and,

Whereas, These conditions operate in such a way that, while much of the best American seed is exported to foreign countries, the portions rejected by their inspectors—consisting of seeds of low vitality, dead seeds, weed seeds and dirt, being, in fact, screenings—are reimported to this country and mixed by dealers with seed put upon the home market for sale to our farmers, to their pecuniary loss and the detriment of their lands; to see that the color is black and that

A WELL BRED JACK.

Besides this, the buyer should assure himself that the animal is a proved breeder. When you have secured these points in an animal you can be pretty sure of getting your money's worth. "As in all lines, there are tricks which every man who starts out to buy a jack should know in order to protect himself from being made the object of untrustworthy dealers. Ordinarily it is a very easy matter to swindle the average jack buyer, as nine out of ten who are out to purchase know nothing about the requirements of a good animal, and invariably they are taken advantage of. There are a good many breeders in the business who are practicing the policy of selling direct to the buyer instead of letting their productions go to the large cities and there be retailed out to buyers from different parts of the country. This plan of buying direct from the breeder has every advantage, and I would recommend it strongly. There are a good many things regarding the purchase of a jack which cannot be explained on paper, and therefore the buyer who would get the most worth of his money should use some discrimination in the choice of those whom he patronizes.

Lack of Water Lessens Milk Flow. selves in the matter of water. They must have all they want of such a temperature as will induce them to drink enough to supply their needs. Many a cow "falls down" in her milk production because she is starving for water, the water being either difficult of access or too cold to be palatable.

THE SHEPHERD.

Have a hospital pen where the sheep that give evidence of being sick can be isolated and treated. Many a contagious disease can in this way be kept from spreading in a flock.

Woven Wire Best For Fence. Fences for sheep should not be less than three feet high with post every sixteen feet, and preferably of woven wire with a single barbed wire at the top. Barbed wire is apt to cause the loss of wool, because sheep when in full fleece are frequently crowded through, especially if the wires are not stretched tightly.

From records kept at the Wisconsin experiment station of 240 ewes covering a period of five years the following conclusions were drawn:

Shropshire ewes appear to be more prolific than any other breed. Ewes six years old produce the largest percentage of increase, while young ewest have the greater percentage of single lambs. The percentage of rain lambs increases and the percentage of owe lambs decreases as the age of the ewe advances. A ram is at his best at two or three years of age. The age of the ram does not have any effect on the sex of the offspring. Ram lambs average about one-half pound heavier at birth than ewe lambs. The larger the ewe the greater the percentage of mcrease, while the ram has no effect on the lambs in this respect.

Feeding Sheep.

It is always advisable in feeding sheep not to feed too much corn (h ver, hay and corn in equal parts by weight should be given during the fattening period. Except for fattening purposes it is better not to feed sheep on corn at all. Corn is said to contain about 60 per cent of starch and G per cant of oil, both being very digestible. Oil makes fat, and the starch produces heat and also fat. On account of i.s. heat producing power it is inadvisable to feed corn. Because of there not haing any great quantity of protein in sorn it is necessary to feed something we with it, either clover or alfalfa

The following story will be of interest to farmers, and others:

I am a farmer and I raise rye. One day I took a bushel of my rye down to the distiller and sold it to him for 50%. The distiller got out of that bushel of rye three and one-half gallons of proof (although I hear now that he can get four gallons out of a bushel), which he sold to the saloon keeper. I then started in with that saloon keeper to drink up my bushel of rye at 10¢ a drink, eight drinks to the pint, or 80¢ for a pint, or $6.40 for a gallon. The three and one-half gallons of proof whiskey which my 50% bushel of rye made, had cost me $22.40. I had to sell enough rye to the distiller to get money to pay the saloon keeper. When I hauled my forty-four and four-fifths bushels of rve to the distiller to pay for what he had gotten out of one bushel, I said to myself, "What a fool I was!" there another farmer as big a fool as I

Our town was visited on Thursday evening, with the heaviest storm that has occurred for several years. Considerable hail fel!, and the rain for nearly an hour came down in torrents, flooding the streets and doing considerable damage to garden and truck patches, while large trees were blown down and corn fields were badly washed, and will have to, in many cases be replanted.

Our citizens were very much disap-pointed over the failure of the soldiers to camp here, Thursday night. All arrangements had been made for their ac commodation while here. Large quantities of food, both for man and beast, had been ordered, but owing to the heavy rains and the bad condition of the roads, they thought it best to change the route and go by the way of Emmitsburg.

Miss Minnie Wastler, daughter of T A. Wastler, a former member of the Maryland Legislature, distinguished herself and her sex by killing a nest of copperhead snakes on the mountain near her home at Cascade, near Pen Mar, on Tuesday. Miss Wastler sudden-ly came upon the snakes in the road, and instead of becoming frightened and running away, she began to shower stones at the snakes. The first stone killed the largest of the reptiles, and in quick order the young woman dispatched the others. All of the snakes were full grown.

Hicks' Story.

It was in 1847 that Hicks first made a county name as a witty raconteur. een member for Bodmin since the great reform bill, lost his seat and in a petulant mood took legal proceedings against Hicks on the ground that he had abused his official position to influence voters at the poll. In the course of the trial Hicks was called upon to state what he had to say in his defense. In the course of his state of which Melinda Rinamon, late of Carroll County, deceased, died, seized and possessed, ment he asked leave of the court to illustrate his position by a story. His request being assented to, he related how a few days previously he had been to see a lad whom he knew well who was laid up from a fall from a vicious donkey, which had kicked out all his front teeth. The lad, said Hicks, had taken the matter in the most kindly way and had said to him, 'Tisn't the fall, Mr. Hicks, and 'tisn't the vally of the teeth what annoys me, but 'tis the nashty, ghastly, wishous disposition of the jackass." Sir Samuel Spry sprang up in the well of the court in a fury and exlaimed, "He has called me a jackass!" The court was convulsed with laughter, and Hicks was promptly and fully acquitted of the trumpery charge brought against him.-Cornhill Magaand all the horrors accruing thereto, have very often been the outcome of trifling incidents which might, had they been treated properly, have been smoothed over and the slaughter averted. More often was this the case in earlier times than it is now. Every one knows that William the Conqueror lost his life in France through his horse treading on a redhot cinder while he was superintending the burning of Mantes, but few people know the fact which gave rise to the campaign that cost William his life.

During the latter part of his reign he became abnormally stout and consequently the laughingstock of not only his subjects, but his neighbors across the water. One day his contemporary, Philip of France, compared him to a fillet of veal on casters and suggested that he should be exhibited at a prize monarch show. This so enraged William that he straightway made war upon his ridiculer, and the loss of thousands of lives was the result.-London Tit-Bits

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.] Washington has an innovation in the weather service line. Pedestrians along Pennsylvania avenue have noticed a boothlike structure at the intersection of Pennsylvania avenue and E street, almost opposite the new District building. They have wondered what manner of building it is and for what purpose it was placed Officially the little cast iron building is known as a "meteorological kiosk," but in plainer English it is a downtown automatic weather station. The station was erected by Professor Charles F. Marvin under the direction of Professor Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau, and is outfitted with meteorological instruments of up to date pattern and ready to convey weather information to the general public.

A Meteorological Kiosk.

The instruments in the shelter comprise a thermograph to automatically record the street temperature, thermometers to give the maximum and minimum temperatures in a given period of time, a hygrometer, which shows the amount of humidity in the air; a standard thermometer and an automatic rain gauge, which registers on a dial the amount of rain that has fallen in a certain period.

By means of the outdoor weather station every man who wishes may be his own weather observer. The public is not permitted to enter the kiosk, but may through the four windows read the instruments, the weather map and the forecast cards.

It is said similar automatic weather kiosks will be established in other cities should the one here prove to be successful, as it is believed it will.

National Art Federation.

Tentative plans are being made to form in this city a national art federation to include within its fold about 300 societies composed of painters, sculptors, architects, artisans and others having artistic aims who have been invited to send delegates to the proposed convention. The exact date has not yet been fixed, but it is believed the convention will be called some time in January.

During the convention there will be on exhibition in the Corcoran Gallery of Art a very complete collection of the works of Augustus St. Gaudens and a national exhibition of American paintings.

For a National University.

That Washington, as the seat of the federal government, also should be the seat of a great national university, at which all the states should be represented on an advisory council, was advocated here at the closing session of the thirteenth annual meeting of the National Association of State Universities.

President Edward J. James of the University of Illinois, as spokesman for a bill now pending in congress to provide for such a university, won over many of his fellow college presidents in support of the movement. The purpose of the proposed university is to provide for the higher instruction and training of men and women for posts of importance and responsibility in the public service of the federal government or of states and for such professions as may require a higher training. The bill provides for the appropriation of $500,000 with which to establish the initial equipment of the university. Boxed With the President.

J. J. Parker, an amateur athlete of St. Paul, who boxed with Roosevelt on a ranch twenty-seven years ago, called on the president a few days ago. Mr. Parker brought a letter from Frank B. Kellogg, the antitrust lawpresident recognized his caller as soon as he espied him as the man with whom he boxed several times on a western ranch.

"I called merely to pay respects and was cordially received," said Mr. Parworld in politics, but the president gave me a picture of each of the three younger children, and I prize them more than any office."

Firecrackers Tabooed.

Regarding the use of fireworks and other explosives in celebration of In- jurer a counterfeit dollar, and he gave dependence day as a "barbaric fash- me back a good one.-Exchange. ion," the commissioners of the District have drafted a regulation to prohibit the practice. The commissioners think July 4 can be celebrated in a more fitting manner than by the use of fireworks, and the regulation is intended principally to prevent the large number of deaths and accidents occasioned by fireworks, as well as to do away with the racket and din occasioned by their explosion.

The regulation provides that no firecracker, squib or other fireworks of any kind shall be sold and delivered, discharged or set off in Washington or the fire limits. On occasions of public celebration and exhibition fireworks may be discharged through special permit of the commissioners.

CARL SCHOFIELD

Origin of Old Glory.

In the reminiscences of Lord Ronald Gower is found a story of the origin of the stars and stripes.

The "star spangled banner" of the American republic had its origin from an old brass on the floor of an ancient thurch in Northamptonshire. The brass covers the tomb of one Robert Washington and is dated 1622. On it appears the Washington coat of arms, consisting of three stars, with bars or stripes beneath them. On the first day of the new year, 1776, the thirteen united colonies raised a standard at Washington's headquarters.

This introduced the stripes of the present, but retained the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a blue ground in the corner. In 1777 the crosses were replaced by stars, as the Declaration of Independence rendered the retention of the English element unnecessary and inconvenient. In thus adopting the arms of his ancestors as his own distinctive badge Washington no doubt intended the flag merely as a private signal for his own personal following, but it was at once adopted as a national emblem. Probably there is not another case in the world's history in which the private arms of an obscure family have attained such worldwide eminence and repute.

The Bank Could Stand It.

A western lawyer tells of a remarkable instance of the convincing power of feminine logic as evidenced by an occurrence which he once witnessed while standing on the edge of a crowd that was besieging the doors of a bank supposed to be on the point of suspending payment.

A conversation between a rosy cheeked Irishwoman and her husband, who were near the lawyer, at once attracted his attention. "Mary," said the man, "we must push up, so ye can dhraw your money at onet!" "But I don't want to draw it out,

Roger," replied Mary placidly. "Don't ye know, Mary," persisted the husband, "that they'll lose your money for ye if ye don't hurry t' dhraw it out?"

"An' shure, Roger." retorted Mary, "ain't they better able to lose it than we are?'

Roger was stunned by this unanswerable logic, and after a few more words the two withdrew. Fortunately the bank survived its difficulties, and no depositor lost a cent.-Harper's.

A Purse For the Bride.

Some brides may be inclined to re gret that the old marriage custom of the dow purse has fallen into disuse. It was the custom of the bridegroom to fill a purse with a goodly sum of money and present it to the bride on the wedding day as the price of the purchase of her person. It sounds like slavery, like the buying of goods and chattels, yet the bride had a nice little sum of money for her own use. Some of the oldest inhabitants of Cumberland may remember a similar custom in that county. The bridegroom provided himself with a number of gold and silver pieces, and at the words "with all my worldly goods I thee endow" he handed the clergyman his fee and poured the other coins into a handkerchief held out for by the bride In other that purpo places, again, the bride had the right to ask her husband for a gift of money or property on the day after the wedding, and he was bound in honor to grant the request.-London Answers.

During a little pedestrian trip a gentleman came unexpectedly upon a country race course and on one portion of the ground found a thimblerig establishment in full work. Notwithstanding the remonstrance or his companion, the gentleman, who was a bit of a madcap, insisted on watching the

"Now, would the gent like to wager a crown he could find the pea?" remarked the expert.

"Yes." was the reply.

The money was on both sides deposited, and the pedestrian, lifting up the thimble, pointed out the required pea and took the stakes.

A second bet, "double or quits," ended, to the surprise of the expert, in the same result.

Then a third wager, "a pound or nothing," steadied the nerves of the loser, and the trick was accomplished with great caution. The gentleman lifted up the thimble and showed the pea, at the same time pocketing the

In Modern Egypt.

Douglas Sloden's book on Egypt contains some curious anecdotes. For instance: "My doctor was called to see an Egyptian who was in a very low state. 'What is the matter?' he asked. 'I think it is only depression. I have been a fool and lost a law case. I would not backsheesh the other man's lawyer, and he backsheeshed mine.' Later on when another Egyptian told my friend that he had won a law case my friend said, 'I suppose you backsheeshed the other man's lawyer?" The Egyptian gave a beautiful smile and said, 'How did you know?' "
And again: "I was at Luxor when they were recruiting for the army. If a young man was found to be physically fit his relations were plunged in grief. Professional mourners were hired to squat outside the police station where the recruiting took place, yelling and weeping. If, on the other hand, he was rejected as undersized or a weakling or tainted with a loathsome disease, his relations and friends flew to him rejoicing and kissed him and hung on his neck."

"Goes" of Whisky.

Forty "goes" of whisky had been consumed by the licensed victualer, and still he was sober-at least so be told the city coroner. "Goes" is a common term in this connection, but it lacks the full appropriateness to the situation of its Scottish equivalent in the story of another big drink told by Dean Ramsay. It was at a party near Arbroath, held to celebrate the reconciliation of two farmers who had long been enemies. When the party at last broke up, at a morning hour, the penurious lady of the house, who had not been able to sleep a wink for anxiety, called over the stairs to the servant: "How many bottles of whisky have they used. Betty?"

"I dinna ken, mem," was the answer, "but they've druncken six gang o' wa-

Expert Figuring.

A well known actor tells a story of a ne'er-do-well in a little New England town where he has often spent his summers. "I was walking down the main street one day," said he, "when I saw old Silas grinning from ear to ear. I hardly thought that he was that glad to see me. So after speaking to him I said: 'Why the smile that won't come off, Silas? What has happened to make you so happy this morning?' 'I've been a-gittin' married this mornin',' was the unexpected reply. 'Married! You?' I exclaimed. 'Why, Silas, what on earth have you done that for? You know you can't even support yourself as it is.' 'Waal,' said Silas, 'you see, it's this way: I ken purty hear support myself, an' I kind of figured out that she could finish up the job." "-Argonaut.

A Sensible Person. An old Scottish lady during her last illness was assiduously attended by a physician, to whom she invariably gave a guinea when he came to see her. He told the friends with whom she lived that her death would probably be very sudden, and one day when she seemed to have become unconscious the doctor was hastily sent for. On his arrival he found that his patient had ceased to exist, and, taking hold of her right hand, which was closed, but not rigid, he calmly extracted from it the customary fee, remarking as he dld so to the attendant friends, "Sensible to the last!"

WOMAN AND FASHION

Cord Trimmings.

Popular among the winter's trimmings is the lacing of cord, braid, silk or satin which is drawn through eyelets and tied in a knot with long ends. In the illustration such a lacing is shown, this one being of soft, rather heavy silk, used double and finished with tassels in the same shade. The lacing and the binding used around the scalloped edges of the bodice are of brown in a deeper tone than that of the cashmere frock. The tuckedguimpe is of mousseline de soie. The same lacing, somewhat narrower, is lower sleeve over a tucked strip of the mousseline de soie.

All sorts of materials are used for these lacings, according to the sort of costume on which they are to be used, and there are few costumes in the wardrobe on which they do not appear. Gold ribbon, rather soft in quality, so that it may be doubled, is finished with gold balls or tassels. Figured gold ribbons are also used for this purpose under some conditions, but the most popular material of which to make the lacings is soft satin of the same shade as the gown.

Trimmings For Cloth Gowns.

Embroidered bands are fashionable for cloth or velvet gowns, and color is introduced into them in many different ways and with satisfactory effect. It is interesting to see how a touch of green, blue, cerise or yellow worked into a dull monotone will lighten it or how a thread of gold or silver or sharply contrasting black will entirely change and transform a model gown that has been unbecoming. There is certainly no excuse whatever this season for a woman to be unbecomingly gowned, for with the colored trimmings and the white yoke almost any color is possible, as it need not be near

A New Silk.

Aluminium silk has been used rather sparingly hitherto in the shape of girdles and sashes. Now it has come out in blouse form, and the result is decidedly attractive. One blouse of this silk is made on tailored shirt iines with broad, flat plaits and is relieved at the throat by a fold of purple velvet beneath a frill of malines lace. In more elaborate style this silk is admirable to wear with a suit of gray ottoman silk or a coat of gray

Great Baseball Catches.

Stories of exciting baseball plays and of many deciding moments in great games are recounted by Hugh S. Fullerton, the baseball expert, in the June the story of the greatest catch ever made:

"The greatest individual feat ever performed was one by which Bill Lange, now retired, saved a game for Chicago 1895. There is an odd story connected reach New York in time to play there and Anson had fined him $100. Thereupon he missed a train to Washingtonarrived on the grounds after the teams had practised and just in time to play, begin with, and so we don't get off withand for that Anson fined him another $100. The game that afternoon went in the eleventh. There were two men out and a runner on the bases, when terrific blow and sent it flying over Lange's head toward the centre field fence. The hit seemed a sure home run, but Lange, a man weighing 225 pounds, turned and without looking sprinted desperately straight out toward the fence, racing with the flying ball. At the last head, Lange leaped, stuck up both hands, turned a somersault and crashed against the fence. The boards splintered, one entire panel crushed outward, and out of the wreckage crawled Lange, holding the ball in his hand, and the crowd with the crowd standing on seats shouting, and he said to Anson: 'Fines go, Cap?' 'Nope,' said Anson, and the catch had sayed the big fielder $200."

Inside the fence sloped at an ankle of about 65 degrees, being straight on the outer side. Boston was playing there late in the season in which the two teams had their frantic struggle for the pennant, and late in the game, with runners on bases, Stahl drove a long fly to right that seemed likely to win the game for Boston. His momentum carried him higher along the incline, and before the big crowd realized that he caught the ball, he was running along the top of the fence, and then holding the ball aloft, he plunged over and went outside the grounds. Probably never a baseball player in the world received such a rousing ovation as he did when he climbed over the fence and tossed the ball to the infield."

Feminine Tricks in Smuggling.

Too few people think it a crime to swindle the customs. For that reason many bright and brainy persons think hard how to get goods from abroad without paying toll to Uncle Sam. As most of the successful operators in this line are women, who have more time to think about such things than men, it can be imagined that the customs officers have to be eternally alert to protect the government.

How To Save Money.

R. S. McKinney the popular druggist, is selling Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation. In addition to selling a fifty cent bottle, containing a month's treatment of sixty doses, for 25 cents, he gives his personal guarantee with every bottle he sells to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

Doctor's bills can be saved by the use of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of dyspepsia and constipation, and by taking advantage of this special half price introductory offer, our readers can save half the regular price of the specific.

This remarkable remedy is destined to have the largest sale of any medicine upon the market, for those who use it once, not only buy a second package, but they recommend it to their friends as the only relief they have found for constipation and dyspepsia.

The Farmer's Daughter to the Jobless Man.

A contributor to "The Pilgrim's Scrip" n the June American Magazine writes:

"I have just read the article entitled Looking for a Job' in the April number of your magazine. I am greatly interested in the problem of the unemployed from the other side. But when it comes to a question of daily bread, and clothes to wear, I should like to ask why the problem we are facing in the country is never considered.

"I am living on a four-hundred-acre farm in southern Michigan, in a small village five miles from the railroad. There is plenty of work on our farm for from two to six men all the time at a dollar and a quarter a day and board. I have been advertising and searching for months for a girl or woman for general housework. Our work is not heavy. We have everything possible in the way of labor-saving devices. I am willing to pay four dollars a week with board and oom. We want help, just plain, ordinary men and women, who will work ten hours a day and do what they are told to do. They don't even have to think for themselves. And I am stating the case of practically all the farmers around here. There is plenty of work with good wages and low expenses in our little village here for at least twentyfive of the 'unemployed.'

"I believe, moreover, that the case is very nearly the same all over the country outside of the cities and manufacturing centers. A Japanese Strawberry Omelet.

"A Japanese cook taught me the other day how to make a strawberry omelet,' says Fannie Merritt Farmer in Woman's Home Companion for June. "Wash and pick over one pint of strawberries. Cut in halves, put in an earthen bowl, and add one third of a cupful of powdered sugar, one half teaspoonful of vanilla, one tablespoonful of water and a few grains of salt. Let stand in a warm place tifteen minutes. Beat eight eggs slightly, and add one half cupful of cream, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one half teaspoonful of salt.

Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a hot omelet-pan, and when melted, pour in the egg mixture. As it cooks, prick and pick up with a fork until the whole is of a creamy consistency. For Cleaning Wall-Paper.

To clean wall-paper use the following recipe: Ten cents' worth of liquid ammonia, ten cents' worth of oil of sassafras, one teaspoonful (even full) of soda, two teaspoonfuls (even tull) of salt and one quart of cold water. Mix the cold water with the ingredients, then add white flour until it is thick enough to drop from a spoon. Put in a covered pail, set in a kettle of boiling water, and cook until done, stirring often. If it does not stick to the hands when cool, it divide into "loaves," working each piece a while in the hand. Take out only what is needed, leaving the rest covered in the pail, to prevent the ammonia from evaporating. Rub the wall with a loaf, working the dirt into the dough. When very dirty exchange for a clean loaf. This removes dirt and grease magically and leaves old paper as good as new when used carefully .- Woman's Home Companion for June.

Cream of Asparagus Soup.

One Bunch of asparagus, one pint of water, one slice of onion, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one quart of milk, one bay leaf, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of pepper.

Cut the tops from the asparagus and throw them into cold water. Cut the remaining portion of the bunch into small pieces; add the water; cover the kettle and stew gently for a half hour; press through a colander. Turn this into a double boiler; add the milk. Rub the butter and flour together. Take a little milk from the boiler; add it to the butter and flour, and keep on rubbing and adding until you have a paste. Now turn it all into the double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until it is the thickness of cream. While this is cooking throw the tops into a little salt water; add a bay leaf, and cook carefully for 15 minutes; drain, throw them into the cream soup; add salt and pepper and serve at once.

Why the Judge Paid.

A physician, says a medical journal that vouches for the truth of the story, was once summoned in haste to attend the child of a family that lived in two rooms in the heart of a large American city-not New York. The child had been seized suddenly and seriously and just at election time. The mother was in despair, and when the doubtful prognosis was given she broke into wailing and violent self condemnation for some horrible sin of the family to which she said the child illness was due—a direct punishment for their crime. She would go and curse the magistrate for it all, her husband should resign from "the force," and such evil ways should be renounced forever. Curious to know how the magistrate could be held responsible for the child's illness, the doctor finally secured the confession that the crime of the poor, conscience stricken woman consisted in allowing the names of many fraudulent voters to be registered as residing in her house, in swearing to the lie, etc. The magistrate also had demanded this of all the neighbors in return for indescribable political favors.

The child recovered, and the magistrate paid the physician's bill.

Boston's English.

"If I were asked to name the city of these United States where the purest English is now spoken," said Otis Skinner, the actor, "I should unhesitatingly pronounce in favor of Boston. The clarity of speech there is not confined to people of wealth and culture, but extends to the working classes, the toilers and persons in all stations of life. I do not say that this excellence in articulation and this admirable pronunciation can be found all over New England. Corruption of speech begins not many miles from Boston and the distressing nasal twang is difficult to escape. In Philadelphia a peculiar burr that is distinctly provinsections of the middle west this burr assumes more or less exasperating forms."

Wanted Results.

"You are always trying to throw cold water on my literary ambitions,' growled the aspiring author. "You say it doesn't pay. Look at Charles Dickens, will you? He left a fortune of $400,000, all earned with his pen." "I know it, dear," said his wife, caressing him. "but don't you remember that Aladdin could make more than that in five minutes by simply rubbing an old lamp? I'd so much rather you'd do something of that kind, Will!" -Chicago Tribune.

"Then we'll have another dance instead of going to that fashionable restaurant," remarked the thrifty swain. "And," he added mentally, "that's $6

"You often hear clerks say they would rather be bricklayers on account of the pay, but they don't know what they're talking about. Clerking beats bricklaying every day in the week and twice on Sunday.'

He took another cheese sandwich in his long, pale, ink stained fingers and. perched on the lunch counter's high stool, declaimed warmly:

"Clerks, however poor, are popular with the ladies on account of their fine clothes, but bricklayers, when they go sparking, get the cold shoulder.

"A bricklayer, no matter how much he makes, has trouble in getting into swell boarding houses, for his clothes soil the fine furniture, but a clerk, with his white hands, is welcome in any house he can afford. "I know what I'm talking about, for I bricklaid two years before I took to clerking. And you'll find lots of young bricklayers forsaking the trowel for the pen; but, though clerks often say bitterly that they'd rather lay bricks than push a pen, they don't really mean it-they never turn."-Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The Dog of Montargis.

Animal actors are by no means new to the stage. There are on record instances where a four legged performer has made the greatest success in a play, drawing hundreds of people night after night by the magnetism of his inarticulate art. In 1814 "The Dog of Montargis" was produced at Covent Garden theater, London. It was written around a true incident in which a man was murdered in the forest of Bondy and the murderer tracked by means of his dog. One day this dog suddenly sprang at the throat of a man and almost killed him, whereupon the wretch, terror struck, confessed that he was the murderer. This dramatic incident formed the basis of the play, and everything depended upon the cleverness of the dog. He was called Dragon, and his acting was somarvelous that the play achieved a remarkable success, running for thirty+ nine performances.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL,

Lesson X .- Second Quarter, For June 6, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Jas. iii, 1-12. Memory Verses 8-10-Golden Text, Prov. 21-23-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.] We had last week the option of a Whitsuntide lesson on the Holy Spirit, and such a study would fit well into either the lesson of last week on the outward manifestation of faith or this one on the inward victory over that which too often controls the tongue. The Holy Spirit, having full control in His own house-for we are temples of the Holy Ghost-is the great secret of a correct outer or inner life. We speak of desiring more of the Spirit, whereas He is ever desiring more of us. According to chapter iv, 5, R. V., margin, "The Spirit whom He caused to dwell in us jealously desireth us." God is always more ready to bless than we are to be blessed. This lesson, like the last, comes under the head of the second phase of our salvation, the manifestation of the life of Christ in us. He never sinned either in thought or word, but what shall be said of us who so often fail? And can we ever expect to be the perfect people of verse 2 who offend not in word? A great horse is turned about as the driver wills by a bit in his mouth, and a great ship is turned about by a very small helm, and the tongue, which no one can tame. affects our whole being, and too often not for good. The trouble is in the heart (verse 14), for our Lord said that those things that proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart and defile us (Matt. xv. 18, 19). The lesson says that out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing, and, as the same fountain cannot send forth both sweet water and bitter, there must be in the believer two fountains, the old and the new, that which is carnal and sinful and that which is born of God, which cannot sin.

The old is earthly and devilish; the new is from above, pure and peaceable (15-18). The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other. But if we live in the Spirit, Walk in the Spirit and are led by the Spirit we shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh (Gal. v, 16-25). If we could keep our mouths and our tongues we would certainly keep our souls from much trouble, as the Golden Text says, but who is equal to it? When we consider it we feel like saying with Asa. "Help us, O Lord our God, for we rest on Thee, and in Thy name we go," or with Jehoshaphat, "We have no might, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are upon Thee" (II Chron. xiv, 11; xx, 12). In this as in all the Christian life we need to learn our utter helplessness in ourselves; that in us-that is, in our flesh-dwelleth no good thing (Rom. vii, 18), but that in the Lord have we righteousness and strength

(Isa. xlv, 24).

From above alone is the power, and, fully yielded to Him who is able and who has said, "I, the Lord do keep it; I will water it every moment; lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day' (Isa. xxvii, 3), we may rely upon Him to do in and through us what to us is impossible. With Ps. xix, 14, as our prayer, "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be ac ceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer," and also Ps. exli, 3. "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips," we can determine, like David, to be deaf and dumb at times (Ps. xxxviii, 13; xxxxix, 9), and by His word hid in our hearts we may be kept from sinning against Him (Ps. cxix, 11). We may become so occupied with God our Father through Jesus Christ that we shall not care to talk about aught but Himself and His kingdom. Then our words will be few and well ordered, and, as out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, if the heart is right the words will be right too. Righteousness and peace and quietness should be the characteristics of a child of God (Isa, xxxii, 17), not worldliness nor envying nor strife nor mere talk.

The citizen of heaven cannot aim to be what is called by the world "good company" for the sake of the world's good opinion. The world says of some, "How entertaining, how well read, how much they have traveled, how intelligently they can talk on any topic, how beautifully they can sing or recite!' and thus people are flattered and made much of and sought after, but the God in whose hand their breath is and whose are all their ways is not glorified. See Jas. iv, 4; I John ii, 15-17, and decide whether you will live as an enemy or a friend of God, whether for the world's approval or His approval, whether to be well versed in the things of this world or of the world to come. Jesus was wholly for God and the good of men, but never for the approval of men. He did and said always those things that pleased the Father. He came down from heaven to do the will of Him who sent Him. He lived in heaven even while on the earth (John iii, 13). We are here in this year adopted the "living link" but to do, not to manifest what we are hand and touch our mouths and all have been paid. The plan has proved will be well (Jer. i, 9).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Frayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 6, 1909. By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Life lessons from the gospal of Luke.—Luke vi, 20-38. (Consecration meet-

Little is known of Luke, the author of the book which we are now to study. He is mentioned a number of times in the New Testament and was an associate of the Apostle Paul (Col. iv, 14; H Tim. iv, 11; Phil. xxiv). That Luke was not a Jew is assured from Col. iv, 14, when the evangelist, "the beloved physician," is distinguished from "those of the circumcision." Luke came into prominence as the companion of Paul in his later journeyings. Though the author of the Acts of the Apostles, he modestly speaks little of himself, and this only by the change of the pronoun to "we," the first personal plural.

He was a physician and, tradition says, a painter as well. Little is known of his further history. "It is as perhaps the evangelist wishes it to be. We only know him while he stands by the side of his beloved Paul, When the Master departs the history of the follower becomes confusion and fable."

Luke's gospel was written to the gentiles, whose great apostle Paul was. One of its peculiar characteristics is the number of Christ's best parables which it records that are not found in any other gospel. Among these are the good Samaritan, the lost coin, the lost sheep, the prodigal son and the Pharisee and publican. The parable of Dives and Lazarus is also found only in Luke.

In a general way the gospel of Luke may be divided as follows:

Preface (i. 1-4). Prophecy, birth and childhood (i, 4;

Introduction to Christ's public ministry (iii, 1; iv, 13). Various phases of Christ's Galilean ministry (iv. 14; xiii, 9). Jericho to Jerusalem (xviii, 31; xix,

Final conflicts and scenes (xx, 1; xxiii, 49).

Burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ (xxiii, 50; xxiv, 53).

The lessons of Luke's gospel suggested in the Scriptural reference consist of those found in the sermon on the mount. The reference itself consists of Luke's account of this address, much abbreviated from that of Matthew. In these we find the beatitudes. woes pronounced upon the rich, commands to love your enemies, the Golden Rule; judge not, be liberal with the promise of returning gifts - "good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over.'

The great lesson of Luke's gospel is that salvation is offered freely to all

Blind Man's

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

They had been talking some minutes over the phone-one of those protracted and intimate conversations in which girls delight and which drive to the point of frenzy the man who wishes to get the line in order to tell his wife that he is to take the 3 o'clock train

It was Hildegarde who broke in on her friend's account of Tuesday's german with a little dismayed shriek.

"Goodness! I didn't dream it was so late. I have an engagement in five minutes, and I'm not half dressed."

"Who is it-Darrell?" It was not a question for the telephone, but Irene never allowed her discretion to stand | the word, but took it gallantly, like a in the way of her curiosity.

Irene the impression that her friend py in spite of everything." was blushing. Darrell's adoration of Hildegarde was the season's joke. It was, however, a very suitable match. Darrell was preposterously rich and not bad looking.

"I'M NOT QUITE USED TO THIS KIND OF BLIND MAN'S BUFF."

"Too bad about Jack Carr, isn't it?" "I don't know what you mean." Hildegarde's tone was suddenly icy.

"Why, you don't mean that you have not heard of his accident?" "Accident! What accident?"

"Bentley Boynton told me about it last evening. I supposed, of course, you knew. You and Jack used to be such friends. Some workmen dropped a bag of lime beside him, and it burst and puffed up into his eyes and blinded him. Poor, dear fellow! But he's so plucky that I dare say he'll make a joke of it.'

Hildegarde rang off abruptly. Her head went down on her arms. Tremors slook her bowed figure. Hot tears rained from her hidden eves

Jack and Hildegarde had been good friends. The worldiy wisdom which belonged to their station in life, the tacit acceptance of the theory that every girl owes it to herself to marry money if she can, alone had kept them from being more. There had been times when the glowing eyes of the young man suggested an almost irresistible temptation to set at defiance the traditions of his class, and the flutter of the girl's heart had acknowledged some uncertainty as to her own course under such circumstances.

But if Jack had kept his tongue in leash, even if his eyes had been less tractable, and had gone his way and left the field to Darrell with his mil-

And now never again would those dear eyes woo her. Never again would she watch from her window that lithe figure swinging down the street as if it walked on air. She saw him groping his way through unending darkness, with only sad memories to keep him company. And then on the desk beside her she saw Darrell's card, which the maid had just laid there.

No one has ever given an explanation of the fact that a woman's tenderness for one man is so likely to result in cruelty to another. But owing to this peculiarity of feminine psychology Darrell's sole reward for a year's devotion was the hasty note the maid brought down five minutes later:

I cannot see you this afternoon. And please do not come again till you are willing that I should be nothing more than your friend.

HILDEGARDE DEVRIES.

"A lady to see me?" Jack Carr, sitting in his darkened room, with a shade over his eyes, betrayed no satisfaction at the prospect of companionship. "What's her name?"

"She didn't say, sir. She said to tell you that a friend would like to see you for a few moments." "Oh, show her up. I'm not much to look at just at present; but, anyway, the room's too dark for her to see." His philosophy stood by him till a swish of skirts on the stairs suggested an idea so preposterous that his heart leaped. He put up his hand as if to ward off a blow. Then a voice said,

"Hildegarde!" He sprang forward. stumbled over a footstool and regained his balance and his self control at the same moment. "I'm not quite used to this cort of blind man's buff," he said in a rather breathless voice. "You must find a chair, please. Awfully good of you to look me up, I'm sure." Hildegarde was thankful that the room was dark. In the clear daylight her courage would have failed her.

"It wasn't good at all," she quavered in an uncertain voice. "I just had to see you, Jack." Her voice died away, and she regained it only by an effort. "Jack, tell me-was I mistaken in thinking that you used to care for

The pause that followed seemed unendurably long. "No," Jack said at last in a voice unlike his own-"no, that was no mistake, God knows."

She breathed more freely now that the plunge was taken. Except for the dryness of her throat and her burning cheeks she felt almost at ease.

"But I was mistaken about myself, Jack. I thought I could be satisfied with a great deal of money and a good social position and all that, and what I wanted all the time was you. I have money enough for both of us. I shan't give you a chance to remember your-blindness." She hesitated at thoroughbred: "I'll be eyes to you and "Ye-es." The hesitating answer gave sunlight-oh, Jack, I'll make you hap-

He crossed the room and stood beside her. "Hildegarde!" he cried hoarsely. "You mean that you are ready to refuse Darrell and marry me?

"Mr. Darrell means well," Hildegarde acknowledged with an air of wishing to give every one his due. "But you're-Jack."

"You-you said something about my eyesight," stammered Jack. "Did you Hildegarde caught his hand. "Oh, dearest, that was what opened my eyes! When I heard that you were blind I couldn't bear it, and then I knew perfectly well that I couldn't live without you.'

He swept her to him, and a blissful moment followed. But the mysterious sixth sense which belongs to you led Hildegarde to divine disquiet in her lover. She drew away palpitating. "Jack, are you sure that you haven't got over caring for me?"

He was so reassuring on this point that the scared color came back to her cheeks. "You're not worrying because you're not rich?" she rebuked him quietly. "Why, Jack, we can get along beautifully with what I have, even if I don't come in for a share of Uncle Enoch's money!"

"It isn't that altogether, darling. You spoke about my eyes"-

She flung her arms about his neck. "My eyes are yours from now on, dear. I'll never give you a chance to know that you've lost anything."

"You are an unselfish angel," said Jack with conviction. "But the truth is, dearest, that the matter has been a little exaggerated. It's been quite painful, you know, but the doctor thinks that in three weeks I can go back to the office again."

"Oh!" Horror turned Hildegarde rigid in his arms. "And I've proposed to you without any excuse."

Jack did not answer-verbally at least-but without the aid of speech The sweet singer of PIANOS. You and in an incredibly short time Hilde- can't get a harsh note from it. And garde was convinced that no excuse it wears for years and years. Be-

Odd Luck at Cards.

There was an extraordinary illustration of beginner's luck given recently by a young man who had been enticed into a poker game by three "experts." The latter were not professional card sharps, but, well acquainted with the game, had no scruples against fleecing an easy mark. Having very diplomatically induced the youth to enter the game and having explained the cardinal principles to him, the play began. Things went quietly for awhile, but finally the excitement started. One "expert" opened the jack pot with three aces, one of the others came in on a pair, while the "easy mark" drew four cards. The man with the three aces started the betting, but the "easy mark" came right back at him. The "expert," having taken note of the four card draw, concluded that the youth was betting on little or nothing and played his three aces far more strongly than he would have done had his opponent been well up in the game. Finally, when the table was piled high with money, the "expert" called. The "easy mark" laid down five spades, not one of them higher than the nine. "But you drew four cards!" exclaimed the "expert" in dismay. "Which one did you hold?" "I held the two of spades," replied the youth. "But why under the sun did yor hold the two of spades?" "That was the only spade I had," said the "easy mark" innocently, and that was the only reason he could give. He played the whole evening in just such luck, and when a halt was finally called the "experts" were far behind the game.-Philadelphia Record.

It is one of the absentminded Professor Rounder's fads to keep himself within certain limits of avoirdupois, and at stated intervals, when he does not forget, he calls at the village stores, tries the scales and notes carefully whether he is going over or under the permitted 225 pounds.

On one occasion he was astonished to observe the machine register 233 pounds. "Tut, tut! Dear me, this will never do!" he frowned. Then a happy smile twinkled in his eyes as a home and puncture my bank account, he reflected: "Of course. Last week but he isn't."-Houston Post. wore no overcoat."

Removing his outer garment, he threw it over one arm and again conculted the figures. Two hundred and thirty-three pounds!

With a look of scholarly perplexity Professor Rounder walked out into the cold street, still carrying the overcoat over his arm and muttering: "Tut, tut! Dear me! Then I am gaining! This is very serious."-Lippincott's.

There is a man who from a very early age has lived in countries where Spanish is the almost universal tongue. From force of this training he speaks Spanish perfectly. He has not the slightest trace of an English accent, and persons who do not know that he is of American parentage are willing to believe he is a Spaniard, merely from hearing him talk. He is so perfectly bilingual that it shows even in his gestures. When talking with English speaking persons he sits quietly and does his conversing with his mouth alone. Only in case of making a point most emphatically does he use a gesture. But the moment he drops into Spanish his every word is accompanied by a movement of the hands or arms. It is interesting to watch the change from the English to the Spanish side of him, because it comes so suddenly. He really can't speak Spanish without gesturing.-New York Sun.

Carrying a Watch.

"After carrying a watch for thirty years I have just learned something new in watch lore," said the city sales man. "I don't know whether this is true or not, but an old watchmaker told me. I bought a watch of him the other day. It was a cheap watch. He

"'What pocket are you going to carry your watch in-the right or left?" "I told him the left

"'Then,' said he, 'I will regulate it for the left."

"I asked what difference it made. and he declared that a watch runs faster on the left side than on the right so to keep it from gaining time he regulates it accordingly. In fine watches the difference is hardly worth considering, but in watches of chean make like mine it is very noticeable. I asked for a scientific reason for this variation. He could give none: said he only knew it was true, and then, whether he was faking or not, he pretended to regulate my watch for the left pocket."-New York Sun.
