to Enumerators Covering this Point.

The more information that can be made public in advance, regarding the taking of the census, the more readily can the required information be secured by the enumerators. We give, below, instructions from the Census Bureau as which should be THE CARROLL RECORD.

The person who "has no time to read," or no inclination to do it, is to who are to be enumerated, in towns and cities, especially, covering the question of legal residence, involving the wrong somewhere, and the one who says status of visitors, students, and persons "it costs too much," is in the same fix—

All answers are to have reference solely to the "Census Day," which is April 15. Persons living on that day, but who died after it and before the enumerators call, are to be counted, but persons born after April 15 are not to be included in doing toward supporting them?

THE CARROLL RECORD wants you and your neighbors for subscribers, but before you decide to drop same other.

As a rule, the usual place of abode is not the place where a person works or where he eats, but where he regularly sleeps. The enumerators are cautioned, however, that where a man happens to sleep at the time of the enumeration may not be the place where he regularly sleeps. There will be a number of persons having their usual places of abode in enumeration districts who will be absent April 15. These are to be included and enumerated after the facts regarding them have been obtained from their families, relatives, acquaintances, or other persons able to give the information. For instance, if a member of any family in an enumeration district is temporarily away from home on a visit, or on business, or traveling for pleasure, or attending school or college, or sick in a hospital, such absent person is to be enumerated and included with other members of the family. But a son or daughter regularly living in another lo-cality should not be counted with the family at home.

Servants, laborers, or other employees, who live with the family, and sleep in the same house or on the premises, should be enumerated with the family.

The Census Bureau states that there will be, on the other hand, a certain number of persons present and perhaps lodging and sleeping in districts at the time of the enumeration who do not have their usual places of abode there. These are not to be enumerated. It must be assumed that they will be enumerated elsewhere. The canvassers should not, therefore, unless it is practically certain that they will not be enumerated anywhere else, enumerate or include with the members of a family they are enumerating any of the following classes:
Persons visiting a family;

Transient boarders or lodgers who have some other usual or permanent place of abode;

Students or children living or boarding with a family in order to attend school, college, or other educational institution in the locality but not regarding the place as their home;

Persons who take their meals with a family but lodge elsewhere;

Servants, apprentices, or other persons employed by a family and working in the house or on the premises, but not sleeping there; or

Any person who was formerly in a family, but who has since become a permanent inmate of an asylum, almshouse, home for the aged, reformatory, prison, or any other institution in which the inmates may remain for long periods

It need not be a house in the common meaning of the word, but may be, for example, room in a factory, store, or office building, a loft over a stable, a canal boat, a tent, or a wigwam. A "family," as a census term, may mean a group of individuals who occupy jointly a dwelling place or part of a dwelling place, or an individual living alone in any place of abode. All the occupants and employees of a hotel, if they regularly sleep there, make up a single family, because they occupy one dwelling place, and persons living alone in cabins, huts, or tents; persons occupying a room or rooms in public buildings, stores, warehouses, factories, or stables; and persons sleeping on river boats, canal boats, barges, etc., if they have no other usual place of abode, are regarded as families.

The enumerators are required to enter on the schedule the name of every person whose usual place of abode on April 15, 1910, was with the family or in the dwelling place for which the enumeration is being made. The head of the family is to be entered first; then the wife; next the children, whether sons or daughters, in the order of their ages; and lastly, all other persons living with the family, whether relatives, boarders, lodgers, or servants.

Its opponents' outcry against it, is that its passage will curtail personal liberty. Suppose it does, ought not personal liberty be curtailed when the public welfare requires it? Let us take the case just now agitating the country— the white slave traffic. Will any good citizen say that this nefarious traffic shall go on unmolested-that we have no right to pass restrictive laws against those engaged in it? Or again, in the liquor traffic, that is ruining so many happy homes and destroying so many, many lives? Maryland's Disappearing Timber Supply.

There are 2,000,000 acres of woodland in the State from which was cut in 1908 nearly $5,000,000 worth of material. The principal cut was lumber amounting to 225,000,000 board feet, but included also immense quantities of piling, mine props, cordwood, poles, railroad ties, pulpwood, lath and shingles. This took more than three times the growth of the forests for that year and points to but one thing, that we are using our forests condition that cannot long continue for we will soon use up all of our capital.

We use six times as much wood per capita as Germany, nine times as much as France, and sixteen times as much as Great Britain. The same follies that these countries practiced toward their forests before forest preservation became a public necessity we are practicing now, and like them we are destined to suffer calamities, unless we can be taught to profit by their experiences.

One thing is certain, that when our own supplies are exhausted we cannot depend upon other countries to come to our rescue for none of them have timthe attitude we now take in regard to this forest question.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

ly. Party Leaders Becoming Anxious.

Democratic newspapers, and party leaders not members of, or directing the affairs of, the legislature, are becoming more and more concerned about the slowness of legislation promised in the party platform. The session is about two-thirds over, with practically no important legislation either finished, or far advanced. The general opinion now is that as the Republicans are in such a hopeless minority, no measure will be given much time when it does come up, but will be put through with little or no debate.

The anti-saloon bill will be reported in the House, next Wednesday. Doubt still exists as to the nature of the report, as the committee seems to be about equally divided. Both sides are claiming a majority in the House, but the chances seem favorable to the passage of the bill there, the outlook not being so favorable in the Senate. The last hearing was held before the Committee, on Wednesday, the closing argument being made by Supt. Anderson. Over 500 bills have been presented in the Senate and House, up to this time, and more are to come.

Senator Gorman has presented a bill which requires only the title of Constitutional Amendments to be printed on ballots, and not the entire amendments. The only effect of the bill, if passed, would be to shorten the size of the ballot.

In addition to a bill granting woman suffrage in municipal elections in Baltimore, there is also one giving suttrage throughout the state. Neither will likely amount to much more than giving carrides to enthusiasts and delegations to Annapolis. There are quite a number of men-chiefly clergymen, teachers and physicians-who are indorsing one or the other of the bills.

On a tavorable report from the Hygiene Committee, of which Dr. Ashby is chairman, the Pure Food bill was on Thursday advanced and ordered engrossed for third reading. The battle on ice cream was fought out on amendments from Mr. Dawkins and Mr. Henderson, both of which were overwhelmingly defeated, and the way was thus cleared for speedy passage of the measure. The opponents of the ice cream clause, requiring 14 per-cent of butter fat as the standard of purity, were defeated, after a hot debate lasting over an hour. Motions to amend to a standard of 6 and 8 per-cent, were both defeated.

In the House engrossing-room there is being made ready for introduction in the legislature a new franchise amendment the work of Mr. Henderson of the Montgomery county delegation. It is similar to the franchise amendment defeated at the polls in November, 1909, except that provision is made for the registration of foreign-born citizens, no matter when naturalized, provided they resided in the United States for seven continuous years preceding their application to have their names enrolled on the registration books.

Thus far this session the talk of a new franchise amendment has not struck a very responsive chord in the bearts of gress. pushed in our district, was brought up and a petition presented for signatures. the lawmakers, and whether Mr. Henderson's move will have the effect of inderson's move will have the effect of injecting a little life into an issue that seems to have lost many of its friends remains to be seen.

More than 1000 persons injured, more than 1000 arrests made, more than 5000 windows broken, three persons killed and more are expected to die, business crippled, schools and churches closed, many cars burned and wrecked, and many minor crimes and inconveniences without number, were the results of three days of the strike, this week.

The summoning of state troops, on Wednesday, had the effect of practically putting an end to disorder on Thursday, when car service was re-established with something like regularity, though the Company is short handed; 400 new men, some of them former employees, were hired during the day, which demonstrates the ability of the Company to operate their lines without the help of the strikers, if left alone.

Attorney General Wickersham, acting upon instructions from President Taft, has directed the United States attorney much faster than they are growing-a at Philadelphia to report, at his earliest convenience, whether there has been any interference with the United States mails during the strike of the street car employes. The President also caused the United States attorney at Philadelphia to be directed to see that mail agencies are not interfered with, to cause the arrest and every effort to secure the conviction of anyone attempting to interfere with the mail in any way, and to see that the government's contract with the Philadelphia Transit Company is carried out.

Constructive Legislation.

It is evident that the people will have The Wheels still Grinding Slow-to force good legislation, State and Na-ti nal. As believers in the new politics, we have come to think that government has some other functions besides "keep-ing order and enforcing law." It can-not constitutionally sanction anything that is contrary to public welfare, and, hence, has no right to license the beverage liquor traffic or anything else that is gainst public morals or public health. But we expect government to represent the best judgment of the best people, to be a modern teacher rather than an old fashioned school master. We expect to do something in a constructive way for the progress and advancement of the Big Crops Predicted.

Last year the world's wheat crop was the largest ever grown. Russia especially was notable among the great grainproducing nations, because that country harvested more wheat than it ever before produced in one season, and for the fore produced in one season, and for the first time the Russian yield was larger than the American. For all countries the wheat crop was well above all previous high records, and now the outlook is favorable to another fine harvest.

Australia has been reaping the biggest wheat crop ever produced in that part of the world. Atgentina has another large yield of wheat to help start the new year well. In the principal winter wheat countries of Europe, where the season is farther advanced, as a rule, it is in the United State. than it is in the United States, the conditions are generally favorable. Chili is harvesting a wheat crop which is about 6,000,000 ahead of the yield of 1909. In the United States the abundant snow in many of the winter wheat states is likely to bring the crop through to the spring in good condition. The Canadian harvest was very fine last year, but there will be so large an increase in the acreage in 1910 that with average weather the yield should be of record-break-ing proportions next summer. The world needs this tair promise of abundant bread. THE WORLD IS getting better, and no mistake. Senator Aldrich announces that he is in favor of the administration's Railroad bill, and that he has neither "fixed it up, nor had anything to do with it." Some of the Western Senators are wondering where they are at? ----

THE PUBLIC SERVICE bill has many features to recommend it, the greatest objection being the proposed expense connected with it. The public is entitled to better service, and more accommodations, from railroads and other corporations, and if the proposed law will bring them about, it will be worth a great deal to the people.

A PRIMARY LAW, for the whole state and both parties, seems to us both unwanted, and an unnecessary expense. We have not heard of any demand for it in Carroll, nor do we believe that many of the counties want it. Public sentiment is in favor of less, rather than more, elections and election expense. The bill, as a state-wide measure, should not pass.

A BLATANT OPPONENT of education in general, and the public schools in particular, oppose the compulsory school attendance law for the reason that he opposes all compulsory legislation, saying that "compulsory" is only for those who are "criminal." Exactly so. It is a "crime" against society and the state clause. At that time there were men for any parent to permit, or compel, his on constitutional grounds like the Senachildren to grow up in ignorance. It is for criminally inclined persons that the proposed compulsory school law is intended. The bill will not pass, of course, but it is a good one, just the same.

Too Much Trust Blaming.

There has been a great deal said, recently, about high prices; indeed, the subject has been gone into exhaustively and intelligently, from many points of view, and yet, the question is unsettled, and always will be. The trusts (more | Congress imaginary than real) have been blamed right and left-for somebody must be blamed whenever any disaster occursand perhaps public sentiment is satisfied that the "trusts" are after them, hotfooted, in every direction; but, public sentiment is sometimes mistaken.

There is one right thing, at least, about trusts, and that is, they reduce the cost of marketing their products to the lowest possible point; they aim to do | the general welfare.' the greatest possible amount of business, feature, the power to control prices, to tion-conduct a business, and the consumer must pay all the cost. Leaving the danger of monopoly and greed out of the opinion, we need not rely upon that queer performances took place for our count, every consumer would benefit by clause at all. a much smaller number of stores.

There is another fact, equally true. The losses on account of the credit business, must be paid by those who pay their bills; and this involves another truth—a great one commonly overlooked -there are too many places which take the people's money, and give no real value in return, and thereby swallow up money which ought to go into the chan- let us place the responsibility.' nels of necessary legitimate trade. Much of the credit business, and resulting loss, and get credit, when they can. Practically, the solution to the question of high prices, and hard times to get along, rests with bringing about a condition of low expense in conducting business—reaching the consumer without more than necessary cost added—followed by only a reasonable percentfollowed by

of money through the purchase of things unnecessary-perhaps actually harmful -then the elimination of losses through the credit system. Let these practical questions be settled, and there will be no need for investigations or complaints. Perhaps too many of us hastily blame the trusts, when there are causes much nearer home that are doing us immensely more harm, but which are overlooked.

..... Senator Rayner as an Expounder of the Constitution.

Our eminent Senator Rayner, who discourses in a brilliant and authoritative way as expounder of the Constitution of the United States, is beginning to be referred to somewhat sarcastically by some of his fellow members who resent his specialty, and show a disinclination to accept him as undisputed authority. The Senator's speech against Postal Savings Banks, on the ground of no Constitutional authority, has been made the object of some rather sharp comment along the line mentioned, an example of which is furnished by Senator Burkett, of Nebraska, who, in the course of a lengthy address in the Senate, last week, said:

"The distinguished Senator from Maryland, in one of his heroic and habitual defenses of the Constitution a day or two ago, criticised a speech of mine at the last session of Congress upon the postal savings bank. In fact, a little colloquy between the Senator and myself during the time of my address, which I am sure no one else who heard it took so seriously, seems to have laid heavily upon the Senator's mind during all these intervening months. I am sorry, indeed, if anything that I may have said has been justly the cause of so much anxiety to him. I realize always how solicitous he is about the Constitution, and it was perhaps unwise that I should have undertaken to have pointed a way whereby this Government is able to enact legislation, however just and wise and desirable that legislation may be. We all know the readiness and the facility with which the Senator comes to the defense of the Constitution alike in dangers fancied or real. The fathers themselves who made it were not prouder of their child than is the Senator today of what they did. They were not more devoted to it then than the Senator is now; they were not more sensitive for its preservation nor more apprehensive of its dangers than is the Senator from Maryland."

The "general-welfare" clause as sufficient authority for Congress to establish such banks, was especially characterized as inapplicable, by Senator Rayner. On this point Senator Burkitt says:

"I hope, however, that I am not insane enough to undertake to turn over an accepted construction of these words, quite as old as the words themselves, and never better defined than by John Quincy Adams almost a century ago at a time when he was being assaulted for the Senator does now, "where the spe-cific clause was that would sustain it." ridiculed him for adding a new and un-warranted and unlimited power to the warranted and unlimited power to the Constitution. But in his vigorous reply, the exact words of which I do not have at hand at the moment, Adams said that "common defense and general welfare" are the purposes for the authority to tax. They are declaratory of the purposes for

'The Senator fron Maryland summoned all his unabridged vocabulary to mystify us and his mighty power of in-vective to dragoon us. But I am neither depressed with his words nor annihilated by his eloquence. As great a man as Madison scoffed at the "general-welfare" clause, and contended that it had no meaning. But a greater man was Hamilton, and he said that "general was bread." I refer to this only by way welfare included not only the enumerated powers of the Constitution, but whatever Congress may deem to be for

The Senator further says, in a bitingly through the use of the smallest possible sarcastic vein, after citing a decision of Pharaoh's storage upon the tip Joseph number of stores and employees. Thus Supreme Justice Peckham to the effect gave him. "I am not vain enough to hope that I is due to this very fact. People will waste their money, then go to the stores Marshall could not do. I can not expect to soothe the aching conscience of the Senator from Maryland when the adjudications of the great court of the American people have failed to do it.

Forest Fire Legislation.

A bill just introduced in the State Legislature by Senator Biddison makes ome needed changes in the present forest fire laws that should prove very beneficial. It is along the lines of legislation in other states which are in advance of us in this important matter, and where such legislation has brought very satisfactory results. The proposed law divides the expense of extinguishing forest fires equally between the County and the State. Under the present law the County has to pay the entire expense of extinguishing forest fires, and then has the power to collect the costs from the landowners on whose account the money was expended. This means that the landowner who suffers most from forest fires must not only sustain the loss, but pay the largest share of the expense of putting out the fire for which he is probably in no way responsible. The forest fire question is an important one. Timber is becoming too valuable to permit fires to injure the forests year after year without attempting to suppress them and give the young growth a chance to develop, in order to furnish timber for the next generation.

This bill in addition gives the forest wardens the power of arrest in case of detected violation of the forest laws, and also gives them the power to summon help to extinguish forest fires. The bill should have the support of all woodland

The Bible and Cold Storage.

A distinguished lawyer once remarked that no one could become able and distinguished in his profession without that apples fluctuate, according to the knowing by heart the Bible, Shakespeare and Blackstone. And the food shall be for a store to the land against the seven years of famine which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine." The result of this forethought was, as you will remember, that when the seven lean was bread." I refer to this only by way of illustration, but it suffices to show that the storage of food may have an object consistent with the public welfare.

A Farmer's View of the "High Prices."

"These were the days of cheap food in America. Were they good days? Were they days of healthful growth and development? I say those were the evil days. Then were farmers distressed to pay their laborers, forced to toil without ever a rest, because they could not afford to hire labor at all. Then farming did not pay. Then the bright boys left the farms to seek employment in towns, to take advantage of that artificial condition, too cheap food, wages artificially increased by the protective tariff. The cause of too cheap foodstuffs was doubtless the building of railways into the West, the plowing of the prairies of Iowa, Nebraska Kansas, and other great Western States. We produced too much. Our consumers were too few. Thus 'bleeding Kansas,' thus decaying farms, farmhouses unpainted, mortgages, discouragement and misery almost everywhere that farming was attempted.

"Does any man say that this condition was good for the nation?

"Theodore Roosevelt's Country Life Commission came full twenty years too late. It came just as the country was getting on its feet. At last consumption has overtaken production. We exported little wheat this year. On the farms this year corn has been worth fifty to seventyfive cents per bushel, wheat $1.00 to $1.30, fat cattle five to eight cents per pound (the cheaper ones nearly as nourishing as the dearer, but having less of 'porter-house,' 'sirloin,' or 'rib roast,' more of boiling meat,) hogs from six to eight cents, and prices for most other things about the same scale, saving that potatoes, apples, rice and beans have not materially changed in price, except

Proposed Postoffice Reorganization.

Washington, Feb. 18.-There is a possibility of a general reorganization of the Post Office Department. Senator Carter to-day introduced in the Senate a measure to this end and its duplicate was presented in the House by Representative Weeks, of Massachusetts. The bill proposes a reorganization along lines similar to those recommended by the report of the Postal Commission about a vear ago.

It looks to the creation of a new system for the management of the postal affairs of the country, and it is intended to render unnecessary any special legislation regarding the handling of secondclass mail matter, which recently has been the subject of so much agitation.

The purpose is to place the Post Office Department on a strictly business basis, with a continuing administration of its machinery Senator Carter and Mr. Weeks, and those who believe with them, take the position that many of the defects of the present system are due to the frequent changes in the executive force of the department, including the Postmaster General, the Assistant Postmaster General and many of the chiefs of bureaus, guidance to-day.—Lancaster Examiner. which take place at the beginnings of new administrations.

The abolition of all of the offices of assistants is proposed, and provision is made for the creation of the office of director of posts, who, when he is once appointed, shall retain his office for an indefinite term, and who shall be protected by law against removal for political reasons.

Another proposed change in the present law is to permit persons who may be barred from the mails by a departmental order to appeal to the courts for a review of their cases. At present there is no relief from such an official man-

ICE FOR THE FARM HOME.

How to Secure and How to Store the Crop For Future Use.

Ice is as workable as wood, so it can be either split or sawed into desirable sections for handling and storing. Commercial ice making is generally carried on with an eye single to rapidity rather than accuracy in cake dimensions, so the ice plow is used and the cakes split off, thus leaving the under side of each cake irregular. making close storage impossible. The slower and better process for the farmer is the ice saw or, in lieu of this, the common crosscut saw, which is found on nearly all farms. Lake or pond ice has the preference over river ice, due to the fact that there is no current beneath. Pond ice freezes thicker and is less liable to contain air bubbles, meaning clearer and more uniform cakes.

Avoid slush or snow ice as much as possible. Watch for those several days of continuous bard freezing, then tap the ice field at its best. Six inch ice is of course good, but eighteen inch is better, as the thicker the cake the better its keeping quality. Clear the field of snow and with either line or straightedge mark off the cakes to be cut, using any sharp pointed instrument for the marking. An old file makes a good tool for the purpose. Mark the field off into eighteen inch squares, being careful to have cakes cut exactly to measure, for in no other way can close storage be accomplish-Cut out corner cake with an ax and start the saw exactly on the line, holding saw straigat up and down. Remove one handle from the saw and in its place attach a small weight, said weight adding much to the rapidity of the sawing. Two pairs of ice tongs at about 50 cents each complete the outfit for the farmer's ice harvest.

In building an icehouse get good. smooth drop siding for the outside and paint it. For the interior any old lumber will do, for all that is necessary is something to hold the sawdust used in packing from the outer wall. Leave spaces between studding open at the top. To accomplish this the inside sheathing should stop at about four inches below the plate at top of studding, thus allowing the side air to flow out and over the stored mass, thence out through small windows which should be provided in each end of the building and as near the peak as possible. These openings should be filled with upward slanting blinds, thereby forcing inflowing air currents upward and away from the ice, insuring free circulation at all times. These openings should never be closed, for through them must escape dampness that stored ice always produces.

The size of the building must be determined by the amount of ice to be used. If for family use only, then 12 by 14 feet, with eight foot studding. will give ample storage space, but for dairy use the building should be enlarged in proportion to the demands

TOBACCO CURING BY HEAT

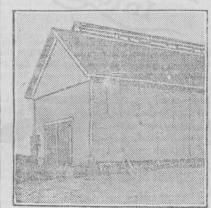

New Type of Closed Barn Used by a Connecticut Grower.

Tobacco growing is counted among the hazardous lines of agriculture in that a crop may be totally destroyed within a very short time by hail or by pole sweat in the curing shed. Danger of hail damage is eliminated in the growing of shade tobacco, but the menace of pole sweat is as great as ever. Last season, however, the tirst scientific experiment on a large scale to guard against pole sweat in cigar leaf tobacco was made on the farm of William Pinney at Suffield, Conn. The result may ultimately place the farmer in absolute control of the curing process, shortening the time and determining the shade the tobacco shall be when it has been cured.

The experiment was simply the utilization of artificial heat during the curing process. Some kinds of heavy leaf tobacco are cured in tight barns and with fire, and it has long been a common practice to build charcoal fires in the barns when tobacco was in grave danger of being ruined by pole sweat. But until the experiment on the Pinney farm no effort had been made to control the curing and coloring of cigar leaf.

A special type of barn is required for this work. A ventilator along the entire ridge which may be readily opened or closed tight is an important feature. Instead of the crude charcoal burners placed on the ground, creating a fire menace, specially constructed furnaces, five in number, were placed in the ground. The feed doors are on the outside of the building, so that smoke and vapors from the fire cannot enter the barn and affect the flavor of the tobacco. The smoke pipe of each furnace runs across the entire width of the building and returns on a parallel ten feet away and at a slight pitch. The vents are in the side of the barn. The smoke pipe forms the only neat radiating service.

Immediately after the crop was put into the barn the fires were started and the barn closed tightly. The temperature was run up to 80 degrees and the fires permitted to die down after the first day. The curing by this method was bastened at least five days. Very excellent natural atmospheric conditions for curing prompted Mr. Pinney to abandon further application of artificial heat. It was noted during the first two days when the barn was closed that the tobacco turned a rich yellow. The final result was a large percentage of excellent wrappers.

The furnaces were installed under the supervision of a representative of the United States department of agriculture, and the curing was followed by John B. Stewart, United States tobacco expert in the Connecticut valley, who acted in an advisory capacity to Mr. Pinney. The entire crop was prime tobacco and has since been sold at a little less than 25 cents per pound. Next year this method will have a more thorough test. The value of a barn full of tobacco is no small item, and any experiment which might destroy such a valuable product is naturally conducted with greatest cau-

Tobacco men are confident that the barn curing process will eventually be as easily controlled as the sweating process by means of steam heat.

Winter Care of Cabbage. How deeply should cabbage plants be covered where the ground sometimes freezes three and four feet? Does it hurt cabbage to freeze? Should plants be taken up before freezing in the autumn? How early in the spring should they be set out? These questions are answered by Linnaeus Allen of Nassau county, N. Y., as follows: Where the ground freezes three and four feet deep it will be necessary to plow up the cabbage after trenching so that the heads will be covered with at least a foot of soil. On top of this should be a heavy mulch of cornstalks or other suitable material. It does not burt cabbage to be frozen in the trenches provided it remains frozen for a long time. What burts it is to be thawed and then frozen several times.

The plants should be taken up and put in the trenches before the soil becomes frozen too hard to work easily. Two or three heavy frosts will not hurt the plants, nor would a reasonable amount of freezing, except that the heads will bruise easily when frozen, and this will cause rot.

If you wish to put the cabbage away for seed growing next spring the heads should be set out as soon as the ground can be put in good condition after the frost is out.

Maher to Quit Saddle.

Reports that it is Danny Maher's intention to retire at the end of the season have grown in persistency and are generally credited. Maher made a comfortable amount of money since he went to England, where his earnings, it is believed, have amounted to not much less than $100,000 a year. Though the American jockey lives in

A well posted racing man estimates that Maher made considerably more money than Fred Archer, the most successful of the English jockeys, but it is doubtful whether he attained the record set by Tod Sloane.

May Form New Rowing Alliance. Recent reports have it that there are chances of a brand new intercollegiate rowing alliance-that is to say, Harvard and Syracuse may meet in a two mile race. The Syracuse folks took the first steps and have asked Harvard for a race. It is impossible to say just now whether the match will be arranged. There will be room for it probably on Harvard's schedule should the Crimson wish to continue having two preliminary races a year, because the chances are that Columbia and Harvard will meet in 1910. The only objection to a race with Syracuse or with any other college except Cornell is that Harvard's crew did not do well this year trying to prepare for two races. 'The Crimson crews were not pointed for the race with Yale as the only contest worth while in the whole season, but were worked up in turn to high pitch for the succeeding races with Columbia and Cornell. The result was that the crew went off form for a time before the Yale race and but for strenuous methods might not have come back at all. It is understood that Coach Wray wants to have only one preliminary race this year, and if his advice prevails Harvard will not take on any one except Cornell.

Fast Ball Games In Honolulu. Two remarkable ball games were played at the Athletic park in Honolulu recently. Japanese and Chinese nines played twelve innings with a final score of 3 to 0 for the Chinese, and a nine from the marine corps battled for nineteen innings with a Hawaiian team, that game being called on account of darkness, with the score standing 2 to 2. The first eleven innings of the oriental contest were without runs, and in the marine-Hawaiian game the results of eighteen times at bat each were rows of goose eggs. The Chinese consul general and staff watched their boys wear out the Japanese players, while 4,000 fans whooped and yelled from 2 o'clock until dusk during both contests. Twenty-eight innings without a run is a record for Hawaii.

Triple Header In One Afternoon. A novelty in professional baseball occurred in Pekin, Ill., recently when the Beardstown and Pekin teams of the Illinois and Missouri league played a triple header in one afternoon, beginning at noon, in order to catch up with the schedule for the season. The teams went at the task with a vim, and the last game was the best played of the trio. The first game of nine innings was won by Beardstown, 6 to 0. The second contest, limited to seven innings by agreement, went to Pekin. 4 to 2. The rubber also was won by Pekin, 1 to 0. The lineup was not changed materially during the long performance, and the men were worn out when the day was done.

To Compete In Olympic Games. It is stated that a number of the noted Oregon athletes will go to Athens next year to compete in the Olympic games which are to be held there in 1910. Dan Kelly, providing his aukle gets back into shape again, will be sent as well as Gilbert, the former Yale pole vaulter, who is now a member of the Multnomah club. Edward Frank, a wrestler, and Forrest Smithson, who holds the world's record for the 110 meter high nurdles, made last year at Shepherd's Bush, London, will also make the trip abroad. Frank is one of the best 125 pound wrestlers in the country.

A CONVICT'S SHOE.

Novel Device Which Makes a Prisoner's Escape Impossible.

A shoe which will make impossible the escape of convicts while being transported from one point to another is described in Popular Mechanics.

The device consists of a heavy leather shoe, with a perforated sole, to which is attached a second sole of steel plate, joined so that the whole will bend with the usual motion of the toes and foot. Riveted upright to this steel sole are sharp spikes, placed in such a position that they will enter the perforations of the leather sole, but kept from ordinarily doing so by crossbars with a series of steel springs op either side.

The whole contrivance is fastened to the prisoners foot by means of metal straps, held secure by a padlock. With the crossbars in position the prisoner can walk in the shoes as in ordinary ones, but once the convict is placed on a train or other conveyance the officer releases the crossbars and locks them in such position that they cannot be replaced between the spikes and perforations without a key. The only thing that now keeps the spikes from entering the perforations and gouging into the criminals foot is the springs. Those are of sufficient strength to protect him from barm so long as he is seated, but if he stands up and attempts to walk the weight of his body compresses them enough to make it impossible for him to stand the anguish of more than a step or two.

Atmospheric Centers.

M. Deslandres recently explained to the Paris Academy of Sciences how, according to the studies of Messrs. Teisserenc de Bort and Hildebrandson, there exist in the earth's atmosphere "centers of action," which have a wide control over climatic conditions and make it possible to foretell the character of the weather long in advance. One of the most important of these centers is around Iceland, and according as the atmospheric pressure there is high or low, mild or severe winters result in central Europe. The North cape is another similar center, and between these focuses a kind of compensation of action often exists, sometimes at intervals of six months. A warm summer at the North cape corresponds to a cold winter in Iceland and is followed by cold winds in central Europe and over the plains of Hungary. The cause of the phenomena, M. Hildebrandson thinks, is to be found in the variations of the north polar ice cap, which constitutes the great reservoir of cold for the northern hemisphere.

Hot Air as a Polisher.

The marvels of friction are infinite. The use of the sand blast for polishing metals is quite a recent invention, and now it is followed by that of a blast of simple hot air. It is the velocity that gives the polishing power. The articles to be treated are placed in a basket in a centrifugal machine driven at a very high speed, and heated air is blown from a pipe through the basket. A high polish is thus produced very rapidly. Nickel plated articles that have become tarnished are made bright in a few minutes. Wet metal. fresh from the bath, needs no preliminary drying, for the current of air dries and polishes at the same moment. It is only necessary to so pack the articles that the air reaches them on all sides.-Youth's Companion.

Capitalizing a Voice.
Floating a young lady's voice as a limited liability company sounds some what Gilbertian, yet it has actually been done in Australia. A syndicare with a capital of £1,000 in one pound shares has been formed to send a girl with a remarkable voice to be trained by Mme. Marchesi in Paris. She has entered into an engagement to give on her return a series of concerts in the principal Australian cities under the direction of the syndicate, whose members hope and expect in this way to get their capital back plus a substantial dividend.-London Chronicle.

Largest Decorative Painting. "Another record has been broken." says the Paris correspondent of a German paper. "This time the size of a painting will stand for the new record. Until now it has been supposed that the Tintoretto 'Paradise' in the palace of the doges, in Venice. which covers a space equal to 154 square meters, was the largest work of that kind in existence. Malo-Nord's creation for the Paris courthouse will have a surface space of about 300 square meters and will undoubtedly be the largest decorative painting in the world."

A Royal Fad.

Queen Alexandra's especial fad has a daintiness well in keeping with her personality. It is that of having her pocket money made perfectly clean and bright before she fingers it. Whenever a check is turned into hard cash for her use the coins are scrubbed in a lather of spirits of wine, water and soap before being placed in her purse. and any change that may be tendered ber when making purchases is taken charge of by a lady in waiting until it has been subjected to a like procfication.-Cassell's Saturday

The RECORD will contain a considerable number of sales, advertised in full, during the coming month. We have pinned our reputation to this class of sale advertising, because we unqualifiedly advise it before any other kind but, at the same time, we strongly advocate the customary sale bills. The cards, in our judgment, are of value, but not to be compared with newspaper advertising. We therefore advise our readers, who are interested in the purchase of stock or implements, to read all of the sale advertisements as they appear in the REGORD, during . the season.

Top Buggv. $35.00 Just think! A Top Buggy for $35 and no freight to pay. Is not the range of price elastic enough to fit present condition of your finances? Your dollars stretch like rubber, doing business with me. Top Buggies, like cut, with Rubber Top, $35.00; Imitation Leather Trimmed, $38.00. Full Leather Quarters and all The strength of the mail order house is not based on quality or better value, but on cleverly worded, deceptive advertising. On quality for quality basis, the mail order house cannot compare with the dealer. To illustrate this, they will describe a harness as solid nickel plated mounting. The physics is true, but the deception is that solid nickel plating is on iron and will rust in less than 10 days' use, and the leather is hemlock stock, instead of oak. Remember, solid nickel will never rust or get brassy. If you don't wish to buy of me, come in and I will show you the difference, and you will be wise wherever you do buy. Good Black Harness Oil, 50c Gal. CHAS. E. H. SHRINER, - - Taneytown, Md.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of said Court for the distribution of certain funds in the hands of I van L. Hoff and Benj. F. Marquet in the sum of $477.00 for services rendered by him the complainant to intestate as per account filed in this cause marked exhibit "X" and that said Frederick Marquart departed this life intestate on the 15th day of August, 1949, leaving surviving him the following children his only heirs at law to-witz- John F. Marquet who is married to Nelson Bankert, Laura C. Gill who is married to Nelson Bankert, Laura C. Gill who is married to Sherman Gill; Carrie E, Whitmer who is married to Charles Whitmer, Emma J. Marker who is married to W. Upton Marker. All of whom reside in Carroll County, State of Maryland. All of whom are adults above the age of 21 years.

That Frederick Marquart left no personal estate by which to pay his debts, but at the time of his death he was seized and possessed of a farm containing 25 acres, I rood and I perch, as described in exhibits "A," "B" and "C" in this cause, all of which was sold by said trustees at public sale to Charles Marquet to whom letters of admin

That the balance of proceeds of said real estate after the payment of the proper expenses, charges and payment of said mortgage and interest, may be applied to the payment of the claim of Jacob H. Marquet complainant and all other creditors of said intestate according to their legal priority.

It is thereupon ordered this 31st day of January, in the year 1910, by the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Carroll County aforesaid, once in each of four successive weeks before the 7th day of March, 1910, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this Bill in this suit and warn them to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 28th day of March, next, to answer the premises and show cause if any they have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS. PART III.

Punctuation (2).

Put a period after every sentence that does not require an interrogation or exclamation point; after every abbreviated word that is not abbreviated by an apostrophe for letters omitted; after Roman numerals. When an abbreviation ends a sentence, only one period is required to mark the elision and the pause, but any other point required by the construction of the sentence should be inserted after the period. In books printed at Edinburgh, and in most English publications, the period is omitted after abbreviated words that retain their last letters, as 'Dr,' 'Mr,' etc.; but this practice has never obtained to any considerable extent in America. Of late years it has been the fashion to dispense with periods at the ends of lines on title pages, in display advertising, and in job printing, but there are no accepted laws on the subject and it is a matter of individual fancy.

An indirect question should not have an interrogation mark after it.

Oh! always requires the exclamation point immediately after it, save when at the end. O should never have the doubled, or even trebled, in the same and now, as has been said, he is a special called the shin. the sentence has an exclamation point point immediately after it.

The fashion changes in punctuation as in everything else. It is the fashion now to use capital letters sparingly; once every prominent word was capitalized, and the style may still be seen in the letters of very old people. Fashion also now frowns on the use of italics to emphasize single words. For this purpose they are now used with propriety only in the case of words distinctly foreign. They are still permissible and convenient, however, for words and very short phrases used as examples, etc., in text books and books like this. It will be noticed that I have used them thus to some extent, though employing the single 'quotes' frequently for even single words or abbreviations, and generally for phrases. Italic type faces do not wear so well as roman and when the two are used together on long runs of the press or for several editions, the italic more, type-setting machines are ordinarily equipped with only the roman faces, and italicized words have to be inserted by hand, which costs time and money. In few offices of newspapers set by machine would it be done at all. Many people, especially women, have a habit of underscoring in letters words they wish to emphasize, and those who have acquired the habit find it hard to bear in mind that the printer will set underscored words in italics. Therefore it is not wise to acquire the habit.

The Standard Dictionary's rules for using the possessive are: "Nouns in the possessive case are formed by adding 's to the nominative singular and to irregular plurals, and an apostrophe only to the regular plural, as John's book, men's souls, boys' shoes. Pronouns in the possessive case have special forms, as my, his, her, its, our, ours, your, yours, their, theirs, whose. 1. Singular monosyllabic nouns ending in a sibilant sound (s, x, ce, se or dental ge) add the apostrophe and s, except when the following word begins with a sibilant sound, as James's reign, Jone's hat, a sound, as James's reign, Jone's hat, a Sores, pimples, Eczema or Piles. 25c at fox' skin. 2. Information About Buying Beef.

In buying meat it must always be borne in mind that the price of a certain cut is not always a criterion of the food value furnished, nor even superiority of flavor. Take, for instance, the tenderloin, which is the most expensive of all beef cuts. While there is no doubt about its tenderness its flavor is really nil and must be enhanced in cookery by the juices from round steak or mushrooms, as well as various high spicings. In selecting beef the following points are to be considered:

1. Insist on seeing the carcass from which the meat is to be cut. If it carries the stamp "U.S. Inspected and Passed" it is a guarantee from the government that the meat is healthy.

2. Choose fat beef. The fatter the beef the more tender. A prime piece of meat not only carries an outside covering of fat, but the lean meat will be marbled with small specks of yellowish white fat.

3. Beef and mutton that have been bung some time and kept perfectly sweet will be much more tender. Lamb and veal, being immature, spoil quickly

4. Meat of any kind should have little odor. It should be firm and dry rather

The Gallant Cabman.

Nothing perhaps produces quite so much wit from a cabman as a sense of being underpaid, which in most cases means that he has been justly paid. A lady who had been guilty of this kind of justice experienced the usual sense of discomfort when her driver straightened the palm into which she had just dropped her shilling and looked at her speechlessly. She was weakly about to add another sixpence when the cabby's sense of humor prevailed. He transferred the shilling to his pocket and smiled sweetly down at his embarrassed fare. "Course, missy." he remarked, "there was the pleasure o' drivin' you!"-London Chronicle.

Law and the Queen. The quaintness of many provisions of British law is curiously illustrated in the status of the queen of England. So far as her majesty's private business is concerned, she is not regarded by the laws and customs of England as a married woman at all. She is the only woman in Great Britain who does not come within the scope of the married woman's property act. The idea in all this is that affairs of state consume all the time of the king, and therefore no responsibility for the queen's private business rests upon him. If the queen contracted debts in her husband's name he would not be responsible for them, as any other husband in the United Kingdom would, The king cannot be sued for debt, but the queen can be. Should the king die, some authorities hold that the queen could not marry again, in case she wished to, ' ithout the license of the king's successor.-New York Tribune.

Dog Law In Constantinople.

"When one of the street dogs of Constantinople gets too old to be of use to the band the captain dog decides that he is to die." says Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Weekly. "A day comes when the captain issues an edict that he is no longer to have food. From that day until his death not a morsel passes his lips. With longing eyes he looks at the others eating, but he makes no attempt to join them. Now and again a bit of something falls his way. The temptation is too strong -he reaches toward the morsel. The captain, who overlooks nothing, gives a low growl. The dying creature shrinks back without a murmur. He knows the law. Perhaps he, too, was once a captain. The minister's wife told me that she had tried to feed one of those dying dogs, but that even when food was placed in front of him he would only look pleadingly at the captain and refuse to touch it.'

Arundel Castle.

The most singular circumstance about Arundel castle is that its owner, by mere right of ownership, is Earl of Arundel in the peerage of England. It is believed that there is no similar example of a peerage held on such conditions. Apparently there would be no legal obstacle, were the house of Howard to fall upon evil days and the castle be sold to some millionaire, to prevent the millionaire taking his seat in the house of lords as Earl of Arundel. -London Standard.

Lesson X .-- First Quarter, For March 6, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. viii, 2-17. Memory Verses, 2, 3-Golden Text, Matt. viii, 17-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Dr. Scofield says in his notes on these chapters that the King, having in chapters v-vii declared the principles of the kingdom, makes proof in chapters viii and ix of his power to banish from the earth the consequences of sin and to control the elements of nature. He also says that the word "Lord" in verse 2 is used 663 times in the New Testament as the divine title of Jesus the Christ and is equivalent to the title "Adonai" in the Old Testament (Matt. iii, 3; iv, 7, 10; xxii, 43, 45). In future when quoting from these notes from his new edition of the Bible I will give his initials, C. I. S.

In speaking of the kingdom the Spirit says through the prophet, "The inhabitant shall not say I am sick; the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity;" "They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. xxxiii, 24; xxxv, 10). The kingdom of heaven, according to Dan, ii, 44, being at hand in the person and presence of the king, as declared by John the Baptist, Jesus Himself and the apostles (chapters iii, 2; iv, 17; x, 7), the King declares His power by a manifestation of several features of the kingdom. As we contemplate the righteousness of the kingdom as set forth in chapters v to vii and then the actual condition of things as they are about us in the world it is certainly a coming down to a much lower level, but it is to lift people up by the power of the King and His kingdom, and the multitudes are ready to hear of such a kingdom. Every form of physical suffering is suggestive of some disease of the soul, but nothing is quite so strikingly suggestive of sin as leprosy, which is so fully described in Lev. xiii and xiv. Sin is at the root of all our troubles. Can this man who in His teaching claims to be God do anything with leprosy? This leper believes that He can, but is not certain that He will. How the reply of Jesus must have filled him with an indescribable joy, "I will; be thou clean!" But these words came with the touch of Jesus, and with the touch and the words came the cleansing and the health immediately, and the outcast could return to his home and friends as a well man. That he may not think that his healer is in any sense contrary to the law of Moses he is told to show himself to the priest and offer the gift commanded. Well may we sing, "Unto Him that loveth us and hath washed us from our sins in His own blood."

His fame is spreading (are we helping to make Him known?), and now it is a centurion from Capernaum who has a servant sick of the palsy, grievously John x, 9-11, 27; xvi, 7-5; I Cor. xv, 58; tormented. Luke, who was a physi- Jude 24, 25. man was re die, so that he must have been very sick. He also tells us that this servant was dear unto him and also that first of all the elders of the Jews came to Jesus on his behalf, saying that the centurion was worthy, that he loved the Jews and had built them a synagogue (Luke vii, 1-5). Jesus knew the centurion, as He knows all men and needs no testimony from any one concerning anybody (John ii, 24, 25), and He knew him to be a man with no thought of his own worthiness (verse 8 and Luke vii, 6, 7). He said, "I will come and heal him." and He went with them. As He neared the house the centurion sent friends to say that he did not consider himself worthy to have Jesus enter under his roof; but, inasmuch as he knew what it meant to obey and be obeyed, if Jesus would only say the word he was sure that his servant would be healed. Jesus marveled at the man and said to those who followed, "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith; no, not in Israel" (verse 10). His word for the centurion was, "As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee," and those who had been sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole. Such faith on the part of a gentile led the Lord Jesus to speak of the kingdom into which many gentiles from all the world will enter, while many who think they are entitled to the kingdom will be shut out by their un-

The next instance of His power is in the house of Simon Peter, whose wife's mother is sick of a fever, but just the touch of His hand dispels the fever, and she is seen ministering unto them. Sin paralyzes our bodies or consumes them with burning, destroying desire, but He who takes away the result of sin by being made sin for us can also deliver from every manifestation of sin to the intent that we may minister unto Him. At even He cast out evil spirits from many with His word and healed all that were sick and thus fulfilled a word in Isaiah, "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses" (16, 17).

It is often asked, Is the health of the body included in the atonement? We reply that the same great sacrifice which takes away our sins makes us sure of a perfect body just like His risen body, which shall never again be weak or sick or old or die, but that will be in the kingdom. All of His power which is seen in bodies now is but a foretaste of that which wili be fully seen when He comes.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 6, 1910.

Topic.—Christ our guide.—Luke i, 76-73; John xvi, 13; Rev. vii, 16, 17. (Consecra-tion meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sher-man H. Doyle, D. D.

There are two general senses in which the word guide is used. First, it is used to designate one who goes before and leads others in certain ways and courses. There are mountain guides who direct the footsteps of tourists up the dangerous sides of famous mountains. In our large cities there are guides who direct visitors through the principal parts of the city and point out the places of especial interest. Until the compass was invented and other nautical instruments sailors used stars, and especially the north star, to guide them in their course across the sea. In the second place, a guide is one who directs the conduct of another, a moral or a spiritual guide. It is in this sense that Jesus Christ is our guide. It is His province as a guide to direct us along the moral pathway of life and to lead us into the deeper spiritual truths that are so necessary that we may avoid the various dangers that beset us in the moral and spiritual life.

The need of a moral and spiritual guide is of tremendous importance. It is only exceptionally that we need one to conduct us along any way or road of life, because we are usually familiar with the ways we travel or may be our own guides and can readily find our way. But in the moral and spiritual life it is almost the opposite. Here there is often gross darkness and doubtful ways, and an infallible guide is a great necessity. Christ is an infallible guide. Wreckers often place false lights and lead vessels into danger, but Christ is never a false guide. The pathway He points out is always the correct one, and if by faith we follow His guidance, obey His commandments, we shall never go astray. He has guided His people in all generations and is still the same unchangeable leader and able and willing to direct us along moral and spiritual lines.

The topical references present Christ as our guide in three phases. In the first place, He is represented as a guide to the way of peace or to peace itself (Luke i, 76-79). Zacharias here presents Him as the day spring from on high, who giveth light to them that sit in darkness * * * and guides "our feet into the way of peace." Who does not desire peace? And yet how few find it! Why? Because they seek it in wrong ways. Some seek it in themselves, others in worldly wealth or fame or pleasure. But Christ alche can light us along the path of peacepeace with ourselves, peace with our fellow men and peace with God. Again Christ through the Holy Spirit is our guide to truth (John xvi, 13, "Howbeit, when He, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth"). All truth-perfect truthwho does not desire it? The word of God, inspired by the Holy Ghost and applied by Him alone, can give it. In the third place, Christ is our eternal and heavenly guide (Rev. vii, 16, 17).

Work of Alaskan Endeavorers. In the Alaskan woods at Kasaan a little chapel was built chiefly by the labors of the Rev. Edward Marsden, the well known Indian Christian Endeavorer, and Henry Haldane, a native, who began in 1909 for the first time to minister to his fellow Indians. The building stands in the midst of the great Alaskan trees. The Salva-

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CHAPEL AT KASAAN. tion Army has done a good deal in southeastern Alaska, and one of its chief attractions to the natives, who are much like children in their present state of untraining, is their outward symbol. For this reason in many of our native fields the missionaries have found Christian Endeavor badges a strong help. "For Christ and the church" is a slogan that finds its response in the hearts of the Alaskan natives.-Christian Endeavor World.

How to Improve.

How shall we improve our Christian Endeavor society? Why, by just improving ourselves. King Alfred of England said, "The soul of all improvement is improvement of soul." "I wish you godspeed in your work," said ex-President Roosevelt, "because Christian Endeavor stands for the things that are vital to the soul." Then live for the things that touch the soul, Endeavorers!

Follow the Christ, the King; Live pure, speak true, right wrong; Follow the King. Else wherefore born?

The Way He Acted When the Fearful Cyclone Came.

By MARVIN DANA.

Roundabout him in a straggling parallelogram stood the ungainly wooden houses of a cyclone district county seat. Beyond lay the level brown of prairies, shot with the ocher of ripening grain, gray blue where it merged into a horizon's sky of appalling bronze. His sight was blurred by dancing currents of hot air. In the shade of the hotel porch the thermometer registered 110 degrees, and there yet remained two sweltering hours before sunset.

"Thank heaven, I've inspected the last acre and can start for New York in the morning," was his thought. Instinctively his hand touched his pocket and her letter. He smiled, then frowned.

"Am I a coward?" A paragraph in her letter had started the self inquisition.

"I shall be so glad when you are safe home again," it ran, "even though I have no real cause for alarm. You are so big and strong and brave, and I love you for it. I could never love a coward."

Was he one? Yes-no! A flush not born of the sun flooded his face. His mind traveled back twenty-four hours, and he cursed his weakness, his timidity, which he had never realized until that awful storm had broken. It was when the terrific lightning peculiar to this region had played about him that he had suddenly found himself trembling, gasping with horror. The memory of those moments still sickened him and filled him with contemptuous

The proprietor of the hotel came out and balanced on two legs of a chair beside his guest.

"Reckon we'll have another bit of a shower tonight," he drawled amiably. The careless words filled his listener with dumb anguish, half fear, half shame. Must be again endure that racking torment-the blue glare of electricity, the deadly crackling of the bolts, the horrible realization that multiple death mocked him from every

"I don't see any clouds," he ventured.

"You can tell weather same as you can cloth, more by feelin' than by looks. I've been forty years in these parts, an' I :alc'late we'll have it hammer an' tongs before midnight. Lucky if a regular cyclone don't blow along

"Does lightning do much damage around here?'

"Burns a lot of barns mostly; but, takin' it one time an' another, we've had quite a few folks killed, 'bout twenty in my time. It's a nice, easy death, but I don't like cyclones. One hit me, an' that was enough. The durned thing killed off half the town, includin' all my best friends an' four mules, which was all I was worth. Cyclones, blast 'em, always come in the night, when you can't see 'em."

The listener drew his breath sharply. 'But how do you tell a cyclone, even in daytime?"

"Well, Mr. Andrews, you can always tell it because the sky looks like nothin' you've ever seen before-yellow, green an' ornery. An' if it's comin' your way you'll see what the papers call a funnel shaped cloud, but what looks more like a big balloon, dancin' along. When the gale raises an' that balloon seems to stop bouncin', but stands still, gettin' bigger an' bigger, you dust for a cellar. It's close." "Do all the places here have cyclone caves? "Everybody in town ain't got one, but there's enough to go round. Want to see mine?" Any diversion from his mental anguish and self pity was welcome to Andrews, and he followed his host to the middle of the back yard, where he saw a mound of earth. In the end nearest them was a swinging shutter, which the landlord raised. Within was space for perhaps six persons comfortably placed by crowding compactly. Twice or even thrice that number might seek refuge for a limited time. The odor of damp earth suggested the grave, and again Andrews shuddered.

By the time he sought his room at 10 o'clock that night Andrews had argued himself into believing that this new terror of storm and wind was a constitutional peculiarity for which he was not morally culpable, and, exhausted by heat and mental strain, he quickly dropped asleep.

He awoke with the trump of doom bursting his eardrums. The crash of a falling thunderbolt brought him to his feet, and he stood dazed amid the lurid radiance of the lightning. In an ecstasy of fear he sprang to the window and closed it. Then he drew the shade and struck a match. Two flickered and died in his trembling hand before he could light the lamp. In a very spasm of horror he sat huddled on his bed. He thought of no one and nothing save himself and-death! But there remained another note yet to be sounded in the gamut of his terror. Suddenly the hotel commenced to shake and reel under the assaults of the wind. With cringing dismay he recalled the landlord's warning against cyclones in the night. At any moment one might burst upon him, resistless, remorseless, overwhelming. Within him rose the instinct of flight. To the cave, to safety!

Mechanically in the midst of his alarms he dressed himself, and as he stepped into the dark hall he recoiled pen."-Cornell Widew.

before a sudden glare of lightning. But he was now too desperate in his fear to be checked. No one else was astir, and ha tore open a side door, leaped to the entrance of the cave, crept through the narrow opening and sank down, his face buried in his folded arms.

He was safe at last, and a great joy of salvation welled in his heart. For a time he slept, waking with mind cleared and body refreshed. He listened intently, but no sound reached him. He crawled from his refuge, but the thought of returning to the room where he had suffered such mental tortures was hateful to him. He crossed the yard, climbed the fence and started toward the outskirts of the town. The air was of a hue strange to him, sullenly luminous, and he had gone not more than a quarter of a mile when he saw to the south, directly opposite from where the storm had come, a menacing bank of restless clouds. They were ablaze with ragged fire. The boom of thunder rose afresh. Yes; there could be no further question-a second tempest was approach ing. Already the sickness of terror was upon him, the nausea of cowardice, and he again faced toward his refuge, the cave! But something in the sky held him fascinated, something shaped like a titanic top, hung from the heavens and spun by demon hands. Then it stopped moving, growing larger and larger.

What had the landlord said that afternoon? When it stops "bouncin",

He turned and fled for his life, but even as he ran a new thought came to him. It was not yet morning. None in the sleeping town knew of the doom racing toward their homes. He had a pitiful vision of shattered houses, littered with mutilated bodies, women and children caught from their slumbers in the crunching maw of the

He forgot himself and-fear. He had passed the cyclone cellar and was rushing through the hall of the hotel. "Cyclone! Cyclone! To the cave for your lives!" The house sprang into instant life, but before the first startled guest reached the main floor Andrews was again in the street. He carried the dinner gong, which he had seized in an inspiration born of anxiety. Between each shout of warning he drummed mad, quivering alarms on the eloquent brass.

He made the round of three sides of the square when of a sudden a mighty roaring was all about him. He paused, bewildered, and a crashing thunderbolt seemed to strike his temple; a burning splendor blinded his eyes. Then an invisible power struck full against him, seized him and wrapped him in its crushing embrace, bore him aloft, tossed him here and there and finally into a blackness that swallowed him completely. Three days later he woke to see an angel bending over him. No; it was flesh and blood, after all. It was she.

He blinked at her uncertainly. 'You are a hero!" She spoke softly, with shining eves.

Then he remembered.

"Were many saved?"

"All," she answered proudly. "Those you saved roused the others, and only a few, who sought refuge in cellars instead of caves, were hurt by falling timbers. But you suffered most. Oh, Andrews spoke with sudden vigor. "No: I am a coward. The storms frightened me shamefully. You cannot understand how I quivered and trembled like a child. I am not worthy of you. I had already hidden in the cave that night. I came out only when I thought all danger was over. The rest was-an accident.

He stopped, exhausted, and she bent close to him.

"Don't talk that way, dearest. You are not a coward, but a conqueror of fear, and you will be my hero always."

MacGregor's Name.

From 1603 to 1661 the name of Mac-Gregor was proscribed in Scotland. Certain oppressed Scots of that clan took the name of a loch. These were the Docharts of the Dunblane district, who were descended from a group of the MacGregors. Fleeing from their pursuers, a party of the fugitives saved themselves by swimming the stream which issues from Loch Dochart and in gratitude for their deliverance assumed the name Dochart. Dean Ramsay tells how a lad going to Glasgow gave his name to a minister as Dochart, while his letter of introduction called him MacGregor. "I fear there is some mistake about your identity; the names don't agree," said the minister. "Weel, sir, thut's the way they spell the name in our coun-

Salmon Rounded Up by Seal. While sitting on the shore of Inverness firth one day a correspondent observed about half a dozen seals, each a short distance from the other, moving in a kind of semicircle toward a small bay. Curiosity made him follow their movements as the seals slowiy made for the shore. Each kept his place well, though occasionally disappearing and reappearing. To his great surprise, he saw that a shoal of salmon were being herded toward the shore, where there was little chance of escape and where they ultimately fell victims to the seals. What struck the correspondent most was the intelligent way in which the salmon were chased into the bay, reminding him of the manner in which a collie dog brings sheep to a fold.-Scotsman.

It Saves You Money.

The special half price sale of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia by Rob't S. McKinney means the saving of a few dollars on every family's yearly bill for medicines.

Mr. Rob't S. McKinney has so much faith in the superior merit of this mediof the Houston Post, from Wm. A. cine that he says: "If Dr. Howard's Shaw, of Uniontown, who is now on a specific does not cure you, come back to my store and I will return your money.

This remedy is not an ordinary medicine. It is the favorite formula of a well known physician, and has the endorsement of hundreds of physicians of eminence in their profession, who prescribe it in all cases of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble, knowing from experience that it will make a complete and lasting cure.

The Philadelphia Clothing & Manufacturing Co.

To the People of Taneytown and vicinity, we extend a special invitation to visit our Store at Littlestown. Pa.

You have frequently read our ad. in this paper, as to our lowest prices in our line, and you, just as all our customers, put the question to us: How is it that we can sell the goods at such low prices? and relative to the same we will have a talk as man to man.

As you are aware of the fact that we have a number of storcs and therefore we are bound to buy in quantities, the manufacturer is eager to deal with us, as he can sell to one customer an amount that he would have to interview 10 merchants for, and that is an expense to him, therefore he is willing to sell us the goods with a great discount and that discount we in return share with our customers.

These are all facts that cannot be denied, and we can prove by some of our reputable citizens of Littlestown that every word we say is true. Those very honorable citizens were present, when a salesman came to our store offering goods at the price that he sells to other merchants, and we in return astonished him when we declared that we can sell the same goods 18% lower, and that salesman accepted our offer and bought a lot of goods of us, which we presume, he sold to other merchants at a good

This is to show you that we are selling, direct to you, our goods at wholesale prices.
