NEWS NOTES HERE AND THERE

Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

The Baltimore Sun will begin the publication of an evening edition, about the 18th. of this month, which will give the city three first-class evening newspapers.

Rev. James B. Stonesifer, for the last 2 years pastor of Carroll charge, Reformed church, near Westminster, has received a call to become pastor of the Reformed church at Mount Crawford, Va., and has decided to accept it.

Emanuel Lutheran church, of Manchester, Md., and the other congregations in the charge will extend a call to Rev. J. J. Lau, of Philadelphia, to become their pastor. Rev. Lau having received the practically unanimous vote of all the congregations at elections held

John Frick, a prosperous farmer, died at his home, near Smallwood, Monday morning, aged about 73 years. Mr. Frick was a veteran of the Civil War. He came to this country soon after the close Smallwood, a veritable garden spot. He was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, and a Democrat in politics. He leaves a widow, but no children.

Mrs. Sarah Brandon, 109 years old, of Moundsville, W. V., claims the United States record as the mother of the larg-est number of Civil War soldiers. No fewer than 16 of her boys served in the battles of that war, 14 on the Union side and 2 with the Confederates, while her total family was 23. Her 23 children are also the parents of large families. The oldest, Hiram, is 89 years old, while the youngest, Evan Brandon, is 72 years and works daily in a coal mine.

Mr. Roosevelt felt that it would be unbecoming of an American citizen to have his movements dictated to him, and greatly regrets that such a situation arose, especially as it is exciting wide-spread comment.

With no mention in the inscription of the fact that he was at one time President of the United States, but reading "Grover Cleveland, born Caldwell, N. J., March 18, 1837, died Princeton, N. J., June 24, 1908," the first monument to the memory of ex-President Cleveland was completed Wednesday on his grave in the Princeton cemetery. The monument is of Tennessee marble and is 10 feet high. It consists of a cubical die five feet high and three feet thick, and a cap which tapers gradually from the die into a finial-like head. The monument was erected at the direction of Mrs. Cleveland, who is at present in Europe with her children.

A higher wage scale, amounting to a 5 per-cent. increase for 10,000 coal miners in Maryland, 20,000 in Northern West to Virginia Classis. Virginia and 7,000 in Southern Pennsylvania, went into effect Monday. The announcement was made by the Consolidation Coal Company, and means that the payroll for the three districts mentioned has been advanced about $20,000 per week. The districts included in the increase are the George's Creek, in Maryland; Fairmount, in West Virginia, and Somerset, in Pennsylvania.
Mineowners in the districts adjoining those affected are expected to follow the action of the other operators, and as a result a general good feeling reigns among the employes.

There are rumors circulated with considerable freedom about the capitol that before the Congressional elections some changes may be expected in the President's Cabinet, but none of these stories can be confirmed. In fact no one professes to have any first-hand information on the subject. At the same time the general impressions seems to be that an effort will be made to strengthen the Cabinet in a political way. Among the retirements oftenest mentioned as possible are those of Secretary Dickinson, of the War Department, and Postmaster General Hitchcock. Also, it is stated that Mr. Ballinger may resign from the Interior Department at the close of the present investigation, if the change can be made without subjecting him to the charge of "retiring under fire."

"On awakening the morning following our departure from Honolulu, we found the sea smooth and placid, and so steadily did our boat progress that we we were proceeding steadily toward the Sunrise Kingdom. There was a balmy Sunrise Kingdom. There was a balmy breeze and a cloudless sky and for four days we enjoyed an indolent existence. delightful balmy climate of this southern portion of the Pacific is much more temperate at this season than that of the colder and stormier northern portion toward which we are steadily forging our way.

Between Honolulu and Japan a day is lost in the Pacific. The 180th degree of longitude has been reached, which is halfway around the world from the observatory at Greenwich. In starting westward a few minutes are gained each day, and watches are set back accordingly. The meridian is constantly changing as we keep journeying with the Sun, and each succeeding day is a little longer than 24 hours. Were this ratio to be kept up, the traveler would be a day behind the rest of the world. Nautical scientists adjust the matter by of the war and became one of the Ger-man settlers in the neighborhood of and adding a day for east-bound ships, dropping a day for west-bound ships, when they cross the 180th degree of longitude. Consequently, we retired Thursday evening, 18th., and awoke Saturday morning, 20th., enjoying the unusual novelty of passing through a week of six days. But Neptune himself, seemed to have become greatly excited by the event, the barometer steadily fell, and with his trident the old sea-god stirred the waves to an unseeming fury, and caused a hurricane to blow at 40 miles an hour. ## WILL THE GOVERNOR SIGN IT?

Against the Digges Disfranchising Bill.

Strong influences are being brought to bear on Governor Crothers to induce him to veto the Digges bills, both from within and without the Democratic party. The fear is growing stronger that such actions as the bills contain would be a great blow to the party, Nationally, and even should the Supreme Court put a stop to the scheme, the political situation is suggested that the orders will be paid tion in Maryland would be in a chaotic

The passage of the bills, it is now blieved, shows one of the evils of introducing and jamming through important ducing and jamming through important orders will gladly take this amount, they believe that some plan should be devised believe that some plan should be paid in full, and plated by the bills, was brought before plated by the bills, was brought before it is likely that such claims will be made the people at the general election, but to the next legislature. the issue was raised by a few individuals, and an appeal made to the Anti-Negro sentiment of an overwhelming majority in the legislature, without consulting the sober judgment of wiser counsel, and without considering the widespread effect of such radical action on the party and the country at large.

The Maryland legislature has become laws and ballots, so used to inventing disfranchising amendments that have failed of adoption-and without any particular harm-that a form of desperation seems to have influenced the hot heads to evolve a scheme which the voters could not down, and in accomplishing the feat seem to have over-reached themselves, and at the same and at the close of the session. time made themselves the laughingstock of the country.

I am constrained to speak out because I do not believe the people understand the far-reaching effects and the magnitude of the danger that threatens them, nor do I believe that even the men who yoted for the bills foresaw all the dire possibilities of their legislation. Unless the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is held invalid by the United States Supreme Court—a contingency that no sober, thoughtful man can seriously anticipate, much less be willing to bank upon—the registration under the Digges bill will be declared illegal and the ensuing elections by such elections will be stripped of legal validity and will be governments 'de February 24th, 1910. | facto' only. What will follow no one can fortell—certainly chaos, with an incurities, while possibly good, will certainly be discredited and unmarketable.

The Baltimore Sun, which but mildly condemned the bills before their passage, now says;
"Do not sign the Digges Bills, Governor Crothers, until you satisfy yourself that they are not a piece of chimerical folly that will plunge this orderly and tranquil community into a turmoil that would be a mischievous as it would be futile, that would endanger the settlement that has been reached in the Southern States, where the negro questicn is a real question, and that would this long voyage, nothing but the ubiquitous sea-gull, which has kept up its lonely vigil." chill the zeal for Democratic principles and Democratic leadership in the North and West.

Take counsel of wisdom rather than of prejudice, Governor Crothers. Put patriotism above partisanship. Do not magnify an empty consistency. Disregard clamor and trust the sober second thought of a just people. Do not thrust Maryland into the path of revolution. Do not, by a stroke of the pen, stake the peace and political health of the city and state and the hopes of the Democratic party of the nation on a final account.

LEGISLATURE ADJOURNED

Opinions Differ as to the Value of many of the Bills Passed.

On Saturday, the Digges negro disfranchising bill was put through the House, which places it in the Courts to determine the status of the 15th. Amendment, but not until the fall of 1911 can the test become a fact. The bill passed by a strict party vote. It is claimed that such bills, involving amendments to the Constitution are not subject to the veto power of the Governor, but as there are four of the bills, partly legislative, they will go to the Governor.

The Lee primary election bill, applying to all of the counties in the state except Howard, Charles, Washington, Wi-comico, Worcester and Prince George's counties, passed finally, on Saturday. The bill is a compromise of some sort, over the one first proposed, but we are not posted on its provisions-they will be found out, later.

The Republicans of the House united in a protest against the treatment of their floor leader, Mr. Pairo, by the Speaker, denouncing him for permitting legislation to be rushed through in defiance of the rules, and in a reckless and partisan manner refusing to accord the minority fair play. They appealed to 'the sober judgment of the people of Maryland to sustain us in our efforts to defend the rights of the people as guaranteed by the supreme law of the land.

The Carroll County Local Option bill, which was introduced in the Senate, by Mr. Beasman, and which passed that body, was killed in the House by a vote of 59 to 18, in a refusal to suspend the rules and place the bill on the third reading file. The legislature is now squarely on record as opposed to all Local Option legislation, both state wide and for the counties, and has clearly identified the dominant party as favoring the liquor interests in the state. The public utilities bill, from which so much good is predicted to come, and which Gov. Crothers exerted himself so strongly to pass, finally passed the House. on Monday. Whether this new law will be greatly beneficial, as claimed, rests largely with the Governor and the men who will direct it; it may be either a "good thing" as a political machine, containing a lot of "fat jobs," or it may, At the same place there is also a fan, made in 1840, at the death of President in part, justify itself, even though it is ever set going in the state.

A Transaction in Pork.

The Oklahoman tells the following as tending to show the farmer's part of our great national prosperity in which we hear so much from the press and platform: A farmer killed two hogs and a butcher agreed to buy them, the price the being satisfactory. The farmer said he'd like to have the hams and shoulders, the and again the butcher agreed. After the farmer put the hams and shoulders on his wagon, he remarked: what's the balance coming to me?"

The butcher figured a moment and replied: "There's nothing coming to you; you owe me $2.85." And the farmer hogs at a wholesale price and the farmer was charged at retail prices for the hams and shoulders—although that was not and shoulders—although that was not understood when he made the bargain. more than 500 rounds at a time.

Shad and Their Habits.

The shad is a warm-water fish. He doesn't like the water in the house to be colder than 70 degrees. So, when fall approaches he goes down the chilling rivers to the ocean and in its unchang-ing depths he spends the winter in warmth and comfort.

In the spring the call of nature comes and the fish seek a place to deposit their eggs. For this purpose they prefer the sandy flats which border the streams. The shad have been observed moving along these flats, or "shad wallows" in the upper Delaware, seemingly always in pairs. They cast their eggs generally between sundown and 11 p. m., and with a peculiar swishing movement which the fishermen call "washing." This can be heard at a distance. A ripe shad roe weighing four or five pounds contains from 20,000 to 40,000 eggs. Some have been caught which contained eggs estimated to number 100,000. The shad fry which spent the first six months of their lives in the Delaware river live on crustacea and insect eggs. When the cold weather begins to make itself felt next fall the youngsters will swim with unerring instinct down the river, out through the bay and into the warm and quiet depths of old ocean, there to remain until they reached ma-turity and are ready to deposit eggs.

It is said that a shad reaches maturity at the age of about four years. A full grown male shad is much smaller than a full grown roe, the former ranging generally from one to six pounds and the latter from three to eight pounds.

The shad is widely distributed over the earth, but the fish on the east coast of the United States are esteemed more highly than any others. And the Dela-ware river shad is best of all. The shad s closely related to the herring.

There used to be an idea current among fishermen that the shad migrated with the season from South to North in a mighty army and that certain detachments were sent off to ascend each stream to deposit their spawn. Scientific investigation has refuted this theory and shows that the fish live their lives in the river in which they are born and in the adjacent sea, moving from sea to river and from river to sea at certain seasons. The shad inhabit all the rivers from the St. John's, in Florida, to the Gulf of the St. Lawrence. The shad of the rivers flowing into the South Atlantic have black tipped caudal and dorsal fins, which are lacking in the Delaware river shad and those of the Potomac, Chesapeake Bay and other waters of this latitude. That is one circular by which scients tude. That is one sign by which scientists know that there is no general movement of the shad starting in the South and leaving garrisons at every river in the course of the march.—Philadelphia Record.

Methodists Denounce Disfranchisement of Negro Voters.

The first decisive step against the bold move of the Democrats to disfranchise negro voters is the resolution of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which on Saturday denounced the whole scheme.

The resolution, which was adopted by imons risi The Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, representing a constituency of 100,000 citizens of the State of Maryland hereby records its unqualified condemnation of the continued and unjust attempts to disfranchise the colored voters of Maryland. Admitted to the right of franchise by the opera-tion of the Constitution of the United States as the Supreme law of the land, a supremacy specifically emphasized and affixed by the Constitution of Maryland, his right to the suffrage is thus doubly guaranteed by the fundamental laws of the land. For 40 years he has exercised it, and twice have the voters of the state by decisive majorities refused to take it from him. The RECORD practically follows the course of the Union, except that its prohibition of patent medicine advertising is not total; it does, however, refuse many such contracts, and in the future will likely be still more restrictive. The Union says: Union-News (and some of those readers who are also advertisers) to know that each year in an effort to keep the paper up to the highest attainable standard of decency as a family paper. Announcements which seem to be misleading or are from firms of unknown reputation are also returned, along with other cards which would be proper in stock breeder's iournals but are not considered good reading for the family circle.

Reform.

This is the day of reforms and the reformer. It would be difficult to say to what particular cause we should attribute the present state of public opinion, or sentiment, which is demanding reforms all along the line. But whether or not we can agree as to what has caused this demand for reform, the fact that it exists and is so evident is a most hopeful sign of an awakening of the people to greater interest in public affairs. We cannot say that the day of the grafter and bribegiver is past, yet we do believe that it is rapidly becoming more difficult for them to successfully accomplish their designs without exposure and disaster.

There are still being revealed glaring examples of betrayal of confidence and trust on the part of those in authority, but the general condemnation meted to such argues well for the cessation of these betrayals. The white-wash brush is rapidly losing its virtue as a restorer of social or political reputations.

Public servants, who betray the confidence of those who give them power, find it exceedingly difficult to repeat their betrayal. Either by hypocrisy or sincerity they must establish a claim to loyalty in order to maintain the respect of the public. And even though we never attain unto the ideal, it is quite evident even now that higher standards must be maintained if respect and support are secured.

POWER FROM BROOK DAM.

Expert Urges Farmers to Store Up Water For Various Uses. By EDWARD R. TAYLOR.

Mr. Farmer, what are you doing with the brook on your farm? Letting it have its own sweet way in a hurry (and sometimes in a great hurry) to get its waters into yonder river? Why not curb it and make good use of it as it passes? John T. McDonald of Delhi, N. Y., some ten years ago began making good use of his brook-lights his house and buildings, runs saws and various machines in a little shop in winter and on rainy days and has enough power in addition to heat his house if he fitted up for it. Why don't you do likewise? The dam is made from stones and earth from the nearby fields, costs but little, securing a pond of about three acres which abounds in beautiful trout and other fish, and from the pond Mr. Mc-Donald cuts 500 tons of ice per year for himself and neighbors.

It is really the most valuable land he has. Did you know if you have the only pond on your stream all the largest fish will make it their habitation, and if you make a spillway in connection with your dam large fish from below will come up and settle in your pond, and you and your boys and girls will go fishing there for the profit as well as for the fun of it? Make a safe place and teach the children to swim. Besides, it is stimulating and grateful in summer weather.

I almost think you are really interested, and perhaps are thinking now where you have the best site for the dam. Begin the work by laying down sewer pipe two or more feet in diameter and twenty, thirty or more feet long, according to the size of embankment you must build. This can be in the bed of the stream, diverting the water for the time by a little dam above. On the upstream end of this pipe build a square box of plank as high as you wish the water to be in the pond. It will take away lots of water safely in floods. Near its bottom on the upstream side fix a gate other made only 6.8 tons. There are of plank which you can open to old strips of wagon tire in front of pay for the second year. the gate it will keep back all the fish that are too large to go through. This be so with grain seeded with grass and all done in good shape, you can let clover? At the right of the spillway of Charles M. Call's dam near my home is a square box connecting with the sewer pipe just described. This spillway is thirty-two feet wide, and the piers each side stand about four feet above, having been raised about two feet for safety after Mr. Call had and safe spillway to take all the water that can possibly come down. With such adequate spillways dirt dams are about the best and cheapest a farmer con construct, as almost all the work can be done by his own teams and scraper. Below the spillway on the lower side of the dam is a good place to dump stones if you have them on the farm; if not and the bottom is not of hard material you must finish with cement grout so it cannot under-

There is a little power house containing the water wheel and the little dynamo of about six horsepower which furnishes light for Mr. Call's house and buildings. The machinery requires little attention, being oiled once a week and stopped and started from the house by a wire connected with a simple attachment to the gate of the water wheel. Here are city comforts right in the home of the farmer. With such a power he can churn, run a washing machine, saw wood, run a

Lots of farmers during the dry summers draw water some distance for stock who need not have done so if they had made a pond and retained the flood water. Such a pond would be valuable even if not used for power. I have today a letter from a friend who made a dam in a brook passing through his back yard which is dry for several weeks every summer, thus making a pond which stored flood waters, on the bank of which he set up a gasoline pumping engine, by means of which he irrigated his orchard on land above.

Millet Crop More Than Doubled by Properly Enriching the Soil.

The picture herewith represents the value of fertilizer on sandy soil. A strip of land in New York had celery on it at one side in 1908 with an application of about 300 pounds per acre of a 2-8-10 fertilizer; the other side had no fertilizer. The land was plowed and fitted exactly alike and German millet sown about June 15, 1909. The showing is remarkable, as the season was the driest and also the coolest for years, with only five inches of rainof normal. The picture shows the growth of one square foot from each section, that fertilized in 1908 producing almost sixteen and one-half tons of green forage to the acre, while the

If this is so with millet, would it not parent when seven and one-half tons cured fodder can be secured per acre. As millet contains only about 2 per cent of protein, it should be fed in connection with alfalfa or clover hay. If these cannot be obtained the ration should be balanced with such feeds as oilmeal, cottonseed meal or the better grades of gluten feed.

"I have used millet for some years with dairy cows and young stock," says the farmer who made this fertilizing experiment, "and think very highly of it. It is said to be injurious to horses through the effect it has on the kidneys. With the hay crop as light as it has been for two years, as the dry season has been very hard on new seeding, it will surely pay our farmers to give more attention to the millets. Any one of the different kinds can be sown after all other spring crops are in and can be harvested and out of the way before fall work be-

PRESERVING FERNS IN WINTER

They Should Be Placed Where They Get Diffused Light.

Although ferns are greatly admired for indoor decorations, the plants are in general singularly unfortunate in the treatment they receive at the hands of their owners. It being well understood that most varieties thrive seen the water almost get over his better when not exposed to strong bank the previous spring. Too much sunshine, they are usually relegated care cannot be taken in having ample | to any shady and cold position that may be otherwise unoccupied in the house. This method of dealing with the plants invariably ends in disappointment. Although it is true that ferns do not like the direct rays of the sun continually upon them, yet a certain amount of light is necessary for their development, and instead of standing them in corners and other unfavorable places it is far better to give them the full benefit of a window -a northern aspect will do-or, at any rate, they should be placed where they get ample diffused light.

Another frequent cause of failure in ferns is the semi-starvation to which they are subjected. The idea is very prevalent that they do not require manure, and in consequence any poor soil which comes to hand is used for potting them up. Certainly a soil heavily manured is not suitable for them, and fresh manure should on no account be used, but a reasonable allowance of leaf mold is, as a rule, highly beneficial. To preserve the delicate greenness of the fronds liquid manure may be given when the plants are in growth and the pots fairly full of roots. good fertilizer, such as nitrate of soda, may be dissolved in the proportion of half an ounce to the gallon and the ferns watered therewith every ten or twelve days. This is especially good where the plants are old or partly exhausted. Soot water is also very useful as a stimulant. It should be perfectly clear and is best applied alternately with an artificial fertilizer. Liquid manure of animal origin should be used very sparingly or not at all.

END US YOUR EARS!

We have something to say of Profit and Importance to the Stock and Poultry Raiser.

All Stock and Poultry, at this time of the year, especially, when the vitality is low, need a Stock Food. Heretofore, you have always paid exorbitant prices for the filler in such Foods. Now, we offer you one, better than them all, without filler. (However, if you have become attached to rice hulls, bran, middlings, etc., you can add them, at small cost.)

"Little Giant" Stock Food

is richer in Protein and fat than all other Stock Foods. In addition to this, it contains a plentiful supply of calcium phosphate, which no other Stock Food contains, nor even the grains or grasses supply. It is upon this ingredient that we base the most of our claims for it, for in order to get the most out of the grains and the grasses, Calcium Phosphate is absolutely necessary. The guaranteed analysis is so good, that we cannot refrain from publishing it, inviting comparisons Phosphorus, 4 to 5 per cent.; Protein, 22 to 28 per cent.; Calcic Phosphate, 22 to 24 per cent. Fat, 9 to 12 per cent.; Those of you who are well-read, know that these properties are needed the year round. It is a positive cure for worms.

has become so well known, that while we need no longer exploit its virtues, we print for the benefit of our customers, the following testimonial: I have been feeding "Hen-e-ta" for over a year and many of my prize-winners have been raised on it. My famous $500 S. C. Buff Orpington Cookerel, which took first prize at this year's Baltimore Show, was fed on "Hen-e-ta" daily; and I attribute his wonderful development entirely to the addition of "Hen-e-ta" to his feed. I would not be without "Hen-e-ta," if I had to pay 5c a pound for it. I used to feed green bone, beef scraps, oyster shells, grit and charcoal; but, have cut them all out for over a year and fed "Hen-e-ta" instead. I am getting bigger cond stronger peeps, hardier chicks, fine red combs and more eggs and more fertile eggs than ever before. "Hen-e-ta" has put my birds in "the front row" in the show-room and they are taking the Blue Ribbons wherever I exhibit. All of my birds like "Hen-e-ta" and it makes them feel good the year round; it is also saving me considerable grains.

When in 1867 William H. Gold was discovered in great abundance, both placer and lode, and in the single year of 1908 the amount mined was $19,858,800. Copper in great quantity has been found and experts declare the deposits are equal at least to those of Montana, which State, up to 1909, had produced 5,000,000,000 pounds of this metal, valued at $750,000,000. Coal in vast beds known to aggregate 1238 square miles, or three times the area of the great coal beds of the Keystone State exists, and it is estimated by Alfred H. Brooks, of the United States Geological Survey, that Alaska's total coal deposit reaches the gigantic total of over 15,000,-000,000 tons. Thousands of tons of other metals-silver, tin, quicksilver, lead and iron abound, and petroleum is also in evidence in large quantities.

Sealing has been for years one of the leading industries, the amazing figures of $125,000,000 having been produced. This industry is, however, about exhausted. Salmon abound in great numbers and produce in round figures about $10,000,000 per year. Timber abounds, and a careful estimate makes the amount 37,000,000 feet of saw timber, but that is probably far below the real figures. The grazing lands are large and fertile, and whereas it was once supposed that no arable land to any extent existed, it is now found that thousands of acres of agricultural lands yield rich tribute to the enterprising and skillful farmers.

The country is being opened up by railroads, and this vast territory, comprising an area of 580,107 square miles being over twice the size of Texas, is becoming populated to a great degree. The temperature is much milder than of corresponding latitudes on the cast coast of the United States, and at Sitka the winter temperature is about that of Washington, D. C., while on the upper Yukon the summer heat is really intense, and the climate of the Aleutian Islands is similar to that of the western islands of

It thus appears that our statesmen builded better than they were aware of in adding this great domain to our Republic and increasing the vast store of wealth that has come to us from the Creator, and it is but proper and right that the great service Secretary Seward and his colleagues rendered the country in this transaction should be attested and proclaimed by a grateful nation.-Phila. Quick Time Music.

A music teacher in Chicago was recently approached by a lady from the interior who confided to him her intention of taking piano lessons and inquired as to terms, etc. These proving satisfactory, she went on to explain that she was desirous of accomplishing a rapid course. The professor assured her that she might learn a great deal in twenty lessons.

"Good," said the woman. "I've got only a limited time in Chicago, so I must contrive to get the twenty les-Face of the Typical New Yorker. London is a friendless city enough, heaven knows, to those who are not able to conquer, but she seems to me mild, benignant even, in comparison with New York. The face of the Londoner is very often overcast with the thought of how to get a living in the keen competition of the people in that in the highwaies." The word occurs, mighty capital, but the London face is tranquillity embodied in comparison with the face of the typical New Yorker. Keen, batchet shaped, anxjous, absorbed-such is the face you see everywhere around you. And this keenness of face is accompanied by a terrible spirit of self absorption. An Unpleasant Surprise. A fussy passenger in a suburban trolley car suddenly discovered that he had a grievance against the road and forthwith proceded to abuse the conductor. The latter was a small man who persisted in saving that rules were rules and that he had no discretion in the matter. Finally the fussy man became so very warm and seemed so determined to resort to fistic hostilities that an innocent bystander felt compelled to interfere. "Don't lick the conductor," he said. "Lick the superintendent."

And just then a two fisted six footer who must have weighed 200 pounds at least arose from a nearby seat. "That's a very good suggestion," he

For the Heathen Only.

A collection was being taken up in a Scotch church one Sunday on behalf of the heathen. The minister made a stirring appeal, and the warden started his round with the box. One of the first members of the congregation to whom he offered it, says a writer in the Church Family Newspaper, was evidently ill disposed to the cause.

In a stage whisper, heard alike by congregation and pastor, this man said in blank vernacular;

"Tak' it awa', lad. I'm not going to give out."

At that period the collection boxes were taken direct into the vestry. Down came the preacher from the pulpit, went into the vestry, brought out one of the boxes and marched straight toward the gentleman, all the congregation imagining that the minister was going to shame the unbeliever into giving something.

The clergyman offered the box to the heretic with the naive remark: "Tak' what thou wantest, lad. It has been gathered for the heathen."

Correct Time In Egypt.

The working of the oriental mind was delightfully illustrated in a story which Professor Turner told the Mathematical association. He had been spending the Christmas vacation in Egypt to supervise the erection of a telescope at Helouan. Captain Lyons, who was in charge of the instrument, said that he had found that at noon every day a gun was fired and was anxious to know how the system worked. Accordingly he interviewed the gunner and asked how he knew when to fire the signal. "Oh, I look at my watch," said the official. "And how do you correct your watch?" asked the captain. "I take it to the maker in Cairo and he tells me the error." Forthwith Captain Lyons interviewed the watchmaker and asked him how he checked the error of the watch. "I get the correct time from the gun," said that simple craftsman. And thus time was told in Egypt. - London Standard.

The Chinaman's Will-A Puzzle. A Chinaman, dying, left eleven

sheep and three sons and, making a will, left one-half of his estate to his eldest boy, one-fourth to the next and one-sixth to the third son. They wished to divide without killing a sheep, but could not see how to do it, so they sent for a wise man. Sending to his own fold for a sheep, he put it in with the eleven. Now take your half-six, said he to the eldest, and he did so; the second, take your fourth-three; the younger, take your sixth and begone-two, and they all did so, when the wise man drove his own sheep

CLEANED OUT THE PLACE.

Alfonso's First Encounter With a Small Railway Lunch Room.

Xavier Paoli in McClure's tells of King Alfonso's first encounter with the lunch room of a small railway station. Alfonso had been out motoring and was ravenously hungry.

"Give us some lunch, please," said the king to the lady at the bar.

The refreshment room unfortunately was very meagerly supplied. When the two traveling companions had eaten up the sorry fare represented by a few eggs and sandwiches, which had probably been waiting for more than a month for a traveler to arrive, the king, whose appetite was far from being satisfied, called the barmaid. fat and matronly Bearnaise with an upper lip adorned with a pair of thick mustachios.

"Have you nothing else to give us?" he asked.

"I have a pate de foie gras, but-it's ture, who did not see a serious customer in this famished and dusty

Pleased with her successful morning's trade and encouraged by the maid sat down at the royal table and began to tell the king her family affairs, questioning him with maternal solicitude. When at last the hour of departure struck they shook hands with each other warmly.

Some time afterward the king was passing through Dax by rail, and as the train steamed into the station he said to me:

"I have an acquaintance at Dax. I'll show her to you. She is charming." The plump Bearnaise was there, more mustachioed than ever. I will not attempt to describe her comic bewilderment at recognizing her former customer in the person of the king.

The greatest railroad project now on foot in this part of the world is that of a line to Hudson bay as a cheaper outlet for the wheat region of western Canada. The line will be about 500 miles long and largely through an unbroken wilderness. The surveys are now made, and it is definitely announced that the road will be built by the Canadian government. It will not be available through the whole year on account of conditions in Hudson bay. Although this great body of water is commonly egarded as a polar sea, no portion of 't reaches the polar circle, and neither the bay nor the strait ever freezes completely over. Nevertheless the great ice floes, the fog, the storms, the intense cold and the magnetic conditions make navigation exceedingly difficult and dangerous through more than half of the year. The line will shorten by a thousand miles the distance between England and the Canadian wheatfields and reduces by two real good and out of the ordinary. I days the distance between England

The Number of Comets.

People who have been surprised and possibly concerned about the number of comets seen this year will be interested in the statement made by Professor Paul Turner in a London lecture on Halley's comet that there may be 50,000,000 comets. Some comets, he says, take thousands of years to return instead of seventy to eighty years, like Halley's. "Comets," the professor adds, "spend most of their time at a great distance from the sun, traveling so slowly as to be almost stationary. Halley's comet describes in a few weeks an arc equal to that over which it spends forty years at the other extreme of its orbit."-Exchange.

For the Scandalmonger.

The Orleans museum has just been enriched with a curious relic of the past which some workmen in making excavations in the city came across. It is a stone representing a grinning figure, showing the teeth, the counte nance being repellent enough. In this way the loquacious woman, the scandalmonger, was brought to her senses. The stone, suspended by a chain, was placed round her neck, and so accoutered she was compelled to walk round the town in which she lived. The stone is supposed to date about Mexican Miners.

The living conditions of the workers in the larger mines of Mexico are extremely humble. The average man and his family live in a one room shack, mud house, stone hut or dugout along some bank. Their food consists of dried meat, fried flour cakes, beans and rank coffee. Stoves are found only in the better homes, the laborer's meal being cooked over a little fire between stones. It mealtimes the family gather around the fire, and they sleep on blankets on the Fine, Fine, Superfine.

To judge from the business cards of New Yorkers, its tradesmen are all dealers in fine commodities-fine fostwear, fine groceries, fine meats, fine furnishings, fine clothing, and so cn. How readily this spirit is acquired is seen on a sign at the head of the celtar stairs of a Third avenue tenement, where a business man of unmistakable Italian name declares that he is a deater in fine ice, coal and wood!-New York Press.

Cockades and Buttons. The cockade originated simply in the knot of ribbons or strings by which the broad flaps of the seventeenth century round hat were "cocked" or drawn up to the brim in fine weather. and thus originated the three cornered hat as well as the cocked hat of later times. There was nothing specially military about the usage, as the ignorant assert. The same strings survive in the loops of the hats of bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries in Great Britain, in the strings of the hats work by French cures and Spanish and Italian padres and in the cords which are still seen on the hats of some livery servants.

It naturally became the custom for military men to "cock" their hats with the livery color of the prince they served, and as the Hanoverian color was the convenient one of black the "black cockade" became associated in the minds of the people with military uniform. In an old Scotch song of Shirramuir, citing "Woodword's Hervery expensive," said the decent crea- aldry," we read of "the red coat lads with black cockades," and a knot of white ribbons was naturally chosen as the badge of their opponents. Striking a Comet. If we ask the effect of a comet's striking the earth we will readily see king's ebullient good humor, the bar- that if the head of the comet were compoved of bowlders a collision would have disastrous consequences. A rain of millions of great meteoric stones would, of course, bring catastrophe. If, however, it were merely a rain of small particles or dust we might never become conscious of it, for the particles would never reach us. They would be fused into gas through friction with our atmosphere many miles before reaching the surface. If the gases liberated by friction were in excessive volume we might suffer discomfort or even disaster. It is estimated that hundreds of millions of meteoric particles strike our atmosphere every day. This would be a serious matter if we were not protected by our great sheltering envelope of air. Occasionally a meteoric bowlder is large enough to resist the heat generated by this friction and reaches the surface. This we call a meteorite. The now established connection between comets and me teors is a matter of great interest .-Ralph B. Larkin in North American "Choir." Churchgoers who follow the service in their prayer books would certainly miss the "dear old phrase" concerning "quires and places where they sing," and in time the old fashioned "quires" may be made new fashioned again by the coming of rationalized spelling. "Choir" was a most unnecessary our rage upon the language. The old English "quer" or "quere" became quite naturally "quyer" or "quire," and so it remained until the end of the seventeenth century, when somebody seems to have introduced "choir" beause it looked more like the French "choeur." as if that were a valid reason. There could have been no danger of confusing a church "quire" and a "quire" of paper, which is a different word, the French "cahier," probably from Latin "quaternarium," a collection of four leaves.-London Standard.

E. A. SNADER, Clerk.

In writing an advertisement, to realize results, it must be so written as to command attention and create an impression amongst those interested along the line advertised. For 15 consecutive weeks I have been placing my various business propositions before the public in the columns of the RECORD. Permit me to say that the style and tone that was expressed in my ad. were not only commanding to the public, but they have been copied by another competitor, not only along the line of composition, but in the illustration and general make-up and style.

The old saying runs, "Good things, only, are copied; good patents, only, are imitated and infringed upon; worthless ones are never imitated. Taking this general view, I feel complimented and take off my hat and make a business bow. In preparing my ads I endeavor never to make any personal reflection upon my competitors, nor to advertise anything that is not positively correct.

What I have been trying to do was to educate the public in reference to Mail Order Houses, and I have even given them credit for the truthfulness of their ads. I have not told you that $35.00 was the cheapest buggy that could be bought, but I extended you an invitation to bring in your catalogue and I would meet, or beat, their prices. Further, I stand ready to meet any competition on prices in Taneytown, regularly, or specially, quality for quality—except on the 9th of April, until after 3 p. m., or until after Mr. Frank Bowersox's sale. After his sale is over, I will meet, or beat, any price in operation for that day, and I will be more liberal; any price given on that day, on any particular job, will hold good for this buggy season, or until that job is sold.

The reason I won't meet what is represented to be special prices on the 9th of April, before 3 p. m., is, Mr. Bowersox deserves the respect of every business man in Taneytown for annually bringing a large crowd of strangers to our town, which should be appreciated by our citizens, as every business is benefitted by this gathering, at the expense of Mr. Bowersox; and if I would do anything out of the ordinary to interfere with his sale, the citizens should rightfully condemn my actions. I positively will not enter into price-cutting newspaper controversy, as some people disregard the truthfulness of what they place over their signature. I don't know anything about the quality of any of my competitors' goods, but if you call I will talk business on the merits of my goods, and not on the demerits of my competitors, and let you judge the work.

Remember, I will be at the old stand, on Baltimore St., all day on April 9th., ready to consider business in the usual way, and will demonstrate the quality of the goods I handle. After the public sale is over, I will be pleased to serve you at the special price.

Respectfully soliciting the continued patronage of the public on anything in vehicles and harness, with full assurance that I right every wrong, I am, Very Truly Yours-

This is a noble work, and Philadel- States for 1909 was $1,663,011,104. The total imports for the United States for money spent for booze annually. The total expenses for running the United States government for last year were $622,324,445, or a little more than onethird the amount expended for intoxicating liquors during the same year. The total receipts of the United States government for the year 1909 were $603,589,490. In other words, the combined receipts and expenditures of the United States government for last year make an amount equal to only a little over two-thirds of the United States

When it comes to banking statistics, the annual drink bill of the American. people is equally appalling by comparison. The capital of all national banks in the United States aggregates $937,-004,136. The national bank notes in circulation amount to $666,505,012. The surplus of the national banks in the earnings of the national banks for last year were $131,185,750. It will be seen that all the net earnings of all the national banks in the United States, together with all the surplus of all these national banks, added to the entire capital stock of every national bank, of every city and town in every state in the Union, would not have been sufficient to pay the American drink bill for a single year.

The fact is, that the greatest economical problem which the American people have to face to-day, is the unjust distribution of wealth, and the waste of resources, chargeable to the liquor traffic.

So Lord Spencer bought it and took it home and set it in a high place, One day a connoisseur of china paid him a visit, and Lord Spencer showed

"What did you give for it?" asked

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that precious piece of yours is nothing more or less than a shilling marmalade pot with a green thistle painted on it."

Silencing the Questioners.

A French gentleman who had been with M. de Talleyrand for twenty years accompanied him to the congress at Vienna after Napoleon's exile to Elba. People naturally concluded that this long intimacy had made him familiar with a number of particulars of the minister's life and bearing also upon the events with which he had been mixed up. Worried with questions, the friend invariably replied that he knew nothing, but the questioners would not be satisfied and returned to

"Very well," finally said Talleyrand's confidant: "I'll tell you a peculiar and altogether unknown fact in connection with M. de Talleyrand. Since Louis XV. he's the only man who can open a soft boiled egg with one backward stroke of his knife without spilling a drop of the contents of the shell. That is the only peculiarity I know in connection with him."

Discretion had scored a decisive victory. From that moment the questions ceased.

Lesson III. - Second Quarter, Fer April 17, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xi, 1-19. Memory Verses, 4, 5-Golden Text, John v. 36-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the commission of last lesson both Jesus and His disciples departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel and healing everywhere. See verse 1, with Mark vi, 12, 13; Luke ix, 6. We may imagine the result from such a passage as Matt. iv, 24. In Luke vii, 16-18, we read that after Jesus raised the widow's son to life the people glorified God, saying that a great prophet is risen up among us and that God hath visited His people. And this rumor of Him went forth throughout all Judea and throughout all the region roundabout. And the disciples of John showed him of all these things. This explains how, according to verse 2 of our lesson, John heard in the prison the works of Christ. We learn from chapter xiv that John was put in prison because he had fearlessly rebuked sin in high places, a dangerous thing to do if one's own comfort is considered when the powers that be are in league with the devil. So Micaiah, son of Imla, found it when for speaking the truth he was put in prison and fed on the bread and water of affliction. Zechariah, son of Jehoiada, was stoned to death because he testified that the people were in trouble because they had forsaken the Lord (II Chron. xviii, 25, 26; xxiv, 20, 21). The hatred of the world, however, is not strange, for the devil is the god of this age, and he is the great adversary of God and man. But when one is suffering for righteousness' sake and our God, whose we are and whom we serve, seems not to hear us and sends no deliverance then it becomes very perplexing to any but the strongest faith. See Joseph as slave and prisoner, Martha and Mary with a sick and dying brother and John the Baptist seemingly neglected and forgotten. In reply to John's question by his two disciples Jesus in that same hour wrought many miracles and said to the messengers "Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see" (verses 3-6: Luke vii, 20, 21). He also said as much as "Do not be offended, John, if I do not come to see you, and do not think it strange if I do not release you." We must remember His words in John xvi, 1-3; Isa. l. 10.

The messengers from John having departed, Jesus said to the multitudes concerning John that he was the one foretold by Isaiah and Malachi as the messenger who would prepare the way of the Messiah (Isa. xl, 3; Mal. iii, 1). He also said that among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist (verse 11). We remember that Gabriel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, * * * he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, * * * he shall go before Him in the spirit and power of Elias" (Luke i, 15-17)-not great in the sight of men, but ready to testify or suffer or die that God may be glorified. In connection with John's greatness our Lord added, "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he" (verse 11). This has perplexed many because, perhaps, they have not noticed that Jesus did not say "the least in heaven," but the least in the kingdom of heaven, or kingdom of God (Luke vii, 28), which means the kingdom to be set up on this earth when Jesus shall be king over all the earth. When the kingdom comes John himself shall be greater than he ever was when here in humilia-The least in the glorified body, like Jesus Himself (I John iii, 2), shall be greater than the greatest here in a mortal body. There is more light for us upon this in due time, but let us consider the greatness of being "like Him" and so continually behold Him as to be more like Him now.

The kingdom suffering violence (verse 12) evidently refers to the violence which John was now suffering and which Jesus, the King, was soon to suffer at the hands of the rulers. See Luke xvi, 16, R. V. They killed the herald and also cruelly murdered the King. They they violently pressed against the kingdom and caused its postponement till He shall come again | And this of ours, in wintry soil laid prayin His glory. Stephen summed it up in his discourse when he said, "Ye stiff necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost-as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers" (Acts vii, 51, 52).

John the Baptist came in the spirit and power of Elijah, and had they received him and the Messiah whom he heralded the kingdom would have come (verse 14); but, having acted as they did, the real Elijah must come to herald the return of Christ in glory (Matt. xvii, 10-13). Let those receive it who can.

They said that John had a demon, and Jesus they called a glutton and a winebibber and a friend of publicans and sinners. We must not therefore think it strange if we receive similar treatment and are numbered with transgressors, reviled and persecuted for His sake. We must consider Him who endured lest we become weary. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might He increaseth strength.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 17, 1910.

Topic.—Good cheer in dark days.—Acts xxvii, 20-36. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In this story of part of Paul's journey from Caesarea to Rome Luke has given us a most vivid account of a shipwreck. Starting out from Fair Havens against the advice of the apostle on account of the stormy character of the sea at that time of the year, they advanced safely for a time and were then struck by a terrible tempest or typhoon, in which they were tossed about for more than two weeks. For many days they saw neither sun nor stars, the only guides of seamen in the days before the compass had been invented. For fourteen days they ate nothing. The provisions were probably soaked with water and all fires extinguished, and, furthermore, they were occupied all the time with trying to keep the large vessel afloat. All hope was abandoned. Paul absented himself. He spent the time undoubtedly in prayer for himself and all on shipboard. Then he appeared, addressed the men, telling them that he had had a revelation from God and that he believed God, and exhorted them to be "of good cheer," because there would not be a life lost except the ship. Later on they ate at Paul's advice. Paul thanked God, blessed the bread and ate of it. "Then they were all of good cheer, and they also took some meat." Shortly after the ship was wrecked upon the island of Malta, and not one of the 276 souls on board was lost. God's promise was fulfilled, and in answer to Paul's prayer He had saved all on board. Darker days could scarcely be imagined, and the "good cheer" of Paul must have been an inspiration to them all.

In the voyage of life there are also dark days, sometimes darker days than those upon a starless sea, when only the physical life is in danger. There are dark days of sickness sometimes lasting for years; dark days as the result of bereavement or financial disaster; dark days brought about by poverty, want and need. In addition, there are dark spiritual days. The soul cannot see God. Doubt and distrust in some way creep into the heart, and it seems as if God has deserted us or as if there were no God. Each one may think that his days are the darkest of all, but let him not so mistrust God. Every life has its own trials and dark days, only we frequently do not know what others endure and suffer. But "every heart knoweth its own sorrow," and thousands have aching, breaking hearts of which the world knows nothing.

The causes of dark days are not always known. Here it was disobedience to God, who spoke through the apostle. Had they taken Paul's advice and remained at Fair Havens over the winter this shipwreck would probably never have happened. But Paul's advice was disobeyed, and the dark days came. Many dark days are caused by disobedience to God. Saul as king of Israel was most prosperous and successful. In three wars against the enemies of his kingdom by the presence and help of God he won glorious victories. But in the last war he disobeyed God in not destroying the enemy and all their flocks and herds. God called him to account, and he tried first to deny, then to extenuate his offense, but it was useless, and darkness, indeed, came upon him politically, mentally and spiritually. But in many cases the causes of dark days of affliction, trial, bereavement and temptation are unknown to us. All we can do is to trust God and "be of good cheer," making His will our will.

The source of good cheer in dark days is God. To the disciples Christ, who is God, said, "Be of good cheer." And in the midst of these dark days Paul went to God. He believed in God and prayed for himself and all on board, and, getting the answer from God, he called upon all to "be of good cheer." God often uses His own people to carry good cheer to others. Do you know any one in distress, any one in sickness, any one bereaved, any one passing through hard times? Pray to God for him. Believe in God and carry them His message of good cheer. "Get your hat and coat, James. I am going to take you to your father. Perhaps you will explain to him why you cannot obey me.'

When Anna Degan reached Mr. Mullin's office she confronted a tall, handsome man with black eyes much like Jimmy's own, who looked down upon the two visitors with a friendly smile. "Sit down," he said, bringing forward a chair.

"I am James' teacher-Miss Degan," she began primly. "James is so unruly, Mr. Mullin, that I have brought him with me today to say that unless your influence can be brought to bear upon him or that you can assure me of his future good behavior I very much fear that Mr. Broadman will expel him."

Mr. Mullin's fine eyes widened with unconcealed surprise. "Well, really," he said after a little pause, "it's hardly my place, you see, to be responsible for Jimmy's behavior.'

Anna arose with sparkling eyes and cheeks flushed with indignation. "Oh, do not say that, Mr. Mullin! How can you, a father, repudiate any responsibility for your son's conduct?

Mr. Mullin seemed to find unusual interest in the lovely face framed in its mist of dusky hair. He seemed reluctant to terminate the interview by any definite answer.

"Then you refuse to interfere, Mr. Mullin?" Miss Degan's voice was haughty now, and her red lip curled with contempt. "As a father"- she paused suggestively.

Mr. Mullin seemed to awaken to new life. "As a father," he said vaguely-

"as a father" - He stopped abruptly and shot a fierce glance at Jimmy edging toward the outer door. Then he went on with a return of the friendly smile with which he had greeted her: "I believe you will have no further trouble with Jimmy, Miss Degan. I will take him in hand. He shall not cause you any more trouble. I am sorry he has distressed you. It must be rather a task to keep these young imps in order."

From his tall height he looked down on her in such genial good nature that Anna Degan found herself liking Alderman Mullin very much indeed. "Thank you so much, Mr. Mullin," she said gratefully. "I was afraid to come to you at first because"- She paused in embarrassment and turned to the

Mr. Mullin's eyes twinkled. "Alderman Mullin's bark is worse than his bite," he said dryly as he opened the outer door and accompanied her to the

At the farther end of the corridor James, the unruly, was engaged in a silent, furious wrestling match with the office boy. At Mr. Mullin's sharp whistle they disentangled themselves and approached.

It was then that Mr. Mullin gripped one of Jimmy's generous ears and so led him, walking stiffly, into the inner office and closed the door.

In the long ride uptown Anna Degan tried to forget the interview with Alderman Mullin. It had turned out much better than she had expected, and yet there had seemed an instant when he was about to refuse to take any part in the discipline of his own and only son. She had been surprised to find the father of James such a young and amiable looking man. She had heard such stories of his fiery, dominant nature she had besitated to bring a complaint before him. She had feared for the boy-Jimmy had always spoken in tones of almost terror of his father-and yet-She gave up the problem and tried to think of the pleasure that awaited her that evening. It was the 17th of March-St. Patrick's day-and she was going to the big ball of the Loyal Emerald Knights. Mr. Mullin had worn a sprig of shamrock in the lapel of his well fitting coat. Anna blushed redly and remembered with a certain fierce exultation the day that Jimmy's moth- pid."

ed the school. The recollection of her rubicund face and good natured and voluble flow of conversation quite drove away the picture of ... Amy's good looking father. After that she thought of nothing save the ball.

The orchestra was playing "The Kerry Dance" when Anna entered the ballroom with her sister and brotherin-law, and her little foot beat time to the swinging measure with anticipated delight.

Her gown was a triumph of tender love for the mother country and affection and loyalty to the new republic that had opened its arms to her people. Anna had planned it weeks before, and her skillful fingers had made it-green silk gauze embroidered with little golden harps, folds of white chiffon inside the low cut bodice, and inside the chiffon against her snowy neck three folds of chiffon-red, white, and blue.

The entrancing music of old Irish melodies, the polished floor crowded with brilliant gowns and the handsome uniforms of the Emerald Knights, the eager spectators in the gallery overhead, all formed a beautiful picture that Anna Degan never forgot.

She danced again and again with old friends and new ones whom her brother-in-law, Larry Fane, brought up to her. As she sat resting, her face aglow with exercise and pleasure, Larry approached with a large red faced man, black of brow and with scowling black eyes. His smile was pleasant, however, and seemed to indicate that the scowl was but a bad habit.

Anna's heart seemed to stand still when Larry spoke, "Anna, let me introduce Mr. Mullin-Mr. Alderman Mullin of the Seventh ward."

Then Larry disappeared, and Anna found herself permitting Mr. Mullin to scrawl his name against the next vacant space on her dance card, which proved to be the one she was sitting out, and so presently she was whirling about in the stiff embrace of Mr. Alderman Mullin, who growled a few sentences above her head, stepped on her pretty green shod toes without apologizing and finally left her breathlessly sitting on a divan in a corner far distant from her little group of friends.

She was glad of the respite to think over the startling situation. If this gentleman was Alderman Mullin, the father of James, the unruly, who, then, was the gentleman who had impersonated the alderman and made himself responsible for the behavior of James?

Across the room a couple revolved stiffly in the girations of a waltz; Anna recognized the burly form of the new familiar Mr. Mullin and also that of the lady she had known as Jimmy's mother. As for the other man-her face grew hot with indignation, and she looked lovelier than ever when Larry found her out. He had another man with him this time.

"Mr. Alderman Mullin's cousin, sisanother Mullin and a gentle knighta good friend of my own! George, my sister, Miss Degan!"

Larry left the two facing each other in the quiet corner, the man, resplendent in green and white satin and gold, looking tenderly down on the young girl in green and gold.

Miss Degan looked him squarely in the face and with contemptuous shrug turned away, but he caught her little gloved hand in his own with a swift gesture.

"Wait, please," he said gravely, and Miss Degan waited for his explanation. It came after a little while, haltingly, as from a man who is not accustomed to explain his actions:

"When a little lad is afraid of his father, Miss Degan, he naturally turns to some man whom he knows is fond of him and will stand by him in trouble. Jimmy confessed to me this afternoon that he was afraid to take you to his father—his father would thrash him, and that is all the good it would do! So the lad brought you to me and trusted me to understand the situation and to stand by him. I didn't get on to his little game till after you went, though I understood from his looks he was in trouble, so I let it go, hoping to see you again and explain matters to you. I had a talk with Jimmy, and he's going to be good. In fact, I've told him I shall call at the school every week and find out what his deportment is. I hope you do not mind, Miss Degan."

Anna listened to the long speech with downcast eyes and trembling lips. She was glad that she had spared Jimmy a whipping from his stern father and that this kind hearted cousin had masqueraded before her as Jimmy's parent. He had a good face, and, after all. Jimmy would improve and room No. 12 might be a credit to the grade after all!

She smiled gratefully up at Mr. George Mullin and dashed a tear from the corner of her eye. "I am very glad you did not disillusion me. I was so tired and cross just then I might have taken Jimmy down to his father's office, wherever it is."

"He'll be a good boy after this," promised Jimmy's big cousin as they glided into a waltz. Sweetly, alluringly, came the strains of "Kathleen Mavourneen," and they did not speak again until it was over. After a little while Mullin asked softly:

"And I may come to the school once a week and look at Jimmy's report, Miss Degan?" Anna's fingers touched the little golden harps on her pretty fan, and they seemed to give forth strange, sweet music-happy music that fell in cadence with his deep, melodious voice: "Yes, come," she said demurely. "I think it is a very good idea." Jimmy Mullin never could understand why, after that, his cousin, George Mullin, always called him "Cu-

Celebrated Their Golden Wedding.

Representatives from Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey, vied with each other, March 30, to do honor to two well-known and highly-respected residents of York, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ilgenfritz, Sr., of 203 East Cottage Place. The occasion was the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ilgenfritz. From the first floor to the third floor the rooms were attractively decorated, which, with the handsomely arranged tables laden with a most elaborate menu, contributed to the beauty of the scene. The celebration began with an elaborate dinner, at which Rev.

Albert Bell, postor of St. Luke's Lutheran church invoked divine blessing.
All during the day, friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ilgenfritz called to extend their congratulations. Both Mr. and Mrs.
Ilgenfritz are formerly of York, but spent over thirty years at Bruceville, Md., returning to York several years ago. Mr. Ilgenfritz is in his 74th. year and Mrs. Ilgenfritz is in her 71st. year. He also was a veteran of the Civil War; at the storming of Petersburg he was the first man on the parapet with the flag of the regiment, for which his comrades gave him a gold badge of honor, with the following inscription upon it, "Presented by his comrades of the 207 regt. P. Vol. for gallantry in front of Petersburg, April 2, 1865."

The celebration closed with a grand banquet participated in by a large assembly of relatives, friends and neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. Ilgenfritz were the happy recipients of a large number of presents, among which was a purse of gold, a gold clock, set of silverware, cut glass, a silver cake basket and other valuable and useful articles.
