Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

The Western Maryland had three wrecks, last week, on its W. Va. line, to freight trains, resulting in considerable damage to cars and tracks.

Mr. Thomas Parran will likely be the Republican candidate for Congress, in the Fifth district, as Mr. Sydney Mudd is still too ill to enter a political Campaign, and has been absent from his luties during the whole of the present

Samuel Rosenstock, of Frederick instituted suit for $100 against the Hagerstown Fair Association for the loss of a valuable rooster which he had on exhibition last October at the Hagers-town Fair. The rooster in some manner disappeared.

The annual convention of the Washington County Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Hagerstown, beginning June 14. About 150 delegates are expected to attend the sessions. Clarence Gibboney, the Philadelphia reformer, and Rev. Dr. McLeod of Washington will address the convention.

Dr. Samuel T. Haffner, one of the most prominent citizens of Frederick county, died at his home in Frederick, last Friday morning, of angina pectoris, in his 62nd. year. Several years ago he was County Clerk of Frederick county, and was quite prominent in politics in the Republican party.

Another of our great battle-ships, the Florida, was launched on Thursday morning, from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Florida is what is known as the Dreadnaught class, which is accepted by naval experts as the most effective ice for the demands of modern sea war. Two larger ships, the Arkansas and Wyoming, are under construction.

Dr. Luther Kuhlman, of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, will leave Gettysburg on May 27, for Edinburg, Scotland, where he will attend a world wide missionary convention. There will be fifteen hundred delegates present, five hundred of whom will be from the United States. Dr. Kuhlman will be one of the four from the General Synod of the Lutheran church. Atter the convention Dr. Kuhlman will make a tour of several months through Europe and the Holy Land.

The Administration Railroad bill, after weeks and weeks of debate in which the bill has suffered radical changes, was finally passed by the House Tres day afternoon by a vote of 200 to 126. This came only after a vote on an amendment, which almost caused a panic in the "regular" forces and made many Republicans fear that the bill, even in its amended form, was doomed. In the final vote every Republican placed himself on the side of the measure, either by his vote or by being paired in its favor, aud 14 Democrats joined the majority to make the total vote in favor of the measure 200 to 126.

The Frederick Publishing Company has engaged Mr. Paul Winchester, of near Emmitsburg, Md., to be editor-inchief of the Evening Press, a new daily paper to be published in that city, beginning July 1. Mr. Winchester was a member of the Maryland Legislature from Talbott county some years ago and is one of the best-known newspaper men in the state. Mr. Frederick J. Schroeder, son of Mr. George Schroeder, of Frederick, who is now manager of the Oak land (Md.) Journal will be foreman of the newspaper department and Mr. T. Arnold Wuitmore foreman of the job office. The Press has also engaged the services of Mr. J. S. McCobms, of Hagerstown, Md.

That Thumont will soon have an Flectric Light Plant and its streets lighted is now a certainty, and it will be but a question of a few weeks until its citizens will have the long wished for electric light. The work on the dam has been completed, the pipe all laid, power house erected, poles on which the wire will be strung planted, and at present the wire is being placed on the poles. The two large turbine wheels arrived last week and have been placed in position in the power house and connections are being made with the main feed pipe and with no mishap, the water will be turned on Suicide at Pleasant Valley.

George W. Starner, a well-known farmer, near Pleasant Valley, committed suicide last Friday morning between 8 and 9 o'clock by hanging himself in his barn. As he did not return to his home, nor leave the barn as promptly as usual. his wife went to look for him and was horrified to find him hanging by the neck from a timber above the barn door. He had tied one end of a rope to the timber and the other about his neck and then jumped into space. The body was taken down by a neighbor, John N. Ditch, but the physician upon his arrival found that life had been extinct for an hour or more.

Mr. Starner was about 40 years old, and leaves a widow and three small children. He was a son of Jeremiah Starner, near Westminster. He had been in ill health for some time and was suffering with severe nervous trouble.

England received with pleasure the news that Colonel Roosevelt has been appointed by President Taft to represent the United States at the funeral of King Edward. Despite the fact that he is no longer President Roosevelt, he is looked upon in England as America's foremost citizen, and his appointment is considered a gracious tribute to the late King. Had Roosevelt been forced to attend the funeral in the capacity of private citizen, it would have resulted in embarrassment to those having the funeral in charge, as he necessarily would have been preceded in the funeral procession by every other accredited representative. Now he will probably be assigned a position next that of the roval mourners.

ATTACKS CROSBY-MADE ROADS

Senator Blair Lee says Crosby Roads break Down, and are too Expensive.

Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery county, who is pretty generally credited with having made a remarkably good record in the last legislature, and who has something of a following for the Gubernatorial nomination, has been saying some rather sharp things against Road Engineer Crosby's methods, especially as they have been demonstrated in Montgomery County. There are others, like Senator Lee, who believe that ers, like Senator Lee, who believe that Mr. Crosby does not know all that is worth knowing about road-making, and that his fancy roads are a too expensive luxury at both ends.

Commenting on the work done in Montgomery, Senator Lee recently said; "Mr. Shoemaker thinks Mr. Knight, the Montgomery county road superintendent, lacks experience in road repairing. It is admitted that no one in the ing. It is admitted that no one in the State has had the experience in road repairing that Mr. Crosby has had. That is the trouble. His roads require too much repairing and his repairs also require to be repaired. On the other hand, Mr. Knight, whose roads cost about 40 per-cent. less to build than Mr. Crosby's is not in the way of having the same is not in the way of having the same large experience in repairing his own roads, because his roads have an annoying way of standing up, when Mr. Crosby's roads are breaking through in the spring of the year.

"Unless a road breaks down prompt-

In and require real Shoemaker-Crosby road. Young Mr. Knight, because he builds solid roads, appears not to be qualified as a road repairer. This is the Shoemaker-Crosby argument. The County Commissioners of Montgomery infer that a man who builds the cheanest and most solid roads.

will also make good repairs where needed. This is the contrary argument.

"Mr. Crosby's system is to have himself or some other engineer visit the work at intervals, and his representative on the work has no power and presumably the work has no power and presumably no capacity to approve or direct. These inspectors are poorly paid and are only allowed to check off time and material, etc., and report to Mr. Crosby.

"Mr. Knight has been engaged in road building in Virginia and the District of Columbia. He has supervised road construction for two years in Montgomery county, and after seeing his methods and county, and after seeing his methods and results the County Commissioners elected him to his present place. Comparing the roads with those built by Mr. Knight last summer, the latter appears con-clusively as the more capable constructor, for his roads are not only less expensive to construct, but there was no place in his three and a half miles that failed this spring, while there were a number of failed in the construction. of failures in Mr. Crosby's roads.

"It was only after becoming convinced that relief from Mr. Crosby's methods was necessary that Montgomery county undertook to build some roads without State aid. After building about seven miles in this manner, using better methods and local material; it seemed demonstrated that about 40 per-cent. had been saved as compared with Mr. Crosby's expenditures, and that the maince also was much Mr. Knight correct the defect in Mr. Crosby's roads by improving the drainage or doing whatever may be necessary to make them most solid, as the maintenance charge on these expensive roads, as constructed by Mr. Crosby, is so very high as to be unsupportable 'The County Commissioners' accounts show maintenance expenditures, as they assert, of $575 per mile per year on Mr. Crosby's doings in Montgomery county. The County Commissioners now offer to build five and six-tenths miles of State roads for $10,000 less than Mr. Crosby's estimate of cost and to guarantee their maintenance at about 70 per-cent. of Mr. Crosby's maintenance cost in our county. But Mr. Crosby answers that $150 year a mile is enough maintenance and the County Commissioners should agree to do it at that low figure.

"In contrast with the apparent fact that his own roads have cost $575 a mile year to maintain and as of the effect of Mr. Crosby's fixing $150 a mile a year as maintenance of State roads in Montgomery county to be guaranteed by the County Commissioners, he now recommends the use of oil to preserve the roads from automobile wear 'The oiling alone costs $150 a mile, so that on his own recommendation the County Commissioners would have nothing left for any other expense of maintenance out of the $150 he recommends to cover all expenses.'

The State Road Commission took an important and far-reaching step on Monday, when it declined to grant all the concessions asked by the Montgomery County Commissioners in their applica-tion to build about six miles of the Darnestown road for $47,000, or $10,000 less than the estimate of State Road Engineer Crosby. Had all the concessions wanted by the County Commissioners been granted the state would practically have surrendered final supervision and control of its own highways in the county, and if the state's rights had been surrendered in Montgomery it was claimed that they could be surrenawarded contracts at their bids to build the roads.

Governor Crothers, Chairman Tucker, and Mr. S. M. Shoemaker, members of the commission, who attended the meeting, stoutly maintained the state's rights over its own highways. Senator Blair Lee and Mr. D. M. Knight, superintendent of roads in Montgomery county, put forth the claims of the commissioners. In a nutshell, the object of the Montgomery Commissioners and of Mr. Lee is to build the state road in this county according to their own plans and withby Mr. Lee and his commissioners.

Death of England's King.

King Edward VII, who had recently returned to England from a vacation, apparently in the best of health, died at 11.45 o'clock last Friday night in the presence of his family after an illness of less than a week, which was serious hardly more than three days. The Prince of Wales succeeded to the crown immediately, according to the laws of the kingdom, without official ceremony.

Pneumonia, following bronchitis, is believed to have been the cause of death, but the doctors thus far have refused to make a statement. Some of the King's friends are convinced that worry over the critical political situation which confronted him, with sleepless nights, aggravated, if it did not cause, the fatal

All who knew the King anticipated that his death would be sudden, and it would not have occasioned great surprise if it had occurred without warning at some social function as a result of heart trouble. Almost to the end he re-fused to take his bed.

One of the last utterances attributed to King Edward was:

"Well, it is all over, but I think I have done my duty." He seemed then to have reached a full realization that his end was fast approaching. The Queen and others of the royal family and four doctors have been constantly in the sick room throughout the day. Several hours before his death the King was in a comatose condition, but he ralled slightly between 9 and 10 o'clock, and appeared to recognize his family. Then he relapsed into unconsciousness, which ended n his passing.

King Edward was born November 9. 1841, in Ruckingham Palace. Was christened Albert Edward, Prince of Wales. His various titles were Duke of Cornwell, Earl of Chester, Duke of Rothesay, Duke of Saxe-Cobugr-Gotha, Prince of Saxony, Earl of Carrick, Earl of Dublin. George V. Unlike His Father.

It is difficult to conceive a greater contrast than that between the character of King Edward VII. and the character of the Prince who now becomes his most excellent Majesty George V. by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

The father was a cosmopolitan; the son is an Englishman of the old type. proposed by our Commissioners to have The father was a born diplomatist; the son says what he thinks-and he thinks a good deal. The late King was fond of society-the new King hates it, and has practically no entertaining. ward VII. was a most accomplished linguist; George V. speaks beautiful English but has never troubled himself to learn any other language thoroughly, King Edward was, at any rate in his early life, a bon vivant, and always a sportsman; the new King is straightaced, a precisian, and is bored by all

The English Court will, there can be little doubt, be entirely transformed. For one thing, it is understood that the new monarch is not fond of Americans, while his father's enjoyment of the wit and brightness of American women was well known. It is not to be supposed that there is any prejudice toward Americans as Americans on the part of King George; it is simply that he prefers Englishmen and Englishwomen to foreigners of any nationality.

Possibly as a result of his rather frigid manners, and the enmities that have thereby been engendered, the new King has been the subject of a good deal of ill-natured gossip. It has been said that he is rather dull—not as clever a man as his father. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Nobody who has watched him deliver one of those speeches on public affairs which he has made frequently in the last half dozen years can fail to be impressed by the ability of the new English ruler. His father was content, on most occasions, to let somebody else write his speeches for him and to read them from beautifully typewritten man-uscript. Not so the son. He writes his uscript. Not so the son. He writes his speeches himself—writes them with the nation, against Mr. Pearre, the latest of greatest care, and often corrects them many times before he is satisfied. And they contain not only the amiable commonplaces which were good enough for the late monarch, but real ideas, statements which create interest and wide

In another respect the new King has was claimed that they could be surrendered in other counties, especially in Wicomico, Caroline and Worcester counties, whose commissioners have been ties an advantage over his father. The new King has a voice of extraordinary strength and clearness and, if he should desire, there is no doubt that he could become the finest royal orator in Europe.

High Schools to be Closed

Frederick, Md., May 11.-Most of the high schools in Frederick county will be closed by the operation of the new High School Law enacted at the last session of the legislature, according to Rev. Isaac M. Motter, president of the Board of County School Commissioners. The new law provides that high schools, in order to receive official recognition and state aid, shall have an enrollment of at least 85 for the first class and at least 35 for the second class.

Rev. Mr. Motter says, will qualify in the first class, and the schools at Branswick and Middletown will qualify as schools of the second class, but these at Emmitsburg, Thurmont, Woodsboro, Walkersville, Jefferson and Adamstown will be closed. Under the law high schools of the first class will receive $2,500 each per year from the state towards their support, and schools of the second class will receive $1,500.

Harp, of Frederick, are prominently mentioned. There are also other good men who would be receptive, should sentiment turn in their direction, among whom is Senator Mathias, of

It is taken as practically certain in some quarters that the Republican organization in the Sixth district will not back of Mr. Pearre for the nomination. When he first entered the race, 12 years ago, he carried his district by more than 3,000 majority, but at the last election he dropped down to 552 majority. All of that majority was received in Frederick county. He lost in the first time since the war the bill Garrett, Washington, Allegany and Montgomery counties and went to Frederick with 10 votes against him.

Mr. Pearre still has many stanch gomery has been a subject of criticism hard to have any other kind of work being the hottest fought in the Republican ranks for years.

Taft's Tariff Commission Sure.

Washington, D. C., May 11.—President Taft is to have an appropriation of $250,000 for special investigations at home and abroad of the tariff question if Republican leaders in the House and Senate can push through the necessary legislation.

'Stand pat'' tariff men like Senator Aldrich, Speaker Cannon and Representatives Payne and Dalzell have yielded to the President and will withdraw their objections to a tariff board of commission. They will insist, however, that the report of the board on tariff matter shall be made to the President and not to Congress. The President can with-hold the information if he sees fit. If business conditions in this country are such as to render ill-advised a reopening of the tariff schedules for change the President can withhold recommenda-

Representative Fordney, of Michigan, is the only regular Republican to announce open hostility to the tariff investigation planned by the President. He has made the flat announcement that he will oppose the appropriation. Representatives Payne and Dalzell, who have defended the tariff law, and on other occasions have opposed bitterly a tariff commission, spent some time with the President to-day discussing the question. While refusing to commit them-selves later, it is understood by their friends that they agreed not to oppose the President, and to go along with him in his plan to discover the inequalities, if any, in the new tariff law that he may recommend corrective amendments to the law.

Speaker Cannon, apparently, is taking no part in the fight for the tariff commission. He has not been called into conference at the White House on the subject and House leaders say they have not heard him express an opinion. It is the general impression the Speaker will not oppose the President and will put no obstacle in the way of the legislation

President Taft wants the commission to settle the question of the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. On this information only in his judgment can a just and scientific tariff law be drawn. He thinks the Republican party should prepare itself to base future revisions of the tariff upon proven facts, and not on guess work and ex parte statements. He reasons also, the political effect of the move will be beneficial. If the people now dis-satisfied with the tariff appreciate that the Republican leaders are sincere in their desire to have the best possible tariff law and are willing to gather facts that may prove them in error with regard to the merits of the present law, the President thinks they will renew their faith in and their allegiance to the Republican party and insure its retention of control of the Government. He has received many letters indorsing his demand for a tariff commission from strong party men as well as from the insurgent sections of the country.

The Democratic leadership opposed the legislation. They will try to have the commission or board instructed to report to Congress, failing in which they will vote against the entire proposition. The two high schools in Frederick, They fear the political effect of such a move. They are making their the tariff and the high cost of living. tariff board might have time to demonstrate the tariff had nothing to do with the high cost of living, and so deprive them of their chief compaign argument.

Postal Savings Bank Bill.

Washington, May 12.-President Taft has told the members of the House Committee on Postoffice and Post Roads at the White House that he intended to hold them responsible for the success of the postal savings bank bill, which they have held up by their refusal to report it favorably. He summoned them to the White House and spoke his mind in no uncertain language.

That the conference was earnest was indicated by the fact that Representative Weeks, chairman of the Committee and chief opponent of the Tatt measure, remained with the President about four hours. The others left the White House earlier.

The Republican members of the Committee have practically reached an agreement on the bill, which agreement is in the nature of a compromise on the main point at issue—the use and distri-bution of the funds after the total in savings banks shall have reached $2,000,-This presages an early report on

A New Pension Bill.

Washington, May 11.-Just as the annual pension bill of the country is beginning to show a decrease in size, along has come a measure intended to increase the pensions of all those now drawing an annuity from the Federal Govern-ment. If enacted, this bill will more than restore the total pension appropriation to its former high level.

Provision is made in the pending measure now before the House Committee on Pensions for an increase of all pensions below $12 a month to $12; all above $12 and now below $16, to $16 a month; all above $16 and below $20, to $20 a month. In addition to this, the bill provides that all veterans of the Union Army who served as much as 90 days and were honorably discharged be placed on the pension rolls at $12 a month, whether they were injured or

Furthermore, all widows of veterans of the Civil War are to have their pensions increased in the same proportion as the other pensions. The current pension bill appropriates $155,000,000 for the old soldiers, and for s hows a decrease instead of an increase

Reports from all over the country are friends, however, who will fight for his to the effect that notwithstanding the somewhat panicky Spring weather, the prospects for fruit of all varieties is most excellent, especially as there is now little danger from killing frost.

POLITICS IN THE Sixth district, this are feeling very hopeful that this is strong candidate, while the Republicans are divided over Pearre, and not united on any one person. It looks, however, as though Mr. Pearre is not wanted, and that his party will stand a much better show with a new leader. Perhaps this is a mixed, and not altogether elegant, definition, but it is intended to convey our general impression that when the said magazines departed from the field of entertaining fiction and pure literature, they made an egregious blunder, and one for which an intelligent and discriminating public will not long stand. One can get all the "yellow" stuff he wants, at one cent per, and when he pays 15c to 25c for a magazine, and gets the same colored truck, he is out the difference above the one cent. Cut out the advertisements and the articles "knocking" somebody or something, and the average magazine is mighty dear reading. No wonder Uncle Sam wants to raise the postal rates on danger of removal, it is apt to become them.

The single issue on which there was a party division in the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections is the time of making public the bill of costs. The Democratic Senators want the announcement made before election day, while the Republicans think that the natural and proper time for figuring up election expenses is after it is all over, and that is not until election day has passed.

If a candidate has been spending money too freely it is, of course, better for his opponent to know that fact and be able to make use of it before election. Cannon--The Man and the Politician.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, the man, is a very different person from Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, the czar, in the minds of menbers of the House. When occasion arises he picks up his gavel and pummels the minority and Insurgents with alacrity, and they rise up and call him everything but blessed. At one time or another half the House has denounced Cannon as a czar and a tyrant. He has seized power and ruled with an iron hand. He has fought his enemies and rewarded his friends. He is a reactionary, a dictator, a back number and the strongest opponent of many of the reforms that the country demands. But he is so intensely human, possesses so many sturdy faults and is such an uncompromising fighter that a good many folk can't help liking him per-

The united tribute of Democrats and Republicans to Mr. Cannon on his seventyfourth birthday, Saturday, was a spontaneous expression that must have pleased the Speaker beyond measure. Champ Clark, the Democratic leaeder, Representative Henry T. Rainey, of Illinos, and other opponents testified to their regard for "Uncle Joe" and wished him "many happy returns of the day." Mr. Cannon was touched by this tribute from political enemies as well as friends.

Bryan Losing Power.

Just what condition Mr. Bryan expected to find politically on his return is known only to himself. What he did find was the fact that the entire Demothey are about, and who need not against him and that the movement organized by W. F. Porter, ex-Secretary of State, having for its object the election of Mr. Bryan to the United States Senate, was a flat and miserable failure. Indeed, less than 10 Democrats answered Mr. Porter's appeal for 50 Democrats to come forward and each contribute $1 to pay the filing fee necessary to place Mr. Bryan in nomination for the

> The complete failure came as a shock to the Bryan family and friends. Apbelieving that bis loss of prestige in Nebraska was due to his stand on the liquor question, Mr. Bryan promptly modified his stand. For nearly six months the country had understood that he favored county option. Within a few days of his arrival in Lincoln his newspaper editorially announced that it was only the principle of the thing for which he stood. He believed for the county option plan of prohibition, even if he had a chance.

Scarcely had the State time to gasp over Mr. Bryan's sudden change than he brought forward another issue and took the centre of the stage, with all spotlights in the house turned on him. He demanded that Governor Shallenberger call a special session of the Legislature to pass an initiative and referendum act. Personal letters were mailed by him to each Democratic member of the Legislature asking if the member would sign a call for a special session, and also if the member would vote for the bill if introduced.

Trouble began among the Democrats as soon as Mr. Bryan's letter was made public. The first answers received were from the Omaha delegation of State Senators, all of whom are Democrats. Without exception, these members told Mr. Bryan they refused to sign a call for a special session, and that they would vote against his initiative and referendum bill should the session be called and the bill introduced. This delegation based its position on Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance in the last national campaign, in which he announced that the party platform was binding in what it did not contain as much as in what it did contain. As the platform did not favor the initiative and referendum, argued the Omaha Senators, the party should not now enact a law of that kind.

All of this goes to show the revolt against Bryan in his home State. This revolution is not one of talk only, but is one in which the members are "doing things."-Lincoln (Neb.) Cor. N. Y

AUTOMOBILE AS FARM HAND.

Many Uses For the Motorcar as an Adjunct to Farm Work.

The automobile is rapidly becoming the most useful and popular farm hand that can be employed by the enterprising agriculturist. Its variety of uses is great. A man who has a large farm to look after finds that he can get around much more swiftly and comfortably in an auto runabout than by horse, buggy or Shanks' mare. Some farmers use the auto in peddling chickens about town, while others fire up their motorcars early in the morning and speed away to town and deliver milk from door to door. For hauling light produce to market the automobile is unexcelled. When the children have a considerable distance to go to reach the country schoolhouse they are happy if "pop" or the hired man can crank up the auto and speed them on their way.

Charles P. Cushing, a writer in Leslie's Weekly, has some interesting things to say about the use of the automobile on farms-for instance:

David Rankin, owner of a system of farms comprising 25,640 acres near Tarkio, Mo., has some philosophy on this subject. He likes to feel the pull of reins and sticks to the old fashioned buggy himself, but he gives his foremen automobiles. This is simply part of his business policy: "Get the best and latest farming implements. They are the cheapest in the end."

To say, as writers for certain automobile journals do, that the farmers are hostile to automobiles is rank nonsense. The greatest difference of opinion on motorcars may be found among the farmers in the same state or even in the same county. As correspondent for the Kansas City Star I toured Missouri with Governor Joseph W. Folk when he was campaigning for the senatorship in the fall of 1908. In the more progressive towns the farmers had their motorcars waiting at the hitching posts around the courthouse square as evidence of the progressive spirit and the prosperity of the community more patent than fat sheep or bulging corncribs.

In Kansas hundreds of farmers have bought automobiles. That is not a newspaper "feature story" for the delectation of the gullible and the amusement of editorial satirists. It is plain

Do not jump to the conclusion from this, however, that many farmers have bought blindly. The farmer's familiarity with tools and farm machinery and gasoline engines is a far better preparation for intelligent selection of a car and intelligent care of it afterward than the ordinary city man's superficial knowledge gained from catalogues and gossip or from watching a thousand "makes" whir past him on the streets.

At a motorcar show in Kansas City there was an example of this point. Isaac Page of Dickinson county, Kan., had just traded his runabout for a touring car. The deal was finished as quickly and as calmly as the purchase of a washing machine. Mr. Page's manner was that of a city business man, though he wore a black felt cheese box hat with a huge brim, a white hickory shirt without a necktie. and his suit was the plainest of "store clothes."

"Don't get it into your head that I'm old. I'm only fifty-seven," he warned when I introduced myself as a reporter. "And don't think that there's anything unusual in a farmer from Dickinson county, Kan., buying a new motorcar. I always say we older people can't afford to get into ruts Things change, and we've got to keep up. There are a dozen other farmers in my neighborhood who own cars. We need 'em. Now, I live eight miles out of Abilene. With a car I can run in in twenty-two minutes. See?"

If Distilleries Should Close.

The secretary of agriculture is authoritatively quoted as saying that if every distillery and brewery in the United States was to close and never use another bushel of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors the American farmers, as a class. would not know it as far as the effect would show itself on the markets for THRASHING CUCUMBERS.

How Colorado Farmers Make Profit by Precaring Secd.

In eastern Colorado, where most vine crops grow "to perfection" on the irrigated lands, hundreds of cucumbers, cantaloupes and watermelons are reserved for seed by seed companies and by farmers who grow them for the seed houses. It is a common sight from the first of October to the first of December to see machines in the fields of cucumbers and melons thrashing them for their seed.

The growing of cucumbers for seed is considered very profitable, and often the owner clears from $100 to $150 an acre. While it is possible to sell the cucumbers to a canning factory, many farmers prefer to let them remain for seed, as the expense of gathering is not so great and the income an acre is nearly as much. The thrashing continues for only a short time and costs a moderate amount.

The cucumber thrasher is a peculiar looking machine. It is built on a wagon-like frame with great wide wheels and is drawn by two horses. At the rear of the machine is stationed the little two horse power gasoline engine which operates the machinery of the thrasher. Just in front of the engine is the crusher, which looks something like a common cider mill. It contains two iron rollers moving together and crushing the cucumbers as they pass between them.

Against the crusher is set the framework containing the real seeder. When the cucumbers are crushed they pass out into this large cylindrical seeder. the outer surface of which is a wire netting with meshes large enough to permit the seed to drop through into a vat below, but holding back the crushed cucumbers. As the cylinder slowly revolves the seeds drop through the netting into a box.

SAVING THE PEACH CROP.

Uncle Sam Tells How to Cure "Black Spot" and Other Blights.

For years the peach brown rot has been recognized as a most destructive disease of stone fruits. This is a fungous disease, and it is widespread and very destructive to the peach crop. The loss which it inflicts on peach growers will easily average $5,000,000 yearly. The loss to the peach crop of Georgia alone is estimated at $1,000,-000 a year.

Much work has been done with a view to discovering a satisfactory remedy for this trouble. Spraying with diluted bordeaux mixture has been most commonly recommended, but its injury to the foliage has made it unsatisfactory, since the remedy must be applied during the growing season.

The peach scab (often called "black spot") is another disease which seriously affects the peach crop in all sections east of the Rocky mountains, although not causing such serious losses

As the result of experimental work by the United States department of agriculture a cheap and simple remedy for this disease has been found in the self boiled lime sulphur wash. This can be applied during the growing season with very little danger of injuring the fruit or foliage, and it is very effective. Furthermore, by mixing aresenate of lead with the fung curculio can be destroyed at the same time.

The department has just issued a bulletin describing the preparation and use of the remedy. This publication will be of great interest to peach growers in all sections and is supplied free for the asking.

Keep the Pastures Clean.

The most important point regarding the preparation of waste lands for growing grass is the removal of the useless plants which now occupy them. The space occupied by weeds. briers and bushes cannot be occupied by grass, nor can the plant food used in the growth of these useless plants go into the growth of plants that live stock will eat and thrive on. Our pastures must be cleared up and kept clean. Cheap or poor lands which are growing timber of value should be left to grow that crop, but lands which are now growing nothing of value should be made to furnish grazing for live stock if it can be done and come out even.

The first cost of cleaning up the land for pastures is considerable and must be regarded in the nature of a permanent investment, but when once cleaned up and set in grass the cost of maintaining it clean is small. This small expense, however, is none the less necessary. It is certain that cotton and corn, for instance, will not grow profitably on land occupied by other plants on which large sums are spent on cultivation to keep down weeds and grass, but farmers never will realize that grasses and other grazing crops must be growing plants in order to produce the most profitable re-

Dairying In Holland.

Dairying in Holland is the principal occupation. The land is worth from $500 to $1,000 an acre, yet the people pay their rents or interest on the investment by producing butter and cheese, which they place on the European markets in successful competition with that produced in America on land less than one-fifth the value. The secret is-efficient cows, excellent care, co-operation and superiority of butter and cheese. A cow stable in America is usually an untidy, uninviting and in many cases absolutely filthy place, where, to the disgrace of civilization, human food is produced. In Holland a cow stable is as clean and carefully cared for as any other room in the house.

Specialties in Popular Prices! THE SPORTING WORLD

5c, 10c and 25c Goods—Popular Prices among every shopper that goes the rounds.

Today, we can give you, for the above popular prices, a better, cleaner, nobbier, and more up-to-date article in every respect, than ever before in the history of our store. As we advance to greater values, we can also save you financially, and at the same time give you STRICTLY NEW GOODS and right up to the minute in style and quality.

We are now occupying our new quarters, not alone for our own comfort, but that we might be in a position to give to our trade a more satisfactory deal, a better article for the money, and at less per cent. of profit added, all on account of a curtailment of several hundred dollars expense. This enables us to sell goods at a price that we need fear no competition.

Look over our Stock, as there are many new things added since our move.

We aim only to keep the best and most up-to-date merchandise on hand at all times, and at such popular prices so there can be no variation in price, if quality alone is considered. We are thankful for the appreciation extended by the people for the as cool and white as a dairy. No smell, no smoke, no heat, no dust. No old-fashioned contrivances. The is the latest practical, scientific cook-stove. It will cook the most elaborate dinner without heating the kitchen.

Boils, bakes, or roasts better than any range. Ready in a second. Extinguished in a second. Fitted with Cabinet Top, with collapsible rests, towe rack, and every up-to-date feature imaginable. You want it, because it will cook any dinner and not heat the room. No heat, no smell, no smoke, no coal to bring in, no ashes to carry out. It does away with the drudgery of cooking, and makes it a pleasure. Women with the light touch for pastry especially appreciate it, because they can immediately have a quick fire, simply by turning a handle. No half-hour preparation. It not only is less trouble than coal, but it costs less. Absolutely no smell, no smoke; and it doesn't heat the kitchen. The nickel finish, with the turquoise blue of the enameled chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Jim Rector May Retire.

Despairing of ever meeting the South African sprinter, Walker, in a hundred yard dash or meter race, James A. Rector, the University of Virginia sprinter, has announced his retirement from track athletics for good and all. Rector will enter a law office in St. Louis this fall and will not run in competition again unless Walker should decide to come to America. In such an event the Virginian will use every endeavor to arrange a race with him. That his defeat in the final heat in the hundred meter dash at the London Olympics was a bitter disappointment to Rector is well known and is rendered more bitter by the fact that he believes he is the better man of the two. When Walker announced last winter that he would visit America. Rector determined to race him and prove conclusively which was the speedier runner. The change in the plans of the South African was consequently another disappointment to the Virginia runner.

Monument to Jack Dempsey. John S. Barnes, globe trotter, one time holder of the world's championship at 100 yards, ex-professional boxer and wrestler, and all round athlete at fifty-five years, has launched a plan in Spokane. Wash., to start a national fund among the followers of fistiana to erect a tombstone in memory of Jack Dempsey, the Nonpariel, whose remains are in an unmarked grave, hidden by a patch of dark weeds in a cemetery at Portland, Ore. He said in discussing the project: "Dempsey was more to Americans than a pugilist. He was a man among men, square as a die, game to the core, be placed in the name of an estabbusiness men."

Barnes, who is a remarkably well preserved man at his age, will be remembered by many as surprising the sporting world a few years ago by offering to meet any man in the world more than fifty years of age in running, jumping, wrestling and boxing contests.

He became a professional sprinter at eighteen and at twenty-one won the world's championship 100 yard dash at the Philadelphia Centennial. He has in his possession a certificate showing he ran 100 yards in nine and threefourth seconds in 1883 at Bellevue. Ontario. He became a professional boxer and beat some of the best men of his day.

Baseball In England.

Baseball appears to be taking a hold in England. Thousands of clubs have been organized all over the kingdom and in Scotland. Ireland is also taking up the American game. The cheapness of the baseball outfit as compared with that of cricket is one reason why the small boy in England takes the American game in preference. He can get a ball for sevenpence halfpenny and a bat for the same amount.

American Team to Go Abroad. Eighteen football players, the best that can be procured in this country, will leave Providence, R. I., the 1st of September for a tour of England, where they will engage the crack teams of that country. This is the first time in nearly twenty years that an American socker football team has invaded England, and the trip, it is believed, will be of great benefit to the future of the game in this country.

New World's Walking Record.

At the Canadian athletic championship meet in Winnipeg, Canada, George H. Goulding of Toronto in the mile walk broke the world's record by covering the distance in 6 minutes 251-5 seconds. This lowered not only the American record of 6 minutes 292-5 seconds, but also clipped four-fifths of a second off the world's mark made by G. E. Larner at Brighton, England, in A Nice Calculation.

Two very dear old ladies walked up to the window where tickets were to be sold for two popular concerts. They wanted tickets for both nights; but, alas, those for the second evening were all gone! This was the more popular entertainment of the two.

"I'm so sorry, my dear!" pattered one of the old ladies to the other. "We did want to go, didn't we, and we wanted to go both nights?"

"You couldn't give us two tickets for each night?" inquired the other of the clerk.

"No, ma'am."

"You haven't two seats anywhere for the second night?"

"No, ma'am. Couldn't give you nose room. A great resolution beamed upon her gentle face. "Then," said she firmly, "give me four tickets for the first night. We will make them do." "Why, sister," quavered the other,

"you're going to invite somebody?" "No," said she, "but if we can't go both nights"- She paused, bewildered, quite out of her calculation. Then a happy thought struck her, and she added, "We'll go twice the first night."

Lake Nor, in the Tabi desert, in southwestern Asia, which has been called the "wandering lake," presents a phenomenon about which contradictory views have been entertained. Perhaps the Swedish explorer Sven Hedin has given the most plausible explanation touching this phenome-

It appears, according to that explorer, that the Tarim river, entering the lake from the west, brings down during the period of high water late in summer a great quantity of salt, which has the effect of driving the lake lying on the level floor of the desert toward the southeast. But the summer wind, drifting the surface sand and darkening the heavens with dust, blows generally from the northeast, and it, too, tends to drive the lake before it. The combined effect of the urging by the wind and the river is to force the lake southward. Yet it is thought the migration of the lake is not constant in direction, but it shifts back and forth intermittently. according as the circumstances change.

She Forgot.

At 3 o'clock the absentminded woman left home with an umbrella. At the subway station she concluded it wouldn't rain and left the umbrella with the corner newsdealer. When she came back at 6 o'clock it was raining. Boys with umbrellas to rent darted toward her when she appeared at the head of the subway stairs. She paid one boy 10 cents to escort her home. Then she remembered her own umbrella. Sheltered by a borrowed umbrella, she went back to get it. The newsdealer looked uneasy,

"Just a minute." he said. "Oh, Tom, come here!" A small boy dodged around the corner of the stand and handed over a dripping umbrella. The absentminded woman looked at the boy; she looked at the umbrella. She recognized both. "Idiot!" she said. "I paid that boy 10 cents for taking me home with my own umbrella."-New York Press. The Amen of Nature.

Do you ever wonder why poets talk so much about flowers? Did you ever clean in mind and body, a credit to hear of a poet who did not talk about American athletics. He deserves a them? Don't you think a poem which, stone, if any of our great dead deserve for the sake of being original, should it. In starting this fund I wish it to leave them out would be like those verses where the letter a or e or some lished trust company or responsible other is omitted? No; they will bloom over and over again in poems as in the summer fields, to the end of time, always old and always new. Why should we be more shy of repeating ourselves than the spring be tired of blossoms or the night of stars? Look at nature. She never wearies of saying over her floral paternoster. In the crevices of cyclopean walls, in the dust where men lie, dust also; on the mounds that bury huge cities, the Birs Nemroud and the Babel heap, still that same sweet prayer and benediction. The amen of nature is always a flower.-Oliver Wendell Holmes.

'The first fork? The fork, as a matter of fact, did not appear as a table implement until the seventeenth century, though as early as the thirteenth century gold and silver ones were made for special purposes. The ordinary diner was only provided with a trencher, a napkin and a spoon. For knife he used his own, which he carried about, and, worse, there was no second trencher, no second spoon. When the several courses came along he exercised his ingenuity and mopped his trencher with his bread. His spoon-well, we ourselves lick postage stamps!-London Chronicle.

Carrie Virginia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Crabbs and grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hawn, on Meadow Branch, was generously remembered on her first birthday, which fell on Friday, May 5, 1910. That she is known and liked by many is attested by the liberal donation and handsome collection of cards. She is the recipient of 165 pretty and nicely colored souvenirs, all of different designs. The parents take this opportunity to thank the contributions of the tributors sincerely for their kindness and honor conferred on the child. Your correspondent spent a few hours at the home last Sunday evening, and was delightfully entertained. After viewing the cards, there were some grand selections

The Extension Ladder can be extended any number of steps at a time, to twice its length. Can be telescoped to one-half its length. Every Ladder comes apart, giving two distinct Ladders. The weak point in all Ladders is where the two sections join, when extended. In the Center-Rail Ladder this weakness is overcome by the steel center plate reinforcing the center rail when ladder is extended. No other Extension Ladder can show this reserve strength.

Spontini's Decorations.

Casparo Spontini, the composer, regarded himself in the light of a demigod, and when inspirations crowded upon him he donned a wide, togalike gown of white silk with a border of gold and a fez of white silk embroidered in gold from which a heavy tassel hung down. With great dignity he sat down before his desk, and if a grain of dust was visible on the paper on which he penned his music he rang the bell impatiently for his field for interesting study." servant to remove the obstacle. Spontini owned so many medals and decorations that they could no longer be accommodated on his breast. At a grand musical reunion at Halle an old musician remarked to a comrade, "See how many decorations Spontini has, while Mozart has not one." "THE GIRL I LEFT

She Pleased the Boy the Way She Always Wanted to Do.

By JOHN BRIDGES.

The two families had been close friends for many years. As schoolgirls the mothers had been at Mount Holyoke together, and the boys had been at Amherst and had graduated in the same class. Holyoke and Amherst are not far apart geographically, and on walks about the Connecticut valley the four had fallen into company. Afterward there had been two weddings, and the two new homes were established in the same western zity. The heads of the families went into law practice together, and the firm has lasted until this day, more than twenty-five years.

When the children were born it was quite natural that the boy should have been named Arthur Selden Hamilton, after his father's partner, and the girl Angela Hamilton Selden, after ber mother's schoolgirl friend and companion. Arthur was almost a year older than Angela, and a year is a long time in the ages of youngsters.

When, after their high school days, it was decided that both should go to college they left home on the same day in charge of Angela's mother and Arthur's father and journeyed eastward to the Connecticut valley.

Angela took her mother's old room at Mount Holyoke, and Arthur became established in his father's old quarters at Amherst. Somehow, though, after a few friendly and rather homesick calls. Arthur fell into the athletic spirit. For the four years that he was in Amberst and Angela was at Mount Holyoke he saw her but little. She seemed to him to be the same little girl he had known when they played together on rainy days in the attic. To

Arthur, Angela had never grown up. Afterward Arthur went abroad for a year's study, and Angela went to visit some friends at an army post farther west. When Arthur came home and found instead of the schoolgirl he had known a beautiful young woman he was scarcely prepared for the change. It was all foreordained. While he had seen pretty women abroad and at Amherst had almost proposed to a girl at commencement time, he had been practically hear free. This vision of loveliness who kissed him frankly as a sister might took his breath away. When he left the Selden home that night was with the intention of winning An-

All that winter he saw much of her. At the parties they attended, at the theater or wherever he could make an excuse to meet her he was her devoted cavalier. In both the families it was regarded as a foregone conclusion that there would be another marriage to link the two families yet closer together.

One evening Arthur called at the Seidens' determined to ask Angela to be

"She must know," he thought, "how much I love her. If she will have me I'll take the governor's offer and go into the business with bim right away. Then we can be married in the spring and spend June in the Connecticut val-

Arthur climbed the steps which led up to the Seldens' veranda. On the veranda sat Angela and a man in uni-

"Mr Hamilton," said Angela, "let me present my friend Lieutenant Al-

They shook hands. Arthur said something about being glad to see Lieutenant Allerton. Lieutenant Allerton said something about being charmed to meet Mr. Hamilton.

There was some music, and Allerton sang. He sang well, and Angela ac- tralian blacksnake. This expansion is companied him as only a sympathetic musician can. Arthur felt a lover's jealousy. "Why couldn't he have stayed away till tomorrow?" he thought.

When Allerton rose to go he said, "Then mother and I may expect to meet you on Tuesday in Chicago?"

"Yes," replied Angela, "and tell your mother that I shall give her a great deai of trouble before we reach Leavenworth, for I am going to make her tell me everything about her boys at the fort. You know I fell desperately in love with every soldier there last summer."

Arthur stayed for a few minutes after Allerton had gone.

"Are you going away?" he asked in dismay.

"Yes," she replied. "Mrs. Allerton has asked me to visit her for a month at Leavenworth. The colonel is the dearest old man that ever lived, andisn't Lieutenant Charlie just the handsomest boy you ever saw?"

Arthur said goodby hurriedly and walked miles into the country, smoking strong cigars.

"What I fool I am!" he cried. "Why didn't I know about these handsome soldier boys that she says she fell so desperately in love with? But what a fool I was not to tell her after Allerton went away! I'll go out again tomorrow and tell her all about it and make her choose between us. She must tell me which she cares the more for."

The next day he received a little goodby note from Angela, saying that her father wanted her to go on to Chicago for a day or two with him, and as he had .een called away suddenly she had gone. The note continued:

"Write to me and tell me all the news, and when I get home in October we will finish that last round of golf. Remember, you are ahead of me now, but I promise to practice a lot at the fort, and I intend to beat you after

But before October came Arthur's father told him that he had good reason for thinking from something Mr. Selden had said at the office that Angela was engaged to Lieutenant Aller-

Then Arthur had to go to New York on business for his father for several months. He heard from Angela once or twice, but she said nothing about to quench his love for her, but the more he fought against it the harder the task seemed until finally he worried himself almost into nervous prostration. When he got home his mother was greatly alarmed at his appearance. but he told her he was quite well and that he proposed to go more into society than he had ever done.

"What's going on tonight?" he asked. "There isn't anything," said Mrs. Hamilton. "There's nothing going on this week, and at the theater there's nothing worth seeing except 'The Girl I Left Behind Me.'

"Well, let's go to that," said Arthur. When they took their seats in the theater the orchestra began playing the stirring old tune from which the play was named. Arthur turned in his seat and looked about the auditorium. Two rows behind him sat Angela and her father. Their eyes met. Angela smiled and almost beckoned him to come back and speak to her. Arthur bowed stiffly and turned to speak to his mother

The next morning came a note from Angela.

"If you can possibly arrange it," ran the note, "I wish you'd come up and have tea with me at 5 o'clock today." It was almost a command. Arthur hope you will be very happy and that Mrs. Allerton is pleased. "Look here, boy," said Angela, unconsciously using the old childish name she used to call him. "do you think I got engaged to please Mrs. Allerton?" "Well, I thought you were going to ways and always," she said.

She came into the room with both hands outstretched.

The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes. not even rattlesnakes, are more dreaded, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "attle," so the cobras warn the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a suc den movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal when irritated makes them stand out at right angles to the body and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just behind the head, becomes greatly expanded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Auscalled a hood, and so the animals are "strengths" and "stretched." - New called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the hood a dark mark, something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called spectacle snakes.

A Trick of Thieving.

A London bank cashier continually found himself short after balancing the day's transactions. Usually the deficiency was for small sums. It puzzled him for a long time, but eventually the mystery was solved by an accident. A clerk in the office was in the habit of handing him a book to initial each day. The book was laid on the desk where usually there were a number of loose gold coins lying about, was duly marked and lifted up again. One day the clerk, in taking back the book, was not so cautions as usual, and the cashier caught the glint of a coin adhering to the back of it. Struck by this defiance of the law of gravity, he grasped the book and found on it a small piece of wax to which the coin was adhering, and now the clerk is numbered among the unemployed.

A Better Road.

"The popular taste in art," said an artist, "is apt to be peculiar. Once, in Vermont, I was at work upon a picturesque bit of woodland-a lane, a tree, a charming effect of sunlight and a shallow pool either the mud lying shadow-when a hand fell heavily on at the bottom or the image of the blue my shoulder, and the voice of a young sky above." farmer said:

"'What are ye paintin' that little bit o' road fur? Come along with me, mister, an' I'll show ye somethin' worth paintin'-three miles o' road, all just repaired."-Exchange.

She Repudiated the Charge.

At the men's service in a Yorkshire parish the vicar tried to convey the lesson that the truest heroes and heroines are those who do noble deeds in the secret corner of the home, where none can see or applaud.

"Few of you seem to think," he concluded, "that your wives staying at home uncomplainingly to mind the children and prepare the meals are heroines, and yet their touching devotion to duty proves them to be so.

It certainly hadn't struck one old farmer in this way before, and as soon as he got home he promptly told his her engagement. He had fought hard wife that the vicar had called her a heroine

"Whatever does that mean?" asked the good lady.

"Oh, it means a woman who stays in house instead of goin' art to show hersen," explained the farmer vaguely. "Then I'm not a heroine, an' I'll thang t' vicar to mind what he's sayn'," snapped the wife. "I go to his church as much as t' other women do, an' he must be blind if he can't see me. Why, I'd five different colors in t' bonnet I wore last Sunday!"-London Spectator.

The First Balloons.

The chemical philosophers have discovered a body (which I have forgotten, but will inquire) which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospherical air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed. The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air. - Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenuity with its own if wind or water does not spoil it on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon.-From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." The story runs that Beethoven's 'Moonlight Sonata"-always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works-was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a mament the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the

While our language does not contain such long words as are found in some other tongues nor so many words of unusual length, still we have several that are awkwardly long for conversational purposes. We have "philoprogenitiveness," with twenty letters; "interconvertibilities," with twenty-one; "intercommunicabilities," with twentytwo; "disproportionableness." with twenty-three, and "transsubstantiationalists" and "contradistinguishability," each containing twenty-four letters. An effective little word is "synacategorematic," as it manages to compress eight syllables into seventeen letters. The longest monosyllables contain nine letters, and there are four examples: "splotched," "squelched,"

Printers' Marks. The interrogation mark or "point" (?) was originally a "q" and an "o," the latter placed under the former. They were simply the first and last letters of the Latin word "questio." So, too, with the sign of exclamation or interjection (!). In its original purity it was a combination of "l" and "o," the latter underneath, as in the question mark. The two stood for "lo," the Latin exclamation of joy. The paragraph mark is a Greek "p," the initial of the word paragraph. The early printers employed a dagger to show that a word or sentence was objectionable and should be cut out.

Bee Keeping in Maryland.

An address delivered by Mr. N. W.

It gives me great pleasure to stand be-

Full many a flower is born to blush unseen. And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

You see this is a great waste, since honey is one of the best of foods, and unlike so many others, is given by the hand of nature ready for the table. And then thousands of families living in these same districts, breathing the perfume of the flowers that hold this nectar, do not even know the taste of honey. Their tables do not contain it once a year. Something then should be done to change these conditions. We must educate people to keep bees and eat honey. This will take time, and yet it can be done. Many people do not know the value of honey as a food and medicine. If it were so there would be more enjoyment of health, less sickness and less doctor bills. I do not make this statement because I am a bee keeper and produce honey, but because it is based on scientific facts. And that almost every day I pass by the homes of farmers who keep a few bees on the old plan, in box hives in some secluded place on the farm, almost hidden by weeds or tall grasses. Yet these same men cut their wheat with binders, their hay with mowers, and do their work generally with modern farm tools. Why do they not stick to the sickle, the scythe, the handrake, as well as the box hive, for they are all things of fifty years ago? And then bee keeping, as a vocation, can well be compared with other rural pursuits if thoroughly understood. Nothing can bring more enjoyment to the lover of nature than the work among, and study of these most wonderful of all insects.

There is no reason why Maryland cannot become a banner State in bee keeping. I know it has its drawbacks and so has other States. But our winters are usually mild and in most localities we have the maples in early spring which gives the bees a supply of pollen, insuring early brood rearing. This is followed blackberry usually give the bees an early start in the surplus apartment by all farming districts, these are usually turbs my sense of comfort."

No Toadying. Among the good old ways of "merrie England" is the tendency to democracy prevailing in her boys' schools. Parents can be assured, it is said, that no pampering will fall to the lot of their sons, however exalted may be their rank or great their possessions. An English paper tells the story of an Indian official of high rank calling upon the house master in a famous public school, where a young prince, son of a rajah, was being educated. This official brought a special message from his master, the rajah, to the effect that he wanted no favors or exceptional treatment of any sort extended to his son on account of his exalted birth. "You may set the mind of the rajah at rest on that score," said the house master, struggling to hop back his smile before the dignified anxiety of the Indian official. "If the authorities were inclined to discriminate in the prince's favor, the boys of the school would set the matter right. Among them generally the rajah's son answers to the name of 'Nigger,' and I understand that with his intimates he is familiarly known as 'Coal Scuttle.'

But now, ply various descriptions of the charac-Herod hearing of the fame of Jesus, teristics of a disciple of Christ accordhis guilty conscience tells him that it ing to the phase of Christianity which is John whom he had murdered. He Christ or the apostles desired to set was perplexed because some said that forth. What is it to be a Christian John was risen from the dead, some may better, therefore, be summed in said that Elijah had appeared and these characters and especially as ilothers that one of the old prophets justrated in one who is a Christianwas risen again. Herod said, "Who is for instance, Paul, the central figure of this of whom I hear such things?" And the scene before us. he desired to see Him (Luke ix, 7-9). Herod's question, "Who is this?" is King Agrippa and his queen and an all important one. See also Luke v. 21; vii, 49; Matt. xxi, 10; Isa. lxiii. Jerusalem, taken to Caesarea, tried 1; Jer. xxx, 21, where the question is in connection with the forgiveness of sins, the son of David, the Messiah and the One who is to judge the nations. As our Lord put it to Simon Peter. "Whom say ye that I am?" (Matt. xvi, 15.) It should take hold of each one of us, and unless we can from the heart reply as Peter did it will be bad for us. "What is Jesus Christ to me?" is the great question. In a previous lesson we saw messengers coming to Jesus from John in the prison, but now we have the account of his imprisonment and execution. Herod feared John, knowing him to be a just and holy man, and he heard him gladly and did many things. But Herod had taken his brother Philip's wife and was living with her, and John had told him that it was not lawful. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel (margin, inward grudge) against John and would have killed him, but she could not. But Herod had imprisoned John for Herodias' sake (Mark vi, 17-20). For some idea of what a wicked, unscrupulous woman can do see I Kings xxi, 7-15, and II Kings xi, 1, and consider that Babylon, which is said to be guilty of the blood of all that were slain upon the earth, is compared to a woman arrayed in purple and scarlet and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls (Rev. xvii, 4; xviii, 24). The life of John in prison must have been a sad and lonely one indeed were it not that he had access to God, with whom he had spent so many years in the wilderness. No prison walls can shut out God or the angels, and an eternity of glory will more than compensate for the greatest sufferings of the saints on earth (Rom. viii, 18).

Birthday parties should be happy occasions and innocent affairs, but this one of our lesson was one of the worst on record. It was a great affair, being a supper made by Herod for his of Galilee. On this occasion the aughter of the wicked Herodias danced so acceptably to Herod and them that sat with him that Herod promised with an oath to give her me." whatsoever she would ask. According to Mark (verse 23). "He sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom." What an outcome of a drunken revel and a dance! The result of dancing in our times, so often accompanied by drink if not by drunkenness, has never been fully written, but enough has been written to lead thoughtful people to renounce the whole thing and especially the fashionable dancing school. If you care to know, write Dr. Sylvanus Stall of Philadelphia for further information. If the church had a tithe of the zeal of the devil to lead souls astray, how many might by the church be pointed to Him who is able to save where is the zeal referred to in the eaten me up" (John ii, 17; Ps. lxix, 9).

The girl went forth and said to her mother, "What shall I ask?" And, being instructed by her mother, she asked for the head of John the Baptist. Quickly it is brought to her, and she carried it to her mother. Did ever a daughter carry or a mother receive 1, 2; Eph. iv, 1-6; Tim. ii, 1-9. so grewsome a gift? Yet this is in our day made into a play to entertain thoughtless people. The murder of John meant in due time the murder of Jesus, and the world lying in the wicked one seeks and applauds this kind of entertainment. It is written that the king was sorry, but the sorrow that does not lead to doing right amounts to nothing, and I fear that he has been sorry ever since and will be forever. According to Phil. i, 21, 23, it was a gain to John, a very far better, for he has been well and happy ever since. His disciples took up the body and buried it, but they did not bury John. We never bury people, but only the bodies in which they lived awhile. There shall be a resurrection of all dead bodies, those of the just and the unjust, but there shall be an interval of 1,000 years between (Luke xiv, 14; xx, 35; Acts xxiv 15; Rev. xx, 5). The disciples of John went and told Jesus. That is the thing to do always and about everything, and then we shall know the peace of God which passeth all understanding (Phil. iv, 6, 7). Then also shall we know what it means to be guided in all things by Him (Prov. 1ii, 5, 6).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week; Beginning May 22, 1910.

Topic.-What is it to be a Christian?-Acts xxvi, 24-29. (Union meeting with the Juniors.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H.

The question "What is it to be a Christian?" cannot be answered definitely in a single sentence. There are too many phases of the Christian's spirit, life and labors to make it possible to limit them to what we ordinarily call a definition. Webster defines a Christian "as one who professes or is assumed to believe in the religion of For the present we are asked by the Christ, especially one whose inward

In this scene Paul is on trial before Festus. Paul had been arrested at before Festus, then Felix, but had appealed to Caesar, a right which as a Roman citizen he possessed. Meanwhile Agrippa came to Caesarea and desired to hear Paul, and he addressed the king, queen and Festus. In this defense we have one of the greatest addresses in the Bible, and it is little wonder that after a conference of the judges Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed unto Caesar." Paul had simply told the story of his conversion and subsequent zeal for Christianity. Festus declared he was mad because of his much learning and zeal. Paul denied it and appealed to Agrippa about the prophets and his knowledge of them. Agrippa said unto Paul (A. V.), "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." And Paul said, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am except these bonds."

What did Paul mean by "such as I am?" He could only mean one thinga Christian. Paul was a Christian, and in him and his life we see the characteristics of a true Christian.

1. Paul was converted. On his way to Damascus to persecute Christians ne saw Christ in a vision and accepted Him as his Saviour. He was not a Christian in the sense that he tried to reform himself by taking Christ as his example. He was inwardly changed by the power of the Holy Ghost. So must every one be who really is a Christian. Regeneration, not reformation by attempted personal efforts, makes a Christian,

2. Paul possessed the spirit of Christ, "I am crucified with Christ. Nevertheless I live. Yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me." This is an absolute essential of a Christian. "He that bath not the spirit of Christ is none of His." The spirit of Christ does not lords, high captains and chief estates simply mean an inward desire to follow Christ. Christ must through His 'Abide in me and I in you." We must be such as Paul was when he said, "Christ liveth in

3. Paul's outward life conformed to that of Christ. This necessarily follows the inward possession of Christ. The inward life determines the outward life. If Christ lives in us. if His mind is our mind, His will is our will, we must be like Him in life and character.

4. Paul accepted and believed the great doctrines concerning Christ-His diety, His crucifixion, His resurrection and ascension, His miracles and the doctrine of the atonement in the sense of substitution. He gloried only in the cross and boldly proclaimed that Christ's death there was a vicarious sacrifice for sinners.

5. Paul desired to see all men Christians. "I would to God that not from going down to the pit! But only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and alwords, "The zeal of thine house hath together such as I am (Christians) accept these bonds." Seeking to save others is one of the surest signs that we are saved and are Christians.

In Baltimore the Christian Endeavorers are greatly interested in the work of the Children's Fresh Air society. All of the societies contribute largely to its support, and many of the prominent city Endeavorers are officers in the society.

Some time ago a letter was received at the office of the society which is so good and so full of encouragement for the charity Christian worker that I want to pass it along. Here it is:

THE STUDY OF LIZA ANN

A Character That Was Not Read ing eyes. Aright by the Author.

By AGNES G. BROGAN. [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.1

Lawrence Stanton had gained his reputation as a great author through a faithful portrayal of types. He determined now to combine business with pleasure and take a trip to some unfrequented mountainous country Her face was very pale in the moonwhere he might come in contact with light. the people and make a study of them in order to weave a story about them. He especially desired to find one character, an ignorant and attractive young girl; but, though many could easily anwas always missing until he met-her.

This was the day that he had folthrough sunshine and shadow, until he came upon her suddenly where she was sitting upon a fallen log. She arose, startled at Stanton's appearance. "Don't go," he said quickly. "I am only resting for a few moments." She hesitated, pulling at her bonnet strings undecidedly as he lit his pipe. Then curiosity overcame prudence. "Whar you from?" she asked.

He waved a hand indefinitely toward the east: "My home is over there," he said. "And yours?" The girl flashed a smile at him and imitated the vague movement of his arm.

"Up thar," she answered. Stanton laughed. "Got a mother and father?" he asked. She nodded vigorously. "And what is your name, O maid of the mountains?" She resumed her seat upon the fallen log. "Liza Ann," she answered, and then, "What you here for?" "I am here," said Stanton gravely. "to obtain information which may be valuable to me in the production of a

"Never been nowhar," said the girl contentedly. Then she looked up at

And Stanton told her.

Slowly the sun sank down behind the tall trees. Liza Ann slipped to the ground. "I'm goin'," she said.

"You will come here tomorrow afternoon, will you not?" Stanton begged. He intended to have his notebook with him then. "I will bring a book to show you, with pictures of the places we have been talking about."

Liza Ann smiled delightedly. "Yaas, I'll come," she drawled, and Stanton wondered how she could run so lightly and gracefully up the mountain path in the heavy shoes that were so many sizes too large.

He had just settled himself comfortably at the same picturesque spot upon the following day when Liza Ann appeared. Her shyness seemed to have vanished, for she responded merrily to his sallies, then silently turned the pages of the book which he had brought, while Stanton wrote rapidly, pausing to look up at her from time to

She came again and again at the man's bidding to sit beside him as he worked. Stanton studied her moods and emotions as a naturalist might analyze some wonderful butterfly, while the book progressed rapidly. He brought his camera, too, and took many successful pictures of the obedient little subject. The one which pleased him most was that of Liza Ann just as he had first seen her, the sunshine sifting down through the leafy trees to rest upon her upturned of the innocent mountain girl. On one of these evenings he told her such parts of the story as he him and turned to greet a new adthought she might understand-of the mirer. Stanton turned to follow her, winsome girl who lived in a log cabin hesitated a moment, then silently made home and dressed in calico.

"That's me!" cried Liza Ann and rlapped her hands gleefully.

Then he told her of the beautiful lady who wore satins and jewels. She ooked up at him with startled, widen-of the world." "I don't like her," the girl burst out passionately; "I don't like her." And in a moment she had left him. The man laughed amusedly. He knew that she would come back to him again, and she did. He found her waiting at the old trysting place on the night that he was going away.

"What a doleful Liza Ann!" he teased. She looked at him dumbly. "I will come back, little one," the man comforted. "You must not forget me, and one day you shall lead me up the lonely trail again, while I tell you swer the first requirement, the latter how much I have missed you since we said goodby.

The girl raised her dark and solemn lowed the lonely trail up and up, eyes to his. "You will never come back," she said quietly.

Stanton laughed. "Well," he answered evasively, "there will be the book to finish first, and then"-"Then," said Liza Ann in that same dull monotone, "you will marry the Stanton did not reply to this. "Good-by, my little mountain maid," he said. "I will send the book to you, and remember that the man who wrote it will be thinking of you always."

"I don't want your book!" she burst out fiercely.

He tried to put his arm about her, but she darted from him and went running fleetly up the narrow path. Far above a mossy bank lay bathed in moonlight. Stanton, watching, saw the girl pause a moment here and then throw herself face downward upon the ground. The man lit a cigar leisurely, then picked up his valise. Still the little figure lay quite motionless. "Strange creatures these," he said musingly and continued his journey downward.

Much work had accumulated during Stanton's absence, and he was very busy for some time after reaching home. Then he returned to the book once more, walking to and fro as was his custom while thinking out the details of a story. Often he would pause before the picture of Liza Ann which had been placed upon the mantelshelf. He seemed to gain inspiration from the witchery of her laughing face. Another picture stood near in a golden frame-that of a woman serene and beautiful who was wearing a wonderful gown. The author ended his walk abruptly this evening and seated himself to read the paper; then, with a sharp exclamation, he looked more closely at the printed page. The picture from the mantelshelf in some unaccountable way had been transferred to the paper before him. Liza Ann, seated upon a fallen log, the old sunbonnet framing her tangled curls, smiled happily out upon the world with childish wonder in her eyes. Beneath the picture Stanton read, "Miss Judith Jerrold, who is appearing at the Star theater this week in 'The Transformation of Liza Ann." Feverishly the man turned to the theatrical notes: "Miss Judith Jerrold comes to the Star theater this week in a new play which has been written expressly for her by Henry Clayton. Miss Jerrold has been spending the summer months in a remote part of the mountains, resting after an exhausting winter season and studying the speech and mannerisms of the simple folk who will live upon the stage in Mr. Clayton's production of 'The Transformation of Liza Ann.' There are many emotional actresses. There is but one Judith Jerrold, and she will move us to laughter and tears with the mishaps of Liza Ann."

Stanton jumped to his feet. It was late, but he must see her tonight, must know for a very certainty the truth. Half bewildered, he entered the theater and sat through the performance as one in a dream. The great actress was holding an impromptu reception upon the stage after the play, so he pressed forward through the crowd which surrounded her. She advanced to meet him and graciously extended her hand, but a mocking light shone in her dark eyes.

"So," she said laughingly, "I am discovered. My only apology is that, having been in seclusion so long, the desire to act a part became irresistible. I had read many of your delightful character studies and longed to see if I could impersonate the unsophisticated mountain girl so truly as to deceive even you, a student of types. The result has been satisfactory to myself, but disappointing. I fear, to the author, as you will find that many of the original and ingenuous sayings which so amused you at the time were merely quoted from the play which you have seen tonight."

Stanton's face grew very stern. "A greater part of the book will have to be rewritten," he said. "The incident has been an unfortunate one for me."

The actress was wearing the trailing lace robe in which she appears, you will remember, during the last act when the half wild little creature is transformed suddenly into a great heiress, but she looked up at the man now with the soft, wide eyed reproach

"Yes," she said slowly, "it may have been unfortunate for your book, Mr. So the golden days passed, and later, Stanton, that this ignorant, lovable little Liza Ann?"

With a bright nod she dismissed his way out into the night.

Too Busy to Read?

Some good people imagine themselves ''too busy" to read, during the Spring and Summer

There are others ''too busy'' to eat, or to rest, and after a time these people find themselves worn out--no good--simply because they didn't take time to properly care for their digestion and bodies.

Being ''too busy'' to do proper things is a dangerous malady, and in these days of intelligence, it's a disreputable one, as well.

The man ''too busy'' to read is starving his mind--losing his knowledge of current events-he isn't quite same.

No man should be ''too busy'' to properly feed both mind and body. [Whenever he feels so, it's time for him to call a halt, for he is doing too much of something that don't pay, in the end.

"Too Busy' to read -- perhaps the RECORD ? Why, man you ought to be alarmed about yourself ! Some day, you're going to die--Why not put it off as long as you can?

It never pays anybody to be ''too busy'' to do right things for his personal care and protection. Especially take time to read the REC-ORD (and the Bible) for you will live longer, and be happier, for doing so.

Mr. E. E. Reindollar is improving his farm buildings, at the end of town (Swope place) and will soon have them looking in fine trim.

There will be an important special meeting of the Fire Company, on Friday evening, May 20, at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

We make the guess that Taneytown's population is near 800, a little under, or over. The actual increase in population since 1900 is perhaps not over 150, when all we could count within the limits was 665, and, while the town has grown, the corporate limits have not.

The joint communion service of the Piney Creek and Taneytown Presbyterian congregations, will be held in the Piney Creek Church, Sunday moning, May 15th. at ten o'clock. Preparatory service Saturday preceeding at half past two o'clock. Service in the Tanytown Church Sunday evening at eight o'clock.

Decoration day services will be held on Sunday evening, like last year, and following the decoration of the graves an appropriate sermon will be preached in the Lutheran church, by Rev. Wm. E. Wheeler. The surviving veterans, the various fraternal organizations of the town, and the children, are asked to cooperate in the occasion.

Rev. Seth Russell Downie will be installed as pastor of the Piney Creek and Taneytown Presbyterian Churches, Tuesday next, May 17th. The service at Piney Creek being at 2.30, and in the town Church at 8 o'clock p. m. The services will be conducted by a committee from the Presbytery of Baltimore, and Rev. James Cattanach, former pastor of the charge.

A new International 4 H. P., horizontal engine has been received for the RECORD office, to replace a small upright which has been giving good service but is too light for our work. The new engine will furnish a surplus of power, and will at the same time use less gasoline. Mr. O. T. Shoemaker has the contract for the engine, which will be set on a concrete base. We hope to have it in operation within a week.

Miss Margie Stouffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stouffer, of Taneytown, died on Tuesday afternoon, of tuberculosis of the lungs, after a protracted illness. In addition to her parents, she leaves one sister, Mrs. Ernest Bankard, of Taneytown, and one brother, Mr. Harry B. Stouffer, of this district. She was in the 20th year of her age. Funeral services were held at home, on Thursday afternoon, interment being made in the Lutheran cemetery.

Let it be remembered that the night freight will materially increase the danger of fire, in the railroad section of Taneytown. Shingle roofs, strawy barnyards and litter in general will offer good kindling for spark fires; and by the way, it is reported that the engine used throws sparks at a lively rate. The town authorities should insist that property be made as safe as possible, by the owners, and that the engines used be equipped with satisfactory spark arresting screens. The frequency of fires, following closely after the passage of freight trains, is sufficient to cause this warning to be part at the end!" taken seriously.

Though the pitch of forks varies Taneytown last Friday evening, feeling unwell, and as two other cases of typhoid have recently developed at his boarding house, the report of his present illness is not a surprise. It is thought that the drinking water is the cause of the cases. There will be no substitute teacher appointed for Prof. Fleagle's room this term, consequently it will remain closed. Members of the school who have books at their homes, are requested to return them by Friday, May 20th.

Maryland's Wheat Crop.

Washington, May 10.-In a crop statement issued this morning by the Department of Agriculture it is shown that Maryland's wheat crop is in better condition than that of any other State in the Union. The crop is, of course, not the largest, but there is a smaller per cent. of its acreage abandoned than any other wheat-producing state can show. Just 1 per cent. of the winter wheat crop is in bad condition.

The State shows, further, that there are 794,000 acres of Maryland in wheat, is a greater acreage than sown by any other Southern State, except Tennessee and Texas. This is slightly more wheat than was reported in Maryland by the Department last year. Maryland's rye crop is also discussed in the statement, but the acreage is not given. condition of the crop is placed at 92, which is slightly under the condition of rye last year at this time.
