

NEWS NOTES HERE AND THERE

Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

With one exception the month just passed was the driest July in fifteen years according to the records at the weather bureau. The total precipitation was 1.41 inches while that in 1892 was 1.16.

Cayenne pepper thrown into a window at the Shiloh Baptist Church, York, by a small boy, put a stop to the services Sunday night. The congregation started to cough and sneeze so violently that the pastor, Rev. F. C. Scott, decided to close the service, despite the fact that he was in the midst of his sermon.

A petrified tortoise, which may have been crawling about the vales of Virginia during the day of Noah, has been discovered at Orkney Springs, Va., by two Washington men. The petrified animal which weighs about four hundred pounds, will be presented to the Smithsonian Institution.

John Gotwalt, a Northern Central Railroad crossing watchman, of York, Pa., has just come out of the Hospital after a third operation, in which pieces of his legs were sawed away. Gotwalt had portions of both legs cut off by a train seven years ago and since then it has been found necessary to perform three operations, each time removing more of the limbs.

On Monday afternoon, a collision occurred between two trolley cars, near Devils' Den, on the line running over the Battlefield at Gettysburg, in which eight persons were hurt, one of them, Nicholas Berkeimer, so seriously that it is feared his injuries may result fatally. The collision took place on a curve, at which special signals are erected, and it is said that these signals correctly operated and observed, the accident would not have happened.

An extract from the game laws of Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia says, "Our country would become a depopulated desert in seven years, if insectivorous birds became extinct." Considering the importance of the above, it will certainly be to the advantage of farmers and others to warn all boys, and especially city boys who are summing in the country, against destroying either birds or their nests.

William H. McQuay, 65 years old a well-known Carroll county farmer, died at his home, near Windfield, last Friday morning. He is survived by a widow, eight daughters and two sons—Mrs. Walter Thomas, of Gaithers; Mrs. Arthur J. Arbaugh, James B. McQuay, of Westminster, Minnie L. McQuay, of Baltimore, Miss Martha McQuay, of Roland Park; Henry R., Misses Clara M., Margaret D., Carrie E., and Ethel B. McQuay, at home. He also leaves four brothers—David N., John F., James H. and George McQuay—well-known citizens of this county. He was an uncle of D. E. McQuay, of Baltimore.

In all 564 petitions from Maryland have been referred to the Postoffice Department since Congress began to appropriate money liberally for the rural free delivery service. Of this number 99 were adversely reported upon. In some instances there were not enough families living along the proposed routes, and in others road conditions were not favorable. There are now 431 routes in operation in Maryland and eight petitions pending for the establishment of new ones. The First, or Eastern Shore District, has 151 routes, or more than any other district in the State.

Carroll county, Baltimore county and some others have liquor license laws regulating the application for and the granting of liquor licenses, but with all the machinery provided for that purpose there is no one official whose business it is to see that the applications are proper and valid. If there are signers who do not own property, it is nobody's business; if the signers are on more than one application, it is nobody's business; and so with a number of other things in connection with the applications. You pay for the officials but don't get protected. The only way to insure that the liquor applications are in keeping with the law is for some private citizen to bear the expense and odium of investigation and protesting.—American Issue.

B. F. Crouse Seriously Ill.

A relapse has occurred in the condition of Mr. B. Frank Crouse, State Insurance Commissioner, who has been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital for several weeks. His friends are seriously alarmed over his illness. At the hospital it is stated that while no fatal results are immediately apprehended, and while his recovery is possible, the relapse which he has suffered has weakened him. Callers at the hospital, including his most intimate friends, are not permitted to see him. He is suffering with an intestinal trouble.

Mr. Crouse occupies a high position in insurance and Democratic party councils, having filled many important positions of trust, and being at present serving his second term as State Insurance Commissioner. He also served as president of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

It was reported at the Johns Hopkins Hospital Thursday night that the condition of Mr. Benjamin F. Crouse, is much improved. Dr. McRea, one of the hospital physicians, is attending Mr. Crouse. Mrs. Crouse stated that her husband had rallied nicely from the serious turn which his illness took several days ago.

Sunday School Convention and Reunion.

Two years ago the first Annual Convention and Reunion of the Sunday Schools of Carroll County was held under the auspices of the County Sunday School Association, in a grove near Union Mills. The convention was a success, and greatly enjoyed by all who attended it. Last year the second convention was held at Dug Hill Park, in Bachman's Valley, and the large crowd that attended the convention, the inspiration of the singing under the leadership of Rev. Long, the excellent addresses that were made, and the social fellowship of the day, prompted the association to make the day an annual occurrence, and the first Thursday, of September, of each year was set apart as "Carroll County School Day," when the Sunday School workers of the county may take their lunch and go to a grove annually selected by the association to spend the day in prayer, in singing, in enjoying addresses by able speakers, and in social fellowship with the Sunday School fraternity from every part of the county.

"Sunday School Day" will be observed Thursday, Sept. 1st., in a grove near Pleasant Valley, exercises beginning promptly at 10.30 a. m. Mr. R. A. Harris, from Baltimore, will have charge of the singing, and as 50 or more schools may be represented at the convention, he will not doubt lead the largest choir ever convened in the county. Speakers will be present from Baltimore and various parts of the county. Superintendents and pastors are urged to attend, and to urge others to attend, that encouragement may be given to the movement, that "Carroll County Sunday School Day" may be observed with more zeal annually, until it touches every home in the county with more enthusiasm for the work of the Sunday School.

As the humble servant of the association, in behalf of the association, I ask for the prayers, and the assistance of the Sunday School fraternity. Come, bring others; you will surely enjoy the day. Should the day be very inclement, Friday, the day, following will be chosen. Winona Hymns will be used, and will be furnished by the association on day of convention.

Very truly yours,
G. W. YEISER, County Pres.

Rockville as a "Dry" Town.

A correspondent of the Washington Times, writing in general of the county seat of Montgomery County—Rockville—says of it as a "dry" town: "Rockville believes in prohibition for itself. It believes in it because it has tried it and has found that a residential community does not need liquor selling. For thirty years this town has been 'dry' and to bear the people talk about it, thirty more years will pass before liquor sales are again licensed. The public peace that followed the voting out of saloons has been the reward for the firm position the people took way back in 1880.

Rockville has no warmer advocate of prohibition for Rockville than Albert J. Almoney, editor of the Montgomery Advocate and secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee of Maryland. "If a vote were taken to-day," said Mr. Almoney, "upon the proposition again to license saloons in this town not 10 per cent of the people would favor it. I can say, too, with absolute knowledge that the prohibition laws as in no other part of the State of Maryland." Prohibition is just another of the attractions which the capital of Montgomery holds out to the people they are invited to come and make their homes there. It is spoken of in the same breath as the fine artesian well water, the splendidly shaded streets, the excellent car service and the proximity to Washington, with all that that proximity stands for.

Advertise Against Trespassing.

We will commence, on August 27, our customary list of advertisers against trespassing, and continue it throughout the entire hunting season, until December 10. We make the very small charge of 10¢ per name, as heretofore, payable in advance. All who want to begin with the squirrel hunting season should hand in their names at once, as it will cost no more to do so now, than two months later.

Farmers' Pic-nic at Hancock.

The State Farmers' commission has named Saturday, October 1st., for the Farmers' Big Pic-nic at Hancock, Maryland. Hancock is preparing to entertain about ten thousand visitors. Angola Venison from the Cohlil herd, fruits from the big orchards, roast beef and local vegetables will be served free all day. A monster agricultural exhibit on wheels will parade the main streets of the town and will be viewed by the Governor.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Members of the Farmers commission and prominent visitors from neighboring states. Special excursion trains will run on the Western Maryland Railway, and on the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. The town will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. The local Farmers' Club will have an exhibit of Agricultural, Horticultural and Mineral products, and distribute $100.00 in premiums. Prizes will be awarded for various kinds of farm teams.

IN LOVING BUT SAD REMEMBRANCE
Of my dear father, William N. Fogle, who died three years ago, Aug. 21st., 1907, and departed this life, four months ago, April, 5th., 1910.

There is a grief that cannot find comfort, And wounds that cannot be healed. And sorrow too deep in the human heart, That can't half be revealed. I loved thee so dearly I listen and wait, For one sound of thy footsteps one glimpse at thy face. In Heaven they're waiting for me to come, When life's work is ended and God says "well done." By their son, HARRY B. FOGLE.

NEW PRIMARY RULES.

The Attorney-General's Instructions which must be Followed by Election Officials.

The instructions of Attorney-General Straus with respect to the primary elections for Congressional candidates under the Primary Election law of 1910 have been printed for circulation among the Supervisors of Elections and other election officials. The primary elections for the Congressional nominations will be held under these instructions. Mr. Straus has already given quite a number of opinions on questions which have arisen under the new Primary Election law. The instructions now issued embrace a full consideration of all the provisions of the act and are quite thorough in detail.

The Attorney-General has already held that as there is but one candidate for the Congressional nomination of each party in the First and Second Congressional districts there need not be, under the law, any primary election in those districts, and that a certificate of nomination must be issued to each candidate qualified for the nomination in the same manner as a candidate who has been elected in the general election to Congress.

Among the more important instructions and directions issued by the Attorney-General are the following: All political parties subject to the act shall hold their primaries upon the same day. That day this year will be August 30, under agreement between the governing bodies of the Democratic and Republican parties. Notice must be given of the times and places of holding the primary elections by the Supervisors of Elections in the city and each county, by advertisement and posting of notices in the same manner in which notice of general elections is given.

There must be a voting place in each election precinct of Baltimore city and each election precinct of each county, or in each election district of a county which is not divided into precincts. The voting places are selected and furnished by the Board of Supervisors of Elections in the same manner as in a general election.

The primary elections are conducted under the control of the several Boards of Supervisors of Elections, appointed by the supervisors for the conduct of the general elections.

Elections are to be conducted as far as practicable in the same manner as general elections are conducted. As many different sets of official ballots and as many ballot boxes must be supplied and used at each polling place as there are separate party nominations to be voted for. The ballots of each party shall be of a different color, to be determined by the Supervisors of Elections, so that each party has a ballot of a uniform color, distinct and separate from the ballots of every other party.

Mrs. Charles E. Fink Dead.

Westminster, Aug. 13.—Mrs. Lillian Boyle Fink, who was the youngest daughter of the late Col. John Brooke Boyle, for many years a leading citizen of this county, died at her home in this city this morning.

Mrs. Fink was the wife of Charles E. Fink, a member of the Westminster bar, and one of the best known and most prominent lawyers in this State. She had been in frail health for several years and at times critically ill, but her cheerful and remarkable vitality kept her alive until the attack which ended with her death this morning. She was a devoted member of St. John's Catholic church from early childhood. She is survived by her husband, four sons and two daughters—J. Brooke Fink, of Baltimore; Charles E. Fink, Jr., a college student; Bernard and Lawrence Fink, lads, and Misses Lillian and Agnes Fink, at home. She is also survived by five brothers—Henry Boyle, of Liberty; Dr. Charles Boyle, of Hagerstown; Dr. John Brooke Boyle, of Baltimore; Norman Bruce and Joseph B. Boyle, of this city.

Pearre Retires from Contest.

In a letter to the Baltimore American on last Tuesday, Col. Geo. A. Pearre, member of Congress from the 6th. Dist. of Maryland, announced his withdrawal from the contest for the nomination this fall. Mr. Pearre's action came as a surprise hard to realize because he was regarded as the leading candidate in his district. He was strongly backed for a renomination in his own county, Allegheny, as well as in Garrett, while throughout the district he had a large and devoted following. His withdrawal has added complications to the Republican situation in the Sixth district.

There now remain three Republican contestants for the nomination at the direct primaries on August 30th, namely, Messrs. Alexander R. Hagner, of Washington county, and Messrs. Gist Blair and B. H. Warner, Jr., of Montgomery county. It is too late for another candidate to enter the field. The nominee, whoever he may be, will be the winner at the general election in November.

Congressman Pearre has already made a deposit of $25 with the supervisors of election in each of the five counties of the district, making his total deposit $125. In his letter to the editor of the American Mr. Pearre announces that he will resume the practice of law at Cumberland. Despite the time and attention which Mr. Pearre has devoted to his congressional duties he has succeeded in retaining a lucrative practice.

Four cents a hundred is the price which has been placed on the heads of flies in the District of Columbia. This is the stimulus by which Washington boys have been aroused by their mothers to a declaration of "war to the death" on the typhoid-breeding homestead. The boys, it is reported, have started in their work of slaughter with great glee.

Aroused Over Roads.

Westminster, Aug. 13.—If Governor Crothers could have heard the vigorous language of all the speakers at a meeting of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of this city last night he would have another thing coming before permitting the Good Roads Commission to let the contract for building the section of road from Gamber to Eldersburg, toward Sykesville, this county.

One of the roads that the commission decided to improve in Carroll is that between Westminster and Sykesville, about 18 miles. The village of Gamber is about midway between the two points. Senator Johnnie E. Beaman lives at Sykesville and ex-County Commissioner Benson at Gamber. Eldersburg is about midway between Gamber and Sykesville. While Mr. Benson was County Commissioner a mile of Shoemaker road was built through the village of Gamber, in front of his home. The Good Roads Commission is now building the new highway from Sykesville to Eldersburg. It is said that its next contemplated step is the letting of the contract for the section between Eldersburg and Gamber.

At the meeting last night a leading Democratic politician stated that Governor Crothers had assured him and another gentleman from this city that after the road had been built between the hospital, near Sykesville, and Eldersburg, no another pick should be struck at that end of the line until after a section of the Westminster end of the route had been completed.

When it is remembered that a large portion of Westminster's trade comes from the section between Gamber and this city, the speakers said, it is readily seen why the residents of Westminster are indignant. These latter, to reach this city, must now travel over 23 of a mile of this short turnpike to Gamber, the distance is about five miles through one of the most populous, fertile and progressive sections of the county. The people of this section made no objection to the building of the road from the hospital to Eldersburg, but at the meeting last night a committee was appointed to register a strong protest against what was characterized as "this unjust discrimination against the many and in the interest of the few."

Record Year for Apples.

Hagerstown, Aug. 7.—Interviews with many fruit growers throughout Washington county indicate that the apple crop will be larger than normal, although this is not the apple year in this county. Generally the apple trees here bear only every other year. This is more especially the case with the older apple trees, but this year, the growers report, many of the old trees are fairly laden with fruit, notwithstanding they bore a large crop last year. Thousands of the younger apple trees are laden. Buyers from the city are already here looking over the orchards. The York Imperials, Ben Davis, Baldwin, Northern Spy, Pippins, Greenings, Pound and Rambos are the chief varieties raised here, although nearly all of the apples of the winter variety shipped are the York Imperial. The plum crop, which is now coming into the market, will be enormous. A record-breaking crop is expected. Plums are retailing in the orchards for 30 to 35 cents a peck.

The pear crop will also be unusually large. The fruit growers of Smithsburg district have formed an association, and will dispose of the peach crop along the lines followed at Ridgely, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Each grower is entitled to one share of stock in the association. When bringing his fruit to the exchange the grower will place his bid upon it, and if the bid is not raised it is sold. If it is not sold the grower may ship it wherever he wishes. A charge of 2 per cent. will be made for the sale should the seller be a stockholder, and if not the charge will be 3 per cent. It is believed that by following this plan about 90 per cent. of the peach crop will be purchased by local solicitors. At least this is the case at Ridgely.

CLOSE OF BIG PIC-NIC.

Notes on Proceedings. Prof. Surface, of Pa., tells how to Kill Tree Pests.

Special mention of the invaluable services of President Garner, Vice-Presidents Myers and Oehler, Secretary Shiner and Treasurer Eckert was made in last week's issue. To these names should be added Messrs. Smith, Hiner, Wine-miller, Hemler, Null and John A. Garner. All did heroic work, and the great success of the five days picnic was due to these gentlemen including the above officers named.

The unavoidable absence, on account of illness, of Governor Crothers, Insurance Commissioner Crouse and Capt. Silvester, was deeply regretted by their many friends.

Wednesday was the banner day for speakers, Mayor Mahool, Prof. Spence, Richardson and Close, of the Maryland Agricultural College, Farmer McSparran, of Lancaster, Pa., and Prof. Surface, of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Dept., Harrisburg, were literary stars, unsurpassed as orators.

1500 people bought tickets for the picnic on Thursday, August 11th., from the Pennsylvania Railway.

Baltimore's excellent and popular Mayor can have Carroll County's hearty support when he's the candidate for Governor or any other office.

The able and popular representatives of Baltimore's two great newspapers, Messrs. Roemer and Turner, of the American and Sun, respectively, made many friends during the week. Their courteous and kindly conduct and their thorough and satisfactory manner in which they faithfully reported the picnic, must redound to the credit and benefit of these excellent newspapers.

The address of Congressman Golden, of New York, a Carroll County boy, of whom all are justly proud, on "Conservation of the Nation's Resources," has caused a widespread discussion. The press generally throughout the country have commented extensively on the plain statement of facts, as to the controversy between President Taft and Secretary Ballinger and the critics of the administration headed by Pinchot and Garfield. The Congressman, thoroughly familiar with this matter, handles it without gloves and in favor of the President. He is a Democrat of convictions and courage.

Many of the speakers, numbering twenty odd in all, were emphatic in their endorsement of that excellent institution the pride of the State, the Maryland Agricultural College. The farmers certainly owe it to their sons to send them to this splendid seat of practical learning.

Prof. Spence, the Vice-President of the College, made a good impression. President Silvester, the distinguished head of that institution, is very popular in this county. The people will expect him here in 1911.

The Taneytown band, under the efficient leadership of Prof. Bankard, added greatly to the pleasure and enjoyment of the 20,000 visitors that the Baltimore Sun says were in attendance during the week. The excellent music rendered on that occasion, as well as for their gentlemanly conduct.

Mine host Shirk and his charming wife and daughter, won praise for their efforts to please and satisfy the hungry patrons of the dining hall.

Taken all in all, the Thirteenth Annual Pic-nic and Reunion was a splendid and creditable affair, redounding to the honor and glory of Carroll County and particularly of Taneytown. The latter is now one of the best known towns in the State, and the great notoriety given it by this annual affair must inure to the advantage of our enterprising business men. Ten years ago Taneytown was unknown—in fact it was a question of its being on the map. Now it is as well known as Hanover, Gettysburg, Westminster or Hagerstown.

The good work should be kept up and Taneytown Grange No. 184 should have 500 instead of 125 members. Every wide awake public-spirited farmer interested in his calling, his district, county and State, should join this splendid organization with its nearly two million members found in every State and territory in the United States.

President Garner, on Saturday last, in closing the Pic-nic, cordially thanked the speakers, the managers and the people who had helped make the thirteenth annual affair a success.

In reporting the speech of Prof. H. A. Surface, of Harrisburg, Pa., who has charge of the Pennsylvania State Agriculture Department, we promised to give the different valuable receipts for killing the pests that infest the orchards and fruits in this section. Prof. Surface has kindly sent us the following:

Spray all fruit trees thoroughly, when dormant, with boiled lime-sulphur wash, either (a) home-boiled, or (b) commercial. Home-boiled lime-sulphur can be made and stored to keep as long as wanted, and use by diluting, when needed as follows:

60 lbs. powdered sulphur with 60 lbs. fresh stone lime and 50 gals. of water, for three-quarters of an hour. Strain and add water to make up for that boiled away. Store in a closed barrel. When wanted, dilute one part of this with seven parts of water, which need not be heated.

The commercial lime-sulphur solution is all right if not diluted too much. In general most of the brands should not be diluted more than one to eight.

If trees are severely attacked by scale, paint all the old bark now with a very thick solution of soap in water, or a strong lime-sulphur solution, putting it on with a paint brush. Spray such trees in the Fall just after the leaves drop, and again in the Spring when buds are swelling. Prune back well before spraying. When not badly infested, the Spring spraying is enough, if thorough.

The other sprayings are after the blossoms fall. Spray the apple, pear and quince with Bordeaux mixture, to which is added 2 lbs. of arsenate of lead, or one-third pound of Paris Green, for each 50 gallons of the mixture. Make the Bordeaux by using two pounds copper sulphate (bluestone) and three pounds of fresh quicklime in 50 gallons of water. The Bordeaux is for plant disease, such as the rusts, smuts, scabs, leaf spots, fruit rots, etc., and the poison is for the chewing insects, such as the codling moth and curculio. Apply just after blossoms fall and again in 10 days or 2 weeks.

The stone fruits (peach, plum, etc.) should not be sprayed at the same time, and for these there should be only half as much bluestone used. Spray first just after the "husk" drops from the peach, when it is about the size of a soup bean, and again when about the size of a robin's egg. Use the half-strength Bordeaux for the plant diseases, and the arsenate of lead for the curculio, which makes wormy peaches, plums and cherries.

For brown rot, or ripe rot, of peach and plum, and for fruit cracks and black patches (scab) use the self-boiled lime-sulphur wash, made by slaking 8 lbs. of sulphur and 5 to 10 gallons of water, for 10 minutes. Then cool with water added to make up 50 gallons. Strain and spray. Add 2 lbs. arsenate of lead, if desired to protect fruits from curculio. Make first application when fruit is about half grown and again in 2 or 3 weeks.

To prevent borers, use the lime-sulphur wash, made just the same as for dormant application for San Jose scale, and 2 lbs. of arsenate of lead, or one-third pound of Paris Green, to each 50 gallons. Pour or spray or wash (with a brush) a pint of this around the base of each peach and plum tree, from the middle of June to the middle of August. It is better to make an application at each of these dates. Now is the time to "get busy."

Could not Keep Ruffed Auto.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock is at present figuring as a philanthropist, but in a rather sudden and unexpected way as he has been compelled to dispose of an automobile won in a lottery and therefore not to be retained by Postmaster-General of the United States.

In response to an appeal last winter Hitchcock paid $50 for a ticket in an automobile raffle conducted by the Working Boys' Home. There were 799 other tickets, and Hitchcock did not even take his number, leaving it with the agent who induced him to make the donation.

When he returned to Washington from abroad he found that "Hitchcock luck" had triumphed again and that it had won the auto at odds of 799 to 1. The glistening new car was at Union Station to meet him, and several friends were on hand to inform him that it was his own property.

Hitchcock's surprise was so great that he did not fully realize the situation at first, and with his friends he took a little spin in the new car. Then Hitchcock realized that, in his official capacity, he was the chief enemy of lotteries and that it would be extremely inappropriate for him to retain a lottery prize.

Thereupon he sent the car to the Working Boys' Home with his compliments.

Mr. Baker Attending to Business.

Ex-Senator William B. Baker of Aberdeen, Republican candidate for Congress in the Second district when in Baltimore, last Friday, declined to discuss the report that he is an insurgent and proposes to make his fight on an anti-Cannon platform. Mr. Baker: "I know what my own views are, but I am not yet ready to announce them. Maybe I will make a statement later. Just now I am thinking about business. I am going to Delaware to look after my cannery there and I will stay five or six weeks, as I do every summer. When I get through with that it will be time enough to begin my active campaign. I am very hopeful of carrying the district."

THE SHOOTING of Mayor Gaynor has again brought forward the demand for a penalty of capital punishment for all attempts against the life of public officials. If such a law will prevent, or tend to prevent, assassinations, there is not known to common sense any reasons why there should not be such a law.

THE TALKED-OF Star Spangled Banner celebration, in Baltimore, in 1914, is not receiving the active promotion that it is entitled to. It is true, the country has been rather surfeited with great exhibitions, but there does not seem to be any good reason why Maryland, and the city of Baltimore, with the great influence of the two alone—without National aid, and irrespective of any other Exposition project—can not get ahead and get up a big and creditable exhibition in honor of the Star Spangled Banner.

Danger of "Insurgency."

There is something attractive and popular about "insurgency," as the term is applied to politics, as it seems to convey the idea that the "insurgency" is against something that is radically and morally wrong in the parent body—something so repugnant to honor and honesty as to compel one to disown, and get away from it. On the other hand, "insurgency" may represent ungratified ambition to boss, or cut out, legislation, and an unwillingness to accept majority conclusions, when our own conclusions happen to be distinctly in the minority.

To our mind, the most rational reason for "insurgency" in the Republican ranks rests on objection to "Cannonism;" to the natural desire to be independent, to a certain extent, of arbitrary rules which prevent members from exercising personal prerogatives in the way of debate, and with reference to the running of the legislative mill. That one man should have dictatorial power to so shape events and actions, without the individual member having the right, on his own initiative, to say and do that which he believes to be proper, very naturally arouses the resentment of intelligent and rightly ambitious men; therefore, there was a righteousness connected with the revolt against the House rules, which compels popular indorsement.

However, it is strongly claimed that unless the rules are largely restricted and made apparently arbitrary, and personal inclinations restricted, the transaction of the public business would become so muddled, and with so many loose ends, that it would be next to impossible to pass legislation of any sort. In other words, that a "steam roller" process is absolutely necessary in order to straighten out tangles and compel agreements, due to the American tendency to contend for non-essential details; but even with the assurance that there is much truth in the argument, the fellows who feel the weight of the "roller" are apt to complain, and we do not greatly blame them.

There are also other reasons which excuse "insurgency." For instance, those who have undisputed leadership, and the opportunity to bowl over those who disagree with them, should at the very least do so with decency—with as little pain as possible—and not flaunt their power disagreeably in the faces of their—for the present—followers. This was very decidedly not done throughout the tariff debate when insurgents were created almost daily—common politeness, early in the revolt, would have saved a great deal of present trouble. It must be remembered, after all, that Mr. Cannon, for instance, was delegated his power by his fellows—that he had no inherent rights superior to those who sat under his dictation.

But, "insurgency" as a development is a thing to fear and condemn, rather than to admire and excuse. It stands out very clearly, now, as being animated by a spirit more vindictive and Czar-like than the "stand-patism" which it revolted from. It clearly rebels against majority sentiment, and stands ready to "rule or ruin." The country would be as badly off—if not worse—with a

Cummins, or Bristow, leading the majority in the Senate, in place of Aldrich. To those who are disposed to be mildly insurgent, there is little inducement to down Speaker Cannon, should his place be filled with one of his extreme opponents. In fact, the country is not ready to do any such thing, and will not do it. Sooner or later, the rampant and rebellious "insurgents" will find it expedient to draw in their horns, or occupy the unenviable position of being notorious agitators, unwilling to accept the opinions of any but themselves, which is largely their real present status.

Aldrich Strikes Back.

The explicit denial made by Senator Aldrich to the charges relative to the rubber schedule of the tariff bill, as made by Senator Bristow, merits full consideration, if not absolute belief. It also recalls to mind the fact that in such an immense subject as the tariff, there are not only two sides, but often many sides, to the why and wherefore of conclusions reached. Senator Bristow, has been making widespread charges that manufacturers of rubber were given an increased tariff, largely for the benefit of a rubber monopoly in which Senator Aldrich is a stockholder, and the charges have been rung on this apparently irrefutable statement, all over the country.

Senator Aldrich now breaks the silence, for which he is noted while under charges, by smashing the whole story. He says that he is not, nor has he ever been, financially interested in rubber manufacturers, but that the rubber company with which he is connected deals solely in the production of crude rubber, on which there is not, and has not been, any tariff whatever, and that his company not only has no monopoly of this product, but handles actually only about 6 per-cent of the crude rubber produced.

He says, further, that the duty was raised on certain manufactures of rubber from 30 per cent. to 35 per cent. not at the instigation, or for the benefit of any industry, but on the suggestion of Treasury officials as a plan for making it more simple to compute import duties on the articles involved. In concluding his public statement, Senator Aldrich acridly refers to his insurgent critics as follows:

"From the tariff discussions of other days the advocates of the protective policy have usually been called to meet in debate with men of convictions on the subject—Democrats of character whose theories of government differed completely from those held by Republican protectionists—men who had some regard for the accuracy of their statements and some knowledge of the subjects they discussed.

"Now attacks upon a Republican President and Republican measures are led by men whose political existence depends upon their capacity—and to this there seems to be no limit—for misrepresentation and the ignorance of their adherents. Strangely enough, this little group of men—very small in number—has arrogated to itself the leadership of the progressives, and its members prate about the treatment of the tariff as a moral question."

The "Mail Bag" Feature.

The Baltimore News has always been very liberal with its space for communications on live topics, printing such articles under an appropriate heading, "The News Mail Bag." The RECORD, too, has always invited such expressions of opinion, our prohibited list being very limited. The wonder is that such invitations are not more generally accepted, for as a rule knowing critics of public matters are to be found in every public place, and on every street corner, while many have opinions of perhaps equal, or more value than the opinions of those who are in a position to exercise them. Like the News, the RECORD would be glad to hear frequently from those competent to express themselves clearly and intelligently. The following editorial on this subject recently appeared in the News:

"The Mail Bag has been and is a feature of which The News is proud. It has served as an open forum for the discussion of live topics by wide-awake citizens. It has given publicity to individual opinion and widened the effectiveness of personal wisdom.

To the opinions of some men and women, however, there is just reason for giving greater prominence than the Mail Bag offers. Experience, special study, or exhaustive investigation lends authority to their words beyond the expressions of the layman.

It is with this fact in mind that The News has issued and will continue to issue to a carefully selected list of citizens an invitation to become contributing editors of The News. There will be no attempt at continuity in the publishing of these editorials nor will the writers be directed in the least in opinion or expression. What they say will be printed as they say it, and if The News disagrees with either premises or conclusions it will, as opportunity offers, express that disagreement. By this new and unusual editorial feature The News hopes to render a distinct and valuable service to its readers."

Trouble Ahead for Congress.

No one can tell what the complexion of the next Congress will be in regard to politics or insurgency. But it can be known that the coming short session of Congress will have plenty of work to do if it wishes to escape the possible action of a new body.

Several tough propositions in the way of big bills are on the programme. Among them are those for merchant marine and the regulation of injunctions. Then there are the measures to create the Appalachian and White Mountain forest reserve, and to permit the Federal incorporation of railroads and other common carriers. The fragments of the Taft legislative programme which failed of Congressional enactment at the session just ended are already being culled over and put in trim for next winter. The following calendar is already made up:

To create the Appalachian and White Mountain forest reserve.

To build up the merchant marine by a system of ship subsidies.

To regulate the granting of injunctions.

To permit the Federal incorporation of railroads and other common carriers.

To regulate the issue of stocks and bonds of transportation companies.

The enactment of additional conservation measures, eight bills remaining without action.

To establish a bureau of public health.

To encourage the study of agriculture and the mechanical arts, for which an appropriation of $10,000,000 is proposed.

A form of civil government for Alaska.

Modification of the Sherman Anti-Trust act.

Codification of the postal laws and reorganization of the postal system.

A plan for the retirement of civil service employees.

To expedite litigation in Federal courts.

Beyond these there are many minor matters to come up for action. Among them are the Rockefeller Foundation charter and a measure for the regulation of cold storage. Two important investigating committees will make their reports, and possibly a third one. It is certain the Ballinger-Pinchot Committee will report its findings to Congress, and the committee which is to make the inquiry into the election of Senator Lorimer will do likewise.—Lancaster Examiner.

Savings-Bank Deposits.

The savings banks and the savings bank depositors need not, in our judgment, feel any alarm about the opinion of the Attorney-General upon the taxation of deposits. It is the business of the Attorney-General to interpret the law. He is of the opinion that the deposits are, according to the terms of the law, taxable. But his idea is that the question shall be tested in the courts, and in the meantime no taxes will be levied nor collected.

If the Court of Appeals should coincide with the Attorney-General as to the meaning and intent of the law, there can be little doubt that the Legislature will change the law before any taxes shall have been collected. It would be so serious a blow to business in Maryland to levy a tax of some two and a quarter per cent. upon savings which have already paid 25 cents on $100 that such a thing is not to be anticipated and need not be feared. It is not thinkable that the Legislature, whatever it may have actually done, intended to select the savings of the poor in order to impose upon them a higher rate of taxation than is imposed upon any other securities.—Catonsville Argus.

Immigration Setting Southward.

Along with the speculations evoked by the census bulletins, the report of the arrival of 1,000,000 foreign immigrants in the last fiscal year, and the rumors of returning American settlers from Canada, comes the interesting prophecy in a Washington Associated Press dispatch of an unusual migration from the Northwest to the South and Southeast. A similar movement occurred in October last year from the Central States, especially Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska, but this bids fair to surpass its predecessor. The Cleveland Plain Dealer reports that "great tracts in Florida, Georgia, and southern Alabama are being opened to colonization," and has found a new colony of Slovaks, both miners from Pennsylvania and new immigrants, in southern Alabama. The Washington Post has found an entire community in Georgia composed of emigrants from the Middle West. The Houston Post says that Northern firms are purchasing lands in Southern Georgia, southern Alabama, and Florida for development, and other papers find that Northern farmers are buying lands in Virginia, the Carolinas, northern Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee.

The Southern press are united in hailing the movement with joy, and many localities are advertising special inducements and planning "boosting" tours through Northern States. Of especial interest in this connection was the recent Mississippi State Immigration Convention. The Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser emphasizes Governor Noel's speech at this convention as presenting the need of the whole South. The Governor declares:

"To-day it is vitally important that we should make a businesslike effort to secure our part of this immigration. We are face to face with an industrial and agricultural revolution. We are getting away from the one-crop idea, and realizing the importance of more home products. The Mexican boll weevil has invaded our State, and is steadily marching eastward and northward. We must have diversification of crops and improved methods of farming, or agriculture as a pursuit must be abandoned.

"In the years gone by we have been farming with cheap, unskilled negro labor, which seemed to be sufficient for the cotton crop, but which is not sufficient for modern conditions. We need, in the adoption of diversified and intensified farming, more skill, more capital, more intelligence, and we want to get it from all parts of the Union."

The Richmond Journal finds the prospect of added political representation especially pleasing. An increased immigration to the South, it believes, "will, by increasing the South's population and therefore its representation in Congress and the electoral college give the South the standing in the councils of the nation which it deserves. We can not help but think that those who have been calling upon the South to forsake the Democratic party and become Republicans on the ground that by doing so the South would exert its proper influence at the national capital, had the fear in their minds that the marvelous growth of the South would give it that influence in no great length of time anyway."

The Best Hour of Life

is when you do some great deed or discover some wonderful fact. This hour came to J. R. Pitt, of Rocky Mt., N. C., when he was suffering intensely, as he says, "from the worst cold I ever had, I then proved to my great satisfaction, what a wonderful Cold and Cough cure Dr. King's New Discovery is. For, after taking one bottle, I was entirely cured. You can't say anything too good of a medicine like that." The Bank Thieves

Since January 1, 1905, the bank and trust companies of the United States have lost the enormous sum of $28,000,000 by the dishonesty of officers and employees. Here is stealing, indeed, and upon a scale hitherto unmatched in the annals of felony! Each year the loss is $5,000,000; each month it is more than $400,000; each week it is $100,000; each business day of five hours it is nearly $15,000—or $3,000 an hour, or $50 a minute. The money lost between Monday morning and Saturday noon would pay the salary of the President of the United States for 16 months; the money lost in five years would pay for four battleships.

What becomes of it? The answer is not far to seek. It goes into the stock market. That was the destination of the $1,300,000 stolen by Oliver M. Douglas, of the Trust Company of North America, and of the Denver Savings Bank, and of the $7,000,000 stolen by Frank K. Hipple, of the Real Estate Trust Company of Philadelphia. That, too, was the destination of the paltry $18,000 taken from the strong-box of the little Mount Holly National Bank in New Jersey by Clifford S. Heller, the assistant cashier, and of $30,000 stolen from a New York bank six months ago by "Tom" Brown, a half-grown messenger. Bank thieves seldom profit by their stealing. Wall street quickly takes their loot away from them. Nine times out of ten, in truth, the money is lost before it is actually stolen.

The New York Stock Exchange, in an effort to discourage speculation by bank clerks, recently adopted a rule forbidding exchange houses to carry the accounts of such underlings without the written consent of their employers—a consent, it is plain, that will never be given. But speculation by the men higher up still continues. Erwin Wider, cashier of the New York branch of the Russo-Chinese Bank, found a dozen brokerage houses willing and eager to handle his money. That money was raised by selling and hypothecating the securities of the bank, and within a short time Wider was $600,000 behind in his accounts. Next week another such story will entertain the public, and the week after that another one. Each year fully 100 bank officials go wrong. Each year the stock market absorbs $5,000,000 of stolen money.

Is there a remedy? Apparently not. So long as it is considered perfectly decent for a bank official, solemnly entrusted with other folks' money, to take fliers in the market, such fools will keep on losing and the weaker among them will steal to make up their losses. In the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., there are now almost as many banker convicts as burglars. In Riverside prison at Pittsburg there are 13. In Sing Sing there are twice as many. Every American prison has its quota. The existing laws seem utterly incapable of preventing such stealing, and it is to be doubted that new laws would be any more effective. Not until public opinion, and particularly banking opinion, ranks the banker who speculates with the ship captain who keeps a barrel of whiskey on the bridge will there be much improvement. Of what use is it to drive the clerks from the market so long as the presidents and directors above them remain the chief performers there?—Balt. Evening Sun.

has had one frightful drawback—malaria trouble—that has brought suffering and death to thousands. The germs cause chills, fever and ague, biliousness, jaundice, lassitude, weakness and general debility. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy them and cure malaria troubles. Do You Ask More? With the growing interest of Poultry Raisers in the industry, encouraged by the present high prices, the demand for Feeds has grown almost incredibly. As the demand for various kinds of Feed increases, we endeavor to meet it, and now carry regularly in stock the following: Chick Feed, (3 Kinds.) Hen Feed. Kaffir Corn. Beef Scrap. Ground Bone. Hen-o-ta, (4 Sizes.) Pigeon Feed. Cracked Corn. Crystal Grit. Canada Peas. Charcoal. Oyster Shells. We want you to know the completeness of this branch of our business, and having this knowledge, to share your trade with us. We promise everything any fair-minded person can expect, in all the departments of our business. REINDOLLAR BROS & CO.

Plant Tennessee Trees. Buy your trees direct from a responsible nursery and be sure of getting just what you order, and incidentally save more than half what a traveling man would charge. Our nursery has earned an enviable reputation for fair dealing and our method of packing insures trees reaching you in fine condition. Prof. G. M. Bentley, our State Entomologist and quite an authority on nursery stock, in his last annual report says: We believe greater success in orcharding would result from planting Tennessee-grown trees. The variety of stock grown is very general, that suitable both for Northern and Southern trade. Northern nurserymen contract with Tennessee growers especially for apple trees, knowing that due to the long growing season here, stock of two year's growth will equal that of three years in the colder climate. In this and many other features Tennessee holds great advantages and to-day ranks first as the leading nursery state in the South. Tennessee Wholesale Nurseries (INCORPORATED) BOX 45. CLICK OF THE KEY

The Reading of Telegraph Messages by Sound.

STORY OF THE FIRST TRIAL.

A Lack of Tape Caused Alonzo B. Cornell to Attempt Interpreting the Morse Code by Ear—The Discovery That Abolished the Use of the 'ape.

Ezra Cornell is known in history as the father of Cornell university, as one of the men who helped to build the first telegraph line and as an ardent organizer of telegraph systems in the early days, being instrumental in the formation of the now famous Western Union Telegraph company. His son, Alonzo B. Cornell, became ultimately vice president of the Western Union and governor of New York state—high commercial and political honors.

Yet he once confessed to me that he felt he should be credited with the additional honor of having made the discovery that telegraph messages could be read by ear, and he seemed to take more pride in his part in bringing this about than he did in any of his other achievements.

"I was trained as a telegraph operator," said Mr. Cornell in telling me the story. "I suppose I took to telegraphy naturally because of my father's deep and large interests in the then new mode of communication. Anyway, I learned the Morse key easily, and I was, in fact, very fond of telegraphing from both the practical and the scientific standpoints.

"One afternoon, sometime in the early fifties, when I was stationed at Albany, N. Y., there was an unusual rush of newspaper dispatches—I was in charge of the press key—and in the midst of the task of receiving them I found to my consternation that I was out of tape. Before taking my seat before the key I had neglected to replenish the tape reel.

"There was a bountiful supply of tape in the cellar of the building, but it was a long trip there—there were no elevators in those days—and I knew that to go there I would waste precious time. And there were those anxious newspaper men hanging over my shoulder.

"Suddenly, as I fished about mentally for the quickest way out of my dilemma, this thought popped into my head: 'You don't need any tape. Half the time you don't look at it when the dispatches are coming in before you write them out. You trust to your ears to tell what the instrument says. Why not do so now?' Instantly I determined to see whether or not I could take the dispatches by sound alone.

"I put my fingers on the key and broke in on New York, whence the dispatches were coming. 'Send rather slowly and very distinctly,' I asked the man at the other end of the wire. He at once began to do so—not without some curiosity as to my reason, I found out later.

"But I didn't think of that at the time, for I was glowing all over with the knowledge that I could write out the dispatches—and write them correctly, for they made sense—by simply listening to the sounds that the key made.

"This I continued taking the dispatches to the very end. Then the New York operator called me. 'What are you doing up there?' he asked. 'Why did you want me to send slowly and distinctly?'

"I answered that I had said goodly to the telegraph tape forever and told him of the discovery I had made. He was immediately interested. 'Send me slowly and very distinctly fifteen or twenty words, and I'll see whether or not I can do the same thing,' he requested.

"I did so, full of confidence, and a little later there came to me this message: 'I've done it too. Some of the other boys say they can. I predict that within a month there won't be an inch of tape used in the New York office.'

"Years later," added Mr. Cornell, "I was told that about the time that I discovered for myself a new and revolutionary method of receiving telegraph messages the same method was also discovered by an operator in the main office in Pittsburgh. I have no doubt that this is true. Sooner or later the discovery was bound to be made not only in one, but several offices. But I have always felt that I was the first to make the discovery and should be credited with it in telegraphic history."—Boston Globe.

Watering the Horse.
It is allowable when a horse is hot to let him have three or four swallows of cool water, but no more. The few swallows will help cool him, and another limited drink may be given every few minutes for four or five times, after which he may drink his fill without danger. In careless or inexperienced hands, however, the only safe way is to let the horse stand for half an hour or more with no water until he is fairly cooled off.—Country Life in America.

Descriptive.
"The eye of a little miss was attracted by the sparkle of dew at early morning. 'Mamma,' she exclaimed, 'it's hotter'n I thought it was.' 'What do you mean?' 'Look here; the grass is all covered with perspiration.'—St. Louis Star.

Failures are with heroic minds but stepping stones to success.—Haffner ton.

CHICKEN RACES.

The Ridiculous "Hen Derby" Instituted by Sir John Astley.

It is said that the crowning triumph of Sir John Astley, that inventor of absurd contests, whose forte it was to arrange races between animals which nature apparently had made most unsuitable for the purpose, was the institution of the only races that ever took place between chickens.

The story is that the idea came to Sir John during a visit to a friend who kept a large number of hens. He noticed how rapidly the chickens used to scurry to their mother when food was thrown to her. This furnished the ingenious Sir John with a clever notion, and at mess, he then being quartered at Windsor, he accordingly unfolded to his brother officers his plans for a great chicken race.

He bought from a farmer a hen and a brood of chickens. Each officer was to choose a chicken and mark it with a ribbon, so that he could easily recognize it. The chickens were to be placed about fifty yards away from their mother, and whichever of them reached her first in answer to her cackle when food was thrown to her was to be adjudged the winner.

And so this ridiculous "hen Derby" came off in the barracks at Windsor and was witnessed by nearly the whole brigade of guards, who traveled down from London especially to see it.

The race was such a success that it was arranged to repeat it the following week. It might possibly have become a regular institution and a racing stable of chickens might have been added to the attractions at Windsor had not Sir John's chicken won on each occasion with such ease as to cause suspicion in the minds of his competitors. Indeed, it was found, it is said, that in both races Sir John had selected a sturdy young cocker who was much too speedy for his sisters.

When victory was a certainty for one particular competitor the contest, of course, lost interest, and so the chicken races at Windsor came to a sudden end.—New York Herald.

TURNER'S AMBITION.

The Great Painter Achieved It by Years of Self Sacrifice.

Turner could not bear to sell a favorite painting. He was always melancholy after such a transaction. "I lost one of my children this week," he would sadly exclaim. At a meeting at Somerset House it was decided to purchase his two great pictures, the "Rain" and the "Fall of Carthage," for the National gallery. A Mr. Griffiths was commissioned to offer £5,000 for them. "A noble offer," said the painter, "a noble offer; but, no, I cannot part with them. Impossible." Mr. Griffiths, greatly disappointed, took his leave. Turner ran after him. "Tell those gentlemen," he said, "that the nation will most likely have the pictures after all." Long before this Turner had matured a purpose which continued to be his dominant idea while life lasted. This was to bequeath to his country a Turner gallery of pictures and to amass £100,000 to build and endow an asylum for decayed artists. It was for this great object that he denied himself all pleasures that cost money, all luxuries. His resolve, once made, could not be shaken. On one occasion he was offered £100,000 for the art treasures locked up in the "den." "Give me the key of the house, Mr. Turner," said a Liverpool merchant, "and here is the money." "No, thank you," replied Turner. "I have refused a better offer." And that was true. By his will he bequeathed £140,000 to found an asylum for poor artists born in England and a magnificent art collection for his country. This latter bequest was, however, coupled with the condition that his "Rain" and "Fall of Carthage" should be hung in the National gallery between Claude's "Seaport" and "Mill."—London Graphic.

Didn't Give Him the Chance.
Schopenhauer, when staying in Geneva, used to go every day to a table d'hote at which now and then appeared other distinguished visitors. Once Lady Byron sat next to him.

"Doctor," said the host after she had left, with a twinkle in his eye, "doctor, do you know who sat next to you at the table today? It was Lady Byron."

"Why the deuce did you not tell me this before?" replied Schopenhauer; "I should have liked to be rude to her."

"That was what I feared," said the host, "and for that reason I kept it quiet."

Very Thorough.
New York's collector of customs was talking about smuggling.

"Smuggling must cease," he said. "We'll make it cease, if we have to be as strict and thorough as the French customs officer. This strict officer, standing on the pier, frowned on a tourist with a swollen cheek.

"What have you got there?" he said, pointing to the swelling.

"An abscess, sir," was the reply.

"Well," said the officer impatiently, "open it, please."—Washington Star.

It Had an Effect.
"Did that sarcastic letter you wrote to the milkman requesting him to let you attend to the job of watering the milk now that you have a new filter in the kitchen faucet have any effect?" "It did," said the jokester. "He delivers the bottles now only two-thirds full."—New York Sun.

The Error.
Sandy—Doctor, man, there's a wee bit error in this bill of yours. Ye've charged me for advice. Ah never tuk it.—London Punch.

Raising a False Issue.

A story well known to lawyers of the last generation is about the "umbrella case." A man was charged with stealing an umbrella, and a number of witnesses went into the box to testify to the offense. The counsel for the defendant noted that each witness carried an umbrella (the time of year was midsummer, which explains the necessity for these impediments). As a matter of fact, the prisoner had no defense to make. The barrister, thrown on his wits, exclaimed: "Gentlemen of the jury, did you not notice that each of the witnesses carried an umbrella into the box? Why is this, gentlemen? It is done in order to infect your minds with the idea of an umbrella, to prejudice the prisoner in your eyes, to raise a false issue, and I appeal to you to signify your disapproval of this concerted action by bringing in a verdict of not guilty." The judge, who imagined that little attention would be paid to such a plea, took little time and less pains to sum up the case. The jury nevertheless brought in a verdict in accordance with the resourceful barrister's wishes.—London News.

Hot Air.
The sirocco blows hot from the highlands of north Africa and falls on the Mediterranean as far as Malta. The salano jumps like a windy fireball from the heat of the Sahara desert and lands drenched in Spain. The barman blows hot Sahara dust far into the Atlantic and gives nosebleed and makes skin and lips parch and crack, while furniture and ship timbers groan and crack and scream in an agony of droughty despair. The khamisim blows Sahara's ancient dust into Egyptian eyes every fifty days. The pamperos periodically blow down into Buenos Aires out of the unexplored desert highlands of Brazil, and the blowing causes suicides and murders to be more common and wounds to break out afresh, with a heavy death rate. Pamperos pass away in a second, leaving the air fine.—Exchange.

The Bulldog.
The bulldog, unlike the majority of dogs, very seldom barks. In fact, owing to the construction of his throat his attempts at barking are more like a burlesque of the real thing. He wades into a fight without any vocal warning, and the only sound he emits is his heavy breathing. His courage is astonishing, and the largeness of his opponent never acts as a deterrent when hostilities are imminent. Still, as he is not a quarrelsome dog, he very rarely indulges in street brawls, and, as he is exceedingly good natured, it takes a lot to rouse him.

The modern bulldog is undoubtedly a different looking animal from his bull-fighting ancestors. The most conspicuous "improvements" introduced by the present day "fancy" are largeness of head, width of chest, heaviness of bone and more typical tail.

Why She Was Pleased.
"Do you mean to tell me that you actually overcame that ancient antipathy of yours for Mrs. Muggsby and called on her this afternoon?" said his wife's husband.

"That's about the size of it," replied her husband's wife.

"And she was glad to see you?" "There isn't any doubt about it."

"Why do you think that?" "Well, I had on that old dress I've worn three seasons and a hat that is entitled to a prominent place in some museum for antiquities, while she had on a new gown just from Paris. Oh, yes, I'm sure she was tickled to death, figuratively speaking, when I called!"—Chicago News.

A Sample of Suggestion.
A popular comedian and playwright was praising the humorous value of suggestions.

"It is funnier to suggest a thing," he said, "than to say it out. Playwrights should remember this. Suggestion, pregnant suggestion, is what makes really funny the little boy's remark to his father:

"Pa, if you help me with my arithmetic lesson tonight I'll tell you where ma hid your trousers."—New York Sun.

The "Best Girl" Habit.
"Why," asked her anxious and excited mother, "do you think he is coming to the point at last?"

"Well," the maiden replied, looking demurely down at the rug, "when he took me in his arms and kissed me last night he said he'd got so used to me he didn't believe he could ever break himself of the habit."

Fellow Professionals.
Phrenologist (to fellow passenger)—Excuse me, but am I right in taking you for a professional man? Fellow Passenger—Yes, sir. Phrenologist—Thanks! It's not often that I make a mistake in judging my fellow men. Er—lawyer? Fellow Passenger—No, sir; barber!

The Main Point.
"I am glad to say that I bear no man a grudge."

"But the point is this: Are you of sufficient importance to make any man care whether you bear him a grudge or not?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Other Things.
"Remember, my boy, there are other things worth while in college besides athletics."

"I know. The mandolin and glee clubs aren't half bad."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He that is ungrateful has no guilt but one. All other crimes may pass for virtues in him.

TRAVELLING IN ITALY.

DR. S. G. A. BROWN.

But perhaps one of the most interesting spots in Rome is that of the Forum. We shall not enter into details, as it might prove tiresome to the reader, suffice it to say, that to wander among these ancient ruins is an inspiration to be coveted by any one. Here may be seen the remains of the famous temple of Caesar, where the funeral of the murdered dictator occurred, and where Mark Anthony pronounced his famous oration which wrought so powerfully upon his hearers. Other remains are those of the temple of Castor and Pollux, and of Augustus, that of Saturn and of Vespasian. The arch of Septimius is fairly well preserved. A retrospective view reminds one that upon the polished surfaces of some of these the hands of Scipio and of Caesar have rested, and that the pillars have echoed in the remote past to the voice of the mighty Cicero. The Arches of the Basilica of Constantine are amazingly large and well preserved. Most of the structures were constructed of marble and richly ornamented. There are still some remains of the massive platform from which were delivered the many famous orations of Cicero and other Roman statesmen. The Basilica Porcia, where the tribunes of the people used to hold their courts brought back to our memory our school boy days. Another interesting spot of the Forum was the column of Phocas, of which Byron wrote:

Tully was not so eloquent as thou. Thou nameless column with the buried base."

The Sacred Way through the Forum had buildings lined on either side of it and was quite tortuous. One of the spots which was of peculiar interest was where we saw some brickwork, the remains of a "butcher's stall from which Virginius snatched the knife that saved his daughter's honor." We viewed it with the same enthusiasm we had exhibited when reading the story in our boyhood days. The remains of the house of Julius Caesar are also seen. The Colosseum, a "noble wreck in ruinous perfection," is the largest amphitheatre ever constructed, and we believed it after we had climbed the steps to the top of its wall. Beneath it were the cellars, as you know, for the wild beasts. Its opening, we were informed, occupied 100 days' festivities. It is a wonderful structure. Its architect was probably a Christian martyr. About one-third of the building now stands. Just beyond it is the beautiful Arch of Constantine.

The Capitoline Hill contains some wonderful sculpture in its museum, among others the Dying Gladiator, and busts of many Roman celebrities. Where Pompey's theatre formerly stood is now a large building, and near it the spot where Caesar fell with 23 wounds. Entering an insignificant looking house we proceeded down a stairway to a dungeon where "St. Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him;" and where "Paul called the chief of the Jews together." Palatine Hill is a beautiful spot and full of ruins. Here Romulus laid the foundations of the city and the palatial homes of Cicero, Tiberius and other great Romans were located here. It is quite an experience to roam through the rooms of these places, perhaps several stories beneath the surface of the earth. The Romans were great builders, Nero's house being five miles long.

"Rome, Rome, thou art no more As thou hast been On thy seven hills of yore Thou sat'st a queen."

St. Peter's is probably one of the largest and most wonderful structures in the world. It boasts the largest dome, which is the work of Michael Angelo. He designed it when he was 90 years of age. The diameter of the interior is 139 feet, presenting a most sublime effect. It is gigantic and stands within the circus of Nero. It required 176 years to build it, and the expense was so great that the popes in charge established the sale of indulgences, which in time gave rise to the reformation. The facade or front is 327 feet long and on the balustrade are the statues of Christ and the twelve apostles. We shall not attempt to describe the interior. It is most impressive, combining vastness with a wonderful degree of symmetry and proportion. The interior height of the dome is 440 feet. We were not fortunate enough to attend any of the services. We understand that to attend some of these, the women of the outside world must wear black dresses and veils and the men full evening dress. The various aisles and transepts are filled with the finest kind of statuary and the most costly and beautiful figures done in mosaic. There is but one oil painting in the church, although probably half the tourists do not know it. In the centre of the main aisle are four brass columns mounted on marble bases. These bases are sculptured in a degree that would not receive the approbation of our staid church fathers, and few tourists ever notice them, being hurried past the spot. Among the many sculptured figures is one of Maria Clementine, wife of James III. We saw two persons approach it and the man said to the woman, "Why here is a woman; she must have been a pope." Such people need no Baedeker to guide them.

The Vatican, which is the largest palace in the world, was next visited. We did not try to secure an audience with its chief head but determined to examine things more interesting. The pope has Swiss guards, who watch the entrance, wearing peculiar yellow uniforms designed by Michael Angelo. The palace covers 134 acres and has about 1000 halls, chapels and private apartments surrounding some twenty courts. There are a number of show rooms like the picture gallery, the gallery of sculpture, the Sistine chapel, and various other museums and libraries. Here may be found the best of most everything, sculpture, paintings, tapestries, mosaics, etc., most of the masterpieces having been appropriated from other nations by benevolent assimilation. Poor Greece probably suffered most. Here may be found such master-pieces as Michael Angelo's Last Judgment; Raphael's Annunciation; de Vinci's St. Jerome; Laocoon group in marble; Apollo Belvedere, and the celebrated Torso of Hercules.

Travel is cheap in Italy. You need not understand the language; just take a taxicab which has the price marked down and which winds it off much as the odometer of an automobile, tell the driver the Italian name of the place you want to visit, while you make a face like a rooster trying to swallow a large worm, and immediately away you go at about 40 cents per hour for two. We had a delightful drive out the Appian Way, the road by which St. Paul entered Rome. We passed the little church where tradition says Christ was accosted by the fleeing St. Peter with the words, "Domine quo vadis?" We visited the baths of Caracalla, or rather the ruins, whose magnificence must have been unparalleled. All sorts of baths were given and it must have been a luxurious process. We visited the Catacombs of St. Calixtus in which over 1,000,000 bodies have been buried, 100,000 of them being martyrs, many of them from the Coliseum arena. It is interesting to visit these vaults, some of them being three stories below the ground, and it is said that if they were all placed in a row it would reach 350 miles, or about the total length of Italy. The Cathedral of St. Paul outside the walls has magnificent Corinthian columns of pure Parian marble. San Pietro cathedral has the chains which bound St. Peter, which we saw. The Cappuccin church has vaults below the skeletons of over 4,000 Capuchins arranged in an artistic but rather ghastly manner. At the Scala Santa chapel we saw what was reputed to be 28 marble steps from the house of Pilate at Jerusalem which our Saviour is said once to have ascended. No one dare ascend them now except on their knees; we saw several going up that way, stopping to pray and kiss each step as they advanced toward the crucifix at the top.

Rome is full of wonders, imaginary and real, but we must close. The people themselves are interesting, and we found no difficulty in making ourselves understood, notwithstanding we knew nothing of the language. The women, mostly, were poorly shaped, and we have wondered where the artists got their models to produce so many magnificent works in marble and on canvas. It is only in Rome that it is possible to realize to the full extent the gifts and limitations, the genius and labor of a Michael Angelo or a Raphael. To realize the greatness of Rome it is not enough to have seen the Colosseum, St. Peters, the palaces, ruins, squares and fountains, for the most beautiful possession of Rome, now, is probably the Campagna, where one could spend hours and days.

Tortured by a Beauty Doctor.

"Getting Pretty, Quick," a description of the tortures which a woman must endure when she puts herself under the care of a Beauty Doctor, appears in The Delineator for August. It was a manicure girl in New York who opened my eyes to the fact that I could purchase a complete, brand-new complexion guaranteed to withstand the weather for three hundred dollars, and have my ears rearranged into the bargain, says the writer. My friend, Mrs. Besser, and I arrived at Dr. Landers' Sanitarium about noon, and after a good lunch we went back to our rooms for The Last Wash. Water wouldn't touch our faces for many, many days. I set every nerve and took my place in the electric chair. Old Age dies hard.

Do you care to know what it felt like? Of course I was first treated with cocaine, but you can't draw a white-hot needle all around your forehead without some unpleasantness. And when the effects of the drug wear off—well I was simply up against outraged Mother Nature, who protested in twenty-three different ways at the injury. You see, the process is divided, for mercy's sake, into three operations. The first time the forehead is circumnavigated with a burning line, like barking a tree. The second time they cut out one-half of the face, and lastly, if you survive, have kept your reason, and haven't run away, they attack the other half of your head, and then you're finished, except for the remorse.

I was burned around the forehead, and the island thus separated from my face was salved and bandaged. I retired to my room immediately. After four hours' sleep—the last I had for many days—I found Dr. Landers in the room with a bundle of cotton.

It was high time. My forehead had begun to weep serum. My pillow and nightdress were both drenched. Hence the cotton. Dr. Landers handed me a roll and I proceeded to mop my face and neck. That business kept me engaged for the next twenty hours.

All next day Mrs. Besser and I sat in our rooms with mirrors, marking the progress of the flood, while the ooze trickled down, trickled down. Toward night the doctor came in, took a peep under the bandage, decided I was ripe, and I very reluctantly accompanied her down-stairs to the operating room.

Exactly what happened there, I shall never know. But, at any rate, the salve was scraped off, and I was plastered on the raw flesh with a cruel, yellow, antiseptic, powdered something that hardened, soon, into a rigid cast, like a piece of pie-crust. Then my real troubles began. I tottered to my room and began to swell. I swelled and swelled, every-which-way, till I looked like one of those photographic negatives you melt in warm water and let run till they are fantastically distorted. First my eyes went, then my nose lost all semblance to human shape, then my mouth performed all sorts of conceivable effects. The cast drew horribly, like a vise.

I felt as if some one were pulling me up by the cheeks, and I was screwed up to such a tension of nervousness that I just wanted to gallop up and down and scream all the time. If you have ever burned yourself well, you know just how delicate and shrinking the tender skin is that forms under the blister. Imagine one the size of your forehead, and you'll know how we felt.

Will the gentle reader kindly sand-paper her face conscientiously for five minutes, and then go over it with a hammer and a wire hair-brush, so that she may understand the case thoroughly? Or, hold your hand in the fire for nineteen seconds and then get a Swedish plumber to rub it backward? That's about the way we felt.

After five days, Dr. Landers, who inspected me daily, flected off a bit of the scab and announced that the new skin had thoroughly formed on my forehead. The crust was picked off, piece by piece, after having been softened with water, and bit by bit the mirable was exposed. I rushed to the mirror. My forehead was the color of boiled lobster, but the texture was that of a baby's skin. It was lovely! There was not a line on it. The doctor, when applying the powder, had thickened it at the right places so that it would draw out all the creases. I confess the result was wonderful, after my whole face had been gone over.

My complexion was that of a newborn babe—but I was as red as a carnation. I looked as if I had spent all Summer at the seaside without veil or parasol—not tanned, but sunburned to the limit. And that was the way I had to account for my appearance for the next six months—for it took fully that time for me to remain my normal color.

Well, now my face appears, at first sight, to be that of a young girl. I'll have to admit that. But you can't fool Nature. How would youth have its fling, if you could? Look closely, and you'll see my skin is different, somehow. I use neither paint nor powder, now, but I'm marked. For you see, while my face is only three years old, my hands are dry and brown and forty-five. And so that's why I don't sit, pensively, at the dinner table, with my cheek resting in my hand. You watch! Yellow and pink don't go well together.

Right Position For Bed.

A child's bed should be kept several inches from the wall, and if it is a brass or iron bedstead a heavy shawl or blanket should be thrown over the headboard. Young mothers have sometimes wondered why their little ones after going to bed perfectly well wake up sneezing and coughing. Upon moving the head of the bed several inches from the wall and covering the open-work headboard these pesky colds will probably cease.

Baby's First Shoes.

Many young mothers treasure their first tiny shoe of soft kid worn by their baby son or daughter above all other infantile belongings. In keeping with this sentiment has come about the practice of silvering one of these little shoes in order to make its preservation permanent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For Aug. 28, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxi, 1-17. Memory Verses, 10, 11—Golden Text, Matt. xxi, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

According to the harmony of the gospels, we have now come to the events of the second day in the last week, Passion week. The anointing by Mary at Bethany has taken place, although we shall not come to it in our studies till some time in October. It is thought by some that this public entry to Jerusalem occurred on the Sunday preceding Easter, generally known as Palm Sunday.

The time had come for another Scripture to be fulfilled which had been written about 500 years before: "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee: He is just and having salvation; lowly and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass" (Zech. ix, 9). Jesus, knowing all things, sent two of his disciples, unnamed, into the village over against them, that they might find the ass and the colt and bring them to Him. They went and found even as he had said unto them, and, saying what they had been told by Jesus to say to the owners of the animals, they brought them to Him. The account of this is found more or less fully in each of the four gospels. How marvelous that hundreds of years before it occurred it was all foreseen and written down! But "known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world" (Acts xv, 18). That this was a colt whereon never man sat suggests the sepulcher wherein never man before was laid (Luke xxiii, 53) and the womb from which He was the first-born. His power over creatures is seen in the submission to Him of this untamed ass' colt. Consider the birds which fed Elijah, the lions in Daniel's den, the little fish which brought the piece of money, the dominion over all creatures given to Adam and the time of the coming kingdom when the wolf, the leopard and the lion shall be to a little child as the lamb, the kid and the calf (Isa. xi, 6). The ass tied where two ways met is suggestive of the place where every sinner is found.

The adoration of the disciples and the multitude as they spread their garments and branches from trees in the way and cried, "Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord; hosanna in the highest," was not a welcome from the officials of the nation, but largely the cry of the unthinking multitude, who soon changed it to "crucify Him." The time draws near when He shall come again, and then Israel shall truly say: "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us" (Matt. xxiii, 39; Isa. xxv, 9). In Luke xix, 41-44, we read that when He was come near He beheld the city and wept over it, as He foretold its doom, because they knew not the things which belonged to their peace. How often He has had to say to those whom He loved to bless, "Ye would not" (Isa. xxviii, 12; xxx, 15; Matt. xxiii, 37; John v, 40). Hear the cry of His heart in Ps. lxxxix, 10-16: "Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. But My people would not hearken to My voice, and Israel would none of Me." "Oh, that My people had walked in My ways." The city was moved and cried, "Who is this?" It was a question oft asked by His enemies (Luke v, 21; vii, 49; ix, 9). It is the old question of Isa. lxiii, 1; Jer. xxx, 21. It is the great question, the only question, never "Who am I?" but always "Who is He?" "What can He do?" And so He asks us; "Believe ye that I am able?" "Whom say ye that I am?"

Jesus, having entered the city, went into the temple and for the second time in his ministry he cleansed it and said that instead of a house of prayer they had made it a den of thieves. Now, while the temple was in no sense typical of a church building, for both tabernacle and temple were quite unique, being each designed by God for a special purpose, that He might dwell in the midst of Israel, we do well to see that our church buildings dedicated to the worship of God are kept wholly for that purpose and not in any sense given up to amusement or entertainment. Both tabernacle and temple were typical of Jesus Christ Himself (John ii, 19; Hab. viii, 2), in whom God dwelt as in no other, but when He is received by us we become His temples, not our own, bought with a price, and it is our privilege to consider ourselves as wholly set apart for Himself, no longer conformed to this world, a peculiar people, zealous of good works (1 Cor. iii, 16, 17; Ps. lv, 3; Rom. xii, 1, 2; Tit. ii, 14). The chief priests and scribes hated Him more and more and would have forbidden even the children to sing hosanna to Him, but He quoted from the Eighth Psalm, where He is spoken of as having dominion over all things and in which the children praise Him. The fig tree which should have borne fruit, as by its profession of leaves it indicated the probability of such, but was cursed by Him till the end of the age, was a symbol of the nation on which He found nothing but leaves. In Joel i, 7, He speaks of Israel as "My vine, My fig tree."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 28, 1910.

Topic.—The progress of Christ's kingdom this year in Asia.—Matt. xiii, 31-33, taught by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The two parables of Christ before us are most appropriate to the subject of the advancement of the gospel in Asia in the past year. In these parables the kingdom of heaven is likened to the smallest of seeds, the mustard seed, which gradually grew until it became a great and useful tree. In the second parable the kingdom is likened unto a lump of leaven, which, put into three measures of meal it little more than a pint, leavened the entire lump. This has been the history of the gospel in Asia from the earliest times. It began in the day of small things and has spread abroad throughout the entire great continent.

The earliest ages of Christianity were spent in Asia. Christ was born there, and from Antioch, in Syria, His kingdom spread to the gentiles beyond Asia. Christ himself was never outside the continent of Asia. He was born in Bethlehem of Judea, lived the most of His life of thirty-three years in Palestine, a part of Asia, and only once, according to the record, was He beyond the borders of Palestine. This was the occasion of His visit to Tyre and Sidon, Asiatic strips of land bordering on the Great, or Mediterranean, sea.

The apostles' work was also in the same land. John was at Ephesus. Philip carried the gospel to Arabia and is also supposed to have gone as far east as India.

In the modern great efforts to evangelize the world Asia has been the scene of great efforts. From earliest times many Christians remained, some attached to the Greek church and thousands of Armenians, who are now constantly attacked and slaughtered by the Mohammedans, especially the Kurds, a very low and fanatical class of Turks. Where once pure and undefiled Christian religion prevailed at the present time there is much opposition by the Turks, who feel a bitter hatred against Christianity, although the principles of the Turks are based upon and largely received from the Old Testament teachings.

To attempt even a brief review of one year's work in Asia is impossible. The only thing that can possibly be done is to report "progress." In China, Japan, India and even in Korea, with its political troubles, and especially in Persia and Turkey, great progress is being made. Direct Christian work is successfully being prosecuted. The principles of Christian nations are being introduced. Persia has a constitutional government as well as Turkey, where victory has been won by the Young Turks. China has introduced the English language into the public schools, and the young Chinese under the name of "Nationalists" are demanding a constitutional government. Russia, darker than Africa in many senses, has its duma, which is constantly gaining in power. Christian colleges are advancing. Revivals are leading to thousands of conversions. Medical missions are performing a great work everywhere. Native workers are increasing in large numbers, which is of tremendous importance. Literature is being scattered everywhere and deeply studied. The day dawns; the darkness disappears. Soon the land in which the Christ Child was born and the angels heralded His coming will once more be flooded with the "light of the day." Let us give, labor and pray that these results may soon be accomplished.

In a Famous Church.
A fine new Christian Endeavor society, with a charter membership of forty, has been established in one of the world's most notable churches, the First Congregational church of Columbus, O., whose pastor is the famous clergyman, author and publicist, Rev. Washington Gladden, D. D., LL. D. Dr. Gladden has always been friendly to Christian Endeavor, has spoken at national, state and city Christian Endeavor conventions and has through his church open for Christian Endeavor rallies, but heretofore the church has had no Christian Endeavor society.

A Pledge Song.
[Tune: "Abide With Me."] Trusting in Thee, O Christ, for strength divine,
Humbly I make these promises of mine: Whatever Thou wilt I'll daily strive to do, Thy willing servant make me, faithful, true.

Each day to Thee I'll dedicate with prayer
And in Thy word will seek my treasure fair,
While in Thy church's sacred courts I'll prove
By aid and presence an untiring love.

Wisdom divine, oh, grant me that I may
Yield to Thy sweet transforming day by day;
That Christ may rise in me, come toll or strife,
And strengthen me to live a Christian life.

Active in love's dear service I will be,
Ready to do my part for Thine and Thee,
All ye that do my part where Thine own children meet,
But with them lay my offering at Thy feet.

Then to the crowning place of peace and power,
The joyous, blessed consecration hour,
Glady I'll come or send a love thought true,
And there my covenant with Thee renew.

Lord, keep and bless our dear Endeavor band
And give us visions of a cleansed land,
All ye that do my part, all faith and hope unite,
That we may stand for God and truth and right.
—Rev. R. P. Anderson in Christian Endeavor World.

HER CHOICE.

When the Time Came Her Decision Was Quickly Made.

By SARAH BRYCE VAUGHAN.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Why it is," said the ranchman, "that some winnow can't make a straight deal with a lover."

"We had a case out here once where a gal kept two fellers dancin' after her till she pretty nigh set 'em on 'em crazy. At last she had to decide all on a sudden, and it didn't take her a second to show which one 'em had her heart. Mebbe she didn't know herself before that which did have it, and mebbe she did know. Least-aways there wasn't no hesitation when the time come to make a show down."

"She was a little Mexican gal. Her father had belonged to a big family in Spain, and sence most o' the big families there are down at the feet and Herrara bein' the youngest o' twelve children he went to Mexico, married and come up to this here territory to raise sheep. He had a daughter, Paquita, born on his ranch. From the time she was able to walk she was out o' doors all the while, climbin' fences and trees, and when she was four was ridin' the horse to water."

"When Paquita was sixteen she was a terror to her father and mother. She could shoot, ride, swing a lariat, do anything a cowboy could do. I've seen her toss her handkerchief on the ground, ride by it at full speed and with one spur hooked to her saddle reach down and pick it up. At that time she used to wear her hair down like a comet's tail—same as little gals do—and it was topped by a sombrero. Her jacket and skirt were Mexican, with lots o' gold braid. Her eyes were black and her complexion almost as dark as a quadroon's. She got that from her mother, who had Aztec blood in her."

"There was a Mexican boy whose father owned a ranch near the Herrara property that was brought up with Paquita. He was just the same age, and they were just like brothers. Least-aways it seemed to me that Paquita was more like a brother to

THE TWO MEN WERE SINKING LOWER.

Jose Serrano than a sister. But I reckon they was more like lovers from the very first.

"They was always together till one day a young Englishman come out here to be a rancher. He was the sleekest looking feller I ever see. Edward Allston was his name, and he was a thoroughbred and no mistake. I didn't see him ridin' about with Paquita till some time after his comin' here; then I used to see 'em together often. It didn't seem to me that if the Englishman wanted her the little Mexican would stand a ghost of a chance. But, while she was with the Britisher a good deal, she didn't drop the Mexican. She appeared to be just as fond of him as ever. But what kind of fondness it was, now that Allston had come along, I didn't know. It seemed to me that sooner or later the little chap would find out that he was nowhere and the Britisher had the right o' way."

"I used to meet Paquita ridin' fust with one and then with the other of these men. When she was with Jose he looked sullen, and I reckoned she was tryin' to make him believe she didn't care nothin' at all about Allston. When she was with Allston I reckoned she was tryin' to bring him under her spell. They was a fine contrast, them two, she a dark Spanish beauty, he a fair haired, blue eyed Britisher. It didn't appear to me that he was more interested in her than if she'd been any other gal. It was the way she slung them big black eyes about that made me think she was tryin' to lasso him."

"The reason I took all this interest in the matter was that I was as fond o' Paquita as if she'd been my own little gal. One day I overtook her ridin' along the road alone. After awhile I said somethin' against the Englishman just to see how she'd take it. She fired up, you bet. Then I told her I thought Jose Herrara was worth three of Edward Allston. She looked kind o' funny, but didn't say nothin'."

"Well, little gal, I said when I left her, 'better decide between 'em. It would be cruel to keep 'em on the anxious seat always.'

"I don't know," she said, "that I have the privilege of decidin' between 'em."

"With that she cantered away, kind o' plim."

"I knew well enough that so far as Jose Herrara was concerned she could have him whenever she wanted him. But I didn't know anything about her havin' the Englishman."

"But as time wore on I saw Paquita and Allston more and more together, while Serrano seemed to be dropped out o' the race. It was perfectly natural that a fine lookin' man with swell manners should supplant a boy who didn't show up for much except that he was a very good kind of a feller. He'd been about the only person Paquita had ever come across for a lover, and when somethin' better turned up it was natural she should gradually let go her hold on the first and get a grip on the second."

"But the time come when it was plain enough that the Englishman had been landed and was layin' on his side gaspin'. What I mean by that is that the gal had woven a spell about him he couldn't resist, and he was dead gone on her. From that time she did not seem so struck on him as she was before. That's the way with all o' us—when we once git a thing we don't care so much about it as we thought we did. That's what I thought was the case with Paquita, but them as knew told me I was wrong. They said she was in love with Allston and was goin' to marry him."

"The race was comin' to a finish, with big odds on Allston. Least-aways, it would 'a' been ridiculous for Paquita to stick to a boy lover when she could git a man and a fine man at that. But she didn't seem to want to decide."

"One day Paquita was out on her horse, got up, as usual, in her Mexican toggery, a revolver at her side and a lariat at the pommel of her saddle, when she saw the two men who was courtin' her ridin' toward each other. She wondered what they was goin' to do. She didn't want 'em to fight—fight is, all along she had been keepin' Serrano from pickin' a quarrel with Allston. Then she remembered that there was a quicksand between 'em, an' she began to worry lest one o' 'em would git into it. She reckoned Jose Serrano knew all about it, but she wasn't sure Allston did. They was a ridin' kind o' reckless, especially Serrano, and she made up her mind there war goin' to be a fracas. She war bound to stop it, so she started for 'em."

"Well, before she reached 'em they met. She saw that Serrano was talkin' mighty savage to Allston, while Allston was a-keepin' his temper and patten' his horse, which seemed restive, to keep him quiet. Paquita rode on as fast as she could make her beast go, dreadin' every minute to see the two men come to blows. Then she noticed that there seemed to be somethin' the matter with both their horses. Serrano went on talkin' excitedly, but Allston stopped payin' any attention to him and was lashin' his horse. The horse seemed to be makin' a great effort to do somethin', but didn't do nothin'. Then Serrano's horse was a-makin' the same efforts."

"Paquita turned pale, for she knew that both her lovers had struck the quicksand, and once in it there was no chancin' for either o' 'em to get out. She made her horse do her best, usin' whip and spur, but she was ridin' across country, with no road, and the goin' was bad. The two men were sinkin' lower and lower and shoutin' like mad for help. Paquita was the only person to hear 'em, and there was little prospect she'd reach 'em before they sunk out o' sight. She was only a gal anyway."

"When she rode up to 'em their horses' heads was the only part of either critter above the sand and both men had sunk to the waist. Allston, bein' the heaviest, had sunk a little lower than Serrano. Paquita wrung her hands for a moment, wild at not bein' able to help 'em, each o' 'em lookin' at her pitifully. Then she remembered her lariat. Quick as a flash she unwound and poised it ready to throw. Each man was up to his armpits. Even if she had time to save one o' 'em she wouldn't have time to save the other."

"This is where the time come I was tellin' you about at the beginnin' o' this yarn, where the gal had to decide which one of the two men she loved, or, rather, the love for one o' 'em that was in her decided the matter for her. Swingin' the loop around three or four times, she let it go and it shot out over the quicksand."

"Which o' them two fellers do you suppose the loop fell on? Why, the little Mexican. When it come to the pint the child love that had growed like a young twig was stronger than the new thing that had come when Paquita was growed."

"The rope fell true and in a moment was around Jose's shoulders under his arms. Paquita had the other end fastened to the pommel of her saddle, and, startin' her horse gently, so as not to break the rope, he pulled the Mexican out. Then she fell in a faint, but Serrano didn't waste no time on her. He threw the lasso to Allston, who caught it in his hands. Serrano was tuggin' away, tryin' to pull the Britisher out, when a horseman appeared, and, coming up, lent a hand. Together they hauled Allston on to firm ground."

"That was the end o' the rivalry between these two men. Allston went back to England and married the daughter of a lord. Serrano married Paquita. All of which goes to show that if a gal is in doubt between two lovers she kin find out which one she wants by havin' a chance to save the life of only one o' 'em."

Our 23rd Business Year!

Twenty-three years ago we began to handle FERTILIZERS in a small way. During all these years we have endeavored to give our trade the best goods on the market, full value for their money, with the result that each year has brought us increased orders with larger sales. At the beginning of this season, (1910) we find ourselves in better shape than ever before to handle this branch of our business, and we hope with the facilities we now have to make this the banner year for our Company. Our new Fertilizer House, 36x80, just completed, and fully equipped with modern machinery, enables us to mix, bag, and deliver 30 to 40 tons per day.

WE MIX IT WHILE YOU WAIT!

The advantages of our present method over the old (Shovels and Screens) are in evidence on every side. Cannot explain on paper, just take time enough to come and see for yourself, and be convinced that we are in a position to satisfy your wants along this line, and do it satisfactorily, as we have once of the best plants in Western Maryland. You will see the different ingredients in bulk, and you will see them go through the mixer, over the screens, into the bag, ready for delivery. What you see you must believe, and you will find our goods in better condition than ever before. We offer Two Specials, ½ - 8 - and 1, For General Purposes.

1 - 8 - and 4, Specially for Corn and Wheat.

These goods will be sold at attractive prices, and guaranteed to be equal to any on the market of the same Analysis.

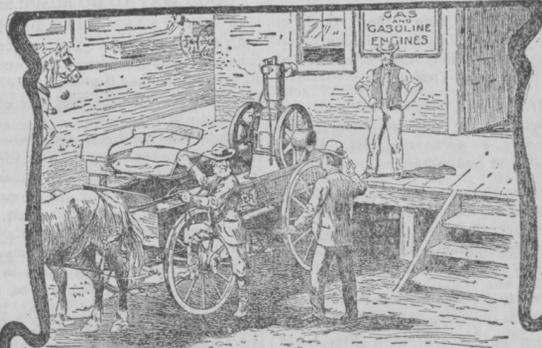

Buyers who furnish sacks get a reduction of $1.00 per ton, but empty sacks cannot be returned for credit.

We want your trade for Spring and Fall. Come and see us, or our Agents; if we do not have what you want, will be glad to quote you prices on any formula you may suggest.

Very Truly,

Mrs. R. L. Waybright, of Baltimore, visited at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Hockensmith. Mrs. Cleve Plank, of Fairfield, Pa., is spending a few days with Mrs. Hockensmith, now.

We are indebted to Hon. Jos. A. Goulden for an extended write-up of the Grangers' Picnic, both last week and this, and trust that the large amount of space donated may be of proportionate benefit to our readers.

Mr. E. G. Kiser, formerly of Fairfield, Neb., has removed to Selden, Kansas. He states that on August 5th., he sold at Public Sale a number of horses, cattle and hogs; some farm machinery and furniture, and made a good sale. He also says, "We will not have much fruit this year, but had good crops of wheat, hay and oats, and the prospects are good for corn, as the rain came at the right time to save it."

On last Saturday evening, a horse driven by Mr. Harry Hiltzbrich, became frightened at a runaway mule, and getting beyond control of Mr. H., dashed into H. S. Hill's automobile, on Baltimore St., near the Savings Bank. The occupants of the buggy were all thrown out, and Mrs. Hiltzbrich was severely cut about the face and otherwise badly bruised, while the rest escaped with bruises. The buggy was badly damaged.

Gardening, in Taneytown, has its drawbacks. In addition to the difficulty in preparing the soil, planting and cultivating it, one has to contend with the dogs and poultry of neighbors, as well as the thieving habits of boys, old and young. Evidently the "Golden Rule," by some, is replaced by the rule—do your neighbors more than they do you. There are numerous complaints along this line—too many for a civilized community.

George Nelson Reid died at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Sophia Clingan, in Taneytown, on Wednesday evening, August 17th. For some time past he has been afflicted with asthma and dropsy, which caused his death. He was 73 years of age, and leaves two brothers and two sisters: Messrs. Levi D., and U. Tobias Reid; Mrs. Sophia Clingan and Mrs. Annie Rowe. Funeral services were held at the house this (Friday) afternoon, interment being made in the Lutheran cemetery.

Cheer Up; You Have a Chance
Tell us not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream;
That we blot out all the skin milk
And the trusts get all the cream.
Life is earnest, so get busy;
Swing your upper and lower jaw;
When good things are flying by you,
Just reach out and take a grab.

Birthday Party.

(For the Record.)
A very pleasant surprise party was given at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Clouser, in honor of Mr. Clouser's birthday. At about half past eight o'clock the guests began to arrive, and at last but not least came Mr. Luther Copenhaver with his graphophone, who entertained the older folks with some of his choice selections, while the younger set enjoyed themselves on the lawn playing games their fathers and mothers played in days gone by.

At about eleven o'clock, all were invited to the dining-room, to partake of the many delicacies of the season which had been prepared for the occasion, to which all did ample justice. After thanking host and hostess for their kind hospitality, and wishing Mr. Clouser many more such birthdays, all returned to their homes; feeling they had spent a most delightful evening. Those present were:

David S. Clouser and wife, Mrs. Phoebe Koons, Luther Copenhaver and wife, Harry Wantz and wife, John H. Hawk and wife, John Ridinger and wife, Samuel Hyser and wife, William Rittase and wife, Edward Myers and wife, William D. Ohler and wife; Messrs. Elmer, Paul and Marion Hawk, Ralph and Tom Fox, James Sanders, Earle Bowers, Roy Reaver, Verley, Preston, Cover and Melvin Clouser; Nevin and Fern Ridinger, Lloyd Humbert, Aiva, Clarence and Ralph Hyser, Jacob Myers, Lawrence and Roscoe Rittase, Denton Slick, Frank Miller, Delmont Koons, Misses Pauline Ohler, Stella Rittase, Gertrude Ridinger, Bertie, Ina, Oneida and Irene Hawk, Edna Hyser, Mary and Lillie Sanders, Ethel Wantz, Iva Clouser and Phoebe Koons.

Birthday Surprise.

Mr. Samuel J. Warner, of Johnsville, Md., was given a birthday surprise, on Sunday last, by his children. The following are names of those who attended:

S. J. Warner and wife; Amos Warner, wife and children, Verley, Madeline, Lease and Harold; Preston Grabill, wife and two sons, Samuel and Charles; of Baltimore; Charles Carbaugh and wife; Charles Lippy and wife; Luther Shank, wife and son, Melvin, of Baltimore; S. W. Warner and wife; John Houck and wife; Wm. G. Fogle and wife; Messrs. Vachel Davis, of Baltimore; Bryan Foreman, John Smith; Misses Carrie Timmons, of Ohio; Malinda Warner and Mary Lare.

GOOD WAY TO DO BUSINESS.

In ordering a 50c. bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at 25 cents, Robt. S. McKinney is giving one of the greatest trade chances ever offered to the people of Taneytown.

If food does not digest well, if there is gas or pain in the stomach, if the tongue is coated and the breath bad, if there is constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific will cure you. If it does not, you have druggist Robt. S. McKinney's personal guarantee to return your money.

This remarkable remedy comes in the form of tiny granules, and can be carried in the vest pocket or purse. It is very popular in New York City, and it is not unusual to see someone after a meal at one of the large hotels or restaurants, take a dose of this specific, knowing that it will prevent the uncomfortable feeling which frequently follows a hearty meal.

Perpetual Motion in Clocks.

An astonishing claim comes from Burton-on-Trent, England, where a Mr. F. Bentley says he has solved the problem of perpetual motion for stationary clocks. He was awarded a gold medal at Liverpool in 1902 for a clock which has not been wound in ten years, and is still going. The latest invention, which eclipses that clock, is actuated by electricity, secured direct from the earth, without battery, and its life depends on the almost frictionless working parts.

The clock is undoubtedly a marvel of ingenuity, and the inventor, who has spent much time in considering methods of applying negative and positive currents, is an electrician of some note.

The clock, which started many months ago, has never stopped once, and it is the marvel of all who see it, for, without the usual working parts of a spring time-piece, the pendulum swings merrily on without apparent cause, being driven back from side to side through electrical agency, the wires going direct into the earth.

Mr. Bentley will not disclose how he achieves the singular result, and is awaiting full patent recognition, but there the clock is, and if any attempt is made to stop it instantly the pressure is released the ticking goes on as before.

Mr. Bentley asserts that the fact of the motive power remaining constant and unchanged should insure absolutely correct time. Making every allowance for wear and tear, the inventor is convinced that it is no exaggeration to state that the clock will run 60 years with ease, provided that the few wheels within it do not wear down.

Thirty-six Governors this year.

At the coming fall election more states will elect governors than ever before in the history of the Union. For the first time Oregon is to join the list of commonwealths electing their executives in November. Heretofore the Oregon state election has been held in June. A total of 36 governors are to be elected this fall. Thirty-two will be voted for at the general elections in November. Three states—Vermont, Maine and Arkansas—will vote for governor next month, and Georgia will elect its executive in October.

The gubernatorial contests in some of the states are of a more than ordinarily interesting character. The elections in others will be of a purely funfuntory character, the election of the Republican or the Democratic candidate, as the case may be, being a foregone conclusion. Socialists and Prohibitionists will have candidates for governor in a majority of the States, and in some of them they are expected to poll a considerable vote.

An Arab Legend.

"There is none so poor but there is one poorer."
A poor Arab spent his last barn on a handful of dates and went up on a high cliff to eat them and die. As he threw the stones over a lean hand shot out below and caught them.

"Ho!" said he. "Why do you catch my date stones?"

"Because, O brother," answered a weak voice. "I have not eaten these three days, and Allah has sent these stones to save my life."

"Praise be to Allah," answered the first man. "for he has saved me also, for here is one poorer than I."

And both men went into the city.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654 by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany. Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

Schoolboy Definitions.

Here are some definitions from the schoolroom: "A Jacobite is a man descended from Jacob." "Snoring is our breath meeting the air which is coming in our mouth." "Sneezing is a kind of 'coughing' in the throat." Another boy writes: "When you are cold the inside of your body rumbles and then it makes a noise which is called sneezing." "A telephone is a kind of long wire with a spout at each end."—Westminster Gazette.

A Good Opportunity.

"Your pa's coming down on Saturday. I wonder if that would be a good time to speak to him?"
"Yes. When ma tells him what she's spent down here he'll be glad to get rid of the lot of us!"—Comic Cuts.
