

NEWS NOTES HERE AND THERE

Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

The Republican state ticket was elected in Michigan, on Monday, by a safe majority. Two counties were changed from wet to dry, while two others went from dry to wet.

Good Friday this year falls on April 14. It was on Good Friday that President Lincoln was shot. This is the second time since 1865 that this similarity of dates has occurred. The first was in 1876.

Mrs. Sparks, a W. C. T. U. organizer, will deliver a lecture at Mt. Zion (Haugh's) church, on Easter Sunday evening, at 7.30 o'clock. On Easter Monday evening there will be an "Easter service" in the same church. All are cordially invited to attend both services.

Hon. James A. O'Gorman, Supreme Court Justice for New York county, was elected U. S. Senator, last Friday, by the N. Y. legislature. Senator O'Gorman was supported by the Tammany vote as well as the insurgents, which is an indication that Tammany leader, Murphy, was satisfied, if not wholly pleased.

The Governor, last week, appointed Charles B. Loyd, of Talbot county, to the additional membership of the State Road Commission, making seven members. This additional member was provided by the last legislature, but the Governor has withheld making an appointment until last week. There may, or may not, be political significance in the action.

The increase in the number and severity of storms throughout the country, has caused some of the Storm Insurance Companies to increase their rates. From the present outlook, there will be a general increase before the summer ends. In some sections storm losses have largely exceeded the fire losses, while there has been a steady growth in storm destruction everywhere.

The following appointments for this section of Maryland were made by the M. E. Conference, on Tuesday: Hampstead, A. H. McKinley; Liganore, T. M. Dickey; Mount Airy, B. J. McGovern; New Windsor, J. T. Marsh; Sykesville, to be supplied; Thurmont, J. W. Hamersley; Union Ridge, C. H. Hastings; Walkersville, A. C. Day; Westminster, L. E. Bennett; Winfield, H. C. Hall.

Dr. P. R. Ubler of the Peabody Institute, takes issue with the authorities who have been predicting a visitation of locusts this year, in Maryland. He says there will be no visitation until 1919, and that the 13-year sort have no abiding place here at all, but only south of the Potomac; that there are a very few locusts, every year, in spots, but these do not represent the periodical visitations, and are not worth considering.

The Agricultural Department is preparing a campaign against manufacturers and dispensers of fake insecticides and fungicides. The last Congress appropriated $87,000 to be used by the Department in warring on those who have sold poisons with the promise that they would kill rats, bugs, insects and all classes of pests that infest home and field, and for which suffering humanity is willing to pay almost any price to be rid of, but which have failed as panaceas.

The Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., announces the detection of a new counterfeit $10 United States note (Buffalo note) and describes it as follows: "Series of 1901, check letter C; W. T. Vernon, Register of the Treasury; Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States; portraits of Lewis and Clark. This counterfeit is a photographic production on paper of excellent quality. There has been no attempt to color the seal number or large numeral on the face of the note. The back of the note is a reddish brown instead of green. This counterfeit should not deceive even the ordinarily careful handler of money."

Because of Governor Crothers' investigation of the police department and the evidence given at the inquiry the past week by clergymen and other gambling places and saloons being open on Sunday, in defiance of the law, the lid was never closed tighter than it was last Sunday. There had been allegations made of police protection of certain places, but if such were the case the police certainly favored no one. While the "lid" has been down at other times, the thirsty ones who knew the "trick" could generally find a sidelong or gateway open at some place. But Sunday there was nothing. Even places which, it has been charged, had a "pull" were closed tight.

Ten years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Judges Rottler and Peter in the Circuit Court in Rockville upon Charles Saffel, a young resident of Gaithersburg, Montgomery county, who was convicted on an indictment charging statutory burning. It is alleged that he set fire to Summit Heights Hotel at Gaithersburg, which was destroyed, about midnight January 28. The property belonged to John B. Diamond and Ignatius T. Funks, of Gaithersburg, and was unoccupied at the time although furnished. The loss was about $10,000, half of which was covered by insurance. It was not contended by the defense that Saffel did not set fire to the building, but it was claimed that he had always been weak-minded and was unable to appreciate the seriousness of such an offense.

Taneytown-Westminster Road Meeting.

The road meeting, last Saturday, was rather sparsely attended, considering the importance of it, and yet, a larger attendance could not have been accomplished. The meeting was presided over by E. O. Garner, with P. B. Englar as secretary. The object of the meeting was stated by Edw. E. Reindollar to be to decide whether the subscription to purchase the Meadow Branch pike should be collected and used for that purpose, or whether it would be best to secure a more positive guarantee of the early improvement of the whole road from Westminster to Taneytown, before subscribers at this end should buy a pike at the extreme Westminster end.

Short addresses were made by Messrs. E. E. Reindollar, E. O. Garner, D. J. Hesson, James D. Haines, Edwin F. Smith, J. S. Fick, P. B. Englar and others, and the conclusion was reached that it would be unfair to the subscribers to the pike purchase fund, who are largely residents of Taneytown district, to ask them to invest in the Meadow Branch pike without a reasonable assurance that at least three miles of state road be constructed at the Taneytown end within a reasonable time.

The following committee, E. E. Reindollar, D. J. Hesson and E. F. Smith, was appointed to act in conjunction with the County Commissioners in appearing before the Road Commission, at a time to be designated by the Commission, the said committee to have power to take final action as representing the pike subscribers.

The Committee appeared before the Road Commission, this week, and it is understood that the prospects for the ultimate improvement of this road are favorable, and practically assured; but as we are not in possession of the actual results, it will be best to make no further comment at this time.

More Turnpike Purchases.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Elliott City and Clarksville Turnpike Company it was agreed, subject to the approval of the stockholders of the company, to accept the State Roads Commission's offer of $10,000 for the Elliott City and Clarksville Turnpike road, which runs from Elliott City to Clarksville. With the purchase of this road by the State there will remain but one more toll road in Howard county, which is the Tridelpia turnpike, about six miles long. There are now pending negotiations with this company for that road, and that will make all the roads of Howard county free.

Judge Keedy, on Monday, ratified the Sheriff's jury's condemnation of the Hagerstown and Conococheague turnpike, which has been purchased by the State Roads Commission for $22,500. The deed will pass in a few days, when the tollgates will be removed. The turnpike has been a toll road since 1821. The State Roads Commission has the money in hand and is ready to turn it over for the turnpike property as soon as the deed is drawn up.

County Democrats Organize.

The Democratic central committee of this county has begun to make preparations for the fall campaign. The committee met on Monday, in Westminster, with a full attendance and elected Dr. Thomas J. Coonan as chairman to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Benjamin F. Crouse. Frank I. Lewis, of Mount Airy, was elected secretary. A committee, consisting of one from each district, to formulate a plan for holding the direct primaries was appointed, as follows: Taneytown—Daniel J. Hesson. Uniontown—O. Edward Dodder. Myers—A. W. Feeser. Woolerys—John George Hoffman. Freedom—Albert F. Arrington. Manchester—George W. Brown. Westminster—Dr. Thomas J. Coonan. Hampstead—Peter Buchman. Franklin—Francis A. Crawford. Middleburg—E. O. Cash. New Windsor—David P. Smelser. Union Bridge—C. D. Spurrier. Mount Airy—Frank J. Lewis. Berrett—Basil Dorsey.

College Engineering Course.

Gettysburg, Pa., April 3rd.—Prof. Richard S. Kirby, C. E., graduate of Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, has been nominated as the head of the new engineering department of Gettysburg College. Prof. Kirby has had wide experience as a practical engineer and teacher of engineering and comes very highly recommended. For three years he taught engineering at Yale University; he has been employed on the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers on river and harbor surveys and as resident engineer on fortifications at Plum Island. Prof. Kirby has served two terms as city engineer of Port Chester, N. Y., and is the author of Laboratory Notes on Cement Testing and a course of lectures on Engineering Specifications.

The courses in Civil Engineering and Municipal Engineering have been so arranged that the foundation work in languages, mathematics, sciences, etc., is done during the Freshman and Sophomore years, while the technical engineering studies are given during the Junior and Senior years. This makes it possible for young men who have finished either the Freshman or Sophomore year in any college to come to Gettysburg College and graduate in the engineering course without loss of time.

Notices of Subscription Expirations.

The Postoffice Department has decided that a post-card containing notice that a subscription is one year in arrears, when accompanied by a request for payment, is unavailable. We have therefore discontinued our card forms, and for a while, at least, will continue to send such notices sealed. We trust that our patrons will not put us to this extra expense, but that all will watch the date label on their paper and remit without being notified.

MR. BRYAN IN POLITICS.

His Intervention in Senate Politics Causes Division in the Party Ranks.

The activity of Mr. Bryan in Washington politics is the political sensation of the hour, the incident responsible for the election of a Democratic leader in the Senate, which Mr. Bryan thinks is equivalent to leadership of the party in National affairs.

Senator Martin, of Virginia, has been looked upon as being likely to succeed Senator Money, the old leader, and Mr. Bryan opposes him as being the candidate of the reactionary, or "insurgent" element in the Democratic party. The contest, as it has developed in the last two days, has become a Bryan and an anti-Bryan issue. Every Democratic Senator opposed to Mr. Bryan has lined up behind Martin, and this fact is exceedingly resented of the activity of the Nebraska man and what it regards as his unwarranted interference.

Senator Martin's friends likewise repudiate the idea that he is Senator Bailey's candidate for the leadership or that he is allied with any reactionary element. Senator Bailey is openly anti-Bryan. They assert that he did not become a candidate voluntarily, but consented to the use of his name after he had been requested to make the fight by a number of his colleagues, who insisted that the party could more easily get together on him than on any other Democrat. It was at the urgent insistence of these men, some of them friends of Bailey and some of them his enemies, that Mr. Martin entered the field.

The Bryanites have endeavored to bring the question of the tariff into the controversy and argue that because of the many times Mr. Martin voted with Aldrich on the schedule of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff bill in the last session of Congress the Democratic party cannot afford to choose Martin as its leader in the Senate.

The situation is again bringing to the front the possibility of Mr. Bryan again becoming a Presidential candidate, especially as he has announced his opposition to Governor Harman, of Ohio. There are many who think that his present activity is scarcely warranted because of mere interest in the welfare of the party.

Meeting of School Commissioners.

A regular meeting of the Board of School Commissioners was held on Monday, April 3rd. All the members were present.

The trustees of Keysville school came before the Board and renewed their contention that the schoolhouse at Keysville is not suitable for accommodating the pupils who are in that community. They went away with the idea that the matter would be specially looked into by the School Board.

Attorney for the Board, F. Neal Parke, Esq., came before the Commissioners, and set forth the legal status of the law regulating the issuing of permits for pupils to attend a school in an adjoining county. The Board took some action in regard to more equitable adjustment of the rule at present governing the issuing of permits.

After some discussion of the regulations under which High Schools of the second group may be opened, Dr. Wm. E. Gaver suggested the propriety of requesting Dr. Stephens, State Superintendent, to go and examine the school at Mt. Airy, in order that the Board might better be informed as to its status in regard to second group High Schools.

The Board waited on the County Commissioners and asked for the appropriation of $5000.00 as a special appropriation to meet the increase of teachers' salaries for the current year. In the fixing of teachers' salaries last October for the present year, the School Commissioners added about $6500.00 to the payroll, as was published at the time. The County Commissioners promised special appropriation of $5000.00 to meet the payment of teachers' salaries on Friday, 7th.

After the transaction of the routine business of the office, the Board adjourned.

Sample Copies Free.

We will be glad to mail sample copies of the RECORD free for a few weeks, to newcomers in any neighborhood, if our friends will kindly send us the names of such persons. These papers will be plainly marked "sample copy" and receiving them will not place the person addressed under any obligation to subscribe. We simply take the chance of the paper recommending itself.

Scientific Temperance Address.

In response to requests, we will reproduce the second of Dr. Taylor's temperance addresses, as delivered in Taneytown, on page 6 of the RECORD. As the address is quite long, it will be published in three instalments, beginning with the present issue. For those who had not the chance of hearing Dr. Taylor, the next best thing is to read what he had to say. As his statements are all backed by the best scientific authority, they must be accepted as correct.

A resolution asking for the withdrawal of the United States army from the border of Mexico and for the submission to Congress by the President of all papers bearing on the Mexican situation was introduced in the House, on Wednesday, by Victor Berger, the new Socialist Congressman from Milwaukee. Mr. Berger referred to the "despotism and brutality of the Mexican governing class" which, he says, have goaded the people of that country into revolution. No attempt has been made, says the resolution, to invade the United States, but the presence of the American army on the border line is being used by the Mexican ruling interests to intimidate revolutionists.

A Ruling Important to Churches.

A writer in the Lutheran Observer, L. Russell Alden, of Washington, D. C., in speaking of loans often negotiated by the officers of churches, cites a case which makes it clear that such loans are commonly made in an improper manner. He says:

"Such loans should be negotiated by the treasurer only under express authorization of the church council, and, indeed, if obtained through a business-like bank, specific authorization will be required. However, the point which we here desire to present most strongly relates to the form of the note given for the loan. An actual case—that of Powers v. Briggs, reported in 79 Illinois at page 493—will be more illuminating than any abstract discussion. In that case the signers were sued on two similar notes, given for a church organ, the first of which read as follows: 'Chicago, May 17, 1870. One year after date, we, the Trustees [note the form of the Trustees] of the Seventh Presbyterian Church, promise to pay to the order of H. G. Powers Six Hundred Dollars, value received, with interest at six per cent. per annum. [Now note the signature] A. H. Briggs, Louis B. Kelley, John Corbett, F. D. Marshall, Trustees.'"

This note was held to be the individual note of the makers, and not to bind the church. In its decision, the Court said that, although the words "the trustees of the Seventh Presbyterian Church" appear in the body of the note, and the word "trustees" is appended to the defendants' signatures, there are no words implying an undertaking on the part of the corporation. The corporation is not assumed to be acting by or through the defendants, nor does it even appear the defendants act for, or on behalf of the corporation. The language clearly indicates that the defendants were trustees when they signed the notes but not that the corporation promised to pay them." In other words, the mere addition of a title to the name of an individual is, in the law of negotiable instruments, simply a superfluity.

The correct way to have made the note in question is thus: One year after date, the Seventh Presbyterian Church promises to pay [note—we, the trustees of the Seventh Presbyterian Church, promise to pay] but the Church itself promises to pay Six Hundred Dollars, etc. Signed, Seventh Presbyterian Church, by A. H. Briggs, Louis B. Kelley, and the rest, Trustees. Under this form of note, a proper corporate note, the corporation itself makes the promise and signs the note, and the trustees appear merely as agents.

I am aware that, before discounting small church notes not secured by mortgage or deed of trust, banks are accustomed to require two or three personal indorsements as security, and that in such case either the church treasurer or some member of the church council find themselves practically compelled to obligate themselves individually on the church paper. But no such practice exists in the case of church notes of large amount, secured on land, and it is not only extremely unbusiness-like, but also wrong, to fasten on any one member or group of members in the church a separate personal liability in such a case."

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

MONDAY, April 3rd., 1911.—Wesley M. Geiman, acting executor of Abraham I. Geiman, deceased, received order to sell stock and reported sale of same.

John W. Yingling, administrator of John Yingling, deceased, returned inventory of personal property and received order to sell personal property.

Jacob V. Frounfelder, administratrix of Jacob Frounfelder, deceased, returned report of sale of personal property.

Rachel J. Leppo, administratrix of Jesse W. Leppo, deceased, returned report of sale of personal property and received order confirming sale of stock and directing its transfer.

Caleb W. Harris, administrator, w. a. of Catherine Harris, deceased, returned inventories of money and debts.

Charles A. Runkles, administrator of Albert H. Runkles, deceased, received order to transfer mortgage.

Elizabeth H. Rakestraw, guardian of Helen E. Rakestraw and James E. Rakestraw, infants, received order authorizing use of $100. for said infants' funds to be used for their education.

TUESDAY, April 4th., 1911.—Charles E. Fink, executor of Jacob A. Will, deceased, settled his second and final account.

William A. Fishman, administrator of Sarah E. Fishman, deceased, returned inventories of personal property and debts and settled his first and final account.

Edgar M. Bush and J. Arthur Bush, executors of Margaret Emily Bay Armacost, deceased, returned report of sale of personal property, also report of sale of real estate upon which court granted an order nisi.

George L. Stockdale, administrator of Conrad Schnaubel, deceased, returned report of sale of personal property.

Letters of administration upon the estate of Nimrod Armstrong, deceased, granted unto Henry D. Gentsler, who received warrant to appraise, also order to notify creditors.

Charles W. Arbaugh, executor of William Arbaugh, deceased, settled his first and final account.

The Anti-Saloon League Essay Contest, in which $1000 was offered in prizes ($500 first prize) for the best four essays on "What it Costs Annual High License Revenue" has closed. The time expired Saturday, April 1, at midnight, and on Monday the Headquarters Committee took charge of the seventy-six essays submitted and with such assistance as they may secure from specially qualified temperance leaders, will proceed promptly to examine the essays and make the awards. As the writers were allowed 5000 words, and the essays must be examined by a number of different men who can give only part of their time to the task, it will be at least a month and probably longer before the decision can be announced.

EXPLAINS TO CONGRESSMEN.

President gives Reasons, in Confidence, for Warlike Movements of Army.

Washington, April 3.—Now that President Taft has told the members of Congress the "real reason" for the mobilization of practically one-fourth of the entire American Army in the Southwest and of a goodly portion of the navy in that vicinity, everyone is asking what this reason is. So far the President has explained the situation only in the strictest confidence, having sent for members of the two Congressional committees having to do with foreign affairs in order that they may know the real situation and be prepared to anticipate any radical action on the part of Congress.

Representatives Sulzer, Flood and Garner, all three new Democratic members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, were in conference with the President on the subject today. Whether they were sent for or went voluntarily to the White House was not disclosed, but the President apparently was expecting them or some one to ask for the information, for he had statements prepared awaiting their arrival.

None of the Congressmen would discuss the visit in any way upon leaving the White House further than to say it had been explained to them; that they had been given statements explaining in detail all the conditions which the President held to warrant the sudden mobilization which started the whole world. They stated that the documents and verbal explanations of the details were given to them by the President in the strictest confidence, except for discussion with other members of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

This secrecy has naturally led many persons to the belief that the President has mentioned Japan in explaining his reasons for the military action. It is not understood how even the most possible conditions in Mexico, anticipating even the entire overthrow of Diaz and his whole regime, could warrant such secrecy on the part of the Administration. If the movement were justifiable by an impending volcanic eruption in Mexico, there would be no harm in letting the public know it, these people feel. The good intentions of Mexico have never been doubted by anyone, and any anticipated emergency that might require the presence of the troops so near that country would not mean that hostilities were feared, but rather that lives of Americans were endangered.

Feeling between certain classes of Americans and Japanese is known to have led to several embarrassing situations between Japan and the United States within the last three years. It is no longer a secret that the movement of the Atlantic fleet around the world was for the principal purpose of impressing Japan. Diplomatic and other official relations since then proved conclusively to the American authorities the value of that movement.

To justify the present mobilization as related to Japan there are members of Congress and others who believe that war must be regarded as practically imminent. The reported discovery of the loose end of a secret Japanese cable at Guam, the American naval station, might be sufficient to justify this, in the opinion of some. At any rate, the fact remains that while the Atlantic Cable has been stripped of coast artillerymen to form the special infantry brigades at Galveston and San Diego, the companies in the Pacific fortifications are being recruited as rapidly as possible up to full strength, and the garrisons in the Hawaiian Islands are being strengthened as rapidly as possible.—Sun.

Mayorality and Saloon Question.

Anti-Saloon Sup't Anderson says the liquor question had a great deal to do, quietly, with the result of the Baltimore primaries, and that the League did not care to take a hand in a mixed situation. He says:

"It is useless to try to escape the fact that so long as the Legislature controls the liquor question, and the gang controls the Legislature, the boss can either promise favors or threaten punishment and compel the liquor interests not only to line up but also to put up large sums of money to be used in carrying the city for the benefit of the boss."

"In this primary both were done. We are not making any charges of any sort concerning Mr. Preston personally, but Mr. Mahon and his crowd unquestionably have promised the saloonkeepers to reduce the license fee in Baltimore at the next legislative session, and also undoubtedly threatened that the Local Option bill would be passed unless the saloonkeepers fell into line. As it was the same gang that defeated the Local Option bill last time, this was very persuasive. The stronger the sentiment for local option the greater the leverage the gang and its boss have on the saloonkeepers. Mr. Mahon can force the liquor and vice interests into line even in an election where the Local Option bill is not involved for fear of what he may do or permit to be done to them at some other election when it is an issue."

Charles Harrison, democrat, was on Tuesday elected Mayor of Chicago for the fifth term, his plurality being about 18,000.

Three Nebraska towns—Beatrice, with a population of 10,000; Wymore, 2,700, and Red Cloud, 3,000—are today in the Socialist column, that party having elected Mayors in all three on Tuesday.

Messrs. John H. Mitten and C. Levene Price, formerly with the Sentinel, in Westminster, have opened a Job Printing office, on West Main St., and it is reported that in the near future they will publish a new Republican county paper.

The Assembling of Congress.

Chief interest in the assembling of Congress, on Tuesday, centered in the organization of the House. The galleries were crowded and on the floor were the wives and the relatives of many members for whom no place could be found elsewhere, and the crowds witnessed a spectacle that is worthy of the best there is in American politics. They saw the Democrats jubilant and unrestrained almost to madness in their happiness. They saw the Republicans splendid losers, for the applause that greeted Champ Clark, when in a graceful speech Mr. Mann, the new leader of the Republicans, introduced him as the next Speaker, was as hearty as were the almost frantic yells and cheers of the Democrats. It was a spectacle that might well bring cheer to every man that witnessed it.

"It is a great office," said Mr. Mann, when he had conducted Mr. Clark, the newly elected speaker to the chair, "and it is filled by a great man." The Republicans were so quick to join in their applause at the words that the Democrats could hardly claim to have begun it. It was a generous recognition that party men do not carry their political differences beyond election day; and undoubtedly no small degree of the cheers that echoed and re-echoed from the floor and the galleries came from the Democrats who appreciated the spirit shown by the Republicans.

In the Senate, for the first time in many years, there were Democrats enough to fill the entire Democratic side of the chamber. Year after year in the past Republican senators, sometimes as many as half a dozen, have had to find seats on the Democratic side, because there was no room on the majority side, but only one Republican sat with the Democrats, and there would have been room for him on the side of the dwindling majority had he chosen to join them. It was Mr. La Follette, and he remained among the Democrats at least so far as personal preference, because so far as he was concerned.

The Baltimore Primaries.

The Democratic "organization" won at the primaries, in Baltimore, on Tuesday, nominating James H. Preston for Mayor over the present incumbent, J. Barry Mahool. The contest was warmly waged, Mr. Mahool having the energetic support of both the Sun and the News. The vote was Preston 29,984, Mahool 20,745.

The Republicans made no effort to get out their vote, as it was a foregone conclusion that Ex-Mayor Timanus would win "hands down," consequently the vote cast was very light; Timanus 17,852 Torsch 4,642.

Baltimore is now due to have the hottest political battle, next month, that it has had for years. The Democratic candidates, in all probability, will not have a single paper supporting them, while Timanus is confidently claimed to be stronger than his party, with one good term as mayor to his credit.

Preparations are in progress for the establishment in Baltimore of a plant for the manufacture of cigars by machinery. Machines are now being installed to demonstrate their practicability. They will be in running order by Saturday. It is reported that enough capital has been pledged to insure the early installation of a plant capable of giving employment to 200 hands. The machines are operated by two persons, girls unskilled in the making of cigars. One feeds the tobacco filler, another the wrapper, and the machine does the rest. They emerge from the machine ready for packing. Two girls with one of these machines can turn out 8,000 cigars a day.

MARRIED.

CRABBS—LAMBERT.—At the parsonage of the Church of God, Uniontown, Md., March 22nd., 1911, by Rev. L. F. Murray, Gussie Crabbs and Miss Larcena Lambert, both of Taneytown, Md.

DIED.

Obituaries, poetry and resolutions, charged for at the rate of five cents per line. The regular death notices published free.

FLEAGLE.—Peter Eleagle, son of Daniel, deceased, died at his home in St. Johns, Mich., on Friday, March 31, after an illness of only a few days of heart disease. He was buried in their family plot, last Tuesday. He leaves a wife, two sons and three daughters; one brother, Jeremiah, in Detroit, Kansas; one sister, Mrs. R. O. Stockbridge, Westboro, Mass.

Mr. Eleagle left his home in Copperville, Md., when but a boy, and went west. When the war broke out, he enlisted from Michigan; after the war he settled down in Green Brush, Clinton Co., Michigan, where he bought himself a farm of 120 acres. Was married twice; one son and two daughters with the first wife, three sons and one daughter with his second wife. He was 73 years and 7 days old. He never got back from the west to his old home where he was born and raised.

TAMMANY could not win with Sheehan, but it won all the same with O'Gorman. The insurgents could not beat Tammany, but it compelled it to elect a man of high type. The New York democracy is Tammany, but insurgency may be strong enough to give it a better flavor than it has had.

DR. AKED, of New York, is evidently a first rank woman suffragist, as he is reported to have said: "I believe that to give woman the ballot would bring nearly as great a blessing to the world as the coming of Christ." After that, there is no use in trying to go him one better; but it must be remembered that Dr. Aked is going to California, because New York is too small for him.

THE APPOINTMENT by the Governor of a seventh member of the Road Commission is variously regarded, but as the act is legal the Governor is entitled to the benefit of all doubt, until the significance of the act is perfectly plain. One thing is sure; the odd number is likely to prevent any dead-locks, and is reasonably sure to throw the control of the Board more fully within the power of the Governor.

THE PROBABILITY is that President Taft will not tell the public all he knows about the movement of troops to the Mexican border, for the reason that so doing might be "incompatible with the public service"—the giving away of state secrets. While the enemies of the President are very likely to "knock" him for getting up a war scare, it is still more probable that the country will accept the explanations that will be given, and be satisfied, on the ground that "everybody's business is nobody's business."

THERE is a suspicion that the Post-office department, in forbidding the sending of statements of account, etc., by postal card, is playing for more revenue by compelling the increase of sealed letters. There is no sensible reason for forbidding the sending of a plain bill, accompanied by a proper request for payment, on a postal card. A "dun," accompanied by a threat, or notice of forced measures, is quite a different matter, though even that is protected by the secrecy of the mails, when on a post card.

IT TAKES a pretty big stretch of the imagination to realize the vast difference existing between even closely related localities. Last week's Emmitsburg Chronicle begins an editorial, "If you go abroad this summer—and you're likely to do—just bear in mind that on return there's something you'll go through, etc." Gee! How would that sort of confidential advice fit Taneytowners, or the average editorial reader of the RECORD? As Mr. Whatso says to Mr. Sherlock—"Strange?" But perhaps Brother Galt is writing for the benefit of his "Exchange" editors who are sure to read and swipe his best efforts? Sly, old fox, very sly! But, anyway, apologise to Walt Mason.

Alcohol and the Brain.

Among the many scientific facts presented by Dr. Taylor in his temperance lectures in Taneytown, last week, is one that stands out with great and convincing force; that even indulgence in a single glass of beer so affects the brain cells—those which control conscience, reason, will—that a man is led to commit acts which he would never dream of committing when in a perfectly normal mind, and that the very highest and noblest faculties of the brain are those first affected by alcohol.

This fact was connected with the statement that in Massachusetts fully three-fourths of the criminals in the penal institutions of the state were moderate, or occasional, drinkers, and not habitual drunkards, the truth being that tax-payers of this state—and in all states—are paying a tremendously larger portion of its tax money to support jails and courts because of crimes committed by the occasional user of alcohol, than for the same purpose for confirmed drunkards; in other words, for the so-called "respectable" patrons of saloons.

The gathering of statistics and the scientific investigation of such questions, now leave very little to guess-work, or to mere personal opinion. The records show the situation, and intelligent minds have full opportunity to controvert them if they can. It is facts such as these which knock the props from under such arguments as "personal liberty," and that some can drink and still exercise "full self-control." When the microscope shows weakened and disarranged brain cells, as the result of moderate drinking, a mere personal statement of full "personal self-control," falls flat as a physically impossible untruth.

Very many cases of common assault, and of arguments which lead to bad feeling, if nothing more, are due to the influence of a drink or two which starts the tongue to wagging and paralyzes the brain cells which represent caution, gentlemanliness and calm level headedness. A man need not be actually drunk, nor wholly irresponsible, in order to commit a crime or indiscretion; just a little stimulation of certain characteristics of the brain along with the paralyzation of certain other characteristics, is all that is needed. It is a common saying that a man has had a little "talking whiskey," and very often his condition is considered merely as a joke, whereas, as a matter of scientific fact, such a man is partly insane, and liable to do unusual things, as a result. The "feeling good" sensation produced by alcohol is never absolutely harmless, because it is due wholly to a temporary impairment of the functions of the brain.

Nor is it safe to indulge the thought that a "spree" occasionally, or a little regular moderate drinking, does no permanent harm. The brain does have considerable reproductive power, and if given a chance will usually reconstruct alcohol impaired cells; but there is a point, or injury, beyond which repairment cannot take place, even by the strict non-use of alcohol. The custom of drinking, therefore, is more than a mere habit which can be dropped at any time without danger; it is a custom which is apt to leave permanent brain injury.

As the real facts become better known, and the real facts must look them in the face. Those who have supreme confidence in their "will power" must heed the fact that they can have no will other than that which their brain gives them; hence, a diseased, or interfered with brain, cannot possibly give them a perfectly normal and fully controlled will. There is just as much sense in holding a lighted match to a straw stack, and saying it will not burn, as to pour alcohol into the stomach and say that it will not find its way to the brain and leave destruction there. Demonstrated facts are against all such reasoning.

Another Road Loan.

This is one of the important questions to come before the legislature, and it is time for the voters and tax-payers to begin to think about it. Time to begin to take practical interest in what has been accomplished, so far, by the Road Commission—to size up its results and see whether they are worth their cost, and whether they are worth continuing.

It is time, also for a complete practical statement to be made to the public—one that shows just what has been done, in a way that it can be plainly understood. The people have a right to know what state roads are costing per average mile, including the cost of administration expense. If such statement has been published, recently, we have not seen it.

State road building has an attractive sound, but it must not be forgotten that the state can't build roads without the tax-payers furnishing their cost. It is also worth while to know just where roads have been built, and where they would be built with another loan? Also, how many more millions will be required before a complete system will be built, and when the end will come? Then it will be worth considering whether, by the time the end of new work ceases, it will not be about time to commence over again and replace the miles first built.

There is a great deal more in state road building than the "burrah!" of it. This involves the question of whether or not present plans should be continued, even if the appropriations are continued. Are the tax-payers getting all they might get for their money? Should the State Commission spend the money, or should the County Commissioners do it? Has the selection of roads been wise, or has certain underground interests been directing operations?

As it is a pretty safe conclusion that present methods have at least not aroused much popular enthusiasm, would it not be wise for the whole proposition to be halted, long enough for past operations to be carefully investigated? It is full time, now, for the people to get interested and demand a show-up for their money, rather than rest quietly and let another big loan be approved without knowing where they are coming out. The time to do it is before the tax bills come in.

Farmers and Advertising.

Force of habit is a great thing, which means that it often takes a long time to bring about even very desirable changes. Men will criticize and condemn the avidity with which women follow "new fashions" in dress and headgear, but in reality they could profit by being a little more addicted to setting new fashions for themselves, especially in their business methods, and in no better manner than in doing more advertising.

Old fashioned ways of doing business really cost too much to be followed. Farmers, for instance, are gradually getting into the way of advertising a few of the things they have to sell—chiefly live stock—but even in this direction the advertising is very very meagre. Evidently, the cost is too economically considered. But, if it is considered profitable to do a little advertising of things for sale, why would it not be equally profitable to advertise when wanting to buy stock or machinery?

The average man does not realize the tremendous advantage of having at hand, for use, a good local newspaper, nor to what extent he can use that paper for his own profit. Spring sales are being better advertised than they were ten years ago, but there is still too much false economy in this direction—too great a fear that the printer will get too much out of the deal. Men, and especially farmers, need to be educated up to the point of figuring, not so much on the cost of advertising as on the profit they can reasonably expect to get out of it.

There are men waiting to sell, as well as those waiting to buy. The selling wants of the average farmer are not a bit more important than his buying wants; and both are worth advertising—letting the public know about.

Frederick County Reassessment.

With the reassessment of property in Frederick county nearly ended, it appears to be certain that instead of there being little or no increase in the taxable basis of the county, as was alleged several months ago by Mr. Allen C. Girdwood, of Baltimore, in a letter in which he laid before Governor Crothers a lot of misinformation regarding taxation conditions in Maryland, there will be a very substantial increase. Some estimates make the probable basis, after the assessors' reports have all been compiled, in the neighborhood of $40,000,000. If this figure is reached, a material reduction in the tax rate for the county should be possible. A reduction, indeed, should be possible even though the basis should fall considerably below $40,000,000.

Whether the assessment is raised or lowered, in any particular county, however, is of no value as a basis for judging the merit of the contention, frequently raised, that the burden of taxation is not equitably distributed throughout the state. There is no way to determine what degree of truth there may be in this contention without making an investigation of the relation between assessed and actual valuations of property in all of the counties and the city of Baltimore. It is quite probable that the contention is well grounded.

Indeed, considering the way assessments are made, it would be remarkable if there were not many discrepancies in the proportions which assessments bear to real values in the different counties, and even in different sections of the same counties. To find a way completely to remedy this condition and bring about an absolute equalization of taxation would, doubtless, be impossible, but it might be a great help towards finding some way to better conditions if a thorough investigation of the facts, as they exist, were made by a competent commission.

It would be well to know exactly to what extent inequality in taxation has developed, under the present system, and to discover this the Legislature should provide at its next session for the appointment, by the Governor, of a commission to make an investigation of the assessment which is now being completed and report at the next ensuing session what the actual conditions are, as nearly as can be determined. If the evil of inequality actually does exist to a serious extent, possibly in the light of the facts which would be developed by such an investigation a way might be found to remedy it.—Fred's Post.

Mr. Chalmers, on Advertising.

If any man on earth is qualified to speak on advertising it is Hugh Chalmers, head of the Chalmers Motor company, and if he praises newspapers as advertising mediums—as the best mediums, in fact—editors of newspapers may be justly proud and accept his statements as fact.

Mr. Chalmers began his career as office boy for the National Cash Register company, in time became its sales manager at a salary of $72,000 a year, and all this through his keen knowledge of advertising.

His speech in part before the Publicity club of Springfield, Mass., is as follows: "There are two excuses why any man should not advertise. The first one is, 'I have so much business—why advertise?' The second is, 'I have so little business I cannot afford to advertise.' So if a man is looking for an excuse between these two he always has one.

"I believe that newspapers are the best mediums for advertising because the people are always looking for news.

They buy a newspaper to read the news, and they stumble into the advertising. I believe in all kinds of mediums—magazines, both weekly and monthly, and weekly newspapers. I believe in any medium that has a legitimate circulation, but I particularly believe in the newspapers as being the best way of reaching the people with almost anything you have to sell.

"I believe that advertising and salesmanship are the chief factors in distribution, and the relationship between the two is the closest—in fact, they are inseparable, because all advertising is salesmanship and all salesmanship is advertising. If you want one word that will take the place of both that one word is 'teaching.' Advertising and salesmanship are teaching people to believe in you and in the goods you have to sell. In advertising, however, you are talking to thousands or perhaps hundreds of thousands of people at a time, while in salesmanship you are talking to one or two persons at a time, so that it might properly be said that advertising conducts a public school, while salesmanship gives individual lessons, but in each one you are teaching, whether it be in printed advertising or in oral salesmanship.

"Now let's consider the advertising side of this question for a few moments. As I have said before, I don't think it is possible to get up any set of rules governing advertising, because just as surely as you try to do this you will find the rules won't work. Instead of being a set of rules, advertising mainly consists of having the right idea and using it at the right time. That sounds simple, and it is, too, but it is one of those things so infernally simple that they are hard. We make it hard sometimes because we try to go about it with a set of rules which some one has told us about, or we try to apply it to other tests instead of trying to apply to the one test of simplicity and plainness and of common sense. To my mind there are only three fundamental principles in advertising, and these are as follows: First, be honest; second, be sensible; third, be persistent.

"I say 'be honest' because every advertiser should remember that advertising doesn't create value—it merely tells of it. The value has to be in the article itself. Advertising never added to or detracted from any article ever sold, and, while it is possible through advertising to create a lot of first orders through misrepresentation, yet it would be impossible to repeat such an advertising campaign, and no permanent success was ever built up on misrepresentation or misstatement.

"I say 'be sensible' because there are so many men who seem to talk about everything else but the right thing when they get to writing advertising copy. Be sensible because the majority of people who read copy are endowed with good common sense.

"I say 'be persistent' because you have to keep everlastingly at it. People soon forget—there is so much to attract their attention—and unless we keep persistently at advertising we had better not begin at all. As my good friend Colonel Life Young, of Des Moines, has said, 'Every man, woman and child in this country knows that a railroad crossing is dangerous, but the railroads don't take down their "Stop, Look, Listen!" signs.' Keep up advertising and be persistent. Why? Because the hardest thing to find today is yesterday's newspaper. If you don't think so, try to find one.

"There is no particular mystery about advertising. In the last analysis it is simply common sense plus printer's ink."

Constipation brings many ailments in its train and is the primary cause of much sickness. Keep your bowels regular, madam, and you will escape many of the ailments to which women are subject. Constipation is a very simple thing, but like many simple things, it may lead to serious consequences. Nature often needs a little assistance and when Chamberlain's Tablets are given at the first indication, much distress and suffering may be avoided. Sold by all dealers.

The Automobile Industry.

Ten years ago there were only 3,500 motor-driven vehicles in the entire country. Now there are 400,000. This is a matter of record which indicates very forcefully that in 1920 the number of automobiles in daily use will reach close to the million mark. Then there will be little use for our good friend the horse. Then the final emancipation. Monuments will be erected in our public squares in honor of the faithful beast—a lasting tribute to his days of usefulness.

In 1900 there were 27 factories building motor cars. The production of any one of these factories did not exceed 200 cars. Today we boast of more than 100 factories, some of which produce yearly from 15,000 to 35,000 complete cars. In 1900 there were 2,000 persons engaged in the building of cars. Since then this number has increased to 278,000.

In 10 years the capital of the automobile and accessory manufacturers has increased from about $6,000,000 to $450,000,000, half of which is in the factories alone.—Columbian Magazine.

WELCOME, SWEET BIRDS!

There's old robin at my window
Singing his sweet song again.
Welcome back, you dear old birdie,
With your merry, cheering strain.
You may eat your fill of cherries,
You may strip the branches bare,
If you'll call me at the sunrise,
With your sweet, soul cheering air.

Hark the lark! Oh, see him yonder
Soaring right into the sun!
Will he sing his little heart out
Ere his morning praise is done?
Welcome back, sweet music teacher,
I shall join your joyful praise
To the God who made the springtime
And the golden summer days.

There's the thrush! Just hear him warble
Listen to his silver bell.
Hear the linnet, wren and starling,
Mocking birds, in wood and dell.
Glad to see you back, dear birdies,
You are part of God's great plan
To make earth a second Eden
And redeem poor fallen man.

IDENTIFICATION MARKS.

Grandma had a habit of docking her hens' tails to keep them out of the neighbors' coops and cook pots and, of course, got "suspicious and mad as a wet hen" when Sarah Ann Somebody clipped her chickens, conclusions ditto.

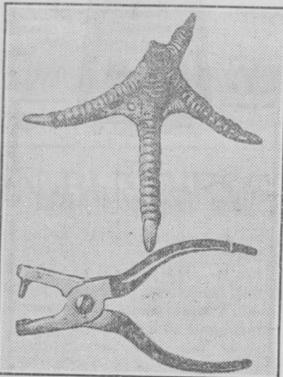

Must be awfully humiliating for a proud Biddy to become a bobtail, for her peroration is not only ornamental, but useful.

It wigwags her feelings.
Does she lay a big egg or lay low some sassy henpecker—then her tail stands straight in the air. Is she sick or licked—down trails the flag at half mast.

Besides, it's her steering gear, and without her tail she may sail to a sad finale.

Then others add variety to the landscape by painting their hens red, white and blue.

Spring rains soon wash off these autumnal tints; some hen fancier innocently appropriates another's calico colored cackler; then the feathers fly and the millennial dawn gets a setback.

My friend, to avoid a punch, buy a punch.

The one in the picture cost 50 cents, and that foot web was marked five years ago when the hen was a day old chick.

Leg bands are most too expensive for large flocks.

They must be changed too often to fit the growing fowl and they will come off.

That punch mark stays.

It shows in a moment the blood line to which the fowl belongs, it records the age, it identifies your stock when found on thieves and may help convict a midnight neck wringer, and, besides, if your neighbor dares you over the fence to prove your goods that little private mark quick does the trick.

DON'TS.

- Don't have too broad a roost slat. Crooked toes.
- Don't spend all your profit to win a silver cup. Remember, utility is the foundation of prosperity.
- Don't blarney in business. While you may catch some with a sweetened hook you will from others get a sour look. The goods themselves will have a tale to tell, and if they're good and advertised they'll sell.
- Don't buy roosters with warts on their face, comb or wattles. Chicken-pox.
- Don't eat hens with white scale and scurf on head, neck and body. Favus.
- Don't cook a fowl with gray patches in its throat and swollen eye. Diphtheritic roup.
- Don't dress a hen with dark comb and soiled fluff. Diarrhea.
- Don't buy dressed chickens with full crops. Waste. Unlawful to sell, crop may smell.
- Don't get weary in well doing. Pay your subscription in advance and hurrah for the chance.
- Don't forget that at Thanksgiving geese are at their best and most in demand.

THE BROODER NURSERY.

The nursery is really the whole brooder, for, while the other half, the sun parlor, is the peep's playground, the nursery does the nature fake stunt of playing mammy hen. This is done with the hover, which in the picture is heated from a lamp in a box outside.

Some are heated with hot water or steam. We wish to emphasize the importance of the hover and heating apparatus in artificial brooding, for so many get out a nice bunch of chicks, then lose them in faulty hovers. You will note this nursery opens in front, the door being mostly glass to give good light, a board under the door being removable for cleaning the all level floor. The sun parlor also has a large sash, thus making the whole interior light, the chicks and thermometer being always in sight.

The hover is a dandy. It is twenty-two inches in diameter, ten inches high and is all clear space beneath. It has no hot drum against which chicks crowd and get scorched and crushed; no soot and lamp fumes come up into the hover to suffocate; no hot floor shrivels up the chicks' legs and make them cripples.

The heat is overhead and radiates down as in nature. It enters from a lamp box outside, circulates through a doughnut shaped radiator in top of hover, and all lamp fumes are returned to the outside, so that this element, so deadly to chicks, is entirely absent. The hover ventilator is on top in the center, and with a regulator attached there is little difficulty to preserve an even temperature even in zero weather.

The nursery should be kept scrupulously clean. The hover should be cleaned every day, for if chicks are compelled to breathe foul air in this sleeping apartment they are soon killed or stunted.

For a good deodorizer, a dropping drier and a soft bedding we use dry sandy loam on our brooder floors and find it the best ever.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Nathan F. Yost of Keeler's Church, Bucks county, Pa., captured twenty-eight live skunks in one night. Bucks county fanciers should give Mr. Yost a prize silver cup for protecting their roosters and nominate him for a Carnegie medal.

One thousand five hundred turkeys were bought up, dressed and shipped to the Thanksgiving market at New York by a single Pennsylvania dealer. Seven hundred were dressed in one day.

When a poultry association or agricultural society contracts with a party to care for the poultry exhibits the matter of experience as well as price should be considered. The treatment fowls get at some exhibitions is shameful, and the guilty party should be pulled for cruelty to animals.

Snakes are a great pest to poultry in Florida, being experts at gathering eggs and gobbling chicks. Hogs are kept in the yards to catch the reptiles.

Hens seldom get hard crop from swallowing straw on the scratching floor unless they are nearly starved and feed is thrown in the litter. They grab grain and straw together, and so much straw coils and blocks way to the gizzard.

By jolting of the wagon six dozen eggs were broken for a farmer attending the Danville (Pa.) market. He tried to sell them for 5 cents less than market price, but failed. In sight of his stand was a store where a neat, safe crate holding ten dozen eggs was for sale for only 25 cents.

In the rainy season oats are a specially good feed, as their husks are a deterrent to diarrhea. White wheat will give pigeons scours and often acts this way with chickens.

A Texas fancier who started to raise goats as a side issue declares they beat a bulldog barking—fruit trees. Why not use the butters to throw midnight neck wringers?

The pictures of roosters and hens, geese gobblers and ducks in the revised Standard of Perfection cost $45 to $50 each, according to color. Twenty-five thousand copies were ordered printed by the St. Louis convention and are now on sale.

Keep your weather eye on the hog without a sporty curl in his tail. He will come to a bad end. Watch that rooster whose tail gets out of plumb or hangs in a don't care style. He is covered with crawlers or has a kink in his constitution.

Where a good number of fowls are kept there should be a place to store feed. The bins should be lined so mice cannot gnaw into them, and the building should be clear underneath so rats cannot harbor. Teach the cat to sleep in the feed house and she'll catch every mouse.

The Word "Chap."
"Chap" is simply an abbreviation of chapman, the merchant of former days, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "ceap," a bargain. The word almost brings before us the loud voiced "cheap Jack" as he cries his wares in the cheaping or market. Chap seems to have come into common use at the end of the sixteenth century and is rarely mentioned in books before 1700. Johnson does not recognize it, though Steele uses it in 1712 in the Spectator ("If you want to sell, here is your 'chap'), and it is found in Bailey's Dictionary, 1731. Its original meaning of a buyer or seller still lingers in the dialects of many counties. Coupled with the adjectives old, young, little, poor, it was and is used in familiar language, as is its relative, a queer "customer." Todd, 1818, affirms that a good chap meant one to whom credit might be given, whereas not qualified by good it was a term of contempt.—London Standard.

A Mighty Appetite.
We eat, but we no longer stuff. The great stuffers of the past are dead. What of that seventeenth century Kentish man Nicholas Wood, for example, who would eat a whole hog at a sitting and follow it up the next day with thirty dozen pigeons? Without this possessor of a "Kentish stomach" was a sportsman. As proof of this there is that record of his challenge to Taylor, the water poet, to "eat an one time as much black pudding as would reach across the Thames at any place to be fixed by Taylor himself between London and Richmond." Well might old Fuller moralize over that appetite of Wood's. "Let us raise our gratitude," he said, "to the goodness of God, especially when he giveth us appetite enough for our meat and yet meat too much for our appetite."—Westminster Gazette.

The Moss Troopers.
Moss troopers was the name given to the desperate plunderers and robbers who secreted themselves throughout the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in the "mosses" on the borders of Scotland. These outlaws were largely made up of deserters and criminals from the armies of England and the continent, and their depredations and cruelties were the terror of the region infested by them. Many severe laws were passed against them, but they were not fairly extirpated until the eighteenth century.

In the McKinley-Bryan war of 1896 Senator Money of Mississippi was a free silver, 16 to 1 man. It was of Colonel Money that Colonel Patterson, from the Memphis (Tenn.) district and a foremost gold bug, complained. Said Colonel Patterson: "I went down to Colonel Money's country to engage him in joint debate on finance. I made a speech of an hour. It was absolutely unanswerable. At its close Colonel Money arose and without attempting any reply observed: 'Colonel Patterson comes here as the representative of the plutocrats and gold bugs of Wall street. I want to ask him one question, only one, and I trust that he will answer it on his

"I WANT TO ASK HIM ONE QUESTION," honor as a southern gentleman. Isn't it a fact, sir—and here Colonel Money turned to me—isn't it a fact, sir, that now as we stand here your principals, the gold bugs and moneycrats of Wall street, are engaged in marrying an American girl to a British nobleman and have agreed to give to the British miscreant $15,000,000 to take the girl? Answer me, on your honor, sir!"
"And," concluded Colonel Patterson disgustedly, "at that those Mississippians yelled: 'Go for him, Money! You've got him on the run! Don't let him turn or duck or get away!' That was all. At the close they adopted a free silver resolution, 16 to 1, thanked me for coming, and we all went home. I shall never go down into Mississippi again. They're too dense, too dark!"—New York American.

THE DEACON GAVE A SQUARE DEAL

Farmer Got What Was Coming to Him in Weights.
"Paul Morton," said a Chicago insurance agent, "was a stickler for business honesty. I once heard him, in an address to agents, declare that a dishonest dealer would turn the straightest patron's morals slightly askew."
"He illustrated this with a story. There was a farmer who sold butter to the village storekeeper, taking sugar in exchange. It seemed to the farmer after awhile that the sugar he was getting was short weight. Accordingly he made a complaint."
"Look here, deacon," he said, "it seems to me you're giving me short weight sugar."
"No," said the deacon, a religious old man, in a dry voice, "no, that can't be, for in measuring out that sugar of yours I always use a pound of your butter as a weight."

In Doubt.
Dr. Miner Lee Bates, president of Hiram college, enlivened in a recent address at Hiram, O., a knotty etymological problem with a story.
"We must not dodge our problem as the boy did," said Dr. Bates.
"A teacher, you see, was having a great deal of difficulty in making clear to a boy the meaning of the word 're-cuperate.'"
"Now," said the teacher, "your father is a hard worker, isn't he?"
"Yes, sir; he is," said the boy.
"And when he gets home at night he's dead tired, is he not?"
"Yes, sir; he is."
"Then," pursued the teacher, "since it's night and he's dead tired and work's over, what does he do?"
"Ah," said the boy, "that's what mother wants to know."—Washington Star.

Solid Sewell.
A. W. Lafferty, who has just been elected to congress in Oregon, has a district that comprises 50,000 square miles of territory.
One night after a speech in Canon City a colored man came up and introduced himself as Tom Sewell.
"I just want to say, Mr. Lafferty," said Sewell, "that I can pledge you the solid colored vote of Grant county."
"That's fine!" exclaimed Lafferty. "I am glad to meet you. How many colored votes are there in Grant county?"
"I'm the only one," Sewell replied.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

SELECT CULLINGS

Turned Down the Job.
William McAdoo, former police commissioner of New York and once assistant secretary of the navy, tells a good story of an experience he had while stopping at the hotel in a small town in Nova Scotia. "You from New York?" asked the owner of the hotel. "I am," said McAdoo. "Know anybody down there who kin run a hotel?" "Several people," "Well, I wish you would tell me the name of a good man I can get to come up here and run this hotel for me. I ain't got time to attend to it, and I want an honest, sober, respectable man to take hold of it for me." "How much will you pay?" asked McAdoo. "Twenty-five dollars a month, or, if he's especially good, I might go to thirty." McAdoo promised to think it over, and that night he told the owner a good man to write to. A few days later George C. Boldt, proprietor of the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, and the Bellevue-Stratford, in Philadelphia, was highly astonished to receive an offer of $25 a month and board to go up to Nova Scotia to run a hotel, with the promise of a raise to $30, but no more, if he made good.

France a Marvel of Thrift.
The thrift of France is wonderful. It enabled the nation to bear the enormous losses of the Franco-Prussian war, including the payment of 5,000,000,000 francs as war indemnity, with no demoralization of trade and with hardly any depression of industry. Out of 10,000,000 French electors 9,000,000 have money in the bank or invested at interest or own land. Everybody saves. In various savings institutions there are 4,000,000 accounts of only 20 francs or less each, and the total number of all savings accounts reaches 13,000,000. One million five hundred thousand small investors hold probably 20,000,000,000 francs of government bonds. Or 12,000,000 French householders 9,000,000 occupy their own homes, paying no rent. The country holds over 100,000,000,000 francs of domestic and foreign securities and saves, available for investment, 2,000,000,000 francs a year. This thrift is really wonderful.—Finance.

Bound to Have Him Dead.
The Mexican judicial system, while it affords exact justice in most cases, is still a tangled skein, and the intricacies of the law frequently lead to amusing episodes. A famous criminal who faced the firing squad in the City of Mexico recently was named Negrete, but more generally known as the tiger of Santa Julia. The was a murderer and thief, and he is well out of the way. After the Mexican courts had determined what should be done with him they decided to sentence him to die twice, to serve a life sentence and pay a heavy fine, even though at the time of his incarceration he was practically penniless. A local paper commenting on the sentence remarks that he may get over it, but he will never look the same.

Nearly as Bad as the Plague.
A letter on the plague in China, written from Changchuan, says of the precautions against further infection: "At Changchuan the Russo-Asiatic bank and the Yokohama Specie bank alone of the foreign establishments remain open. Both these buildings are disinfected every hour, and every customer who enters is donched with fluid, whenever he likes it or not. Every employee of the bank, from the manager downward, wears a disinfected white smock and a nose and mouth pad. But notwithstanding the plague the ordinary Chinese coolie goes about as if nothing were happening, and the streets still remain crowded."

The Oak of Beaumarchais.
The famous oak of Beaumarchais, which formerly flourished on the Quai d'Orsay, has fallen to the woodman's ax. The spot is historic, for in days past it was the locus of the residence of the author of the "Barber of Seville." The tree has seen vicissitudes. It was under its spreading branches that Beaumarchais instructed the daughter of Louis XV. in music, and there were heard the harp of Mme. Victoire and the violin of Mme. Adelaide. In later times the sweet strains of music gave place to the fumes of a tobacco factory which was situated on part of Beaumarchais' lands.—London Globe.

Made Him Still More Silent.
Kossara Svetkovitch, who confessed to having murdered her husband, was sent to prison for one month by the Krugnyevato assizes. Kossara proved that on her wedding day her husband had forbidden her to speak to him unless he first addressed her. During four years he had spoken to her only seven times and then to use words of blame. At table he indicated his wants by pointing to them. He had never even looked at their two children and professed not to be aware of their existence. The jury recommended her to mercy.—Belgrade Cor. Pall Mail Gazette.

Truth In Fun.
Mrs. Philip Snowden, the English suffragette, was taken in to dinner in New York the other night by a conservative senator.
The senator, after attacking the "new woman" in a long harangue, said to Mrs. Snowden bitterly: "Woman makes all the trouble in life."
"But she, too," said Mrs. Snowden, smiling, "makes life worth all the trouble."

W. H. Flickinger has added to his already improved farm the conveniences of the domestic side, by having hot and cold water and bath room in his house.

Frizellburg.

Our people were very much startled, last Tuesday morning, when they learned that Mrs. Emily Arthur was the victim of a sudden and painful accident. She is a stout woman and has naturally weak ankles, from which cause she had frequent falls prior to this. This time she attempted to get the mail, as usual, and in descending the concrete steps her ankle gave away, and in the fall she sustained a slight fracture and dislocation of the ankle. Her call soon brought neighbors to her assistance who carried her into the house. Dr. M. L. Bott was summoned, adjusted the joint and made her comfortable. Her misfortune has elicited many expressions of regret, and all hope she may have a speedy recovery.

Rev. Murray will preach to his congregation here, Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Thursday night, March 30, was one of pleasure and profit for the K. of P. brotherhood, who met in their usual meeting place here. There were about fifty members present, and they made a busy man out of the Master of Finance.

For the good of the Order a pretty banquet was given which was much enjoyed by all. This comprised oysters, coffee, crackers, pickles, celery and cigars. The recent accessions to the Lodge, which put the membership to one hundred, led to the above feature. Before closing the session all were kindly requested to give their presence at the regular meetings which are frequently without enough for a quorum.

Increasing Army Recruits.

Washington, April 3.—Though some recruiting officers report big increases in applications for enlistment in the army since the beginning of the military demonstration on the Texan border, army officers predict that the actual increase in the army will be small.

They base this prediction upon the small percentage of applicants who are accepted from among the vast number applying. During the last fiscal year, only 14 per cent. of those applying were finally enlisted in the military service.

In 58 main recruiting stations, 94,121 men applied for enlistment, of which 78,777 were rejected. Of the 15,344 accepted at the recruiting stations, 2,387 were later rejected at the recruiting depots. These figures do not include the vast number, probably several hundred thousand it is estimated, who were rejected without examination by the recruiting officers at all the stations.

These include men of obvious physical defects, men plainly under or over age, and others who bear the stamp of immorality or tramping. No record is kept of these rejections.

It has been the experience of the army recruiting officers that applications for enlistment are increased by any series of events which bring the army into prominence, especially if it seems likely that there will be opportunity for field service. The most extensive increases, however, appear when volunteers are called out. Not only are civilians more attracted to volunteer organizations than the regulars, but also, a greater proportion are accepted, because the examination of applicants is not nearly so rigid and searching. The regular recruit examiners are experts, trained to detect every imperfection in the physique of health of applicants.

Mild Exactions.

NEW TALES THAT ARE TOLD

Concerning Legal Twists.

Attorney General Wickwicks was talking at the Lawyers' club in New York about some of the absurd defenses that are set up in cases wherein rich men are involved.

"Such defenses seem to indicate," he said, "that some lawyers deem the public as ignorant of common law and common sense as Calhoun White was."

"Calhoun White was a southern lawyer, and once, in a case in a South

CALHOUN WHITE DREW HIMSELF UP WITH DIGNITY.

Carolina court, he made frequent references to 'de ex-facto-posthoie' law.

"The judge, with a quiet smile, at last set him right.

"You mean, Mr. White," he said, 'the ex-post-facto law.'

"But Calhoun White drew himself up with dignity.

"Ah begs pawdon ob de co't," he said in a pitying voice, 'but yo' honah sartinly am lame on dat ar term.

Why, gents, lit am dat law wot prohibits a man from diggin' de hole arter de post am set."

When It Was Rougher.

Paul Withington, the Harvard coach, was praising the football of 1910.

"Football in the nineties was a terrible game," said Mr. Withington. "Bourget, you know, devoted a whole chapter of 'Outre Mer' to its horrors. Some of the stories of the football of '90 and '91 are, in fact, almost incredible.

"A Philadelphia sporting editor returned one November Saturday from West Philadelphia with a pale, frightened face.

"Many accidents at the game? a polite reporter asked him.

"One frightful accident," replied the sporting editor. "A powerful mule from a neighboring coal dealer's entered the field, blundered into one of the hottest scrimmages and got killed."

A PERILOUS FEAT.

It Took Nerves of Steel, a Cool Head and a Steady Eye.

The cathedral at Salisbury, England, lifts its spire 404 feet, which is quite a respectable height even in the day of skyscrapers. This spire is topped by a ball, and on the ball stands a cross. From the ground the ball looks to be about the size of an orange, but in reality it is greater than a man's height.

A distinguished American visiting Salisbury when a very young man had a curiously weird adventure on this spire. Workmen were at the time repairing it. The American saw them crawling round the slim steeple in the afternoon light like so many bugs on a bean stalk. The impulse came to him to climb the spire and stand on the horizontal beam of the cross. Accordingly, late in the afternoon, when the workmen had gone, the young man made his way up the stairs to the little window which opened to the workmen's staging. To run up the scaffolding to the ball was easy. Then came the slightly more difficult climb to the foot of the cross over the bulging curve of the ball. A short platform gave him foothold. He reached up and put his hands on the base of the cross and pulled himself up. To gain the crossarm was merely "shinning" up a good sized tree, and soon he stood on the horizontal timber and, reaching up, touched the top of the cross.

After enjoying his moment of triumph he slid to the foot of the cross and with his arms around the post slipped down over the big bulge of the ball. His feet touched nothing. The little plank from which he had reached up was not there.

Here was a Poe-like situation requiring a cool head and a steady eye. He could, of course, not look down. The clinging hold that he had to maintain on the bottom of the cross shortened the reach of his body and made it less than when he stood on the plank and reached up to the cross with his hands. He must drop so that his feet should reach the plank, for he would never be able to pull himself back if he should let himself down at arms' length, and his feet hung over empty air.

But this young American had a good head, which he immediately put to work. He looked up at the cross and tried to recall exactly the angle at which he had reached for it, to make his memory tell him just how the edge of that square post had appeared. A few inches to the right or to the left meant that he would drop into vacancy. Bending his head away back, he strained his eye up the cross and figured his angle of approach. He cautiously wormed himself to the right and made up his mind that here directly under his feet must be the plank. Then he dropped. And he lived to tell the tale.

ANTS THAT COOK.

They Make Dough, Form Cakes and Bake Them in the Sun.

The remarkable habits of the harvester ant have long been known to naturalists. Certain species not only harvest and store in granaries the seeds upon which they feed, but actually plant and cultivate an annual crop of their food seeds.

But now a still more wonderful tale is told of an ant which is common in Dalmatia, Messor barbarus. According to Professor Neger of the well known forestry school near Dresden, this ant not only cuts leaves and gathers seeds, but actually makes bread or biscuit.

The seeds are first sprouted, then carried into the sun and dried, then taken back to the underground chambers, where they are chewed into a dough. The dough is then finally made into tiny cakes, which are baked in the sun, then carefully stored for future use.

From these observations it appears that the art of cookery is not wholly confined to the human race. All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery, the saliva with which it moistens the grain probably taking the place of yeast and sweetening through changes set up by its influence upon starch.—American Medicine.

Positively Rude!

Because she wanted everybody else to know as well as she knew that she had small feet the woman who had offered to lend rubbers to a friend admitted apologetically, "But they are so big I don't suppose you can keep them on."

"Oh, I guess I can," said the friend serenely. "I have big feet too."

Since then the woman with small feet has refused to see her friend, even when she brought the rubbers home.—New York Press.

Flogging Petty Criminals.

Flogging, claimed by some to be a survival of barbarism in England, is given credit by others as being the most potent factor in ridding London of petty criminals and assuring public safety. Many criminals become so familiar with the prison routine as to lose all horror of it. In fact, life is so wretched for certain classes of undesirable in London that they would commit petty crimes as a means of gaining entrance to a prison were it not for the wholesome fear of floggings. The cat-o-nine-tails used for the floggings has been deprived of its knots and is not laid on so strenuously as in the old days, while with young offenders the birch rod is brought into play. A physician is always on hand to stop the flogging should the culprit evince signs of fainting. Although the flogging punishment has thus been mitigated, it does not seem to have lost its effectiveness.—Popular Mechanics.

Might Spare a Few.

It is said that never was a gentler critic than Dr. McClintock of Dickinson college. One day a young orator presented his speech for Dr. McClintock's approval. He evidently did not anticipate adverse criticism. He received it nevertheless, given in the doctor's gentle, humorous way, which never could offend.

"It's a good speech," he said, "but there is perhaps a little too much of a certain sort of rhetoric. For instance, I find in it two midnight owls, two midnight wolves, three American eagles and four unfurled banners. It seems to me that the supply exceeds the demand."

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE.

Rev. E. O. Taylor, D. D.

IN THREE PARTS—PART I.

No single event has apparently done more to signalize the ushering in of a distinctively scientific era of temperance than the summaries of the findings of scientific men touching the nature of alcohol, recently given to the world by Henry Smith Williams, of New York.

At last the fruitage of the far-sighted, persistent, and patient work of that marvelous woman—the late Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, founder of the system of scientific temperance instruction in the public schools—has begun to appear.

I shot an arrow into the air. It fell to earth, I knew not where; For, so swiftly it flew, the sight could not follow it in its flight.

I breathed a song into the air. It fell to earth, I knew not where; For who has sight so keen and strong, That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak I found the arrow, still unbroken; And the song, from beginning to end, I found again in the heart of a friend.

That winged prophecy has already come true. The "arrow" is found today in the oaken fibre of scientific sentiment, which demands that the saloon shall go. The "song" is found again in the heart of a great nation, enlightened and inspired by the assurances of demonstrated facts.

The scientific temperance instruction laws of the various States, drafted by Mrs. Hunt, requiring, as they did from the outset, that the facts of science relating to the nature and effects of alcohol should be taught in the public schools, the question at once arose, What are the facts? The laboratories of the world were set in motion to answer that question, until now a vast wealth of scientific fact and principle, important in the highest degree, but unknown to untold thousands is waiting for practical application at the hands of temperance people.

The present situation, however, very clearly involves a crisis. The conviction is rapidly growing that, in order to continue the work of the "temperance revolution" now in progress in our country until every state has adopted prohibition, and what is of no less importance, to hold the ground already won against paralyzing reaction, a vast amount of systematic educational work must be done, and that of a fundamental nature, particularly along scientific lines.

This aspect of the alcohol question is not only "on the firing line" today as the point of attack between the contending forces, but is rapidly coming to be recognized as underlying the permanent settlement of the whole matter.

So rapidly has the "prohibition wave" swept over the land, so spectacular have been many of the campaigns, and so exclusively political have been the arguments and methods used in many cases, that just what many conservative men prophesied would be the result is actually coming to pass.

On the other hand, no such opportunity for indoctrinating our citizenship on the scientific phase of temperance was ever before presented to our people. The "scientific idea" of temperance is in the air. People who have been infected with it want still more of it.

Every teacher should be patriotic enough to improve the opportunity of getting these facts, and of giving them to the youth of today. Every preacher should make his pulpit resound with the same. Every campaign orator, whether treating of the social, legislative, economic, moral, industrial, or religious phase of temperance, should base his speech on the fresh, startling, burning, incontrovertible facts touching the nature of alcohol. Every temperance organization should sound the battle cry from this new point of view. In fact, a campaign of education on this line should be inaugurated in every state in the Union, and that quickly.

Prohibition states and local option territory should be no exception to the rule, for, until the majority of the voters in such districts come to understand that prohibition is grounded in scientific principle, and total abstinence is required by hygienic laws, the struggle between license and no-license, regulation and prohibition, will go on indefinitely, first one then the other gaining the ascendancy.

The Scientific Temperance Federation was organized for just such work. It is exclusively an educational institution, whose purpose is "to collate and make known in every possible way in popular form the proven facts of science concerning the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and other drug narcotics, in order to secure intelligent conviction based on demonstrated fact."

Occupying this high vantage ground, the Federation signals the temperance hosts everywhere to unite their forces, each in its own way, in the inauguration of what Doctor Williams calls "a great popular propaganda of the facts regarding alcohol," and offers its aid in furnishing these facts for such a purpose.

The basic principle of the temperance reform is involved in the nature of alcohol. That it is not a food in any proper sense of that term, but a poison, is now a settled fact of science known to many people, but its proper classification among the poisons is not so well understood. If it be simply affirmed that alcohol is a poison, some ignorant critic will at once reply that there are poisons in everything—bread, meat, milk, and water. To this the skilled retort should be, People do not eat and drink food for the sake of the poisons in them. All hygienic rules require that poisons be eliminated from foods as far as possible.

There are three general classes of poisons: The narcotics, which affect the nerves; the irritants, which affect the membranes and tissues, and the narcotic-irritants, which do both. Alcohol belongs to the latter class, and hence finds a place equally among the narcotics and the irritants. Concretely considered, alcohol as a narcotic is in the same list as cocaine, chloral, morphine, and opium. The logic of this classification compels us to treat alcohol socially and legislatively, the same as we do treat the drug narcotics with which it is classed.

When that dear, fond hand that nursed us, Said, "my boy come here to me," Let me hear you say your lessons, Clean, your face and hands, shall be, Then with thoughts of expectation, We, unwilling, went to school, Saw the faces of our playmates, Heard the teachers "Golden Rule?"

When the morn with a golden sunshine, Slanting from the eastern sky; Gave our youthful frame an impulse, Opened up our drowsy eyes, Heard the sound of many waters, On yon hillcock coursing man, And the streams reverberation, Told us day had just begun.

Why does alcohol like the brain the best? Recent investigations by Prof. Hans Meyer of the University of Vienna, confirmed by other noted specialists, show that nerve substance contains a larger proportion of fat than other tissues; that all the substances called narcotics are able to dissolve fat. They enter into a loose chemical combination with the fatty constituents of the cells, and immediately inhabit the vital processes of the cells.

It is also well understood that alcohol has a peculiar selective affinity for some cells over others; that in the case of the habitual moderate use of alcohol some cells become more or less seriously impaired, while in the so-called excessive use of it some cells go into permanent degeneracy and finally become totally destroyed; that when a cell becomes wholly destroyed no power can be invoked to replace it by a normal cell. It is gone forever! If that is not a serious statement, pray tell us what a serious statement is. I confess that before men begin to tinker, legislatively, with the liquor question, it would be well for them to learn what alcohol does to the brain; and yet, not one in a hundred thousand of our voters, and very few of our legislators, ever dreamed of such a thing.

No one can go on impairing the brain cells continuously like that without finally and seriously impairing the mental faculties residing in the cells. It is now well known that alcohol taken continuously in very small doses depresses the higher faculties first of all, judgment, conscience and will, afterward letting loose the lower and animal impulses to run riot in the man's body so that he comes at last to do what he would not otherwise think of doing.

The nature of alcohol, not exclusively the overdose, unbalancing the guiding faculties of the man and unduly awakening his emotional nature, accounts for the fact that there are more moderate drinkers in the penal institutions of this country who have committed crime under the impulse of liquor than there are of habitual drunkards who have committed offenses while drunk. In the State of Massachusetts there are twenty-four thousand men in the penal institutions who have committed crime under the influence of liquor, four thousand of them are registered as habitual drunkards, while twenty thousand are registered as moderate drinkers.

This brings to the front the question as to whether "moderation" is to be interpreted as temperance.

CHILDHOOD.

(For the Record.) As the years with fleeting movement, Come and go to mortal men, And the boat that bears us onward, Is fast sailing to the end; Looking forth to something grander, I with strong emotions say, Let me glance once more to childhood, To the dreams of yesterday.

Let me just for one brief moment, Call to mind those by-gone days, When my heart in childish hearings, Like the sun, beamed forth its rays, Let me with calm retrospection, Scan the idle days of youth; Days of gladness, days of sadness, Days of much deserved reproof.

O what charm we find embodied, In this sweet and tender word, Charms that set our heart a thinking, Such as Angels never heard, Thoughts that with a wider meaning, Enter our changed mind, With the force of bursting Etna, Give us feelings more sublime.

When the morn with a golden sunshine, Slanting from the eastern sky; Gave our youthful frame an impulse, Opened up our drowsy eyes, Heard the sound of many waters, On yon hillcock coursing man, And the streams reverberation, Told us day had just begun.

When that dear, fond hand that nursed us, Said, "my boy come here to me," Let me hear you say your lessons, Clean, your face and hands, shall be, Then with thoughts of expectation, We, unwilling, went to school, Saw the faces of our playmates, Heard the teachers "Golden Rule?"

Samuel Birch, of Beetown, Wis., had a most narrow escape from losing his leg, as no doctor could heal the frightful sore that developed, but at last Bucklen's Arnica salve cured it completely. It is the greatest healer of ulcers, burns, boils, eczema, scalds, cuts, corns, cold-sores, bruises and piles on earth. Try it, 25c at R. S. McKinney's drug store, Taneytown, Md.

Furnishing a Bedroom.

"In furnishing a bedroom where there is limited space, it is well to have as many things as possible which will hang up," says Christine Terhune Herriek in Woman's Home Companion for March. "The shoe-bag which hangs on the inside of the closet-door should have pockets deep enough to accommodate shoes holding trees. Provide a bag of some suitable wash material for soiled handkerchiefs and collars and hang this where it will be accessible.

"Cleanliness in a bedroom cannot be too strict. Dusting with a damp cloth should be an every-day affair. If the walls are painted, they should be wiped off every few weeks with a cloth wrung out in suds to which a little kerosene has been added. When there is a washstand the furnishings of this should have daily care. The inside of the bowl, pitcher and slop-jar should be washed with hot water and soap, and the last named article should be scalded out daily. The soap-dish should be washed thoroughly every day.

"Special attention should be given to making the bed. Every morning it should be entirely stripped and well aired, the covers turned down over the foot on a chair placed there to keep them from contact with the floor, the mattresses tilted up that the air may get to both sides. The mattress must be turned daily. When the bed is made the mattress-cover should be laid on smoothly, the lower sheet tucked down all around before the upper sheet goes on. The latter must be put under the mattress at the foot far enough to insure against working up at night and yet sufficient must be left free at the top to protect the face and neck from contact with the blanket. The blankets must be tucked in at the foot and sides, the spread must be arranged less securely, so that it may be taken off when opening the bed without loosening the other covers."

LIKE FINDING MONEY.

R. S. McKinney, the popular druggist, is making an offer that is just like finding money for he is selling a regular 50 cent bottle of Dr. Howard's celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price. In addition to this large discount, he agrees to return the money to any purchaser whom the specific does not cure.

It is quite unusual to be able to buy fifty cent pieces for a quarter, but that is what this offer really means, for it is only recently through the solicitation of Druggist McKinney that this medicine could be bought for less than fifty cents. He urged the proprietors to allow him to sell it at this reduced price for a little while, agreeing to sell a certain amount. The result has justified his good judgment for the sale has been something remarkable.

Anyone who suffers with headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, sour stomach, specks before the eyes, or any liver trouble, should take advantage of this opportunity, for Dr. Howard's specific will cure all these troubles. But if by any chance it should not, R. S. McKinney will return your money.

Telephone Invitations.

When accepting an invitation over the telephone it is the part of wisdom to follow it with a written acceptance. In which the day, date and hour are repeated. Only in this way can a woman be certain that no error is made in the time, and the sense of security given is worth the effort.

Telephonic invitations will always appear to be informal and sometimes are, but a woman will have no difficulty in deciding the point if she gives heed to the hour appointed. A luncheon at half past 1 o'clock, to play bridge afterward, may be regarded as formal; dinner at any time after a quarter to 7 is also formal.

Earlier than these hours is considered to be informal.

When a medicine must be given to young children it should be pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is made from loaf sugar, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it pleasant to take. It has no superior for colds, croup and whooping cough. For sale by all dealers.

A Mighty Big Can.

An Irish harvester found himself in a small Scottish town. At the gas works he saw a gasometer for the first time in his life and stopped a countryman who was passing to ask, "What's that big round thing there standing on end?"

The Scotchman scratched his head and replied, "A dinna ken." "Get out with you," said the Irishman. "You never saw a dinner can as big as that in your life."

"How do you like my new hat? Isn't it a darling? Only $10!" exclaimed a delighted lady to her husband. "Great Scott! You said the hats could be bought at from $2.50 up." "Yes, dear; this is one of the ups!"

Woman's World

Millinery Professor Says "Make Your Hats and Let Ballot Go."

"I would advise women to make their own hats and let the ballot go." This was the pertinent answer given recently by the professor of millinery at the Teachers' college, New York city, when asked for her views on the "votes for women" question.

A professor of the art of bonnet making is a comparatively new chair in the college world, but that it is a popular course and a profitable one from the pupils' standpoint one has only to drop into the pleasant room where the students work from 9 to 12 three mornings in a week to be convinced of the fact that the highbrows are looking to their millinery laurels as well as to purely mental achievements.

The millinery course at this institution is immensely popular for two reasons—first, because it is practical and meets everyday requirements and, second, on account of the charming personality of the instructor, Mrs. Evelyn Tobey, who is a Barnard graduate. The course, by the way, counts for as much as any of the elective studies in the college curriculum.

In the workroom there is an air of suppressed enthusiasm, an atmospheric feeling of everybody trying to do her best, and the ideal held up by Mrs. Tobey is a high one.

"We never," she said, "let our efforts on even the most hopeless looking hat. We alter the shape and rearrange the trimming until the most critical member of the class pronounces a satisfactory verdict on the creation." And the weekly class criticisms are dreaded by the pupil whose handiwork is the target for the aims of her sister workers.

Taking a special course under the expert guidance of Mrs. Tobey are college girls, society matrons, staid housewives and pupils from fashionable finishing schools. The work starts in with the making of a real hat; designs are first made in paper and then carried out in fabrics. The first hat made is the simple street model, and next comes the dressy confection.

"Rather a good looking hat, is it not?" said the professor with pardonable pride, holding up for inspection a stunning picture hat, the recent work of an advanced pupil.

It was a study in Gainsborough lines constructed from royal blue satin covered with black malines and trimmed simply with plaited ruffles of cream colored lace banded with narrow lines of sable fur and a pale pink satin rose tucked lovingly at one side of the wide brim.

But Mrs. Tobey considered the facing of the hat and the artistic manner of its manipulation the master touch of the creation. And not the least interesting of the many wonderful things done in the school is the making of frames from a willow fabric that is damped and pulled and clipped into condition over the wire foundation. Indeed, the material is molded and shaped much as the sculptor models his clay. Just before the holidays the girls were busily working on fabric neck and muff sets and lovely party bonnets. Work of this nature fills in the hiatus between winter and spring styles.

Mrs. Tobey impresses upon her class that the study of millinery like most women's work is never done. Each season brings its special needs in the basic laws of hats that the successful artist must accept or become that dreaded of all things—a sartorial back number. One of the girls parenthetically remarked that she was surely becoming a one idea creature and that her dominating thought was hats—every woman's chapeau from a Bowery travesty of the modes to a Fifth Avenue masterpiece, claimed her attention.

Lesson III.—Second Quarter, For April 16, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xx, 1-18. Memory Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 34—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have the choice this week of a lesson on Joash, the boy king, or a resurrection lesson, and as next week we shall have another lesson on Joash we choose the Easter lesson for this week. The resurrection of Jesus from the dead is in many respects the greatest topic in the Scriptures, for if Christ be not risen preaching is vain, faith is vain, there is no forgiveness of sins, and no one is saved (1 Cor. xv, 14, 17, 18).

His great atonement includes His perfect life in a mortal body, His death in our stead bearing our sins, His resurrection from the dead, all of which may be included in the saying, "The precious blood of Christ" (1 Pet. i, 19). At present, as our great high priest, He is at the right hand of God, for us, and He will come again to receive His body, the church, and to set up His kingdom of peace and righteousness on this earth.

That the Messiah of Israel, the great King, should be a man was plainly foretold in Gen. iii, 15; xxii, 18; Deut. xviii, 18; Isa. ix, 6, 7, and many other places. That He should be a man risen from the dead, an immortal man, was also foretold in Gen. iii, 15; II Sam. vii, 13, 16; Isa. ix, 7; liii, 10, 11; Ps. xvi, 10; xxii, 22, 27, 28, and elsewhere, and foreshadowed in Isaac, and Joseph and Jonah as well as in the two birds of Lev. xiv and the two goats of Lev. xvi.

When He was on earth in His humiliation He repeatedly foretold His death and resurrection in such passages as John ii, 19-21; Matt. xii, 40; xvi, 4, 21; xvii, 23; xx, 19; xxvi, 64, and yet even His own disciples did not receive it, for in verse 9 of our lesson we read that even Peter and John "knew not the Scripture that He must rise again from the dead." He said to the two with whom He walked to Emmaus, who were so cast down because of His death, and so disappointed because He had not redeemed Israel, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." He also said to the disciples in the upper room that same evening, "All things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses and in the prophets and in the psalms concerning me" (Luke xxiv, 25, 44).

He appeared at least ten times to one or more of His disciples during those forty days between His resurrection and ascension from Olivet, five times on the first day, and our lesson tells of His first appearance, and that was to Mary Magdalene (Mark xvi, 9). We do not find that Mary of Bethany was with the other women at the tomb on the resurrection morning, for she seems to have believed what He had said about His death and resurrection, and she anointed Him beforehand for His burial (Matt. xxvi, 12; Mark xv, 8). The purchase of spices by the other women was an act of love, but not of faith, for had they believed that He would rise again they would not have purchased spices with which to anoint His dead body.

As soon as Mary Magdalene saw that the stone was rolled away from the sepulcher she ran back to tell Peter and John, and they both ran to the tomb, and both went in, Peter going first, and saw the linen clothes evidently as when His body had been in them, and the napkin that was about His head wrapped together in a place by itself, and they believed that He was risen and went away again unto their own home. Mary, having returned to the tomb, remained and was so intent upon finding the body of her Lord that she had no eyes even for angels, and when Jesus Himself spoke to her she supposed Him to be the gardener, so blinding is unbelieving grief.

Not until He called her by name did she recognize Him. One of the precious words of the Spirit to my soul is found in Isa. xliii, 1, "Fear not, for I have redeemed thee. I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine." How wondrously gracious of our Lord to appear to Mary and speak to her while on His way to His Father (verse 17), and how wondrous His words to her, and through her to us, "My Father and your Father, my God and your God."

If we would only believe fully that He has made us one with Himself, a part of Himself, children of God and joint heirs with Himself, it does seem as if our lives would declare that Jesus lives.

Note the words with which He greeted the disciples that evening and also a week later, "Peace be unto you" (verses 19, 21, 26), and remember John xiv, 27; Jer. xxix, 11. See Him asking them to handle Him and to thrust the hand into His side and see Him eating broiled fish and honeycomb before them that they might see the reality of His resurrection body (Luke xxiv, 39-43; John xx, 27). Hear His word to Thomas and to us, "Be not faithless, but believing. . . . Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (John xx, 27, 29). Then lay to heart His words to them and to us, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you" (verse 21), and may we be such Spirit-filled believers in all that is written that we shall in all things glorify Him.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 16, 1911.

Topic.—The spirit of the resurrection.—Rom. vi, 1-14. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The saddest day that this world ever saw was the day that the body of Jesus lay in the tomb of Joseph's garden. The gladdest day that this world ever saw was when the angel of the resurrection proclaimed, "He is not here; He is risen." No man can say how much that proclamation has meant and through all eternity shall mean to the sinning and dying sons of men. But we know that that first Easter message has answered the deepest yearnings of the human heart. It has turned man's night of ignorance and uncertainty into the brightness of the morning. It has emancipated the believing soul from the fear of death. It has flooded the world with the light of a new hope and a new life.

1. The spirit of the resurrection is the spirit of joy. If it be true that no hour is more solemn than that in which the bodily powers fail, the fluttering pulse ceases to beat, the cold stillness settles upon the features so lately wreathed in smiles; if there is no corruption to be compared with the corruption of the tomb and no sorrow with the breaking of the ties of love, then where shall we look for a greater joy than to the message of the angel who stands by the tomb of our Lord? In the light of the beautiful Easter message no longer does death appear as a terrible calamity, nor does the grave drip with horrors, nor does a man leaving the world enter into a black and silent eternity. But death appears as an angel from heaven, and the grave is the place where Jesus goes his beloved sleep. Dying, a man goes home—home to the Father. Easter is the day of joy. No other festival has so much joy in its keeping. In our Scriptural lesson Paul makes the believer one with his Lord. We may not understand all the mystery. But we can enter into the gladness of Paul's faith when he exclaims, "If we died with Christ we believe that we shall also live with Him." Is not any message which brings such glorious news a message of joy?

2. The spirit of Easter is also the spirit of power. We are no longer the bond slaves of sin and death, for by His dying and resurrection Christ has delivered us. The power that raised Christ from the dead is working in us, and it will defy all those forces of the world, the flesh and the devil which serve to make a good and true life impossible for us in this sinful world. We may walk in newness of life if we yield ourselves to the working of this power. It is no longer I, but Christ, that liveth in me. What a wonderful truth it is! I am weak, I am sinful, I am subject to death but Christ is divinely strong. Christ dies for my sins; Christ overcomes death on my behalf. Henceforth not in my weakness, but in Christ's strength; not in bondage to sin, but as an instrument of righteousness unto God; not as the slave of death, but as possessing the power of an endless life, am I to live my life in this world. May this Easter, with all its messages of joy and power, lead us to open our hearts anew to the spirit of Christ that he may reign supremely within us and make our lives His own.

An Invitation From Japan.

Our Japanese friends take long looks ahead, as is shown by the fact that they have invited the World's Christian Endeavor union to hold its convention in 1917 in Japan. The invitation reads as follows:

The year 1917 is a most important year in Japan because the semicentennial anniversary of the coronation of the present Emperor Mutsuhito will be observed and the World's Industrial exhibition will be held in Tokyo during that year. These two things alone will no doubt call together many people to Japan from every part of the world, and that is the reason why we are especially anxious to have a great Christian Endeavor gathering in Japan during that year. We believe there will be many Endeavorers abroad who will come to Japan to attend or see those two special occasions besides the Christian Endeavor convention.

We hope you will take this matter into your careful consideration and find some way to grant and realize our earnest desire.

Representing 4,000 Endeavorers in the empire, we are TOKIYUJI OSADA, President.
TORAJI MAKINO, Treasurer.
TATSU SAWAYA, General Secretary.
The Japan Union of Christian Endeavor.

Christian Endeavor In Europe.

On the continent of Europe Christian Endeavor has held steadily on its widening way. Except in France and possibly Austria, there has been no backward step, while some of the countries have forged ahead. Even in the countries mentioned the decline has been more seeming than real.

The German national convention, held in October, was particularly strong and helpful.

The following are the numbers of societies reported by some of the European countries:

France, 83; Germany, 440; Finland, 41; Hungary, 14; Italy, 19; Norway, 40; Spain, 48; Switzerland, 43.—Francis E. Clark.

Dr. Baer's Advice.

THERE BE OTHERS.

Second Cousin Raymond Happy as Long as Graft is Easy.

"Acting as a reception committee of one," grimly said the old codger in reply to the inquiry of a neighbor who had encountered the veteran humped up and shuddering in the frigid waiting room of the railway station at 6:10 a. m., "I'm here to meet my second cousin Raymond and his retinue and not expecting them to arrive this morning for the reason that, as Cousin Raymond wrote that he would positively be on this train, my long acquaintance with Raymond and his peculiarities leads me to believe that he will not come until later.

"Second Cousin Raymond is one of those jocular souls who subsist on borrowed money and shed sunshine as the other sheds otter of roses.

"He believes that whatever happens is for the best and eats you out of house and home with a cheering indifference to carking care. He always brings all his folks, including his wife, who came of a fine old southern family and never in her life did anything else, and their children, all of whom, even the harelipped one, are as many and hungry as their parents, and generally another relative or two whom Cousin Raymond has generously invited to come along. This time Raymond writes that, though he has had a (ha, ha) mortgage foreclosed on him lately and his (tee, hee) Mexican rubber plantation stock didn't turn out quite as well as he expected and a few other little (haw, haw) things like that have slipped a cog, the Lord is still with him. So possibly that's who he's bringing along upon this occasion.

"But, be that as it may, I've come down here to meet Raymond whenever he arrives and slip him a ten dollar bill and a hint and slide him and his gang back on to the train before it starts and shove them along to Puxico and on to Third Cousin Lester, who has but lately been visiting us. That's one nice thing about Raymond—his disposition is so sunny that he doesn't give a darn who he sponges on just so's he gets plenty."—Tom P. Morgan in Puck.

His Frankness Won.

The late Senator Dolliver said that in politics it paid to be frank and honest with the people.

"My predecessor in the senate," he said, "was John H. Gear. On one occasion the prohibition spirit was running high, and a public meeting was held, with a well known Quaker as chairman. Gear was invited to the meeting. He accepted the invitation. The old Quaker called him to the platform and said:

"We learn that thou dost not belong to any temperance society and also that thou dost drink liquor at thy discretion. Is this true?"

"Every word of it is true," replied Gear, "but did you ever hear of my doing anything dishonorable?"

"Nay, Mr. Gear," replied the old Quaker chairman—"nay, we have never heard anything else to thy discredit. Thy frankness is more to be commended than thy habits. But thou hast not lied to us, and we will support thee."

"And they did," said Senator Dolliver, "and elected him too."—Washington Star.

Her Bridge Prize.

A decided coldness between two women who had been friends for many years is the result of a mistake made by the maid of one of them who had had a four table bridge party one afternoon recently. In keeping with the custom, she had provided a prize for each table, to be brought to the card room just before tea was served and placed on the tables which bore the corresponding numbers. It was a "lovely party" in every respect, with never a hitch until the woman at No. 3 opened the parcel which was supposed to contain her trophy of victory over her three competitors, but which really contained a piece of perfumed soap. Unfortunately, the hostess was not in the group when the package was opened, and much had been said before she discovered that the wrong bundle had been brought downstairs.—New York Tribune.

The Seal's Marvelous Instinct.

The instinct of the seal is marvelous. It will leave its young on the ice in the morning and, going down through a hole, remain away all day swimming in search of food. Returning in the evening, it will locate its offspring in the same "patch" among hundreds of thousands of other baby seals notwithstanding that the ice may have wheeled or drifted fifty or sixty miles during the day from wind and tide and notwithstanding that the patch may extend thirty or forty miles from one end to the other. Whether this instinct is of the class that enables the bird without any mark or chart in a forest with millions of trees alike to find its way back with ease and precision to its nest I do not know, but it is one of those wonders in nature before which human knowledge is brought to a full stop.—Sir Edward Morris in Wide World Magazine.

TANEYTOWN LOCAL COLUMN

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Joshua F. Delaplaine, of Waynesboro, was a visitor in town, on Thursday.

Have you properly adjusted your fire insurance to your new location? This is important.

Mrs. Laura Reindollar left for York, on Thursday evening, to visit her mother, who is ill.

George Benner, the oldest citizen of the district, is critically ill, and his death is expected at any time.

Mrs. E. K. Reaver, who has been quite ill during the past two weeks, is much improved at present.

Rev. P. S. Hooper is at present at Steelton, Pa., where he will assist Rev. M. P. Hocker during the Easter season.

Mrs. J. W. Nusbaum, who spent a portion of the winter in Union Bridge, has returned to her home in Taneytown.

The nomination of town officers for May 1 election, takes place on Tuesday evening, April 18. Keep this in mind, if interested.

Misses Rhoda Weant and Vallie Shorb, of Detour, and Edward O. Weant and wife, of Westminster, were guests of M. A. Koons and wife, this week.

The April 1st. financial transactions of the local banks were considerably in excess of last year, which is a sure indication that there is no scarcity of money.

"I receive the RECORD very regularly and enjoy reading it very much, as I can keep in touch with the people and doings back there.—R. C. CURRENS, Cedar Rapids, Iowa"

The regular meeting of the Fire Company will be held this Friday evening, at 8 p. m. Several matters of much importance will come up, and it is necessary for a full attendance.

Mrs. William Witherow was greatly surprised on her 61st. birthday, (March 29th.) by receiving 69 very pretty birthday cards from friends and relatives. She extends her thanks for the kind remembrances.

A beginning was made, this week, to clean Baltimore street of the thick coat of accumulated mud. If the street is not to be given a coat of stone, it should be thoroughly cleaned, especially from the square to railroad.

The cold Spring weather and the unfavorable appearance of growing crops, with the downward movement of prices for farm produce, has a tendency toward causing farmers to feel "blue," but it is much too soon for that.

Rev. Prof. C. F. Sanders will conduct regular services in the Lutheran church, on Sunday. Next week, there will be services every evening, on announced topics, by the pastor, Rev. L. B. Hafer, who will return from Philadelphia, on Monday.

Judson Hill, one of our best known citizens, was quietly married, last Thursday night, to Miss Helen Pauline Price, of Uniontown, the ceremony being by Seth Russell Downie, at Mr. Hill's home. The event was kept so quiet that we heard it only in time to give the formal announcement in last issue. His daughter, Mrs. Luther E. Hiltnerbrick, and her husband, were present at the ceremony. We extend congratulations to our neighbor.

Midnight in the Ozarks and yet sleepless Hiram Scranton, of Clay City, Ill., coughed and coughed. He was in the mountains on the advice of five doctors, who said he had consumption, but found no help in the climate, and started home. Hearing of Dr. King's New Discovery, he began to use it. "I believe it saved my life," he writes "for it made a new man of me, so that I can now do good work again." For all lung diseases, coughs, colds, laryngitis, asthma, croup, whooping cough, hay fever, hemorrhages, hoarseness or quinsy, it is the best known remedy. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by R. S. McKinney, Drug-gist, Taneytown, Md.

A Birthday Surprise.

(For the RECORD.)
 A complete surprise was given to Wm. Bollinger, near Emmitsburg, on Tuesday evening, March 28, in honor of his birthday. The evening was spent in social conversation, games and music on the organ. At a late hour all were invited into the dining room to partake of the refreshments served, consisting of ice creams, cakes, candies, lemonade and coffee. It is needless to say that all did justice to the delicious dainties. At the hour of midnight all departed for their homes, wishing to spend many more pleasant evenings together.

Those present were, Wm. Bollinger and wife, Edward Hobbs and wife, John Eckard and wife, Asbury Fuss and wife, Russel Eckard and wife, Charles Poble and wife, Jacob Ohler and wife; Mrs. Harry Baker, Mrs. Fannie Eline; Misses Jessie Eline, Pauline Baker, Edith and Mable Poble, Bruce Munshour, Mary and Maude Hobbs, Mary and Fannie Bollinger, Pauline and Edna Hobbs, Alice and Helen Fuss; Messrs. John Munshour, Herbert Poble, Jones Baker, Charles Motter, Harry Munshour, Chas. Ohler, Guy Hobbs, Jesse Burns, Allen and George Bollinger, Neville and Mearl Eckard, Percy, Elmer Charles and Joe Bollinger, Wilbur Fuss.

Mr. J. H. Hale who grows fruit from New England to Florida, sprays extensively with Lime-Sulphur against the San Jose and other scale insects and says—"It cleans up the trees". Not only is it sure death to scales but is also a good fungicide killing disease spores, mosses, etc., and smoothing up the bark.

The demand for Lime-Sulphur has grown so rapidly and competition has become so great as to drive some manufacturers to cheapen their product, while others produce a richer article, feeling that the highest quality is really the cheapest. Those who buy the best quality spray but once in a season; those who buy lower grades often have to spray twice, but they choose the higher grade the second time.

The Bowker Insecticide Co., whose new plant at Baltimore is completed, is one of the oldest manufacturers of spraying materials and make the highest grade Lime-Sulphur. We advise everyone who grows fruit to write the Bowker Insecticide Co., Equitable Bldg., Baltimore, stating how many trees and what kinds are to be sprayed and asking the advice of the Company's experts, for which no charge is made. They send interesting literature free on request.

Held Bible and Rudder.
 Some years ago Japan was neither so free nor so friendly with other nations as she is today. In those old days when a foreign ship entered the Japanese ports the captain was obliged to place his Bible and rudder in charge of the chief officer of the port and leave them there until he was ready to sail. Of course he wouldn't sail without either, and the Japs could easily keep tabs on the movements of all ships in their harbors.

The Seven Sleepers.
 The seven sleepers of Ephesus, a favorite subject in medieval art, were seven Christians who to escape the persecution of Decius concealed themselves in a cave whose mouth was closed by their enemies. The cave was rediscovered 200 years afterward, when the sleepers awoke youthful and in perfect health.
