One of the largest verdicts ever given by a jury in the Queen Anne County Court, was rendered, Tuesday, when a verdict for $20,000 was awarded to William B. Wilson, of Havre de Grace, against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company for injuries sustained at the time of the Susquehanna River Bridge collapse in 1909.

A blast was set off by the Carter Construction Company, contractors, building the Western Maryland extensionnear Cumberland, that contained three carloads of dynamite and one carload of giant powder. A whole mountain side of Woodcock Hollow, in the vicinity of Mount Savage, was torn away. It will require several weeks' work by steam shovels to clear away the debris. The jar from the blast was felt for a distance of 10 miles.

At the present rate of desertions in the United States Army from the troops in Texas and the small number of re-cruits, the forces in this section of the country will be depleted to an ineffective army corps in a few months. The desertions have aggregated more than 1,200 in the two months out of a possible 20,-000, and the officers say that about 80 per cent. or more of the deserters have headed for Mexico, most of them having joined the insurrecto army.

The city of Cumberland, on Tuesday, after a hot contest, voted in favor of a $500,000 bond issue for a new water supply from Evitt's creek, instead of a continuation of the Potomac river supply in connection with a filtration system. Messrs. Wellington and Pearre strongly advocated the latter, while the Mayor, the newspapers and most of the professional men advocated the new source of supply. The vote was 1803 for, to 1695 against; much bad feeling was caused pretenses. by the contest, which has been on hand for some time.

With the temperature ranging from 80 to 90 degrees in the shade, ice harvesting is in full blast on the Susquehanna river at Long Level. The ice is being taken from the shores of the river, where thousands of tons of clear crystal blocks were packed during the great jams of the past winter. Mud and debris cover the accumulation, preserving it from the hot rays of the sun almost as effectively as in an ice house. Secretary MacVeagh on Tuesday, invited popular subscriptions to a $50,-000,000 issue of Government bonds, to reimburse the treasury general fund for expenditnres on account of the Panama Canal. Treasury officials expect the loan will be largely oversubscribed and in distributing the new securities, the Govgive preference to smaller bidders. Mr. Ross Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grove C. Jackson, and Miss Ethel Lenhart, daughter of former Sheriff James A. Lenhart, of Kingwood, W. Va., surprised their friends by going to Oakland, Md., and being married. The parents of the bride opposed the match. The bride secured a team and with a driver started toward Oakland, 20 miles away, which point was reached about o'clock in the morning. The groom had gone ahead by train and was sound asleep at the hotel when Miss Lenhart He had given her up. He was routed out and a minister secured, and the marriage ceremony was performed at 1.40 a. m.

Indications are that when the new State assessment of property, now in progress, is completed Baltimore city, instead of paying about 69 per cent. of the State taxes, as it now does, will not pay more than one-half. This is due to the enormous increase of property values throughout the State as ascertained by the assessors. The increase of property values in the 23 counties of Maryland will not be less than $100,000,000, and may go considerably beyond that. property valuation in the State on which the State tax is now levied is $836,665, 067, and of this amount Baltimore's share is $485,954,920. The counties are now paying taxes on $350,710,147. The sum of $100,000,000 added to this brings the counties' share up to $450,710,147.

The Rev. Dr. Eli Huber, one of the foremost ministers and educators in the Lutheran church, died May 12, at his home in Gettysburg, after a sickness of several months. Dr. Huber, who was 77 years old, was born at Pine Grove, Schuylkill county. "Clean-up Week" in Md. Towns.

Our Exchanges all over the State are booming the "clean-up-week" plan, and various towns are either at work, or getting ready. While results have not been generally stated, the indications are that only the most confirmed non-progressive only the most confirmed non-progressive places will disregard the movement.

Frederick is taking the lead in thoroughness. The Post says: "Interest in "Clean-up Day" is hourly growing. The most encouraging reports are coming in trom all quarters of the city. Lots and alleys that have not been cleaned for years are receiving a great cleaning. Everything and everywhere is getting a general over-hauling, a regular furbishing up for the great day. Spots that have been an eyesore for years are being cleaned; streets that have been overber of them are hauling at night, working by the light of lanterns. Let the public bear it in mind that the good work must go on and on."

In Belair, Harford county, street cleanwill witness in particular a general cleaning of private properties.

In Hagerstown, the Mayor and council will co-operate with the Civic League, and give the citv a thorough cleaning up. The Cambridge (Md.) Record says: to estimate that fully seventy-five per cent. of the premises here have already been cleaned up, and there are more than a dozen carts going every day. It is safe to predict that Cambridge will be the cleanest city in the State before the week is over."

Report of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury respectfully reports that it has investigated 37 cases; found presentments and true bills in 27 cases, and determined not to find presentments and true bills in 10 cases, among them being the case of Henry Mitchell who is now in jail on the charge of false

It is most gratifying to be able to report the apparent absence of many crimes of importance in the county, and that the greater number of cases investigated were for minor offenses.

This, together with the further fact that there appears to be but eight constables in the county, leads to the recommendation that some change in the law be made, to the end that the appointment of capable persons as constables in each of the districts of the county may be made, as they are greatly

It is unsanitary, and without proper provision for the detention, especially of female prisoners. It is also our opinion of $100, $500 and $1000. They will be that no sheriff ought to be required, or dated June 1, 1911, and will be payable expected, to reside in the building under present conditions; that repairs, or changes, to the present building would be a waste of public money, and we recommend that a new and modern jail spells. be constructed, with separate residence

The Grand Jury also visited the Alms House and are pleased to report that this institution, as it is now conducted, is one of the best in the state, and that the Commissioners, as well as the Steward and wife-Mr. and Mrs. Humbert-are all to be highly complimented for their care of the institution. Some few improvements ought to be made, and we inderstand that they are under present contemplation.

The Grand Jurors were entertained at dinner by the Sheriff and wife, and also at the Alms House, with delightful refreshments. There being nothing further to engage our attention, we respectfully ask to discharged, subject to the call of the

TO STOP AUTO SPEEDING.

Governor Issues Rigid Orders to all Sheriffs Constables and Justices.

The American, on Tuesday, contains the following article relative to the action of Governor Crothers in making an attempt to compel all autoists to observe the automobile laws of the State. The nuisance has become so intolerable, and the complaints so widespread, that the severest penalties are necessary if the rights of the general public to the saie use of the roads is to be maintained:

Governor Crothers said yesterday in discussing the distressing death of Mr. Williams and other automobile accidents:

Such affairs are more than deplorable. The fact that the victim happens to be the automobile owner himself does not lessen the sympathy we must all feel for one who meets such a tragic death or relieve it of its horrors. Aberdeen, Md , May 17.—Hon. Wm. B. Baker, three times a member of Congress, twice a State Senator, once a member of the House of Delegates, president of the Aberdeen National Bank and who Man of Harford," died at his home here at 8.40 o'clock this morning.

His illness began on Sunday evening last, when he was found in a semi-conscious condition in the bathroom at his home, having sustained a paralytic shock which caused him to fall, striking his head against the side of the tub and receiving a severe scalp wound. He did not regain consciousness. Had he lived until July 22 he would have reached his 71st. birthday.

Funeral services will be held at his late home on Saturday at 11 a. m. His pastor, Rev. A. J. Hill, of the Aberdeen Methodist Episcopal church, will officiate, assisted by other ministers, and interment will be made in the family burying ground. His six nephews will act as pallbearers.

Mr. Baker was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and of the Order of Odd Fellows, being the oldest member of the local order.

General and genuine is the regret felt at Mr. Baker's death, not only in Aberdeen and in Harford county, but throughout the state. He had been in public life for over a quarter of a century and on several occasions had been prominently mentioned by Republicans as their candidate for governor. He retired permanently from public life last November when he was defeated for Congress in the Second District.

Everything appears to be old and yellowed, there is an air of antiquity about all things; and yet the life is so turbulent and active as to appear paradoxical.

There seems to be an ever present past hanging on all things, but instead of being a dead weight bearing down, it strangely adds to the charm and fascination of them. Rome is a beautiful up-

In all things there is the ancient, middle-age, and modern viewpoints; if we came here only to see the vast art treasures of the city, there would be the same three-fold study, for all the churches, museums, galleries, palaces and private dwellings seem crowded with objects from all the ages down to the present. The same is true of the architecture of the city, of sculpture, of all the governments that have been here, of the ocial life of the people, of the great religion which has its centre here.

When we visited the Colosseum and the Forum we had a splendid picture of the life of the ancients; all the heroes on Wednesday, the automobile in which and warriors and orators and statesmen whose lives we studied so carefully, came before our minds, and we imagined them living and moving and having their being in these wide streets, in these spa-cious buildings, in these beautiful sur-roundings. These are the actual re-mains of the ancient days, and as you gaze upon them you cannot fail to be deeply impressed. The life of man seems very short after all, when you stand face to face with these living memorials of another way to the sameness of human nature in all ages. Many of the art objects and treasures, parts of buildings, marble columns from temples and churches, have been lifted at all times by the successive conquerors and carried off to home countries far away; as these most to rebuild the ancient cities by a re-assembling of these parts. Even here loss adjusted satisfactorily. The in Rome, blocks and columns of marble adorn public squares and plazas, after having done service originally in Pomepii or the ancient parts of the city itself This spirit of helping yourself is just as prevalent to-day, only we now call it the souvenir habit; while we do not enter these cities as conquering heroes, at the head of armies with banners, we are actuated with the same superior spirit; we come to see, and having seen, we chip a piece off a marble statue or pedestal, we take a chunk out of the Emporer Aurelian's wall, and we carry them off in triumph as a souvenir. Human nature is just the same now as t always was, and these ruins prove it beyond question.

We have climbed the seven hills of Rome; we have made the pilgrimage of the seven ancient churches; we bave crossed and re-crossed the Tiber; we have gone up and down the city. But of all the sights one of the greatest and grandest is the famous church of St. Peter, the head and fountain of Roman Catholicity; to walk up the vast nave of that church is to have impressed upon you a sense of your transitoriness, of your smallness in the scheme of things. beauty of it all rises to the sublime as you stand beneath the dome, a counter-On Monday evening, addresses will be part in appearances can be seen in our own National Capitol dome in Washington, and try to pierce its great depths. His Holliness Pope Pius the X.

The church of St. John Lateran is another of the vast structures in this city of vast things; it was formerly the seat of the head of the church, and its adjoining palace was the home of the Popes. Even to the present day, no one but the Pope or an especially designated personal representative, can say mass at its high altar. It is a great and beautiful church, and well repays the visit made to it, which we can consider part of our to it, which we can consider part of our pilgrimage, since it is one of the seven ancient churches visited by pilgrims.

Another interesting home of the Popes is the Castle of San Angelo, not far from St. Peter's, connected with it and the Vatican by underground passages, and very close to the Tiber.

The Quirinal Palace is the centre of the modern life of Rome, the residence of the King and Queen whom we saw on the streets and the sign of the new united Italy; it is beautifully situated on one of the seven hills, and thus symbolises the taking of a new lease of life in the ancient city. Rome is a thoroughly up-to-date city in its life and activities, and seems to thoroughly enjoy itself in utter disregard of its great past; it appears to act as though it had a still greater future before it, which it was determined to realize. It is a wonderful place, and we sigh as we are about to leave it.

The country shows up well, under the system of intensive farming in vogue throughout Italy. No ground is wasted and all is under a high state of cultivation. The wheat about ready to head, looks well and promises a large yield from 30 to 50 bushels per acre. Our farmers in old Carroll could learn much from their brothers here.

Small tracts thoroughly cultivated and highly fertilized with the stable products, cowpeas, clover, etc., are the rule. Fine fields of alfalfa are seen everywhere. Florence, Venice and Milan, interesting cities, are next on our list. Rome, May 7, '11. J. A. GOULDEN,

GLASS POULTRY HOUSES.

Certain city farmer poultry editors have chronic hysterics lest their readers use too much glass in their poultry houses.

We advise these editorial cushion pressers living in glass city sanctums not to throw stones at the pretty glass poultry house shown here, for, contrary to their scream, the glass does not grow frost and drip ice water on the fowls and litter, nor do the chickens sneeze their heads off, die of roup or freeze to death.

DON'TS.

Don't think that you are the sine qua non. The peacock spreads its tail rot? and screams "I'm it!" then sees its ugly feet and gets a fit. #### DON'TS.

Don't expect to have pretty, white, soft hands and succeed with poultry. Be a man, not a jellyfish.

Don't borrow this paper to read "Poultry Notes." Stealing chickens by night is never right. Stealing chickens on paper is an awful mean caper. If you do it you'll rue it.

Don't carry your business cares home to dinner. Your wife has enough little troubles of her own.

Don't hesitate to kill a drone hen because she is a pure bred bird. Many aristocrats are gilt edged ciphers.

Don't advertise and expect a rush before the printer's ink is dry. An ad. added to an ad. is the practical merchant's fad and brings the pull that makes glad.

Don't worry the editor of this paper by sending him questions about poultry. Send the questions to us. If you send him your check he will gladly return a neatly printed receipt and this paper for a whole year.

Don't be obnoxious to your fellow man by protecting a dog that kills neighbors' fowls. Your foul play may cause gun play.

Don't pin your faith to written guarantees. You may get stuck with truck. Don't sell bad eggs for hatching with the thought that you'll not be caught because your customer is 100 miles away. You may be within one hour of the judgment day.

Don't be bamboozled by a catalogue two feet thick. The more pictures the more tricksters.

Don't be satisfied with mongrel stock. Full blood flock for full egg crock.

Don't butt in; let that to the goat. Don't grunt; let that to the shote. If tempted to go croak a bit go out and with the bullfrogs sit.

Don't hatch Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans late. March is best for the heavyweight.

"I've always thought it looked very nice," said Miss Jones, with an air of tion, uttered in a despairing tone. "Yes, of course. How else could 1 wear it?" was the response. "And it is so comfortable, with plenty of room in the back for my shoulder blades. And, then, I like a gown to fasten in front. Why, what's the matter?" as her sister covered her face with her hands and sat down abruptly. "Do you see anything wrong with it?"

"No, no, no," said her sister, shaking her head, "only, you know, you've been wearing it hind part before."-New York Press.

Who Owns the Falkland Islands? Few people are aware to this day that the Falkland islands are marked in all Argentine maps and geographies as "unlawfully retained by Great Britain." The origin of the dispute was that England after abandoning the islands in 1774 resumed possession in 1829. The Argentine government protested and, as A. Stuart Pennington points out in his book on the country, is even today "careful to do nothing which could even apparently recognize the rights of the present possessors." It was for that reason that it declined a proposal a few years ago to run a line of Argentine ships to the islands.

"Sunny Jim" Dislikes Ceremony. Vice President Sherman's fondness for mixing with the crowd almost disarranged the White House plans at the last New Year reception. Mr. Sherman was the first man received by the president. The vice president then became a member of the president's receiving party. The presiding officer of the senate continued to bow sweetly as long as possi-ble and then quietly stepped into the line of guests which had already passed the president and walked out to the east room, where there were hundreds of politicians of various brands. The vice president was having a fine time when he was interrupted by Captain Archibald Butt, the president's military aid.

"Mr. Vice President," said Captain Butt, "you have been missed from the

"WELL, HERE I AM. WHAT DO YOU WANT?" receiving line. Permit me to escort you back in time to receive the diplomats.

"So long, boys," said the vice president, waving his hand to his old cronies in the house. "See you later." Diplomat after diplomat passed the president, and behind them the vice president saw an endless line of gold braid adorning the breasts of countless officers of the army and navy stationed in Washington.

"Those fellows don't want to see me for anything," said the vice president as he slipped back into the east room. Half an hour later, while the vice president was exchanging the compliments of the season and telling and hearing stories, he was again accosted by Captain Butt.

"I've been looking all over the White House for you," said the military aid. "Well, here I am," remarked "Sunny Jim," slapping Butt on the back. "What do you want this time?"

JOKING AMONG THE GRAVE STATESMEN.

Lively One Put Over on Congressman McKinley.

Representative McKinley of Illinois, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, one of the richest men in the house and known affectionately among his fellows as the "human Christmas tree" because of his generosity, was entering the house chamber a few minutes before the noon hour. "Say," cried Representative Rodenburg of East St. Louis, "I've just heard of a fine opening for some of that surplus capital of yours."

"What is it?" asked Mr. McKinley. "I know of a famous city, a place of probably 100,000 inhabitants, that has not a livery stable or garage. I'm thinking that it would offer a fine chance for either business because the city is always full of tourists that want to be taken around to see the sights."

"What's the town?" asked McKinley. "Venice," replied Rodenburg, dodging a bundle of Congressional Records that some one hurled at his head .-Cincinnati Times-Star.

Funny Census Questions.

Germany, like other countries, is taking the census this year, and, if we can trust a Paris contemporary, some of the questions can scarcely come within the category of "pertinent." It may be that the Parisian journal is merely trying to add to the gayety of nations by poking a little fun at Germany; but. anyway, here are examples of the questions it says the Germans have to face:

Are you lawfully married or not? When were you married? Have you been divorced? What age was your wife at the time of the marriage? Are you or your wife subject to nervous attacks? If you have children under twelve months state how they are nourished. Are you blind or simply in one eye? Do you use lorgnettes, spectacles or pince nez? What size boots and shoes does your wife take? Do you drink alcohol?

These questions, if they be given correctly by our contemporary, must recall Artemus Ward's account of how he took the census-for instance: "Have you had the measles. If so, how many?"-London Globe.

Another Good Scheme Gone Wrong. Manager Gus Hartz was standing near the opera house box office when one of two panhandlers who had entered the lobby approached him, and holding out an addressed and sealed envelope, begged for the price of a postage stamp.

"It's for me mudder, boss," he sniveled. "Youse wouldn't turn down er guy fer de price er de stamp, would youse?"

"Never." said the manager, deftly grasping the envelope and throwing it through the box office window. "Here, Fred," addressing himself to Treasurer Coan, "stamp this and have it mailed!" The velocity of the proceedings fairly took the panhandler's breath away. Then, backing away to where his partner awaited him he whispered, "Nothin' doing, bo-the guy's wise."-Cleveland Leader.

A Chance Acquaintance.

Not long ago Marc Klaw was at Monte Carlo. Next to him at one of the tables in the casino sat a little old lady. Losing together and then winning together, they picked up a chance acquaintance. At last they rose together, Marc gallantly conducting her to the door and thence to her automobile. As they passed through the vestibule the orchestra was playing the "Ave Maria" of Gounod. "Isn't it lovely?" said Marc, tears coming to his eyes. "The last time I heard it sung was by Christine Nilsson." The old lady smiled and said, "So long ago?" As Marc turned back into the casino and the auto sped away a friend said, "Do you know who that was?" Marc said he did not. "It was Christine Nilsson." said his friend.-Colonel Watterson in Louisville Courier-Journal.

Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar bymn: The half has never been told,

Of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be: The calf has never been sold, But when it's sold he'll pay.

There is the widest diversity of opinion as to the merit of the decision and as to its results. It seems accepted that the Standard Oil Company had prepared itselt for an adverse ruling and that its plans for the continuance of its gigantic business have already been carefully and completely formed. ### The Moneyless Man.

The poets have sung in barrowing strain of the moneyless man and hissor-row and pain. He gets the ice pitcher wherever he goes-no welcome for him, no relief for his woes! He is kicked from hotels by the janitors' feet, police-men begrudge him the use of the street, he's chased from the alleys as though but a dog, and turned from the doors of the swell synagogue; he must drag out his days in the best way he can-the world has no use for the moneyless man. Supposing it's true, why should cuss words be hurled like bricks at the poor old long suffering world? In ninety-nine cases or more out of ten, the blame should be placed on the moneyless men; the lazy, the shiftless, when busted and wrecked, how much from the world are they due to expect? And why should industrious citizens give to loafers in-who's shown that he's honest and willing to try, the world loosens up in a praiseworthy way, and does what it can for that suffering jay. But most of the hollow-eyed money-less men have bunkoed this planet again and again. I don't blame the world that it's likely to pan on the chestnutty spiel of the money-

Last time Senator Carter retired it was in a blaze of glory. He was about as unpopular with congress the day he left public life as a man could well be. It happened thus:

The house had passed a $50,000,000 river and harbor bill, and it had been reported to the senate. McKinley didn't want to veto it and also didn't want it to pass. He sent for Carter. Tradition says he spoke in substance

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A late book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote.

Lesson IX.—Second Quarter, For May 28, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mic. iv, 1-8-Memory Verses, 2, 3-Golden Text, Mic. iv, 3-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Our golden text and its context, which tells of a time when nations shall learn war no more, is found also in Isa. ii, 1-4. The same glorious assurance is found in Ps. xlvi, 9, "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth." It is written in a different form in Isa. xxxii, 1-17, "A king shall reign in righteousness, * * * and the work of righteousness shall be peace." In Ps. Ixxii, 11, we read that "all kings shall fall down before Him; all nations shall serve Him." In Rev. xi, 15, we are told of the time when "the kingdoms of this world shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ." It would be well if teachers and scholars would search out the many passages which tell of this kingdom of peace on earth when the Lord shall come in His glory and occupy the throne of David at Jerusalem, ruling in the midst of Israel, and also as King of kings and Lord of lords-King over all the earth. I will suggest a few passages which will lead to many more if any one is willing to search: Isa. ix, 6, 7; Luke 1, 31, 32; Zeph. iii, 14, 15; Zech. xiv, 9; Jer. iii, 17; Dan. vii, 27; Ezek. xliii, 7. Not by the armies of the nations, nor by peace conferences, nor by the church, nor by missions, shall this be brought about; nor in this present age of the world's history, but only by Him concerning whom it is written, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it * * * until He come whose right it is, and I will give it Him" (Ezek. xxi, 27). Not by any nation now existing as such on the face of the earth will He bring peace on earth, but by Israel, soon to be restored and recognized as a nation and to be converted as a nation when they shall see Him coming in glory and shall receive Him as their Messiah Isaiah's message had special reference to Judah and Jerusalem, Micah's to Samaria and Jerusalem (Isa. i. 1; Mic. i, 1).

The words Israel, Zion, Jerusalem, must always be taken in their plain literal sense unless there is some qualifying phrase or adjective indicating differently. The Zion and Jerusalem of Mic. iii, 12, are the same as the Zion of Mic. iv, 7. It has been overthrown many times; it shall as truly and literally become the throne of the Lord, which He shall build up when He comes in His glory (Ps. cii, 16).

In those days when the glory of the Lord shall be seen in Israel nations shall flow to her as literally as the queen of Sheba and the kings of the earth came to Solomon, or as the wise men from the east brought their treasures to the king of the Jews when He | The first convert was baptized in 1886, was but a babe in Bethlehem (II Chron. ix, 9, 22-24). According to Mic. v, 2, it was predicted that He would be born in Bethlehem, and He was. The same verse says that He would rule in Israel, and though He has never yet done so He will just as truly and literally as He was born in Bethlehem.

From Jerusalem His word has gone forth into all the world to gather out from all the nations a people for His name, His body, the church, to reign with Him when He shall come in His glory, but that was not revealed in Old Testament times nor until after He had come in humiliation proclaiming a kingdom at hand which never came because they killed the King, and thus postponed the kingdom till He shall come again, for the heavens have received Him until the times of restoration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began (Acts iii, 20, 21). Then shall (Mic. vii, 20) be fulfilled, "Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old."

Some nations are against Israel to this day, but they know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they His counsel, and do not know that a time is coming when their gain and their substance shall be consecrated unto the Lord of the whole earth, who will then be ruler in Israel. See verses 11 to 13 of our lesson chapter and all of Isa. lx: When this great peace shall have come on earth none shall make Israel afraid any more tian boy of sixteen which he cannot (verse 4); they shall not see evil any more (Zeph. iii, 15). As we consider the thousands still being driven from their homes in Russia let us pray more earnestly for the fulfillment of Isa. lxii, 1-7. A great war must come before there can be this good time of war no more, for it is His determination to gather the nations to pour upon them His indignation because of their treatment of

His people Israel. He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked (Isa. xi, 4). At His coming in glory with all His saints shall this be, and then shall the last verses of our lesson be fulfilled, "The Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever, * * * the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Zion." This is more fully described in Rev. xix, 11-16, and it is utterly useless to expect peace on earth, a lasting peace, until "this man shall be the peace" and be great unto the ends of the earth, ruling in Israel as the earthly center of His worldwide kingdom.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 28, 1911.

Topic.—A missionary journey around the world.—V. Missions in Japan and Korea, -Acts xvii, 1-14. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In our missionary journey around the world we now leave the United States and its island possessions and go on to the great mission fields of Asia, beginning with the island empire of Japan and Korea, which is now controlled politically by Japan. It is appropriate to study these two mission fields together, for their future history is destined to be closely associated, and even in the field of missions each will have some influence upon the other. What the result will be only the future can determine, but we can earnestly hope and pray that in the providence of God it will mean the advancement of Christianity in both lands. 1. Missions in Japan. The first missionaries to carry the gospel to Japan were Roman Catholics. Under Francis Xavier they reached Japan in 1549. Though great difficulties were faced, yet some success was at first achieved. But Jesuitical political intrigues soon aroused the opposition of the natives. Civil war resulted. Christians were put to death and over their graves the inscription was placed, "So long as the sun shall warm the earth, let no Christian be so bold as to come to Japan." All foreigners were excluded, and the Japanese were prohibited from leaving their country. But Christianity was not to be barred forever. In 1854, through the efforts of Commodore Perry, a treaty of friendship was negotiated between Japan and the United States and the period of seclusion was over. The edicts against Christianity were not removed until 1873. Meanwhile, however, missionary work had begun without serious opposition.

The Christian church was deeply interested in the opening of Japan to the civilized world. Mission work was soon planned, the first Protestant missionaries arriving in Japan in 1859. They were sent out by the Episcopal, Dutch Reformed and Presbyterian churches. The year 1909 was the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of Christian work in Japan. The jubilee year was celebrated by the whole missionary body in conjunction with the Japanese churches. The gospel has produced a tremendous effect in Japan. Japan's position among the nations of the world today is largely due to the direct and indirect influences of Christian missionaries and their work.

2. Missions in Korea. The history of Korean missions reads like a romance. Catholic missionaries began work in the peninsula in the eighteenth century. Great success attended their efforts, with the result that terrible persecutions followed. The work was finally abandoned, but the seed brought forth some fruit. The first Protestant missionary entered Korea in 1884. Tracts containing translations of portions of the gospel of Luke had already been distributed near the eastern Manchurian border. and the first church was organized in 1887. In 1909, including adherents and catechumens waiting for admission into the church, there were nearly 200,000 men and women in Korea who confessed Christ. People of all classes have been reached. The Korean Christians themselves have been zealous in spreading the gospel. They go throughout the land, telling of the blessings they have received and winning others for Christ. No missionary field in the world today is so full of promise as that of Korea. God is frequently sending times of refreshing. The church should realize the responsibility of the great opportunity presented and put forth every effort to complete the Christianization of Everybody Has Power.

"I have sometimes thought that young people did not begin to realize the importance of their mission to other young people or how fleeting is their peculiar opportunity," says Rev. F. E. Clark, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. "There is help which a Christian boy of sixteen can render to another Chrispossibly render when he is eighteen, still less when he is twenty-five, and which will be out of the question for him when he is forty.

"There are other things which he can do when he is eighteen, twentyfive or forty, but he cannot do the work of a sixteen-year-old boy except when he is sixteen years old. This may sound like a Bromidian truism, but there is really a very profound truth in it and a very important one. "It is equally true of the young man of twenty-five. He can influence other young men of twenty-five as he could not possibly have done when he was sixteen and as it will be equally impossible for him to attempt to do when he is fifty. "The minister has his peculiar responsiblities, but it is no less true that the young woman who considers herself a very unimportant member of his flock has hers too. There are people whom she can reach who are quite beyond the power of the minister's persuasive words to appeal to. There are opportunities in her life which will never come to him."

It Brought a Fortune to a Family That It Had Impoverished

When I went into my new house I desired to have one room in it as antique as possible. That room is my library. Among the furniture I desired was a desk. I looked about everywhere for one that I could be sure was very old and at last found one that filled my wishes. Upon getting it into my library I unlocked every drawer and after dusting it wiped it with a damp cloth. I noticed that every bit of space in the desk was converted into use except a rectangular area which seemed to have been omitted. A bit of veneering as large as the tip of my finger had become loosened. In pressing on it I released a secret drawer. There was only one was important. It was addressed on the back to Peter Driscoll and was dated April 5, 1895. It read: Send the balance of the property at NEMO. I am endowed with a fair amount of curiosity and, fortunately for me, have the means to gratify it. I telephoned a prominent detective agency to send me a good man. It sent me Evan Hunt. Showing him my desk, I told him where I had bought it and directed him to trace its ownership. The next day he reported that the storekeeper from whom I had purchased it had obtained it from the estate of Peter Driscoll, a man who had been found murdered one morning in his bed.

I was very much moved by the news. I saw at once that the discovery of the paper placed upon me an obligation to turn the letter over to the authorities. But as I am of a retiring disposition I did not relish being mixed up in a murder case. I concluded to prosecute my investigations further before making the matter public. Pledging my detective to secrecy, I showed him the paper I had taken from the desk and directed him to find the writer. The signature "Nemo" was undoubtedly assumed. But the detective believed the handwriting was that of the person who had made the demand since those who levy blackmail are not likely to impart a knowledge of what they are doing to any one else.

It was fully a month before he reported that he had found a man whom he believed to be the writer of the letter. No clew had ever been found to lead the police to the murderer of Peter Driscoll. Hunt had secured an acquaintance with Driscoll's family. They had been rich, but discovered at the death of their father that the property, which had consisted of interest bearing stocks and bonds, had disappeared. They had concluded that he had been speculating and lost it. They had been obliged to give up the handsome house in which they lived and had sold their furniture at auction. Hunt questioned them to discover if they suspected their father's property had passed to the man who had written the letter, but found they had never heard of him. A great many discoveries are stumbled on. Hunt stumbled on the man who wrote the letter. He talked with every one who had known Driscoll and learned incidentally from one of Driscoll's acquaintances, a banker, that Driscoll had kept an account with him. Hunt succeeded in inducing the man to let him have a peep at Driscoll's account. One man, an Italian named Vechi, had received large amounts for which there was no explanation. Hunt then asked Driscoll's widow to permit him to look over her husband's papers. Among them he found a letter the handwriting of which corresponded with that of the note I had discovered. In the note it was disguised, but not so successfully but that Hunt suspected it was the same as in the letter he had compared it with. An expert proved that he was right. Vechi lived as a poor man, keeping a shop in which he dealt in odds and ends, curiosities, and did something in the way of autographs | that so far as she could discover the of prominent persons.

When we had laid our plans I went with Hunt to Vechi's shop. The Italian had as disagreeable a face as any for.

man I ever knew. I shuddered at his knowing we possessed his secret lest he murder us to prevent our giving it to the authorities. Hunt said to him:

"Do you buy autographs here?" "Sometimes." "I have one I would like to sell you."

"Whose is it?" "Your own."

The man gave an involuntary start. Up to this time he did not suspect we had any other motive than to sell a bona fide autograph. Hunt's words "Your own" and the way the detective looked at him assured him that we had come on a very different errand.

"Let me see it," said the autograph dealer in a low voice.

"I will read you the note to which it is signed," said Hunt. I had arranged with Hunt that when he drew the note I was to put my hand in my side pocket and grasp a revolver. I did so, and Hunt, standing well away from the Italian that he might not snatch the paper, read what was written, ending with the word "Nemo." Vechi heard his doom in the words and turned ghastly white. Hunt waited for him to speak, keeping his eyes riveted on him the while.

"How much do you ask for it?" finally Vechi asked.

"My friend here," replied the detective, pointing to me, "is its owner. He intends to give the proceeds of its sale to the family of the man to whom this note was addressed and who was"-

Vechi staggered. Hunt continued: "The price is certain stocks and bonds that passed to this man Nemo. If they are all returned the note will be returned to the writer to do what he likes with it and no steps will be taken in the case. If every security is not given up Nemo will be arrested before he can leave his shop."

Vechi seemed to be thinking for a few moments, after which he asked: "Tell me the amount."

We did not know the amount, but had provided for this. "You alone know the amount at present, but since we know that this property has passed into the possession of Nemo we can at any time discover the exact amount. If we discover that he has withheld any of it we may reopen the case."

Vechi stood wavering. Whether he was hesitating as to the amount he would return or whether to defy us I don't know. Presently he said:

"I will buy your autograph, gentlemen, but I have not the price here. You must go with me to my house."

We went with him, as he suggested, I walking on one side of him, Hunt on the other. Hunt and I each having a hand on a revolver concealed. When we reached the house Vechi took us into a room, locked the door and said: "What guarantee have I that you will keep your word?" "None whatever," said Hunt, "You must rely on the promise of a gentleman." Making a virtue of necessity, he opened a closet door, exposing a safe | torture. timbedded in the wall. The safe being painted like the wall, only its keyhole was perceptible. Introducing the key, he opened the safe door and took out a large bundle of securities. I looked them over and knew the value of most of them. I judged they were worth between $350,000 and $400,000. They were mostly coupon bonds, not the same property that had been transferred by Driscoll to Vechi.

"Is this all?" asked Hunt. "Everything," replied Vechi. "I have no desire to leave anything amiss that will reopen this matter."

"Perhaps my friend," said Hunt, "may wish to know the hold you had on Driscoll."

"I have no such desire," I said. "The property is returned, and that is sufficient. The secret of blackmail if told might bring distress on an innocent family. Goodby, Mr. Nemo. So far as this matter is in my possession you may consider it closed.

We went from the shop to the Driscolls', where Mrs. Driscoll answered my card in person. I said to her:

"Madam, I have an important announcement to make to you, and I desire that you call into the room your sons and daughters to hear it."

Surprised, she complied with my request, and her children, mostly grown, were summoned. When they were all assembled I told the story of my purchase of the desk and the finding of the paper in the secret drawer. Then I entered upon Hunt's investigations (some of them recognized him) and lastly told of our visit to Vechi's shop. It was interesting to watch their features during my recital of our interview with the blackmailer, they growing more and more intent till the delivery of the property. When the recital was finished I took the securities from my pocket and handed them to Mrs. Driscoll, saying:

"There are securities affording an annual income of $20,000, in consideration of which we have taken the liberty of giving indemnity against prosecution for blackmail and"-

I shrank from speaking the dreadful word murder.

Every member of the family approved of all I had done and acknowledged in every possible way their indebtedness for the great favor I had done them. Before I left the house every one of us took an oath never to reveal anything of what had happened.

Mrs. Driscoll afterward informed me equivalent of all the securities her husband had possessed was returned. Some $8,000 in cash was unaccounted

DEEP SEA DIVERS.

Death Always Hovers Round Them While They Toil.

PERILS THEY HAVE TO FACE.

The Awful Pressure of Water and Air That May Bury or Burst Them-The Helmet Telephone a Wonderful Aid In Work and In Times of Danger.

It is surprising to learn how many uses there are for divers. The navy, of course, employs many to set submarine mines and torpedoes and to attend to investigations of the condition of ships' bottoms. Bridge construction companies use them, as do those who build dams, waterworks and reservoirs. Waterworks in large cities keep a diver on their staff constantly. Wrecking companies need their services, and the profession of underriver tunneling makes many demands on the time and skill of the man in armor.

Since Smeaton in 1779 designed a pump to supply air to the diving bell little real improvement in the art has been made, save in detail of helmet and clothes, until the invention of the telephone. The greatest advance ever made in the art, divers will tell you, is the combination of the telephone with the diving suit. Before its advent divers had to depend entirely upon pulls on the life line for communication with the surface and upon signs to each other when under water if two wished to communicate. Today the modern diving helmet is equipped with a telephone, and the diver can not only hear what is said to him from the surface, advise those in charge of his pump as to whether the air is "coming right" or not, but he can communicate to a brother diver and hear the instructions sent to him from the surface, all of which facilities are of great assistance in the work.

At first thought it may not seem so difficult a thing, this going down under water and breathing air sent in from a pump by a tube. But the physical drawbacks to the work are enormous. For every ten feet a diver descends he sustains an additional pressure of four and a half pounds over every square inch of his body. What this means may be better understood when considering the greatest depth ever made by a diver-204 feet. His body at that depth sustained a pressure of eightyeight and a half pounds to the square inch over and above the fifteen pounds always sustained when in the air.

Divers must descend very slowly, swallowing as they go; otherwise they may bleed at the nose and ears and even lose consciousness. And they must ascend even more slowly than they descend, particularly when coming from great depths; otherwise they may literally burst from internal air pressure. At the least, too sudden a rise may cause an attack of that terrible disease known to tunnel workers called caisson disease, or the bends, in which air gets into the tissues under pressure and causes the most extreme clothes himself in very heavy underwear of guernsey or flannel, the drawers well secured to prevent slipping, and adds a pair of heavy woolen socks.

If the water be cold two such suits may be worn. If the depth to be negotiated is great cotton soaked with oil is put in the ears or a heavy woolen cap pulled down over them. Shoulder pads, if worn to take the weight off the belmet, are next tied on, after which the diver wriggles into his heavy suit of rubber and canvas. Next come the inner collar and the breastplate, which are secured with clamps to the rubber dress, the utmost care being taken in this operation not to tear or pinch the rubber. Finally the shoes are fitted on and the rubber gloves clamped to rings in the sleeves.

The helmet is the last to go on, and never before the valves and telephone have been tested. The attendants start to pump as the helmet is clamped home. The helmet is attached to the pump with a rubber tube, which is canvas and wire protected. No diver descends, after the helmet is put on, until he has tested the outfit and found that his air supply is sufficient and the pump working properly.

He is supplied with a life line, with which he can signal should his telephone get out of order and by which he may be drawn to the surface should he become helpless for any reason. He must take great care when walking about on the bottom not to foul his life line or his air tube and for this reason must always retrace his steps exactly to his starting point if he has gone into a wreck or about any obstructions. For the same reason two divers working together must be careful not to cross each other's path. Sometimes the life line may become so entangled in wreckage that it must be cut, and then there is danger of the diver not finding his way back to his boat or float, especially if the bottom is muddy and fouls the "seeing." But the greatest danger of all, of course, is that the tube be cut or the diver faint. In either case he is in desperate straits. If the man handling the life line "feels" anything wrong he will haul the diver up willy nilly and regardless of the severe bleeding at nose and ears which will result from too rapid a rise to the surface. But if the diver be inside a wreck or if his life line gets tangled in wreckage such hauling would do no good. It is in situations like these that the slender connecting link of telephone wire means so much to the men who risk their lives far beneath the surface of the water.-Scientific American.

WOMAN AND WOE.

Did Age In India Invariably Blends the Two Into One.

"I have seen women under a burning midday sun reaping in the fields," says a writer on India; "I have seen them at roadmaking in the streets of cities: I have seen them loading engines with coal at railway stations; I have seen them in long procession on the white roads of the plains carrying great burdens on their heads like a string of camels. And I have seen also in the eyes of every old woman whom I have encountered, every one of them, such misery, adversity and angry bitterness as seemed to curse the very air of heaven. I have not seen one happy old woman in the whole country.

"Women follow through the village like a dog at the husband's beel. Maternity is no excuse for the task in the field and the duties of the house. They are servants without wages and without liberty to select another master. Before them is perpetual servitude, and if they are so abandoned by the gods as to reach old age their certain destiny is misery, dejection, friendliness and black despair. I never knew all the meaning of the word woe until I looked into the face of an old woman under an Asian sky.

"The women folk of the upper classes in India, speaking generally, are more the prisoners of their husbands than the women of the helot castes. They do not labor except in cooking and serving the meals of their husbands, but they are cut off from the world as completely as a nun; they do not even know, in many cases, the male relations of their husbands. They are little more than caged animals taught to do a few household tricks."-Chicago

COOKING A HEDGEHOG.

Bake It In Clay Into a Solid Mass and Carve It With an Ax.

When a Maine Indian has the choice of a hedgehog, a skunk, a woodchuck and a muskrat for dinner he will select the first named invariably and take the skunk as second choice, leaving the woodchuck, which is the only one of the lot a Maine white man will taste, to the last. Unlike the skunk and the woodchuck, which are lean and unsavory except for a few months in the fall, or the muskrat, which is never fat and which has a strong flavor in spite of parboiling, the hedge hog is always in edible condition and has meat that is as tender and white as that of a spring chicken.

The method of cooking a hedgehog is so simple that a novice can learn in one short lesson. When the epicure is permitted to make a choice he should shun the large old males, which at times weigh thirty or forty pounds. The preparation consists in removing the viscera, washing out the interior and filling the cavity with slices of fat pork, peeled raw potatoes, sprigs of spearmint and wild celery from the

Then, without removing the quills or skinning, the body is plastered thickly with wet clay from the nearest bank. The muddy, bulky mass is thrust into live coals and covered with blazing fagots to be roasted for two he

On removal from the coals, the clay is found to have been baked into a hard and solid mass, which must be broken open with an ax or a heavy stone, whereupon the skin and quills of the animal cling to the clay wrapping and fall away, leaving the clean white meat ready to be eaten .- New York Herald.

A Bridge of Ants.

A species of ants which spin silk is common in hot countries. The ants nest in trees, binding the leaves together to make their nests. The silk used for this purpose is not secreted by the adult ants, but by the larvae. In order to attach the silken threads and draw the leaves together the ants must carry the larvae about from leaf to leaf. When two distant leaves are to be drawn together a remarkable method is employed. Five or six ants form a chain bridging the gap between the leaves, each gripping the waist of another in its mandibles. A number of such chains will co-operate in bringing two leaves together.

A Legend of Lace.

According to Melchior de Vogue, the legend of lace is as follows: A Venetian sailor gave his ladylove a frond of spreading seaweed to keep him in memory while at sea. But the girl found that the seaweed was rapidly drying up and disappearing. So she caught the fine branches and leaves of the plant with thread against a piece of linen and, working on, with her thoughts following her lover, invented

The Drouth is Becoming Serious.

Much anxiety is felt by farmers about the corn and hay crops, due to the continued drouth in the early stage of the growth of these important products. The grass suffered severely through the winter, and Spring found a very poor 'set" and this condition being followed by the long drouth gave it no chance to gain strength, consequently, the crop is bound to be very short, if not a failure.

The corn crop is also in trouble. That which was planted early is coming up very poorly, due in part to the crust made by a heavy rain just after planting, while the cut worms have been working havoc with that which has come up. considerable acreage of corn is yet to

A peculiarity of the general situation is that, notwithstanding the wet early spring, wells are low, and do not seem to have recovered from the drouth of last Fall. The ground is dry only on the surface, as far as vegetation is concerned, but deep down in the earth the water veins seem weak.

With no prospect of rain in sight, A conditions point to another drought worse than that of the last two sumout, are that the scarcity of water will follow the lines of 1909 rather than those of last year, when the drought followed a wet April and June. The prolonged drought now beginning to show its effects upon the crops in the country, he pointed out, is in line with a tendency
