---A large barn on the farm of Walter C. LeGore, near Woodsboro, was destroyed last Friday night by fire of unknown origin. The residence and several farm buildings were threatened, but about 200 workmen at the LeGore lime plant saved these properties. The fire was discovered by Rev. Reese S. Poffenberger, who was passing in a buggy. A number of horses, an automobile and farming implements were removed during the progress of the fire. The loss is estimated at $2,000.

Thomas B. Smith, Republican, received the nomination for Mayor, of Philadelphia, at the primary, on Tuesday, receiving 130,179 votes, to 54,092 for George B. Porter, Independent. The big and complicated ballot practically swamped the counting machinery, and it will be replaced by the forms. it will be perhaps a week before anything like exact figures for the whole number like exact figures for the whole number of candidates can be given. -000-The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Henry Ward Beecher's historic Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, stood before his congregation last Sunday morning, and confessed that he had fallen short of his ideal of what a preacher of the Gospel should be. In making a brief and general explanation of his business ventures, which have proven disastrous, Dr. Hillis said that at the present time he was in a position to wipe out all of his obligations and "start life anew" and he promised his people devoted service as their pastor. It was learned after the service that he was ready to sell his handsome home as a contribution to the payment of his debts, which, it is said, amount to about $80,000

Bids are now being asked for the erection of such a bridge in the Lewistown district. The numerous floods of the past season have demonstrated to the officials of the county that the wooden bridge is not sufficiently strong to withstand the floods. The cement structures will not only withstand the strain caused by high water but will stand up under all sorts of wear and

Military Instruction in Carroll.

Dr. J. Clement Clark, superintendent of Springfield hospital, recently conferred with Adjutant-General Macklin in regard to the possibility of establishing at Sykes-ville a military training course for the employes. About 60 of the men, Dr. Clark said, are anxious to form a provi-sional battalion, in the belief that the military training they would receive would be valuable in itself as well as a means of increasing their efficiency as a hospital force.

General Macklin offered to send a sergeant of the State militia to Sykesville every second Saturday in each month to instruct the men. The first class will be held on October 9.

A similar arrangement will probably be made at Western Maryland College, near Westminster, where the students have become fired with military enthusiasm. One of the students, representing about 30 others, called on General Mackin last week to try to arrange for their lin last week to try to arrange for their enlistment in Company H of the First Regiment, which is stationed at Westminster; but Company H is at full strength and no more men can be used. Then the student suggested the formation of a cadet battalion among the students, and General Macklin promised to lend, as far as possible, the co-operation of the State militia authorities.

This initial step in the development of military instruction at the Western Maryland College may lead, it is said, to the adoption by the college authorities of a permanent system of military training similar to that proposed for Johns Hop-kins and other universities throughout the country.

---Primary Election Cost Less this Year.

The large number of candidates seeking nomination at the primaries—at $25. a head—will materially reduce the cost of the primaries, this year, to the tax-payers. The annual cost of the law, however, must be averaged, as the contest of this year comes only once in six years, while for all other years there are less offices to be filled, and the cost is much nigher, there being little or no difference in the cost of the election machinery.

The total cost of the primary in Carroll, this year, was $3311.32. The expense was greater than usual because of the extra time required to count the vote for the large number of candidates. As $1585.00 was received from the candidates—also an unusual amount—the net cost to the tax-payers for the satisfacnet cost to the tax-payers for the satisfaction of the direct primary, is only $1726.32, or considerably less than the

Two other Lee candidates have joined with Mr. White in asking for the recount.

When the returns were made showing Mr. Bailey elected, Mr. Bennett asked a recount, which was granted. By this recount Mr. Bennett was given a majority. Mr. Bailey refused to be represented at the first recanvass and declined to make any statement relative to his position until Tuesday, when the Supervisors met to make their official canvass. It is rumored that the Supervisors will refuse to entertain Mr. Bailey's petition. If so, the friends of Mr. Bailey state he will carry the matter into court by writ of mandamus against the board.

State's Attorney Clarence M. Roberts, who was returned defeated for renomination in the recent primary election in Prince George's county by S. MR. BOYLE CONTESTS FOR CLERKSHIP NOMINATION.

Mr. Cash's Plurality is Increased to Eight Votes.

Another of the drawbacks to the direct primary was shown this week, in the contest inaugurated by Joseph B. Boyle, who was defeated, on the face of the returns, by 6 votes by Edward O. Cash, for the nomination for County Clerk on the Democratic light. ocratic ticket. There were seven candidates; the vote as returned, standing, Cash, 918, Boyle 912, Crawford 563, Hitchcock 513, Boyle 401, Motter 216, Wilson 109. Mr. Boyle made no charges of fraud, but asserted the possibility of mistakes in counting and tallying the vote, and on Monday entered legal proceedings for a recount. ceedings for a recount.

At the close of the count of 12 districts and precincts on Wednesday evening, Mr. Cash had gained 4 votes, giving him a plurality of 10. On Thursday evening after the count of 19 districts and precincts, he had a lead of 8 votes, with the 12th and 14th districts at the count. 13th and 14th districts yet to count. This Friday morning these districts were counted, leaving Mr. Cash with a plurality of 8, a gain of 2 votes over the

The whole county was more or less interested in the contest, and the result will be conclusive as settling all doubt, even if it does not heal all disappointments. In case Mr. Boyle had won, the county would have had the expense of the recount to pay; but as he is the losing contestant, the expense will fall on him. The final official revision will not be canvassed until tomorrow, but the figures given are unofficially correct.

----The Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention, held on Thursday, was a Harrington gathering. and was dominated by Senator Smith, Congressman Talbott and State Senator Benson. --The Roster of Candidates.

The RECORD publishes on the editorial page, this week, the full list of all candidates named; and, according to our custom, will continue the list until the day of election. The ballot will be large, and difficult to vote without mistakes, this year, which makes it desirable for all voters to familiarize themselves as much as possible with the names, at least of the candidates for whom they desire to vote, and this list will be a help to that

Have you ever ridden through the country and made mental note of the large number of farm buildings in need of paint? It would seem that the farsighted and intelligent farmer would recognize the absolute necssity from the standpoint of both beauty and economy of frequent applications of paint to his

The best time to paint farm buildings depends on a number of things peculiar to each locality. In most sections the farmer has little time to devote to painting in the spring. His time is fully taken up at that time in preparing the soil for the planting of the crops. Spring painting is naturally worthy of very serious consideration if it is possible to have it done at that time, but taking all things under consideration, we would advocate the painting of farm buildings in the fall, for the following reasons:

In the fall, the surface is thoroughly dry. During the spring, a surface which needs repainting is sure to contain mois-ture and dampness or frost, and it can-not be successfully painted until it has thoroughly dried out. When the wood is dry, it absorbs more of the paint. The paint penetrates deeper into the wood, therefore getting a firmer hold on it therefore getting a firmer hold on it, giving the paint coating greater tenacity or holding quality-Paint cannot be applied as successfully in damp, cloudy or unsettled weather as in warm sunny weather; in the fall the weather is more settled and uniform and is warmer, therefore it is an excellent time for painting. Farm buildings have greater need of a protecting coat of paint in the winter months than at any other time. Buildings in need of repainting should never be allowed to go over the winter without this protection.—Pennsylvania Farmer.

---Forest Trees for Fall Planting.

The State Board of Forestry at Johns Hopkins University, has just completed a schedule and price list of forest planting stock for fall use. Sale of the trees, which are grown in the new State Nursery at College Park, is restricted to land owners of this State, to whom they are offered at the usual nominal prices representing the usual frommar prices representing the actual growing cost.

It is hardly necessary to point out here the necessity or desirability of planting forest trees: it is too well known. Lands on the farm that cannot grow farm crops are better used for trees, and the State Nursery was established for the express purpose of growing forest trees suitable for planting up waste soils with a useful crop, and of making such work readily available through the sale of trees which would be carefully chosen, well grown, and sold at cost. Last spring saw the distribution of many thousands of valuable trees to residents of Maryland, and the Board is now prepared to fill orders for fall planting with a somewhat larger and older stock. Fell planting may be undertaken with success in most climates and on soils that are not too heavy. High lands with good drainage offer a safe site, and the planting should take place before continued frosts set in, to give the young trees time adjust themselves to prove a division. to adjust themselves to new conditions before the coming of winter. Planting at this season is particularly recommended ern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore. In the State Nursery the conifers are represented by seedlings and transplants of White Pine and Norway Spruce, and a great number of the better hardwoods Red Oak, White Ash, American Elm, Black Walnut, Black and Honey Locusts. Prices range from $2.50 per thousand for Locust Seedlings and $4.50 for Red Oak, to $6.00 per thousand for White Pine transplants and $12.00 for Black Walnut. The charges are based on lots of one thousand trees, but smaller quantities of any kind may be secured at pro rata prices. All trees sold are disposed of under an agreement that they may be used for reforestation or roadside planting in Maryland, and requests for price lists or advice on planting will be given prompt attention by the State Forester at Balti-

There are about 2,700 saloons in Mary In round numbers Maryland spends $25,000,000 annually for booze. Twelve millions of this amount is spent by the city of Baltimore. So that, to get the "million dollars" so necessary, according to some high city officials, for the pros-perity of Baltimore, the citizenship of the city spends $12,000,000 annually for that which is worse than useless.

The comparison in the state is even more significant. The state receives less than a half million dollars from liquor licenses and spends practically as much as the city, or a million dollars a much as the city, or a million dollars a month, in order to secure it. To quote an old adage, this is "saving at the spigot and letting run at the bung." In all seriousness, we ask the question, "Does it pay?" -American Issue. ----

GET REGISTERED! ELECTION DAY IS COMING.

Some General Regulations Applying the Act of Registering.

On Tuesday, September 28; Tuesday, October 5, and Tuesday, October 12, a board of registry will sit in each precinct in the county for the purpose of registering all unregistered persons, otherwise qualified to vote at the general election October 12, will be revision day throughout the State. The boards will sit from 8 a. m. until 8 p. m.

Attention has been called to the fact that not only will unregistered persons not be permitted to vote in the fall election, but, as there will be no spring registration, it will also be impossible for them to vote at the Presidential primaries

Those parts of the instructions telling who is entitled to be registered, what con-stitutes "place of residence" within the meaning of the law, and other facts re-lating to the enrollment of the names of unregistered voters will be found of interest to all who desire to register and vote in November. It will be well for those contemplating registering to read these instructions carefully and thereby be in a position to help keep the registration officials from making mistakes. The instructions in which it is believed the public will be interested are as follows:

The applicant must live in the same Legislative district for at least six months before the day of election, November 2, 1915, to be entitled to register in that Legislative district.

Every voter is entitled to have his party affiliation entered on the registra-tion book. It is your duty to explain to the voter at the time of registration that the declaration of party affiliation does not bind him to vote for the candidate of that party, and that he has a right to decline to state his party affiliation, but that no one who is not recorded upon the registry as affiliated with a particular political party will be qualified to vote at the primary elections of that party.

Any person who has moved into the State from some other state since March 29,1909, is not entitled to register until one year from the time he had declared his intention to become a resident of this State before a Clerk of the Circuit Court for one of the counties. He must produce a cerof the counties. He must produce a certified copy of this declaration of intention signed by a Clerk of the Circuit Court for a county. This does not apply to persons who come to the State of Maryland before they are 21 years of age. These certificates should not be retained, but should be handed back to the applicants for respectively. istration for use in the future.

-300 Maps of the United States.

School teachers who are not familiar with the many and various maps published by the United States Geological Survey will be interested to learn of a small map of the United States which is sold by that bureau at the nominal price of 1 cent. This map shows rivers, lakes, State boundaries, State capitals, and principal cities, but not the less important features, whose numerous names and symbols tend to create obscurity and confusion. map does not show heights or mountain ranges. It measures about 81x12 inches and its scale is 260 miles to 1 inch. Five copies of the map are sold for 3 cents if an order for them is included in any order for maps amounting to $3.

The Survey publishes also maps of the 110 miles to 1 inch, with contours to show maps are 3 cents and 9 cents, respectively.
A relief map of the United States measuring 18x28 inches, on a scale of 110 miles to the inch, is sold for 15 cents, or for 9 cents if an order for it is included in an order for maps amounting to $3. This map shows the rivers, principal cities, and State boundaries, and is shaded in colors to show the heights above sea level of all parts of the country.

Orders for these maps should be addressed to the Director, U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., and accompanied by remittance, in cash or postal money order.

Belgian Relief Must Continue.

London, Sept. 19.—The first complete report of the Commission of Relief in Belgium, covering the first eight months of its existence, reveals that in income and expenditure the organization forms the greatest relief movement of history.

The commission has collected and disbursed $50,000,000, $15,000,000 of which has been contributed in the form of money or food by the people of the United States and the British Empire and Belgium itself. The bulk of the income has come from other than purely philanthropic sources, but the raising of this enormous sum has been exclusively the work of the comprise been exclusively the work of the commission, which by financial arrangements with Belgian individuals and institutions, exchange of currency with Belgium and a system of providing the solvent Belgian inhabitants has maintained the entire population of a nation for almost a year.

A remarkable feature of the report, which has hitherto received but little notice, is the effort being made by the Belgians to help themselves. Over 50 per cent. of the money expended by the com-mission in benevolence is being furnished by Belgians abroad, and a large amount also is being supplied by Belgians in Bel-

In discussing the report, Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the commission, said:

"It may cause more surprise among Americans who believe that the United States is provisioning the Belgian and French people in the track of war that only something over $6,000,000 in food, clothes and money has come from the United States. However, the American public should realize that the commission in its organization, working personnel and political aspects is distinctly American. The American charitable support, so early and promptly given, came at the very inception of the movement, when such backing was vital to the success of the organization in giving it time to build. This support gave the commission its foundation, port gave the commission its foundation, from which it acquired the moral prestige that enabled it to secure vitally necessary concessions from the various belligerent

Nor is the necessity for this valued support at all over. The problem becomes more difficult every day, for the number of destitute has increased from 1,000,000 last October to 2,750,000 in June and now grows at the rate of 200,000 a month. And our resources, large as they are, can-not keep pace with the need if the char-itable public loses interest in our work. The continued support of America is necessary to provide the commission with the moral prestige as an American insti-tution which it now possesses in the sight of the warring powers, and the maintenance of this prestige can only be secured by the continued sentimental and practical backing of the American peo-

----The Prevailing Speed Mania,

You've got to be an acrobat these days when crossing streets or ambling country ways; for autoists they are many, and they do not care a penny for buggies, teams, pedestrians and shays. Speed-omania's got the people right enough, fast's the word on level, hill or craggy bluff; taxi bandits send you sliding, your discomfiture deriding, into boxes, bales and curbstones hard and rough. motorcycles scare you from behind, the coming auto's light near makes you blind; you jump from left to right, in the darkness of the night, and arise all bruised, in nervous state of mind. You've got to be an acrobat, indeed, for every-body's going in for speed; the baby carriage flies, and the roller skater tries to take up all the sidewalk in his greed. A funeral looks much like a joy ride, the autos in procession shoot and glide, and never do you know just the way they're going to go—your fate may be like his, the hearse inside.—Emmitsburg Chron-

MARRIED.

VALENTINE—SHOEMAKER.—Sept. 21st., 1915, at the home of the bride, by the Rey. Seth Russell Downie, of Taneytown, M. Luther Valentine, of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Elsie B. Shoemaker, of Harney, Md. The ceremony was quietly performed at 3.15 in the afternoon in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends. The bride wore a becoming blue traveling suit trimmed with fur and a hat to match, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses and valley lilies. A bower of ferns formed an exquisite background for the place of ceremony. A delightful wedding luncheon was served.

Mrs. Valentine is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Grier Shoemaker. Mr. Valentine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Valentine. Both families live in Harney, Md. The groom is a graduate of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., class of 1912. He is a chemist with the Du Pont Powder Company. After October 1st., they will be at home at 2602 North Van Buren Street, Wilmington, Del.

The Recent Primary Election.

The result of the Primary election in Carroll county is before the tax-payers, and it should be considered by tax-payers, rather than by persons interested in individual results from political viewpoints -if it be possible to make such a separation. Good government must rest on securing the best possible officials, on the basis of fitness and integrity, combined with personal initiative and liberal mindedness. From the strictly political viewpoint, the desirability of a candidate depends rather on popularity, and chance not good government.

The best that we can do in the matter of making tickets, is to try to arrive at majority party sentiment, and to choose the best men we can; necessarily, of course, taking reasonable account of their vote-getting qualities. The question is. how to best arrive at these conclusions Whether through the exercise, practically, of the jury plan, as was exemplified by the party convention, or whether to constitute the whole voting strength, directly, as the jury, through our primary law. First of all, let us see how majority party sentiment was shown in the result for county offices. This can not be done completely, for the reason that there was not a full submission to the voters of the names of all candidates. In effect, the old convention plan was used by both parties for the nomination for Senator, and by the Republicans, in addition, for candidates for County Commissioner, House of Delegates, Orphans' Court and it did, as the county is enormously Dem-County Treasurer. What was lost, if ocratic, and direct primaries in this state anything, in the calibre of candidates, and by the tax-payers, in not including the fact that over two-fifths of the Demthese officials in the general primary plan? Taking the vote of the Democratic candidates, and the vote for Governor as experience with the system, as we have an actual majority vote of the party, while 8 failed to receive a majority, and in 2 cases the winner failed to receive one-fourth of the full vote. Taking the Republican vote for Governor (2450) 3 of the nominees received a majority of the vote cast, but 1 did not. But, in order to get a still clearer view, it must be considered that in five of the contests there were but two candidates, therefore the question of a majority fixed itself. The result is, then, as a whole, that when there were more than two candidates, 4 were chosen by a majority, and 7 by less. In all, there were 9 chosen by convention, (practically) 4 in single contests, and 13 in general contests. There is, of course, no exact means of knowing how a limitedly representative convention would have met the directly expressed will of the people with reference to 17 of the candidates but it is fair to assume that it would have reached exactly the same result in most of the cases, leaving only a very few clearly undecided.

We therefore have these questions to decide. Would the convention plan have chosen-in the few cases in doubt-men less fit and acceptable to the tax-payers, than those named by the primary? In the two cases mentioned, as having received less than one-fourth of the vote cast, is it clear that they are more entitled to nomination, on the basis of either merit, or popular support, than had the same two offices been filled, perhaps by other candidates, according to the judgment of a convention? In the very few other cases, is it clearly demonstrable that the public service would be less efficient, had these offices been filled by a convention?

Stating the case in another way, how are we to know that those defeated would not have rendered equally as good service as those nominated? And if there is reasonable doubt of this, then how can it be demonstrated-except for purely political contest reasons—that the tax-payers themselves, but they should not be facgain an equivalent, or more, for the extra sum they must supply for election expenses ?

There is still another very decidedly uncertain quantity. How many who voted directly for candidates, actually knew of their personal qualifications? If they voted without definite knowledge of this kind, is it not reasonably believable that a select convention, composed of men chosen at local primaries, would have superior and wider intelligence than the masses? And is it not believable that such men would know more about the capacity and fitness of certain candidates than the whole people?

The belief that the direct primary puts the "organization," or party "bosses," out of business, is largely a delusion. The recent primary was as full of influence by the powers, as a convention could well be, and "bossism" as it is commonly practiced, is merely "influence" directed to an end. In not a single district in the county did the an intelligent verdict, necessarily, nor an party labels.

We decidedly lack faith in the worth of the direct primary, entirely aside from the question of its cost, but it is inconceivable that the people would be willing to go back entirely to the old primary plan. Yet it is altogether conceivable to us, that we could have improved old- the Supervisors of Elections, no less than time district primaries and a county convention, the cost of which would be borne almost wholly by the candidates, saving the tax-payers the expense of an election, and that the results would be fully as election, less than one thousand were balsatisfactory as now. We are open to conviction, but we seriously doubt whether the primary of this year was worth its cost, or anything like it, to the taxpayers, and urge that both parties unite in producing a simpler and less expensive plan. It can be done, if the tax-payers demand it.

The people, after all, never had their say about it. Why should we not have a tried it long enough to know whether we want it or not. Even the politically interested may have changed their minds between the time of wanting it, and trypends rather on popularity, and chance of winning, but this is partisanship and "progressive" stunts that is more pleas.

Another spectator who loitered about "progressive" stunts that is more pleas. 'progressive' stunts that is more pleasurable in the pursuit than in the posses-outline of the kind of primary law that we think should displace the present law.

Howard County Adopts Primary.

Our neighbor county has at least taken the right plan for deciding the question, and it is not surprising that it decided as is a Democratic proposition; but after all, ocrats voted "against," shows more opposition than might have been expected.

Opinions on the Primary Law.

Last year "The Register" stated that the primary election law was a farce so far as doing what it was expected to do, was concerned. This year we are ready again to register our disapproval of the law. We heard nothing but condemna-tion of it on Tuesday. The old methods of politicians have not been checked.

The "Slate Makers" and the vote buy-ers get in their work just as always. By the envelope system, marked ballots were passed around by the various would-be-bosses and leaders before the primary and these were voted by many persons who possibly did not know who they were casting their ballots for. To say nothing of the extra expense of two elections to both the county and the candidates, we see no advantage in the primary law over the old convention plan.—Middletown Valley Register.

The Times has been consistently opposed to our present primary law, which Mr. Lee in his campaign claimed credit for giving to the people of Maryland. From expressions heard, we believe if a popular vote could be taken as to the re-peal of this law, the majority for its repeal would be overwhelming. The enormous expense and additional burden on the taxpayers is one good reason for its repeal, but perhaps the least. The envelope system and marking ballots on the outside is the greatest invitation, temptation and opportunity for fraud, bribery and corruption ever placed before an electorate. - Westminster Times

Senator Blair Lee went down to humiliating defeat in the primaries on Tuesday, under the law of his own creation and which has shown itself to be an abomination.—Hampstead Enterprise.

The introduction of the direct primary system may be all right in principle, but, as it is applied in this State, it has features that produce effects that must be objectionable to most citizens. And this is said without taking into account its very worst feature, the right to mark a ticket outside of the polling place, or have it marked so that it can be voted, without using the ballot given the voter by the election officer. Palpably, that is a scheme to facilitate and make bribery easy and must be condemned by every citizen who believes in pure elections. Sample ballots are not objectionable in similes of the official, or should be design nated as sample in such a manner that they cannot be voted. That is a propo-ition too plain for controversy.

The effect, in a general sense, of such a primary election law as exists in Maryland, is in some important respects, out-side of the marked ballot, so objectionable that the Sentinel is almost constrained to oppose it in toto. - Westminster Sentinel.

The Primary Election is over. In theory, the Democratic Party has chosen their standard bearers to battle against the Republicans in the General Election; in fact, the Democratic Organization, headed by Talbott and Benson, in direct violation of the platform of the Democratic State Convention, in direct opposi-tion to the Jeffersonian doctrine of Democracy, and in sharp contrast with the Democratic principles of Woodrow Wilson, these two men, Talbott and Benson, have, by their manipulation of marked ballots have made it necessary for one, if he would like to support the Democratic ticket, to vote for a candidate named by over again by the same old method, until that made the people disheartened and and manipulation; but it is a pity that the proportion of voters who do not parvoters, without direction, cast their ballots purely of their own will. The result creasing, but this element of the voters are fast becoming independents, not inof the direct primary, therefore, is neither dependents on party principles, but on dark little pen. The News says:

pecially adaptable to political organiza-tions and to have control of those organizations is one thing, but to have the law and not the organization to use it in his behalf is another, and this befell Blair Lee when he made his lavish primary campaign just ended. * * *

In addition to the ballots printed for one hundred thousand extra ballots were printed and marked in favor of this or that candidate, making the official ballot ridiculous, and it is safe to assume that of the ten thousand ballots voted in the lots given out by the Judges and Clerks of Elections.—New Era, Towson, Balt.

The "envelope" system of the primary lection laws was roundly scored by many business men yesterday and branded as "a glaring weakness" in the primary laws. This scheme permits the substitu-tion of marked ballots which have been truthfulness of this statement. In our sent down the line by party factions

One professional man declared that the Maryland primary law had some glaring 'referendum' of the question? We have | faults. He maintained that these defects nade the primary elections "a farce. The first thing to be said in connection with the primaries on Tuesday is that the law has now been given a fair trial and failed. There was grim retribution in the result, in that the author of the law went down to humiliating defeat under it as a candidate for Governor. Blair Lee is responsible for the law that put him into the discard on Tuesday. The second thing that has been demonstrated is the truth of what this paper has held concerning it before—that the people do not like this cumbersome vehicle for express-ing their preferences at the polls, because it means two campaigns and two elections permits a multiplicity of candidates, who annoy the people during the busy harvest season in the rural Counties. Pestered from every side for weeks, they become disgusted and refuse to come out and vote. The danger of this stay-at-home vote was never more clearly set forth than on Tuesday, when tried and true men, candidates for the House of Delegates, were allowed to go to defeot on the Democratic ticket and the liquor interests were enrepresenting the total vote (3703) we find had in Carroll, perhaps the figures, if abled to score a partial victory, while a

-000 Baltimore's Extension.

Apparently, Baltimore city has lost a 'greater Baltimore'' champion in the defeat of Senator Lee, for Governor; and yet the question is so distinctly legislative, rather than Executive, and it is far from the stated fact that either Harrington or Weller are opposed to Baltimore's extension, so that it would appear that the question is yet as open as it ever was barring the possibility of an executive veto of a measure to which Congressman Talbott, and the political powers of the Fifth District, might naturally be expected to offer their opposition, but which would hardly have any weight in the case of the election of Mr. Weller.

Baltimore, except for political reasons, should be granted its wider limits. The 'greater Baltimore," territorially, would almost surely stand for a greater degree of law and order and Sabbath observance, in the now law-violating sections of Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties. That parts of these counties would thereby be removed from the preserves of county politicians, is a thing to be wished for, rather than obstructed, and it would be a disgrace to the political record of the state, if these county politicians should be powerful enough to have their way.

Congressman Talbott likely opposed Lee, largely because he thought Mr. Harrington less likely to infringe on his domain; but in the event of the election of Harrington, and the passage by the legislature of a reasonable greater Baltimore bill, he could hardly afford to satisfy the selfishness of Mr. Talbott by vetoing it; while Mr. Weller, if elected, could hardly have any now conceivable reasons for doing so, but it is wholly conceivable that he would sign such a bill with a great deal of pleasure.

At any rate, Baltimore is not at all likely to lie down, acknowledging defeat, so early in the game; and if it presents a reasonable measure, based wholly on its rightful claims to non-partisan sentiment, it ought to win at Annapolis, this winter, in spite of the absence there of a Governor Lee.

The "Envelope" Feature.

The Frederick News comments severely on the "envelope" feature of the primary law-the only feature of the law that many people likes. The News is right, The same old gang nominated over and of course, in its statement that the enand manipulation; but it is a pity that this is true, for the envelope system, for honest people and uses, is a great improvement over marking a ballot in a

One of the worst faults of the primary election law is that it allows ballots to be marked outside of the polls, and then carried in and voted. The viciousness of the plan was shown in Tuesday's election in Frederick county. Its tendency is to encourage bribery and corruption and gives to the politicians power which the system is supposed to restore to the peo-The ignorant and purchasable vote nay become subject to the manipulations of the political workers, thereby defeating the very purpose of the popular primary. * * * The sending out of marked ballots by the hundreds is not calculated to result in a strict enforcement of the Corrupt Practices Act. If the political leaders would not take advantage of the privilege allowed by the primary law, it would be surprising. is desirable in a primary that the party organizations should keep their hands off and allow the rank and file make the se ection of the candidates.

Unwillingly, we must subscribe to the Carroll county primaries, voters were persuaded to mark their ballots one way, then before they voted were met by others who undone the first persuasion, and this class of political "work" can be done much more easily at a primary than at a general election, for the reason that most voters are unacquainted with both situations and candidates within their party, and are easily influenced to vote almost any way; but can not be so easily influenced to vote against a candidate of their party, for the candidate of another

But, the objection of the News is not so strong, in reality, against the envelope feature as it is against the direct primary system, for the secret voting plan, at a primary, is even worse, if anything, as a producer of unintelligent results, than the envelope plan and some misuse of it. If every voter knew every candidate, and was intelligent enough to discriminate fairly between their qualifications, the direct primary would be fine-the very best-but, as this can never be possible, the whole idea is a sham—an idealistic dream that costs us a lot of money and is not actually worth anything except to make trouble.

RAISING THE HEIFER.

Young Animal Should Be Handled With Patient Kindness.

We begin early to teach our heifers to stand when being milked by handling their udders, stroking their teats and other simple processes calculated to make them less timid, writes a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead. And yet there comes a time when the heifer needs more of patience than at any other period in her life. That is the time when she passes over into cowhood. This is really a critical point in her career.

There is something about the process of bringing a calf into the world for the first time that changes the nature

The Brown Swiss cattle are rated as dual purpose animals only by Americans. The cows have always been regarded as dairy animals by the Swiss people, and nothing is more distasteful to them than to know that their favorite dairy breed is considered only mediocre as milk producers by American authorities. However, when this breed is judged by the milk and butter fat production of the animals it becomes a dairy breed. The animal shown two-year-old Brown Swiss of the animal for the time being and makes it necessary that we should be exceedingly kind and patient with her. A few years ago we had a heifer that had her first calf. She had always been kind and gentle. We could do most anything with her, but after that calf was born she was perfectly wild for a time. She seemed to be afraid of the calf at first. She did not appear to know what to think about it, although she realized. I think, that it was her offspring and, therefore, a part of her very being. She would not touch the calf for a time, but sidled from it, looking at it wildly and making the most startling noise I ever heard from any cow in my life. It certainly would not have been safe for anybody to have gone near the heifer at that time. We just left her to work out the problem for herself in nature's own way. In a little while she got so that when the calf came staggering up to take her first rations she no longer sidled away or pushed it wildly over, but permitted it to come to her.

The lesson I learned from it was to stand back and give nature a chance at such times. Sometimes we are in too great a hurry and think we can help matters along, when the fact is we do more harm than good.

To treat the young animal kindly at the time when she is slipping over from the heifer to the cow may be the making of a good cow. If a man is harsh and unsympathetic at a time like this or any other time, indeed he may have the disappointment of knowing that he has spoiled a cow and made her cross and perhaps unmanageable all her life.

SILO VERSUS DRY FODDER.

Value of Two Methods of Preserving Corn Plant Compared.

The principal function of the silo is to increase the value of the fodder part of the crop. On farms where rough feed is produced in excess of the needs of the live stock kept there is perhaps little need for the silo, says the Kansas

Well cured corn fodder is a fine feed, but it is never consumed without waste. Only the finer leafy portions will be eaten by stock, and in the course of the handling there is always a considerable loss of this most valuable portion. This waste represents food value. It is unused energy, and the labor of handling it must be figured as unproductive. It requires no more labor to put a field of corn into a silo and feed it out to stock than it does to cut and shock it in a field and haul it in and feed it out during the winter. In the one case a little more labor may be condensed into a short period of time, but the increased ease and facility with which silage can be fed as compared with the winter handling of corn fodder much more than compensate for the rush work of filling a

One of the most valuable features of preserving corn in the silo is the fact that it does not deteriorate in value. Silage can be kept several years without loss. Shredded corn fodder is a most uncertain roughage to store even for a short period of time, as those having had experience with it well know. It must be in just the right condition at shredding time or it may mold and heat in the stack or mow at once. And if kept over a year it becomes so unpalatable that little of it is eaten. On the other hand, silage for summer feeding is rapidly increasing in popularity. On many farms silage is being fed to milk cows in summer, and the results compare most favorably with those secured where the cows are on luxuriant pasture.

RAISING A DAIRY HERD FROM ONE COW

In the fall of 1906 I took charge of the live stock department of the Montana College of Agriculture, writes R. W. Clark in Hoard's Dairyman. At that time the herd was composed largely of grade Shorthorns, but the following winter the state legislature made an appropriation of $5,000 for the purchase of live stock, and in the spring a few horses and a few pure bred Holstein cattle were purchased.

Among the cattle was Nora Koningen, 64,489. She is not a classy cow, but is a good producer and a very strong breeder. She is nearly solid black and is of a pronounced dairy form and temperament. Her calves are very uniform in color and type, and they resemble her very closely. In seven years Nora Koningen has produced over 80,000 pounds of milk, over 2,300 pounds of fat and has 30 living descendants, 19 heifers and 11 bulls. There has not been a loss, and every descendant is a strong, robust, productive individual.

Only $175 was paid for this cow. She and her descendants have produced 121,700 quarts of milk. If this milk is sold at 5 cents per quart it has a value of $6,085. The bull calves were sold for $100 apiece, making a total of $1,100. The heifers are easily worth $225 apiece, making a total of $4,275.

With the dairyman it is not a with the dairyman it is not a question of how much a cow eats, but how economically she converts her food into milk. No one questions the ability of the Holstein cow to do this to advantage, and so, with a good individual, the more she eats the better. Dainty cows are seldom large producers, but the Holsteins are not dainty, and they eat great quantities of feed and produce milk cheaper than most other breeds. The cow pictured is a Holstein.

The grand total from this cow amounts to $11,460, or an average an income for seven years of $1,637. This is not all profit, as there have been several animals to feed and care for. The bull calves were sold young, and the cost of their keep was low. Whatever the cost of keep, the profit derived from this cow is large.

This record shows what a cow is capable of doing under good conditions. She is different from some other cows of equal milk producing ability in that she has the power of transmitting to her offspring her own qualities of vigor, good constitution, prolificacy, type and high milk production. In selecting an animal consideration should be given to these qualities if possible. It is a mistake to select an animal entirely on individuality. The near ancestors and descendants should receive attention individually and through their advance registry records. I hope the time is near when the judge will require and give some consideration to the advance registry record.

Cow Testing Pays.

Ten farmers belonging to the Janesville Cow Testing association of Bremer county. Ia., are enthusiastic as to the value of keeping books with their dairy cows. The association was organized in 1911, and since that time the average milk production has been increased by one-third. The actual profit has been more than doubled, and progress in the right direction is still being made. In 1911 the average butter fat production for each cow was 246 pounds. Last year it was 312.6 pounds. The profit per animal when the association started was $32.42, and in 1914 it had increased to $66.02.

The Dairy Cow's Best Age.

In considering the question of cow development the question is sometimes raised as to when a cow is at her best for milk and butter fat production. As a general rule the properly fed and handled milk cow will increase in production up to five or six years. A really good dairy cow should not show any falling off until after at least ten years of age, and many excellent records have been made by cows even older than this.

Encouraging Milk Flow.

Comfort and contentment are the touchstones of success. When a cow is comfortable and contented she responds with a flow of milk far in excess of that she gives when she is uncomfort-

They May Be Employed in Innumerable Ways, and Are Nutritious and Appetizing.

Nuts add attractiveness and nutrition to many a plain dish. They are especially valuable for the school luncheon basket, as they make tempting sandwich fillings when combined with chopped celery, olives, fresh and dried fruits. They give the same nutrition as does meat. They give the needed touch to a pudding, dessert, cake filling or salad. Consequently we are including the toothsome nut meats more plentifully in the various cooked dishes.

Buy nuts in the shell whenever possible, as it is a much safer plan, but if you are obliged to get nuts that are shelled subject them to the following treatment to free them from any germs that may be lurking round them. Place them in a colander and pour boiling water over them very quickly, and at once immerse in very cold water, then drain and wipe dry in a folded napkin. This does not affect the oils and crispness of the nut meats if it is done quickly.

Choose almonds with thick shells, as they have the richest and sweetest meats. To blanch them, pour boiling water over them, turn them upon a clean towel and rub the brown skins from them. To extract pecans whole from the shells, pour boiling water over them and let them stand until cold. Crack them at the small ends. The kernels of English walnuts that are a trifle rancid for use can be sweetened if boiling water containing a pinch of soda is poured over them. you are almost certain to repent at Rinse in cold water and dry in the

TO SERVE WITH BOILED FISH

Sauce That Is Exceptionally Good, Recommended by One of the Best-Known Chefs.

Fish sauce is almost more important than the fish. This is something good Take the yolks of two eggs, one cupful of brown sauce and one tablespoonful of vinegar or lemon juice. Make the brown sauce by browning two tablespoonfuls of butter in the frying pan, stir in a tablespoonful of flour, salt and pepper and add a cupful of the water in which the fish was boiled, and boil until it thickens. Beat the yolks of the eggs and stir the hot brown sauce into it. Put it on the stove and let it boil a minute or two, add the vinegar or lemon juice and serve hot with the fish.

Here is another delicious recipe for sauce to serve with boiled or steamed fish: Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended. Then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cupful of white stock and one-half cupful of cream. Bring to the boiling point and add onean eye not only to your appearance, but | fourth cupful of blanched and shredded almonds, eight olives (stoned and cut even here there may be confusion, for in quarters), one-half a tablespoonful of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of beef man who likes to be vivacious and the extract, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of cayenne.

The saleswoman shows you a one cupful of raisins washed and seeddress in a shade which you recognize ed, one teaspoonful of salt, yolks of two eggs and one whole egg (or use You try it on perhaps, and the shade the whole eggs if you wish), one cupful of sugar and one cupful more of milk, small piece of butter. Butter a pudding dish well and turn mixture in, set in pan of water and bake in very slow oven three hours, then turn over pudding one cupful of cold milk and bake several hours more, remembering to keep well covered, and not have water boil out of pan, and have very slow oven. Add spices if liked.

Water Bread.

Four cupfuls of boiling water, two tablespoonfuls each of butter, lard and sugar, three teaspoonfuls of salt and one yeast cake dissolved in a quarter cupful of lukewarm water; 12 cupfuls of flour. Put butter, lard, sugar and salt in mixing bowl or pan and pour on boiling water. Let stand until lukewarm; add yeast and 11 cupfuls of flour. Mix thoroughly with knife or mixing spoon, then add remaining cupful of flour and knead. Cover and let stand over night in a warm place. Shape in loaves in morning and rise. Bread should continue rising for 15 minutes of baking; then it should begin to brown.

Mock Pumpkin Pie. One cupful sifted prune pulp, two eggs well beaten, pinch salt, small piece butter about size of walnut, onehalf teaspoonful each of ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg and one-half cupful sugar. If not sweet enough add more, as some prunes are not so sweet as others. One pint of milk, heated to almost boiling point. Bake with one crust like pumpkin pie. This will make two small deep pies or one large deep pie. Steam one pound prunes about three hours before sifting them.

No Greasy Smell.

Many a good cook will be surprised at the excellent results obtained by the use of a raw turnip for "greasing" the pancake griddle. Cut the vegetable in two and rub the griddle with the raw surface and then bake the cakes in the usual way. The cakes are beautifully browned, and there is no greasy smell or smoke.

To Drive Away Roaches.

MAKING BEST USE OF NUTS BROWN ROT WILL RUIN PEACH CROP.

T. B. SYMONS,

Maryland Agricultural College. Too much importance cannot be attached to the spraying for fruit protection against insects and disease. Often the whole crop is lost through injury by Curculio, followed by Brown Rot. The Curculio winters in the adult stage, appearing just as the foliage develops on peaches and plums. It feeds upon the foliage for a little while, then, the female beetle, laying her eggs, does the principal injury to the fruit by making a semi-circular out in which its eggs are laid. The egg hatches in a short time and the small larva makes its way into the center of the fruit and there develops. The fruit rots and drops, the larva, escaping into the ground and later developing into the adult beetle.

The beetle is controlled by spraying with Arsenate of Lead at the rate of 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. This poison is usually combined with the self-boiled lime sulphur wash, a fungicide which will control Brown Rot.

The self-boiled lime sulphur is made by slaking 8 pounds of lime in a sufficient amount of water, and adding $ pounds of sulphur when the lime begins to slack. The mixture must be kept stirred and the water added as needed, to keep a pasty condition until the lime is all slaked. The heat generated by the slaking lime causes the sulphur to mix physically with the lime in a very fine state, but should not be continued long enough to form much of a sulphide compound as shown by the mixture taking on a yellow or brown color. The mixture is then strained into the spray barrel and the arsenate of lead added.

CAUTION: - The Concentrated Lime Sulphur Solution, such as is used in dormant or early spring spraying should not be used on peach or plum foliage under any circumstances.

Where Brown Rot has previously appeared, the first application of the above mixture should be made just after the fruit sets and before the shucks are off the peaches. A second application two weeks later is very necessary and a third treatment a month before the fruit is ripe is very desirable. Not only will this treatment prevent injury from Curculio and Brown Rot, but also from Peach Scab and other diseases.

ALL IS NOT LUCK IN BROODING. ROY H. WAITE,

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

"What luck did you have brooding chickens?" How often we hear this question. "Oh I had the worst kind of luck, first the chicks became lousy and I lost about half of them and then the rats got most of what were left, some got drowned in the water bucket, etc., etc.

Far be it from me to say that there s no such thing as luck in raising chickens but I do believe that just about nine times out of ten the trouble arises because of a lack of attention to some minor detail or details.

For instance, if the old hen had been dusted two or three times while she was setting the young chicks wouldn't have gotten lice from her. If a raid had been made on the rats along about hatching time they wouldn't have bothered much. It has been my experience that rats are not very troublesome if kept on the defensive, to use a war term, but once let them get a taste of "chicken," then you have your hands full. It's also a simple matter to fix the drinking water so the chicks can't get into it. If you have to use a deep dish put a brick or rock or something into it so the chick can climb on and jump out if he tumbles in.

BARRELS ARE OFTEN USEFUL FOR BROOD COOPS.

There are other troubles also like gape worms, getting caught out in a storm, being killed by other hens. caught by crows or hawks, being trampled on by mother hen, etc., but even with each of these something can be done as a preventative. For instance, use new or clean land each year for the chicks or cultivate and clean up the old each season after brooding is done and there will not be much trouble from gapes. Have the shelter close by when the chicks are young so they can get in out of a storm. If you let them roam all over the place, having the shelter in one field and then in another, of course they will get soaked at the first storm if you don't get them in. In order to keep them from getting killed by other hens you can and should wherever possible keep the young chicks in yards away from the general flock. If crows or hawks get after them

I'll excuse you for calling it bad luck, but even here there is much that can be done if you will only stop to think. If you can't protect them any other way you can shut them up by themselves until they get a good start. A gun is a pretty good crow scarer, but crows are certainly "wise" and aim to come around when the gun is in the house. A couple of king birds or bee martins have nested in the orchard where we brood our chicks and they seem to be able to keep all bird enemies away from the chicks. If you don't want the chicks trampled on by the mother hen give her a good roomy coop with plenty of light.

Railroads Paying Double for Ties.

During the last five or six years practically everything in the way of material which the railroads of the country have been compelled to purchase to keep their property in perfect physical condition has advanced in price over that raid 10 or 12. advanced in price over that paid 10 or 12 years ago. Especially is this true where the purchase of crossties is concerned. This character of material constitutes a big item in the general supplies purchased annually by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and F. J. Angier, superintendent of timber preservation of that company, with headquarters in Baltimore, makes public some interesting data, showing the advance in the cost of crossties and the steps which are being taken by the carriers to apply a prescribed treat-ment to preserve them and thus reduce

Mr. Angier states that on the Baltimore and Ohio the cost of ties permile of track maintained during the year 1904 was $121. By 1912 this cost had increased 70 trouble.

Carpenters and plasters have been busy repairing John Bowman's residence. He per-cent. and in 1913–109 per-cent. In other words, the cost of the ties in a mile of track had more than doubled in less than 10 years. "The amount of money involved is large," said he, "for next to fuel, ties constitute the largest single item of maple which he picked from a tree in the yard, where he lives in Feezersburg, that spent on the Baltimore and Ohio for ties in 1913 was more than $2,200,000. This does not include ties for construction of the nation's resources the railroads can materially assist because the cheaper, inferior and most plentiful woods, such as red oak, beech, elm, etc., can be protected by treatment to last as long as, or longer, in some locations, than the best white oak. This makes it feasible to use woods otherwise not easily marketable, and prolongs the existence of white oak timber, a species which, if there were no tie-treating plants, would soon cease to exist, resulting in loss to those trades that use it.'

Fire Land The phrase "fire lands" originated in a passage of early history, which also gave rise to the term "estern reserve." After the Revolutionary war, when the colonies consented to cede their claims to western lands to congress, Connecticut reserved from her cession a tract embracing a large part of northern Ohio. The tract thus reserved included the present counties of Trumbull, Geauga, Portage and Ashtabula and became known as the western reserve. It was settled chiefly by emigrants from Connecticut and was sometimes called New Connecticut. In promoting the settlement of the land Connecticut reserved half a million acres from the western end of the tract for bestowal upon her citizens who had suffered losses during the war, and the lands embraced in this special reserve were called "sufferers' lands" and later "fire lands," because most of the sufferers had been losers by fire. In early times the phrase "fire lands" was sometimes used in deeds in describing the location of land in hardly be the root of all evil, for it is only one perverse passion out of many. But there is a kind of decorum about money which makes the love of it peculiarly dangerous, since it conceals from the lover the nature and effects of his passion. If a man wants too much food, he is evidently greedy. If a woman wants too many clothes, she is evidently vain. But money is not a thing, like clothes or food, that can be enjoyed by itself. It is only a means of getting things that can be enjoyed, and so greed for money is not a direct greed, | but indirect. It is a civilized means of conducting the struggle for life, which to a great extent conceals from those who use it the ugliness and the animal nature of that struggle. It is, in fact, a kind of diplomacy, politely conducted, behind which there is war. But the diplomats often do not see the war .-London Times.

Chesterfield on Toothbrushes. When did the English first adopt the toothbrush habit? In "Esmond" Thackeray makes Lord Castlewood spend "a tenth part of his day in the brushing of his teeth and the oiling of his hair," and in doing so the novelist commits a double anachronism. During the first half of the eighteenth century all fine gentlemen wore wigs and had no use for oil on their hair, while the toothbrush was so late as 1754 unknown to Lord Chesterfield. Writing to his son, Chesterfield says: "I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth, and that you clean them well every morning with a sponge and tepid water, with a few drops of arquebusade water dropped into it. A Land Without Flies. It should be refreshing and a bit encouraging to the fatigued, hopeless fly fighters to know that there is in the world a country in which there are no flies. The place is the British West Indies. This interesting fact—that there are no flies in British West Indies-starts up a number of questions and curious conjectures. Why is it that they have no flies? Is it that they have lost the seed, or is it that they have some active parasite or animal that feeds on flies, like the South American ant eater, for instance? Certainly it is not that they have no They have heat and moisture, and, if rumor has it true, they have all the filth that is necessary. That these three conditions can exist without any flies is what we do not understand.-North Carolina Health Board Report.

A fairly large number of people are gifted with a good ear for music, and their friends think it quite wonderful that they are able to play or whistle tunes which they have heard only once.

But this gift, however remarkable it may seem, is by no means extraordinary or exceptional, especially when compared with the possession of what is called an "ear of absolute pitch." This means that the person possessing it is able to stand away from the piano and tell you what note you are playing or in what key. One well known lady planist is able to read over the score of a piece of music in the train or omnibus, leave the book behind her and yet play the whole piece through by memory when she reaches home.

Perfect pitch is a gift to some people, but it can be acquired. Indeed, many authorities say that to be a really great musician this power must be possessed.—London Answers.

Question

It has been asked us several times, "How can you afford to give away that beautiful $400,000 CLAXTON PIANO, as you advertise you will do?"

Our Answer

We prefer to sell 100 articles at a profit of ten cents each, rather than 10 articles at a profit of one dollar each. It means just ninety more people patronizing our store. The only reason for our being in business is to do business. This means that we must bring the people to our store. Low prices and good values will bring us customers always. Our giving away this piano is simply to bring additional business to our store and it is doing it, every day. It pays you and us.

The next Silverware premium will be given away Oct. 6th for the largest number of special service checks turned in on that day, or before. Special service will be given away on every article bought in the Store before 10 o'clock each morning, until Oct. 6th.

Ira Bump's Treasure

He Lost It, but Found Another.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Ira Bump was head bookkeeper in a downtown wholesale house. He was a little, round, roly poly man with brown eyes and hair and a rosy complexion. He had money in the bank, he was always well dressed, he was unmarried, and he had boarded at Mrs. Hecker's for thirteen years.

Now, Ira Bump did not occupy the most expensive suit at Mrs. Hecker's thoroughly respectable and unhomelike abode. On the contrary, he lived in the third floor back bedroom. It was a large room and quite comfortable, for Ira had added many luxurles from time to time, and it was $3 less per week than the best suit, and that $3 Ira placidly planted in the bank with his other savings. Some day when he had to make way for a younger man at the office he intended to retire to the country and raise chickens.

Among his fellow boarders Ira was looked upon as a "back number." Dapper young store clerks winked at each other when Ira came in, and they were not above making jokes at his expense, all of which flew harmlessly over his smooth brown head.

The younger girls, stenographers and clerks, smiled kindly at him, and the older girls beamed upon him, for he was a possible escape from old maidenhood.

One day Ira read a story in a popular magazine, a story that stirred his sluggish blood. It was about some pearl fishers in the south Pacific who fought to the death over a magnificent pearl found in an oyster shell by one of the divers.

After that Ira ordered raw oysters in addition to his usual lunch. He never ate the oysters, because he was afraid of bacilli, but he searched the shells carefully, hoping that some day he, too, might find a pearly treasure in one of the succulent bivalves.

And, lo, one day his fork struck a round object in the bottom of the plate of oysters! Carefully he picked it out and furtively slipped it into his vest pocket. He was so excited that he could not finish his coffee, and, grabbing his hat, he dashed back to the office.

There, alone at his desk, he pored over the milky, lustrous pearl that rolled around in his palm.

"It must be worth $5,000!" he gloated as he wrapped it in tissue paper and hid it away. "I shall—I shall buy an automobile, I think."

That night when Ira Bump came into dinner he radiated with an air of prosperity. He wore a brand new suit of evening clothes, and from the crown of his head to his patent leather shod feet he was unusually immaculate.

Evening clothes were a distinct novelty at Mrs. Hecker's table, and Annie, the waitress, nearly dimmed Ira's sartorial glory by spilling soup upon him. but happily the bisque of tomato was diverted to the thick gray woolen coat sleeve of his next door neighbor, Denton, the hardware clerk.

Ira lent first aid to the wrathful Denton, for he felt in a measure responsible for the mishap. He knew and every one else knew, for they had seen Annie's start of surprise, that it was the sight of Mr. Bump's new clothes which had caused the accident.

Like an invisible mantle, an air of elegance descended upon the table. People were unusually courteous to one another.

Everybody talked except Freda Lindsay. Perhaps it was the long day spent in the schoolroom that was responsible for her unusual pallor, for the shadows under her sweet gray eyes and the sad droop to her mouth.

At any rate, Ira Bump was startled by her appearance and made a mental note that he must do something for Miss Lindsay. How delightful it was to be rich—richer than his friends and acquaintances-and hold the happiness of giving pleasure to others!

After dinner Ira paused to speak to Freda Lindsay. He felt very gay and excitable in his new clothes. He felt actually reckless.

"You are looking ill, Miss Lindsay." he said solicitously. "You need a breath of fresh air after the day's close confinement. Wouldn't you like to take a little ride-er-er-a motor ride in the park and then go to the theater afterward? It would give me much pleasure.

"Oh, Mr. Bump," she gasped, should be delighted! But," glancing at his attire, "I haven't anything very splendid to wear."

"Pooh!" laughed Ira Bump gayly "What's the matter with that pink gown you used to wear last summer? Freda blushed to think that he had remembered her rose pink voile of last summer. "I will put it on," she said hurriedly and went up to her little

Mrs. Hecker's sitting room buzzed with excitement when Ira Bump and Freda Lindsay rolled away in a hastily summoned motorcar.

"Bump certainly has struck it rich," remarked Denton enviously.

"He looks very distinguished in evening clothes," sighed Miss Petty.

"Oh, any one looks distinguished in a awallowtail," retorted the salesman pettishly. "They can talk all they want to about clothes not making the matchless jewel in his little wife.

man, but they help a lot, believe me." In the meantime Ira Bump and Freda Lindsay were becoming better acquainted. The change from the dull routine of their daily lives seemed to work miracles. In the sun of prosperity they expanded like stunted buds, and a flower of romance bloomed when they entered the theater.

The play was a romance, an old fashioned love story that set their hearts to beating to a new tune.

And when the motor sped them homeward Ira Bump opened his heart to Freda Lindsay. He told her about the pearl he had found and how a Maiden lane jeweler had offered him $3,000 for it.

"I wanted to keep it overnight. I'm going to take it to him in the morning and collect the money," said Ira, laughing like a boy.

Freda thought it was all wonderful. just like a story book.

"I suppose you'll be leaving Mrs. Hecker's," she said wistfully.

"Not yet," said Ira. "I am glad," said Freda simply. "How glad are you?" he whispered boldly.

"Very glad," admitted Freda. "I am thinking of buying a chicken farm. Do you like the country?" ask-

"I'm a country girl. I'm a misfit in the city," sighed Freda.

At that moment it entered Ira Bump's head that a chicken farm would be very lonesome and dull indeed if Freda Lindsay was not there with her sweet, sympathetic smile and her quick appreciation of everything he said and did. It would be very pleasant to have a little wife to adore one-to buy pretty frocks for her, to have her waiting for him at the door. Immediately Ira Bump proposed to

'What shall it be?' "A pearl," said Freda softly. When he was alone in his own room Ira sat down on the edge of the bed and reviewed the events of the past twelve hours. He had seen the jeweler, and after learning the value of his find he had gone to the bank and drawn some money. He had bought the evening

Even then he did not guess the truth. He believed he had mistaken the pocket. But one after another proved to be empty. His pulses leaped with fear as he frantically searched his clothes.

He searched the floor and the stairs and even the lower hall. His clothes were covered with lint and dust when at last he faced his disheveled reflection in his mirror, and the horrible truth was forced upon him that he had lost the pearl!

Like Cinderella, he was shorn of his into his old routine of dullness, and his spirit rebelled. And there was Freda!

Ira Bump groaned aloud.

He had told Freda about the pearl, and he had given her to understand that he would buy a chicken farm with the proceeds. Now, without the pearl he was not able to promise her very much. He had decided it would take several years longer to save enough money from his salary, and while Freda was waiting some more fortunate fellow might come along and win her away.

"I've got to tell her," he said doggedly as he turned out his light.

"I've lost the pearl," he said bluntly. "Oh, I'm so sorry!" she cried. His heart throbbed faster as he felt

"You mean it, Freda?" he gasped. 'But there won't be any farm, yet"-"We can take a little flat, and we can save. I'm a famous housekeeper, she laughed, "and we can be together."

"Yes!" he said. "Unless you'd rather-not!" she said doubtfully.

Advantage in Mixing the Dough Early in the Morning-Then It Will Not Rise Too Much.

The best time to mix bread is early in the morning. This gives an opportunity to see that the dough does not rise too much. Overrising is one of the principal causes of failure in bread baking. This is often the case when mixed in the evening and allowed to rise all night. With an even temperature the dough should be raised and ready for the pans in three hours, and in less than five hours from the time of mixing the rounded, shapely loaves should be out of the oven resting on the "cooler." Dissolve one whole yeast cake in onehalf cupful of warm water, scald 11/2 cupfuls of milk, to which add butter the size of an egg, one tablespoonful of sugar and one tablespoonful salt. When the butter is dissolved and milk lukewarm, add the dissolved yeast cake and stir all into six coffee cupfuls of bread flour, add warm water to make stiff enough to mold.

Turn out on a well-floured molding board and knead ten or fifteen minutes, or until smooth (it should be mixed so stiff that it will take up no more flour). Return to the mixing bowl, which should be well buttered; cover, and set in a warm place to rise. When risen to the top of the bowl stir down, pour out on the molding board again; it should now only require a little flour for handling. Knead well, divide into four parts, putting two of the sections into each well-buttered baking pan. The pans should be about half full, as the dough will double its bulk in rising. Raise to the tops of Freda Lindsay. He discovered that the pans and bake three-quarters of an hour.

This is for two good-sized loaves, and if properly baked will be white,

RHUBARB IN THE SPRING

Enthusiast Classes Vegetable as Composite of Early Sunshine and the Song of the Robin.

There are many "rhubarb recipes for spring days." They are for fritters and pie. And their very sounds put a smile on life. There are some people who affect to look down on rhubarb as a sort of plebeian dish, unfit for patrician palates. Such people defraud themselves. They revel in their own prejudices. Rhubarb is the very essence of spring, a happy composite of the early sunshine and the song of the robin. Of course, hard hearts cannot see it thus, for rhubarb was made for gentle souls.

But the fritters and the pie are not so much the melody of spring as the sauce, when brought forth by a grace, smile and a sweet thought. It is these that awaken the morning sun in the plant and melt the dews and start the birds to singing. Prejudice and vanity will never do it. That ruddy glow in the sauce is the reflection of the heart, and if it is not there the heart is not in it. Oh, there be rhubarb sauces that are an insult to spring and make the appetite hanker for kraut and turnips, but the real splendor. He felt himself sinking back sauce, from which the spirit of the and love-that is the sauce that turns rugged life into tender sentiment and changes hunger into delight.-Columbus Journal.

FOR RELIABLE WHITE BREAD PIES OF RARE MERIT

SOME RECIPES THAT HAVE ES-TABLISHED WORTH.

What Is Known as the "Pie of Five" Is Excellent-Good One Made With Brown Sugar-Delicious Spice Pie.

The Pie of Five.—One large, juicy lemon, one cupful of sugar, one egg, one good-sized potato and one cupful of water. Grate the rind of the lemon and add the lemon juice and egg. Beat well. Grate the potato or put through food chopper. Stir well with the other ingredients and then add the water. Place in a double boiler or saucepan and let thicken, and bake in two crusts.

Brown Sugar Pie.-Two-thirds of a cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of milk. Cook until waxy looking, then take the yolks of two eggs, one heaping tablespoonful of flour and one and one-half cupfuls of milk. Mix all together smooth, add to the above ingredients, cook until thick, and add vanilla. Have a baked crust, use the whites beaten stiff for the top, and return to the oven for a minute or Grapefruit Pie.—First bake a shell as for lemon pie, then make a filling as follows: Mix one tablespoonful of cornstarch in a little cold water, and over this pour one cupful of boiling water. To this add the juice of two grapefruits, the grated rind and juice of one orange, the beaten yolks of two eggs, and the white of one, and a small piece of butter. Put all in the double boiler and cook until thick, stirring all the time. When done, put in the shell. Now beat up the white of the second egg with one-half a cupful of sugar until thick, and spread with a knife over the pie. Put in the oven and let brown lightly. Serve cold. This makes a delicious pie.

Delicious Spice Pie.—The yolks of three eggs, one and one half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of cream, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two-thirds of a cupful of butter, one teaspoonful of spice, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg. Mix the flour and sugar together, then cream with the butter. Add the yolks of the eggs, beating thoroughly. Next add cream and spices. Use the whites for the frosting.

Turnip Pie.-Put two cupfuls of mashed cooked turnips into a basin, add three-quarters of a cupful of brown sugar, three well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one tablespoonful of powdered ginger, one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt. Mix and bake in one crust like a pumpkin pie. Sweet Potato Pie.—Bake the sweet potatoes and cut them in half-inch slices, put them in a pie plate on the lower crust, fill the plate, and sprinkle with butter and sugar and a little water. Put on the upper crust and

CULINARY HINTS.

One cupful of cornmeal makes six ounces. To keep cheese from molding or from drying, wrap it in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep in a covered dish. A teaspoonful of grated horseradish will keep a can of milk fresh for a day or two even in the hottest weather.

If lettuce when wilted is put into a pan of cold water and set in a cool place it will become fresh and crisp. When boiling a ham leave it in the water in which it has been boiled until it is quite cold. This will make it juicy and tender. When cooking cabbage, turnips or onions boil at the same time vinegar with a few spices. This will destroy all vegetable odor. When food burns in a kettle set the kettle in cold water and you will not notice any burnt taste. The stain left is easily removed with ashes and sand. Hard boiled eggs should be plunged into cold water as soon as they are removed from the saucepan. This prevents a dark ring from appearing round

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over drop a piece of dripping the size of a walnut into the center of them, just as they commence to boil.

VEGETABLE DOLLS.

They Make Jolly Favors For Halloween Dinners or Parties.

Vegetable dolls are very funny and not hard to make. They may be used as favors for choosing partners at a dance or supper. Make two of a kind for this reason.

Choose small apples, turnips, potatoes, carrots, beets, parsnips and radishes. Dress them with bright bits of ribbon and colored or white paper napkins. Apples with clove eyes make bright looking, rosy cheeked lassies peeping out from sunbonnets or broad brimmed hats trimmed with chicken feathers.

Carrots and parsnips make fine dunces and clowns if tall fools' caps and stiff collars are supplied. Beets and radishes may be made very amusing, as a bow of ribbon may be tied to the long, hairy root, making it look like a pigtail. Various expressions may be obtained by inking and using cloves for eyes. It is not necessary to make bodies, and if a long cape effect of paper is left the dolls will sit up well.

HOW TO USE HERBS.

Mint for meat sauces. Angelica for flavoring cakes. Lavender for oil and distilled water.

Sage for sausage and meat dressings Sweet fennel leaves in fish sauces. Dill, the seeds to flavor pickles. Borage leaves boiled as dandelion or spinach.

Thyme in gravies and dressings of stuffed meats. Chives leaves for flavoring soups and salads.

Tarragon leaves for giving flavor to vinegar and pickles. Coriander, fennel and caraway seeds for flavoring fruit sirups and cakes.

Borage, balm and catnip are useful where one has bees. Among those having medicinal value are arnica, hops, catnip, pennyroyal, belladonna, sage, rue, horehound, marshmallow, wormwood, hyssop and pepper-

POLITENESS ON THE WIRE

Really Seems to Be a Fact That Good Manners Are Forgotten by Telephone Users.

"I don't understand why anybody is impolite over the phone," remarked a woman visiting in New York, "unless he is cowardly or unless the phone, like wine, brings out the real character of people. And I especially don't see why women should be impolite to women. "The most provoking instance I have had in many days occurred right here in New York. An old and dear friend of mine whom I had not seen in years had married and come to New York to live. Her married name was Blankleigh, let us say, but I did not know her husband's initials and I had no idea where she lived. It was my first visit to New York and I wanted to see "My only hope was that she was in the telephone book and to it I went. I found six Blankleighs, any one of whom might be she, but which one? It was for me to find out and I began with the first one.

"I asked for Mrs. Blankleigh and she came to the receiver. I apologized and explained why I had called and asked if she were my old friend. The way she snapped out that she wasn't and rang off was something awful.

"The following three were variants of the first, not much better and not any worse. Only one of them was a man and he just laughed and said there wasn't any Mrs. Blankleigh in his house at present, but if I-and then I rang off. "The fifth was the one I sought and I didn't have to seek any further. Now I am thinking whether or not to call up the sixth and see if she is any more polite and considerate than the others. And it would have been just as easy to have been polite and nice about it and tried to help me, wouldn't

CHANGE NAMES OF STREETS

Frenchmen Find Time for Small Things in Midst of a National Crisis.

The French are a curious compound of earnestness and lightness. No matter how imminent a crisis, or how threatening the ruin, they never fail to pay all due attention to the correct outward form. In the present tremendous crisis of French affairs one would think that the last thing the Parisian authorities would concern themselves about would be the naming of streets. And yet, according to recent dispatches, the city council, upon hearing of the brave defense made at Liege, passed an ordinance changing the name of the Rue de Berlin to the Rue de Liege.

This was more than duplicated in 1870. After the catastrophe of Sedan, the ruin of Napoleon III's empire and the establishment of the infant republic, the national assembly, sitting in Paris on matters for the safety of the country, while the Prussians were thundering down upon the city, concerned themselves largely with changing the names of things from "Imperial" and "Royal" to "National." Among others, they passed, after a heated debate, a decree changing the name of the royal Bengal tiger in the Paris zoo to that of the national Bengal tiger, and instructed the custodians to see that the signs were changed at once.

Lesson I .- Fourth Quarter, For In Its Pursuit Peter Perkins Oct. 3, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xxi, 11-20. Memory Verses, 17-19-Golden Text, Num. xxxii, 23 - Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Ahab and Naboth side by side on earth, the rich and the poor, meet together, but there is a hereafter, as described in Luke xvi, and the rich here are sometimes awfully poor, and property. worse than poor, when they leave this of sinful human nature when such as act like a spoiled child when they canpleased when reproved by the Lord now he is the same because he cannot Ahab, but Naboth feared the Lord and try. evidently remembered that the land was His and was not to pass from tribe to tribe (Lev. xxv, 23; Num. xxxvi, 7), and he would rather disfor God are greatly needed-those who snare. We must live in the fear of the Lord always.

In the very next chapter we see a faithful servant of the Lord, Micaiah, the son of Imlah, put in prison and fed on bread and water because he spoke the Lord's message and feared no man's frown and sought no man's favor (xxii, 8, 14, 27, 28). to the murderess that Naboth was dead, stoned to death, like Stephen and Saul, long afterward, but they did not know the God of Naboth, who ever liveth and cares for His own, though He often allows that which looks like evil to come to them. It stands forever true that all things work together for good to them that love God (Rom. viii, 28). Ahab went to take possession of Naboth's vineyard, but an awful message came to him from the Lord by the mouth of Elijah concerning both himself and his wife. "Thus saith the Lord, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine," and "The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel" (verses 19, 23). See the fulfillment of both of these predictions in xxii, 38, and II Kings ix, 10, 26, 30-37. There is a reaping for all sowing both here and hereafter, for "whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," and "they that have sown the wind shall reap the whirlwind" (Gal. vi, 7, 8; Hos. viii, 7).

Ahab called Elijah his enemy (verse 20), but it was Ahab who was the eneby of Elijah and of the Lord, for he had sold himself to the devil to work evil in the sight of the Lord, being stirred up to do so by his wicked wife, Jezebel (verses 20, 25). He said to Elijah, "Hast thou found me?" And Elijah said, "I have found thee" (verse This reminds us of the words in Num. xxxii, 23, "Be sure your sin will find you out," and also of Matt. x, 26, "There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, and hid that shall not be known." Oh, the revealings of that day, when there may be many works of even Christians burned up because of self (I Cor. iii, 11-15). It looks as if Ahab might have been a different man but for his wicked wife. And oh, how gracious the Lord was to him! He knew him thoroughly, and yet when He saw some apparent repentance, humility and fasting He held off the evil during his days (verses 27-29). The alliance of Jehosaphat (who was one of the eight good kings of Judah) with Ahab, as recorded in chapter xxii, is one of the strange combinations of the godly and ungodly which prove so disastrous always. Why not determine to lay to heart II Cor. vi, 14-18, and live accordingly, for wholehearted separation unto the Lord is the only way.

SUNDAY SCHOOL. HUNTING FOR HEALTH

Found His World Changed.

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS. (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Peter Perkins came into temporary possession of the old Stanwood property through mutual friends of his own and the last remaining member of the Stanwood family. The Stanwood property was sadly dilapidated. The gardens, both vegetable and floral, were all but wrecks; the lone cow was a pitiful sight to a please Ahab at any cost than displease lover of animals, while the few hens the Lord. "Don't give it to me-even if I fire you for not doing so," he had commanded Gregory, and the old man kept the key.

Before the cold weather came the cowshed was mended, the chicken coops whitewashed and a cockerel and some fine hens added to the meager flock, and all other preparations for an excellent springtime were made. The poor little rabbit was given a mate and, that being the last of the domestic arrangements among the barnyard life, Peter and Gregory turned their attention to their own habitation.

During the winter months they painted every inch of the interior of the Stanwood house and mended roofs and drafty doors and windows. Creeping vines were trimmed so that with the springtime rosebuds would seek admission to the old living room with its great stone fireplace and lofty ceilings.

It was not until the arrival of spring, when the verdure was brilliant and the fruit blossoms in full and odorous bloom, that Peter really threatened Gregory with dismissal. "It's a chance in an artist's life," he stormed at the imperturbable servant. "Those blossoms are perfectthere never was an orchard so beautiful. I could win a thousand dollar prize with just a small sketch." His tone had become somewhat wheed-

"The blossoms'll be out again next year," was all Gregory said, and Peter raved in vain for the keys to his paints and brushes. He eyed Peter with a glow of pride. Somethow he felt responsible for the glow of health that was slowly progressing in Peter's

"Whatever will we do with the fruit, chickens, eggs, milk and vegetables that we will be having before long?" questioned Peter as he realized the prolific tendencies that work at Stanwood farm was beginning to make evident. "We will have a hundred fine little rabbits if we don't watch out," he laughed. The question, however, was a serious one. "Old Nancy is a real beauty now," he added as they watched the sleek, fattened cow chewing her spring cud with bovine contentment. "Think of the fine milk that will be wasted. You and I can't get away with it."

Everything that Peter and Gregory touched multiplied with astonishing rapidity. Each accused the other of possessing a weird charm with growing things. With the development of vegetables and fruits, to say nothing of the barnyard of prolific hens and fancy rich milk, the question of disposal of the produce became an imperative one

Old Gregory, however, had a scheme on his worn sleeve, but he kept it to himself until he had made a round of all the small cottages that surrounded the farm. They were tiny bits of property owned and inhabited largely by young married couples with small children. It was not easy to provision the homes with fresh vegetables and the grounds did not permit of gardening. The suggestion that Gregory made to those housewives was that he supply them with eggs, chickens, fruit and vegetables at a nominal price. Housewives one and all flew to the rescue of Peter and Gregory, and considered themselves very lucky in obtaining farm products so close to their own doorsteps. The question of milk was difficult, as Nancy might not supply an entire community, and one and all wanted Nancy's rich milk.

"It means," laughed Peter, "that Nancy will have to occupy a smaller portion of the shed. We will have to get a couple more like her." He eyed Gregory for a moment very thoughtfully. "You know, of course, Gregory, that I am not going to take the profit from this business. No, I am not," he added swiftly, seeing the incredulity in Gregory's face. "You are going to take a certain per cent, but all the rest is going into that hole in the old chimney corner against the time Miss Stanwood returns. You see, it is really her farm, and-"

"A pretty farm it was," said the old gardener disgustedly, but with added affection in his eyes for Peter.

"Nevertheless, the cow, the chickens, the orchard and all are really belonging to her. You see it-do you not, Gregory?'

"Yes, I suppose I do," grumbled the old man, and turned away lest Peter Perkins see that which had risen in Suffice to say that Stanwood farm became a paying proposition that quite exceeded the dreams of the temporary owner. The hole in the chimney corner was stuffed with bills and silver, and the day came when another brick had to be dislodged and another bank started.

The brushes and paint had been taken from the attic room, and Peter reveled anew in the blossoming orchard and his loved art. One or two marvelous sketches found their way into the New York shops.

Peter had regained health, both mentally and physically, and it was a most attractive looking artist who looked up suddenly one sunny day in early spring to see a wood nymph standing gazing admiringly at his

His brushes were suspended in the clear air, so lovely was the girl. Her wide hat seemed made to shelter the beauty of her oval face and her deep blue eyes held a hint of fear in them. She would have fled save that Peter stopped her.

"If I could put you in this picture, he suggester, frankly, "I could most probably make several thousand dollars from the canvas."

The girl blushed shyly and drew a trifle nearer. There was awe in her glance. The orchard, as it appeared on the canvas, seemed to breathe of spring and to sway with the breeze. Certainly the petals were fluttering

"It would be a pity," she said softly, "to hold myself responsible for so great a loss to you. Since I am boarding in the Rose cottage it will give me pleasure to pose for you for a few moments each morning."

"Hours!" breathed Peter eagerly: It so happened that old Gregory was left with more work on his hands than on the days before the nymph had arrived. One day he peered through the branches of the trees and gave vent to a low whistle when his eyes rested on Peter's model. Madge Stanwood, the last of the old family, was standing beneath a gnarled apple tree while Peter's brushes were rapidly sweeping her image onto the canvas. There was that in the eyes of Peter, and it reflected itself in the eyes of the girl, which made old Gregory laugh softly. Love in its most wonderful form was making the spring a paradise.

At that very moment of old Gregory's musings Peter Perkins had said 'Wonderful girl!" in an awed and breathless tone, and Madge had returned softly:

"But you are a wonderful man, Peterkins," and her tone had been more awed, more breathless than Peter's own.

EVERY MAN, WOMAN, AND CHILD

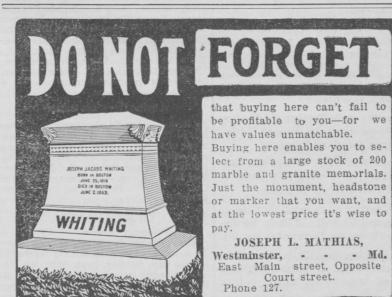

Almost without exception, can and should have a Bank Account

The money that pays the monthly bills is enough to start the account. The habit of depositing surplus money, once formed, soon develops into the saving habit-and the saving habit makes honest, industrious and frugal citizens. That is why teaching children to save is a part of their moral education.

Start an account here and you will find former extravagances easily avoided—needless expenses curtailed—deposits will grow until your bank account has become one of the real safeguards and satisfactions of your life.

This is so true that nowadays nearly everybody has a bank account. If you haven't, come in and let us explain how
