THE CARROLL RECORD

THE DOLLAR FOR THE RECORD Is Well Spent

VOL. 22. Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone, 3-R. TANeyTOWN, MARYLAND. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1915. NO. 19

BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

Justice Posey, of Frederick, fined Calvin D. Summers, of near Middletown, $50.00 for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

The sale of liquors in the National Capital has been restricted by the excise board, by cutting the number of saloons from 300 to 271.

The brick residence of Daniel W. Smith, five miles from Westminster, burned Monday.

Mrs. Margaret Corn was married to Stanley Cobb at the home of the bride's parents, in El Paso, Texas.

In order to quiet speculation President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt on Monday authorized the statement that their marriage will take place near the close of December.

Scores of laborers of Frederick county have been husking corn by moonlight. Throughout the county it is reported that corn fields are dotted with little groups of men, women and children, as early as 1 o'clock in the morning, all husking corn and "making extra money."

State Fire Marshal Geo. Edw. Myers, of Frederick, who was shot in the right eye two weeks ago, while aiding the police in the arrest of an alleged arson gang, in Anne Arundel county, was operated upon last Monday afternoon at the University Hospital, Baltimore.

The water supply of Littlestown is in a bad condition. They have been having trouble with the State Department over the pollution of one of the wells, and the supply has become quite limited.

With a song on his lips, George Edward Smith, three times Democratic mayor of Frederick, went through the hottest primary and general election contests in the history of the county, and literally sang his way to the seat which he will occupy in the Orphans' Court.

The largest sale of horses ever held in this part of the country was the McHenry Bros' sale, on Saturday, October 30th, at their stables in Westminster.

Do Not Do It.

"Do not allow any one to come on your hand and kill your wild birds. They are your friends and have benefited you all through the year by eating bugs and worms and weed seeds that would injure your crops.

For Relief of the Belgians.

As announced in our last issue, the Record is co-operating with the Henry Clews, New York, Christmas Fund for the relief of destitute Belgians.

America, from her abundance, should help. No people in the world have ever suffered more, or lost more heavily, than the Belgians. Let us help with our Dollars, and consider it a privilege, and a real charity.

Spending A Dollar.

There are different ways of doing it. You can spend it home, and make your home folks feel happy and neighborly toward you, and a little more like assuming the burdens of local taxation and local interests generally; or, you can send it away, feel a little guilty about doing so, and not add a particle to the good of your home community, and in all probability not to your own financial good.

Spending a dollar is a pretty responsible thing, if you look at it right. Because you think you own the dollar and can "do as you please" with it, it is hardly sound always to have the hardest time, anywhere, to keep prosperous, and when the "little place" is home, you ought to stand by it.

Taneytown's Entertainment Course.

The season's Entertainment Course, for Taneytown, tickets for which are now on sale, is fully up to the standard of previous years, and gives a pleasing variety, such as our audiences have heretofore expressed a preference for.

Vote of Frederick County.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 3.—Only one Democrat was elected in Frederick county on the entire ticket—George Edward Smith winning for Judge of the Orphans' Court by a majority of 365 over his Republican opponent.

Do Not Do It.

The names of the Republican candidates are in Italics. The other parties are designated D for Democratic, P for Prohibition, L for Labor, S for Socialist.

The Result in Carroll.

The election of 11 Republicans to 4 Democrats in this county, was a big surprise, generally, and can best be explained on the ground that the Republican candidates made the most active and effective campaign, and succeeded in getting out their vote the closest.

The Result in the State.

Harrington (Dem) was elected Governor by about 3,500, while McMullen, for Comptroller had 6,445, and Ritchie, for Attorney-General had 29,557.

The Lincoln Highway.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 30.—The Lincoln Highway is entering upon its third year. Astonishing developments along the entire route of the transcontinental thoroughfare attest the nation-wide approval set upon the building of the 3384-mile roadway dedicated to Abraham Lincoln.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

MONDAY, Nov. 1st, 1915.—The last will and testament of Michael Yingling, late of Carroll County, deceased, was admitted to probate and letters testamentary granted unto Theodore A. Yingling and William A. Yingling, who returned inventory of debts due.

Look out for Postmasters' Mistakes.

The Postoffice Department, recognizing the fact that Postmasters frequently put mail matter in the wrong boxes, is determined to have fixed a penalty of $200.00 on persons who take the mail of another—whether letters or newspapers—from the postoffice, and not returning it immediately.

DIED.

KREGLO.—Mrs. John Kreglo died in Hagerstown, last Saturday, aged 70 years. She leaves a twin sister, Mrs. Samuel S. Null, of Taneytown district; also two brothers, Samuel Fair, of Uniontown, and Wm. G. Fair, of Lemoine, Pa.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE

Of our dear wife and mother, Harriet R. Frook, who passed away one year ago today, November 7, 1915.

School Commissioners.

The Board of School Commissioners of Carroll county held a meeting on Monday, Nov. 1, 1915, beginning at 10 a. m. All the members being present.

MARRIED.

STAMBAUGH—OHLER.—At the Presbyterian Manse, Taneytown, on Thursday evening, November 4, 1915, Harry Stambaugh and Miss Ruth E. Ohler, both of near Harney, Md., were united in marriage by the Rev. Seth Russell Downie.

All articles on this page are either original, or properly credited. This is always been a fixed rule with this office, and we suggest the adoption of it by our exchanges.

APPEAL TO REASON, is one thing; trying to dictate absolutely what others shall do, is quite another. The very force of one's personal opinions, at times, scares away support that more modest argument would secure—it rarely ever pays to play the dictator among men of discerning minds.

ONLY A FEW MONTHS, and the Presidential campaign will open. The rests between various brands of political excitement are extremely short—too short. We have too many elections, and it would be an easy matter, as well as a big saving in expense, to arrange our elections two years apart.

THE PRINTERS have had a harvest in the card business, the past few months, that will now come to a dead stop. But, if business cards are good during a political campaign, why not at other times? Many of the candidates who have something special to dispose of, might help their business by using cards right along.

THERE IS NO DENYING the fact that business in general has been gradually getting slower, the past two years. Some lines show activity, directly due to the war, but with these exceptions, business is "off," and the "cost of living" still keeps high. That we do not actually have "hard times," is a fact to be decidedly thankful for.

A WHEEL that will not "skid" is a mighty safe kind for fast travel on slippery roads and curves, and a "non skid" political policy is a good one to operate, for both present and future. But the "non skid" wheel advertisement is not always true to claim, nor is it always true in the promises of those from whom honest people always expect the truth.

The Slaughter by Automobiles.

The time must come when legislators must take account of the increasing loss of life, and the crippling and injuring of human beings, due to the use of automobiles. And secondarily, the slaughter of horses, the destruction of vehicles and loss to property in general, without counting the wrecking of automobiles, must also cause thoughtful people to look for, and insist on, relief from the present and increasing Molochs of the road. Humanity cries aloud for greater highway safety.

Even the thousands of auto users and owners who operate their machines with care, and with all possible respect for life and property, realize that laws, or expedients compelling greater safety, are greatly needed. Not all fatalities and accidents, by any means, are confined to "joy riders," or to irresponsibles; a large percentage of auto users, in fact, are our very best and most conscientious people, so the question of reducing accidents is a very extensive one, indeed, and is daily becoming more so.

There is this danger, however, with the best of people. There is apt to be a growth of the opinion that, so far as non-users of autos are concerned, it is up to them to look out for themselves; that autos are licensed for use of the highways, and if accidents occur, it is not the user's fault. The verdict that an accident was "unavoidable," is becoming quite too common, and not enough investigation and thought is taken as to what constitutes the truly "unavoidable."

There is apt to be, with the increased exercise of rapid travel, a lack of consideration for slow travel—for the use of horses and vehicles. After one becomes accustomed to driving an auto forty or fifty miles in two or three hours—farther than the average horse can travel in a day—he is apt to become very contemptuous of the use of horse and vehicle, both for himself and others; and it is the growth of this feeling that is in reality responsible for very many of the accidents that daily fill our newspapers.

Familiarity, also, with the use of autos, inevitably leads to their misuse. Speed invites recklessness—not intentionally, but naturally. The driving of a machine, full of power and life, controlled by levers and push-buttons, leads to forgetfulness that the machine possesses no human traits—has neither eyes, ears, mind nor sensibility—and also leads to a forgetfulness that the mind and physical forces of the driver must continually keep in control the powers of the mere machine.

A little inattention, a little lack of care, a little ignorance of mechanism, a little fault of judgment, possibly a hidden defect in the machine itself, may in a minute send lives into eternity and cause considerable property loss besides. These are such common occurrences, and so likely to occur, even with the best intentioned, that the statements made in the first paragraph must enlist the best attention of the best people, and all try to find relief from the fearful destruction now so common.

Relief From Taxation.

Now that the election is over, interest will perhaps turn toward the equalization of taxation, and toward measures for practical relief by the coming legislature. In our opinion, these questions should have been taken up before the election of members of the legislature, as members of the body come and go, and are difficult to reach the "next time" in case they fail to give satisfactory service while in office; besides, a man is decidedly more likely to make pledges before his election, than after it.

However, the time for ante-election efforts is past. Now, the logical and most effective thing to do, is to call meetings of tax-payers, both district and county, and try to arrive at majority sentiment relative to relief measures, and have this sentiment embodied in Bills for presentation when the legislature meets. The work of tax-payers will be only half done, if they merely arrive at conclusions, and do not have Bills actually prepared and presented.

It will be too late to do this when the legislature meets, early in January; indeed, the time is short if action is taken at once. And action must be taken, if burdened tax-payers are both honest, and in earnest, in criticizing present laws.

The RECORD has had its say, and did its best to place facts before its readers. It can do no more without pretending some great special interest that it does not have. This paper is willing to lend its aid toward bringing about just and equal taxes, but it will not go further and assume responsibility for calling meetings. This is for the people to do. If they prefer to let the matter rest, and take chances of the legislature giving them what they want, we will be satisfied to let it go at that.

An Iniquitous Practice.

That it is the custom in the Maryland legislature, to rush bills through at the last minute, with printed lists of members pinned to them as having voted "aye," regardless of their actual preferences, is a revelation to many. That such practices can be carried on, makes a burlesque of legislation, and unquestionable lends support to "referendum" propositions that would otherwise not have any considerable support.

It is bad enough to hold up bills until the last minute, with the hope of "rail-roading" them through, but it is despicable to attach the names of those opposed to measures, to help make up a constitutional majority. This means that but a very few who hold the ropes know just what is happening; it also shows the iniquity that is possible in legislative bodies where the opposition party is too weak to make effective protest.

Perhaps conditions are equally as bad in Pennsylvania, where the Republicans have absolute sway, but that does not make the program right in Maryland, or anywhere. Strange to say, this practice in our own state was hardly touched on in the recent campaign. In fact, the Governorship fight, alone, was made entirely too much of, and really shows insincerity on the part of campaign committees; and this was true, too, in the primaries—fighting for the head of the ticket, while the make-up of our legislative body is of much more importance to the masses.

Women After The War.

Before the war began, women outnumbered men in almost all the fighting countries, though exact statistics are available for only a few. In the three principal combatant countries west of Russia the excess population of females was as follows:

United Kingdom.....	1,297,501
Germany.....	845,661
France.....	645,211

Total excess of females in three countries.....2,788,373

The war has increased this disparity of the sexes to a frightful extent. Assuming that British figures of casualties refer to home forces alone, the United Kingdom has lost about 400,000 men. Prussia owns to the loss of more than 1,800,000 soldiers, besides those of her naval forces, and there has been a great deal of heavy fighting since her last casualty statement was published. On this basis, the whole German Empire must have lost close to 3,000,000 men. French losses are not published, but they are certainly not less than 1,200,000 and more probably are fully 1,500,000.

On the face of the returns, therefore, these three countries have lost from 4,600,000 to 5,000,000 men. There are many duplications in the lists; men slightly wounded in the early months of the war have returned to the front and been wounded again. Men killed or mortally wounded seldom form more than one-fourth of the total battle casualties, though the use of high explosives and bayonets tends to increase this proportion. On the other hand, the war probably is not more than half over, and millions of wounded men and prisoners have had their health or earning capacity lowered to the point which unites them to become husbands and fathers.

It is not a wild guess to estimate that when the struggle is over these three countries will contain 5,000,000 more marriageable women than marriageable men. Not since the Thirty Years' War has any European nation faced such a problem as this. How will that problem be met? Will there be a tacit recognition of polygamy? Will the state stand sponsor for children born out of wedlock—as on many less serious occasions? Or will there be assisted emigration of women from war-wasted Europe to countries like the United States, Canada and Australia, where there is always a surplus of men?—Chicago Journal.

Maryland Apples.

That Maryland is fast becoming recognized throughout the country as an apple producing State is evidenced by the great number of inquiries being received by Prof. T. B. Symons of the Maryland Agricultural College, who has charge of the "Maryland Week" to be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore, Nov. 16 to 20, regarding the possibility of sending classes interested in apple culture from other State Institutions. He already has assurance that there will be present in Baltimore during the Maryland exhibition, representatives from Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and Delaware.

The belief held by many for years that good apples were grown only in Oregon or Washington State has been proven a myth and at several shows in recent years, it has been conclusively shown that apples grown in Maryland and the Virginias have a zest and flavor unexcelled by any apples on earth.

Until recently, the western apple growers have produced a fruit which excelled the eastern product in size and color, but now with improved methods and more careful attention by the orchardists nearby, this condition no longer obtains. Maryland, with its unexcelled shipping and marketing conditions, its even climate and soil which is susceptible to intelligent treatment, bids fair to rival all other fruit growing States.

The Champion Corn Grower of the World.

Raising 141 bushels of corn on an acre at an expense of only $13.73 for rent, seed, horses, labor, and husking helped make Willard Zeller, an Iowa farmer, the champion corn grower of the world, according to an article in the current issue of Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published in Springfield Ohio. And when much of that corn has longer ears, bigger kernels, and smaller cobs than any other corn, the record is complete.

This is how Mr. Zeller raises the champion corn: "Very early he came to understand that the one biggest thing in the corn business was good seed, and systematically began to develop it. A germination test was made of a large number of ears, and from among them 10 ears, all of which tested 100 per cent. perfect and strong, were selected. Three hundred kernels from each of these 10 ears were planted, and the corn from each ear was planted in a separate row. All grades of quality were represented, the best ear yielding 118 bushels to the acre and the poorest yielding only 37 bushels.

"But they were not satisfied with one test. They were anxious to verify their experiments, and planted corn from the same mother ears under similar conditions the next year. The results were also similar. The ear which was best the first year was best this year also, and produced a yield of 117 bushels, and the poorest ear was again poorest with a yield of 35 bushels.

"The third year, under similar conditions, there was the same great difference in quality among these ten original ears from which the test was being made, the first was again first with 114 bushels; and the poorest was again poorest with 34 bushels.

"The soil is plowed to a depth of seven inches in the fall. Early in the spring it is harrowed to make a dust mulch. By the harrowing it seems that the small capillary-like openings in the ground are broken and the moisture that would otherwise escape remains in the soil. Just before planting the ground is disked and then harrowed again. With the soil soft and fine and warm it is in condition for planting. No fixed date is followed, but the planting is usually done in the early part of May."

How to Prevent Croup.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the last winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croaky cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere. Advertisement.

Freedom of the Seas.

What Germany especially wants is "freedom of the seas," according to Herr Ballin, and "freedom" must be a condition of peace. But Herr Ballin is not altogether candid in his statement. What Germany really wants is "freedom of the seas" while the Kaiser's armies are free to continue fighting, and his plea, intended to gain the sympathy of neutral countries, is too transparent to mislead the most superficial person.

Germany failed to appreciate the power of the British Navy, which was as ready as the German armies. In a short time the German ships were driven off the seas, and the loss of supplies from abroad is bearing heavily upon the German people. While the war lasts Britain's navy will guard vigorously against the sending of contraband commodities to German ports. Now that the mistake of under-rating the naval strength of Great Britain is realized, the countries not engaged in the war are indirectly asked to help Germany by suggesting modifications of the blockade. The German notion of "freedom of the seas" at this time calls for the lifting of a blockade that is detrimental to a scheme of world domination.—Providence Journal.

Should Be Made Here.

Toys "made in Germany" and valued at $165,000,000 have been released from embargo and will be landed in this country. As a consequence, $165,000,000 of good American money will go to Europe to pay the workers and furnishers of material. The same Santa Claus who brings the toys here will take the money there. All of which would not be at all unfortunate were it not for the fact that there are plenty of people in the United States ready and anxious to make articles that are entirely suitable for Christmas gifts.

It is estimated that every dollar spent for labor is turned over ten times a year. The laborer pays his grocery bill, the groceryman pays the wholesaler, the wholesaler pays the manufacturer, the manufacturer pays for his labor and materials, the factory employe buys a suit of clothes, the clothing merchant pays the money to his clerk, the clerk buys a theater ticket, the theater manager pays the actor, who, in turn, spends the money for board and clothes. Thus the money goes on its mission, giving profitable employment to an endless chain of individuals.

But if that dollar is sent to Europe, it renders its service to an endless chain of Europeans, instead of an endless chain of Americans. And that makes some difference. The difference constitutes the reason for a Protective Tariff.—Louisiana (Mo.) News.

Pestering Perfection.

The Navy League may be an authority on preparedness, but it is a poor judge of men. William J. Bryan recently accused it of a corrupt alliance with the "armor-plate ring," and it has addressed to him a polite note asking for an apology. Mr. Bryan never publicly acknowledged an error or offered an apology in his life. When he receives a revelation concerning a paramount issue, everybody who doubts or disputes becomes at once and of necessity wicked and lost. To agree with Mr. Bryan is a rapture. To disagree with him is a confession of guilt. When he is not counting his gate-money, he is separating his fellow-creatures into groups angelic and satanic.

In his day Mr. Bryan has consigned about two-thirds of the American people to perdition without admitting a single mistake. We are not inclined to vouch for the sinlessness of the Navy League, but why is it so lacking in horse-sense as to repine at its fate? So far as it is concerned, Perfection has spoken, and that is the end of the matter.—N. Y. World.

Colds do not Leave Willingly.

Because a cold is stubborn is no reason why you should be. Instead of "wearing" it out, get sure relief by taking Dr. King's New Discovery. Dangerous bronchial and lung ailments often follow a cold which has been neglected at the beginning. As your body faithfully battles these cold germs, no better aid can be given than the use of this remedy. Its merit has been tested by old and young. Get a bottle today. 50c and $1.00. Just the Right Present.

Don't take chances in the matter of Christmas presents. You don't want yours, like so many others, to be received with indifference or worse, and ten days after Christmas to be cast aside and forgotten.

You take no such chance in giving The Youth's Companion for a year. Did you ever know of a home in which it came amiss, or one in which it was not conspicuous on the library table or in some one's hands all through the year?

It is worth while to make a gift of that sort, and it is worth while to receive it, too, for The Companion illustrates the best traits in American life in its stories and sketches, upholds the best standards in its articles and other contributions, and combines the practical and informing with the entertaining and blood-stirring.

If you do not know The Companion as it is to-day, let us send you one or two current issues free, that you may thoroughly test the paper's quality. We will send also the Forecast for 1916.

Every new subscriber who sends $2.00 for the fifty-two weekly issues of 1916 will receive free all the issues for the rest of 1915 and The Companion Home Calendar for 1916.

SHEEP ON THE FARM.

They Perform Valuable Service by Cleaning Up the Weeds.

The present season is one in which vegetation of all kinds is making exceptionally rank growth. In many a field weeds and grass have taken complete possession of the ground. These weeds, if allowed to mature, will sow the fields with foul seeds to hinder the crops of next year, says the Kansas Farmer.

There is only one way to harvest and turn into cash this rank growth of vegetation, and that is to get a bunch of

The Lincoln is a long woolled sheep and is the largest of all the breeds. The head is massive, but not coarse. The nose is somewhat arched and bare of wool. The brisket is full and deep, the body round and well proportioned, and while it is a heavy sheep it is not coarse. It is a desirable breed for mutton and wool. The animal shown is a Lincoln wether.

lambs and turn them into the field. Lambs will clean up a lot of vegetation of this kind and leave the field as clean as a floor.

The one who has had no previous experience with sheep had best start in with not to exceed one carload. A good type of lamb for this work of cleaning up cornfields is one weighing about fifty pounds and in a fair condition. They should ordinarily be purchased in September and usually can be marketed in a little over two months, or as soon as taken out of the field. While some like to feed a little grain in addition, the surest profit comes from putting them on the market when they are taken from the fields. A good, thrifty lamb ought to gain from eight to fifteen pounds during a feeding period of this length.

Feeding sheep are likely to be high on the market this fall, but for the purpose of converting into cash such vegetation as will be present in great abundance there is little chance for loss unless through accident of some kind. If marketed direct from the field they will have eaten nothing that has cost any money. They could go to market for the same price per pound they cost as feeders and still make a little profit. But even if market conditions should be such that they barely pay expenses the farm would still be ahead, for the weeds would be harvested, no seed would mature to make the land foul the next year, and the bulk of the fertilizing value of this mass of vegetation would be scattered over the fields in condition to quickly mingle with the soil.

HARVESTING WITH HOGS.

Swine Lighten Farm Labor When Allowed to Feed Themselves.

The hog is a successful harvester if given the job to clean up a field of rye or corn, writes a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer. Not only does he do the work well, but he grows fat while he is performing the task. He works while the farmer can engage himself at something else. The spring crop of pigs will do the work, and there will be no loss.

One acre of rye, yielding twenty bushels, will run six shoats averaging 100 pounds about six weeks. If tankage is provided with the rye good gains will be the result. Then in early September the crop of shoats are ready for a cornfield. They will harvest the corn as well as the picker, who gets from 4 to 7 cents a bushel. First they should have a field of early corn, to be followed later with another field of a later variety. This provides daily feed for a bunch of shoats from August to November and will save hours of time. The hog will help many a farmer solve the labor problem. Where it has been tried it has been a success.

Watering the Horse.

Water your horses as often as possible. So long as a horse is working water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay. When a horse comes in after work sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth and the dock. Wash his feet, but not his legs.

Brewer's Grains For Horses.

The ration for horses containing dried brewers' grains is mixed as follows: Six pounds of hay, eight pounds of dried brewers' grains, two pounds of bran and four pounds of corn. This ration has been found to give as satisfactory results as oats, so it can be recommended in cases where oats are more expensive than the mixed ration.—Rural New Yorker.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Lots with water and shade are what the hogs need now.

A strong sheep does not necessarily need to be a large one. In fact, a majority of the strongest sheep are medium in size.

When a horse's manger gets sour it is time somebody was hauled over the coals.

Whether you are keeping sheep for pleasure or profit, your desires will be fully met if your flock is of superior quality.

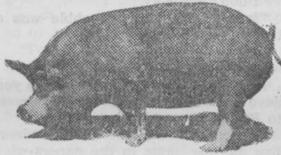

Irregularity in salting horses may lead to bad results. Let the team go too long without salt and then give plenty and you may have sick horses.

PROFIT IN SELF FED SPRING PIGS

That self feeding of spring pigs is highly profitable no longer admits of any doubt, provided such animals are intended for early market, writes H. Thorne in the Country Gentleman. Hogs thus fed will make very rapid gains, and recent experiments indicate that if the necessary ingredients are supplied in separate receptacles the pig will balance his ration more economically and will make more rapid gains than when the same ingredients are mixed and doled out by the feeder.

Last summer I was much interested in the feeding operations on the farm of a noted breeder of pure bred hogs. This farm maintained a breeding herd of sixty to eighty brood sows, which were divided into two lots and kept on separate parts of the farm. The two lots of hogs were about the same in all respects and were supplied with the same kinds of feed. Each lot was under the management of a separate herdsman.

One herdsman tried the experiment of fitting up a small self feeder in one corner of the pasture, in which twenty or more sows were running with their litters of pigs six to twelve weeks old. The hopper was fenced against the older hogs and was kept well supplied with shelled corn, tankage and charcoal, each in separate compartments. At the time of my visit in July the pigs having access to these feeds were fully 40 per cent heavier than the pigs of the same age on the other part of the farm. Furthermore, the mothers of the pigs that had grain ad lib. were in far better condition than the sows in the other lot, owing to the fact that the self fed pigs were inclined to nurse less than the pigs in the other lot.

Last year the Iowa station fed five pigs that averaged 316 pounds at eight months and four days old. These pigs were placed in a dry lot at eighty days old, weighing forty-nine pounds each. The self feeder was supplied with shelled corn, whole oats, tankage, oilmeal, charcoal, salt and ground limestone. At the start these pigs ate two pounds of corn a day each. The amount consumed gradually increased until at a weight of 225 pounds they were eating nine pounds of corn a day each. Of tankage they consumed varying amounts, usually ranging from a half to three-fourths of a pound daily. After they reached a weight of 225 pounds they ate very little of this concentrate. From this time corn comprised practically their sole ration. Oats were but little relished by the pigs, and but small quantities of oilmeal were eaten. If, however, tankage is not available pigs will utilize more of the oilmeal. Tankage is the cheaper and better source of protein for hog feeding and should be more generally used.

The above results were obtained at a cost of considerably less than 5 cents a pound. With pasture supplement the cost of gains will be materially reduced and slightly more rapid gains will result. The cafeteria fed hog, however, will not utilize nearly so large a quantity of forage as will the hog receiving only a half or three-quarter ration of grain. In any season corn is pre-eminently the grain the hog prefers.

Hogpen Sanitation.

In case of hog disease all bedding and manure should be removed and burned. Loose boards or planks should also be removed and all adhering filth scraped off the floors, partitions and troughs. It is of little use applying a disinfectant on top of a coating of filth which may conceal and protect millions of disease germs. A good spray pump is best for applying the disinfectant, so as to force the liquid into every crack and cranny, and it is not wise to be economical in the use of the disinfectant. Every part of the pen should be thoroughly saturated with the solution.

Renaissance in Art Predicted After War in Europe is Over.

ISADORA DUNCAN.

Art of the centuries destroyed by the ravages of war, culture stunned by Martian blows—where will the world of the future turn to seek inspiration and direction in the great arts when Europe's titanic struggle shall have finished?

Isadora Duncan, famous classic dancer, believes a renaissance of art, greater than the awakening after the dark ages, will follow in the path of war, rising phoenix-like from the ashes of the conflict of nations. Only as the present generation may aid in encouraging and showing the way to the next will the men and women of today participate in the revival, Miss Duncan believes. It will be the children of today and the children's children on whom will rest the toil of rebuilding, the joy of recreating. Miss Duncan, striking in unexpected fields, has come forward with an original suggestion, one which she firmly believes will be developed by herself, with the aid of others, into a possibility and eventually into a worldwide movement for peace and the arts.

When the European war broke out, leaving her school of dancing, near Paris, Miss Duncan volunteered as a nurse in French hospitals, having first dispatched to this country under competent chaperonage more than a score of children who were her pupils. A few months ago she followed them to this country.

Just where she will continue her work with these little folk, to whom she is teaching the art of dancing which she discovered, is a matter she has not definitely decided. Their future is somewhat dependent upon the success of Miss Duncan's revolutionary project of colonization, which she believes will be an actuality.

On one of the verdant Greek islands in the Mediterranean Miss Duncan is intent upon establishing her colony. Here she would assemble 1,000 children from England, France, Russia, Germany, Belgium and America. She would be in absolute control, and under her personal direction would be taught the art of expressive dancing, while famous masters would go there to teach other arts.

From such a recruiting station it is the dancer's idea there will be sent forth into the world competent leaders of thought. Should there be discovered from all this colony one or, perhaps, two or three children touched by the magic wand of genius, then, Miss Duncan believes, the venture would have more than justified itself in the opinion of future centuries. Another Michelangelo, another Leonardo da Vinci, another Wagner or Beethoven or, perchance, a Shakespeare or a Goethe may rise from such a community.

HESSIAN FLY INJURY CAN BE PREVENTED.

Seasonable Planting Of Wheat is Recommended.

NICHOLAS SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The loss in this State of the 1915 wheat crop from the Hessian fly, while not generally as severe as in some years in the past, was nevertheless considerable, and should be taken as a warning of what may follow in another year. Now is the proper time to begin fighting this pest, and in order to combat it effectively something must be known of its life-history.

There are at least 2 generations of the fly each year, one in the fall and one the following spring. The spring generation may be considered as the children of the fall generation. At the present time the fly may be found in the wheat fields in what is known as the "flaxseed" stage, from which the adult will begin to emerge about the middle of August and continue to do so until sometime in October or later, depending upon the weather and latitude. The maximum emergence usually occurs the last 2 weeks in September or the first week in October, depending upon the locality. The usual recommendations given for combating the fly by discing or plowing under the stubble early in July or August are not practical in Maryland, because the majority of the stubble fields must be left on account of the grass crop they hold. The best methods that the Maryland farmer can employ are: First, seeding after the maximum period of adult emergence, and, second, crop rotations. Trapping the fly by sowing narrow strips of wheat and later plowing them under deeply and packing the land firmly by rolling will help when this is practical. All voluntary wheat should also be destroyed, or, what is perhaps better, it should not be allowed to grow.

It must be remembered, however, that if one man makes every effort possible to destroy the fly the effectiveness of his work may largely be destroyed if his neighbor does not do the same thing, since the fly may go from one field to another to lay the egg which hatches into the maggot that does the damage. Therefore the adoption of a date which will make a uniformly safe period for the sowing of wheat in each locality by all farmers is of greatest importance. From observations and reports of the State Entomologist, he has recommended the following dates in the surrounding country of the following cities and towns of the State:

Oakland	Sept. 12-19.
Hagerstown	Oct. 1-7.
Frederick	Oct. 3-10.
Westminster	Sept. 25-Oct. 5.
Rockville	Oct. 2-8.
Germantown	Oct. 2-8.
Ellicott City	Oct. 2-9.
LaPlata	Oct. 9-18.
Cockeysville	Oct. 3-10.
Bel Air	Oct. 2-9.
Elkton	Oct. 2-9.
Chestertown	Oct. 6-16.
Easton	Oct. 9-16.

Dates of sowing for adjoining sections to the above can be figured by moving forward the date of sowing 1 day for each 20 miles north and 1 day for each hundred feet in elevation from the given town.

FEEDING FOR THE MOULT.

Linseed Meal Or Sunflower Seed Hasten the Moulting.

ROY H. WAITE,

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

This is the season for moulting. It is possible to hasten the process and get a new set of feathers on the birds in short order, but several experiments have shown that where the moult has been forced the hens laid later than when they were allowed to moult naturally. Give the moulting hens plenty of feed rich in protein. The feathers contain large amounts of this product and make a heavy drain upon the bird's supply. The feathers will grow out after a fashion even though the hens are not fed a special feed, but they will not come through with the same degree of health and vitality they would have if properly cared for.

In addition to the regular rations give a small proportion of linseed meal. About 10 per cent. of the regular mash has been found to be good. This would be ten pounds of linseed meal to each ninety pounds of the mash mixture. If sunflower seeds are available they make an excellent moulting feed but it would hardly pay to buy them at present prices unless you are raising special exhibition stock.

LITTLESTOWN.

Dr. John Foreman, of Emmitsburg, a native of this place, died at his home in Emmitsburg, Monday night, at 10 o'clock from heart trouble, after a day's illness. While Dr. Foreman has not been in the best health for some time, his condition was not considered serious and he was apparently no worse than usual, until Monday morning, when he was stricken.

He continued to grow worse, death resulting Monday night, the announcement of which came as a great shock to his many friends. The deceased is a son of Mrs. Genevieve Foreman and the late Dr. E. K. Foreman, prominent residents of Littlestown, where he was born March 29, 1874.

His boyhood days were spent in this place, where he attended school. Later on he entered the University of Maryland, at Baltimore, where he pursued a course of study in dentistry, and from which institution he graduated. In 1895 he located in Emmitsburg, where he has lived for the past 20 years. At the time of his death Dr. Foreman was Postmaster at Emmitsburg, having received the appointment within the past year.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Rose Cordori, of Gettysburg, his mother, Mrs. Genevieve Foreman, who was visiting at his home when he was stricken, and the following sisters and brother, Mrs. W. S. Alleman, of Hanover; Mrs. Frank R. Stavelly, of this place, and George W. Foreman, of Hanover.

The funeral was held in Emmitsburg, Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, services in the Catholic church. Interment was made in Emmitsburg. He was aged 41 years and 7 months.

A very pleasant masquerade party was given by the pupils of the L. H. S., on Friday evening in the school building, and on Saturday evening, Miss Helen MacDowell, teacher of the intermediate school, gave her pupils a Hallowe'en masquerade party, also in the school building.

EMMITSBURG.

Dr. John McC. Foreman, our recently appointed Postmaster, died at his home on East Main St., Monday night, of neuralgia of the heart. He had been complaining for the last two weeks, yet went to the office daily up until Monday, when he was stricken. Twenty years ago he located here practicing dentistry, which he carried on successfully until April 1st, when he entered on his duties as Postmaster. Eighteen years ago he married Miss Rose Cordori, of Gettysburg. He is survived by his widow, mother, two sisters and one brother. His funeral took place on Thursday morning from St. Joseph's Catholic church.

Arthur Ferguson, aged 31 years, son of Annis and Carrie Ferguson, died very suddenly at his home, at Friends Creek, on Tuesday, and morning. He was in perfect health up until the time of his death.

Mrs. W. G. Speed and son, William, of Baltimore, are the guests of Mrs. E. L. Annan.

Miss Virginia Eyster spent the week end with her cousin, Mrs. Samuel Ott, of Taneytown.

Rev. Phillips, of Hampden, Baltimore, preached in the Presbyterian church on Sunday, while Rev. L. B. Hensley filled the Presbyterian pulpit, in Taneytown.

The Committee of the Library held a sale of cake, candy, sandwiches and coffee on Election Day. Mrs. Ida Gillelan kindly offered a room in her residence. They were much pleased as it proved quite a success.

FRIZZELLBURG.

Sabbath School here, Sunday at 2 p. m.; divine service in the chapel here, by Rev. Paul D. Yoder, of Union Bridge, at 7.30 p. m. The public is invited.

The Hallowe'en social held by the public school, last Friday night, attracted several hundred people. The school building was tastefully decorated and represented the occasion in every particular. All seemed to enjoy the sports, though the house was crowded. Receipts were about $51.00.

Mrs. James Myers and Mrs. William Sullivan went to Owings Mills, Baltimore county, last Wednesday, to see Mrs. Myers' sister, Mrs. Savilla Eckard, who is critically ill with paralysis.

Some of our young men and boys of both parties united and gave a demonstration by parading the town with drums and tin pans and a loud noise, on Wednesday night. William Arthur invited the participants to his house where refreshments were served, and expressed his gratitude for their support.

Distress in the Stomach.

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headaches and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time." Obtainable everywhere. Advertisement.

The Time to Break It.

There is an anecdote in some volume of French theatrical memoirs narrating an experience of Mlle. Clairon, the great tragic actress, with a pupil of hers, a girl of strong natural gifts for the histrionic art, but far too frequent and too exuberant in her gesticulation. So when the pupil was once to appear before the public in a recitation Mlle. Clairon bound the girl's arms to her side by a stiff thread and sent her thus upon the stage.

With the first strong feeling she had to express the pupil tried to raise her arms only to be restrained by the thread. A dozen times in the course of her recitation she was prevented from making the gestures she desired until at the very end she could stand it no longer, and in the climax of her emotion she broke her bonds and swung her hands to her head.

When she came off the stage she went humbly to where Mlle. Clairon was standing in the wings and apologized for having snapped the thread.

"But you did quite right," said the teacher "That was the time to make the gesture, not before."

Tolstoy and the Peasants.

Tolstoy, the great Russian novelist, spent his whole life in a close communion with the peasants and was persuaded that all the wisdom he might have attained concerning life, its true meaning and its true aim, was due but to this fact. He knew the peasant soul; he spoke and he wrote, especially in his religious and moral works, the language of the peasants. He always says, speaking of truth, that he means "the simple peasant truth." He considers the work of the peasant the only dignified labor, and he never ceased to investigate the simple thoughts and the clear judgments of the true workers—the peasants. At the very end of his life, when he left his home he walked with his daughter through a village and said to her: "I don't yet know our peasants. I will take a stick and wander from door to door, knocking at each house. Then, perhaps, listening to the answers they will give me, I will penetrate into their true minds."—Exchange.

Color Schemes in Rooms.

When following out a color scheme in furnishing a room a little touch of an entirely different but harmonizing color produces an excellent effect. This was brought out by a professional decorator who was discussing the furnishings of her own home.

One room which was furnished in green and had a green velveteen couch cover was especially noteworthy. "The room needs something to break the monotony," she said, "and some pillows with a bit of old rose coloring will do it."

A bedroom where the color scheme is blue and white is attractive, but requires another color to give it warmth. A straight color scheme is easy enough for any one to carry out, but it calls for considerable skill to make it distinctive, as in the practical application of a little variety is usually necessary to make the furnishings really charming.—Good Health.

Don't Be Radical.

The sooner young folks learn not to be radical the sooner they will find themselves floating serenely down the stream of life without friction. To be radical takes lots of trouble; you have to be continually ripping off veneers, scratching surfaces, engaging in original research, applying acid tests, lifting lids, making analyses, tearing off masks, demanding proof and so on indefinitely. But it is all pernicious activity. The leaders and makers and sellers of earth fix things up so that they will seem to be so and so; their leadership and their fame and their profits depend upon our being perfectly credulous and accepting things for what they seem. Why, then, ask embarrassing questions and thus incur the everlasting ill will of those who are trying to hoodwink us? It is much better to take things as they come (paying cash, of course) and be humbly grateful.—Life.

Poe and the Literary Messenger.

With his stories and his criticisms during the meager two years of his connection with the magazine Poe was certainly able to reflect that, as at no time in her previous literary history she had put Richmond on the map. But the letter he wrote to Anthon when projecting the Stylus was somewhat flamboyant. "I had joined the Messenger, as you know, then in its second year, with 700 subscribers, and the general outcry was that because a magazine had never succeeded south of the Potomac therefore a magazine never could succeed. Yet in spite of this and the wretched taste of the proprietor, which hampered and controlled me at all points, I increased the circulation in fifteen months to 5,500 subscribers, paying an annual profit of $10,000 when I left it."—Algernon Tassin in Bookman.

Gamboge.

Gamboge is one of the artist's most important yellows. It is the gum resin of a tree which bears yellow flowers and leathery, laurel-like leaves. The name of the pigment indicates the country from which it comes, for gamboge is simply a corruption of Camboja or Cambodia. In this far eastern country the tree grows wild and sheds those sticky tears which help the artist to paint the sunrise and the autumn tints of the woods. Gamboge was brought to Europe by merchants from the east toward the end of the sixteenth century.—London Answers.

The Height of It.

"They tell me," said the professor, "that Mrs. Highroller is a very sympathetic woman."

"I should say she was," said Harkaway. "Why, when her husband eloped with Mrs. Gayboy she immediately sent Mrs. Gayboy a telegram of condolence."—New York Times.

When Earthquakes Come.

That animals are sensitive to the approach of earthquakes is a fact frequently observed, and the more recent seismic troubles in various countries give numerous examples of this singular faculty which many animals possess. For instance, in Japan horses set up an unusual agitation whenever a seismic shock is near at hand. In Central America dogs and cats flee from houses and the inhabitants have become so accustomed to this that they follow the example of the animals and leave their dwellings so as to escape danger.

In Italy it has been observed that birds left their nests and flew up to a great height in the air, but this without noise before the earthquake took place. However, at the time when the earthquake shocks were produced the birds uttered cries which lasted for all the duration of the earthquake.

It is asserted that in Sicily cocks crow and dogs howl just before an earthquake.—Chicago News.

Power of the Supreme Court.

"The supreme court of the United States," writes Christian Bonnet in Case and Comment, "exercises a power which we think is unique in the world, to pass upon the constitutionality of the statutes enacted by congress. It may thus suspend the execution of the resolutions lawfully adopted by both houses."

"The French courts have the right to interpret the law. They cannot refuse to do so under pretext that the law is not clear or that it is silent or insufficient. By so doing the judge becomes guilty of a misdemeanor called denial of justice, and he is punished by a fine and deprived of all civil rights for a period varying from five to twenty years. But no court in France, not even the court of cassation, has the power to decide whether a law passed by congress is unconstitutional or not."

Two Kettles of Water.

Sir Robert Hart, speaking of marriage and death customs in the far east, told a story of a great Chinese scholar and high official who said that the foreign way of letting the young people fall in love and choose and the Chinese way of first marrying and then making acquaintance reminded him of two kettles of water. The first—the foreign—was taken at the boiling point from the fire by marriage and then grew cooler and cooler, whereas the second the Chinese—was a kettle of cold water put on the fire by wedlock and ever afterward growing warmer and warmer, "so that," said his friend, "after fifty or sixty years we are madly in love with each other."—Exchange.

Why He Was Careful.

A man who believed in pedestrianism coaxed a friend to accompany him on a little jaunt. Every time they crossed the road his friend looked first one way and then the other and refused to budge if there chanced to be a motorcar in sight.

"It's all well enough to be careful," said the pedestrian, "but you seem to have let automobiles get on your nerves."

BUSINESS INSTINCT OF GIRL

Wanted Proposal of Marriage Made On Sunday Renewed Because It Was Not Legally Binding.

"George," said the beautiful girl as she nestled close to him, "the last time you called you proposed."

"I did, sweet one."

"And I accepted you."

"You did, love."

"I presume, George," she went on, in her most fascinating manner, "that you look upon me merely as a foolish, thoughtless girl, but—but—"

"How can you think so, pet?" he interrupted.

"But," she went on in a more businesslike way, "I have something of the business instinct of the new woman in me, and—and—I shall have to ask you to repeat the proposal again tonight. The last time you called it was Sunday, and contracts made on that day, I learn, are not legally binding."—New York Times.

A Veritable Solomon.

"How is it," asked the young man, "that of all the people who come to you for advice, none ever appear to go away dissatisfied?"

"It is probably because I am a student of human nature," answered the Shelbyville sage. "When a man comes to me for advice, I proceed to find out what kind he wants, and then give it to him."

Fair, But Not Fare.

"What line are you on now?" asked the fair maid in the parlor scene, of her admirer, who chanced to be a street car conductor.

"Just at present," replied the register manipulator, as he slid toward the other end of the sofa and his arm stole around her waist, "I'm on the Belt line."

DECLINED WITHOUT THANKS.

Wiredge—Do you think she will return your love?

Feathertop—Probably. She told me she had no use for it.

Only One.

"No, I didn't come up to business yesterday," said the stout man in the corner of the carriage. "The last of my daughters was getting married so I had to give her away."

"Really? Who was the happy man?" inquired a polite fellow passenger.

"I was," said the parent emphatically.

What Mother Eve Missed.

"The thirst for strong drink," said the man with the crimson beak, "is due to the original sin."

"How do you figure that out?" asked the party of the dense part.

"I haven't time to go into details," answered he of the auburn nose, "but anyway strong drink is good for snake bites."

The Aggrieved Pedestrian.

"Confound Chugson! The stiff-necked upstart!"

"Why, he bowed politely to you when he passed just now in his motor car."

"Sure! Bowed and then put on speed before I could ask him for a lift."

The Loser.

Little Bobbie listened with deep interest to the story of the Prodigal Son. At the end of it he burst into tears.

"Why, what's the matter, Bobbie?" exclaimed his mother.

"I'm—I'm sorry for that poor ill-ca-alf," he sobbed. "He didn't do nuffin!"

Just the Thing.

"Here's a news item says the United States is to turn out a submarine which can travel 5,000 miles and cross the ocean twice on one supply of fuel. It is the G-3."

"I'd call a submarine like that the Gee Whizz!"

His Answer.

"Did you ever go to a military ball?" asked a lisping maid of an army veteran.

"No, my dear," growled the old soldier. "In those days I once had a military ball come to me, and, what do you think? It took my leg off."

A Vain Yearn.

"We must be nice to my rich uncle. He may leave us some money. He says that he yearns for a slice of home-made bread."

"That's easy," responded the young wife. "Our baker sells it."

Quite a Few.

"I have just been reading the Constitution of the United States."

"Well?"

"And I was surprised to find out how many rights a fellow really has."

WHERE REAL TROUBLE BEGAN

Argument Between Hogan, Casey and O'Brien Progressed Smoothly Until Stranger Butted In.

When a man just naturally wants trouble it is mighty easy to find an excuse for making it. According to Mike Hogan, Casey and O'Brien were having an argument of their own. It had progressed to the extent that each had forgotten what it was about originally, and they were wholly oblivious of the gathering crowd until an urbane and genteel person in a frock coat put in.

"Come, come, my man," he said, gently plucking Casey by the sleeve. "You don't want to fight. I can tell it by your looks. Your face is too benign—"

"Two be nine! Two be nine, is ut, ye scut?" bellowed Casey. "Me face is two be nine, is ut?"

And there was where the real trouble began.—Louisville Times.

Important Inquiry.

"Father," said the small boy, "couldn't George Washington tell a lie?"

"That statement has been seriously made, my son."

"Well, what did he do when his folks had unexpected company and he was told to say he didn't want any pie for dessert?"

Hopeful Future.

"To tell you the truth," said the man who is ostentatiously cheerful, "the hotter the climate is the better I like it."

"I envy you and your calmness of mind," replied the sardonic person, "and trust, for your own comfort, that your ideas of future punishment are strictly orthodox."

The Eternal Feminine.

Pretty Daughter—Papa, I'd like to give a party next week.

Papa—Why, my dear, you gave one only last week. Do you think it necessary to entertain your friends so often?

Pretty Daughter—But this is not to entertain my friends; it's to snub my enemies.

Only Difference.

"One of my daughters has tonsillitis," exclaimed Mr. Growcher, "and the other has sprained her wrist."

"That's hard luck."

"Yes. Nothing seems to work out the way it ought to. The girl who sprained her wrist sings, and the one with a sore throat plays the piano."

The Two Orders.

Business Manager—Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?

Traveler—I got two orders in one place.

B. M.—That's the stuff! What were they?

T.—One was to get out and the other was to stay out.

A Correction.

Friend (intending to compliment)—I heard somebody say the other day, Mr. Naggs, that your wife was a fine conversationalist.

Naggs—She's nothing of the sort.

Friend—No?

Naggs—She hates conversation. She's a monologist.

UNKIND.

Ella—He says that he shall never forget me.

Stella—No; you have one of those indelible faces.

WHY HE DISCARDED FUR CAP

Veteran Gamekeeper Abandoned Expensive Headgear Because It Interfered With His Hearing.

A Brockville man, who has a home in Scotland to which he returns in the winter, bought an expensive fur cap in this country to give to his gamekeeper. Two years ago last winter he took it over and presented it to the old man who was delighted with it.

The cap was very serviceable, having flaps that came down over the ears, and would wear about a lifetime. The next winter the American returned to Scotland and noticed to his surprise that the old man did not wear the fur cap.

"What is the matter with the cap I gave you last winter?" he asked.

"I haven't worn it since the accident," replied the gamekeeper.

The man from Brockville pondered. "You didn't write me concerning any accident," he said.

"No?" mused the gamekeeper. "A man offered me a glass of whisky and I didn't hear him."—Everybody's Magazine.

Difficult.

The adjutant was lecturing to the subalterns of the battalion.

"In the field," he said, "it is now incumbent upon an officer to make himself look as much like a man as possible."

Everybody laughed.

"That is, I mean," he explained, "as much like a soldier as possible."—London Mirror.

SO MEAN.

Maude—Jack says he loves to study my face.

Helen—But I thought he was a student of nature.

Flattery.

"I've tried every way I can think of to make friends with our janitor, but he is still crusty."

"I'll give you a friendly tip."

"Well?"

"I happen to know that your janitor used to be a private in the army. Call him 'major.'"

The New Way.

"Officer, why don't you arrest this man? I told you he tried to pick my pocket."

"Just a minute, sir. I have summoned our precinct expert to look him over. We can't take chances on arresting a man for picking pockets who may be merely suffering from paranoia."

Thorough.

"I hope," said the earnest citizen, "that you will be careful not to rock the boat."

"Rock the boat!" echoed the reckless person. "I'd never think of such trifling. If I want to play a trick in that line, I take an oar and stave a hole in the bottom."

Often the Case.

Smith—Is your church supported by voluntary contributions, Brother Black?

REFLECTION ON THE PEOPLE

Great English Surgeon Expresses Opinion as to the Prevalence of Fly-Borne Diseases.

Sir Frederick Treves, the late King Edward's famous surgeon, was to have presided at a meeting held at the Mansion House in London recently to inaugurate a national campaign against flies, but was prevented from doing so.

And it was flies that were responsible for his absence, if his own suspicions are correct, as he explained in this letter, which was read at the meeting:

"I am sorry I cannot attend the meeting. More than a month ago I acquired—through flies, I suspect—a complaint in Alexandria which has got gradually worse, until now I am laid up in bed. Had I been able to attend the meeting I should have liked to have laid stress upon the gravity and importance of the subject.

"In South Africa during the war there were more casualties due to flies than to bullets. In France the presence of so many unburied dead makes the fly question a very serious one. In Alexandria, owing to the vast number of cavalry horse lines near the town, the trouble of flies is becoming really distressing. It only wants a definite source of infection to be introduced for an epidemic to run rampant.

"UNSUITED TO EACH OTHER"

That Was Dickens' Confidence to a Friend Concerning His Separation From His Wife.

Dickens and his wife (Catherine Hogarth) separated by mutual agreement in 1858, the eldest son going with his mother and the other children with their father. The event called forth a good deal of ill-natured comment at the time, with many stories that could be called scandal, but it is perhaps sufficient refutation of them that his children always had the greatest affection for their father.

Dickens wrote to one of his friends that he and Mrs. Dickens had lived together unhappily for many years as "we are in all respects of character and temperament wonderfully unsuited to each other." He also wrote: "Nothing has, on many occasions, stood between us and a separation but Mrs. Dickens' sister, Georgine Hogarth." He said "the peculiarity of her character has thrown all the care of the children on someone else."

The "peculiarity" referred to seems to have been nothing more than laziness and disinclination to care for the house and children, which was provoking to her husband. But, on the other hand, Dickens had the faults of the literary temperament—Irritability, sensitiveness and intolerance of dullness. He died June 9, 1870. He was not reconciled to his wife.

Looking After Well Children.

On the basis that a physician can do more for the general health of a child if he takes the child under his care while in good physical condition rather than in sickness, New York has completed plans to keep its 800,000 school children well. A dispensary for the prevention of disease among well children is contemplated. This arrangement will be put into effect when the public schools reopen and embraces the most sweeping measures ever taken by the city authorities to get their power from the sanitary code. Back of the movement are the leading educators, social workers and philanthropists of the city. They have pledged their influence and support to the board of education and health officers. The big thing is to see that the child on enrolling for the first time in the public school, and thus coming for the first time under the care of the city, gets a thorough medical examination, and that the pupil's physical condition is made plain not only to the parents, but to the municipal authorities.

Premarital

It Was Not a Settlement of Property, but of Principle

By EDITH V. ROSS

We cannot judge of the whole by a part. To say that because some people are not fitted to govern themselves no people are fitted to govern themselves is a non sequitur—that is, the conclusion does not follow the premise. Because some women are so interested in home, husband and children that they do not care to take part in politics we are not justified in assuming that women had much better let politics alone. Differences of opinion, of fitness, are the wheels of progress. A people of one mind on all subjects becomes stagnant.

Elsie Harbeson was an example of a girl who was tempted to enter the fray for the rights of women without fitness therefor. She was a lovable creature, very feminine and not especially gifted in a scholarly way. At any rate, while in college she had received the lowest possible rating, especially in logic. She was neither an officer of her class nor on any of the committees. Indeed, Miss Harbeson was not in any way fitted for a leader in the great and absorbing struggle for the political advancement of her sex.

When Elsie met "her fate" she found a man who was drawn to her on account of the feminine mold in which she was cast rather than her aspirations. The Scotch saying that we would be blessed at being able to see ourselves as others see us pertained especially to her. To Herbert Winston, her lover, it was plain that the cause of women would lose nothing by the defection of the girl he loved. He had no preferences for or against the cause, but he was opposed to Elsie wasting her time in a matter which other women were far better fitted to push than she. But Herbert was given to diplomacy rather than to open opposition and had no mind to fly in the face of his fiancée's views. He made no comments whatever on these particular opinions. Elsie believed that a matter in which she was interested and upon which her fiancé seemed indifferent should be settled between them before marriage and, bracing herself for a struggle, opened the subject.

"Herbert," she said, "there is one matter for us to consider before our marriage, a matter on which my heart is set, upon which you seem to be indifferent, but which is liable to make trouble unless there is a distinct understanding while we are still free."

"There is nothing to settle before marriage, because I propose to give way to you in everything."

"That's very sweet of you. But you don't seem to realize as I do that there is a good deal that is practical in married life, that romance changes to companionship, which is far more enduring, and that companionship is dependent upon a husband and a wife having the same views."

"That doesn't cut any ice in our case, because, as I have told you, your views shall be my views."

There was rather too much subservience in this to suit her; but, since she could not find fault with it, she took refuge in a side issue.

"I am sorry to see that you are becoming slangy. It would have sounded better for you to say 'make any difference.' But, to take up a far more important matter, I am very much interested in the struggle for the emancipation of women that has been going on for many centuries. It is one of the elements that have entered into the civilization of Europe and America."

"How?"

"How? Why, Professor Howland mentioned it in his lecture on civilization."

"It seems to me we are getting away from the subject which you consider of so much importance. I don't think it would pay us to enter upon a discussion of what goes back several thousand years. We'd have to put off our marriage indefinitely in order to get down to modern times. How would it do for us to make a compromise on this matter of the emancipation of women—I to have no opinions concerning it, you to have whatever opinions you like?"

"And express them?"

"Certainly."

"And act upon them?"

"Of course."

"That's lovely of you. I didn't think you would be so liberal."

"I'll be more liberal yet. If you like I'll coach you on the arguments pertaining to the cause you are to advocate."

"Will you?"

"Certainly."

"When shall we begin?"

"Any time—now if you wish it."

"Very well; mention some of the main arguments."

This was very mean of him. He had no business to lead her into such a trap. Having embarked in a struggle to wrest from man the rights of woman, she now signified her reliance on man by accepting his services to instruct her as to how to go about her work.

"Man," he said, "when left to himself, without woman's influence, becomes brutal. Ergo, he has in him the nature of a brute, which can only be kept in subjection by his wife. See?"

The conclusion to this argument was somewhat startling. Elsie could not follow it all at once, so again she took refuge in a side issue.

"Please don't use that word 'See?' Why not say, 'Do you understand me?'"

"Just so. I think it will be admitted by any woman who is or has been married that keeping her husband in subjection requires a lot of time. Then there is the household to look after, and the children, and a lot of other things."

"I thought you were going to give me arguments in favor of the emancipation of women. You are proceeding to prove that a wife is too busy looking after her domestic affairs to"—She hesitated.

"To keep her husband in subjection?"

"How absurd!"

"If you don't like that argument I'll give you another. I presume you studied political economy while in college."

"Yes, indeed, and it made me a free trader."

It was now the man's turn to be startled. He had not been able to fathom the free trade-protection problem himself, and he was impressed that Elsie had succeeded in doing so.

"You know," he went on, "that the old political economy of a half a century ago has all been upset by modern big business."

"Has it?"

"Yes, but it still holds good in small circles—the family, for instance. You know that the theory of the free trader is that each community produces what it is best fitted to produce, the whole going into the general market and each community selling what it is fitted to produce and buying of the others what it doesn't itself produce."

"I see."

"I thought you didn't like that expression."

"They are not the same. You said 'See?' I say 'I see.' There is a great difference."

"My way is more phonetic."

"Go on."

"In the family, carrying out this same principle, the husband does the providing and the wife takes care of the household and the children. When the husband breaks in on his wife's prerogatives he's monkeying with the buzzsaw."

"Oh, heavens! What a horrid way of putting it!"

"Anyway he's liable to get scratched."

"Worse and worse. But complete your argument."

"Per contra, if the wife breaks in upon the husband's prerogatives there is likely to be a monkey and parrot business in the family."

Seeing an opportunity to get in a blow for her sake without inveighing against slang, she said quickly, "I don't admit that politics is the exclusive right of the husband."

"In that case but one of two courses is open to us. Either I must give up attending to the duties of a citizen to you or we must both attend to them. The latter course would be a violation of the economic principle."

This argument resulted in silence between the couple for some minutes. Elsie saw that, pretending to give her an argument for her cause, he was arguing on the other side. She believed that there was a valid answer to his statement, but it did not occur to her.

"It seems to me," she said at last, "that we each have duties of citizenship to attend to in accordance with our consciences."

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," was his rejoinder. "Since you prefer that course, so shall it be."

"But you would prefer that one or the other of us should attend to the duties of citizenship for the family."

"I believe in a division of labor or, if you like another way of putting it better, in certain things being attended to by the wife and certain other things being attended to by the husband, but if we both decide to go to the polls to register our votes I have no objection to our doing so. At any rate, we can try it. Nevertheless I see no use in trying to cross a bridge till we come to it. We are not married yet. When we are all such matters will regulate themselves. But I reiterate seriously that if there is anything objectionable or useless in our both going to the polls to vote I will defer to you."

"What do you mean by useless?"

"Suppose we vote on different sides. We might in that case pair."

"Pair? What do you mean by pair?"

"We might do what we're going to do in marrying. If we intend to vote on different sides and neither of us votes at all the result is the same as if we voted. I, a man, and you, a woman, marry. There's one less bachelor and one less spinster. In other words, we are paired."

"I do think," she said, looking up at him with a pair of soft brown eyes, "that you use the funniest arguments I ever heard."

"They will be plenty good enough when we are married."

"How is that?"

"There are only two arguments which count for much between man and woman. Her best argument is tears; his is kisses."

With that he drew her toward him and kissed her.

There is no record as to Mrs. Winston's services in the cause of the amelioration of the condition of women. Winston is not reliable in his testimony, and what he says should be taken with a grain of salt. He declares that whenever there is an election he and his wife are on opposite sides and the result is a pair.

However, this may be, the Winstons are a very happy couple, and a fine crop of children are growing up about them. Mr. Winston's statement that it is better not to try to cross a bridge before reaching it has turned out to be true. At any rate, the family differences are settled amicably from day to day.

SKIM MILK AS FOOD

ECONOMICAL SOURCE OF NOURISHMENT MANY OVERLOOK.

Butterfat the Only Nutrient in Whole Milk That is Lacking in Skim Milk—Extremely Valuable in Cooking.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The possibilities of skim milk as a human food have been rather neglected, according to specialists in the United States department of agriculture. Butterfat is the only nutrient in whole milk that is lacking in skim milk; practically all of the mineral substances, carbohydrates and protein remain in the skim milk.

Because of the large proportion of the protein in it, skim milk, like whole milk, may be classed with such foods as eggs, meat, fish, poultry and cheese. Protein not only serves as fuel for the body—a service performed also by fats, sugars and starches—but also supplies nitrogenous tissue-building material. Two and a half quarts of skim milk contain almost as much protein and yield about as much energy as a pound of round of beef. A quart of skim milk contains more than twice as much nourishment as a quart of oysters which cost several times more. An economical and profitable combination is an oyster stew made with skim milk.

In cooking there is indeed little or no difference in taste between skimmed and unskimmed milk. In the making of cereal mash, for instance, the use of skim milk in place of water adds greatly to the nutritious value, particularly by raising the amount of tissue-forming materials. In making milk soups, chowders, custards and cakes, also, it can be profitably used. In chowders the lack of fat is made up by the use of salt pork. The following recipe for corn chowder calls for no ingredients that are difficult to secure and will be found attractive and nourishing.

One can of corn or one pint of fresh corn, grated, four cupfuls potatoes, cut into small pieces, two ounces salt pork, one small onion, chopped, four cupfuls skim milk, one tablespoonful salt, four ounces crackers.

Cut the pork into small pieces and fry it with the onion until both are a delicate brown. Add the potatoes and corn; cover with water, and cook until the vegetables are soft. Add the milk and salt, and reheat. It is well to allow the crackers to soak in the milk while the potatoes and corn are being cooked. Some people cook the cobs from which the corn has been removed, in water, and later use this water for cooking the potatoes and corn.

In recommending skim milk as food, the fact should always be kept in mind that it has gone through one more process in the course of its preparation for family use than whole milk has—that of separation or skimming. This, in the case of a food material so liable to become contaminated and to be the carrier of disease, is a very important matter, and the consumer should take even more pains than in buying whole milk, to know that it has been carefully handled, particularly if it is to be used raw.

The provisions of the food and drug act and common honesty require that skim milk should be sold for what it is, and never for whole milk. It should be plainly labeled as skim milk. To sell it as whole milk would not only be a violation of the federal food and drug act, in cases where that law applies, but also a violation of the state law in any state where it might be sold.

Blackberry Cordial.

Mash the blackberries and cook slowly without water for half an hour. Strain and measure the juice. To each quart add half a pint of sugar, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of ground cloves, and half a nutmeg, grated. Boil half an hour, cool and add a gill of brandy. Bottle and keep in a cool place. This is excellent for elderly people or for patients with a tendency to bowel trouble.

One-Egg Cake.

Cream one-quarter cupful of butter, add gradually half a cupful of sugar, beating thoroughly. Add one egg, well beaten, one and a half cupfuls flour, two and a half teaspoonfuls baking powder, alternately with half a cupful of milk. Beat until well mixed only. Bake in a buttered floured shallow pan, then ice.

A Dainty Hint.

The odor of soap that often clings to clothes is not at all desirable. A lump of orris root put in the rinsing water for fine pieces such as handkerchiefs, lingerie and blouses will give a delicate violet perfume more permanent than that of the ordinary sachet.

Peaches and Rice.

Arrange a mound of boiled rice in the middle of a dish. Have ready on the ice some sliced, sweetened peaches. Put the peaches around the rice and pour their juice, formed with sugar, over the mound and rice.

When Hanging Curtains.

Curtains are easily run on brass rods if a thimble is first placed on the end of the rod.

Peaches and Oranges.

For a tempting dessert, slice together peaches and oranges. Sweeten slightly and serve very cold.

HOW TO MAKE DRIED APPLES

Simple Method Which Will Insure Success if Directions Are Closely Followed.

Peel, core and slice the apples. Place them on platters, wooden trays, or any other convenient receptacle and place them in the sunshine. Take them in at night and during rains; it is impossible to secure good dried fruit unless they are protected from moisture. Protect them from flies and other insects with netting, and place them out of the dust as far as possible. Continue the drying until the fruit has lost more than half its weight; if necessary, it may be placed in the oven for two or three hours at the end. Tie the dried fruit in paper sacks, using a double thickness if thin skin sacks are used, and suspend them from the ceiling of the dryest room available.

When ready to use the dried fruit, wash it well, soak it for six hours or longer, and throw away the liquid drained off. Then cook the fruit for several hours at a temperature slightly below the boiling point.—Mothers' Magazine.

USE PAPER JARS FOR JELLY

Have Advantage of Being More Easily Packed Without Danger of Breaking.

The paper family, already so helpful to the housewife, has a new member included in its circle—the paper jelly glass. It is of paraffin paper, like the drinking cup, and comes in several sizes, from two ounces to 16 ounces. The eight-ounce size costs about 15 cents a dozen. The advantage of the paper cup is that it can be packed more easily without danger of breaking and with less weight than the heavy glass jars. Again, there are many times when we want to give a glass of jelly to a friend and when we do not like to ask for the return of the glass. Yet the cost of many glasses is quite an item as contrasted with the cost of the paper tumbler. Also we often want to take a glass of jelly to a picnic and then we do not want the weight and bother of a heavy container. Here is where the paper cup has a distinct and permanent place with the housewife.

Chocolate Fig Cream.

Scald two cupfuls of rich milk, add two squares of chocolate that have been melted over hot water, two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and a tiny pinch of ground cinnamon. Cook until well thickened and remove from the fire, and when cold fold in the stiffly beaten white of one egg and half a pint of cream that has been beaten solid with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Flavor with vanilla and turn into a two-quart freezer. Turn the crank until a slight resistance is felt, then add one large cupful of finely-chopped figs. Continue freezing until smooth and serve in tall crystal glasses, each portion topped with a tablespoonful of sweetened whipped cream.

Corn Dumplings.

Mix the contents of one pint can of fresh, grated corn with one-half pint of milk, six tablespoonfuls butter, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoonful pepper, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half pint flour or enough to make a dough that is easily handled, one teaspoonful of baking powder. If corn is juicy, drain, tear off some pieces of the dough the size of a butternut and roll between the palms of hands, drop into smoking hot fat and cook until nicely browned. Serve with tomato or brown sauce.

Rock Cakes.

Rub three cupfuls of sifted flour with three ounces of butter. Add a quarter of a cupful of granulated sugar, three ounces of currants, an ounce of candied peel, cut in shreds, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a beaten egg, some grated nutmeg and milk, enough to make a stiff dough. Put on a greased tin in rough little piles, 12 or 15 of them. Bake for 25 minutes.

Creamed Codfish.

Soak the fish three hours; boil in fresh water until tender; pick out all the bones; take one pint of milk and bring to the boiling point; thicken with a tablespoonful of cornstarch, dissolved in a little water, add a spoonful of butter, then stir in the fish, a good, large cupful or a little more; add two well-beaten eggs, let them cook and serve very hot.

Date Pudding.

One cupful sour cream, one teaspoonful soda, one cupful sirup, one small spoonful butter, one pound dates, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful nutmeg, salt, enough whole wheat flour to form batter. Stone the dates and cut into halves. Mix ingredients with flour enough to make stiff batter and pour into deep greased mold and steam two and a half hours. Serve cold with cream and sugar.—Mothers' Magazine.

Thousand Isle Salad Dressing.

One-half cupful olive oil, juice of half an orange, one-fourth teaspoonful each salt and mustard, juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful grated onion, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper, one teaspoonful finely chopped parsley. Put all ingredients in a mason jar and shake well.

An Easy Way to Dust.

For removing dust from furniture a paint brush is much more satisfactory than a dust rag. No crevice is too small or deep for it to reach.

IMPROVE ON NATURE

Breeders Have Done Wonders With "Homing" Pigeons.

For Many Years Efforts to Develop the Intellect of the Birds Have Been Made With a Success That is Remarkable.

Breeders of "homers" are altering the shape of the skull of this variety of pigeon with a view to improving the mentality of the bird.

The homing pigeon hitherto has had a short, flat skull, sloping away behind. Now, as a result of selective breeding, it is acquiring an elongated cranium with a rounded dome. The improvement of its intelligence accomplished by this means is declared to be surprising. Its brain is bigger and has more room for thoughts.

The "homer" is the only bird that is bred by man for the improvement of its mind. Other pigeons are propagated for color, plumage and incidental "points." Not so the homing variety. What is chiefly required of it is intelligence and memory—though, in addition, it must possess strength, endurance and swiftness of flight. It must have a big chest, with strong flight-muscles; also broad tail feathers, and long, broad wings. Yet another essential qualification is keen eyesight.

Only a few years ago a homing flight of 500 miles in a day was thought phenomenal; today flights of 600 or even 800 miles in 24 hours are not very uncommon. In one recent instance a "homer" accomplished a flight of 1,300 miles—some days being required, however, to cover the distance. It should be understood that the pigeon flies only in the daytime, resting at night. But another important point to consider is that the bird, in flying, usually travels a far greater distance than the shortest route between the place of departure and its destination. It does much circling and makes wide detours, scanning the country over which it passes and looking for familiar landmarks to guide it.

This is where memory—as well as eyesight—comes in. The bird does not find its home by "instinct," but by its remembrance of landmarks—rivers, towns and the general configuration of the terrain.

The common pigeon has the impulse to fly home, but it cannot find its way thither from any great distance because it lacks the requisite intelligence and memory power. In the "homer" this impulse has been greatly strengthened through breeding—so much so, indeed, that it will leave nest and young to get back to the place where it belongs.

A homing pigeon cannot be sent from its home to another place. It will fly home, and in no other direction. At first it is trained for short distances, in the near neighborhood of its home. Then it is liberated at greater and increasing distances—25 miles away, 50 miles away, 100 miles away, and so on. But, for these performances, it is always shipped from home in the same direction. On a new route it would be lost.

The carrier pigeon is misnamed; it is the "homer" that carries messages. The latter has been derived through the interbreeding of several different varieties, chief among which are the carrier, the dragon, the owl pigeon, and the swift smerle.

The processes of evolution as modified by human control have had no more remarkable illustration than that afforded by the domesticated pigeons, all the varieties of which—fantails, pouters, tumblers and the rest—are descended from one original kind of bird, the "blue rock." But the "homer" is the only pigeon in which the special aim of breeders has been to develop the intellect.

Lesson VII.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 14, 1915.

Text of the Lesson, Dan. i, 8-20—Memory Verse, 15—Golden Text, 1 Cor. xvi, 13—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

I am very glad to have the privilege of writing a lesson on Daniel, even though it be what is called a temperance lesson, for we shall find much more in it than appears on the surface. He is mentioned in Ezek. xiv, 14, 20, with Noah and Job as noted for their righteousness. He is mentioned by the Lord Jesus in Matt. xxiv, 15, in connection with the great tribulation at the end of this age immediately preceding the return of the Lord in His glory, to which Daniel also refers in chapters ix, 27; xii, 1. We recently saw a little captive maid glorifying the God of Israel under very trying circumstances, and in this lesson we see four captive young men glorifying the God of Israel under difficulties. The Lord permitted this oppression and captivity because of the sin of Judah and gave Jehoiakim and some of his people and some of the vessels of the house of God into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and among the captives were these four young men of royal blood, who were chosen to stand in the king's palace and to be taught the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans that they might stand before the king (verses 3-5).

They were to have a three years' course of preparation for their calling, and as to their food they were nourished from the king's table daily the same meat and wine which he ate and drank. At least that was the provision made for them. It was humiliating for an Israelite to be a captive. It was humiliating to have their beautiful Jewish names, each of which had in them a suggestion of the true God of Jehovah, changed to names suggestive of idols (verses 6, 7). But this they could bear without any sin on their part. Our Lord Jesus Christ Himself was taken prisoner, bound and led by His captors as they pleased. They also called Him a devil and Beelzebub and said that He was beside Himself. So in these two particulars they were foreshadowing the sufferings of Christ.

When we suffer in these ways we have fellowship with Him in His sufferings. When it came to eating and drinking that which had been offered to idols Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself, and no doubt he had prayed to his God about this. He asked permission of the prince of the eunuchs that he and his friends might be excused from receiving the food from the king's table and be given very plain fare, which had not passed that way, asking that they might be proved for ten days. The same God who permitted them thus far to suffer for His sake now gave them favor in the sight of this man, and he consented to prove them. At the end of ten days they were fairer and fatter in flesh than those who did eat the portion of the king's meat, so it was kept from them, and they were given the plain fare, which had not been offered to idols. See Deut. xxxii, 27, 28. If this is a temperance lesson the same principle applies to food as to drink.

To my mind it is a lesson on the necessity of keeping one's self wholly for God in every particular and of being willing to submit cheerfully to difficult circumstances for His sake. In chapter x, 2, 3, Daniel says that for three weeks he did without pleasant bread or flesh or wine, while he mourned and waited upon God for a special purpose, implying that he did not always see the necessity of denying himself food that could have the blessing of God. As to the sin of intemperance or self-indulgence in any matter, the teaching of scripture is very plain, and the filthiness and beastliness of strong drink could scarcely be more vividly described or condemned than in Isa. v, 11, 12, 22, 23; xxviii, 7, 8. The only remedy is in Christ Jesus, who alone can forgive sin and give the sinner a new nature and such a purpose to keep one's self wholly for Him as Daniel had.

Though he stood before the earthly king in a place of honor, he stood more consciously before the King of kings, for whose sake he in his old age went to the lion's den rather than dishonor him by any fear of man, for whose sake his three friends went to the fiery furnace rather than bow down to any image which man might set up. No doubt Daniel and his friends were prayerfully diligent in their Chaldean studies, but God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom, and He gave Daniel understanding in all visions and dreams, so that these young men were ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers in the whole realm (verses 17, 20). On three different occasions related in this book, when all the wisdom of Babylon's wise men failed, Daniel did not fail once because his God never failed him. Any believer who is willing to pay the price by self-denial and indifference to what others say or think of you and a purpose of heart to see no one but Jesus only and covet only His approval may know the power of God as others cannot. The whole cost of salvation fell upon Jesus Christ, and we receive freely what He so fully provided and paid for. But to be His faithful witnesses we must have the devotion, self-denial and continuance of Daniel.

MUST KILL PRAIRIE DOGS

Texas Land Owners Are Compelled by Law to Destroy the Pests.

Austin, Tex.—Prairie dogs are declared to be a public nuisance, according to an act passed at the special session of the Thirty-fourth legislature and which act is now effective. The act also provides for their extermination, but no bounty is given by the state for eliminating the so-called pests; owners of land on which prairie dogs exist are required under the law to kill them and an allowance of two years is given to such owners to rid their lands of the nuisance.

It is also made the duty of the county commissioners of any county in which prairie dogs exist to investigate and determine whether owners of lands in their respective commissioners' precincts have complied with the provisions of the law.

In the event the owner of land on which prairie dogs exist fails to destroy such pests the act empowers the sheriff of the county involved to proceed and destroy the nuisance.

For his service the sheriff is allowed five dollars a day for actual service, and this sum is to be paid by the county commissioners, but the amount so paid shall be assessed against the owner of land and the account or claim entered as a lien against the land in case of failure to pay the amount due the county.

CAUSES RUSH FOR TIMBER

Great Demand for Wood Product to Make Guncotton for Use in War.

Kane, Pa.—The enormous demand for acetate of lime, used in the manufacture of guncotton, has resulted in the greatest rush in history for Pennsylvania timber lands. Chemical manufacturers are buying all available timber tracts throughout this section, but have met with much competition from the New York and Pennsylvania companies, which has paper mills at Lock Haven and Johnsonburg, the mill at the latter place being the largest in the United States. This company has just closed a deal for 5,000 acres of timber lands near Bradford, over the McKean county line.

During the last two months the paper company has purchased thousands of acres of timber land throughout the country, the most important being located in the states of Washington and Maine.

CHARGED WITH NEGLIGENCE

The lack of ammunition, which the Russians say was the cause of their repeated defeats, has been put up to General Soukhomlinoff, who, until his removal, was the Russian war minister. For his alleged neglect of duty in permitting the Russian forces to run short of ammunition, he is to be tried by a superior court appointed by the czar himself. General Nicolas Petroff has been appointed president of the court.

NEGRO'S FEET HIS FORTUNE

Heavy-Pedaled Pickaninny Considered Valuable Adjunct in Art of Constructing Modern Highways.

Amite City, La.—"Soda," Amite City's heavy-pedaled pickaninny, has left the side show circuit where his big feet were marveled at by the crowds, and is now engaged in interstate highway laying. He has many contracts in view.

"Soda," is considered one of the most valuable adjuncts to the art of constructing modern highways. It is said that owing to the boy's large feet he demands the same salary as would be paid for a steam roller.

A shoe factory has made him a pair of No. 19 shoes, with thick soles, and "Soda" is employed in packing dirt and gravel. He works by merely walking. The boy has a fortune ahead of him. His feet are growing all the time.

Oh! The Lucky Fellow.

Denver.—That snakes swallow bright objects has been demonstrated by Harry Godfrey when he killed a large snake and on skinning the reptile noticed a bulging spot on its body. He investigated further and found it to be a small gold bracelet with a stone setting and the letters "F. M. A. to E. G. R., Des Moines, Iowa, June 1, 1902," engraved on it.

BORDER MAN HUNT

Correspondent Describes Ride With Texas Rangers.

Pursuit of Mexican Bandits Who Raided American Ranch Conducted in Businesslike Manner—"Got Five," Is Quiet Report.

By JOHN W. ROBERTS.

(International News Service.)
Brownsville, Tex.—It takes more qualifications to be a Texas ranger than to be a soldier in the United States army. For one thing, you must be able to shoot 90 per cent average—very few soldiers can do that. And then, you have to be more than five feet ten inches tall. You must know how to ride like a cowpuncher and be skillful in handling the lariat. You must be a man of unqualified nerve, and be ready at all times to face danger without a flinch.

It was my good fortune to be one of a party of ten rangers who left Brownsville early one evening in pursuit of some Mexican bandits who had recently raided an American ranch in the vicinity.

I rode beside a tall, quiet, handsome boy of about twenty-two years of age. His face was as tanned as a Mexican's, but his steel-blue eyes betrayed his Anglo-Saxon nationality.

We had entered that part of the country which is covered with a network of mesquite brush, ten feet in height, as thick as any African jungle ever could be.

I started to whistle an old familiar tune.

"Shut up," said my partner quietly.

We came to a small clearing and halted. The waters of the Rio Grande were dotted with reflections of the stars in the bright sky. Across the river was Mexico, and her vast, silent prairies gleamed like silver in the starlight. One of the rangers dismounted and examined the ground closely.

"They have gone that way," he pointed northward.

"How does he know that it is the men we are after?" I asked of my companion.

"By the footprints," he replied.

"Greasers never take the trouble to shoe their horses. An American's horse is always shod—that's the difference, and the hoof prints point northward."

Here we left the road and took up a trail through the chaparral, single file. The thud, thud of our horses' hoofs in the soft earth, and the occasional squeak of a saddle were the only sounds which broke the stillness of the night.

Suddenly, without warning, the crash of a body dashing through the dry mesquite to our left was heard. In almost the same instant ten saddles were emptied and ten big, strapping Texans had dashed into the brush like so many rabbits. The horses, but for turning curious eyes toward the brush in which their masters had disappeared, remained absolutely still.

A minute later, however, the ten men returned and remounted.

"Coyote," explained my partner, with a smile. "The damn critters are always fooling us, because they sound just like a greaser trying to get away."

We had ridden but a mile farther along this trail, when the shrill whinny of a pony broke through the stillness. It halted our small band like magic. Although no one said a word, each man knew what the other thought, and they acted together. Each ranger dismounted and took his rifle from the scabbard.

"It's them, I guess," my partner informed me. "You had better stay with the horses and keep your head under cover in case there is any shooting. We will be back in a little while."

Although every one of the ten rangers who took into the brush were big fellows, each wearing heavy boots, yet, when they had gone but ten paces from where I stood I could not hear a sound—not even the breaking of a dry twig.

Five minutes later the sound of a shot cracked through the air. I was in a state of feverish excitement. Never before had I been in a man hunt, and this one, staged in a still night on the prairies bordering the waters of the Rio Grande, made me doubt, even then, that it was taking place on American soil. The shot was followed by another one, then a third, then many, all at once, and in a few seconds more the air rang with the cracks of rifles. I heard an oath screamed in Spanish; a sharp-voiced command to halt, in English. Heard the plink of a body jumping into the Rio Grande, then another and another one. Someone was crashing madly through the mesquite brush to my right, then all was silence again. A few minutes later, the ten rangers returned unhurt. While I was trembling in my excitement, the men quietly put their guns back into their scabbards, mounted their horses, turned around, and started back to Brownsville again. Not a word was spoken and each man's face was as immobile as though nothing had happened.

"Did—did—did you get any of them?" I whispered to my partner.

"Five," he said quietly, without looking up.

Ten minutes passed before I nerved myself to ask the second question.

"What did you do with them?" The question seemed to amuse him.

"Greasers are like dogs," he answered. "Let them rot where they die."

For the Children

Baby Zebra and Mother in Central Park (New York) Zoo.

New York city is the proud possessor of two zoological gardens, one in Central park and the other in Bronx park. The latter is the larger and is said to be one of the finest institutions of its kind in the world. Central park zoo is much smaller, but still it contains a number of specimens of rare animals. In one respect Central park zoo leads. It now has a baby zebra, said to be the first of its species born in captivity in this country. The picture shows the little fellow being fondled by his mother. The youngster is a finely marked specimen of his race and is as frisky as a young colt. William Snyder, head keeper of the zoo, will soon have the little fellow christened with appropriate ceremonies.

The Queen Penguins.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, who led the British antarctic expedition which so nearly reached the south pole, tells amusing anecdotes of the penguins, that, when standing upright, look from a distance like a lot of dignified gentlemen in black coats and white waistcoats, and many a time shipwrecked castaways in the southern hemisphere, approaching some desolate shore, have imagined the distant penguins sitting upright upon a rocky shore to be human beings. Sir Ernest tells that one day a big penguin strolled into camp and saw one of the shaggy dogs. Mr. Penguin stared and stared and came closer to see what manner of beast this might be, until the dog snapped playfully at the bird's funny short legs. Next day the penguin came again to camp with a personally conducted party of penguins, apparently to show them the dog. They came often after this, and the explorers amused themselves by occasionally giving them a concert with the phonograph, to whose music the birds bobbed around in a circle with much apparent pleasure. About fifteen species are known. The king penguins are the largest. They exist in colonies of many thousands.—Farm Journal.

A Paste Pot Party.

Did you ever give a paste pot party? You'll need some old magazines and a pair of shears, as well as a blank book in which to paste pictures. You can make the blank book yourself from pieces of plain, smooth paper, and, in fact, each little guest might enjoy making such a book for herself or himself. Sick children always like to look at scrap books, and so you might send the ones you make at the party to a hospital after you have finished with them.

A set of cut out paper dolls should be given each child to carry home as a souvenir of the occasion.

Origin of a Word.

The origin of "windfall" in the sense of good luck dates back to the time of William the Conqueror. It was then a criminal offense to cut timber in the forests. Only such could be gathered as the wind had blown down; hence a heavy windstorm was hailed by the peasants as so much good luck, and from this we get the term.

Scarecrow and Snow Man.

The scarecrow was chasing the snow man. No, it wasn't a dream at all. For I saw them as plain as daylight. From the top of our garden wall.

There were miles and miles between them. Or months, perhaps I should say. For the snow man passed in December and the scarecrow passed in May.

The chase was very exciting. As on and on they whirled. But they came no nearer together. For I followed them round the world.

But the winds blew hard on the scarecrow. And he found no place to hide: They tore him to rags and tatters and scattered him far and wide.

And the sun beat down on the snow man. In his garments of dingy white; I saw him grow smaller and smaller till he vanished quite out of sight.

But each year the chase is repeated; You can see it as well as I. If you live near my father's garden And watch while they're passing by. —St. Nicholas.

TANEYTOWN LOCAL COLUMN

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Roland Stump and wife, of Baltimore, were week end guests of Harry I. Reindollar and wife.

Let everybody be a booster for the entertainment course. See announcement of the attractions on first page.

S. White Plank, butcher, of Middleburg, has commenced to run his wagon to Taneytown, his former place of business.

Miss Savilla Humbert returned to Chicago, on Wednesday, after spending some time with her brother, David, and friends.

Mrs. Guy Ourand, of Washington, returned home on Wednesday, after spending several weeks with her mother, Mrs. Mary Crapster.

Another favorable week for outdoor work, has given the farmers a good chance to catch up, and they are now in pretty good shape.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Witmer and two sons, David and Joseph Witmer and wife, of Mount Joy, Pa., visited at the home of Jesse Myers on Saturday and Sunday.

The Hotel Columbus, of McSherrystown, to which Wm. L. Arnold removed, from Taneytown, has been sold to John Six, of Westminster, who will soon take charge.

Taneytown district feels quite on the map, with two candidates elected; and both Martin D. Hess and Charles B. Kephart can feel justly proud of the fine vote they received at home.

Mrs. Carrie Boring and son, Maurice, and Miss Ray Armacost, of Hampstead, and Mrs. Henry M. Griffiee and Arthur H. Griffiee, of Sykesville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Kelley on Sunday.

Automobiles by the hundreds use the Taneytown-Westminster state road, on Sundays. On fine days, there is a continuous stream going both ways, mixed with motorcycles and teams, requiring great care to avoid accidents.

Piney Creek Presbyterian church will be rededicated, on Sunday morning, with special services; and in the afternoon a good fellowship service will be participated in by neighborhood ministers, and by Rev. L. B. Hensley, of Emmitsburg.

The Committee on sewing factory reported, on Wednesday night, that the prospects for the factory were at present unfavorable; but another prospect, that of a shirt factory, was taken up, and the Committee continued to conduct investigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Althoff announce the marriages of their daughters, Miss Edith M. Althoff to Mr. Charles W. Randall, of Littlestown, Pa., and Miss Mary M. Althoff to Mr. James E. Walsh, of Westminster, Md., which will take place in the early winter.

The Hallowe'en pranks, as usual, overstepped proper bounds, and this is the one reason why good citizens should not indulge in such customs. The removal of crossings, steps, and actual injury to property, is not innocent fun justified by the occasion, but is actual criminality and should be punished as such.

A bowling contest was held in Taneytown, Wednesday night, between Westminster and local teams, the former winning by 52 pins. Individual scores were: Westminster, Harsh 482, Bowers 438, Fry 465, Smith 491, Oursler 468; Total 2344. Taneytown, Sell 429, Phillips 461, Cingan 431, Crabbs 476, Shoemaker 495; Total 2292.

Hezekiah D. Hawk was given a surprise birthday party, last Saturday evening, by his near relatives, which was greatly enjoyed by all, at his home on Middle St. Those present were Asbury Fuss, wife and children; William Ohler, wife and son; Oliver Fogle, wife and children; and Alva Hysler. Refreshments were served.

A mix-up of teams and automobiles occurred in front of the Record office, last Saturday morning, resulting in a broken wheel and bent axle on Halbert Poole's runabout. Mr. Poole turned to the left to avoid a team, when a heavy auto occupied by members of W. M. College foot ball team ran into him. Considering the congestion at the spot, it was very fortunate that no greater damage resulted.

Both Republican and Democratic local workers did their full duty, on Tuesday. While the vote in the two precincts was 47 short of the registered vote, about half of these were sick or disabled and away from home, and a portion of the remainder in the "doubtful" class, while a few voters worked a little too long and came to the polls too late. Practically every voter in the district was individually accounted for.

Beware of Cheap Substitutes.

In these days of keen competition it is important that the public should see that they get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and not take substitutes sold for the sake of extra profit. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has stood the test and been approved for more than forty years. Obtainable everywhere.

Hallowe'en Entertainment.

(For the Record.) A very interesting program was rendered by the pupils of Washington school, on Friday evening, Oct. 29. The school-room was tastefully decorated with hallowe'en paper, black cats, witches, drawings, flowers, pumpkins, etc. The neat sum of $8.00 was obtained by the witch telling fortunes, together with the collection, and changing games, which is to pay the debt on the organ recently purchased for the school. After the games, program, etc., were over, refreshments were served, consisting of pumpkin pie, doughnuts, apples and cocoa. A very large crowd was present and all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The program rendered was as follows: Miss Kelly having charge of the program: Song, "Old Mother Goose," by the School. Recitation, "Wise Old Owl," Florence Hahn. Recitation, "Old Mother Goose," Irvin Stambaugh. Recitation, "The Ride of the Pumpkins," Ruth Sauerwein. Dialogue, "The Spankweed," Three Girls. A Pine Whipping Cough Remedy.

Mothers, Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey is just the remedy for your children's cold ailments. The fact is that pine is a quick enemy of cold conditions. Its qualities loosen the mucous in the throat, soothe the lungs and open up the air passages. The combination of honey, soothing and pleasant, with the loosening pine quality makes this an ideal cough remedy for children. Each passing year brings for it, new friends. A family of growing children cannot afford to be without it. 25c a bottle. Advertisement.

Maryland Week in Baltimore.

Elaborate preparations are being made by Prof. T. B. Symons of the Maryland Agricultural College for "Maryland Week" which will be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, Nov. 16, to 20. This year there will be many more features of interest and instruction for the farmer, horticulturist and dairyman than in the previous exhibitions, while programs replete with surprises have been arranged for every day of the week.

The Club Exhibit Contest is one of the big features of the show. Various local organizations in different parts of the State go to Baltimore and make an exhibit in competition with each other. Numerous premiums and special prizes are offered in this contest.

A special dairy exhibit consisting of eight cows, will be installed in the Armory in order to demonstrate sanitary methods of milking, by the use of milking machines. Other interesting features for the dairyman will be the various methods of testing milk.

For those interested in bee keeping and raising honey, a most wonderful exhibit is promised. Live bees will be handled with bare hands and the best methods of treating bees will be discussed upon by experts.

The United States Government will lend its assistance in many direct and indirect way to help the show to be instructive to all visitors. The Postmaster at Baltimore has promised a large booth exhibit showing the various ways Parcel Post can be utilized to the profit of the farmer and country dweller, showing in detail how packages of perishable and staple products may be packed to carry well.

Dr. F. W. Beasley, State Forester, will make an extensive exhibit showing fire prevention in forests, how to conserve the forests and replenish them; how to treat the faro wood-rot so as to have all the wood needed for the present generation and still leave a good supply for those to come.

To the lovers of flowers this year's exhibition will especially appeal, as the weather has contributed to the art of the florist and the specimens to be shown will compare most favorably with the big chrysanthemum show at Madison Square Garden, New York.

The formal opening will take place, Tuesday evening, Nov. 16, at which Hon. Robert Crain, of Baltimore, will preside. Mayor Preston of Baltimore, Governor Goldsborough and probably, the Governor-elect will be present to make addresses. On Wednesday, the Horticultural Societies will meet with a splendid special program, supplemented by liberal distribution of fine fruits, including a gift of a big apple to each visitor. Thursday will be Crop Improvement Day, at which time the various new methods of handling soil and fertilizers will be discussed by experts. Experiences of prominent farmers will also be exchanged. Friday will be a Dairyman's Day. Saturday, Bee-keeper's Day. On Thursday night, there will be a special session devoted to Hogs, at which time there will be a wide discussion regarding the prevention and treatment of diseases of hogs, especially the hog cholera which is so prevalent.

Taking into consideration the magnificent exhibits promised, the elaborateness of the program, together with the splendid premiums offered, this year's meet will no doubt far eclipse all previous efforts.

Anyone interested in any of the various topics under discussion at these shows cannot afford, from a purely business standpoint to miss attendance, to say nothing of the keen enjoyment of viewing some of Nature's most beautiful products.

The Nation's Backbone.

Once again the American farmer has proved himself the backbone of the nation, for while business leaders had been afraid to take steps toward opening wide the channels of commerce, the farmer seeded his lands and is now harvesting the greatest bread crop ever known. Through the activities of American farmers, more than 400,000,000 bushels of wheat will be sent to foreign countries this season. This is based on the assumption that we shall need about 535,000,000 bushels for domestic consumption and about 80,000,000 bushels reserved for seeding. Although these figures are almost too large for comprehension, they go to show what a mighty factor the American farmer is in the world today.

Kites Aid Germans.

Most people are under the impression that the only aerial machines being used today by the armies that are at war are aeroplanes and airships. As a matter of fact, ordinary balloons and kites are much to the fore, and it is recognized by all the great powers that their uses are invaluable. During the last few years the Germans have recognized the advantages gained by the use of man-lifting kites, and a certain number of their soldiers have been trained to fly them both by day and by night. It is said that the passenger of a German war kite is supplied with a camera capable of taking photographs under almost any conditions.

Action Misunderstood.

An English "Tommy," while stationed in a Flemish village, wanted to buy a toothbrush. Being unable to speak either French or Flemish he could not manage to make the people understand what he wanted. After several unsuccessful attempts, he hit on a brilliant idea and, entering a little shop, he proceeded to imitate the action of brushing his teeth.

At first the old dame shook her head, then her face suddenly lit up with a smile. Placing a ladder against the wall, she searched several minutes in some cardboard boxes on a top shelf. She at last found what she wanted and triumphantly handed him, not a toothbrush, but a jew's-harp!

Pickled Walnuts.

Wipe 100 walnuts, prick with a large needle and put them in a jar, sprinkling as you lay them in with the following spices, mixed: Cloves, allspice, nutmeg, whole pepper and sliced ginger, of each an ounce; one-half pint mustard seed, four cloves of garlic and a stick of horse radish. Then add two tablespoonfuls of salt and sufficient boiling vinegar to cover the whole. Cover the jar and tie closely.—Mother's Magazine.

Mint Leaves in Plum Jelly.

This year when you are making plum jelly, try this plan: Get some fresh mint, and while the jelly is cooking, add some of the mint leaves to it. Pour the jelly into the glasses so that a few leaves are in each. The mint gives a flavor and point to the jelly that makes it especially delicious with roast lamb or other meat.

Potato Salad.

Slice cold potatoes, a small onion and one cold hard-boiled egg into a dish and sprinkle a little pepper and salt over this. Take three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one of butter, one-quarter teaspoonful of mustard and heat it over boiling water. Let it get cold and pour over potatoes. Prepare in the morning and serve at night.
