Another. Key Celebration at Keysville on June 10. OF GENERAL INTEREST.

On June 10, the State Camp Patriotic Order Sons of America proposes to finish the work it commenced last year, in marking historic spots at Keysville. The mon-ument at the Baumgardner farm, marking the birthplace of Francis Scott Key, will be supplemented with a marble tablet to be placed on the ground at Keysville Rev. Dr. Luther Kuhlman, Professor of Biblical Theology, of Gettysburg Col-lege, resigned this week.

The details of the event have not been fully arranged, owing to a recently de-veloped complication, but as this is not of a serious character and will likely be satisfactorily settled, the plans as stated will be carried out on the date named— Saturday, June 10-with an appropriate program of addresses and music.

program of addresses and music. The tablet will be gray marble, sand finish, 30x18x42, with this inscription, "Francis Scott Key, author of the 'Star Spangled Banner,' donated this ground for church and school use, in 1828. Erected by the P. O. S. of A., of Md., June 10, 1916." The flag pole will be of steel construction, the best quality to be had, 36ft. in height, and will be kept in-definitely supplied with a flag to be used definitely supplied with a flag to be used on clear days during the school months.

----Petitioning for Another Vote.

An effort is being made throughout the county to secure the names of twenty-five per-cent of the registered voters, to peti-tions, in order to resubmit the question to the voters as to whether Carroll coun-ty shall remain dry territory. Some of the districts will furnish the required number, and more, but it is thought to be doubtful whether the required number of genuine signatures can be secured in the county as a whole. There are over 8000 voters in the county. Even should the petition be completed, the Republicans, and gives his reasons. Roosevelt was so pleased with the letter that he has asked the League for it, that there is thought to be little chance of the "dry" sentiment of the county reversing itself; many being of the opinion that the

THE EUROPEAN WAR MAY BE ON THE WANE.

The Allies Confidently Claim That Germany Must Lose.

The European war slacked up, during the past week, except between the Aus-trian and Italian armies where the engagements are said to have been heavy, and favorable to the Austrians. Fight ing between the German and French forces has been of a minor character, possibly favorable to the latter, while only occasioual reports have been had from the Russian front indicating little activity

English and Russian submarines have been active in the Baltic sea among Ger-man freight vessels, a number of which were sunk with valuable cargoes. This activity is thought to be of great im-portance, as it will hamper Germany still urther in her prosecution of the war.

Rumors of peace are persistent; also, that Germany has about used up her re-serve forces and is no longer able to shift large consignments of troops from one front to the other. The fact, however, that the German lines are holding, on both fronts, is proof that no serious weak-nesss has developed for defensive purposes, but this is confidently held by the allies to be the beginning of the end, as the allies still have reserves that are going to the front. The French declare positively that fighting about Verdun demonstrates the failure of the German supreme effort; that the worst has been met and repulsed, and that Germany will very soon be placed wholly on the defensive.

How stands the case today? Less so-cial relations exist, many farmers are scarcely known to the business men, the catalog houses are represented in every house by a catalog and the wants of the family are supplied from it, thus de-creasing the home trade, and separating the people socially. The politicians must secure a dependent body of men to help win in their fight for office, no matter whether the enterprise is a gain or loss to the government. GRAND JURY REPORTS AND IS DISCHARGED.

..... Warning Against Gaming Devices and Violations of Sunday Laws.

The Grand Jury made its report on Friday and was discharged subject to recall by the Court. Its report is as fol-

To The Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court, for Carroll County— The Grand Jurors of the State of Mary-land for the body of Carroll County would respectfully report unto your Hon-orable Court that they have investigated all alleged violations of law, which have been brought to their attention accom-panied by any reliable or positive evi-dence to indicate that there was any reasonable ground to accept such allega-tions as truth. In cases of mere rumor tions as truth. In cases of mere runnor or vague suspicion, without other founda-tion than the word of gossip, they have not deemed it their duty to give heed. They have examined—witnesses, and found —presentments and —Indict-ments endorsed "True Bill." Among which were presentments and Indict which were presentments and Indictments against all of the prisoners reported as confined in the County Jail, awaiting the action of this Grand Jury, the only prisoners in jail so held. In the course of their investigations it was found that many tradesmen in the county at their places of business use various devices for the stimulation of trade, many of which devices are in fact gaming devices; but it is the conviction of the Grand Jurors that most of the traders who use the devices are ignorant of the law or of its application to the methods employed, and believe that the ends of justice do not require present-ments or indictments therefor at this time, but further believe that the State's Attorney and Sheriff should State's Attorney and Sheriff should through the public press or otherwise give notice that such practices be dis-continued, and if persisted in that future Grand Juries should present all violators of the law. It was also brought to their attention that the custom of some places of busi-ness with reference to the so-called Sunday laws is not what it should be, and it is recommended that the State's Attorney and Sheriff give similar public notice that those who do not observe the Sun-day laws, but flagrantly violate them, do so at their peril.

They wish to express their great grati-fication at the freedom of the county from grosser forms of criminality among a population of more than forty thousand, and the belief that few municipalities of such size are as orderly and law-abiding. In the discharge of their official duties they visited both the County Jail and the County Home, where they were hospi-tably entertained, at the former by Sheriff Stoner and his family, and at the latter by Stewaad Barnes and his family. The latter were assisted in entertaining by Miss Mary B. Shellman and Mrs. Lizzie Zahn, two ladies of Westminster, who which has been fitted Meeting, followed by the Baccalaureate chapel, and annually making the Christ-sermon by Dr. Charles C. Ellis, head of to these deserving people. They found the condition of both institutions worthy of all praise; both are seemingly in perfect sanitary condition as to cleanliness, and this at the County Home is true not only of the dwellings but also of the large barn, great cement floored hog pens and other out-buildings. At the home the wards of the county are comfortably clothed and all gave testimony that they are well fed and cared for. They have no suggestions to make whereby either the Sheriff or the Steward could improve these conditions. Both institutions are a credit to the county At the jail, however, there are certain improvements that should be made without delay, namely the removal of the unsightly out-buildings and their replacement with neat structures, more in keeping with the main building and its surroundings. They wish to thank the Court and its officers for many courtesies and for assistance given in making it possible promptly to transact the business that engaged their attention.

President Poncaire, of France, says it is not enough for Germany to tender peace, but must ask for it. He made known clearly that the only kind of peace that will bring safety and quiet to Europe, is when Germany admits her inability to conquer the allies, and stops trying to place the responsibility for continued war on them.

The result of the Rebublican primaries in Pennsylvania was mixed, the majority of the delegates-elect being of the Pen-Brumbaugh following, and part of them of the Brumbaugh following. All of the dele-gates are uninstructed. Penrose will regain control of the party organization. The result is generally conceded to be in opposition to Roosevelt's candidacy.

A mad-dog scare is prevalent in the Johsville neighborhood of Frederick county. Two boys, Charles Saylor aged 11, and Kuhlman Grabill aged 10, were bitten by a dog, several weeks ago, that afterward was decided to be mad. The boys have been taken to the Pasteur institute, Baltimore, for treatment. They show no symptons that usually accompany the rabies.

A novel scheme has been inaugurated by the Frederick County Commissioners in the campaign to tax furniture, exempted by the repealed act of 1914. Property owners are being requested to present their insurance policies, after protesting to the officials that their furniture hold-ings do not reach $100. One of the commissioners reported that several persons who protested against assessment, claiming that their furniture was not worth $100, had insurance policies covering property beyond the $100 mark. Several insurance companies have been notified of the conditions unearthed by county officials taxing furniture.

Westminster, was badly vote, if taken again, would be more em-phatically "dry" than it was two years The chief argument used for the reago. turn of the liquor business, is promised lower taxes, but most people understand that the present higher taxes are not to any great extent due to the loss of license revenue, and that new legislation, once it gets to work, will reduce county taxes. The argument that business would be injured in "dry" towns, has largely proven to be incorrect; while a very few are disposed to argue this way, by far the larger number of business men are perfectly satisfied with present conditions, and do not want a return to liquor selling, but especially desire to give the new order of things a longer and more complete trial.

..... As to Payment of Subscriptions.

The RECORD does not place new names on its subscription list, unless paid in ad-vance. It also desires that those already on the list pay up before the close of the year, and in general to take more account of our desire for advance payment on the part of all subscribers. Payment "any old time'' is not a proper way to do business along any line, and newspapers have as much right to fair business treatment as any other commodity contracted for.

Newspaper publishers, through their own policy of fighting and undermining each other, are largely responsible for the disrespect that patrons often feel for subscription obligations-or at least for de-cided carelessness with reference to them -and the RECORD desires to state that so far as its own policy is concerned, it prefers a patronage based on prompt payment for value received.

For the present, we shall continue sending the RECORD to those subscribers who do not pay until toward the end of a year's credit, but we desire it under-stood that this is a concession, and not a preference on our part, and we make no guarantee that the plan will be continued. Country newspapers should be paid for, cash in advance, the same as city papers.

> -----A Suggestion with Merit.

(Editor RECORD.)

In looking over a collection of ninetythree newspaper clippings of deaths and weddings from the various papers pub-lished in Carroll county, I find only twenty-three, or about 25% of the clip-plings contain the full date, while 32% have the date of the month only, and the remaining 25% have neither year or month.

As the papers from which the clippings were taken were destroyed, we have no way of finding the dates of the events and I believe that it would be a good sugges-tion that all such notices should be dated in full, which would be practically no trouble or expense, yet will be a large con-venience to readers in years to come. M. T. WOLFE, to do this work, now included in Civil Service.

This organization was a general disadvantage to the business interests of all towns, as it keeps many away from town. The Parcel Post completed the downfall of business locally; its introduction was another factor to break up home trade, which it has done, as the people can send to catalog houses and have delivered to their homes anything they desire. If the gross amount had been limited to a few pounds, it would not be so great an evil, but to make it possible to get large quantities through the mail capped the climax. This necessitates merchants to carry lighter stocks, lower license, less tax assessments of business men.

The farmer must in the end bear the burden, as he will be taxed more than heretofore, in the aggregate. His loss will be more dollars than he thinks he saves by sending away for his merchandise. He does not save one penny, as the prices of home merchants will be ound less than catalog houses. It costs more to conduct business in a city than in a town. Who pays this increase in expenses, but the buyers from the catalog houses? Then it requires the cash in advance, whilst the merchants at home are willing to give accommodations. If the people would consider, it seems to me, their better judgment would put a stop to all this. ALPHA.

"Birth of the Nation" Denounced.

"The Birth of the Nation" the picture play that has attracted so much attention for its wonderful effects in production, is severely scored in a resolution presented in the House of Representatives by Congressman Focht, of the 17th Pa. THE WESTMINSTER TIMES states as a news fact, that "there will be no more county primaries until 1917." Yes, one primary a year is a plenty, and that of 1917 may be made the last, if the people will get together and demand that it shall be. The people should also read some new rules to party organizations, with reference to the primaries and to political manipulation in general.

.... Booze and Increased Taxes.

An effort is being made by the liquor interests, and their champions, to blame the increased taxes on the abolition of the liquor business in the county and the loss of revenue therefrom. Of course, this sort of argument was expected, and now is the time to work it before the new laws of the last legislature can be placed in operation and reduce the county tax rate. The remarkable thing is and acceptable candidates to the majority of voters for election. As the law stands, a "dry" county, or district, is quite apt to have "wet" candidates to vote for, unless the "drys" can by some means eliminate competition for nominationsalmost an impossible proposition, because the open primary's chief indorsement is the free lance feature.

Our primary system, for this reason. will be a constant menace to anti-saloon legislation, for even though a party organization may favor such legislation, it can not possibly prevent a multiplication of candidates, who may so divide the vote that "wet" voters may, by a little collusion, centralize their strength on a few "wet" candidates.

It may happen, any number of times and for almost any office, that the division of the vote among men of high standing may let candidates of much less standing win nominations, and nobody, specially, will be responsible-only the law itself.

As the same rule applies to all parties, it is not an impossible situation at all that the best citizens may at times, not be able to conscientiously support candidates on either side, for certain offices. If only good, clean and able men entered the primaries, there would be no danger, | tion, if we remember the past correctly, but there is no power to keep the other and may recall its opinions in the issue class out. All they need to do is put up of this week, but we rather suspect that their money in compliance with law, and in this instance its opinions will stand go on the ballot-white and black sheep, as authentic prophecy, without need of all together.

Prof. Morelock Must Go.

According to an editorial in last week's A dvocate, the present School Superintendent, Prof. Morelock, will not fill the requirements for reappointment. After commenting on the "humiliating conditions" attending Maryland public schools it says

"The new school law provides the rem-edy. Its purpose is to sweep away the superintendents of mediocre ability with no culture and with but little professional qualifications; and to substitute graduates of a university or a college, "who have completed in addition a one graduate year's work in education at a recognized university, including public school ad-ministration, supervision and method of teaching." The present superintendendent has not had these advantages, and could not obtain the certificate in administration and supervision provided by the new law.

In other words, the terms and spirit of the law, as well as the necessities of the situation, demand a new superintendent of the public schools of Carroll county. The Board of County School Commission ers must provide this new superintend-ent. It is as useless as it would be wrong for them to consider any one who does not fulfill the standard of the new law.' The Advocate is a little uncertain in its editorial comments on this very quesrecall, and later on it will be interesting to know whether the "qualified" successor elected is a Democrat or a Republican. Here is the situation. A new school law has been passed that will very conveniently offer a plausible excuse for dump-

The Motive For Peace.

From sources that bear the marks of authenticity comes the story of the speech made by the German chancellor at the secret sitting of the General Committee of the Reichstag. In this speech Bethmann-Hollweg is said to have told his associates that a breech with the United States was a real peril to Germany; that it would give comfort to the foes of the empire and that sentimental considerations and irritation over the tone of the American note must be laid aside for the ends of utility-for Germany must do everything to win the war. The Chancellor told the members of the committee that the submarines could not effect their purpose of starving out England, and that in case the United States became involved in the war other neutral powers would likely come in also. Such were some of the practical considerations. As for the last-there is not a shadow of a doubt but that the A. B. C. South American powers would have insisted upon placing their resources at the disposal of the United States in case of need. Some of the European neutrals would likewise have joined the United States upon the issue of humanity and neutral rights.

So it appears that the inducements for making the concessions that were made were not good will to this country, not a sense of obligation to humanity, but a weighing of German utility. The Chancellor pointed to the reservation of right to clter its attitude that Germany has made. This may prove a fatal omission for Germany as it will rob it of the consideration, otherwise its right to ask from this country when it will need its goods offices most. For the reservation takes from the concessions every element of frank consent.-Baltimore American. -----

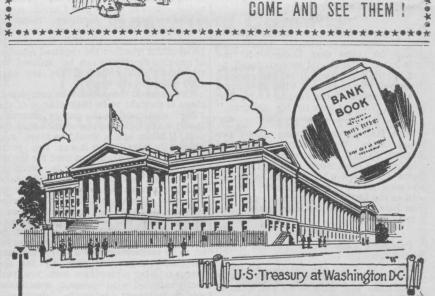

Colonel Roosevelt's Hat.

Colonel Roosevelt's letter indorsing the efforts of the Roosevelt Non-Partisan League to bring about his nomination by the Republican National Convention marks an interesting step in the Colonel's own strenuous efforts to prove to the country that he and he alone is the man to uphold the national honor in the coming campaign for President. But it adds nothing to what the public has already known concerning his candidacy. If his hat has not been "in the ring" long since, it would be interesting to inquire where it has been reposing ? Certainly not on the Colonel's head. For it has been subjected to several pretty hard knocks at the primaries in Massachusetts and in California, and it is only charitable to suppose that the Colonel's mood has been too heroic all this time to allow any unauthorized use of his own chosen symbol of candidacy to be a football for his opponents.

There is at least this virtue in the Roosevelt candidacy, now frankly avowed, but long understood to be a practical factor in the problem awaiting solution by the Republican convention. It is that gram of preparedness, military first of all that more has not been claimed along this line, before this, but it has no doubt been purposely held in reserve until the effort was made to get twenty-five percent of the voters to sign petitions for taking a vote on whether or not the county shall remain dry.

The whole truth is, the growth of the tax rate is in force in all of the counties of the state, and not alone in Carroll. It is true in the long dry counties on the Eastern Shore, as well as in recently dry Carroll, and relief can not be had merely by restoring the revenue from liquor selling, which would be a dearly purchased relief.

As long as there are millions of dollars spent annually on road building, and unusually large sums for the various measures coming out of the legislature, taxes are bound to be high. The state tax for 1917, for instance, will be about 3 cents higher than at present, and without any reference to the liquor license revenue whatever.

But, suppose we do pay higher taxes because of the banishment of "booze" The bettered general conditions are worth the money, and ultimately the whole state will be happier, healthier, more respectable and more prosperous. The period of readjustment is naturally attended with some bumps and jars, but in the end everybody is sure to be mightily better off in a sober country, when we stop making a commercial product of a thing that ruins and debauches hundreds of thousands of men and women each year.

A Primary Election Danger.

A dangerous feature of the direct primary, which has enlisted decidedly less interest than it deserves, is the possible division of the "best citizen" vote among several good candidates, and the possibility of other classes of citizens centreing on one undesirable man, and "putting him over." Take, for instance, a situation in which there may be three candidates for an office, two equally "dry," and one "wet." In such a case, the "wet" man is practically assured of the nomination, without regard to perstick to their man, and the "drys" to the United States. divide.

With the convention plan prevailing, this result is much less likely to occur, is that of the Bay of Fundy. -----The Chicago Convention.

Figuring on the vote at the Chicago convention is now a popular pastime, and it is given some foundation because of conventions held and delegates elected, some of them pledged. A forecast of the first ballot has been prepared in Washington, like this

It is figured that the first ballot will gressive and independent editors of the second ballot will strengthen the leaders. The third ballot is picked to be the last one, by which time it is claimed that Judge Hughes will be in a position to clinch the nomination, if any one can then authritatively announce that he will accept.

This scheme of reasoning is perhaps as good as any other, but there is another largest support was also in Michigan, one which predicts the nomination of with 76 votes. The vote of both Hughes Roosevelt at about the same stage in the | and Roosevelt overwhelms the "favorite proceedings. Still another is that the

It should be remembered, however, that acid fruits are often irritating to the mucous membrane, and if the habit is long continued on a naturally weak digestion or with babies, it will still further interfere with

Justice Hughes, for the moment, is the most formidable figure in the path of the Roosevelt candidacy, and while it is true that the country has been given no opportunity to learn from him specifically his position on the immediate issues that confront the Federal Government, the known character of the man and his record in positions of high executive responsibility inspire a feeling of confidence so deep that it is generally admitted that the nomination could be his were the choice to be made today.

It is an element in the favor of both Roosevelt and Hughes that the stand-pat, conservative men of the "Old Guard' do not want either man, and that they would be glad of any combination of the forces of the so-called "favorite sons," to thwart the nomination of either. And the uncertain quantity yet to be detershort of the actual voting in November, is which is going to be the more serious handicap-the resentments bred of the Roosevelt schism of 1912, or the lack of a vote of 341 out of a total of 1,414 and enthusiasm for Hughes on the part of political managers who see in his candi-

DISEASES OF SWINE.

Worst Troubles of Hogs Are Cholera Internal Parasites and Lice.

The prevention and cure of hog disease are always more readily accomplished where cleanliness and sunshine prevail. Probably the commonest and worst troubles of hogs are hog cholera internal parasites and lice. The farmer should make a thorough study of the methods of preventing and treating these troubles, says the Kansas Farmer. This study should be made by consulting state and federal authorities who will gladly give information on the subject.

morning for three mornings at the rate of one teaspoonful for each eighty pounds of live weight. Turpentine nowever, is not very efficacious and is liable to injure the kidneys.

Santonin, which was formerly wide ly used as a remedy for worms in hogs is practically unobtainable at the pres ent time owing to foreign trade condi tions. The following treatment has been found to be very effective: With hold all feed and water for twenty-four hours, then give each pig a tablespoon ful of castor oil to which has been added oil of American wormseed, as follows:

Small pigs two to three months old thirty-five drops; pigs weighing fifty to a hundred pounds, fifty to a hundred drops; larger pigs, one teaspoonful. Each pig should be dosed separately if the best results are to be obtained In case separate dosing is impracticable on account of lack of assistance or other circumstances the pigs may be sorted out into lots of half a dozen each, according to size. Thoroughly mix the castor oil and wormseed oil in proper quantities with a small quantity of milk or mash and give it to the pigs watching them carefully to see that none gets more than his share. At tempting to dose too many pigs at the same time in this manner will result unsatisfactorily, as some will get more and others less than they should. This treatment should be repeated in a week or ten days to secure 100 per cent efficiency. Crude oil makes an excellent dip for hogs. It can be mixed half and half with water and sprinkled on with a sprinkling can. Kerosene oil emulsion is another excellent thing to rid the pigs of lice.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

It is very necessary that little pigs have plenty of exercise and * all the sunlight that can be given ⊕ them.

Farmers with heavy steady work now generally try to secure drafty horses, even when farm work is the sole object.

The sheep pasture should be selected from the highest and dryest parts of the farm. Encourage the little pigs to eat grain after they are three or « four weeks old. Build a creep $ for them so they can feed alone. At this age feed for bone and muscle.

The good flat knee, the muscular arms, the full muscular shoulders, the good hock, are all important points in the horse. The man who keeps sheep $ should look ahead and have a good supply of alfalfa or clover hay for his flock.

DRAFT HORSES ARE IN STRONG DEMAND

A good draft stallion must weigh at maturity from 1,800 to 2,000 pounds. In my estimation excessive size does not count for anything in a good sire, writes a correspondent of the Kansas Farmer. One will get a more uniform and sounder lot of colts from a stallion of average size than from one of over size. A good draft stallion should stand at least sixteen hands three inches or seventeen hands in height, and his depth through the chest should be equal to one-half his height. His other proportions should be accordingly. Such a stallion crossed on good high grade mares should produce geldings from sixteen and one-half hands to seventeen hands in height, and if they are to command the best prices they should be of good draft conformation, having well set legs, large, round, well shaped feet of durable texture and should weigh from 1,650 pounds to 1,750 pounds in good working condition at five years of age or at full maturity. A stallion that will sire this kind of gelding must necessarily be absolutely sound and possess good

THIS FISH A GREAT WALKER

If His Pond Goes Dry He Simply Ambles Across the Country to Another.

Droughts have no terrors for the climbing perch. If the pool or river where he makes his home becomes dry, he climbs up the banks and starts across country to find a wet place. This ability to travel led to a belief, once common, that the fish could climb trees, whence he got his name-climbing perch.

He walks with the aid of his fins, virtually wriggling his way along. If he strikes a place grown up with grass or herbs, he uses his pectoral fins, which are the ones on either side, just behind the gills. He hooks one of these fins around a blade of grass and pulls himself forward.

Not much speed, but the climbing perch usually gets there. As for his ability to climb trees, stories have come from India and the East Indies to the effect that the fish has been known to ascend cocoanut palms to drink the milk from the cocoanut. Naturalists have little faith in these stories, however.

The interior buildings are chiefly modern, but the exterior is a faithful representation of a medieval fortress. The chateau was begun in the last decade of the fourteenth century by Louis d'Orleans, to whom the domain was given by Charles VI, and was finished early in the fifteenth century. It was subsequently held by the adherents of the League, from whom it passed to Henri IV. It was dismantled in 1622. The ruins were bought by Napoleon I, and it was restored by the order of Napoleon III 1858-1895.

Going in Person to Buy for House hold Bound to Save Money on the Weekly Bills.

Economy does not merely imply living more cheaply and thereby of necessity cutting down either the quality or quantity of food, or both. True economy lies in obtaining as good, or nearly as good, value for the lesser exnenditure

How many wives whose husbands are earning, say, between $1,000 and $1,500 a year, still think it beneath their dignity to do more than the most dainty of shopping? The habit of ordering at the door is an ingrained one, and to some minds smacks of superiority: but an examination of the extent to which higher prices have necessarily to be paid in this way would surprise a good many.

This only applies to the difference between the actual cash price paid at the shop and the price charged by the same tradesman who collects orders and delivers and very often has to allow a bill to be run up, to say nothing of the odd ounces frequently charged on the bill, which, had the purchaser been present at the weighing, would have been found to be nonexistent.

This, however, is not the only saving which can be made as between personal shopping and giving orders with ready cash available, will soon tain prices. This means trouble, but looked at sensibly it results in the equivalent of earning money, for money saved is money earned in a distinct sense in housekeeping.

Moreover, when purchasing in person one can always insist upon getting the best article at the price, whereas if the goods are delivered after ordering at the door, if they are found to be not quite up to the mark, they are more than likely to be put up with, either through lack of time to send them back or indisposition to little of both. bother further.

COTTONSEED FOR CATTLE.

Results of a Feeding Experiment a Purdue University,

It does not pay to feed beef cattle more than two and one-half pounds of cottonseed meal per day per 1,000 pounds of live weight, according to re sults at the Purdue station, Indiana While there was no difference in the appetites of cattle receiving four pounds per day and those receiving two and one-half pounds, the gains or the latter were considerably more rap id and made at less cost. The conclusion from this is that it is better business to feed the smaller amount and save at both ends of the line. In this experiment the cattle fed the smaller amount of cottonseed meal ac quired the same finish as those fed almost twice as much. Those receiving the smaller amount made a profit, not including the value of the pork made in the feed lot, of $5.49 per steer, while those receiving the larger amount made a profit of only $2.89 per head.

Alfalfa Makes Bones Grow.

J. L. Edmunds, the University of Illinois horseman, says he believes it is possible to grow more bone with alfalfa and clover than other feeds, because they contain a large amount of lime. He believes those feeds will grow the bone to the limit of the heredity when fed properly. Those feeds will also lessen the need for high priced grain feeds.

Feeding the Brood Sow.

A brood sow should not be kept too fat, but it is important that she be kept growing and in a thrifty condition for best results. Every brood sow should be fed alfalfa or bran, or a use among themselves and their neighbors for breeding purposes. The result is sure to be satisfactory. The mare pictured is a grade Percheron. The foal was sired by a pure bred.

style and action. If he is a sire of good geldings he will also sire the right kind of mares.

It should be the chief aim of the breeder who would make his business pay the most revenue to produce the best horses possible for him to breed, as a good horse is more easily sold, brings nearly double the price of the ordinary one and costs no more to produce. One safe guide to remember in breeding is that like produces like, and if one would raise good colts he must breed to good stallions.

Great care should be used in selecting a stallion suitable for use on the mares in the vicinity in which he is to stand for service. If the marcs are light boned and small no attempt should be made to breed the very largest type of stallions on them the first cross, but instead a medium sized stallion should be used. On the produce resulting the heavier and larger types of stallions can be used. If the mares to be bred are coarse boned, coarse jointed. sluggish mares a stallion should be rejecte to overcome these faults. He should b of fine conformation, yet possessin sufficient bone of good quality. He should be of fiery temperament and very energetic to give more ambition and style to the colts. In short, a stallion selected for public service in a community should be selected to overcome the faults most common to the mares of that vicinity. If patrons have a preference as to color secure what a majority of them want and not what most appeals to one's personal fancy. This will mean dollars and cents at the close of the Experimentation with whey at the Wisconsin and Ontario statoins show that 785 pounds are equal to 100 pounds of grain. At Copenhagen station an experiment with sixty animals shows that if a pound of grain was fed as an equivalent to twelve pounds of whey from separator skimmilk cheese results that are practically equal were secured. In every case whey was fed with grain. In all results with feeding it has been found that some grain should be fed with whey when satisfactory and the most economical gains are to be secured. It requires two pounds of whey to replace one pound of skimmilk.

George C. Eichelberger appears to be clear of pneumonia, but other complications have arisen, and his progress toward health has been very slow.

A very important improvement is be-ing made in the pavement on Main St. in front of James Smith's house and store room and C. E. Engel & Co's store. The improvement continues down the Broadway side of the store room to the next property. If the owner of the store had only been willing to use concrete instead of brick pavement, the improve-ment would have been greater.

A very sad accident, fatal in its results to a well-known woman of Union Bridge, occurred on Saturday afternon, about 3 clock, when Miss Sarah Six went to the basement kitchen of her home to prepare dinner for herself and brother. After filling the oil stove, she applied a lighted match, and this ignited oil that had run over in the filling. She said after the accident that she took her apron to brush away the oil, this set fire to her clothing, and she appears to have carried the stove autracted help, she was found in the kitchen with about all clothing burned from her body and limbs. After some delay doctors were secured, her burns dressed, and it was decided to take her to the Md. General Hospital on the train, about then due; this was done. At the hospital she lingered between life and death, until 1 o'clock, Sunday morning, when death ended her suffering.

Changed Words. The English language presents a large number of words that have been completely changed in their significance since they first came into use. In some cases their meaning has been exactly reversed. A conspicuous example of this is the word "let," which Shakespeare uses several times with the meaning "to hinder." Hamlet exclaimed, "I'll make a ghost of him that lets me," of course "him that stops me.'

The word is used in the same sense in the Bible, as in II Thessalonians ii, 7-"He who now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way."

"Ravel" and "unravel" mean exactly the same thing, although at one time to unravel probably meant to reduce confusion to order. Compare the words "valuable" and "invaluable and "loose" and "unloose."

As used frequently in the Bible "prevent" instead of meaning to "hinder" means to "precede" or "go before," which is, of course, its etymological meaning.-Los Angeles Times.

Holy Lands of All Religions.

Christians call Palestine the Holy Land because it was the birthplace of the Christian religion on earth as well as that of the Saviour, whose birth, ministry and death are inseparably as sociated with the history of Jerusalem and vicinity. To the Mohammedans Mecca, in Arabia, is the holy land, it being the birthplace of Mohammed, the saviour of the followers of that faith.

India is the holy land of the Chinese and other oriental Buddhists, it being the native land of Sakya Muni, the su preme Buddha. Elis, one of the sev eral divisions of the ancient Peloponnesus, was the Mecca and the Jerusalem of the ancient Greeks. The temple of Olympus Zeus was situated at Elis, and the sacred festivals were held there each year. The believers in the Shinto religion make annual pilgrimage to Sitsa Kara, the immense stone pillar where their supreme ruler last stood while talking to men.

Pigeons In Constantinople.

In no big city in the world are there so many tame pigeons as in Constantinople. In many squares in London there are small flocks of pigeons, but in the Turkish capital they are to be seen by the thousand. These pigeons are sacred, and, indeed, many a wealthy Turk leaves money to be devoted to buying food for them. The story of why they are sacred is rather interesting. When Mohammed, the Turkish prophet, was flying from his enemies he hid in a cavern. At the mouth of the cavern two pigeons built their nest, so tradition runs, while across the entrance a spider spun its web. The soldiers who came along some days later felt certain that no one had entered the cave, seeing the birds nesting and the spider's web, and so never troubled to enter it and search. Ever since then the Turks have held pigeons and spiders to be sacred.

Gifts of the Grass.

The grass is missed only by its absence. When we pass by a house which is minus a green lawn or grassy plot in front we exclaim, "What a blot on the landscape!" In a vague way we realize that the grass gives tone and color to outdoor life as nothing else can; that no picture is complete without it. All the beauties of the seashore-the bold rocks, the crested surf, the dashing waves, the lights and shadows which play at sunrise and sunset beside old ocean-cannot compensate for the lack of the grass beneath our feet. Friends wintering at southern beaches have told us that they grew homesick for the grassy fields and meadows of home .-- Marga-

It is the common idea that a black bear will bug people to death. This is, of course, a mistake. A bear almost invariably makes its attack by striking a stunning blow with the fore paw and tearing with his very formidable claws. A large black bear can strike a terrific blow and is capable of knocking down and mortally wounding a full grown caribou. When their enemy or prey is felled to the ground they usually bite them about the head and neck until death ensues. They are remarkable for the strength of their jaws and have been known to bite through the skull of a man Many animals that can generally be counted on not to attack may so when come upon suddenly, do crowded, wounded or annoyed. The black bear is no exception. The more ! see and study animals the more I am impressed with the fact that there is no fixed rule what the same species of animal will do under similar circumstances, as they seem to vary as much in mind and temperament as the individual. Although one might predict with a very good average of correct tie chains, lot of rope, all sizes; lot gum ness, there would always be the excep-tion ---"Big Game Fields of America."

First Steps In English.

The police in Calcutta caught a na tive coming out of a shop early in the morning and arrested him on suspicion The man had on the previous evening concealed himself inside the shop and had employed the time until morning in fitting himself with a complete suit of clothes, including a white shirt, with studs and links, a red tie, carefully put on, black socks, a pair of patent leath ers, watch and chain, handkerchief, pocket knife, straw hat and cane. He even went the length of writing his name inside the hat. On being arraigned before a magistrate he gave the queerest excuse imaginable. He said that he wanted to learn English and, as a preliminary step, thought it best to dress like an Englishman.

Giving a Horse Its Name.

The shire horse owes its name to Arthur Young's remarks, in the description of his agricultural tours during the closing years of the eighteen century, concerning the large old English black horse, "the produce principally of the shire counties in the heart of England." But long previous to this the word "shire" in connection with horses was used in statutes of Henry VIII. Under the various names of the war horse, the great horse, the old English black horse and the shire horse the breed has for centuries been cultivated in the rich fen lands of Lincolnshire and Cambridgeshire and in many counties of the west. Curiously enough, the Shire Horse society, which has done so much to promote the breed, was known for the first six years of its existence, which began in ty.-London Chronicle.

FACES MANY PERILS

German Youth, Fleeing War, Has Exciting Time.

Adalbert Krause Reaches Texas After Escaping Death at Sea and in Mexico-Gets $3 for Bale of Villa Money.

Fort Worth, Tex.-When Adalbert Krause, eighteen years old, a German youth, left Berlin just before the start of the war, hoping to reach the United States and thus escape military service, he little dreamed of the exciting events he would experience before he attained his goal.

Krause is industrially, not militarily, inclined, but before reaching this country he faced starvation, was pursued by German officers, was beaten by sailors, nearly shipwrecked, escaped from a ship at Tampico and was attacked and robbed by Mexicans. But Krause never lost hope and finally reached El Paso, a town he never had heard of in Germany, and only a few days ago arrived in Fort Worth, where he wants to become a captain of industry and a naturalized American citizen.

When Krause left his home in Berlin he first went to Hamburg, where he played hide and seek with the police and other officers and between times tried to get work. Despite rigid economy Krause soon was reduced to eight cents, and he was getting desperate when he obtained a position as mess boy on board a Hamburg American line vessel. This ship first took him to Spanish ports and later to Tampico, Mex. On the way the vessel encountered severe storms and the crew prepared to abandon the ship. Krause thought his end had come, but the ship weathered the gale. Then the seamen began to treat Krause roughly, sometimes beating him.

One night, when the vessel was at Tampico, Krause bade farewell to the ship. He could speak no Spanish, and having little funds he met difficulties wherever he turned. Finally he got work at San Luis Potosi in an oil plant, where he could not understand the indifferent and lazy customs of the Mexican laborers.

Once he went to learn why some peons failed to bring him water for his boiler from a nearby river.

He found the peons sitting on the bank smoking cigarettes in good old leisurely Mexican style. The sight stirred his Teutonic blood and there was a fight. Krause fought with his fists, and being lithe and muscular was getting the better of the argument when other peons ran up with drawn knives

Krause fled to his engine house, the Mexicans in pursuit. When he bolted the door they tried to break it down. Krause poked a revolver out of a window and threatened to fire if they did not "rausmit," which the peons did. But San Luis Potosi is far from the United States, and so Krause began to work his way toward Juarez, a dan-

Recovery of Needed Money Could Not | Sack of Precious Dust Trailed Con-

Be Called Altogether an Act of Providence.

Three or four years before he was married he had, in a reckless moment, loaned to a good friend the trifling sum of $100. A year later he had begun to throw out gentle hints that he knew of a good dividend-paying stock he could buy for $100 a share. But Good Friend didn't come across. When he was about to buy furniture for his new home he plainly told Good Friend he needed the coin, but that individual changed the subject. After he had settled down to the hum-drum of married life he and his wife often would speak of the many nice things they could buy with that $100.

She was a firm believer in Providence, he was somewhat infirm. One day he lost his job, and the weeks went by, and he didn't find another. Then his wife took sick; her mother came to live with them-things went from b. to w., generally, and he talked of shooting himself. His wife told him to cheer up, to be brave, and not to despair-the Lord would provide for them. Trust in Providence, she said. And the very next day, after that little sermon, a letter came to him, with a check for $100 enclosed.

"Didn't I tell you?" she cried. "Didn't I tell you? It's the hand of Providence, Harry, nothing else!"

"Then I'm Providence," he said, "for wrote Bill a letter 'tother day and told him if he didn't come up I'd come down and take that hundred out of his hide, with compound interest, even if I went to the pen for it!"

LEADS ALL IN CARPET MAKING

In Volume of Production Philadelphia Is Easily the First City in the World.

More than a third of all American carpets are woven in Philadelphia, which, it is claimed, leads any other city in the world in the volume of production. Wilton, in England, has given its name to one of the most widely known and useful rugs in the world, but now the Wilton rug-producing center of the world is in Philadelphia. Axminster, too, gave its name to a carpet, but it long ago ceased to produce any of it. Brussels likewise is known all over the earth for its carpets, but Brussels does not begin to produce the carpets and rugs which are turned out in Philadelphia. Philadelphia enterprise embarked in the carpet business while Washington was president of the United States, but it was not until more than half a century later that Pennsylvania led all the states in carpet production. As early as 1791 there was a factory in Philadelphia engaged in the manufacture of Axminster and Turkey carpets. China and Russia send to Philadelphia most of the long, coarse wool used in the manufacture

Watertown, N. Y .- After traveling for thousands of miles during 16 years, a sack of gold dust mailed in 1899 was delivered to Christopher Lalone of Potsdam.

The gold had been trailing Lalone for years, but, wherever it was sent, Lalone was always just ahead of it. The gold dust started at Dawson

City, Alaska, being sent by Frank Wires, Mr. Lalone's son-in-law. It was part of the first treasure taken from a mine which young Wires discovered while prospecting, and which later netted him a fortune.

The first address attached to the sack was Schenectady, where Lalone was living. Before it arrived, however, Lalone had left that city, and after a few months the gold was sent back to Dawson City. Wires, the sender, was far from civilization, and his whereabouts was unknown. Unclaimed, the sack lay in the Dawson post office until it was learned by a friend of Wires that Lalone was in Terre Haute, Ind. There the package was sent, but again too late. Since then it has traveled to Seattle, to southern California and back to Alaska, until finally Lalone was located in Potsdam. Three tags, bearing 20 addresses, were attached to the sack.

SOME CREDIT DUE TO HARRY GOLD TRAVELED 16 YEARS PICK UP GOLD IN STREETS

On the Gold Coast of Africa It Can Be Done, Though Hardly Worth While.

It is said that at Axim, on the Gold Coast of Africa, gold may actually be picked up in the streets. When one visitor, an Englishman, took the state ment as a mere figure of speech, his host immediately bade a woman servant go out into the main street, gather a bucketful of road scrapings and work it for gold dust.

In ten minutes the servant returned with two galvanized iron buckets, one filled with road scrapings and the other with water. She also brought three or four wooden platters, varying in size from a large plate to a saucer. Removing several handfuls of the road scrapings and placing them in the large platter, the woman picked out and threw aside the large stones, pebbles and bits of stick and then moistened the remainder with water from the other bucket. This enabled her to remove smaller refuse.

The residuum she put into the next smaller platter, and she repeated the process until there was a quantity of sand and gravel ready for treatment. This she sprinkled freely with water, and, by a deft circular movement of the platter, brought the small gravel to the outside, where it could be thrust over the edge. When she had repeated this operation three or four times she treated the material, which now looked more like mud than anything else, in a still smaller platter.

At last, in the smallest platter of all, she had the bucketful of sweepings reduced to a handful or two of sifted sand. This she carefully washed and sifted. At last, with a dexterous twist, she brought the sand into a crescent, the outer edge of which showed a thin rim of yellow. It was unmistakably gold dust. The whole operation had taken half an hour, and it had produced about a shilling's worth of gold.

After the Geneva Version, Authorities of the Anglican Church Prepared a Revised Translation.

The first printed edition of the popular and - since - frequently printed Geneva version of the Bible appeared in Scotland in 1560, being commonly termed the "Breeches" Bible. Because of the Puritanic and Calvinistic tone of the text and marginal notes. this edition was not favorably regarded by the authorities of the Anglican church. A revised translation was therefore prepared by Matthew Parker, archbishop of Canterbury, aided by eight bishops and the first scholars of that age. This edition, printed in black letter by Richard Jugge, was Issued as a stately folio in 1568, and is known as the "Bishops' Bible." It is said to be the most sumptuous of the long series of English folio Bibles. A second edition in quarto appeared in 1569; and a second folio in 1572, also contained two versions of the Psalter, one in black letter being that of the "Great Bible," the other in Roman letter being that of the "Bishops." The New Testament contained a number of pictorial initials taken from an edition of Ovid's "Metamorphoses," including one representing Leda and the swan.

The First War. The first writing known to scholars was the account of a war waged between hostile nations in Mesopotamia, perhaps, 3500 B. C. The first battle was that between Cain and Abel. Apparently men have always been quick to settle their differences by fighting. The first warlike king is said to have been Osymandyas of Egypt, who passed into Asia and conquered Bactria in 2100 B. C. Palamedes Bacgos is mythically reported to have been the first who ranged an army in a regular line of battle, placed sentinels round a camp and excited the soldier's vigilance by giving him a password. This occurred during the siege of Troy, the date of which is variously estimated at about 2,500 years before the Christian

The Egotist.

It is only a narrow mind which refuses to listen to reasonable argument. The broad mind is always open to conviction. This is a well-known fact, and yet every one of us numbers among his acquaintances at least half a dozen "cocksure" persons. This trait of being too positive is sufficiently unpleasant in a man, but it is infinitely worse in a girl. In the first place, it is incompatible with the gentleness of real femininity; in the second, it is irritating and annoying to friends and acquaintances, and in the third, it is an indication of a narrow mind, which should in itself be sufficient to keep any girl from cultivating this trait.-Exchange.

Purity of Eggs.

The feeling generally prevails that one egg is as wholesome and as clean as another. We may fret and worry about the possible germs that come to us in the ice. We properly take no end of precautions in favor of a pure milk supply. We insist on wrapped bread and germless oysters and a dozen other kinds of pure food. But we trust the hen. Few of us ever realize that any germ or uncleanliness can penetrate the smooth surface of the egg shells.

But that opinion just shows that we do not know it all when it comes to the pure food proposition. The very fact that eggs grow "stale" is proof enough that trouble does penetrate the shell. For this staleness is produced by the presence of micro-organisms, which in growing produce poisonous products productive of ptomaine poisoning.

So, too, eggs laid by hens not hygienically cared for may be carriers of uncleanliness. To insure the perfectly clean egg the hen must have clean nests, clean runs and an abundance of clean, pure water.

How the Town of Ladybird Was Depopulated An Episode of May Day By F. A. MITCHEL

17 What we now call the middle west was settled up in spots by very different peoples, and these spots, now cities or towns, show the differences to this day. One place will have been settled by refined people, and their descendants are refined; another will have been settled by a rough class, and its population will be rough today.

When one of these spots was in embryo-we will call it Eaglebird-its inhabitants were not naturally rough, but they were all men, and men without women will in time degenerate into wild beasts. No woman would go to Eaglebird because there were no women there. One or two of the men went east at different times to marry a sweetheart, but came back alone. When the girls learned that Eaglebird was exclusively a man town they invariably declined to exchange refined surroundings for a den.

There was a town not far distant from Eaglebird that we will call Ladybird. When the former was settled the latter had been a town for two decades. True, the Ladybirdians had run out the Indians, but they had all come to the region, men and women together, from Connecticut, where there was a college, and there was not a poorly educated person among them. But Ladybird had not been favorably located for trade, and its young men when grown sought busier fields of labor, while their sisters remained where they were. Instead of manufactures, there were libraries, and the old folks and the girls were very intellectual.

Eaglebird had been settled for a land speculation. Ten men with money had purchased a tract for a song and secured others to join them in settling it by offering a share in the property. In this way some forty men, mostly young and all unmarried, were secured as emigrants for the enterprise. They built a town, but no more men came, and owing to the absence of women there were no children.

O'Brien, who was the originator of the scheme, one day called a meeting in the town hall, a building 12 by 18, used principally for poker parties, and thus addressed the gathering:

"Gentlemen, if we can't get some women for wives we'll have to give up this scheme and go somewhere else. I've a proposition to make. There are more than fifty single women in Ladybird. Efforts have been made to induce some of them to marry our fellows, but they have turned up their noses at us. What do you say to swooping down on 'em and carrying 'em off?

The idea took like wildfire. Naturally, the youngest men were the most "Good! Bully! And you won't give us away?" cried the crowd. 'The lady declared that she would not give them away, and she was not sure but that her conscience would permit her to aid them. The meeting broke up with wild cheers for their visitor, aider and abetter, and the next morning, amid another round of cheers, the couple drove away. In a few days a message came from the late visitor, who signed herself Elizabeth Harrison, stating that in a few days May day would be celebrated at Ladybird on the square around which the town was built and that at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the young people would dance around a ma The children would first do the danc ing, then the young men and women But since there were but two or three young men in the town and they either invalids or too spiritless to go away from such a dull place they did not count. Therefore it was expected that some twenty-five or thirty young girls would be dancing together, constitut ing a fine flock of Ladybirds to be seized and carried away.

Mrs. Harrison strongly advised preparing a portion of Eaglebird for their reception and that they be placed there together by themselves. No one should be forced into marriage; they should simply be held until married from choice or it was evident that they preferred to return to Ladybird.

That they had been fortunate in securing the services and advice of a wo man was evident to all. Some who had believed that the scheme would be the ruin of Eaglebird began to think that a number of the girls could be induced to remain with them as wives. What such persons chiefly dreaded was that the captives would feel outraged at their abduction and that most of them, taking to flight, would make good an escape.

Preparations were at once begun for the raid in accordance with Mrs. Harrison's advice. One end of the town was set apart for the girls and beautified so far as the men could beautify it, though, to tell the truth, this consisted chiefly in cleaning up, whitewashing, etc. There was also a cleaning up of the prospective husbands. There were but two or three razors in the town, and these were in constant requisition. Several men were appointed hair cutters and did a lot of shearing. The clothes the men had had come in from the east and were got out and furbished. Altogether after the polishing a very presentable set of young men were ready for courtship and matrimony.

May day opened bright and beautiful. All the teams in the town were harnessed, and some thirty good and true men started for Ladybird. At noon they stopped in a wood a few miles from the town for lunch and rest, but by 2 o'clock were again on the march. About 3 they sent out a mounted scout to watch for the time fitted for the attack and waited.

Over the waving grass and wild flow ers, through the young leaves, came the sound of feminine voices mixed merrily. Every man started to his feet. In a few minutes the scout rode into camp and reported that the girls were dancing about the maypole. O'Brien, who was leader, gave the order to start, and, advancing to the cover of trees overhanging certain houses of the town, they left their Text of the Lesson, Acts xv, 1-35. Memory Verses, 32, 33-Golden Text, Gal. v, 1-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson tells of a lot of trouble which certain people caused by teaching that faith in Jesus Christ was not enough to save any one unless they were also circumcised. These people are spoken of as "Pharisees who believed" (verses 1, 5). The Lord Jesus did not believe in all who said that they believed in Him, for He knew all men (John ii, 23-25). Any one who does not see a full salvation in the finished work of the Lord Jesus for all who receive Him, apart from any works of ours, does not understand God's way of saving people and cannot be a true believer. Ever since the devil taught Cain that the best he could do or bring was sufficient without any sacrifice or shedding of blood he has continued so to teach, or else that the blood of Christ is not sufficient without some works of ours, as a Sunday school superintendent once told me that he could not know that he was saved till he had done his part. From the day that the devil lied to Eve and made God a liar he has been on the same line to the present time. The argument in Rom. iv is full and clear-that salvation is wholly apart from any works of ours and that Abraham was a righteous man before God, apart from circumcision, and the teaching is the same in all the epistles. Yet the false teachers continue to this

We might think that the testimony of Paul and Barnabas as to what they had seen the Lord do in the way of saving uncircumcised gentiles would silence these disturbers at Antioch, but the devil is very persistent and can make a lot of trouble, and the Antioch believers decided to refer the matter to the apostles and elders at Jerusalem by sending Paul and Barnabas as their committee. See how along the way as they journeyed they caused great joy unto the brethren as they declared all things that God had done with them (verses 3, 4), and thus this seemingly unnecessary journey was made to glori-fy God. Rom. viii, 28, is always help-

When they appeared before the council at Jerusalem there was much disputing there also, so it would seem that the false teachers had not all left the city. When Peter found his opportunity he told, or reminded them, how God had sent His Spirit upon the uncircumcised company gathered in the home of Cornelius (verses 6-11; Acts x, 34-48). Then Paul and Barnabas declared what they had seen along similar lines in their missionary tour, telling of the wonders and miracles God had wrought among the gentiles by teams and, forming a line of battle, at them (verse 12). We may imagine how profound the silence was as the council listened to the record of what we have been recently studying in chapters xiii and xiv. Then James, who seemed to be presiding at the tance. What surprised them was that council, summed up the matter and gave the decision that the believers down where they were, covering their among the gentiles must not be troubled about circumcision or anything were the abductors that before the unnecessary for them, but prove, by a elderly folks of the town could even life separated from all idolatry, that collect to observe what was going on they were true followers of Jesus Christ. This was indorsed by the apostles and elders and by the whole church and sent by Paul and Barnabas and two of the chief men among the brethren, Judas and Silas. to the believing gentiles in Antioch. Syria and Cilicia (verses 22, 23). Notice in verse 28 that the Holy Spirit was really the presiding one at the council and led them to their right decision and thus brought joy and comfort to the brethren at Antioch (verse 31). I am often impressed with the fact that the Spirit seems to make so little of a voyage or a journey, as to the time occupied or the incidents by the way or the places visited or passed through. Note in verse 30 they were dismissed from Jerusalem and came to Antioch, and so it is always, as a rule, no matter how long the voyage or the journey. Time and distance and many things that get much attention here seem not to be noticed in heaven whence the angels come and return as a flash of lightning and where 1,000 years are but as yesterday when it is past or as a watch in the night (Ezek. i, 14; Ps. xc, 4). The speech of James gives a most concise summary of the purpose of God in this present age and in the age to come. Now, God is gathering out from all nations a people for His name, His church, the called out ones, the body and bride of Christ, who shall reign with Him when He sets up His kingdom on the earth. His church being completed and caught up to Him in the air, He will return with them to restore to Israel all that the prophets have foretold and to occupy the throne of David; then shall all nations be won to Christ through Israel, who shall be the first righteous nation upon earth, for Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit. From the beginning God saw clearly His eternal purpose which He has purposed in Christ Jesus, our Lord, and which He will in due time accomplish (verses 13 to 18; Eph. iii, 11; Isa. lx, 1-3).

The Most Popular Overland

There is already an enormous demand for this big four cylinder Overland.

With certain improvements, it is the same car of which 55,000 Overlands were sold last season for $750.

The price is $55 less.

Standardization of product and the purchase of raw materials at before - the - war prices, made this reduction in price possible.

It will not be lower, for materials are rising in price.

So order your Overland now, to make sure of getting it.

enthusiastic. Thirty men agreed to join the abductors, and no one of them was over thirty years old, while the great majority were not twenty-five. This looked well for the scheme, for the girls they were to run off had nearly all been born since the settlement of Ladybird and were therefore young.

The very next day after the proposal of the abduction scheme a lady and her husband who were driving through the country with a view to establishing an emigration scheme stopped at Eaglebird and asked for entertainment for the night. They were accommodated, and so long had it been since the men had seen a woman that they treated the lady as though she were a queen. Every man in the town offered to serve her. In the evening they asked if she would not talk to them. It didn't matter what she said; they only wished to listen to the sweet, soft voice of a woman. She consented, and all adjourned to the town hall, where the lady was given a seat on a platform at one end of the room. This is what she said to them:

"Gentlemen, I don't wonder you wish to listen to a woman's voice. You are all refined men, roughened by living without woman's quieting influence. What you need is wives"-

There was a howl of response to this that broke in upon the address. One man whose voice drowned the others gave away the scheme to abduct the young Ladybirds. He was howled down for doing so, since it was to be expected that he had rendered it abortive. When some sort of order was restored the lady spoke again:

"I am not sure but what your plan may be advisable.'

This drew forth a burst of applause.

"Perhaps many of you." the lady continued, "who are educated men may call to mind how those men who settled Rome as you have settled Eaglebird invited their neighbors, the Sabines, to a feast and carried off their daughters. The women became attached to their husbands, and when their fathers and brothers attacked the Romans the women interposed and stopped the fight."

After another howl of approval the lady went on:

"I wouldn't advise so treacherous a method as inviting the Ladybirders to a feast. It is not necessary. Rather wait for some celebration during which the girls are out in a body. My husband and I intend to pass through Ladybird, and I will make inquiries as to a favorable time for your enterprise and advise you."

a given signal moved forward in per fect silence upon the enemy

Their advance was heralded by a scream, but before they were discovered they were within striking disinstead of running away the girls sank faces and shrieking. So expeditious every girl had been carried off and placed on a wagon. Never was an abduction more easily effected. A few of the girls resisted as they were hurried away, but whether or no they deemed resistance useless their struggles were not violent. Once in the wagons, with a guard on either side, they remained quietly where they were, and the caravan set out for Eaglebird.

They had not been long on the way when a guard at one of the wagons went forward to O'Brien and said:

"Some of the girls in the wagon I'm with are snickering." "Snickering? Are you sure it's not hysteria?"

"Hysterics be hanged. It's a girl's real snicker."

Then came other reports of the same kind, and presently the girls began to take note of their abductors, then to ask what they were going to do with them, and before long the train was much like a picnic party.

Well, to make a long story short, Mrs. Harrison on her visit to Ladybird had told of the predicament of a lot of nice young men going downward for want of wives, and after duly preparing the young ladies' minds revealed the coming raid. Gradually she won them over to permitting themselves to be abducted, assuring them that they would not be forced to marry unless they wished.

Within a few hours after the arrival of the train at Eaglebird there was a wedding, and before the day was ended there were two more. The number of spinsters each day grew beautifully less, and in the end but two of them returned to Ladybird.

Eaglebird is now quite a sizable town, comprising churches, schools and all the requisites of civilization. A few great-grandfathers of the present generation are still honored as having been among the band that placed the town on a permanent basis by the raid on Ladybird. The latter town has disappeared, there being no trace of it left except a cemetery, in which has grown up a forest of trees

Our Fallen Heroes,

For the RECORD.) On this memorial day we bring Flowers that bloom in early Spring, In memory of those soldier braves, Who sleep beneath in silent graves.

Thro' all this land so broad and fair. Where freedom reigns like jewels rare. Flowers we strew upon their graves, in memory of those noble braves.

A tribute of respect we owe To heroes who were brave and true; Who gave their lives on fields of gore, To make this country great and free.

Flowers of Spring-time let us spread, In mem'ry of the Nation's dead, And plant the flag on each one's grave— The Stars and Stripes they died to save,

May this great Nation of renown, Cherish their men'ry thro' all time— Their deeds of valor celebrate, With fragrant flowers rare and sweet.

On land and sea, and mountains drear, Fnose heroes fought on fields of gore, To give us this rich land we see, And plant the flag of freedom here.

May this great Nation stronger grow, As days and years shall come and go, 'Till all the Nations of the earth, Shall see its greatness and rejoice.

For Inforcement of Auto Laws.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Anything like rigid enforcement of Maryland's automobile laws, designed to protect the public and the motorists as well, will carry with it an increased staff of outside officers. Automobile owners are so numerous and violations are so requent that the present staff of outside officers is powerless to cope efficiently with the situation. This is what Col. E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Ve-hicles of Maryland said recently in dis-cussing plans for the enforcement of the State laws.

Colonel Baughman has launched a movement against automobilists who fail to comply with the law requiring license tags to be kept clean, properly displayed and so located that at night a light will shine directly upon them. Recently the commissioner in making his trip to Frederick, Colonel Baughman having retained his residence at Braddock Heights, pick-ed up 13 violators of this law between his office in Baltimore and his home at Braddock Heights.

Colonel Baughman has just returned From a trip to Trenton, New York and Philadelphia, where he investigated the methods employed in the enforcement of motor vehicle laws in those cities. The indications are that the new commission-er will inaugurate some entirely new methods of enforcing laws in this State. The policy of the commissioner, as an-nounced just after he took over the affairs of the office, is to cut to a minimum all motor accidents, and to insist on motorists complying with the State automobile laws. - Frederick Post.

Billy Sunday Cost $90,000.

The Billy Sunday campaign in Balti-more cost $90,000. The exact record of nearly every detail of expense was made known on Tuesday for the first time in the report of the treasurer, Joshua Lever-

In the tin pans at the Tabernacle and in cash contributions there was taken in $96,611.42. Of this $40,274.44 was for a free-will offering for Mr. Sunday himself, and $6255.83 was taken up for charitable institutions.

The report shows that all expenses were paid and that the $51,455 guarantee pledges have not been redeemed, but were returned to the persons who sub mitted them.

A little more than $2000 was left on hand and was turned over to the newly formed Evangelistic Association. There are pending bills to be paid from this. This record as well as newspaper clip-pings and a great mass of other data has been filed at the Y. M. C. A. for future reference.

The money that passed through the counting machine at the Baltimore Sub-Treasury amounted to 6600 pounds and the other collections counted at the Bank of Commerce brought the total weight up to about four tons.

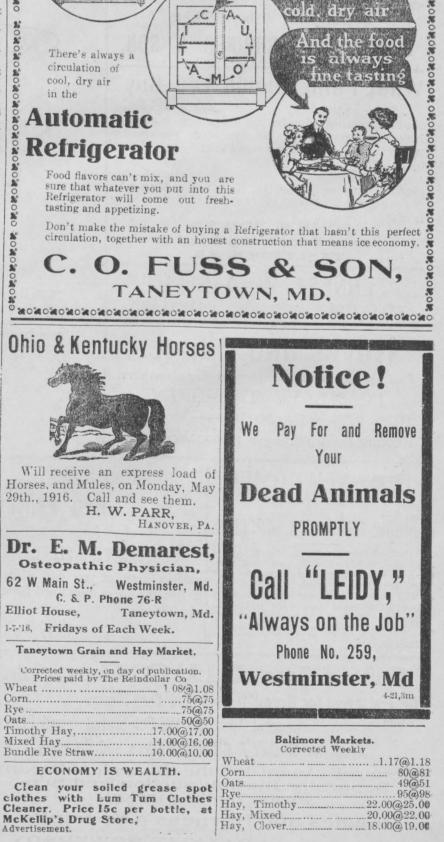

the extracts from State laws (found at end of Grand Jury's report) relating to chance and lottery schemes, as well as to The Tabernacle building cost was $19,-87. The party ate $997.73 worth of food in the eight weeks.

The Baltimore committee included among its expenses $5550 paid in salaries to members of the Sunday party. The incidentals for the campaign amounted to $6578.03. It is not stated what they were

Mr. Sunday had an automobile at his disposal night and day, the cost for this and for supplies being $528.44. The lunches for business women at 218 West Saratoga street cost more than the amount paid by the business women, the extra expense being borne by the committee to encourage attendance.
