BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

Major Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Capt. Archibald Roosevelt, sons of Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt, have arrived in France to join the American

The Carroll County C. E. Convention for 1918 has been invited to meet in St. Mark's Lutheran Church, in Hampstead, and the invitation has been accepted.

During the week, the re-organized Russian Army has made several advances and captured more than 16,-000 prisoners. The army is now said to be well supplied with munitions of Thirty losses against hail damage aggregating $17,368.95, has been paid in the vicinity of Sykesville. Many of the losers carried no insurance, while those who were insured will still be heavy losers.

We acknowledge the receipt of copies of the Annual Report of the State Board of Education, and of the Maryland Agricultural Society, both of which contain a great amount of sta-tistical and other information.

Congress will be asked by the House Military Committee for an appropriation of $639,000,000 for building 22,-625 Airplanes, as part of the great project to end the war by striking Germany many through the air.

About fifty arrests were made in Raltimore, on Monday, for violations of automobile laws, the most of them on account of the new headlight law, which is claimed to be difficult to comply with. Autoists throughout the State are liable to arrest unless this law is observed.

Grant that the outlook is discouraging. Admit that the cost of living is high, that the war promises to be long and costly; let us try to face the future with all possible courage and cheer. If there's any Mark Tapley in us now's the chance for it to come to the surface.

As showing the effect of submarine warfare on English shipping, it is of interest to note that during the week there were 2745 vessels arriving in British ports, and 2846 sailing from them, while submarine destruction is given as 15 merchant ships and 11 small fishing vessels.

The exemption boards for Frederick City and County have organized as follows: City, Joseph D. Baker, Chairman; Eli G. Haugh, Clerk, and Dr. Ira J. McCurdy, Physician; County, William P. Morsell, Chairman; John L. Routzahn, Clerk, and Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, Physician.

The two sections of State Road now being built between Thurmont and Emmitsburg will likely be finished in two weeks. This road is much traveled, the number of machines going to and from Mt. St. Mary's last week making it impossible for Contractor Waesche to keep his men employed several days.

Thirteen suffragists were again arrested in Washington, on Wednesday, on the charge of unlawful assemblage, and six men were also arrested charged with unlawful con-The carrying of banners, by White House pickets, was the cause of the comedy—an "Independence Day" celebration.

Six thousand United States soldiers participated in impressive Independence Day exercises at Gettysburg Wednesday morning. They assembled as two brigades on the portion of the historic field which witnessed the bitter fight of the third day of the great struggle of 1863. About the equestrian statue of Gen. George G. Meade were grouped the men of the famous Fourth Infantry, and with them the newly formed Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth regiments. To the northwest of this assembly were gathered the Seventh Infantry, also an old command, and the new Sixtieth and Sixty-first. Hundreds of recruits who have been in the service less than two weeks appeared in the ranks.

Auto Accidents at Westminster.

Helen Gertrude Long, aged 10 years daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Long, of Westminster, was killed Thursday afternoon by the automobile of the Harry G. Spencer, of Winchester, Va.

The child ran across the street in front of her home to get on a watering cart which was passing when the automobile came along. It struck and knocked her down under the right wheel, which passed over her stomach. She died a few minutes after being rescued. Mr. Spencer was ex-onerated by the jury of inquest after a number of witnesses testified the accident was unavidable.

Another accident occurred near Westminster, when a car driven by J. C. McKinney, of Berrett, struck a concrete abutment. The driver's father, R. C. McKinney, sustained a broken collar bone and bruises, and his sister Gertrude was injured on the leg and body and it is thought her skull was fractured.

LOCAL RED CROSS WORK.

The Navy League organization, of Taneytown, will be merged into a Red Cross branch as soon as the formalities can be complied with, a preliminary meeting to that end having been held on Thursday after-noon. The work has been lagging somewhat in the community, not because of lack of interest, but because of a little slowness in getting into the right channel; but now the outlook is for an aggressive and successful branch Chapter, of which we will speak more fully, next week. Let all get busy and help! Contributions have been coming in, while some have been made but not yet turned over, and will be reported later. All of our people, town and country, are urged to co-operate, and contribute to the extent of their time and ability, in order that the Taney-town Red Cross may be a big success and have material part in the great work that the general Red Cross Society represents.

A Hail and Wind Storm.

On Monday afternoon, about 3:00 o'clock, a heavy gust, accompanied by wind and hail, visited this section, and for a time it was feared that the recent great hail damage was going to be repeated. In the immediate vicinity of Taneytown the damage was slight, but in the Keysville section it was much worse, the fall of hail being heavy and accompanied by more wind.

William H. Devilbiss reports his wheat crop fully half ruined and corn perhaps one-third destroyed, as well as damage to garden and dwelling.

Peter Baumgardner's wheat and corn crop were both very badly injured, especially the wheat, most of which will hardly be worth cutting. The garden, also, was cut to pieces.

Others who suffered like damage in the same neighborhood were Ernest Ritter, Roy Dern, Lewis Wach-ter and Oliver Stonesifer. Between Keymar and Detour, the buildings on Geo. K. Duttera's farm suffered some storm damage. Losers toward Taneytown, were George Winemiller and George Crabbs.

Additional damage was done to wheat and buildings in the direction of Emmitsburg, but the losses, as a rule, were slight.

Western Maryland College.

Western Maryland College, at Westninster, Md., appears in our columns this week in an advertisement soliciting the patronage of our people for another year's enrollment.

It has just celebrated at its recent Commencement the completion of its first fifty years. The success of that occasion in every way proclaimed that "Western Maryland" had made a good record and built up a reputation that was enviable. Men and women can be found all over the State doing credit to its training and there are few communities not represented in the enrollment of its recent years. Altogether it has registered about 3500 students and of these it has graduated over 1000.

Its beautiful location, in the highlands of Maryland, its excellent equipment in buildings and grounds, its well-trained faculty, its up-to-date curriculum, and its charges all kept down to reasonable terms make it an attractive place to get an education. In addition to the usual Classical, Scientific and Historical courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, there are supplementary courses in Music, Elocution, Oratory and Pedagogy. Completion of this last-named course secures the certificate of the State Board of Education.

We commend this Institution to any of our readers who may be considering the question where is my boy or girl to go to College.

Hail-cut Wheat Comes Again.

Hagerstown, Md., July 5.—Several wheat fields in Washington county that were practically cut to pieces by the hail storm of four weeks ago are showing a re-growth and the farmers believe that at least a partial crop, though a little late, will be har-

The most striking instance of a new growth is reported by Frank Blover. between Charlton and the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal in the Clearspring district. After the hail storm Mr. Bloyer estimated that he would not get a bushel of wheat from 50 acres Now he reports that the fields are standing with a new crop, with the wheat nearly up to normal height and heading well. He expects to cut the crop early in August.

Many farmers in the storm belt report that they will get more wheat from their damaged fields than they expected. A number of farmers plowed up their wasted fields and planted sweet corn.

AN APPEAL TO CITIZENS OF CARROLL COUNTY

The County Lagging in Work for the Red Cross Society.

The Red Cross movement in the County is well under way, a central chapter with headquarters at West-minster and several branch chapters having been organized. It is hoped that every town, or district will soon have an organization willing to engage in this noble work. Send your application for membership, accompanied by one dollar ($1.00), to Mrs. Eleanor Robins, Secretary of Carroll County Chapter, Westminster, or to your local Secretary if there is a branch in your section.

While interest has been general and spontaneous, I regret to tell you that the County has not responded as she should to the appeal for con-tributions to the Red Cross War Fund of one hundred million dollars, ($100,000,000). We were allotted twenty-nine thousand dollars ($29-000), but with the campaign almost closed have not raised one-fourth of that amount. This furnishes the on-ly opportunity that many of us will have to give some practical expression to our patriotism, and to assist in the preservation of the highest ideals of humanity. Don't wait for a personal solicitation, but take your contribution to any bank or newspaper in the county, or send it to the undersigned. Payments may be made in four installments if desired. Twenty-five per-cent of the total amount subscribed will be returned to the chapter, if needed to carry on Red Cross work in the county.

Churches, Sunday Schools, Lodges and other organizations are urged to take up collections and to send the amounts raised to their banks, so that the County may receive credit for same. Those who have received Red Cross dividend checks are requested to use them as intended.

Our people have always done their duty and surely will not fail now. Give at once and give generously!

LEWIS K. WOODWARD,

Chairman. Carroll County Chapter of American Red Cross. Westminster, Md., July 4th., 1917.

New Automobile Laws.

The Automobile Club of Maryland s very much "on its job." The special session of the legislature demonstrates that, in three pieces of legis-lation put through. Such skill and activity naturally attracts public notice, especially as there is a regular session coming soon, and it is reasonable to expect more to follow-more. Considerable damage was done on mobile Club.

general public; for it is reasonable to assume the possibility of the public not always being well pleased, with some of the plans and conveniences of the Club; and if this be true, or any likelihood of its being true; then the obvious thing to do is for the said general public to be "on the job" of looking after the said Auto Club's jobs. The three laws are briefly as follows: The first measure was that allowing the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles an additional expenditure of $5,000 per annum for the purpose of employing additional deputy motor-

This bill was advocated by the club mainly for the reason that the large encampment to be established at Annapolis Junction would necessarily attract large numbers of motorists from all over the state, thereby greatly congesting the roads. This additional expenditure will enable the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to the present deputies throughout the entire year if necessary.

The second one was operator's permits to be issued to persons between the ages of 16 and 18 years, conditional upon their passing an examination by the Motor Vehicle Commissioner, and their giving a satisfactory practical demonstration of their ability to operate.

The reason for the Club advocating the passage of this measure was owing to the possibility of a large number of operators and chauffeurs be tween the ages of 20 and 30 volunteering or being drafted to the services of the Federal Government, which would necessarilly make a shortage of drivers of motor vehicles. The third one was the passage of State-wide, anti-glare headlight

The passage of this bill was advo-cated by the club for the reason that the increased night traffic of motor vehicles throughout the State due to the army encampment at Annapolis Junction would only increase the already prevalent dangers of the road at night, due to glaring headlights. Motorists will be given 30 days in which they must reduce the glare of their headlights to comply with the law calling for a light that will not glare over 42 inches above the ground and not more than 75 feet in front of the automobile

The Food Control Question. The Record has been saying very little on the subject of government control of food, for the excellent reason that as yet we have but few clear ideas on the question, nor do we know just what the government proposes to do. Certainly, the President and his commission will aim to be fair to the masses, taking a very broad view of the whole complex situation; and certainly no producing class can justly want to profit unduly because of the enforced necessities of the country at large; and on the other hand, the man who produces food should not be compelled to do so and market it at a loss, but is entitled to a fair profit. We are therefore of the opinion that he whole Food Control effort will work itself out justifiably, as intended, and that the country will be the better off instead of taking chances with "corners" and "com-bines" and everybody fighting uncontrolled for his own interest. Fair dealing, and fair profits should be all that is asked for by one class from another. Also let it be remembered that this is not a good time to call names, nor to make extreme statements. Neither is it a good time to exercise the motto, "Let the Devil take the hind-most," for in one way or another the prosperity and happiness of every class is closely allied with that of every other class, and the lop-sided, or ill-gotten gain, is not likely to stick permanently. So, let us give this Food Control proposition a fair trial. If it is unjust, it will not last; and, while the trial is going on, let us take stock of our own personal opinions and see whether they are fully just and honest not only as between man and man, but between man and the Great Giver.

23 States Bone Dry.

Washington, July 1.—Twenty-three states are now bone dry. The Reed amendment prohibiting shipment of iquor into any territory where its manufacture or sale is prohibited, went into effect last midnight.

Eleven other states are partially affected by the legislation which has been hailed by temperance advocates as the greatest single step toward abolition of the liquor traffic yet taken in the nation's history.

The law bars from prohibition areas, whether states or smaller corporations, all mail matter containing advertisements or solicitations for orders for intoxicants, a provision designed to aid in enforcing the antishipment feature by suppressing the activities of mail-order houses in dry territory.

New Plan for Raising Potatoes.

We give on the Editorial Page of this issue, a most interesting and remarkable plan for growing potatoes in pens. The article is too long for our news pages, but it is of such importance that we give it space on second page, and advise that it be read. If the plan is a success, as claimed, it will revolutionize the potato industry.

REGULATIONS FOR DRAFT AND EXEMPTIONS.

Duties of Boards.

Washington, July 2.—Regulations govern the next step toward selecting a national war army from the millions registered for service on June 5, were issued today at the direction of President Wilson. They leave to be prescribed later the manner of determining the order of liability of the man registered but set forth in great men registered, but set forth in great detail the method of arriving at exemptions and the work generally of local and district boards already named to carry out the task.

Exemption regulations add little to the terms of the Draft Law, the question whether a man between the ages of 21 and 30 is entitled to exemption because of dependents, the nature of his occupation or physical unfitness being for the boards to decide after proper investigation. It is made very clear, however, that there are to be no class exemptions and that each individual case must be decided upon its merits. The local boards—one for each county of less than 45,000 population, or city of 30,000, with additional boards where necessary for each additional 30,000 populationwill pass upon claims for exemption except those based upon industrial or agricultural occupation, subject to appeal to the district boards. All cases involving agricultural or industrial exemptions will be passed upon by the district boards-one for each fed eral judicial district-which also will also decide appeals from decisions of the local boards.

In the near future a date will be set by Brigadier General Crowder, provost marshal general, for the meeting and organization of the boards. At the same time it is expected that the selection regulations will be promulgated, so that the process may be put under way without delay. The present intention is to call the men selected to the colors about September 1, or as soon thereafter as the cantonments to house them can be completed. Upon organization, the local boards will take over from the registration boards all registration cards, which they will number serially and list for posting to public view. Then, after having been advised of the method by which the order of liability for service shall be determined and of the quota to be drawn from its territory (minus credits for enlistments in the National Guard or Regular Army), each board will prepare a list of persons designated for service in the order of their liability, post the list, give it to the press and within three days send notice to each designated person by mail. As the men so notified appear the boards first will make a physical examination in accordance with special regulations to be provided, bearing in mind that all persons accepted by them will be re-examined by army surgeons. If the physical examination is passed successfully, then comes the question of exemption.

Persons who must be exempted or discharged by the local board in-Officers of the United States, of the states, territories and the District of Columbia; ministers of religion, students of divinity, persons in the military or naval service of the United States, subjects of Germany, all other aliens who have not taken officers, custom-house clerks, workout first papers, county or municipal men in federal armories, arsenals and navy yards, persons in the federal service designated by the President for exemption, pilots, merchant marine sailors, those with a status with respect to dependents render their exclusion desirable (a married man with dependent wife or child, son of a dependent widow, son of dependent, aged or infirm parent or brother of dependent orphan child under 16 years of age), those found morally deficient and any member of any well-recognized religious sect existing May 18, 1917, whose creed forbids participation in war and whose religious convictions accord with the Claims for exemption because of dependents may be made by the man himself, his wife or other dependents or by a third party who has personally investigated the case. A claim made by the husband must be accompanied by supporting affidavits signed by the wife and by the head of a family residing in the same territory. A claim by the wife or a third party must be accompanied by two supporting affidavits signed by heads of families. Similar rules govern claims on the grounds of other dependents, the dependents or third parties being authorized to file claims with supporting affidavits. In each case the board must be satisfied before it grants exemption or discharge that the dependent or dependents actually are supported mainly by the fruits of the man's mental or physical labor.

Local boards are required, subject to appeal, to pass upon claims for exemption or discharge within three days after the filing of affidavits.

District boards must decide appeal cases within five days after the closing of proofs and their decisions are final. If the ruling of a local board is affirmed the person in question stands finally accepted for military

In passing on claims for exemption on the ground of employment in necessary industrial and agricultural occupations the district boards must be convinced that the particular enterprise affording such employment actually is necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or national interest during the emergency.

"The evidence must also establish," the regulations says, "even if the particular industrial enterprise or par-Full Official Regulations and the ticular agricultural enterprise is found necessary for one of the above purposes, that the continuance of such person therein is necessary to the maintenance thereof and that he can-not be replaced by another person without direct, substantial, material oss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the parti-cular industrial enterprise or agricultural enterprise in which he is en-

> Later the President may from time to time designate certain industries or classes of industries that are necessary and the district boards will be so notified. ## Automobiles in the United States.

Washington, July 1.-There were 1,067,332 more motorcars registered in 1916 in the United States than in 1915. This was an increase of 43 per-cent. The gross total of registered cars, including commercial cars, was 3,512,996; the number of motorcycles registered was 250,820. The several States collected in registra-tion and license fees, including those of chauffeurs and operators, a total gross revenue of $25,865.75. gross revenue of $25,865.75.

Of this, 92 per-cent. or $23,910,811 was applied directly to construction, improvement or maintenance of the public roads in forty-three States, according to figures compiled by the office of public roads of the Department of Agriculture of Agriculture. The figures for 1916 correspond very closely with the annual percent-age increase of motorcar registration of the last three years. This yearly increase has averaged 40 per-cent. in the number of cars and 50 per-cent.

revenues. When viewed over a period of years, the increase in motorcar registration and gross revenue has been remarkable. In 1906 the total State regis trations were approximately 48,000 cars, on account of which the several States collected in fees and licenses a total gross revenue of about $190,000. Only a small part of this was applied to road work. In 1916 the $25,865 369.75 collected formed nearly 9 cent. of the total rural and 1

How Wheat is Being Marketed.

Farm and Fireside says: haps a greater value will be derived this year than ever before from storing the wheat crop on the farm. There are two reasons for this—first, the shortage of freight cars, resulting from the congestion of freight on the Atlantic seaboard; second, the lower price a bushel during the early threshing season.

"This much lower price of wheat necessarily results from inability to get transportation facilities, from the greater risk and, hence, greater margin taken by elevators to handle grain before it has gone through the sweating process, and from the fact that whole grain trade knows that great quantities of wheat will be marketed during July August, and September, whatever the price may

Living and doing have become things of the present. and not of either the past or future. So, what matters it how old we are, or of plans for the future, or of reflections over the past, for we just keep on, and on, going, presumably doing the best we can; and as everybody else is doing just the same, what we may do, or want to do, makes a very slight ripple on the surface of life, even in a little corner of this big old world of ours.

"Feed My Sheep."

This was the command given three imes to Peter, by Christ, after asking he question, "Lovest thou Me?" d it is the question and command has been coming down to us, ch the centuries, just as it came to Peter. Christ never meant His teachings to apply only to the Apostles, and to the people of His day His word is as much the rule and guide of all of our transactions with mankind as it was when first uttered. It has never been repealed, nor modified.

The difficulty is, we profess our leve, and Ananias like withhold an the French army by certain Ameriservice. We read the "Book of Books" as though it was ancient history, bearing no relation to our day and obligations. We fail to understand that the parables and figures of speech, as well as the more direct established against graft, they are apt commands of our Lord, concern us as vitally as they concerned Peter and others of the olden times. We are, as literally as it is possible to be, "slackers" in our duties as professed Christians.

applicable to them, some more so a competent opinion whether it is paythan others, but noneso directly and positively as the present. Our very prosperity and wealth stands as our condemnation. Selfishness, greed, lack of charity, boastfulness of personal achievements and power-all have led to a wholesale, world-wide, failure to "Feed My Sheep!"

Is it a too extreme conclusion that God is using this terrible European war, in part, as a means of compelling us to give up some of our accumulated prosperity that we should have voluntarily given to "the sheep" long ago? Is it a means of compelling us to realize our own weakness and inability to manage the affairs of the world, as well as our own smaller af-

THE CARROLL RECORD us that, whether we want to, or not, we must respond to demands beyond our control, and to assume heavy and unwelcome tax burdens? To feed the sheep on the battlefields and in the war devastated lands, whether we want to or not?

We must believe something very like just this, or lack faith in the wisdom of God himself. We dare not blame all of the iniquities of the war on Europe, for retribution to the whole world may be concealed within the war, and we must pay our share; it may be complainingly, grudgingly. without recognition of the justice of it, but nevertheless rightfully. And, while we are loosening up some of our in trust held cash, there are other great things happening that are worth noticing as they appear; for instance, the terrific blows being given the liquortraffic, and the tottering thrones of inherited and unmerited Kingships. So, if one is willing, the Divine purposes underlying the war may be reasonably guessed at.

Just now, the vital fact confronting us, is, what we are going to do with such pressing appeals as are being made by the Red Cross organization. We can critise man-caused wars, and man-made tax laws, but we can not criticise such a "sheep feeding" institution as the Red Cross. It is finding both "sheep" and "lambs" in plenty ir battle-scarred Europe, but, we must furnish the "feed," or be condemned for defiance of Holy writ.

Worse Than Politics.

The Republicans played politics,in the legislature, but the Democrats played a worse game, in not allowing the bill to pass, with its Wilson law rider, giving our state troops the right to vote while away from home ir the service of our country. There is no defense in preserving such a disreputable trick ballot as that used ir the Wilson law counties, in these days, and sooner or later it is going to work harm to its defenders—in fact has already done so, not only in depriving the soldiers of their votes, but in the minds of many fair-minded voters throughout the state, who look beyond mere party "get there."

To say that it was not the time to discuss the Wilson law, because of its not being a war measure, is begging the question, because it is always time to fight for a fair expression of the will of the people. We wonder what would have been the outcome, had the vote bill passed and a lot of the "darkies" from the Wilsonized counties, as soldiers, applied for the privilege of voting? Would they have been followed up with the "educational test" ballots, or would they have been permitted to try to vote a white man's ballot? We wonder, too, how the resident whites would like it, were all of the colored laborers to co-operate with them to the fullest emigrate from these counties. Per- degree.—Balt. American. haps they would be very much in the position of California, at present, where the "Chinese wall" has resulted in a wailing for more laborers.

We suspect that the recent legislative "stand pat" exhibition was more a matter of temper than good sense, and mighty bad politics, as well. At least, the situation has placed Maryland in a laughing-stock publicity before other states, where such brands of political ingenuity are not indulged in, and the result will be embarrassment to thousands of "Maryland boys" when election day comes around as they will be disfranchised, equally with several hundred ignorant colored voters in a small section of the state.

War Contracts.

Graft follows in the trail of war like disease and fleas. The story of embalmed beef is inseparably linked with our Spanish-American conflict. Already paper soled boots, supplied honest accounting, both of money and cans, have gone down into history. We must have no more of this business, evidence of which has begun to show itself at Washington.

It is a situation of peculiar difficulty. If checks and protections are to become systems of red tape that delay action. This is a time when no delay is possible. What the Governments needs is competent, practical advice in every department. When it advertises for bids for any article, All ages have had the same truth it should know to whom to go to get ing too much. And it is no time for splitting cents. Haste sometimes makes it necessary to accept bids known to be too high.

A great deal can be done by appeal ing to the patriotism of the manufacturers. The banks and bond houses gave their services free to sell the Liberty Bonds. Now let the contractors do something correspondingly fine. It will tarnish the name of the American commercial world, if while our boys are risking their lives in the trenches, the vultures at home are to make money out of their needs.

A contractor who charges more than a low return on his money may make a dollar. But he will get little s, as we choose? Does it show to satisfaction out of his gains. Palaces erected by such funds will be but monuments of ignominy. A reputation of gouging the government at this time will follow a man to the grave. If the thing is put up right to the manufactures, they will in most cases respond. They should be made to feel that low figures are their share of the general burden, and they will be happier all their lives for having helped the government make its money go as far as possible.—Frederick

Reluctant Volunteers.

The figures of the enlistments in the regular army so far reveal once more the weakness of the volunteer system. The opponents of conscription have always made a great point of the eagerness of citizens to serve if left to their own patriotic feelings. But everybody's duty is seldom well done by anybody. No doubt the fact that men are to be drafted from the registry lists has something to do with the slowness of the response to the President's call for volunteers.

But it is tolerably clear that in any case a force adequate to the emergency would not have been secured in this way. There is perhaps a general realization of the national need, but intellectual conviction is a different thing than enthusiasm. When something happens to bring home to the mass of the people the fact that we are now actually fighting Germany on land and sea, such as a great battle in which American soldiers or sailors are engaged, there will be a change in popular feeling.-Phila. Ledger.

Neutrals' False Hopes.

Holland is entertaining the belief that the United States is not in earnest in its food export control position. Holland will have an awakening. The Netherlands and the Scandinavian countries are the ones that will feel the full effects of the regulation. These are the countries that have been, together with Switzerland, believed to be sending American commodities into Germany. Holland has experienced a big jump in the bulk of certain food exports into Germany and these were of the kind derived from the United States.

Germany is slumbering in the belief that the United States does not mean half it says-that is Germany aside from official Berlin. Holland has doubtless imbibed similar sentiments from its neighbor. But the United States means all it says and all that it is doing. And the practice of shipping imports from the United States into Germany will absolutely cease. If Holland wants to enjoy the confidence of this country and the largest possible measures of benefits from its exports, it will cease to belittle the policies announced and

GROWING POTATOES IN PENS. New Discovery in Potato Growing Saves Labor and Land.

Forty-two bushels of potatoes in the season of 1916 from a plot of ground only eight feet square, or an equivalent of more than 28,000 bushels to the acre of ground space used, was the astonishing feat of R. E. Hendricks, a resident of Kansas City,

Like all great discoveries, Mr. Henrick's method of raising potatoes is founded on such simple elemental principles that one wonders "why some one didn't think of it before." He had often watched the potato pile in the cellar bin, which every spring sent out its shoots through every possible crack and crevice. Sometimes these sprouts would crawl out along the floor a distance of seven feet in order to reach the light. From this beginning he conceived the idea that if this pile was removed out into the open and given soil and fertilizer, with proper conditions of light and moisture, the potatoes would grow and reproduce their kind.

Three years ago he built what he called a "potato pen," which was nothing more nor less than a huge potato hill, the sides of which were supported by a loosely constructed inclosure, built after the fashion of an old rail fence. Within this inclosure, only 8x8 feet in size, he planted his potatoes in thin layers of dirt and manure, piling one layer on another until the pen was 8 feet high. The "potato pen" became a mound of green. He had found that his potatoes not only grew better than they did in the cellar, but that at digging time he was able to harvest forty bushels of as fine potatoes as are grown anywhere. The following year he secured thirty-two bushels in the same size pen, and last year the astonishing total of forty-two

The details of the construction and management of these "potato pens," as described by Mr. Hendricks, outline a plan by which any one having acss to a plot of ground no larger than a flower bed can raise all the potatoes needed for an average family for a whole year. The potato pens may be built 8 feet wide by any length just so they are built strong enough to keep the sides from spreading. Most any kind of good stout material can be used. If light lumber or boards are used the pen may be braced through the center with wires. Rich earth and well-rotted manure must be on hand in sufficient quantities to fill the pen to the top.

The potato pen, as described, is built 6x8 feeet, inside measurement, and is 6 feet high. The pen is built as each layer is placed and planted. You can use one by six inch boards for the ends and sides, leaving a 2½-inch space between the boards for the potato sprouts to come through. Start the pen with a six-inch layer of dirt. Then mark off the plot a foot apart each way, allowing six inches of space for dirt all around between the outer row of potatoes and the inside of the pen Plant a potato seed at every cross line or intersection of the plot, forty-eight hills to the layer of dirt. Then put an inch or two of well-rotted manure over the potatoes and sprinkle well with water. Then lay six inches more of dirt, mark off as before, plant, manure and water again. Repeat this operation with enough layers to fill the pen to the top. To keep the dirt from falling out of the pen as the layers are placed, draw up old straw or hay against the cracks or crevices.

As the pen rises place on the fourth layer of dirt in the center of one side, about two feet above the ground, a "moist tester." This is made of any piece of timber about the size of the arm, a piece of four by four inches by three feet long, placed so it will protrude from the pen about a foot. After the potatoes have been planted three weeks loosen the tester, pull out and run your hand in to determine the moisture. By so doing you will know how much water to use on the pen. After the tester has been once removed this can be repeated once or twice a week. Watch the tester and keep the dirt in proper condition. The pen should be near a water supply, so that it can be well watered during dry weather. It should be watered from the top about twice a week unless rainfall is sufficient. The "moist tester" will always enable the grower to determine the proper moisture conditions. The top layer of dirt should be sloped gently toward the center, so the ground will absorb and not shed rain; but care should be taken that mud be prevented from forming on top and baking to a crust. When the earth is dry the mound should be sprinkled on the top and

The potato vines will grow to the top and sides of the pen (the nearest way to the light), emerging through the crevices and concealing the timbers with a coat of green. When the potatoes are matured the pen may be taken down, the potatoes rolled out of the thin covering with a rake, and the material, dirt and manure saved and used again and again.

Potato pens may be started as early and as late as possible, giving potatoes ninety days to mature, except the early ones. The usual time of planting potatoes in the North is from March to June; but under this method the potatoes may be planted much later than is possible under open field conditions, where the factor of hot, dry weather must always be taken in consideration. With irrigation and every possible condition of good potato growing-moisture, ventilation and drainage-always under his control, the grower is virtually certain of his crop. In his experi-ments Mr. Hendricks used the Red Early Ohios for seed, cutting two eyes to a good-sized piece. This year he is experimenting with other adaptations of his plan and expects to have some interesting announcements to make by next November. Mr. Hendricks is backed in his work by a good wife, and his neighbors of twenty years' standing vouch for his honesty and integrity.

The possibilities of this new method of raising potatoes, in the saving of labor and of land, are amazing to contemplate. When outside conditions are unfavorable the production can be carried on successfully under glass and shipping from warmer climes made unnecessary. With such a cheap source of food supply within reach of all the people of the earth, the specter of famine and the day of high-priced foods will become a thing of the past.—H. M. George.

Our druggist advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. I took a bottle home and the first dose relieved me wonderfully, and I kept on taking them until I was cured." #### CAPONIZE THE ROOSTERS.

Birds So Treated Return a Much Greater Profit to Poultrymen.

Make capons of the young roosters, thus doubling the pounds of market poultry and increasing its quality. Market it next February and March, when there is no other supply of fresh poultry available. This result can be accomplished at a profit to the poultry raiser, besides supplying the consumer with a strictly fresh, high quality prodact, at a time when no other can be

Ordinarily the young roosters are put on the market during the hot months of the year, when there is an abundance of poultry for sale at comparatively low prices. By caponizing them they will make a profitable growth every day up to February or March, when they can be sold at good prices. They can be profitably carried even a month or two longer if desired.

Half the chickens hatched, or nearly so, will be male birds. Sold in the ordinary way, this half of all our poultry will reach the markets during the hot months of July, August and September. It will be too hot to put them in cold storage at that time. Held as roosters, they soon become staggy and tough and will not be worth much on the market and must then be sold at a loss. If all are forced on the market or any considerable part of them at the tender, acceptable frying stage in July and August the price is bound to go away down, and they must be sold at

* The most expensive, risky part of the poultry business is to raise the chicks to the two pound frying size. The only practical way to save the male half of the flocks so that they will be fit and available for food when needed is to make capons of them. This should be done when they are from six to eight weeks old or when they weigh a pound and a half to two pounds, which should be between the ages given. Any time between these ages and weights will be all right.

It is these young males that spoil the egg crop. Caponize them. Market only infertile eggs and get more for them and at the same time make the capons the most profitable part of the poultry business.

TAKE CARE OF EGGS.

Farmers Should Candle Them For Their Own Advantage.

That it would pay the farmer to candle eggs is the opinion of N. L. Harris, superintendent of the poultry plant at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

During the hot weather it is an advantage to the farmer to candle the eggs for two important reasons-to avoid selling eggs that may have become spoiled from lying in the sun or being gathered from stolen nests and to satisfy oneself that the merchant to whom he is selling is justified in the return of eggs.

One of the most satisfactory and least expensive methods is to make a roll or tube of common brown paper, which should be twelve inches long and the size of the egg in circum. ference. Place one end of the tube so that the sun can shine on the egg. With this device one can determine the spoiled eggs from the good ones.

By observing the size of the air cell in the end of the large end of the egg it is possible to determine the age of the egg or the length of time it has been allowed to evaporate. If this simple method is followed there is no reason why there should be a loss when the eggs are marketed.

Why Salt Kills Chickens.

Salt will kill chickens only when they have not been accustomed to getting salt as a part of their daily feed. Because they have not had salt for a long period and have a marked craving for it they will consume an excessive amount if salt is put before them. An excessive amount of salt will produce galt or alkaline poisoning. Salt when used in proper and regular amounts is a good thing for all classes of farm animals

Poultry Needs Fresh Water.

Change the water in the drinking fountains as often as you will, you can never be sure that some diseased bird is not contributing a share of germs to the hennery health. Old. stale, unchanged water is pretty sure to foment trouble for the poultryman who permits its presence on the place.

CARE OF THE PULLETS.

Suitable and Abundant Food Necessary

to Make Egg Producers. Whether the flock of pullets will produce eggs next winter when prices are high will depend, among other things, upon the care given to the flock in late summer and fall, writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. The most essential thing is to provide suitable food and plenty of Any of the various grains grown upon our farms will fill the bill, but it is best to have a variety. Oats are not as suitable as wheat because of the large amount of husks that cover the meats. Fowls will not eat this grain as readily as wheat and corn.

There is nothing superior to wheat for the development of bone and muscle and the promotion of a general condition of health and vigor in the growing birds. We are taking it for granted that the flock has the free range of the fields. In this way not only will the flock secure a considerable portion of its food, grain that would otherwise be lost, but the exercise taken in these hunting excursions is most beneficial in securing strong, vigorous, stocky layers. In this way, too, the much needed animal food, an essential part of a properly balanced ration for growing fowls, is secured at no extra expense to the owner. There is also a further saving made in preventing injury to crops through the destruction of vast numbers of bugs and insects gathered in by the flock. One summer our flock of about 100 Brown Leghorns had the free range of five and one-half acres of cucumber vines, and the greater share of the day was spent by them in hunting for bugs and other insect life that always propagate so freely during the summer months. When dressing the male birds our children would frequently call our attention to the large numbers of hard shelled bugs with which their crops were stuffed. The chickens appeared to be fond of cucumbers, and there was some loss in this way. However, by slicing the large, unsalable cucumbers and placing them where they were most handy the loss in this was not of any consequence. A flock of chickens must be working a good deal of harm before I should consider it profitable to coop them in pens.

ARE MAKING USE

Maryland Farmers Organizing Loan Associations.

TO TAKE

Aid Of County Demonstration Agents Can Be Secured In Organization.

College Park, July 5 .- In co-operation with the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, the Extension Service of the Maryland State College of Agriculture, through its county demonstration agents, has begun a campaign of education, with a view of making the farmers of Maryland better acquainted with the Federal Farm Loan Act and its uses.

It has been recognized from the beginning that the farmer would be slow to take hold of the idea of a new kind of banking institution; and that especial efforts would have to be made to arouse popular interest in the organization of the Farm Loan Associations in the various counties. In order to accomplish these ends, the Extension Service has just published Bulletin No. 4, entitled, "The Federal Farm Loan Act and The Farmer," by F. B. Bomberger, Assistant Director.

This bulletin is designed to present n simple language such directions and explanations as will enable any group of farmers, who desire to borrow money upon the security of their farm lands, to proceed step by step in the organization of a National Farm Loan Association, and actually to do the things necessary to be done in order to receive from the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, the loans which they may desire in order to finance their farming operations.

The bulletin explains the purposes of the law and furnishes the general outlines of the Farm Loan System. Then follow the successive steps necessary to be followed in the formation of the organization. Blank forms of organization, provided by the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, are printed in the bulletin in order to make very explicit exactly how the association is to be formed and how it is to proceed after it has been organized.

In discussing the scope of territory to be included in any one association, it is pointed out that the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, recommends that the county be made the unit of organization, and that the Secretary-Treasurer be located at the countyseat where the records of the county will be readily available.

Any ten farmers who desire to borrow an aggregate amount of $10,000 may form an association, although it is desirable to have more than ten in the initial organization. A farm may borrow any sum from $100 to $10,000.

After a charter has been granted to the original association, any farmer of the county must borrow through the county association.

An interesting feature of the System is that each borrower must become a member of the County Association by investing five per cent. of the proceeds of his loan in the stock of the Association. This stock will participate in the earnings of the Association and the amount invested in the stock will be returned to the borrower when his loan is paid off.

All loans run for the period of thirtysix years, but the borrower may pay off the loan at any time after five years. An interesting feature of the system is the fact that the borrower is required to pay an annual installment of one per cent. on the principal in addition to the interest. Thus, at present the loans bear interest at nve per cent. and by adding one per cent., making a total of six per cent. per year, the loan is fully paid off in thirty-six years.

The advantages inherent in this system of long term loans, with low rate of interest and the privilege of paying off the principal of the loan in annual installments of only one per cent., should make it very attractive to farmers who want to borrow money upon their farm land. These features remove the dangers that have heretofore attended the borrowing of money upon short term mortgages and do away with the expense of making new mortgages and securing new loans.

THE HOME GARDEN.

College Park, July 5.-Maryland farmers are taking especial pains with their home gardens this year. They are aiming to keep up a constant and sufficient supply of vegetables for their own use and for their local markets. They are accomplishing this purpose by adopting a rotation of garden crops that will keep every foot of garden soil busy during the growing season. In a bulletin recently issued by the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, S. B. Shaw, specialist in Horticulture, says: "The systematic rotation of farm crops has been advocated for a number of years, the principal end in view being an improvement of soil fertility. A well planned rotation of garden crops brings about this same result and, in addition, accomplishes two other purposes. It affords a greater amount of food supplies for a longer period of time, and, to a certain extent, it aids in the control of certain insects and diseases."

absence of beauty, but beauty cannot supply the absence of good nature.—Goldsmith.

GOOD DISHES.

The soy bean is being extensively grown and is a most profitable field

Black Bean Soup .- Soy beans are of different varieties and colors, but all contain a valuable amount of protein and are rich in food values. Soak the beans overnight and parboil them. This may take a little longer than the time required for the navy bean; then put into a kettle with beef or hock bones and simmer gently for four hours, add salt, a whole onion, and pepper. Boil the beans until soft, then put through a sieve, add a little butter and flour creamed together for a binding, and a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce, a hard-cooked egg, finely chopped, and one and a half tablespoonfuls of lemon

Baked Beans With Sour Cream .-Soak three cupfuls of beans overnight and in the morning parboil with a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda. Drain, place in earthen baking dish with salt, pepper and a little olive oil or butter. Turn over the top a cupful of thick sour cream, cover and cook slowly four or five hours. Uncover the last hour and add a half cupful of sugar or less if desired sweet-

Whole Wheat Ginger Bread.—Take a half cupful each of sugar and molasses, a cupful of sour milk, a teaspoonful of shortening, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of ginger, and two and a half cupfuls of whole-wheat flour. Mix well and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with whipped cream as a desesrt. Kidney Bean Salad .- Take a can of kidney beans, one-half cupful of celery diced, a cupful or less of nut meats, a shredded green pepper, serve on lettuce with French dressing.

To occupy the guests before the dishes are ready a fruit cocktail or a cup of hot boullion may be served. Six people are plenty to be served from a chafing dish; if there are two in operation more guests may be sup-

But talking is not always to converse.

-Cowper. SEASONABLE DISHES.

Cook separately until tender potato balls or small, even-sized potatoes, heets of the same size and small button onions, two cupfuls of each. When well chilled, marinate each in French dressing, roll the potato balls in parsley and celery leaves finely minced, (8 8) and heap them in a bed of lettuce on a platter. Around these arrange the onions, and the beets outside against the green of the lettuce.

Mocha Macaroons.-Make a custard with the yolks of four eggs, one-half cupful of strong coffee. Add six tablespoonfuls of powdered macaroons to this and bake the custard until set. When cold, cover with the whites of the eggs whipped stiff with a quarter of a cupful of boiling hot sirup and a half cupful of whipped cream. Garnish with candied cherries and an-

Crumbs of brown bread rolled fine and stirred into cream makes a change which is well liked.

Winchester Nut Bread .- Dissolve a half cupful of brown sugar and threefourths of a cupful of hot water; add a half cupful of molasses and threefourths of a cupful of milk; stir two cupfuls of entire wheat flour and a cupful of bread flour sifted with two and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of soda, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt and three-fourths of a cupful of coarsely chopped walnut meats. Turn into a buttered pan and bake an hour and a quarter.

Cheese Eggs .- Butter a baking dish or six ramekins and spread the bottom with grated American cheese; slip in six eggs, dust with salt and pepper and cover with more cheese, using three-fourths of a cupful; cover with buttered crumbs and barely cover with cream. Set in hot water and bake slowly until the eggs are set-about ten to twelve minutes. German Filled Noodles -Cut noodle dough into strips four inches long and three inches wide: spread with seasoned, cooked spinach and place another piece of noodle dough on top; pinch together like turnovers and drop into well-seasoned soup stock to cook about ten minutes. Any left-over may be rolled in parmesan cheese and fried.

Rev. W. A. Martin, assistant rector. Miss Anna Fink, a sister of the bridegroom acted as maid-of-honor and Joseph Consedine was the best man. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white crepe de chine trimmed in Duchess lace. She wore a tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms and carried bride's roses.

The maid of honor wore a gown of white crepe de meteor, trimmed with val. lace. She carried a bouquet of pink Killarney roses. Following the ceremony a bridal reception was held at the Fink residence. Mr. and Mrs. Fink will take up their residence in this city after a bridal tour that will include Boston, Mass., New York, Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

The bride is one of our choicest young ladies; from a little girl she has grown up in our midst, honored by old and young alike. She has ever been a bright star in the home circle and now she has gone to reign as queen in her own home.

The groom is also from one of our best families and by those who know him in this borough, he is considered one of the substantial and coming young men of the community, who will make his mark as a worthy son of honorable parents. The congratulations were numerous on this happy event, and this paper is greatly pleased on this occasion to add its hearty good wishes to those being so freely extended."

CULTIVATION OF CORN.

Too Frequent Stirring of the Ground When Dry May Do Harm.

Cultivation is of greatest importance in the early growth of corn, according to L. E. Call, professor of agronomy in the Kansas State Agriculture col-

The harrow may often be used to advantage after planting on both listed and surface planted corn, but when the shoots of the surface planted corn are just out of the ground it is not best to harrow again until the corn is two or three inches high. Weeds that are just germinating or that have not yet obtained a good root hold on the soil are easily killed by light cultivation with the harrow or the weeder.

The lister cultivator is admirably adapted for cultivating listed corn. Ordinarily it is used twice, once with the disks set to throw the soil away from the corn and once with the disks set to throw it toward the corn. It is important that the cultivator be set to kill or cover all the weeds in the row. Those which escape the early cultivation cannot, as a rule, be destroyed later. The shovel cultivator is used in cultivating corn after it becomes too high to harrow or, in the case of listed corn, after the ridges have been worked down with the lister cultivator. The number of cultivations depends on the type of soil, on the distribution of the rainfall and on whether the weeds are unusually numerous.

Experiments show that from three to six cultivations are as many as are practical. Too frequent stirring of the ground, especially when it is dry, may do harm, in that the dusty condition of the soil is effective in keeping rainwater from entering the soil readily. The ideal condition in which to maintain the soil is to have a mulch two or three inches deep, composed of small lumps mixed with small granules and reasonably free from dust. On the average it is best to cultivate two or three inches deep. While the plants are small and before the roots occupy the space between the rows the ground may be stirred deeply with good results. After the roots have permeated all the soil it should not be cultivated to a depth of more than three

An extra cultivation or two with a one horse cultivator may be given to advantage if rains have heavily crested the soil after the corn has been "laid by" and if a crop of weeds is starting. When the ground is in good tilth and reasonably free from weeds nothing is gained by cultivating after the ordinary "laying by" time. Late cultivations should always be shallow to avoid damaging the corn crops.

Sheep on the Farm.

People are rapidly learning that mutton is the most delicious, nutritious and healthful of all meats. This growing appreciation is creating an insistent demand, which, together with the decrease in production, has made prices high and has opened new opportunities for profitable sheep husbandry on the average farm. Formerly sheep production was largely a range industry, but since the ranges have been so materially reduced it is becoming more and more a part of the business of the general farm.

Pasture For Swine.

Pork production is cheaper with grain and green forage crops than with grain alone. Some grain is necessary for fattening hogs on pasture. Clover and alfalfa rank among the best crops for swine pasture.

An acre of clover had a value, in replacing corn in the ration, of $101.02 in one test made by the Ohio agricultural experiment station, with corn valued at $1.68 a bushel. Red clover ranked first among swine forage crops

Cow's Milk For Foals.

If the mare has no milk and the foal has to be raised by hand, feed it new milk from a cow poor in butter fat, says the Farm and Journal. Add warm water, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of limewater to each pint of milk fed. Give the milk in half pint doses once an hour at first, gradually increasing the meals and the length of time between meals.

Rice Bran Makes Soft Pork.

That a rice bran ration will cause hogs to dress soft, thereby lowering their quality and their market value, has just been proved by tests conduct. ed at the Texas experiment station.

Ministers Tried to See a Navy Yard on Passes Made Out to Others and Got Into Trouble.

Two clergymen received a rather severe lesson on the dangers of trying to see the Charlestown navy yard on passes not intended for their use, the Boston Transcript states. They were arrested, taken to the marine barracks and "detained," pending identification by friends.

The clergymen obtained passes which were made out in the names of two of their friends, and which were supposed to be nontransferable, like all passes issued at the yard. The visitors succeeded in gaining admittance and got as far as the deck on one of the battleships, which they were specially interested in viewing. As soon as they stepped on the deck they were challenged by the guard, who asked to see their passes and who obtained their names. When he had looked over the passes the guard called attention to the difference in the names given and those on the cards. On being questioned further the clergymen had to admit that the passes had not been made out for them, but had been bor-

They were promptly marched to the barracks, under order from Commander R. D. Hasbrouck, captain of the yard, and held for two hours until their friends arrived and identified them. After a severe lecture the clergymen were permitted to leave.

SECRET CIPHER ON MACHINE

Code Messages Can Be Produced on New Typewriter by Writing on Keyboard in Usual Way.

You can write secret cipher letters on a typewriter recently placed on the market. The machine makes its own cipher and offers more than a million combinations. To make a cipher, the message is written on the keyboard in the ordinary way. The cipher is determined by a detachable plate or disk containing 30 holes in two concentric circles of 15 holes each. For each of these holes there is a pin, and to make a cipher combination these pins may be inserted in or left out of any of the holes, as fancy dictates. Then, in writing the copy, the machine may write an "x" for an "a" the first time it occurs, then a "p," and so on. It is impossible to predetermine what code letter will appear in operating the machine. To decipher a code message the person receiving the communication must have a complementary disk, with pins properly arranged, and one of the machines to reproduce the message as originally writ-

Father of Socialism. Karl Marx, the German Jew who fathered the modern socialistic school, died 34 years ago, March 14, 1883. He was born in May of 1818.

Marx had many great associates and successors in carrying on the socialistic propaganda, including Friedrich Engels, Ferdinand Bebel and Wilhelm Liebknecht, the latter the father of Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the latter day leader of the German social democracy, who is now serving a term in prison on conviction of high treason, due to his opposition to the war. It is Marx, however, who is honored as the founder and father of the movement. He was undoubtedly the ablest of the pioneers who endured imprisonment in Prussian prisons for "the cause." Marx's work, "Capital," is the so-called "Bible of Socialism," and the bitterest critics of the Marxian creed admit that it is a monumental work.

Paid $24,500 for a Set of Spoons. Apostle spoons, of which many examples are changing hands in the auction rooms just now, were made in sets of 12 together, with a master spoon, says the London Chronicle. In the case of those belonging to Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, this thirteenth spoon is surmounted with the figure of St. Paul. Complete and original sets can be counted on the fingers of one hand, and for the earliest of them-dating from Henry VIII's reign -Pierpont Morgan had to pay £4,900. A single Charles I example, which sold in London for £34, was found in the thatched roof of a Devonshire barn.

MyDecision

A Story of Romance Versus the Practical.

By ALAN HINSDALE

Of all the girls of our bunch I preferred Gwen Meriweather. Gwen had character stamped in her face as plainly as the word may be printed. But she was, or seemed to me to be, devoid of sentiment. I was full of it. I fell in love with her, and since she was devoid of what was born in me I endowed her with it. For this purpose I had plenty of imagination and succeeded in covering her with an ideality which she did not possess.

It is said, and I believe it, that opposites are readily attracted to each other. At any rate, Gwen and I paired off. It was not long before I was making love at high pressure. Gwen did not seem averse to listening to my rhapsodies, but she made no return in kind. Besides, she showed her matterof-factness in other ways. For instance, I gave her a book rack, handsomely inlaid, one of those contrivances to put on a stand to hold a dozen or so choice books. Not long afterward her little brother knocked it off the stand and broke it. I told Gwen that I would have it mended for her. She said that it would cost more to mend it than it would be worth.

This reply was a great shock to me. I had supposed that the gift, coming from me, would be of inexpressible value to her. Gwen looking at it in a pecuniary way rather than prizing it as an expression of my tender feelings for her seemed to me to be barbarous. I made no complaint. I simply went off and nursed my wound.

When I entered seriously with Gwen into a discussion of a future together she again threw a damper on me. She poo-pooled my talk about love in a cottage-poverty she called it-and brought up many objections to a match between us. I was so inflated by my romance that nothing seemed to stand in the way of our union. I told her that with love in our hearts objections were of no moment whatever. Her reply was, "When poverty comes in at the door love flies out of the win-

This was all the more chilling to me because there were no important worldly reasons why Gwen and I should not be married. I was in receipt of an income on property to enable us to live comfortably. I had besides a good salary and was advancing as rapidly as was to be expected. I have noticed that women have a way of saying one thing and meaning another. Gwen's real objection to marrying me came out in good time. She saw plainly that I had set her upon a pedestal as an object of worship, and she feared that when the time came—as it inevitably must come-for taking down the gilded image and putting up one of flesh and blood my love would not prove to be of the kind to endure the change.

This was the way Gwen expressed It to me: "You have mistaken me," she said. "You consider me generous, unselfish. On the contrary, I am mean and never give anything away that I want myself. Besides, I have traits, inherited from my ancestors, that would turn any man from me whose love was of the most substantial kind."

I was a bit staggered by this confession, but not for long. My optimistic disposition rose above fear that I would not love Gwen even if she were all she painted herself, and I told her so in most impassioned words, at the same time lavishing upon her an abundance of caresses. But she disengaged herself from me, avowing that at the first sign of a real fault in her my caresses would turn to expressions of contempt.

One day when Gwen and I were walking together we came to a fruit stand kept by a poor woman who was evidently obliged to keep her little child with her while selling her goods. Gwen took a fancy to some apples and asked the woman their price. Instead of paying it Gwen endeavored to beat the vendor down and, failing to do so, walked on without buying. I was so filled with commiseration for a woman whose sphere in life condemned her to make her living in such an humble way, especially as she was obliged to keep a hungry looking child with her while doing so, that I would have been glad to pay double the price she asked for her apples

I said nothing to Gwen about the matter then, but I thought a great deal. After all, was she not right in asserting that after we were married her faults would come up to make trouble between us? She had said that she was very mean and when a time came had not scrupled to show that meanness. While I was repelled at her fault, I could not but admire her frankness and her wisdom at hesitating to marry a man who was ignorant of it. Gwen and I were invited to spend a couple of weeks in midsummer at the country residence of a friend of hers. Gwen and Miss Emily Tucker had been schoolmates, and I did not doubt that Miss Tucker possessed my fiancee's confidence to a far greater degree than I did, for if there are two persons in the world who are bent on withholding confidence from each other they are an engaged couple. I know perfectly well that Gwen gave her friend a list of my good and bad qualities and certain other information about me that she would not mention to me. me evening I was sitting in the gloaming in the drawing room while ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR CONTRACTOR AND A 1 the girls were upstairs in their rooms dressing for dinner. I heard a light step on the stairs, and a moment later Gwen entered the room where I was. I was sitting in a dark corner, and she Paris Milliners Put Ban on Trimapparently did not see me. There was a case of curios in the room, some of which were very rare and some very beautiful. Gwen went to this case and took from it a tiny statuette, for which she had expressed admiration. She concealed it in her drapery and a few minutes later passed out of the room.

Heaven preserve me! My fiancee was a thief—a thief who would steal from her bosom friend, who, at the time of the theft, was entertaining her. Never before or since have I experienced such a shock. Surely this was too much. I could bear with faults in a wife, but not with ingratitude and dishonesty. The only redeeming point about my fiancee's actions was that she hesitated to drag me down to her level. She shrank from marrying a man who adored her, he to find out what she was when it was too late.

With all my own faults, I am certainly conscientious. I mean by this if I do wrong I don't attempt to excuse myself. I deemed it my duty to inform my hostess that she was harboring a serpent in my fiancee. But I found it very difficult to do this. It involved my first informing Gwen that I had seen her steal. There was a remote possibility that she could explain her act, but I could not see how she could do so satisfactorily.

When dinner was announced I dreaded to go into the dining room. Pulling myself together, I did so. And that there was something on my mind was very apparent. There were others present besides the two girls, and all were dampened by my saying nothing and looking as if I had received a stab. When the dinner was over Gwen led me into the drawing room and, turning to me, said:

"Something troubles you. Tell me what it is."

I stammered an account of my being in the drawing room alone in the gloaming, of her entry and, supposing that she was unobserved, of my seeing her appropriate the statuette.

"It is well," she said, "that you have discovered a serious blemish in me before tying yourself up to me for life. My maternal grandmother was a kleptomaniac. Had she not been a lady she would have doubtless spent the most of her life in prison. Since she was a lady she was followed by a woman employed to return what she stole or pay the bills. I should have had the strength to tell you that I have inherited this mania, that you might cast me off. I can only say that I had not the moral strength to do so.' Here was a failing which, being inherited, Gwen was not responsible for. If she should become a confirmed in- trimmings are lightly used. valid, loving her as I did I would not hesitate to marry her and devote my life to her care. Should I cast her off which she was no more accountable than the other? I walked away from her to another part of the room. This matter was of too much importance for me to decide on impulse. After pacing back and forth a few minutes I stopped before Gwen, who had sunk upon a sofa, and "Gwen, give me till tomorrow to decide what course I shall take in this

She made no reply, but left the room. Later Emily Tucker came in and said

"What has happened?" "I can't tell you now. I must have till tomorrow morning."

She, too, retired, and again I was alone. Taking my hat and cane, I left the house that I might have the dome of heaven under which to think. I did not return till near midnight. Seeing a tight in Gwen's room, I called to her softly. The window was open, and she heard me.

"I have decided," I said. "Come down and I will tell you."

She had not gone to bed and in a few minutes came down on to the porch, where I was, and, approaching, stopped a short distance from me.

"I love you so well that I can't give you up," I said. "In screening you from the consequences of your misfortune I shall be far happier than passing a lifetime without you."

I supposed that she would stand mute. I would approach her and take her in my arms; her head would drop on my breast in token that she accepted the sacrifice. What was my astonishment when she broke into a laugh. And I was still more surprised to hear it echoed from an upper window. I recognized the echo as Emily's.

"Stupid," Gwen said to me, "how could you have been deceived by such a shallow trick? My kleptomaniac grandmother was a minister's wife and inherited nothing but goodness. When I entered the drawing room this evening I knew you were there and took the statuette on purpose that you should see me. I carried it to Em and told her that I had given your romance a severe test. I am happy that you have stood it valiantly." For the next two hours we relapsed into billing and cooing. I am free to confess that Gwen's common sense and practicability have counted for far more than my romance. I have missed a certain companionship of appreciation in my wife, but one may enjoy ideality alone, while management is necessary for all parties concerned. Whenever I have talked "in the clouds" Gwen has taken me by the coattail and pulled me down to earth. When fits of generosity that we could not afford have seized upon me Gwen has locked up the family purse where I could not get at it. Every year that we have lived together has found us in better condition than the year before. Our prosperity is entirely due to my wife's management.

Flower-Pot Models, With Narrow Brims and Very High Crowns, are Very Fashionable Just Now.

The qaint hat for a young girl, which is shown in the accompanying sketch, was created by the famous Caroline Reboux. It is exceedingly simple, but at the same time amazingly chic, writes Idalia de Villiers, a Paris correspondent. The hat itself is made of lacquer-red Japanese straw, and the broad ribbons are in a delicate shade of silver gray.

These ribbons are tied in a full bow right at the top of the high crown, passed through the brim at either side and then passed under the chin. In all black, with a bright colored lining in

SUPPER SET FOR LITTLE ONES

Same General Decorative Scheme Can Be Carried Out in Tray Cloth. Bib and Napkins.

When your particular little boy sings for his supper see that he is set down to something as attractive as this little supper set, which will amuse him if he eats alone or at least keep him quiet if he shares his evening meal with the family.

It consists of a traycloth of crash all finished with fancy buttonholing in black and embellished with a procession of animals from the cross-stitch book. The bib, which Tommy Tucker will put on to protect his clean suit will follow the same general decorative scheme. Then there are two little napkins each with one of the crossno, cross-stitched-animals in one corner. # Coloring Process.

If you have ribbons or waists of delicate shade which have become faded and soiled you can restore them to their natural color or change to a darker shade if desired. Buy tube water color paints. Put a few drops, or until the shade desired is reached, in gasoline. After well dissolved, dip goods in and continue dipping until shade is desired. You can color feathers in this way also.

Lesson III.—Third Quarter, For Juty 15, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxx, 1-13. Memory Verses, 11, 12-Golden Text, Heb. xi, 6-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The story of Hezekiah, son of Ahaz, who reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem and who did right in the sight of the Lord, working good and right and truth before the Lord his God and doing it with all his heart, so that there was none like him among all the kings of Judah either before him or after him in the matter of trusting in the Lord God of Israel (II Chron. xxix, 2; xxxi, 20, 21; II Kings xviii, 5), occupies eleven chapters of Scripture (II Kings xviii-xx; II Chron. xxix-xxxii; Isa. xxxvi-xxxix). When we consider that these kings were spoken of as sitting on the throne of the Lord, to be kings for the Lord their God (I Chron. xxix, 23; II Chron. ix, 8), we see more clearly the monstrous sin of Ahaz and the great contrast in his son, whose name signifies the strength of Jehovah and which he so well illustrated during the greater part of his life. Our lesson chapter tells of the great passover which he kept for all Israel from Dan to Beersheba, and this feast always points us in three directions-to the night of the nation's birth, to Christ our passover crucified for us and to the rebirth of the nation in the future when they shall be gathered from all nations and the passover shall be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

Let us look a little at the rest of his story before we take up the day's lesson. He began his good reign by opening the doors of the house of the Lord, which his wicked father had closed up, and by cleansing the temple of its filthiness, which occupied them sixteen days (xxix, 3-5, 17). He set the priests and Levites to work with the inspiring and encouraging words of xxix, 11, and, having restored the vessels which his father had cast away, he made atonement for all Israel and had the true worship restored with praises and gladness and rejoicing (xxix, 24, 30, 36). Then they kept the great passover, sending invitations throughout all Israel and Judah urging all to turn to the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel and yield themselves unto the Lord (xxx, Although some laughed the invitation to scorn and mocked, there were those of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun who humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem to keep the feast (XXX, 10-12). They found such joy in keeping the feast of unleavened bread spake to the heart of all the Levites and the priests praising the Lord day by day and teaching the good knowledge of the Lord, and Hezekiah so spake to the heart of all the Levites, that the whole assembly took counse to keep the feast seven days more, which they did with gladness, and there was not so great joy in Jerusalem since the time of Solomon. The Praise and prayer were heard in heaven, the habitation of His holiness (xxx, 21-27). The contrast between this and the sin and unbelief and rebellion of Ahaz's reign helps us to understand just a little better the contrast between Israel's present unbelief and suffering and the time. drawing ever nearer, when they shall obtain joy and gladness and sorrow and sighing shall flee away (Isa. xxxv,

After this great passover and time of rejoicing there followed a cleansing of the land as far as possible from idolatry and idols, and the brazen serpent which Moses had made in the Wilderness and which Israel was now Worshiping as an idol was destroyed (xxxi, 1; II Kings xviii, 4). Such a turning from idols to God to serve the Living and True God (I Thess. 1-9) was too much for the devil to take quietly, and so he stirred up Sennacherib and his hosts to go up against Jerusalem and with great blasphemy defy the Living God, the God of Israel. Hezekiah encouraged his princes and people with the words of chapter xxxii, 7, 8, saying, "With him is an arm of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us and to fight our battles." Hezekiah, the king, and the prophet Isaiah prayed and cried to heaven as they spread the wicked letters before the Lord and asked the Living God so to work on behalf of His people and because of His name, which had been so reproached, that all the kingdoms of the earth might know that He was the Lord God, and He only (xxxii, 20; II Kings xix, 14-19).

Note the same great desire on the part of Joshua and David (Josh. iv, 24; I Sam. xvii, 46, 47). That God may be glorified should be the one and constant aim of every believer (Phil. i, 20: I Pet. iv. 11). That night the prayer of the king and the prophet was answered by the angel of the Lord passing over the Assyrian host and taking off the earth 185,000 men. Sennacharib returned to Nineveh and was slain by his own sons (II Kings xix, 35-37). The rest of Hezeklah's story is not so honoring to the Lord. He became sick unto death and was told by Isaiah that his time had come to die. But he prayed to the Lord with sore weeping, and the Lord added to his life fifteen years and gave him a wonderful sign on the sundial (Isa. IXIViii, 1-8). Some of his words on this occasion are very memorable.

SCHOOL, FLAG COLORS TOO FREQUENTLY USED

Country Being Flooded With Clothes Made in Red, White and Blue.

MILITARY CAPE IS FIXTURE

Garment, Which Is Becoming Serious Rival to Topcoat Appears in Many Designs-General Silhouette Is Slim.

New York.—When France went to war she abolished the introduction of colors into all apparel. When England went to war she did not change a jot or iota of her life in any manner. Mr. Wells, with his extraordinary facility for telling the truth in the guise of fiction has shown us in "Mr. Britling Sees It Through" a picture of England and her greatest war.

When America went to war she introduced the red, white and blue into woman's apparel to such an alarming manner that one critic truly said that if this exploitation of the flag continued, Americans would soon prefer to see the enemy's flag to their own.

In this French flannel tennis frock the skirt and blouse are plaited and trimmed with wide, white ailk braid. On the immense pockets there are large pearl buttons. The flannel is amber colored.

The Colors Too Freely Used. Everywhere we wore the colors. They not only floated from the windows, covered the facades of houses, swung from every public building and hotel, ornamented railroad stations and draped themselves around monuments, but they were carried by every motorcar, by the ox wagons of the South, by the bicycles of boys, by the hucksters on their little carts and even by the bootblacks' boxes on the cor-

When France went seriously, sadly, terribly in earnest to meet the enemy in the shape of the "gray fog that rolled through Brussels," she did not exploit one-fiftieth as many flags as one city in America during the first week that war was declared; for in addition to all the methods by which the flag itself was exploited, several million people wore the colors in their buttonholes, wrapped about their hats and pinned to their shoulders.

Billions of buttons showing the flag were sold in two weeks, and then the dressmakers and designers of all sorts of woman's apparel saw to it that the colors would be introduced into their field of work.

By this time one begins to feel that the critic was right. The flag has become so commonly used that there should be a law to prohibit its being flaunted in this way. If we do not succeed in stemming the tide of clothes made in the red, white and blue, we shall all become an animated flag moving across the continent, made up of a few million human beings appearing as parts of the whole.

The day that General Joffre arrived in New York it was the delight of the women to wear the red, white and blue in every possible way, and some of the smart set launched fashions that may become part of the season's styles.

There were flag blue frocks of silk with brilliant red belts or sashes and a white star embroidered on each shoulder, and there were caps taken from those of the French Guard of 1870, with the wide strap under the chin and the red, white and blue cockade floating in front.

There were red, white and blue sunshades, to match handbags. There were army capes of every kind in dark blue lined with red and showing white satin collars. There were military at night. suits of blue serge with lapels and cuffs of red and white striped silk, and there were visored caps of red satin and patent leather trimmed with a dark blue band. As General Joffre rode from the city hall to upper Fifth avenue, he must have wondered at the overwhelming display of his own colors, perhaps not realizing that America was exwolting herself as well as France.

It is no longer a question as to whether the three colors will be introduced into fashion through the entrance of America into the war; it is a question as to how they shall be suppressed.

The colors of our flag are exceptionally lovely, and bits of red or blue introduced into the costume freshen and enliven it; but a studied and continuous array of the three colors joined together in some type of costume should become a dead fashion because of its monotony, if for nothing

The Wearing of the Capes.

The widespread demand for army capes cut in any fashion that different sections of the army wear, is accepted by the makers of women's clothes as a dominant fashion. It has given the tailors a good chance to break loose into a mass of work which is ready for instant

Coats and skirts have not been demanded as much as usual this spring, and even elaborate afternoon frocks have been partly replaced by sports suits; therefore, the coming of these military capes into the fashions of the hour has proved a boon to those who deal in cloth.

There are far too many designs in these capes to attempt to describe them, but the general silhouette must be slim, there must be an opening of some kind on each side for the arm, the collar must be a pretentious and elaborate affair and the cape must fall well below the knees

As a garment it has become a serious rival to the top coat. This is natural. Several years of the top coat as a constant garment and its increase in fashion during the last two years have put one or more into the possession of most women, until they feel they have enough top coats to last them until the fashion is dead.

For several varieties of capes that are worn, the choice of materials is usually limited to thin, dark blue serge, white broadcloth, black and white checked wool, and sometimes deep red broadcloth.

In all the capes there is no tendency to hide the openings at the sides which serve as armholes. There is a wide band of soutache braid, sometimes the application of another color with embroidery, of pieces of the material cut into points, scallops or battlements.

One of the dark blue capes which is lined with army red has 12-inch openings for the arms which are edged with small blue bone buttons and buttonholes, so that any part of the opening can be fastened whenever desired.

When one tires of bright colors, the mind constantly turns to black-andwhite checks. There are seasons when this design is a trifle smarter than other seasons, but it is always in fashion and usually in strong demand. This season it has taken a high place in the affection of the public. Coat suits, one-piece frocks, capes and other wraps are made of it. It is sometimes trimmed with marine blue or any shade of dark red, but an application of solid black is the best way to treat it.

These capes are about the only kind of top garment that is not belted; they swing free and full from the shoulders, but there is a fashion law against their being too full and the dressmakers have invented several ways of making the cut irregular and full of character.

ですたりたりたりたりたりたりたりたり (Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman.)

"Who is she?" "Mrs. Barnabetta Burgoyne."

"She is the most beautiful woman I have ever seen," pronounced Wayne Blatchford, only a humdrum law clerk, but artistic, temperamentally poetic, and, therefore, susceptible to strong impressions.

He had paused in a casual stroll through the little inland city of Waltham to observe the occupant of a modest but expensive automobile. The car was standing at the curb, its chauffeur evidently having been sent on some mission to one of the stores on this, the principal street of the town. A young lady sat in a somewhat rigid pose, her face statuesque in its classic beauty. What struck Blatchford was that, while to ordinary eyes, this superb figure would have suggested the cold hauteur of an aristocrat, seeking the depths of her eyes he noted a hidden trace of sadness, subtle, ineffable. More than that, he discovered that while humble passers-by bowed to her with infinite respect, those in passing automobiles of higher social prestige either greeted her not at all or with a scant civility, and the lips of the peerless creature fluttered tremulously at the fact, as though she felt deeply the contempt, or obloquy, expressed.

Then the chauffeur returned and the automobile sped away, leaving Blatchford like one in a passing trance. He aroused himself with an effort.

"Burgoyne?" he repeated vaguely. "Where have I heard that name before? Ah! I fancy an old historical reminiscence.'

Wayne Blatchford did not meet the young lady again during the next two days, but he did not forget her. Then his interest in her was revived by a strange circumstance. He was strolling through the beautiful cemetery at the edge of the city one afternoon, when he observed a high, massive shaft bearing the name "Burgoyne."

"Williston"-Ah! a Clue, a Vital Suggestion.

Again it suggested something he had forgotten, but the similitude once more escaped him. The imposing shaft bore a lengthy legend. It detailed the services to his country and to his city of William Burgoyne, ranking brigadier in the army and mayor of Waltham. It expanded on his integrity and public and private charities.

Then, aroused to sheer amazement, Blatchford traced a brief and obscure legend upon a low, flat slab of marble placed at the remote edge of the same burial lot, for it read, "Williston, son of William Burgoyne-Hush!"

He thrilled, and he knew not why. The uncanny sensation that overcame him was past analysis. Why the halfhidden tablet in the shadow of the towering shaft? Why-"hush"? It was a warning, an appeal, a pitiful call for human charity. Why?

Involuntarily, Wayne Blatchford removed his hat and stood with head bowed. His impressive nature responded to this fairly emotional presentment. The stone hid-what?-a secret?—a mystery?—a direful taint? And what might it not have to do with the bereaved daughter of William Bur-

"Williston-ah! a clue, a vital suggestion. The names in conjunction stirred up memory to a new effort. Now he knew where he had seen that name before. His thoughts went groping to rest upon a clear central fact. Then a rustling sound in the grass behind him caused him to turn quickly, and he could not restrain a quick gasp, for, viewing him wonderingly, was Miss Barnabetta Burgoyne.

In the near distance was her automobile, in her hands she bore some flowers. Evidently her mission was to do homage to the dead. Blatchford drew aside almost guiltily, as though he were committing a desecration, for fear she might construe his presence here into callous seeking into the mystery of the secret that hallowed grave might conceal.

A fine bitter scorn came into that lovely face he had not believed it capable of expressing, as he said simply: "Pardon me," and started respectfully to move on. "Oh, I understand!" she said-"they even enlighten strangers as to the wretched calumny that killed my poor father." "You mistake," spoke Blatchford speedily. "It was reverence, it was sympathy, it was a solemn pity at the presence of that strange word-'hush' !"

She fixed a look upon him as if intent upon reading his very soul. Then her eyes softened. She turned her face away. He caught the faint echo of a sob. "If I dared to believe that I could be of service to you!" he was constrained to speak, "not to intrude on your sorrow, only to lighten your burden, if that were possible. Believe me, all I see, all I surmise, appeals to the depths of my very soul." Again those translucent eyes fixed his own. She put out her hand. She did not withdraw it until she had led him to a rustic bench at the edge of the pathway.

"'Hush'!" she said. "Do you understand what that means? Go ask any gossip of the town, look back in the public prints a year agone, learn all the tragic story as others tell it. Then, if your soul does not shrink from the hideous presentment, come to me, as friend, as counselor of a broken-hearted woman with but one thought in life-to clear the memory of a noble father unjustly accused, driven to his death by the uncharitableness of a cruel persecution."

It was a strange soul communion. He welcomed it, he cherished it. And all the time his mind was repeating that name, "Williston Burgoyne." The single name had simply awakened his memory, the two together-it all came back to him now! He did not tell his impassioned companion what was in his mind. He listened to her story and a new flood of light resulted.

She told of her father, rich, honored, respected, accused by a business rival who hated him of faithlessness in the sacred trust of a widow and orphan. Long since the just division of an estate had been concluded. When Mr. Burgoyne went to get the papers proving every step he had taken in the trust, they were gone. "The house had been burglarized a month before," narrated Miss Burgoyne. "Whoever took jewelry and money also carried away a portfolio containing those papers. The wicked, relentless, persecutor saw his power and urged it cruelly. Our claims were treated as fiction, my father was disgraced. The blow killed him. The thief probably threw the papers away, for I have advertised a large reward for their return."

An appeal for help, for sympathy, for interest was in those beautiful eyes. Blatchford arose, a great purpose in his mind.

"Dear lady," he said, and his strong voice trembled, "your pitiful story has opened a sealed chamber in my mind. I may have great news for you within the next forty-eight hours.

He had, for this had happened: Nearly a year before his law firm had closed up the affairs of a notorious criminal and his wife had brought all of his papers to the office. Distinctly now Blatchford recalled a package of documents bearing the name "Williston Burgoyne." Back he sped to the city. On a dusty shelf of the vault of the office Blatchford found them, where they had been cast aside as having no bearing on the estate of the criminal's widow.

But to Barnabetta Burgoyne they were everything, for they were the documents that proved her father an innocent man!

It was the glory of her life, the rehabilitation of that beloved parent's memory. It was Blatchford who stanchly assisted her in the task. In the glow of a beautiful summer evening those two, with joined hands and joined hearts, saw removed by the carver's chisel from the little obscure tombstone, that searing, sinister word, "Hush!"

True Good Nature.

Good nature does not mean easy, happy-go-lucky or to loaf when the employer is away, and a spurt when he is present. A grouchy spirit on the part of the employees, a feeling that they do not want to do any more than is absolutely necessary, has doubtless forced many an institution to the wall, and this indolent spirit usually exists among employees where the boss man is too exacting and overbearing. Good service comes from a desire to do the right thing, whether the owner of the business be present or thousands of miles away. The man who is a real cheerful and good natured is one of the noblest works of God's creation .-Pennsylvania Grit.

"No," was the answer.

"Have you been in the habit of using any of the above articles?" was the next question.

"Yes," was the answer of the applicant. "If so, which one, when, and to what extent?" came next.

"A year ago," was the answer, "used alcohol; external application on wife for paralysis."-Kansas City Star.

WOODSMEN FOR FRANCE.

State Issues Call for Mill Hands, Loggers, Woodsmen and Teamsters.

Baltimore, July 3.—From the Howard Street Office of F. W. Besley, State Forester and Listing Officer for Maryland, comes the call for additional well-trained woodsmen to complete the roster of the Tenth U.

complete the roster of the Tenth U.
S. Regiment of Forest Engineers,
soon to form for France.
Preliminary listing of eligible men has been going on during the past month by listing officers in this and other States, and while a great number of professional foresters, clerical assistants, and automobile operators have already been passed upon by the Maryland Office, word has come from Washington that there is still room for a considerable number of men who have, above everything else, a good amount of first-hand, practical experience along the required lines. In the forming of these first units for France each man is expected to be expert in his own particular line, and he is listed with this in mind. There will be no time for educating recruits to their very necessary tasks in the forests of France

The duty of this regiment will be to get out timber needed by our armies and those of our Allies. The work will be performed behind the battle lines, but may fall within the danger zone. Recruits must be white between 18 and 40, and will join for the period of war. They will be subject to the regular army physical examination. Recruits for this force will be sent to the nearest Army Recruiting Station by Mr. Besley, beginning July 9th., to be directly recruited and enlisted in the forces of the United States. The pay of men turned directly over to the Recruiting Officers will begin at once, and the men sent to depots for approximately three weeks of preliminary drill, outfitting with miltary clothing, and medical attention. About August 1 they will be assembled at one of the battalion headquarters, the Eastern Regimental and battalion headquarters being at the American University, Washington, D. C.

So far in Maryland there has been a very fair response. It must be better. Practically one-half of all inquiries, and a full half of the accepted men, have come from Baltimore City. It is realized that the counties have men well equipped for the work at hand. Men subject to con-scription will discharge their obligations by joining this Regiment; but more, it offers in every respect an exceptionally attractive opportunity. Promat recruiting willenable this Forest Regiment to be among the first to leave under the American flag for France, and it is hoped that there will be a full quota of picked Maryland men to go with it. Those who are now particularly needed are horse handlers and teamsters, mill hands, loggers, and all-round woodsmen. A considerable number of blacksmiths, truck drivers, woods cooks, portable mill sawyers and engineers, log rollers, and lumber stackers are also called for, and eligible men will be accepted at attractive pay. Application forms may be secured by writing or applying to F. W. Besley, Listing Officer, 532 N. Howard St., Baltimore. This Reserve Regiment offers a chance to hardy, well-trained, patriotic men to get across and "do their bit" well in advance of the great hosts to follow, Maryland has a chance to show the sort of stuff her outdoor men are made of.

Our Apologies are Due

We admit that the paper now being used for the Record is "rotten," and about everything else that is objectionable; but we are still in hopes that the next lot—in a few weeks—will be more decent. We have had a ton order in since April, which is claimed to have been "shipped from the mill on June 13" and if it ever arrives, we are hoping that it will be

GRANGERS' FAIR, -- OHLER'S GROVE

AUGUST 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1917.

Community Exhibit

An important feature will be the Community Exhibits, where neighbors will co-operate together and arrange a display exhibit, consisting of Grain, Fruit, Vegetables, Cereals, Canned Goods. Home-made Fancy Articles. &c.

We invite different communities to arrange to be represented, and will be pleased to confer and give any information or assistance. We are anxious to have a large display along this line, as our County Agent, Grover Kinzy, has arranged to have distinguished Agriculturalists of National reputation present. Just as you all assist in exhibiting your farm products, will you show your appreciation of the presence of these men and elevate the standing of our community as an agricultural community.

Some of our guests will be: Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Vrooman, of Washington, D. C.; President Wood, of the Agricultural College; Dr. Patterson and Governor Harrington. We insist that you all help to make these men feel that we appreciate their efforts by your presence and by exhibiting your farm products. It would belittle our community for these men eto visit its County Fair and not have a first-class farm product

Get busy and help to make this exhibit representative in every way!
