BIG REGISTRATION OF WOMEN ON TUESDAY

All Over the State Women Prepare For the Ballot.

The Record predicted, the registration of women was very large, on Tuesday, as they recognize their duty in their sought or unsought privilege. and will try to make the best of it. They not only registered, but partisanship cropped out considerably in the act, and before many years women will be "playing the game" of politics, perhaps more unscrupulously than men now play it, to secure party advantage.

As was the result in Baltimore, so in the counties the registration of women seems to have been most favorable to the Republican party, but no exact totaling of results can be made until the registration has been completed-three more days in the counties; Tuesday Oct 5; Saturday, Oct. 9, and Tuesday, Oct. 12.

The Baltimore American, commenting editorially on Tuesday's registra-

"The report to The American of the first day registrations in Annapolis showed a Republican gain of 150. One ward, regarded as strongly Democratic, showed an enrollment of 114 Republicans to 117 Democrats, and another ward, considered normally Republican, registered 222 Republi-cans to 117 Democrats. There was a heavy registration of women voters in all the twelve precincts of Kent. At Port Deposit 108 women registered, 61 affiliating as Republicans. It is estimated that 3,500 women registered on Tuesday in Frederick country and that 550 ty, and that 55 per-cent. affiliated as Republicans. In Allegany county the reports indicated a preponderant affiliation of women as Republicans. Republican gains were apparent in the first day's registration in Howard, and so the story goes."

The claim that large numbers of colored women would register, and that white women would not, failed to materialize. As a matter of fact, colored women did not register in anything like the same proportion as did white women.

Registration in the County.

With four districts short, the registration in the county was as follows: Rep. Dem. Ind. Pro. 525 Taneytown. 1st Pre.—Men, 3 Republicans, 4 Democrats; Women, 78

A "Bogey" for Women Voters.

It is said to be circulated among women voters, that there is a "negro" on the Republican ballot. There is no such thing as a "Republican ballot"

For Congress the Republican candidate is Wm. B. Blakeney and the Democratic candidate is Carville D. Benson.

The full equipment for for the hospital has been ordered, and it is hoped to have all ready for opening and service, by November 1. Considerable funds are still needed with which to pay maintenance expenses the first year, and an endowment fund is needed. A drive will be made for this purpose, as it will not be advisable to open the hospital without a guarantee of ample funds.

Registration is a very easy act, requiring only about three minutes. Attend to it next week.

Women's Missionary Convention.

The annual convention of the Women's Missionary Society of the Maryland Synod of the Lutheran Church which will begin in the Lutheran Church of Taneytown, next Wednesday, gives the prospect of being an unusually large one, with a corresponding amount of interest. The convention is being gradually enlarged as the names of all candidates appear on one official ballot, used for all and by the increasing activities of the various auxiliaries. More than 120 names have been sent in for entertainment, and nearly all have been assigned to the homes of the community. Several of the visitors will be entergress. The Republican candidate tained by special arrangements among for Senator is O. E. Whenever complainers over prices can find nothing else to complain about, they drag in the "middle man" for a good going-over, and agree that he ought to be abolished. There is no sense in the idea, but that does not matter. When a "goat" is wanted one must be found, and the "middle is always handy.

Doing away with the "middle man" in business, would largely mean, no business; certainly, in most cases, it would not mean selling higher and buying cheaper, for the excellent reason that but very few products can be sold direct from producer to consumer, and it would not always be profitable to the buyer, if this was The middle man is a "store keeper" of some sort. HAWKINS FOR SENATE.

Colored Man to Stay in Contest Against Weller.

Secretary of State Perlman announces that careful examination showed that the papers of W. Ashbie Hawkins, colored independent candidate for the United States Senate, were in proper shape and that Hawkins' name would appear on the ballot. Secretary Perlman, after examining the papers, submitted them to the State Law Department. Hawkins is leading the negroes' revolt against O. E. Weller, Republican candidate for Senator. Vigorous ef-forts have been made by Maryland Republicans and Republican national headquarters, it is said, to persuade Hawkins to quit, but they have been without avail. He is the first negro to go on the ticket in Maryland for high office.

Hawkins is likely to receive very few votes outside of Baltimore, and not many there outside of the disappointed element who expected more minor offices under Mayor Broening.

Unlawful to Interfere with Women Voting.

The adoption of the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution has not only given to the women of the United States the right to vote, but has imposed upon every woman, who desires good government, the responsibility and duty of registering and

It is reported that some men, who were opposed to Woman Suffrage, are counseling women not to register and vote, and that some have even gone so far as to make threats against their own women-folk as to what they will do if their wives shall vote. These men not only act in an unpatriotic manner, but make themselves liable to prosecution.
The laws of Maryland, Acts of 1896, Chapter 202, Sec. 89, provide as

Adams Trial in Frederick.

The trial of Charles F. Adams, one of the suspects in the Sandy Springs bank robbery case, ended in Frederick on Wednesday, after three days. His wife and daughter and a salesman, appeared for his defense in the

The prosecution offered a number of witness, bank officials and others, who positively identified Adams. The case was very ably argued both for the prosecution and the defense.

SENATOR HARDING SPEAKS IN BALTIMORE.

20,000 Crowd into the Armory to Hear his Address.

Senator Harding, the Republican candidate, met with an ovation in Baltimore, Monday afternoon and night. He and Mrs. Harding, and party, arrived at Union Station at 3:00 o'clock about 15 minutes before schedule time. Chairman Tait, Senator France and O. E. Weller, accompanied the party from Harrisburg to Baltimore.

The Senator was taken to the Southern Hotel, where he was given another ovation, after which he quietly rested in his room for about three hours. Many prominent Democrats were among the throng giving him welcome, as well as at the Armory,

The scene at the Armory, at night, was brilliant and enthusiastic in the extreme. Every chair in the vast building was occupied, and after all standing room was taken, hundreds were turned away. The arrangements were well managed, and there was little confusion. The crowd was estimated as high as 20,000. Chairman Tait called the assembly to order ,and introduced General

Agnus as presiding officer.
Upon the completion of his speech introducing Senator Harding General Agnus, recalling the brief speech renominating President Lincoln 1864, suggested that that speech, "God bless Lincoln," be repeated with the substitution of Senator Harding for Lincoln, thus making the sentence read "God bless Harding." There was an immediate response to the suggestion. The venerable Rev. Dr. B. F. Clarkson, a retired Methodist Episcopal preacher and a chaplain in the Union Army, arose and proposed three cheers for Senator Harding. The cheers were given with a hearty good will. Col. John Philip Hill, standing on the platform, led the presidential candidate. For over five minutes the crowd stood and cheered.

The unanimous verdict as the crowd left the Armory was that the meeting was the largest of its kind ever held in Baltimore and that no presidetial candidate had ever enthralled a Balitmore audience more completely than had Smator Harding.

The theme of the Senator's address was largely confined to questions of business and industrial life, especially as they relate to the readjustments following the world war. Senator Harding went on with his prepared address with this preface:

I do not want to interrupt the continuity of my discourse, and with your consent I will proceed with my line of thought." More cheers followed this declaration, and the Senator went on with

WILSON NOT TO SPEAK

Physical Condition will not Permit his Entry in Campaign.

Washington, Sept. 29.—President Wilson will not make any speeches in behalf of Cox and Roosevelt as was devoutly hoped by the Democratic managers as a possible means to off-set the tidal wave in favor of Harding. A vote on the plan has been taken by those close to the President and the unanimous verdict was against it.

It became known today that the President's physical condition is not as satisfactory as it was recently when his improvement was so pronounced that the country was told that the danger point in his long illness had apparently passed.

However, the President has not suffered any serious setback, as he is able to preside at meetings of the Cabinet and to take frequent motor rides. Then, too, of late he has seen many visitors on official business for short periods. Yet it is known that the President's gradual improvement has been somewhat checked and any undue excitement like that attending his appearance on the stump might have serious result, in the judgment of his relatives and close associates.

As far as is known, the question of the President's active participation in the speech-making campaign of Democrats had not been laid before him personally. He knew nothing of the elaborate plans being made for him to go before the people again as an advocate of the League of Nations and a defender of the policies of his administration.

It is understood that the Democratic campaign managers had planned to have the President make eight speeches during the month of October in the largest cities in the country. Feeling that the very presence of the President on the stump would have removed much of the apathy among the Democrats and that his defense of the League of Nations would have put the opponents on the defensive, those back of the Cox-Roosevelt fight are much disappointed at the turn of events. Democratic leaders had kept this plan in the background with the idea of giving the electorate a big surprise-one that would direct the voters to the Democratic ticket and its

There is the usual crop of switching voters-Republicans who will vote for Cox, and Democrats who will vote for Harding. There are always "many men of many minds," who get notoriety about once every four years for knowing better than their party conventions.

After all, why should women be sensitive—if that is the proper word -about telling their age? Age is neither a crime nor a disgrace, no matter what the figure may be. Besides, lots of women of forty or fifty, are more physically perfect than other women of twenty to thirty. And another thing, the men who do the registering are not caring anything about the mere number of years recorded—it's only a part of the job, and ages are not published.

A PRINT-SHOP CATECHISM.

Will county weeklies ever return to the $1.00 a year subscription rate?

We believe not. The $1.00 rate never paid at any time when the old scale of costs was in force, and the old scale will never come back.

In these days, parties have so greatly changed from the time of fathers and grandfathers, that an inherited party preference should have very little real weight. "Sticking to party" is as apt to be a mark of ignorance, or of bone-headed imita- | alone. Employers must feel their retion, as it is of loyalty to principle; for it is the exact fact that practically all of the old issues that have in times past distinguished parties, have disappeared, and new and more or less shadowy and transient ones have taken their places.

Even reading newspapers for politcal information and inspiration, is an uncertain source of truth. In the older times, newspaper editorials were to be depended on, and newspaper policies could be taken at their face value, with assurance, year after year. Now, we are not so sure that this can be done. Newspapers are apt to let political advertising do the loudest talking, and at times the business manager controls the editorial policy. In other words, free poosting of parties and candidates has largely been displaced by expensive paid advertising, and papers are apt to trim their course to suit the financial profit of the paper.

We Wonder Why!

A weekly newspaper is never regarded as a local enterprise, deserving special financial favors, and we wonder why? Financial Loss Due to Colds.

It is estimated that the average man loses three days time each year from inability to work on account of having a cold. Much of this loss can be avoided by treating every cold as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won a wide reputation and immense sale by its cures of this disease. Try it. You are certain to be pleased with its pleasant taste and the prompt relief which it affords.

Weekly Newspaper Problems.

A good many things have been said of "weekly newspaper problems," but there is an air of newness about the following portion of a paper read before the New Jersey Press Association, by the editor of the Woodberry (N. J.- Democrat.

"The editor of the weekly is known to everybody in the community. The mistakes of his office are always personal mistakes of the editor, and he is always accessible when things in met with approbation. He is besieged to serve on committees of a quasi-public character and he will be used for free advertising space and printed matter unless he explains that he wishes to choose his own chari-

It is a heap more fun to talk about the easy things of a newspaper man's life, just as it is more pleasant to dream than to grind; for the easy side of the newspaper business is a dream and the work is a constant grind. When one devotes a paper like this to newspaper problems he doesn't want to give the impression that there are no compensations. Sometimes one has an opportunity in the newspaper business to serve his community and that has satisfactions that are peculiarly their own; occasionally an editorial is commended, or from an unexpected source one is told that "Yours is the best paper around." Just this month I had a rather soul-trying experience. A lady renewed her subscription by mail, and accompanying her remittance was a little note in which she explained she didn't want to miss a single issue because she "dearly loved the paper." I thought that was laying it on a little

But with all our problems, whether with the daily or the weekly newspaper, we must not forget that they are nothing but problems—that such things come and go-for when we recognize that we'll take none of them too seriously.

WHY=

The Robin Is Not a Foe to the Orchardist

A long time ago some one got the notion that the common American robin is a foe to the orchardist and berry grower. The alleged discovery was promptly published broadcast and the fruit grower loaded his shotgun and went forth to slay the robin.

The fruit grower's investigation into the food habits of the robin went no further than observing that he sometimes ate cherries. It never occurred to the man with the shotgun to examine the contents of his victim's stom ach. If he had done so with a mind open to conviction a surprise would have met him. The robins do eat early fruit, but the quantity is small in proportion to the number of insects they destroy.

The robin's diet consists chiefly of moths, butterflies, caterpillars, earthworms, cutworms and other creatures that the farmer can very well spare. The small fruit that the bird consumes s only his dessert after meat. If the robin plucks small apples from one's trees, it would be well to examine the apples before killing the bird. He may be doing one a great service. Probably you will find that he has not eaten the young apple after all, but has dropped it on the ground. A little further investigation will show that it contained a larva of the destructive coddling moth; the bird was not after the apple, but the

Why Have Black Cats Been Considered Lucky?-Numerous Superstitions Concerning Them.

Why have black cats nearly always en accounted lucky?

Ireland is by no means the only place where superstitions about black cats are or were rife. In Egypt cats were regarded with great reverence. Archeologists have found them in tombs of kings and princes. Australians have a curious legend about cats. Mityaro, the moon, they say, was a native cat, who fell in love with some one else's wife, and was driven away to wander ever since. To them a cat, black, gray or white, prophesies only bad luck.

In Japan and China a black cat is regarded as a dangerous demon, often possessing as many as two or three forked tails, and having the power to change itself into an old woman. The Chinese believe if a cat leaps on or walks over a corpse it will cause the corpse to rise up at once. Any person passing through the room would be in danger of being seized by the corpse when in that state, and would be killed immediately.

Why Chopsticks Are Favored.

Chopsticks as table tools are being used more and more in American families, who find much to recommend venience. Ivory ones can be wiped clean as the proverbial hound's tooth with a single motion, while the more common wooden ones are simply tossed away like a burnt match.

Japanese of the higher order, who ban our idea of pocket handkerchiefs, never travel without their chopsticks, or "hashis," as they call them, and in all Japanese restaurants hashis are served with every order, each pair sealed in a rice paper envelope, appropriately inscribed. These are of wood, separated by a slit which runs only part way, so they must be torn apart before using. This is a further guarantee that each is an original package.

Why Sunshine Is Necessary.

Attempts to avoid the British by-laws that provide a window area equal to one-tenth of the area of the room are frequent, says a writer in the Journal of the Royal Sanitary institute. Sunshine is generally treated with in difference. In the crowded cities, bedrooms exist into which a direct ray of sunshine never enters.

Investigations on the Continent reyeal the fact that children in badly lit schools suffer from short sight eight times more than children in well lighted schools. The effect of cross light is most detrimental to children's sight, yet we find cross lighting in comparatively recent schools in the British Isles.

Similar investigations applied in the case of dwellings would no doubt, show that there was a benefit to be derived from direct sunshine.

Why Teachers Die Young. -Persons not in touch with the schoolroom realize only on rare occasions that schoolboy "howlers" flourish as luxuriantly today as ever. Sometimes a few samples published in a newspaper or college magazine serve as reminders, sometimes a street car passenger will garner a choice specimen from the talk of a group of chattering pupils on their way to school. Only the other day two boys were overheard quizzing one another in preparation for their English lesson for the "What is personification?" the first boy asked, looking at the book. The second boy's reply was in the nature of a terrific and oblique condensation of the correct answer: "Personification is a metaphor without buman intelligence."

HESSON'S DEPARTMENT STORE

LOWER PRICES ARE COMING

Ever since the signing of the armistice of the World War, in 1918. people have been looking for a decline in prices in general, but instead of a decline, there continued a steady increase in almost every line, until prices had reached an amazing height.

Different causes were attributed to these advances, viz.: scarcity of material, labor trouble, etc., so that the demand was far in excess of the supply, and the public seemed willing to pay the price demanded. In some instances, speculators took advantage of these conditions and made large investments and cornered the markets, and at the same time boosted the prices of the commodities they were dealing in.

To carry on such a business, it was necessary to have a large amount of capital and this made, in a time, lcanable money more scarce. This was particularly so in the case of the sugar market, and we have no doubt that it was being practiced in other lines as well.

Just lately, we have been hearing lots about lower prices in different lines, and in few cases have found it to be an actual fact that prices are off a little. Silks were the first line noticed to suffer a decline in price, and it was explained that it was due to the Foreign banks calling in loans made to the merchants, who in turn had to move their goods in order to meet their bank's demands and therefore lower prices than had previously prevailed.

This same reason has just recently operated in the falling off in the price of suagr, which up to recently had sold as high as 281/2c per pound with the wholesale merchant. Just last week two large automobile concerns amazed the public with the announcement of big reductions in the price of their cars, and this has been followed by slight reductions in other lines.

What Are We Doing About It?

We have never sanctioned unnecessary prices for any merchandise on sale in our store, and were slow to follow prices in their upward trend-never advancing until conditions forced us to. We welcome the sight of lower prices, and wish to announce that we will follow the market in its downward trend as the lower prices become evident, regardless of the stock on hand and will continue to offer only the best grade of merchandise, as has ever been our aim.

We will not attempt to make any quotations in print, at this time, but be assured that, if out of town merchants are offering goods at lower prices, we will have prices equally as low, if not lower.

War hasn't changed for the better. It is still what Sherman said

We have all been sickened with the horrors of it all, the death, destruction, despoilation, all the careful conservation of years of peace gone in a few brief months. But the war is over. It is time for reconstruction, a time to save, to build up again. Our bank stands ready to do its share in this work. Can we be of service to you in any way? We want our bank to be YOUR bank.

FOX AND MRS. MOUSE

O NE night when Mr. Fox was sneaking along by the barnyard fence he heard a sound of weeping, and looking closer he saw a little mouse with her children huddled up beside the fence.

"Why do you weep, madam?" in quired Mr. Fox. "You, with your small body and nimble feet, should be able to escape all danger. I am the one who should weep, for the farmer who lives here brought home a dog today and my life will henceforth be

"Every time I come here for food I run a great risk, but I do not weep. Tell me why you do."

"Oh, but you do not know, good sir," replied Madam Mouse. "I, too, have a terrible enemy, for the farmer brought home a big cat with the dog and 1 am driven from the pantry where I have lived in comfort, and, I might say, in luxury, for a long time. And now if I have to look for a new home my children may starve by the wayside. Oh, dear, what shall I do?"

Mr. Fox thought for a second and then he said: "I think we may be able to help each other, Madam Mouse. You are not afraid of Mr. Dog, nor am I afraid of Mistress Puss.

"My plan is this: You creep into Mr. Dog's house tonight and tell him that Puss says he is a good-for-nothing fellow, and she knows she will

"I will see Mistress Puss and tell her that Mr. Dog said he did not see why the farmer brought her here, as she could not do a thing but stay in the house and sleep when she really should be out catching the birds that spoil the grass.

"I will tell her, too, that he said she was a lazy, good-for-nothing creature and could only eat and sleep while he had all the work to do."

Madam Mouse was not a very wise little creature, but she was sure Mr. Fox knew what was best, and she was not afraid of Mr. Dog, so she left her children by the fence and ran over to where Mr. Dog was asleep in his house.

The next morning very early when Puss came out of the house Mr. Fox was waiting for her down the road where she went for a walk.

When Puss heard what he had to tell she ran with flashing eyes back to the barnyard and there stood Mr. Dog as angry as she was.

All day they quarreled, and when night came both were so tired they slept, while Mr. Fox and Madam Mouse feasted.

"And the end of it was that the farmer had to get rid of Mistress Puss because she and Mr. Dog quarreled so much.

"It did not work out just as I intended," said Mr. Fox, one night when he was trying to get a fat hen without waking Mr. Dog. "I thought she would scratch out his eyes, she was so angry, and then he could not see me. There Madam Mouse is living in the house, I expect, having all the food she wants, while I am in just as much danger as before. DAIRY BARN IS MOST IMPORTAN

Modern Buildings and Equipment Necessary on Farm.

HAS BEST OF NEW FEATURES

Besign Shown Here Is Excellent Type of Dairy Barn Embodying Most Important Improvements of Barn-Building Craft.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford. No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, IE., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The successful farm is one that has the most modern types of buildings and the latest labor-saving equipment. In view of the alarming tendency of the youth to leave the farm as soon as he feels his "oats," progressive farmers are trying to make the farm as aptractive and as efficient as possible. In short they are endeavoring to give the hired man time for recreation and amusement. The days of drudgery are passing. And modern buildings with equipment that makes the work a pleasure are the principal factor.

In the farm building scheme there is no building more important than the dairy barn. It is the source of revenue day in and day out. Crops may be poor, and unless the farmer has his dairy herd to fall back on, he will be out of luck. But with a good healthy herd of milk producers, he is sure of an income regardless of reason he should give the dairy barn elements have to be considered.

Another important feature of modern barn equipment is the drinking cup placed in front of each stall. Here the cow can drink at will. As we all know plenty of good clean water is needed to produce milk. The more a cow drinks the better the chances are for increased production. Moreover it eliminates the driving of the herd twice a day to the water trough. In the cold winter days this trough is often covered with a thick layer of ice and the water is too cold for the cow to drink.

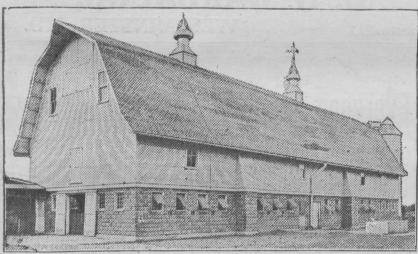

Good buildings and modern equipment work two ways. They make for contented cows, which means increased milk production. And just as important in these days of acute shortage in farm help, they are largely responsible for satisfied help, because they eliminate many of the old tasks that were absolutely unnecessary, make all of the work easier, and enable the men to finish their tasks in time to spend an hour or two fishing or swimming. In the warm sultry days this hour of rest and recreation is worth a whole lot.

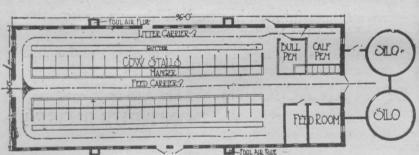

Only when farmers throughout the country adopt this line of progress and build comfortable, clean, and efficient buildings will they find relief from the present conditions which threaten to tie up the country's food supply. In building dairy barns of the type shown here and installing modern equipment and using machinery the farmer is not only benefiting his hired help but he is insuring prosperity for himself in greater production.

TELL OF PREHISTORIC RACE

Interesting Aztec Relics Displayed in the American Museum of Natural History, New York.

Temporarily displayed in the west corridor of the American Museum of Natural History, on the first floor, can be seen some interesting relics of a lost race—the prehistoric people who built and lived in the great community weather or crop conditions. For that dwelling, now in ruins, near Aztec, New Mexico, which Earl H. Morris in which he houses his cows a great has for the last three years been exdeal of attention and study. shown in the accompanying illustration. It has been designed to hold a large herd and house them under ideal conditions. Rising from a substantial foundation of concrete, its first story is concrete block up to the wall plate supporting the hay mow. Above this it is frame construction supported by stout trusses and covered by a heavy waterproof gambrel-shaped shingle roof. This barn has a large stall floor and abundant storage space above.

One of the important features of a dairy barn of this size is ventilation. This is amply provided for in this barn by means of foul air flues and windows which let in germ-killing sunshine, the greatest disinfectant known to science. The foul air, which is warmer than the fresh, rises through these flues and is carried off while fresh air takes its place. The ventilators on the roof provide a source of fresh air.

The barn which is 36 by 96 feet has been arranged so as to have two rows of cow stalls facing in toward a central feed alley. The floor is concrete and so laid as to provide gutters and manger troughs. These stalls are of the latest design and equipped with stanchions that are easy for the cow and yet restrict her to certain limits. Modern mangers of steel or concrete with partitions prevent greedier members of the herd from taking more than their share. It also permits the farmer to lay out definite rations in individual cases. At the end of the barn are the special pens for the bull, calves, and a feed room. Two silos have been built outside. In keeping with the idea of making this barn as efficient as possihle and also a pleasant workshop for the men, a carrier track has been installed over all the aisles. In the center aisle feed carriers can be run directly from the feed room or silos and stopped in front of each stall. Similarly litter carriers installed on a track which runs in back of each row of stalls enable the hired man to carry away the litter without breaking | washing machines. corridor give an idea of the nature of the objects which have been found and of the customs to which they testify.

Here, outlasting their wearers by centuries, are sandals woven of yucca leaf, yucca fiber and cotton, and here the very pattern boards over which the sandals were made. Here, practically untouched by time, are ornaments of shell cut into discs, and beads of turquoise and of shell. There are arrow points of jasper, bone awls and needles and fragments of painted wood - ceremonial boards,

The basketry is of two types—coiled and twilled-some of it in an excellent state of preservation. Then there are cylindrical netted discs padded with corn husks. These are a puzzle to the museum's investigators. Some one advanced the theory that they might have been used as snowshoes, but the small size and unsuitable shape of some of the specimens seem to refute that supposition.—Brooklyn

The First Photograph. Eighty-one years have elapsed since

This historic daguerreotype picture still in existence in America—was of a Miss Dorothy Draper, daughter of Professor Draper of New York. The process was then so slow that the sitter's face was, covered with white powder, the exposure being about 30 minutes, and in bright sunshine!

One of the greatest photographic booms was in 1857, when a French duke had his portrait placed on his visiting cards in place of his name. Disderl, the Parisian court photographer who made the pictures, saw money in the idea, and very soon it became the correct thing for every person to present his friends with his "carte-de-visite."

WHY=

Selfish Person Is Likely to Live Long

Utter selfishness and clam-like absence of emotion seem to be the recipe for old age, for the Journal of the American Medical Association quotes a paragraph from the memoirs of Baron de Grimm written on the death at ninety-three of Dr. John J. de Mairen of the French academy, with the query if this be not a text on geriatrics

The paragraph is as follows: "He was exactly the kind of per son to live to a great age; his head was well formed, he had great equanimity of temper, great moderation in his passions, or rather he was destitute of passions; he had sensibility enough to engage the regard of those with whom he associated, and to contract those ties of intimacy which were sufficient for him, which have not indeed the charms of friendship, but which do not draw after them the same obligations. He had not warmth of heart enough to feel the necessity of an attachment which rules despotically; of a friend who disposes of us at pleasure, who forms the happiness or the misery of our lives: he had much prudence and foresight; paid great attention to himself, and was very methodical in whatever he did."

This might have been written of Count Greppi, the former Italian diplomat, who though more than one hundred is taking an active part in the social life of Rome

BANISH DESPAIR AND DOUBT

Why It Is Foolish to Allow the Past to Cast Any Shadow Over the Future.

Much arrant nonsense has been written and said upon the influence of the past on the present. We have been told that the past is a Nemesis ever upon the trail of puny man. The first morbid threats concerning the power of the past was in Genesis when the Israelites were made to think their suffering due to the sins of their ancestors. All this is false and morbid and poisonous, declares the Rochester Post-Express. Maeterlinck tells us that our past depends upon our present and changes with it. What the past was depends upon the way we employ it today. Men and women have behind them grim and apparently hopeless pasts, but they rise upon these things and triumph over them. Poe thought he was a victim of his past and so wrote the dismal poem, "The Raven," with its croaking "Nevermore." He could have made his past glorious by glorifying his present. But the past was too strong for his weak will. All he saw behind him was hideous mistakes, and ahead more mistakes. Other men with equally dark beginnings have made them minister to their present welfare.

The past is dead, but not the wisdom we learned from it. The faults of the past are with us until we recognize them and correct them. We go ahead as we achieve wisdom out of the raw material of mistake. The past is dead and beneath our feet. We can get down in it and wallow if we want to, or we can step to higher things. The real enemies of man are despair and doubt. Yet they are generally under our feet if we will to trample them there.

Big Contract. The minds of statesmen must expand In a most wondrous way. Each is supposed to understand What all the others say! -Washington Evening Star.

A Counterfeit Husband

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Bob Anderson, owner of the Anderson Studio apartments, gazed at the caller in his office in consternation. Her information had been wholly un-

"So, Miss Anthony," he said at length, "You are really going away. Isn't there any chance at all that you may reconsider?"

Helen Anthony threw him a fleeting glance. She had lived in the apartments for nearly two years and had grown to like the gray-eyed man with the lazy drawl who now sat looking at her with such evident dismay. And he had shown every sign of enjoying the friendship she had given him, her occasional companionship at the theater, an infrequent invitation to tea in her studio. She wondered if he had said the right word in time he might have kept her in the city. Well, it! was too late now.

"No," she said. "I am really going I haven't exactly failed; but, on the other hand, my success hasn't amounted to enough to justify my remaining here. My mother is not well and has considerable to worry her. My place for the present is back home."

"I say Hel-Miss Anthony," said Anderson earnestly, "I can't begin to tell you how I hate to have you go. Won't you give fortune one more

He was surprised at the vehemence of his feelings. A confirmed bachelor, so he imagined himself, at the age of thirty-five, he had lively appreciation of the easy-going freedom he would be giving up if he asked this girl to marry him and she said yes. And;

His thoughts were interrupted. "No," she replied quite definitely. "I am going."

That night Bob could not get to sleep. His inclinations were drawing him in two opposite directions. He got up, lighted a cigarette and stood the window, meditating. His glance wandered idly across the court to the ell of the building in which was the studio of the girl he did-and didn't-want to marry.

And, startled violently out of his musings, he saw a man who had climbed the fire escape disappearing into Helen's window.

"A burglar!" He threw his dressing gown about him, took his revolver from the drawer and hastened to her As he reached her door he caught voices raised in altercation

"No, no, girl! Don't do it, I tell you. It would mean sure death to-"

Bob seized the handle of the door. "Helen!" he cried. "If you can, open the door!"

Came from within a man's angry curse. Then followed swift steps and a pale-faced woman flung the door wide. "What do you mean by trying to enter my room at this time of night, Mr. Anderson?" she cried.

Bob was altogether taken aback. "Why, I—I—" he stammered. "I saw

"Exactly," she said, cuttingly. "My

"Don't say it, Nell," came the man's voice from within. "My husband," she concluded,

Bob reeled as if he had been struck. Then, "I beg your pardon," he said, and turned on his heel. For hours he paced his room, trying to reorganize his shattered outlook on life. For now that Helen Anthony was rrevocably another's it had come to im how, deeply he loved her. Why had she deceived him?

Three days later, Helen, white and weary-eyed, stopped him in the hall. 'I am staying a week longer than I expected," she informed him, colary.

"Here is the difference in rent." Bob took the crisp, new bills she held out to him without comment, making no effort to detain her as she walked quickly away. But when he came to deposit the money in the bank he met with a surprise. "Counterfeit," declared the teller with calm certainty, and stamped it full of triangular holes.

At the words a man stepped quickly forward to Bob's side. "Counterfeit?" he said.

"Yes," said the teller, "it is, but I can vouch for Mr. Anderson.'

"There's a gang working the city, but we're after them and sooner or later will put them where they belong. From whom did you get this?" The man seemed very certain of himself and Bob concluded he was a treasury

Bob hesitated. Then, "No," he said shortly, "I've had a lot of money coming in from various sources in the last few days and I cannot place this." "Well, it's your loss," said the other

"My loss it is," said Bob and went out. The loss of a couple of five dollar bills meant nothing, but when it came to losing faith in the one woman he would have said was pure goldthat hurt.

The setting sun was turning to points of fire the myriad windows of the city's buildings as Bob reached the apartments. In the gathering twilight of the room he at first scarcely saw the slender figure leaning back in his deep-cushioned chair. Then, "Helen!" he cried, and, forgetful that he thoroughly believed in "hands off" other people's property, he dropped on his knees beside her and took her in his arms. Counterfeit or simonpure metal, married or unmarried, he loved this woman.

But Helen was trying to withdraw from his embrace even as she explained her presence in his rooms. "That money I gave you," she said, "was bad. I tried to spend some and found out. But, oh, I didn't know it when I gave it to you," she besought him

"Of course you didn't," he assured her. "It's nothing to worry about."

At the tenderness of his tone tears gathered in Helen's eyes. "Bob," she whispered. "Would you be glad to know that that was my brother-not my husband? Wait-until I have told you the rest. He was just telling me, when you came, that the police were looking for him, and that if I could only let him stay there that night he could manage to slip through to Canada next day. Before he left he insisted on my taking those bills. I am sure he didn't know they weren't good. Billy was weak, but he wasn't a criminal-although this time he had got mixed up with a bad crowd. He made me promise to tell no one who he was-he was nervous and afraid. And for mother's sake-he has brought her great unhappiness and worry, but he was always her favorite -I let you think he was my husband." "And nearly broke my heart," said

Bob reproachfully. Well, I don't think I would have had the courage," confessed Helen, "if you hadn't nearly broken my heart by being so perfectly willing to let me

"And I was an idiot," said Bob. "Heaven knows I wanted you, but I didn't know how much until I thought

I had lost you." "So, by passing off a counterfeit husband, I was able to win a real one," said Helen whimsically. "I suppose Billy is safe in Canada by now; as for mother-'

"As for mother," whispered Bob, "she must come here. And we will go after her together."

MUTE'S SHOUT SAVES LIVES

Incident That Can Only Be Regarded as a Miracle Is Related by English Bishop.

An extraordinary story of how a dumb man, a peer of the realm, was given the power to utter one word. thereby saving many lives, was told by Dr. Kennion, bishop of Bath and Wells, at the dedication of a new home for deaf mutes in Bath, England.

The peer was a former Lord Carbery and a friend of Dr. Kennion. "Lord Carbery," said the bishop, "was aboard a steamer sailing from Cork to Bristol. A dense fog came on and passengers could see nothing. Even the lookout man was unaware of danger, when Lord Carbery, who was sitting in the bow, shouted loudly, 'Land!' It often happens when God has deprived a man of one sense he increases the power of another. Lord

Carbery was able to see what others could not, and realizing the ship was making straight for the black mass, his excitement forced that one word from his lips. "The captain put the helm round and the vessel just skimmed past the southernmost rock of Lundy island. We all had a most narrow escape, and many lives were saved by Lord Car-bery's warning." That word "land" was the only one Lord Carbery ever uttered.

"The toughest thing to have to pay is the balance on the engagement ring after the girl has thrown you over for some other mutt," sighed the young

"You're wrong," replied the eldering man. "The toughest thing to have to pay is an old bar bill with prohibitie 1 in effect."-Milwaukee Sentinel.

IN TRUE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Example of Small Town Neighborliness That Is the Rule Rather Than the Exception.

This is a story from life for city workers to moralize on.

Howard Kirchgesner is a farmer living on the outskirts of Staples, Minn. he crushed his hand. For any farmer year is pretty serious business, espelive stock and crops must be daily attended to.

hand paining him and wondering how his farm would get along. It looked pretty bad for him. In the morning he was awakened by a commotion in his front yard. He looked out to find Mayor Harry Long, Rev. W. H. Johnson, Harry Manson, Sherm Tower, Jerry Lynch and half a dozen other neighbors from Staples, dressed in overalls and equipped with hoes and other implements ready to keep his farm going while he was laid up.

And from sunup until sundown there was only death for weeds and potato bugs. Then the cows were milked and turned out to pasture and the neighbors departed for their homes.

It would seem that one must turn the places where life is still run pretty much as the heart dictates, and where the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" doesn't wait for an answer. Is it any wonder that the nation and the big city turn to the small town and the country for its captains, when this is the spirit that rules its everyday life.-Minneapolis Journal.

Small Town Opportunities.

The general conception of a progressive man is measured by the size of his bank account, but the real measure of progress is to be found in the amount of good a man does for those around him. The mere shifting of wealth from one to another is not a mark of progress, but rather an increase of privilege. Many an ordinary man has become very progressive by coming to a small town from a larger one, because he had better opportunities to develop in the smaller town; while just the opposite could develop a live wire by changing to the off from the asphalt pavements to find | city. Progressive men are staying in the small towns, else there would be no growing small towns. It takes effort, and lots of it, to increase the facilities of the small town.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 3

THE BIRTH AND CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.

LESSON TEXT-Matthew 2: 1-15. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins.—Matt. 1:21.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Isa. 7:14-16; Micah, 5:2; Luke 1 and 2. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Wise Men Visit the Child Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Child Jesus Escapes From a Wicked King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC The Coming of the King.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
The King Comes as a Little Child.

Since we now have six months of study in the Gospel according to Matthew, every teacher should grasp the book as a whole and present each lesson in its relation to the central purpose of the book. The central theme of Matthew is Jesus Christ the Kingthe fulfiller of the Messianic hope.

I. The Birth of the King (1:18-25). The Messiah was to be the seed of a woman—the son of a virgin (Gen. 3:15; Isa. 7:14). This was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus. The genealogy as given in Matthew 1:1-17 shows his legal right to the throne; but had he been that only, he could not have been the Savior from sin. He must be both human and divine (Isa. 9:7). The Messiah was begotten by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary, thus becoming Immanuel, which term means in all its fulness, God for us; God with us: God in us.

II. The Magi Seek Israel's King (2:1, 2).

The King had a most heartless reception. The kingdom was not ready for him. His advent was heralded by a star which guided souls from a foreign nation to seek and worship him, pouring out their gifts to him. These wise men were either Arabian or Persian astrologers, students of the stars. The appearance of an unusual star attracted their attention. Perhaps they were acquainted with the famous prophecy of Balaam (Num. 24:17). Doubtless through the influence of the Jews who remained in Chaldea, or the direct influence of Daniel, extending to this time, they had become acquainted with the hope of a Messiah. The light they had was dim, but they lived up to the best they had. To those who act upon the best light they have, God always gives more. To those who refuse to act upon the knowledge given, God not only refuses to give more, but brings into confusion that which they already possess (Matt. 25:

11%. Herod Seeking to Kill the King (vv. 3-8).

The news brought by the Magi struck terror to Herod's heart. He was not alone in this, for all Jerusalem was troubled with him. The news ought to have brought joy. A glimpse at the social customs in and about Jerusalem at that time, will enable us to understand why this s news brought uneasiness to the people. They were living in the greatest of luxury. Fine dresses, sumptuous feasts, fine houses, etc., led to gross immorality. We can thus readily see why Herod and all Jerusalem should be troubled. They did, not want a Savior who would save them from their sins; they wanted to continue in them. Herod demanded of the priests and scribes information as to where Christ should be born. They soon were able to tell him, showing that they had a technical knowledge of the Scriptures, but no heart for the Savior set forth therein. The luxuriousness of the wealthy, the frivolities of the fashion-loving, and the gross immoralities to which they lead, make Jesus Christ unwelcome in many quarters today.

IV. The King Found (vv. 9:12.). The Magi having obtained the desired information, started immediately to find the King. As soon as they left the city, the star which had guided them from the East appeared again to lead them on. When they found him, they worshiped him. Note God's overruling providence in all this. Hundreds of years before, the Prophet said that Christ should come forth from Bethlehem (Micah 5:2). God so ordered that Mary should be brought to the city to give birth to Christ. God ordered that the Magi should depart another way, thereby defeating Herod's wicked purpose. The gifts of these wise men, God put into the hands of Joseph and Mary before going to Egypt. Doubtless they served a good purpose in meeting their expenses during their stay there.

V. The King Protected (vv. 13-15). To escape Herod's wicked aim, God directed Joseph to take Mary and the child Jesus and flee to Egypt. In obedience to the heavenly vision, he went and remained until Herod's death.

In Giving Alms.

In giving of thine aims inquire not so much into the person, as his necessity. God looks not so much on the merits of him that requires, as to the manner of him that relieves. If the man deserve not, thou hast given to humanity.—Quarles.

Think of Our Own Sins.

So long as we are full of self we are shocked at the faults of others. Let us think often of our own sins, and we shall be lenient to the sins of others.-Fenelon.

October 3 Our Church Privileges and Responsibilities

Psalm 84:1-12 The church is the spiritual body of Christ. To be a member of this body and thereby to become a partaker of Christ's resurrection life is indeed a great privilege. Both the privilege and the corresponding obligations are set forth with great clearness in the epistles of Paul, especially in that one written to the Ephesians. In the first three chapters, the privileges are presented and in the last three chapters the responsibilities are re-corded. A careful reading of this epistle will be the best preparation for the discussion of this topic.

The 84th Psalm is the pilgrim's Psalm. Inasmuch as Christians are also pilgrims, we may find some application to our topic in this Psalm. In verses 1-4 there is expressed the pilgrim's hope. It is the dwelling place of God towards which he is journeying, "thy tabernacles"; "thy courts"; "thine altars"; "thy house." These are the things the pilgrim longs for. They are the object of his hope. His heart is set upon God and His dwelling place. In the old dispensation, the tabernacle and the temple were peculiarly and especially the dwelling places of God. In our day God dwells in us by the Holy Spirit. (See 1 Cor. 6:19.) Nevertheless, the house of prayer or the church building ought to be the meeting building. ing ought to be the meeting house, not only of God's people, but of God with His people. As such we should long and hope for its services of worship and praise.

In verses 5-7, we have the pilgrim's experiences as he journeys towards God's dwelling place. Faith has an anchorage, for his strength is in God. Faith has energy and activity for even when passing through the valley of weeping, springs of comfort are discovered. Faith has an assurance and goes on from strength to strength, until the pilgrim appears before God. This is the pilgrim's experience, for us it applies to the whole journey of life. In verses 8-10, we have the pilgrim's prayer. The glory of the presence of God is such that the world can offer nothing to compare with the privilege of being even door-keeper in the house being even door-keeper in the house of God, hence the earnest cry for help along the way.

The remaining verses disclose the pilgrim's confidence, "For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. O Lord of Hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee."

DOCTORS TEST QUALITIES OF WOULD-BE AIR PILOTS. -Ability to hold the breath as a test of the efficiency of the heart is applied in England to would-be airmen. The Lancet (London) says the breath-holdes the physician to obtain a fair idea as to the stability of the central respiratory nervous apparatus of the exam-

A stop-watch and a nose-cup are all the apparatus required, while the precise instructions as to carrying out the experiment are equally simple. The time the man can hold his breath before the inevitable and forceful sensation of the need to breathe compels him to give way is noted. The average time in the normal fit pilot is 69 seconds. the minimum being 45 seconds. Nearly all cases with a time record as short as this were rejected on medical grounds apart from this test.

Not the least interesting part of the test as applied to airmen is the reply given when the examinee is asked what caused him to give way and breathe in, the normal response being: "I had to give up," or "I wanted to breathe." Under conditions that point to unfitness for pilotage the reply may be: "I felt giddy" or "squeamish" or "flushed," responses which indicate that other nerve centers are involved besides the true bulbar respiratory center.

The combination of minimum time record and abnormal verbal response points to the examinee being one likely to suffer from oxygen hunger at high altitudes, and possibly to an inherent inability, by a strong effort of will, to carry on under conditions of and diversion is rapidly going out of style was discovered by the Observer when he recently visited his home town in southeastern Ohio.

What had been a well-kept gravel path along a road noted especially for its beauty of scenery, had almost entirely disappeared. Grass of the tall. tough kind was growing in the middle of the walk. Alongside, was a cinder road, now well kept, which had completely replaced the walk. The explanation is probably found in the one word, "automobiles."-Observer in Columbus Dispatch.

W. H. Graham a successful feeder of Middletown, Mo., said $30 worth of Milkoline made him an extra profit of $420. Lee Jackson of Wappingers Falls, N. Y., says Milkoline fixed up a bunch of shoats in fine style and is great for brood sows.
