Fatal Accident at New Midway.

The P. R. R., passanger train south, on Wednesday evening, struck an automobile at the New Midway crossing, completely demolished it, and killed James Harbaugh, aged 18 years; fatally injured his younger brother, Roscoe, 5 years, and seriously injured another brother, Harry, aged

The Harbaughs were on their way to a neighbors in an automobile and were preceded by their father who was driving a tractor. As they approached the crossing they observed that their father in his slower moving vehicle was already across the railroads tracks. They did not hesitate, but kept right on. The train, which was obstructed from their view in the approach by trees, caught them squarely, demolishing the machine. James, who was driving, was caught in the wreckage, but the two brothers were thrown clear.

The train stopped and took the injured boys to Frederick, James dying on the train. The other boys were taken to the Frederick City Hospital, where it is said they are injured internally.

Three Boys Drowned.

Three small boys were drowned near Cranberry Station, one mile from Westminster, on Wednesday. No one witnessed the drowning, but it is be-lieved the youngsters, who had been playing on the high bank over-looking a branch of the Patapsco river, which supplies water to Westminster, accidentally fell overboard. Those drowned are: William Witte, 8 years old; Randall Witte, 9 years old; Lloyd McGray, 9 years old. The first two are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. William Witte, who keep a store at Cranberry Station. The McGray child is the son of James McGray, of the same place.

Guy W. Steels, Surveyor of the Port of Baltimore, who passed shortly after it was learned that an accident had occurred, recovered the bodies from a depth of about eight feet. He was assisted in bringing the third boy out by John Benson. Life was extinct when the bodies were recovered. State's Attorney Theodore Brown and Coroner Michael E. Walsh gave a verdict of accidental drowning. No inquest will be held.

More than 1500 men are affected by an order of the York Manufacturing Co., that goes into force next week, by which working schedules will be made for two shifts of men, week. Unemployment is said to be very general in York.

CARE WILL PREVENT FIRES. Oil Stoves, Gasoline Appliances and Garages, all Dangercus.

Extra care should be taken by everybody, especially through the heated season, to prevent fires. Nearly all fires are caused by carelessness, or neglect of some sort. The care of oil stoves, and the use of gasoline, should receive special attention. See somebody always at hand to watch them. Oil stoves, and gasoline stoves and irons, are very dangerous unless operated with the greatest care.

Tax Rates in Other Counties.

The tax rate for Queen Annes County has been fixed at $1.41, a reduction of 21c from $1.62 last year; for general purposes 75c and for schools 66c. The school tax is expected to produce about $85,680.10. or about $25,000 less than the a-mount asked by the School Board. The rate for Talbot county has been fixed at $1.39 or 16 cents less than last year. The School Board asked for $120,000 and received $92,-

The tax rate and school appropriation is receiving considerable interest in Frederick county, where the School Board is faced with a large deficit for the past year. The present tax rate of the county is $1.78, and if the requests of the School Board and other increased demands are met, an increase of at least 10 per-cent in the rate will be required.

Board is asking for $306,700, an increase of $31,059.96. The Wicomico County Commissioners have fixed the tax rate at $1.641/3 the same as last year. The appropriation for schools is $159,248, also the same as last year. The rate was prevented from going higher on account of an increased assessable

Oldest College Graduate Dead.

Rev. W. F. Eyster, D. D., of Crete, Nebraska, died last Saturday. He was the oldest living College graduate in the United States, having graduated from Gettysburg College, class of 1839. At the time of his death he was 99 years and 6 months of age. Among other pastorates, he served at each working only 25 and 30 hours a Jefferson, Hagerstown and Smithburg, Md., and Greencastle and Chambersburg, Penna.

Where Do You Stand?

Rev. Dr. W. W. Davis presented the cause of the Lord's Day Alliance in the Lutheran Church, and Dr. Howard A. Kelly, in the Presbyterian Church, last Sunday. Both made stirring appeals to christian popular sentiment to support the efforts being put forth to save the Sabbath Day from commercialism and general disrespect.

The Alliance is especially endeavoring to enforce the Sunday laws against professional baseball playing in the state, and against unnecessary "wide open" violations of law at so-called popular re-

Judge Dawkins, of Baltimore, in a recent decision, admitted that ball playing, for profit, on Sunday was in violation of law, but that it was not within the power of the Judiciary to enforce the law; that it was the business of the Police, the Grand Jury, the Courts or somebody else. The case will go to the Court of Appeals.

While Baltimore City and the suburban section are the chief offenders against a proper observance of the Sabbath day, the tendency is toward widespread commercialization and lax observance of the day throughout the state, and perhaps every town in Carroll County has open places that serve no real need, but simply use the day for

There is a spirit of so-called "liberality" that is growing, and with it is-bound to grow a harvest of evil. Just where the line is to be drawn between the allowable and unallowable, we do not know, but we do know that it will be best and safest for christian people to err on the side of a too strict, rather than a too open, Sabbath day.

Moreover, very strict laws are on our statute books against Sunday labor and selling. They are laws as much as any other; and, as such, should be enforced, or repealed. The best people can not consistently take the position of demanding that some laws be observed, and others winked at. All good law and order citizens must help such men as Drs. Davis and Kelly, or stand convicted of not being good

In this connection, let it be remembered, when the time comes for Baltimore to demand greater representation in the legislature, that as long as Baltimore sends men to Annapolis to perpetuate Sunday baseball, race track gambling, and evasion of the Volstead Act, it will be best and safest for the whole state that the representation of the city in the law-making power, be no greater than it now is.

Good for Littlestown

We know of no one more properly alert for the interests of his town and its institutions than Editor Alleman, of Littlestown, and as our brief item in last issue was unintentionally misleading, we publish the following from Mr. A. with pleasure, and at the same time commend it to citizens of Taneytown for their consideration.

"I read in this week's Record that Littlestown is raising money for a playground, several hundred dollars having been contributed so far." Now we are pretty proud of our efforts in community work down here, and that "several hundred dollars" looks like a piker's job compared to what we

In the first place the money raised this year is simply for equipment, and we have raised nearly $500 so far. This is the third season for our playground, the plot of which cost us $1,000, and that money was raised in a single day. We now have over $2,000 invested, and this year added swings and two giant strides to our equipment. Have one of the fastest ball diamonds, tennis courts, volley ball court, sand pit, and a competent play leader. Hanover has nothing like it. So you see we are especially proud of our playground, and the generous support given it by our people. May they always feel so disposed. The dollars they are now investing in the children will bring returns such as no other investment can, and each season the playground is becoming more popular. In another year we hope to be able to provide facilities for giving weekly band concerts on the grounds."

The Business Outlook.

A business expert, in an address at Cleveland, Ohio, said the country is fundamentally sound, but there is no real improvement in sight before

"Business men believe in the law of supply and demanded," he said, "but all want the law suspended so far as it applies to their particular business. The farmer is asking for lower-priced labor, but wants a fair price for his wheat and corn; the railroads are working for lower prices for rails; yet want to keep the cost of transportation fixed, and labor leaders are clamoring for a reduction of the cost of living, and at the same time are fighting all wage reductions.

"Unless something radical is done, it will be two or three years before we again have prosperity. With railroad rates up, wages up and everything else up, it is impossible to start prosperity. If railroads would reduce rates, wage workers reduce wages and retailers reduce prices until the 600,-000 freight cars now idle get filled and moving, we could get started."

Carroll County Poultry Show.

A preliminary announcement of the Maryland Mid-State Powltry Show has just been issued by the Carroll County Poultry Association in the form of a neat folder. From all indications the State Armory, Westminster, will be the rallying point for hundreds of poultry fanciers the week of November 15th. The local association will be assisted in this enterprise by an advisory committee composed of the following prominent fanciers: C. N. Myers and William H. Overbaugh, Jr., Hanover; Clinton L. Riggs, George M. Shriver, and Geo. O. Brown, Baltimore; Robert J. Walden, Carroll County; William Lauterbach, Baltimore County; Harry H. Brish, Frederick County; Lignon Thompson, Howard County; W. Frank Spahr, Washington County; E. Munday, Montgomery County; John Riley, Anna Arundel County; H. R. Wooden, Carroll County Farmers' Council; Roy M Waite, State University; H. W. WILL LOOK INTO COAL PRICES.

Senate to Take a Hand in Getting Desired Information.

Senator Felinghuysen, of New Jersey, is the author of two coal bills presented in the Senate, on Monday, aimed at the coal price situation. He urged the adoption of the bills, saying it was the government's business to know more about why other commodities have dropped in price, and anthracite coal is still going up.

Bituminous coal prices were lower, he said, but production was "down so far that people now indifferent about their coal supply will be de-manding drastic legislation when the next shortage comes."

"I don't want to attack coal producers," the New Jersey Senator continued, "but no one is entitled to fight publicity for industrial facts, and they must not always think that they can come to the Government for emergency relief for themselves and then distrust and defy the Government's intervention. I think a great many coal operators really consider they can best exploit their industry by keeping up the speculative seasonal supply condition these bills are intended to destroy."

HAMPSTEAD AND MANCHESTER FIRES.

Loss Aggregates $125,000. No Water Supply Available.

Fire broke out in Samuel Keller's garage, Hampstead, about 1:00 o'clock, Tuesday morning, completely destroying the building and seven automobile. Mrs. Robert W. Sullivan, in charge of the telephone ex-change, without awaiting orders, sent out calls for neighboring fire apparatus, and her quick action no doubt saved the town much greater Fire Companies from Hanover, Westminster, Reisterstown and other points, quickly responded, and did the best possible work with only wells as water supply.

The blaze, said to have been caused by defective wiring, broke out in the basement of the garage. Mrs. Morris Miller, sleeping in an apartment over the garage, was aroused by the smoke awakened her husband and carried their infant daughter to the street. Miller hastened to the headquarters of the fire company and sounded the alarm.

Male residents, lost no time in responding to the alarm, and did splendid work with the meager supply of chemicals on hand. The town is without water supply except that obtained by pumps on the property of the citizens. A bucket brigade fought the blaze until driven back more than 50 feet by the intense heat.

In addition to the garage, a twostory frame structure, the stores of William Winks, grocer, and Nace's music emporium, under the same roof, were wiped out. The building also contained a tobacco and fruit store and an automobile supply house both of which were run by Keller. Seven automobiles, five owned by Keller and the others by Everett Wareheim and E. E. Sparks, both of Hampstead, were totally destroy-ed. Three of the burned machines were new, having been delivered to Keller Monday. The loss is estimat-ed at close to $50,000, partly insured.

The neighboring town of Manchester, followed on Wednesday afternoon with a larger fire, also starting in a garage, the total loss being estimated at $75,000. The fire is said to have originated from a blow pipe that ignited a bottle of gasoline.

Aid was extended from Hanover, Westminster, Glyndon, Hampstead and other places. The garage was owned by Charles E. Trump& Sons. Danger of Summer Resorts

The Philadelphia Ledger calls attention to the fact that 40 per-cent of the cases of typhoid develop after the return home of summer vacationists, and that about half of the cases had their origin from non-residents. It says;

"The public is therefore cautioned to make particular selection of the summer resorts to which they intend to go. The drinking water in country districts supplied by wells should be free from contamination by out-houses. The milk supply should be protected by proper sanitary dairy improvements and by careful handling. The comparative freedom of flies in a country boarding house is ofttimes a guide to its sanitary environments.

There is in this good points to those in the country who expect to entertain summer boarders. These points should be observed, by all means, whether boarders expected or not.

For the first time in history, according to official records, a woman presided over the House of Representatives, on Monday, Miss Alice Robertson, a Republican member from Oklahoma, occupying the chair for about 10 minutes. The silence surrounding ex-President Wilson, since the election, is very marked. We have no doubt that he prefers quiet and seclusion, but it is very remarkable, just the same. Perhaps the newspaper reporters considers him a worked-out attrac-

It is said-There has been a decided increase in the demand for "movie projectors" for use in schools and homes. Does this mean the retirement of graphophones for the more due to the importation of foreign modern "movie"—and a new expense for needed school appliances? S'no use, it's just one thing after another, for more taxes.

It doesn't so much matter whether Ambassador Harvey, and Commodore Sims told the truth, or not, in their speeches. These men are not specially engaged to speak authoritatively for the United States ,on any and all occasions, but to attend to the job of representing the United States on special orders, as to what to say and do at certain times.

It seems a rather unkind hint, but it so happens that the Maryland Agricultural Society has gone on record as being vigorously opposed to the proposed reorganization of state departments, by which Agriculture would function under the Department of Education. Perhaps this is another display of ignorance—that one sometimes meets-when people don't know what is best for them, and must be "educated" up to it.

The new Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, gave some of the newspa- onstrate his ability to use the whip, pers of this country a big lot to if need be, in order to see that a busthink over, when he said-"The law should be enforced, and the man, woman or agency which condones its violation, or encourages a sentiment of laxity in regard to its enforcement, is helping to create, consciously or unconsciously, a very serious condition. * * * To wink at the breaking of one law, and preach observance of another, is unpatriotic and un-American."

A furore was created at the Denver convention of the Federation of Labor, when a resolution was presented to unseat all delegates who did not wear a union label on all articles of wearing apparel The resolution was defeated. Then there was an effort made to declare wearers of non-union clothes to be on par with strike breakers; but finally the convention satisfied the radicals by passing a resolution pledging delegates to patronize only stores displaying the union-shop card.

An Impossible Union.

Labor leader Gompers, has just made an appeal for organized labor and the farmers of the country to have a "closer alliance." He said;

"Men in industry and in agriculture must have a closer alliance, to see to it that that they shall not be crushed by captains of industry and the Commissioner says he can do right to come to them and deprive princes of finance."

The inference in this is, that there is a conflict, and enmity, between capital on the one side, and laborers and farmers on the other. There is nothing fair, nor true, in such a pronouncement. There is, in can compel by mandamus a minis-fact a very indistinct line between a terial officer to perform his duties in that some who have snoozed in the fact, a very indistinct line between a laborer and a capitalist. As soon as a laborer accumulates any property or capital at all, he is in that degree a capitalist, and has the interests attaching to the use and safety of his capital. The farmer is a capitalist, as well as the banker; the banker is a laborer, as well as the

The "captain of industry" is equal-Iy an indefinable person. A farmer who employs a lot of hands, is a "Captain of industry" and he is a "capitalist" interested in securing fair pay from the men he employs, in the field might tend to force a comorder to protect and increase his fi- pliance with the law, but the court s to a "conflict" between capital and labor, no matter whether the interests involved by large or smallthe one trying to get from the other, a fair return. The argument put up that makes 'captains of industry" natural born enemies and "crushers" of labor, is untrue, and unworthy of any leader of labor who wants to play fair with facts; and Mr. Gompers will not be able to fool the farmers of this country with any such misleading twaddle

There is a conflict between capital and capital, and labor and labor, the world over. It is the human contest -the inevitable struggle-that goes on every-day, in every community, between men looking after their interests, or what they conceive to be their interests, and in this same measure only is there conflict between capital and labor.

The farmer-labor union idea looks to us very much as though Mr. Gompers would like to secure the big support and influence that the farmers would give to any joint union; but there is no possibility of such union finding much common ground on which to work together for mutual interests, and farmers are not at all likely to be conveniently "made use of" by any class.

The "Movies" Hard Hit.

The moving picture business, that has grown to immense proportions, has been hard hit by the depression in business-not so much in the showing of the pictures, as in the making of them. This is said to be films, as well as to the decreased demand by theatres for new ones.

There is also said to be a decided falling-off in attendance at the "movies," and strangely enough, "daylight saving" in cities is said to be one of the causes. It is after 8 o'clock, now, when the "dishes are washed" and it seems too late to dress and go to a show; so, if it is to be a question of the survival of the "movies," or of "daylight saving," we may witness a scrap where least when his stomach is out of order. Indecency in the Daily Press.

There are two distinct classes of daily newspapers in America and each reflects perfectly the personal character of the individual exercising control of newspaper expression. One class performs a useful function in the home, by carrying to members of the family information of the events of the day. It is an act of wisdom on the part of the head of a family to know what class of daily paper he is admitting into his home, placing in touch with the plastic minds of his children.

The class which reason admonishes him to go around and not to touch or to permit his children to contaminate themselves with, is the prurient sheet that aims at effect by vulgar and impure sensation, regardless of taste or morals and in definance on frequent occasions of ordinary decency. It is simply a vulgar lie, a mere weak plea of justification, to claim that immoral divorce cases and murder trials are news and as such deserve prominent headings, portraits, and columns of salacious details unfit to be read aloud in the family circle.

The editor who seeks to justify such breaches of newspaper decency is himself a degenerate unfit for the exalted position to which accident has called him and unfit as well for association with ladies and gentlemen .-Burlington (Ia.) Saturday Evening are as much at work as if you were building bridges or writing editorials to make money. If you go fishing in the true fisherman's spirit you won't care much whether they bite or not.

The vacation mind is a law unto itself. If it enjoys an occupation it keeps on while the enjoyment lasts, though every fibre of the tired body may be shouting "quit."

If it ceases to enjoy an occupation it stops at once, though it create consternation all around. A real vacation is a trip into a fairyland, where the natives never heard of duties or obligations and the only law is "Do what you really like."-Slosson, in the New York Independent.

NO SUBSTANCE TO DREAMS

Writer Gives Reasons for Her Refusal to Have Any Belief in Common Superstitions.

The mind during sleep reminds me of a naughty child, writes Marion Holmes in the Chicago Daily News. With a normal person during waking hours reason controls it and when it seems inclined to let loose a foolish train of thought rebukes it with "Nonsense! behave yourself!" But when reason goes to sleep the mind has seasons of wild capering. It makes you do things that when awake would scorch you with blushes. It causes you to go to church dressed in your very best except your shoes and stockings, which you find you have left at home. It makes you marry a dark man with big black whiskers when you already have a perfectly satisfactory husband who is blond and smooth faced. There is nothing that it will not do uncontrolled by reason. Therefore I never have had much faith in the prophetic quality of dreams, although there are persons who pin their faith to those so-called warnings. We have heard them say. "I dreamed last night that I had lost a tooth. That means bad news," or "I dreamed of walking among ruined buildings. That means that somebody in the family is going to be ill," and, like fortune telling, the predictions that do not "make good" are forgotten.

A recurrent dream is of no importance. I have known the same stage setting with its incidents to be presented over and over in sleeping visions without ever reaching its counterpart in reality. An uncomfortable position during sleep, or the fact that you are not feeling well often occasions troubled dreams.

NEW THEORY IN ASTRONOMY

Possibility That There Is a Tail Attached to Our Earth Leads to Ingenious Suggestions.

Opposite to the sun there is a very vsterious glowing patch, which is thought to be attached to the earth as a cometlike tail.

The highest regions of our atmosphere consist of very light gases, and the impression is that some of these were driven away by the sun or by other means, and that they stream off from the earth into space just as the light gases do from the head of a large comet.

Naturally, this theory has aroused much controversy, and has led to all sorts of ingenious suggestions. One of these is that a swarm of meteors (of the kind we know as shooting stars) keeps us company through space at a distance of about a million miles, or four times the distance of the moon. But a tailed earth is an ideal vehicle for imaginative flights.

It might be argued that if our globe has a tail why should not the planets Mercury and Venus, and even Mars, have one. Well, perhaps they have, for all we know to the contrary. Our earth's tail would be much more easily seen by us because of its nearness and brightness.

Soft Beds in Ancient Days.

According to Athenaeus, effeminate gentlemen in ancient Greece sometimes slept on beds of sponge. Fashionable people in Athens slept under coverlets of dressed peacock skins, with the feathers on. Clearchus, the author of a treatise on sleep, described the bed of a Paphian prince in such a way that it is difficult to keep awake while reading it. "Over the soft matcresses," he writes "was flung an expensive short-grained Sardinian carpet. A coverlet of down texture succeeded, and upon this was cast a costly counterpane of Amorginian purple. Cushious variegated with the richest purple supported his head, while two soft Dorian pillows of pale pink gently

POULTRY FLOCKS

TEST EGGS AT LEAST TWICE

Make Inspection on Seventh and Fourteenth Days for Those Infertile or With Dead Germs.

It is of little profit for a hen to sit patiently for 21 days if the eggs over which she fluffs her feathers are infertile or if the germs in them have died. Neither does it pay to run an incubator for three weeks, with its attendant care and expense, if the eggs in it are not fertile.

All poultry owners who raise chicks should be thoroughly familiar with the method of testing eggs. An egg, whether it is fertile or not, has a small grayish spot, known as the germinal spot, on the surface of the yolk. As soon as a fertile egg is placed under a hen or in an incubator the development of the germ begins. All eggs should be tested at least twice during the incubation period, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. This is done preferably on the seventh and fourteenth days. The infertile eggs, and those with dead germs, should then be removed. White-shell eggs can be tested on the fourth or fifth day, whereas the development of eggs having brown shells often can not be seen by the use of the ordinary egg tester until the seventh day.

A satisfactory home-made egg tester | weather. or candler can be made with a shoe box or an, other box large enough to hold the lamp. Cut a hole a little larger than a 25-cent piece in the side of the box, so that when the lamp is placed inside the box the hole in the side will be opposite the flame. Make a hole also in the top of the box large enough to prevent the top from catching fire from the heat of the lamp. When the chimney is long enough, allow it to extend through the top of the box. This permits the heat to escape and avoids the risk of fire. Special care should always be exercised (Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture) in using kerosene lamps in candling to prevent fire. To prevent further possibility of fire, a wooden box may be used in place of a pasteboard one, and, if desired, the opening through which the chimney extends may be lined with tin or asbestos.

Electric or gas lamps may be used in a box with a hole in the same way that the kerosene lamp is used. The hole which is in the side of the box should be on the same level as the light. The eggs may also be tested by sunlight or daylight, using a shade or curtain with a hole in it for the light to shine through.

Testing with a tester or candler should be done in a dark room. Hold each egg with the large end up, so that the size of the air cell may be seen, as well as the condition of the embryo or germ. An infertile egg when candled looks perfectly clear, the same as a fresh one; while a fertile egg shows a dark spot known as the embryo, with a mass of little blood veins radiating in all directions. When the germ is dead, and the egg has been incubated for at least 48 hours, the blood settles away from the embryo toward the edges of the yolk, forming in some cases an irregular circle of blood, known as a blood ring. Eggs vary in this respect, some showing only a streak of blood.

All infertile eggs, and those with dead germs, should be removed at the end of the first test. Eggs with dead germs soon decay and give off a bad odor if allowed to remain. The infertile eggs make good feed for young embryos will be dark and well filled up, showing a clear, sharp, distinct line between the air cell and the growing embryo, while eggs with dead germs will show only partial development and lack this clear, distinct out-

Citizens of the Middle Ages Lived in What Today Would Properly Be Called Pigstyes.

In following the evolution of homes from those of ancient times to those of the Middle ages we are forced to the conviction that in this, as in other matters of culture, there was a decided retrograde movement. The medieval home certainly left much to be desired both in the way of art and comfort. Despite this fact it is regarded by many as the ideal house, and, indeed, is the starting point of our own present system.

The truth is, that in the face of the showy effect of the knight's retinue, of his feasts and banquets and the richly adorned apparel of the lords and ladies; despite the spacious halls and colossal edifices, we are constrained to believe that life in the homes of those days was nothing less than deplorable.

Apparently there is ample reason for belief that the home in its arrangement was barely habitable and that its ornamental furniture was not especially artistic. It tends to take away much of the studied romance of those times when we consider that in the halls of the Anglo-Saxons and other Germanic tribes the people oftentimes slept upon the same benches where they previously had eaten. In cold weather they gathered around a fire kindled upon a hearth in the middle of the baronial hall, where for want of a chimney the smoke filled the room until it finally escaped through accidental holes in the roof or through open doors and windows .- Exchange.

First Medical College.

The first medical college in the western part of the United States was Rush Medical college, founded in Chicago in 1837 by Dr. Daniel Brainard, who was born in Whitesborough, N. Y., 109 years ago, May 15, 1812. Rush college commemorates the name of Dr. Benjamin Rush, who was born near Philadelphia, of Quaker parentage, in 1745, according to the Indianapolis News. Doctor Rush served as an apprentice to a Philadelphia physician for six years and then completed his medical education in Edinburgh, London and Paris. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, one of the founders of the first American antislavery society and the greatest physician of his day. During the yellow fever scourge in Philadelphia, in 1793, he visited more than 100 patients daily.

These abrupt disturbances consist of violent oscillations of the fluid contained in the semicircular canals of the ear. The fluid is banged against one end of the canals and then the other by the irregular movements of the ship; the effect of this jarring and banging is telegraphed to the brain and nervous system by delicate nerve filaments and results in the various obnoxious symptoms which we group under the name of seasick-

HARNEY.

On Sunday afternoon, Children'sday services were held at St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The church was well filled and the program was pronounced the best ever rendered by the Sunday School. The children are all to be congratulated for the almost perfect manner in which they carried their parts. The music was also of a superior quality and was rendered with great credit to both school and choir. Harney has great reason to be proud of its young people. We have always known that we have the best kind of material for good entertainment.

It was our privilege to attend the children's-day services at St. James' Reformed Church, where we found the church over-crowded and many were compelled to remain outside. The program was excellent and well rendered, and all who took part are entitled to the congratulations of the public for an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

On Monday morning, three of our young men left for Towson to take the summer course at the Maryland State Normal School, preparatory to teaching this coming school year. They were: Clyde Riffle, Walter Fream and Charles Reck. All passed creditable examinations at Westminster, and we hope will make the same good showing at the State Normal, and all make good teachers, which we understand are badly needed in Carroll County.

On last Friday, Elmer Null, while heaping hay at his son-in-law's, E. D. Yealy, was over then by a spell of some kind, which caused him to fall down, and in falling he broke both bones in his leg slightly above the ankle. Dr. Crouse, of Littlestown, was called and rendered him first aid and afterwards took him to the hospital, at Gettysburg. On account of the leg being much swollen it was not set until Monday morning. He is doing as well as can be expected.

Our singing class now numbers about 30, and we think it should be 50 or more. We certainly think that many of our young people are missing a fine opportunity to learn vocal Toy-Balloon Merchant Might Have Been Excused If He Made a. Few Warm Remarks.

A toy-balloon merchant, all but hidden under a fantastic, dancing cluster of brilliant wares, was making his way northward in Meridian street, when he met a foe in the form of an April wind. Strange red, green, yellow and blue bubbles, like bits of whimsical clouds, went bounding and sailing eastward along Ohio street, much to the amazement of distressed patients sitting in dentists' chairs before windows in the Hume-Mansur building. Pedestrians gazed aloft and gasped. Then came a scramble, in which for the most part little boys and girls were victorious. Soon the stray balloons were led captive away, while the balloon merchant continued onward along Meridian street, holding converse with himself. It is not recorded what he said.-Indianapolis News.

AMERICAN LABOR - SAVING PLANS STRIKE VISITOR .-This (American) civilization is extraordinary and takes extraordinary forms, such as the electric curling iron, the American heater, which enables you to warm your coffee when you have no coffee pot by dipping a stick of metal direct into the fluid; and even the safety comfor er, which you can connect with a plug and lay upon any part of yourself which aches.

Everything has been thought of, writes W. L. George in Harper's. More people in America are thinking of how to make life easy than anywhere else. They will cut you a door key while you wait, just as they will build a floor of your office in a week; they will save your running downstairs, or taking the elevator, by providing a Cutler chute to mail your letters at your bedroom door. They will protect your shirts at the laundry by inserting boards and slips, and they will save your brown paper parcels by providing laundry bags. They are always thinking of these things. For instance, when an American sells you an eye lotion or a bottle of fountain pen ink, somebody has thought of the use of these liquids, and instead of making you buy a special instrument or letting you forget it, has fixed a dropper to the cork. It looks like nothing, but it means easier living. Also it means saving labor. The plate washer, the rack sunken into soapsuds whirled, is a clever machine. But what strikes one is that the water is so hot that nobody need wipe the plates. They dry of themselves. The potato peeler, which rotates the vegetables on corundum powder and scrapes them clean, is a clever machine. But no one need clean the peel out; a stream of water carries it away.

The whole idea of American business seems to be to save labor, which is expensive, and to substitute the cheap machine.

EARLY ALMANACS OF CLAY

How Our Ancestors Kept Track of Occasions Which Called for Celebration or Remembrance.

The clay almanac was one of the land and in Denmark. It was a square stick or box, eight inches long, which might be hung on the wall or used as a cane. Each corner and side represented three months. The holidays were marked with symbols of the saint or occasion which they were designated to celebrate. Christmas was indicated with a horn, and November 23 was pictured as a pot of ale because that day was St. Clement's day, on which custom decreed that the oor should go about begging for ale to make merry with. The first written calendars were made by the Greeks of Alexandria in 150 A. D. Perhaps the oldest almanacs known are those of Solomon Jarchus, published in 1150. A manuscript copy of the almanac of Petrus de Dacia, published in 1300, is preserved at Oxford, Almanacs became prevalent during the Fifteenth centu-The first almanac to be printed Europe was the Kalendarium Novum, the author being Regionmontanus. The almanac was issued three years, 1475, 1494 and 1513; was sold for ten crowns gold, and circulated throughout Hungary, Germany, Italy, France and England. England's first calendar was the Shepherd's kalendar, which, translated from the French, was printed in 1497. Each month started with an appropriate poem.

How Glass Is Made Unbreakable. Ordinary glass is very sensitive to temperature changes of a sudden nature. A drop of water on a hot lamp chimney is very apt to set up strains that will result in instant fracture.

A glass is now manufactured that is absolutely immune from sudden temperature changes, says the Popular Science Monthly. Two semi-metallic substances enter into its composition that have different points of expansibility. A tube is made from each of the glasses. The tubes are then placed one within the other and fused together. A very rugged glass

How Shot Ended Waterspout.

A large waterspout was seen in the Caribbean between Progreso, Mexico, cream white. John Baer seems the and Havana by those on board the liner Esperanza, which arrived at New York a few days ago. It was an unusually tall one, the top blending into a low cloud mist.

The spout was seen at 7 a. m. Capt. Frederick G. Avery headed the liner toward it to get a good view. Having heard that sound waves would cause a spout's collapse he blew the liner's whistle. Nothing happened. Then he had the life-line mortar fired and the spout disappeared.

How to Save Many Steps.

A handy little article to have for the house is a small heavy board on casters. You can put your bucket on that when you are scrubbing and give it a kick forward with your toe instead of lifting it each time. Heavy boxes or baskets can be trundled safely over your floors with that instead of being carried.

A lady decided to give a house party. She had recently bought a hat stand and she was showing this to one of the visitors when her little son came in.

So engrossed was the hostess in pointing out the good points of the hat stand that for a few moments she did not notice the arrival of the little boy, but when she did she saw to her disgust that he was still wearing his hat.

"Tommy," she said crossly. "What did I buy that stand for?"

"For $2,00," retorted Tommy; "but you said I wasn't to tell anyone."

It's not what you pay for an article that determine its value—it's the service it gives that makes it either a good buy or a waste of money. A good article, bought at a low price shows good judgment—you can be proud of the goods you buy here, whether it is for work or play—for service or decoration. Making Americans.

A new feature of the Americanization movement, local "citizens' clubs," is making progress among the Ukranian immigrants in this country. They are being organized by American citizens of Ukranian origin, to bring their fellow countrymen into closer co-operation with the rest of the American people. Several clubs of this type have been in existence for a long time, but recently the idea has spread and citizens' clubs in Boston, Mass., and Providence, R. I., have been added within the last few weeks.

LOOK TO FUTURE EXPANSION

Civic Bedies of Kansas City Are Showing a Spirit Well Worthy of Emulation.

Just how valuable it may be to prepare for the orderly development of a city industrially is indicated in a piece of work which is now being undertaken by the city-planning commission and the chamber of commerce of Kansas City. The industrial department of the chamber aims to make a survey of industrial conditions in Kansas City which it may use in its own work, and the planning commission will seek much additional data through the survey which may be used to excellent purpose by various committees of the commission, by the industries themselves and by other agencies concerned with the most businesslike and systematic expansion of the entire city.

sires to ascertain in this respect is hair curl." just what the most progressive and far-seeing business man would have in order to make possible the best development of his interests. The commission already has committees at work obtaining facts about Kansas City's present status and probable future expansion in respect to commercial, residential and industrial districts; recreation facilities, highways and transportation conditions; and it has prepared a basic map which makes zoning of the city possible. But the necessity of obtaining such facts as these about the city's industries. as well as the value of the facts, is at once evident:

What industries has the city? What is likely to be the expansion of these periods of ten, twenty or thirty years?

Where will the expansion be? What additional industries is Kansas City likely to have?

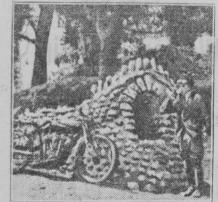

Where will they be placed?

Where will the additional employees

HOW CITY CONSERVED TREES

Los Angeles Built "Island" Around Unusually Fine Cluster in Path of Grading.

When the city of Los Angeles recently cut North Broadway through loose in the cabbage patch the hull behavior. Holgate square there was a clump of fine old pepper trees directly in the path of the grading. So the city, rather than cut the trees down, built an "island" around them. An unusual feature of the island is an ornamental drinking fountain which was built for the purpose of supplying thirsty motorists and pedestrians with a refreshing draught of Adam's ale. The water is piped to the fountain from a street main .- Popular Science Monthly.

School Gardens.

Is there ground available for school gardens? Some schools have rented vacant lots and fields near the school house for their gardens and have succeeded in earning money on them, which has been used for other school projects or equipment. A certain school has an orchard of 100 trees, in which the children are given practical instruction on the care of fruit trees; the profit from the sale of the fruit goes to the school; and the orchard serves as a model for the community.

Is it possible or advisable in your school to have gardens and orchards so managed that they will make substantial contributions to the upkeep of various school activities, and at the same time provide valuable practical laboratory training for the pupils? This is a community problem, which may be solved best, perhaps, by general discussion.

"City Plan" Works Well.

The city plan has been tried in many cities with success. St. Louis and Milwaukee are examples. Under such a plan the city does not repeat obvious mistakes. At present the man who builds a home has no assurance that a filling station will not be his next-door neighbor tomorrow. He may move into another district and later see a factory shut off his light and air. The city plan idea, summed up, is that there is a place for everything and that everything should be in its place. The only way that idea can be made effective is through laws giving the planners the legal right to act.—Exchange.

"'Brave!' probably." "No. He said: 'A little more action, please.' Then I quit."

Shifted Responsibilities. "The trouble with most politicians is that they promise more than they

BUILD YOUR MOVIE

Here Is the Scenario for a Real Thriller.

Being the True and Authentic History of Muggerby Biffgang, With Full Explanation of His Long Stay in Jail.

Synopsis of preceding chapters: Muggerby Biffgang is a dangerous criminal-a gambler for high stakesa man mighty hard to catch because of his uncanny impersonal genius. The detectives follow him to a restaurant of underworld rendezvous, surround the place, put a squad on the roof and two under the cellar.

They go in, only to find a waiter and several customers. They search and research the place, arrest the whole bunch, only to find that Muggerby Biffgang had been the very cook who had generously given them each a piece of dried apple pie and whom in gratitude they had left behind. Things are getting desperate for the police force. Several times they have burst into his gambling den only to find nothing; no faro tables, no roulette wheel; not even a deck of Old Maid cards.

Dear, dear! Then one day, Chinchilla, the pretty daughter of a Spanish sombrero, rushed into headquarters and informed the police of a dangerous counterfeiting den. She has heard the clinking of coins, and curses, But the police fly on the instant and it is only when they have gone 40 miles that they remember they had forgotten to ask Chinchilla where the den was.

However, they scour and find it and break in upon the counterfeiters with wielded clubs and drawn revolvers. And Joy of Jubilations! Who should be the leader of the band but the treacherous thug, Muggerby Biffgang, the great and dangerous gambler of millions! Seizing the unlawful paraphernalia, they kick the whole gang into jail. But mystery of mysteries!

The only things they find in the junk are double-headed pennies. The plot is apparent. In shooting the pennies and by taking heads, the gang always played to win. Very simple. The warden of the jail asks each prisoner the same queer question. "Do you play checkers?" Afraid that this is some sort of a trap they each say "No!" very vehemently.

But Muggerby, when his turn comes, is so deep in thought that his caution deserts him and he says: "Yes!" The next day all the prisoners are released but Muggerby, who is given a year's sentence with 11 months off for good

"Dear warden," asked Muggerby, 20 years later, now a white-haired man, "why, when my sentence was a year, have you kept me 20 years?"

"Because, dear prisoner, you were the only one who could beat me at checkers around here, and I've kept you here until I found out all of your pet moves," answered the warden, wondering why Muggerby had never asked him before.-Detroit Free Press.

EDWARD O. WEANT,

MANY REASONS FOR FAILURE

Average Man Would Do Well to Consider Whether His Faults Are in This List.

Men fail for various reasons, little and big. Most men fail because they are lazy. To be lazy means-to be late, to be slovenly, to be a poor economist of time, to shirk responsibility. It means to say of anything that is clamoring to be done: "No, I'm not going to do that, because it isn't my work." Laziness is at the back of most of the lesser reasons for failure. The minor causes are derivatives from that one great major cause. It is so easy to dream in the sun and let the world go by; to dawdle and procrastinate, till one wakes up-too late. Late and lazy are, in fact, first cousins.

If you are late, you waste other people's time as well as your own.

Lazy people have all the time there is, and yet they haven't time to be polite. They disdain the forms of ceremony that sweeten life.

They are grouchy, surly, gruff. It pains them to be pleasant, to say hanks and to smile. To be deferential is not to be servile. It is merely to be decently respectful.

The biggest men are the most unassuming and the most unpresuming.

It is the insignificant people who fluff themselves up with a false and foolish pride and are forever orating, from the flimsy and slippery platform of their own touchy dignity.

Failure is generally elective. It rests with the man himself to decide whether he cares enough for success to pay the price.-Philadelphia Publie Ledger.

MIGHT BE STRAIGHTENED OUT

Under the Circumstances, There Is More Than a Possibility of a Happy Ending.

The young professor stopped, and "I'm afraid I have bored you-have been lecturing," he said. "No, it was very interesting," she declared. "But," she added artlessly, "it does not change my ideas at all. I like tall men. You are over six feet, aren't you?" "And I-I admit I've always had a weakness for small women," he declared. "Now you-you hardly come up to my shoulder, do you?" And just to make sure whether or not she did, she moved over as near as she could without violating that law of nature which prohibits two bodies from simultaneously occupying the same space, and looked up into his eyes, and he looked down into hers, and-It certainly was a shame that they were standing on the library terrace and that it was broad daylight, with about a hundred thousand people in plain sight. But as they strolled away together, he was asking with impressive earnestness if she would be at home that evening, and she was telling him fervently that she would so it will probably be all right,-Ex-

April War Month for United States. In American history every one of our important wars, with one exception, began in April. The exception was the War of 1812-and many historians regard that not as a separate war but as a continuation of the War of Independence. The War of 1812 was declared in June. The first of our great wars, the Revolutionary war, or War for Independence, began with the fighting at Lexington and Concord, Mass., April 19, 1776. War against Mexico was declared April 24, 1846, and the Civil war began with the firing of the first gun against Fort Sumter, April 12.

1861. War against Spain was declared April 24, 1898. The participation of the United States in the World war dates from April 6, 1917, when congress declared war against Germany.

Large "Scotsmen." Professor Keith, lecturing on the way man is built, dubbed him the skyscraper of the animal world, since he is built on skyscraper pattern; and referred to the extraordinary number of high cranes to be seen just now in London. An architect, speaking of the same thing, somewhat mystified a group of clubmen by remarking: "I never saw so many large Scotsmen in London in my life. One in the city has an arm ninety feet in length, and can lift seven tons at a radius of sixty-five to forty feet a minute." It turned out that "Scotsmen" is the trade term for the crane.-London

Removing Tattoo Marks.

A correspondent of the Chemical News says that tattoo marks will disappear by first being well rubbed with a salve of pure acetic acid and lard, then with a solution of potash, and finally with hydrochloric acid.

These marks are also said to be removed by the application of salicilic acid and glycerin. A compress is applied over the paste, and the whole secured with sticking plaster. After eight days the paste is taken off, the dead skin removed, and the application of the paste repeated (as a rule about three times). The simplest and eastiest method of removing tattoo is said to be that of tattooing over the marks with pure milk.

Literature Mixed With Love

By FREDERICK HART

Ommunicommunico

The search for books, old and new, carried Ralph Gordon into many strange byways. He had an independent income, and as he was a young man with ambitions he set out to make himself an authority on English literature, particularly that of the later Elizabethan period. He went far for his books, and spent much money; but he had the satisfaction of seeing his collection grow and himself acknowledged among those who know as a real bibliophile. He even went so far as to write a little on the subject.

One day when he was cataloguing his treasures he found that his edition of Ben Jonson was incomplete-that it lacked a small and comparatively obscure volume of the writer's early days, one not included in the standard sets. He immediately set about to remedy this omission.

But the small book eluded him. His agents were certain that there was a copy in America-in fact, right in New York, where Ralph Gordon lived; but their efforts were unavailing. After a thorough combing of the larger bookstores, Gordon announced that he himself was going to take up the trail.

His search led him one day to a small shop on the West side—one displaying tattered editions of one-time thrillers, dust-covered sets of for-titen writers, and a series of paper-backs setting forth the adventures of such magnificent heroes as Dave Dauntless and Old King Brady. He entered the place without hope; it merely was the book-lover's instinct that prompted him to overlook no possible source, however unpromising. In the dim, dusty light of the shop be saw a girl come forward to wait on him.

"Have you-" he began and then gasped. The absurdity of the question he was about to ask dawned on him.

"What's the Matter?"

What could a girl in a dirty old second-hand shop know of Ben Jonson? But his surprise was boundless when she replied:

"No, we haven't-but we can get it

"What?" he ejaculated stupidly. "Oh, I know you, Mr. Ralph Gordon," she said with a smile. "And I know all about the book you're looking for. I said we could get it for you because all good bookstores say that when you ask them for what they haven't got, Isn't that so?"

Ralph Gordon looked more closely at her, and suddenly forgot all about his quest. In that moment those blue eyes, that laughing little mouth, and the adorable turned-up nose seemed to him more important than Ben Jonson. He leaned on the counter and began to talk to her. To his amazement he found that she knew almost as much about Elizabethan literature as he himself. He deliberately tested her by asking catch questions, and was delighted as she evaded his traps. She, in her turn, was charmed by his manner, and the two parted the best of friends. Gordon promised to return in a few days, "to see if the Jonson book had come from the printers." The incident had seemed so natural that it did not occur to him till he was well on his way home to wonder why the girl clerk in a cheap bookstore knew so much, nor to be amazed that one with her evident breeding and good looks should work there. He went back in a few days and renewed his acquaintance. He demanded her name, but she refused to give it to him, though he begged hard. Almost every week he found opportunity to go down to the little shop, and it was not long till he was sure that he had fallen in love with the adorable little saleswoman. And he did not even know her name!

Business took him away from New York for a month. On his return he hastened to the little bookstore. It was late in the afternoon when he got there, and he was surprised to see a sign announcing a closing-out sale, and several hard-looking persons just leaving with their arms full of books. He entered. In a far corner he saw the familiar figure of the girl stooping over a pile of second-hand tomes. At his step she rose, looked at him, and then, seeing who he was, ran to greet him with a little sob. Her relief at his appearance was so great that in a moment he was clumsily patting her arm and whispering words of comfort in her ear.

When she could speak again he in quired gently, "What's the matter?" But instead of replying to his question she suddenly dried her eyes and exclaimed: "Oh! I almost forgot! Wait just a moment." And she darted off to a room behind the shop.

In an instant she was back, carrying something in her hand; and before he could speak she showed him, to his utter amazement, the longsought-after copy of Ben Jonson's little-known work.

"How-why-" he was beginning, when she silenced him.

"I'll tell you," she began. "This book was dad's chief treasure. I knew all about your wanting it, and urged him to let you have it, but he wouldn't, and insisted that I keep it from younot even tell you that he had it. It's a splendid edition, not a page missing, and really quite valuable."
"I see," he replied. He was turning the leaves-absently when a letter fell out. He picked it up, and his eye caught the name on the flyleaf.

"What's this?" he exclaimed. "Was your father Stephen Farwell?"
"Yes," she replied in a low voice.

Ralph Gordon knew Stephen Farwell, as every other book-collector did, as an eccentric old man whose chief passion, books, had impoverished him, and who had disappeared some years ago. And he had been keeping a shop on the West side all this time! And this beautiful girl, his daughter, had hidden herself with him! Tears came to Ralph Gordon's eyes.

"But will he want to part with it now?" he asked gently.

"He-he died last week," said the girl in a barely audible whisper. "I must get rid of these old books and things-but I wanted you to have this

Ralph Gordon hesitated no longer. "I want it," he said, "but I want you too," As soon as she had told him who her father was he had known her name. "Won't you let me take you and show you all my books and things-and love you a little when you aren't looking at them?" She smiled up at him through her

"Of course I will," she whispered. From the floor the forgotten Ben Jonson stared up at the pair of them and seemed to say philosophically, "Well, they did such things in my day

GO BACK TO HOME STREAM

Salmon Invariably Return to Water in Which They Were Spawned, Seeming to Know It.

It has long been maintained by sa mon fishermen, writes Dr. B. W. Everman in the Scientific Monthly, that salmon, when mature, usually, if not invariably, return to the particular stream in which they were hatched. It was generally believed that a great majority of the fish hatched in any particular stream would return to that identical stream when mature and ready to spawn, but that a good many would, or might, go to other streams. Some thought that the salmon return to their own stream because they possess a marvelous geographic or homing instinct, while others maintained that the salmon, after going down to sea as fry or fingerlings, do not wander far from the mouth of the stream in which they were hatched, and that, when they reach maturity, they seek fresh water; and the fresh water most easily found is that nearest at hand, which is the water of the stream in which they were hatched; they therefore ascend that particular stream.

Study of the scales has shown that the salmon of each particular stream possess scale characters in common which enable them to be distinguished from the salmon of any other stream, however near the streams may be to each other.

Got the Best of Him.

As Harry, who is six years old, came in the back door, he was saying to himself: "Well, I got the best of him that time."

His mother happened to be in the kitchen. "Harry, have you and the neighbor boy been fighting again?" she asked.

Harry was quick to reply: "Not this time. You know when he was over here last week, we made a kite, and you made me let him take it home with him. Yesterday we made a birdhouse, and he got to take it home. So today we dug holes, and he didn't take them home with him." -Indianapolis News.

Homesickness.

Bridget was suffering from nostal-

"You ought to be contented and not pine for your old home, Bridget," said her mistress. "You are earning good wages, your work is light, everyone is kind to you and you have lots of friends here."

"Yes, mum," sadly replied Bridget, "but it's not the place where I be that makes me homesick, it's the place where I don't be."

JAPAN HONORS MEN WHO HAVE DONE BIG THINGS .-Many kinds of decorations are instituted in Japan. They are the Grand Cordon of Chrysanthemums, granted only to holders of the Grand Order of Merit; the Grand Cordon of the Rising Sun and Paulownia, granted to holders of first-class merit; the order of the Rising Sun (1st to 16th grades); order of the Sacred Treasure (1st to 8th grade); order of the Crown (1st to 8th grades, and only for women); order of Paulownia (7th-8th grades), and lastly, order of the Golden Kite (1st to 7th grades).

The Golden Kite carries an annuity ranging from 1,500 yen a year, granted to a holder of the first grade, and 100 yen granted to a holder of the seventh, the lowest class. This kind of honor is granted only to soldiers who have done acts of bravery

Besides the above seven classes there are the Blue Ribbon medal, conferred on ordinary people who distinguish themselves in the cause of public service; the Green Ribbon medal, conferred on those distinguished for filial piety, and the Red Ribbon medal, granted to those who rescue human lives at the peril of their own lives.

The Grand Order of Merit and the Grand Cordon of the Chrysanthemum, the highest honor conferred on Japanese, have been invested on the following personages, exclusive of imperial princes and those deceased: Marshal Prince Yamagata, Marquis Matsukata, Marquis Okuma, Marquis Salonji, Prince Tokudaiji, and Admiral Count Togo. The first four mentioned are known as Genroes.—East and West News.

MESSAGE SENT AS WRITTEN

How It Has Been Made Possible to Transfer Original Handwriting Over Cable System.

A wire and cable system, has been invented, in Christiania, Norway, by which it is possible to transfer a picture or a message in original handwriting over a practically unlimited distance. The device was publicly tested recently between two 600-mile points, and was reported successful. The manuscript to be transferred is placed on a metallic cylinder-somewhat resembling an original wax phonograph cylinder—covered with a photographic film and exposed to a strong are light. The manuscript is copied on the cylinder film, developed and chronographically etched into the metal. The cylinder is then placed on the sending apparatus, to which is transmitted an electric current going to the receiving apparatus. When the cylinder rotates a needle moves on it, cript it causes a short circuit, which is transmitted to the receiving apparatus with its photographic paper on which the copy is

How French Combat House Shortage.

Parisians were startled recently when they saw a small, two-story house on wheels being hauled through the city streets by a motor car, the Scientific American states. And they were still mere startled when the inventor invited them to inspect the interior, thus revealing a surprisingly large range of accommodations for so small a domicile.

The house mounted on wheels while being transported, consists of four rooms, including kitchen, heating equipment, miniature staircase and modern conveniences. The home is eight feet wide and fifteen feet high, but by means of telescoping walls, it can be brought down to 91/2 feet in height to facilitate transportation. The French government has ordered a considerable number of these portable houses for the inhabitants of the devastated regions, inasmuch as they are being turned out for $835 complete.

How Ocean Is Robbing River.

A curious result of a study of the Blue Ridge mountain region in North Carolina and Virginia is the showing that the Atlantic is slowly gaining some of the waters that have heretofore flowed toward the Mississippi.

This arises from the fact that the Blue Ridge, instead of being acrest with strong slopes on each side, is an escarpment separating a mountainous upland on the southeast; and the highlevel headwaters of the streams that flow toward the Mississippi are continually losing length by the retreat of the escarpment, through the retrogressive erosion of the low-level headwaters of the Atlantic-seeking streams. From a practical point of view, of course, the change is very slow.

WHY=

Law Officers Are Universally Known as Policemen.

In ye olden days the law officer in England whose duty it was to apprehend criminals, was known as "the catch-pole" because of a peculiar instrument he used to catch criminals by the neck.

The pole was about six feet long and the collar was slightly flexible, and in "catch-poles" used on serious offenders the collar was studded with spikes on the inside.

While such instruments were being used in England, the French had adapted the name "police" from a long line of language ancestors, beginning with the Greek word for "state."

From the Greek the word was transferred to the German "polizel," and by the Italians as "polizia." The French corrupted it into police, and as such it was finally adopted by the English and eventually found its way to America as the term for officials entrusted with enforcing the laws of

As late as 1720 the word was still considered foreign by English writers, and it was not until many years after that that it came into common usage. Other countries still use different names for law enforcement officers. The military police of Italy, for instance, are known as sbirri, and in France they are called gendarmerie.

Americans, as usual, are not content with calling policemen simply police, and have invented a number of nicknames, such as "copper," which came supposedly from the fact that many police wore copper buttons on their uniforms, and "dicks," slang shortening for detective.-Chicago

LIKE THE PREFERRED STOCK

Why Experienced Investors Prefer That Form of Security to Old Form of Bond Issues.

A. B. Farquhar in his memoirs, in System, tells how the idea of preferred stock originated a good many years ago when corporate organization was less general than it is today:

"The preferred stock was devised by the longer-headed corporate organizers, who saw that in the case of an industrial organization an issue of bonds constituted a danger, for the interest had to be paid whether or not any profitable business was done. A company was safer with the preferred stock issue than with the bond issue, which generally involves a mortgage. "But it was not until very recent years that more astute investors really began to appreciate the fact that the preferred stock of a company without bond issues is sometimes a better security than would be a bond of the same company. It took a long time to get away from the real-estate mortgage idea and to realize that an investor could in any event get a return only from what the corporation earned, and that a perfectly sound corporation might, by reason of a couple of bad years, be forced to borrow money to avoid a default in bond touching every point on the cylinder. interest, and thus invite a failure that Whenever it touches the copied letters | would not occur if it had been perthrough the passing of stock dividends. For a foreclosure sale of a big property rarely fetches 100 per cent cash. As a rule, however, the first mortgage bonds of good companies which have been in successful operation for some time and earned several times their interest charges are rightly regarded as safer investments than stocks."

Why Is a Curly Head?

This question is asked thousands of times, but never stays answered. Yet the answer is simple-if you know the secret. The twist in an African negro's hair, for instance, tends to keep him cool during the heat of the sun. Examine the furs of the different animals and it will be seen that those with straight-haired pelts live in the northern sections of the world, while those with curly fur come from the warmer climates. In the same way those which have white hair come from the region of snow and ice, while those with black or brown hair inhabit the more temperate climates. The explanation is that the fur of the northern animals is intended principally to keep its wearers warm, and that of the animals which live in tropical climates is to protect them from the direct rays of the sun-this result being accomplished by the curls and kinks of the black or brown fur.

Why Face Is Uplifted.

Holding the head upward in rather a strained position has nothing to do with vision. The real reason is to be found partly in the effort of strained attention natural in such circumstances, partly in the instinctive attempt to make the greatest possible use of the senses that are left, that of touch excited by contact of the air as it meets the face, and that of smell. The sniffing to catch some faint odor is always accompanied by an uplifted face. It begins with this and soon unconsciously becomes a

The Shipibos Indians of South America worship the moon because she comes to give light in the night, while the sun shines only in the day, when no light is needed. This statement, made by Dr. W. C. LESSON FOR JUNE 26

REVIEW: THE SOCIAL TASK OF THE CHURCH.

GOLDEN TEXT-He shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people.-Rev.

DEVOTIONAL READING-Rev. 21:1-14. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Way Jesus Wants Us to Live.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Things Jesus Wants Us to Do INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC The Challenge to Boys and Girls.
 YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
 The Challenge to the Church.

Revelation 21:1-14 is the passage of Scripture selected for devotional reading. Instead of attempting to review the lessons of the quarter it would be of great interest and profit to enter into a detailed study of this Scripture. The following outline may be helpful. I. The New Heaven and the New Earth (vv. 1, 2); II. The New People (vv. 3-8); III. The New Jerusalem (vv. 9-14). Another way would be to assign the Golden Texts to different members of the class asking them to give the part of the particular lesson which illustrates the teachings of the text.

Still another way would be to summarize the different Scripture passages, giving the leading lessons of each. The following is given by way of suggestion:

1. The believer's supreme obligation is to present himself as a living sacrifice to God. The grand reason for so doing is that he has received the mercies of God. The one so yielded will love his fellow believer sin-

II. The believer's body is God's property—the temple of the Holy Ghost; therefore we are under solemn obligation to use it for His glory.

III. Since God the Father and Jesus Christ work, it is incumbent upon all to work, and the man who will not work should not eat.

IV. God hates the greed that moves men to dishonest methods in order to get rich. His judgment shall fall upon

V. True education will lead one to Christ. The one only book which tells about him is the Bible. No one can call himself educated who is ignorant of the Bible.

VI. God rested when His work of ereation was done. On this basis He has established the law of labor and rest. The obligation to cease from labor is that one may remember God.

VII. The church is an organism as the human body. In order that there may be real helpful co-operation there must be membership in that body.

VIII. Jesus should be welcomed as a guest into every home. He is an example of an obedient son in the home.

IX. The most important question is not "Who is my neighbor?" but "To whom can I be a neighbor?" Being a neighbor is seeing those about who need help and rendering such help in loving sympathy.

X. The Christian is a citizen as well as a church member. Intelligent Christians will show proper loyalty to the

XI. When Christ shall reign as King there shall be peace all over the world between animals and men. The supreme business of the believer in this dispensation is to preach the gospel to all the world as a witness.

XII. Jesus came and preached the gospel to the poor, but shall come again to judge the world and reign as

Since the whole of man's duty is summed up by Christ in duty to God and duty to man (Matt. 22:36-40), it would be profitable to go through the quarter's lesson and set down the teachings under House Divided Against Itself.

For until these wounds are healed the church must present herself as a house divided against itself; and, because the Savior's prayer for a unity in the "one fold" remains unfulfilled, His enemies continue to triumph, and the forces which make for righteousness are thwarted.-Bishop Howden.

Blessed Mysteries of Life.

JUNE 26 Men and Women Whose Lives Should Inspire Us Hebrews 11:32-40; 12:1,2

The Epistle to the Hebrews is referred to by the writer as a "word of exhortation" (13:22.) It contains many appeals to Christian loyalty perservance. The expression 'let us" is of frequent occurrence: "let us come boldly to the throne of grace," "let us draw near," "let us hold fast," "let us consider one another." Then again in our lesson we have the words, "Let us lay aside every weight," "let us run with pa-tience the race that is set before us."

Exhortation and appeal, in order to win, must be based on and buttressed by argument and example. The basic fact in this epistle is the priesthood of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is here revealed as our representative in heaven; "touched with the feeling of our infirmities" and "able to save to the uttermost, all that come unto God by him." On this fact so clearly revealed in this epistle, the exhortations and appeals are based. Then they are supported by the examples of godly men and wo-men such as we find in this chapter, who overcame all adverse conditions and opposing forces. These are the "lives that inspire."

The power by which they over-came was that of faith. This is asserted with such plainness and persistence that no reader can possibly mistake its place and power in victorious living. Faith is the working principle of the Christian life. It marks not only the commencement of that lie, but also its continuance and

Dr. Moffatt's translation of the opening words of this chapter gives a good definition of faith, "Faith means that we are convinced of what we do not see. It was for this that the men of old won their record."

The men and women whose acts are recorded in this chapter are an inspiration to us today, not because they are examples of greatness, but because they are examples of faith and its achievements. Let us consider their career and copy their fourths grade Arab, the dam of King-

In Egypt, as in all countries, we find that building forms were dictated by and adapted to the exigencies of climate. The constructive instinct, since the beginning of time, apparently, has been strong in the average man, and nowhere did it impress itself in simpler, more enduring and more majestic forms than in Egypt.

This is true, despite the fact that the Egyptians professed, in view of the brevity of life, to consider their dwellings as mere "wayside inns," and to regard it, therefore, a matter of comparative indifference how they were constructed. Notwithstanding this attitude as to earthly dwelling places, the rich and great lavished wealth upon their palaces and great houses. The streets of Thebes, Memphis and Heliopolis were bordered with houses, plain and blank of exterior, but embellished within with utmost luxury and magnificence .- Ex-

Democratic Cigar Names.

The nomenclature of the cigar trade is one of the very interesting phases Public Ledger. No agent intent upon building up a market for a 10 cent cigar ever named it for a statesman. He complimented, instead, an actor, a philanthropist, a race horse, a hypothetical Indian maiden or a supposititious Spanish grandee. To have named a 10 cent clgar for a statesman would have been to "queer" both the cigar and its involuntary patron. The people would not have stood for that sort of thing. It would have presumed a certain superiority which they would have rebuked both at the cigar stand and at the polls.

Cure for Flat Feet.

Are you flat-footed? If you don't know, the next time you take a bath, observe the impressions that your wet feet make. If your feet are normal, there will be a narrow line from heel to toe on the outside; if they are flat, the entire bottom of the foot will

How can you cure flat-footedness? Buy a handful of marbles, place them in two rows, and start picking them up with your toes. To do this you must curl up your toes; as a result the muscles of the feet will be exercised and thereby strengthened .- Popular Science Monthly.

ARAB HORSE EASILY LEADER

Finest Specimens of the Race, of Which the United States Has the Best, is Abundant Proof.

The tradition ascribing to the Arab horse extraordinary endurance is sustained by abundant evidence. As illustrătion, a 300-mile test was made in 1919 from Fort Ethan Allan, Vermont, to Camp Devens, Massachusetts, and the first horse to finish was a pure-bred Arab mare named Ramla, which made the distance in 57 hours 26 minutes and 30 seconds; the animal placed second was Kingfisher, three-fourths Arab and one-fourth thoroughbred. The animal that finished third in the endurance test was also a pure-bred Arab mare, and the one to finish fourth was a three-wood pulp called papier mache is claimed by Germans to be the invention of one Martin, a snuff-box maker of Nuremberg, about 1740. While recent researches have confirmed the fact that he made the first papier mache snuff boxes, they disclosed that the method itself had been taught him by a Frenchman named Lefevre.

Baskerville, the Birmingham printer, became interested in the process in 1745 and laid the foundation for

But, supposing the case of a heart that beats 75 times a minute, expelling ten cubic inches of blood at each "stroke," it is apparent that the little pump delivers 45 cubic inches in one hour, over 1,000,000 cubic inches in a day, or (as may be easily reckoned)

American calls attention to the fact that a human heart has four compartments-two auricles and two ventricles. The auricles are merely reservoirs. The energy developed by the pump is furnished by the right and left ventricles-the right one sending impure blood to the lungs and the left one forcing the purified blood into cir-

Why Suffer from Rheumatism?

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.

FIRST—It should be specially designed for your particular type of figure—not only to fit it, but to improve its lines.

SECOND—It should provide strong support at the hips where the strain is greatest. Warner, designers have accomplished this by inventing the double-skirt, which holds the hips correctly. THIRD-It should provide comfort and ease of movement. Below the waist, where the strength is needed, they are strong. Above the waist, where greater flexibility is needed they are pliant and easy. FOURTH-Your Corset should be washable and proof against rusting breaking or tearing. Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets are guaranteed absolutely not to rust, break or tear.

To Whom it May Concern.

Owing to the number of candidates seeking the office of Register of SHIRTS FOR SALE, while they last. Wills for Carroll County, and knowing that a candidate is often measured by the degree of local support which he obtains in his home community, we desire to assure the voters of the Republican party that Mr. William F. Bricker, of Taneytown, has the united support of the party in Taneytown district, and we heartily commend him to the Republican voters in other districts of the FETTLE county, and ask that they cast their votes for him for nomination for the of-
