COUNTY TAX RATES IN MARYLAND.

Carroll County is Seventh in the Lowness of its Rate.

The following is a complete list of the tax rates of the various counties in this state, as issued by the office of the State Tax Commission, together with the rate for 1920 for the purpose of comparison.

County	1920	1921
Allegany	1.42	$1.37
Anne Arundel	1.52	1.51
Baltimore City	2.97	2.97
Balto. County	1.13	1.78
Calvert	2.10	1.90%
Caroline	1.49	1.35
Carroll	1.25	1.40
Cecil	1.70	1.50
Charles	1.63	1.50
Dorchester	1.63	1.60
Frederick	1.78	1.41
Garrett	1.66	1.66
Harford	1.80	1.60
Howard	1.25	1.25
Kent	2.51	1.48
Montgomery	1.19	1.40
Prince George's	1.34	1.28
Queen Anne's	1.62	1.41
St. Mary's	1.25	1.46
Somerset	1.95	1.47
Talbot	1.55	1.39
Washington	1.00	1.10
Wicomico	1.63	1.42/3
Worcester	1.50	1.40

Although the rate for Carroll is 15c higher than last year, it stands seventh, only six counties—Allegany, Caroline, Howard, Prince Georges, Talbot and Washington—having a lower rate, two of which, Allegany and Washington, are enabled to enjoy a lower rate because of the great increase in valuation of property in Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Sunday School Rally in Taneytown.

There will be a rally of the Sunday Schools of Taneytown district, under the auspices of the Carroll County Sunday School Association, in the Lutheran Church, Rev. L. B. Hafer, pastor, on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 4, at 2:30 o'clock. A strong program has been prepared. Rev. D. Ross Murphy, President of Blue Ridge College will make the principal address, and Dr. and Mrs. Christy, noted gospel singers, of Baltimore, will delight all with their music.

Every school in the district is urged to send as many representatives as possible.

Basehoar Family Reunion.

The family of the late Amos and Catherine Basehoar held their annual reunion at the home of Chas. H. Basehoar and family, East King Street, Littlestown, on Wednesday. The hour set for meeting was 11 A. M. After all had gathered the party motored to the Aikland House, Abbottstown, where a sumptuous banquet was served. After the banquet the party returned to Littlestown. Mr. Chas. H. Basehoar called the party to order.

First in order were the devotional services, singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," prayer and scripture reading. Then followed felicitations and addresses by every one present. All joined in declaring the reunion a grand success. After singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," the party went to the playground where every one indulged in playing games, while the children delighted themselves with the swings, sliding board, etc. At 6:30 P. M., a buffet luncheon was served after which all returned to their respective homes.

The following persons were present: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Basehoar and son, Clyde, Littlestown; Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Garner, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Mehring, Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Benner and son, Robert, Mr. Augustus Basehoar, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mehring and son, Richard, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Baumgardner and daughter, Mildred, of Taneytown; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Basehoar, of Gettysburg; Dr. and Mrs. C. Lau and son Irvin, Jr., of Catawissa; Mr. and Mrs. John Hoagland and children, William, Robert and Anna, of New York City; Walter Purdy, of Moundsville, W. Va.—Littlestown Independent.

Annual County Statement.

The annual financial statement of Carroll County appears in this issue, the copy having been received too late for last week's issue. We have no doubt that our readers will find this statement particularly interesting, this year, and advise that it be retained for reference. These statements show "where the money goes," and represent the chief source of information to tax-payers as to whether the officials of the county are wise stewards.

Geo. W. Yeiser at Crater Lake.

A handsome folder was received by the editor, this week, from Geo. W. Yeiser and wife, who are making an extensive tour of this country, and who were then at Crater Lake, Oregon, that is described as "the most gorgeously beautiful lake on this planet." It is 6177 feet above sea level, its edges being as high as 8000 feet, and the lake has a depth of 2000 feet or more, with a diameter of 5 1/2 miles. Mr. Yeiser is having a great trip.

REGISTRATION DAY, SEPT. 6.

Let Everybody be Qualified to Vote at the Primary.

The registration date for the primary election is Tuesday, Sept. 6, from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. All who register on this date can vote at the primary election, in September as well as at the general election in November. The Record is a strong advocate of participation in elections of all kinds, and especially the primary election, which so many take no account of.

Carroll is hardly a county in which a nomination can be said to be equivalent to an election, as is the case in some counties; and yet, the primary election is the place at which to begin, to secure the best officials. The primary election gives the opportunity for each party to select its strongest leaders for the November election, by weeding out the weakest. That the primary election law has demonstrated itself to be a failure, largely, and a heavy additional expense without compensating benefits, does not mean that it should be ignored. The law, in fact, would not be so bad, if the people would interest themselves in it, as generally as they do in the regular election.

We therefore urge all of our voter readers, of both sexes, to give all of the aspirants for office a "looking over," and vote accordingly, always with the object in view of electing those who promise to best conduct the affairs of the county, and who will best represent all of the districts in the county, without an unfair preponderance of officials in any one section. Therefore, take interest in this Sept. 6 registration day, by seeing that all who are unregistered have their names placed on the books, and made qualified to vote for the candidates at the general election in November.

Help Save a Life.

One loaf of bread a day for each woman and child is the allowance at Refugee Camp No. 1, Constantinople, and the camp is told about in a letter just received at Maryland headquarters. Near East Relief, from C. V. Vickery, General Secretary, of the relief organization. Mr. Vickery is one of a party from America now on an inspection tour of the Caucasus to ascertain actual conditions there and this camp is only one of the places seen that emphasizes the need of food and which form an incentive to the farmers of Maryland to give grain in the present appeal of the Near East Relief.

This appeal of the relief organization asks the farmers of the state to give 14,000 bushels each of corn and wheat of their surplus to feed hundreds of thousands in the Caucasus and the Levant who face starvation. These starving people include orphans, hospital patients and new refugees from the Greek-Turk fighting. The Near East Relief has extended the closing time of the appeal until August 31.

All parts of the state are showing interest in this campaign. At one meeting in Washington county, the farmers, after hearing addresses on the appeal, immediately contributed 200 bushels of grain. Talbot county is going strong; Frederick county is going through the county in autos, placing posters in mills and stores; at Preston, Caroline county, the Farmers' Association endorsed the campaign, members will canvass the county, a warehouse was selected for the assembling point and a committee of three appointed to be there all the day of August 20, the ingathering day. Farmers organizations all through the state are endorsing the appeal. It is really an appeal from the farmers to the farmers.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

The Carroll County Pomona Grange will hold its next quarterly meeting at Medford Grange Hall, on Saturday, Sept. 3, at 10 A. M. There will be an open meeting in the afternoon, when a number of eminent speakers will be present. Music will be furnished by the Medford quartet and orchestra. The public is invited to the afternoon session.

Mr. James White Killed.

Mr. James White, son of Mr. and Mrs. John White, of Bruceville, was killed in a collision on the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railway, Tuesday afternoon, near Revells Station. The collision was between a passenger train and a work train. Mr. White being motorman on the latter, and almost instantly killed. The conductor of the train was fatally injured and died shortly after the mishap. It is said that the work train should have been on a siding. His age was about 41 years. In addition to his parents he is survived by one brother, Scott, one sister, Mary, and two sons. Funeral services will be held this Saturday morning, at the Lutheran Church, Taneytown, in charge of Rev. L. B. Hafer.

U. S. Senator O. E. Parker and wife, called at Mt. Lake Park, one day last week, while on an auto trip over the Alleganias. He was recognized by only a few of the guests of the Hotel, among them being the Editor of the Record who had a pleasant chat with him for a few minutes. He expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the way the state roads built in that section under his administration, are holding up.

NO PANIC LIKELY

There is practically no longer the danger of a Nation-wide financial panic. Business indications everywhere show a slow but sure return to normal operations, the full force of which will not be felt until next year along all lines. Prices are apt to hold up for a year or more, with gradual declines, but the "readjustment" of business, following the war, bids fair to be successfully accomplished without serious financial crashes.

This winter is feared by some, especially as it will find many out of employment in the cities; and it is reasonably sure that there will be more than the normal number of failures in business between now and April 1, 1922—failures that are likely to occur in all lines of work—but in spite of these, the credit basis of the country is likely to be unshaken.

Undoubtedly, all is not yet clear sailing, as nobody knows what organized labor may turn up, nor what may grow out of world-wide conditions within the next six months, but financiers and industrial experts are generally of the opinion that if all classes stop "rocking the boat," and stick closely to sane transactions, the country is financially safe and sound.

The Emergency Agricultural Tariff bill, with a life of six months to be followed by permanent tariff legislation.

Declaration of peace between the United States and Germany and the repeal of many wartime measures. Action by the House, with the Senate yet to act, on tariff and taxation revision.

Immigration restriction legislation, as a forerunner of permanent legislation on an immigrant policy.

The bill increasing the authority and finances of the War Finance Corporation to extend aid in farm credits.

A measure consolidating various Government agencies having to do with the compensation, pensioning and rehabilitation of veterans of the World War.

Appropriation measures, including army and navy budgets, left over from the last Congress.

The refunding of loans to the Allied nations.

The Railroad funding bill, despite urgent pleas by the railroads for immediate assistance.

The permanent tariff bill, that will now likely go to the winter session.

The anti-beer bill, the passage of which has been temporarily prevented by a filibuster in the Senate, mainly over minor technicalities.

PEACE WITH GERMANY.

Harding Administration Negotiates Successful Instrument.

A diplomatic achievement of the first magnitude appears to have crowned the efforts of the Harding Administration to negotiate a separate treaty of peace between the United States and Germany. The President and Secretary Hughes appear to have drawn an instrument which accomplishes the virtual impossibility of pleasing Germany, the Allies, the Republican irreconcilables, the Democrats and, of course, the great body of Administration Republicans in the Senate. Not once since the signing of the armistice had all those forces been in accord.

President Harding, true to the principles of co-ordinate government, for which he contended when a member of the Senate and President Wilson elected to ignore the constitutional prerogatives of that body, submitted the text of the treaty to the Republican members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in the White House Wednesday morning before he would give the word that would enable Loring Dresel, American Commissioner to Berlin, to attach his signature in the name of the United States.

Following the White House conference President Harding, in recognition of the rights of the minority, had Secretary Hughes go to the Capitol to appear before a meeting of the full committee of the Senate Foreign Relations body. That session proved a veritable triumph for the Administration, as Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the committee and most stalwart champion of Woodrow Wilson's treaty policies, emerged from the committee room with the statement:

"I see no reason why the treaty will not be ratified promptly."

New Counterfeit Note.

Secret Service officials are bending every effort to locate what may prove to be the most efficient band of counterfeiters that has ever operated in the United States. It was learned, when a counterfeit $20 Federal Reserve note, said by bankers to be the best piece of workmanship of this kind ever seen, was shown to Washington tellers by a representative of the Treasury department.

Two pieces of Japanese paper scientifically joined together gave the body of the bill the proper thickness, feel and appearance, although, it was explained, insufficient silk had been used.

After magnifying the counterfeit note ten times it was possible to note a slight difference in the density of smoke coming from the funnels of a ship shown on the reverse side of the bill and the absence of the minute letters "F. R." which appear on the locomotive shown opposite the ship could be detected.

FIELD SELECTION OF SEED CORN.

Choose Ears from Ideal Stalks and Cure them Well.

It costs as much to plant and cultivate an acre producing 20 bushels of corn as one producing 40 bushels. So, with present labor costs, if a farmer could reduce his acreage one-half and still get the same corn yield he would consider it mighty good business.

Such a program is probably too much to expect, but the United States Department of Agriculture points out that the American farmer is getting altogether too little yield from his corn land. Just about this time of year a good many farmers are realizing it.

Now, or a little later, American farmers have an opportunity to start increasing next year's corn crop by the selection of seed. Every spring there is a frantic search for good seed corn, and much inferior seed is planted, with resulting inferior yields. The loss is largely due to delay or negligence. Autumn is the time to prepare for a profitable corn crop the following season.

Any intelligent farmer can go into his corn field when the corn is mature and select better seed than he can buy next spring. Unless a community has an experienced and honest corn breeder, the best place for the farmer to obtain seed corn is from the fields on his farm or in his neighborhood, which are planted with a variety that has generally proved successful in that particular locality. Too many people consider seed good simply because it will grow. To be first class, seed corn must be:

1. Well adapted to the climatic and soil conditions where it is to be planted.

2. Of a high-yielding variety and from high-yielding stalks of that variety.

3. Well matured and preserved from ripening time until planting time in a manner that will retain its full vitality.

4. Free from disease and insect injury. Such freedom may indicate resistance to infection.

As soon as the crop matures, go through the field with a picking bag and select ears from the stalks that have produced the most good corn without having had any special advantages such as excess of space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly with an unusual amount of space around them. Preference should be given the plants that have produced most heavily in competition with a full stand of vigorous plants. A well-balanced stalk bearing two good ears will usually be found to have produced as much seed as any other stalk. Both ears are equally valuable for seed, even though one may be much smaller than the other.

In the Central and Southern States, all other things being equal, short thick stalks are preferable. They are not so easily blown down, and in general are more productive than slender ones. In the more northern States two varieties are desirable—an early-maturing variety for grain and a later, ranker-growing one for ensilage. It is an excellent plant to select enough seed for two years.

Husked ears of seed corn should be put in a dry place with free circulation of air on the day they are picked. They should be placed so that the ears do not touch each other. They may be hung on a string, or a hatrack device can easily be made by cutting an electrically welded wire-mesh fence so as to leave one strand with short cross wires sticking out at intervals. After hanging in the shed or lying on the racks for two months the seed ears should be dry enough to keep safely and may be stored in moth-proof barrels, boxes, or crates, but should not be exposed to a damp atmosphere. Moth-proof boxes can easily be made with fly screen.

A Hog Cholera Epidemic.

Washington county is facing another hog cholera epidemic, according to United States Veterinary Inspector P. J. Case, who said recently that cholera was discovered on about 15 farms in the last few days. Many hogs have died and scores are ill.

Cholera is reported to exist on the farms of Hood Fisher, W. Stottleymer, William Easterday, O. B. Wyand, C. W. Byrd, Charles Thomas, David H. Snaveley, Chester Wyand, W. D. Hughes, H. H. Hetzel, Oscar Lapole, Edward Lewis, William Wilson and Norman Wilson, in the Sharpsburg-Keedysville section.

Herds are being vaccinated in the infected territory, with the hope that the spread of the disease may be checked.

Spring Sale Dates.

Those who have already selected their Spring sale dates should notify this office, not necessarily for publication, but for our private record, and in order to prevent possible duplication of dates in the same neighborhood. Our list of dates is frequently examined, and when no sale is registered with our office on a certain date, the inquirer has the right to suppose that there is no nearby sale on that date.

LARGEST AIR CRAFT EXPLODES.

Seventeen Officers and Men of the U. S. Navy Killed.

The ZR-2 the largest dirigible ever built, collapsed while flying over Hull, England, on Wednesday, and 44 of its 49 occupants were killed, seventeen of them being Americans.

The craft was manufactured for the U. S. Navy, and its cost was to have been $2,000,000. Its length was 695 feet, diameter 85 feet, had a lifting capacity of 83 tons, and accommodation for a crew of 42.

The ship was making its final trial trip preparatory to being turned over to the United States. Her speed was 70 miles an hour, and it was estimated that she could reach this country from England in 72 hours. The gasoline supply for the six engines was 10,900 gallons. The ship had been in the air 34 hours, and collapsed at a height of about 1000 feet, falling into the Humber river.

One theory of the cause of the disaster is that while the ship's rudders were being tested, the giant craft took a sharp turn, which caused her frame-work to buckle and that the explosion of a gasoline tank completed the tragedy of the air. The actual cause, however, never may be known. A rumor had been afloat for some days that the ZR-2 was structurally weak, but this was stoutly denied by all in authority.

Tens of thousands of spectators saw several men climb outside the balloon and drop from the falling mass, which was enveloped in the smoke, and others jump into the Humber as the crippled craft came over the water. As the dirigible struck, the wreckage above water was burning and there was slight chance for any of the men caught inside to escape.

Weather and Crops.

The weather was cool on the 17th, and from the 21st to the 23rd, and warm from the 18th to the 20th. For the entire week the mean temperature was about 1.5 degrees below the normal. Light showers occurred on the 17-18th, and on the 20th. The weekly rainfall averaged from one-third to one-half of the normal. Sunshine was abundant.

The weather of the week was favorable for plant growth, maturing of crops, and farming operations.

Corn continues in good to excellent condition, and the ears are filling well. Late potatoes continue to do well, and are blooming. Sweet potatoes are in good to excellent condition; also truck crops and gardens.

Pastures are good. Early tobacco continues to be harvested, and is a poor crop. Late tobacco is in fair condition and improving.

Harvesting of tomatoes, sugar corn, cantaloupes, melons, and truck continues; cantaloupes, especially are a fine crop.

Threshing of oats continues in Allegany and Garrett counties. Buckwheat is in full bloom in Garrett county.

Plowing for fall seeding continues and is nearing completion.

August to date has been especially fine in Maryland, with about normal rainfall and a delightful temperature. Even in Baltimore a temperature above 90 degrees has not once been recorded. In spite of the cool weather, however, the growing season in Maryland is not behind the normal for this date, and in some sections it is slightly ahead of normal. The cool waves that have swept over Maryland so frequently this month have come from the "Medicine Hat" section of Canada, which is north of Montana and the Dakotas.

The Marvelous Temple Gun.

Leslie's contains an interesting article on the Temple gun, admitted by those who have seen it demonstrated as one of the marvels of the age. The velocity of the gun may be regulated, but it is alleged to be capable, if enlarged to the necessary proportions, of hurling a five-ton shell more than three hundred miles at a velocity over five miles per second, which possibilities cause the German Big Bertha that threw shells 70 miles into Paris, to sink into utter insignificance. It is urged by scientists that if such a velocity is attainable that a shell shot forth into space might just "keep going," as a rate of speed of more than five miles per second overcomes gravity. Accordingly a shell aimed at the moon would "keep going" and should strike its object.

In actual tests the original Temple gun has fired bullets through armorplate of three-quarters of an inch without noise or smoke. A mere click-click is all that can be detected while the gun is working. Where it gets its power is the secret of the inventor. Besides being used as a weapon of destruction it is claimed that the gun can be put to industrial uses. It can rivet steel beams, salvage sunken ships, repair ships without dry-docking, lift heavy objects and perform all manner of other wonders.

The instrument like many constructive inventions also has possibilities for the criminally inclined. A temple gun in the hands of one bent upon wrong doing would be almost as valuable as the magic lamp of Aladdin.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1921.

All articles on this page are either original, or properly credited. This has always been a fixed rule with this Office, and we suggest the adoption of it by our exchanges.

The county statement should be studied carefully, and our conclusions reached carefully. It will not do to decide, off-hand, that too much has been spent in certain directions, without first giving each item close investigation in connection with exact knowledge of facts.

As election time approaches, the candidates before the primary will naturally enlist more attention on the part of voters. Just now, the candidates are of more importance than the primary law. In fact, those who are sent to the legislature may have a great deal to do with what shall be done with the law, and if we are to have a better law, we must first send good men to frame one.

The League not Working.

It must strike the ordinary observer, even, that suspiciously little effort is being made over in Europe, to make the League of Nations function without the membership of the United States; and that this fact is pretty sure evidence that it can not be made function even with the membership of this government. It is quite reasonable to assume that the great Nations of Europe would gladly form and operate such a league without us. That conceding the necessity of our membership would give us such a place of power in the world, that the old nations would accept only as a last resort.

Neither England or France, nor any other first-class power, nor any combination of powers, can afford to concede to this country any such commanding position. The powers of Europe have now on hand several purely local affairs which this country has told them to go ahead and settle—that they are none of our business—the Silesian boundary, and the Greek-Turkish war. Why are not these two situations being settled by the League?

There is only one answer. The signatories to the League covenant are not ready and willing to do so by force, and they can not be settled otherwise. Even little questions in Europe are so involved with the big interests of the big nations, that there are no little questions there, when it comes to the settlement point.

Our staying out of the League, therefore, must be conceded as wise, unless we want to be continually armed to the teeth and parading around over the world quelling disturbances, only to go from one to another. So, we can well say to the brethren across the pond, show the value of the League by first getting together, yourselves, and policing your local disturbances into quiet.

Reverence for the Law.

At a recent convention of a prominent worker stated that "The country has gone daffy on Americanization." He was reasoning from the standpoint that much of the co-called Americanization had for its one apparent purpose the teaching of English to the newcomer. The English language is just as capable of propagating un-American principles as any foreign language. Those who thrust the World War upon us knew English. They did not appreciate the principles of Democracy and the great social system of co-operation that makes for true Americanism. The underlying principle of it, after all, is the Golden Rule of the Book.

If we would all seriously and faithfully teach our boys and girls in their formative years reverence for the law of home, school and society we would be teaching Americanism in a more effective way. Our great Liberator, President Abraham Lincoln, left this thought which we fear is not generally appreciated.

"Let reverence of the law (thrift and industry) be breathed by every mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be written in primers, in spelling books and almanacs, let it be preached from pulpits and proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice, let it become the political religion of the nation."

If we could have co-operation of all in carrying out the great principles above referred to, we would have a much higher type of Americanism.

Disobedience to parents is winked at, defeating common law is laughed at, as thrown on the movie screens. The effect is wave upon wave of crime that is sweeping our country. This irreverence for law is the foundation of it all.

We are not serious enough and persistent enough in teaching the child in the private home, in the school or institution that honesty is not only the best policy, but the only right way, the true American way. The biggest business of the world is to establish reverence for law, then will our whole moral, religious, financial, industrial and social systems move forward with a beneficent influence.

This calls for the best co-operation that there is in all of us. Let us follow the advice of Uncle Abe.—Orphans' Home Echoes.

Millions Spent in National Elections.

The last presidential campaign in this country occasioned the expenditure of $10,358,509, says the Review of Reviews. The spending of so vast a sum for such a purpose has been condemned generally by the public as excessive. Writing in the Century Magazine, Dr. Talcott Williams expresses the opinion that such condemnation is "just, though ignorant." He means by this statement that most of this sum has been expended not in corrupt ways, as the average citizen perhaps supposes, but for such campaign necessities as speakers, halls and advertising.

To one who has never given the matter much consideration the number of non-voters at each election in this country seems amazingly large. Taking the figures of 1910 and allowing for growth, Dr. Williams estimates that in 1920 there were in the whole country 52,000,000 possible voters. Yet of this number, only 26,759,742 came to the polls, or a little more than one-half. Of the absentees, some were ill, some had lost residence between registration and election, some were excluded as insane, as convicts, as paupers and some by special laws, like those disfranchising the Negroes in Southern States; but Dr. Williams concludes that the overwhelming majority of the absentees did not vote because they did not take the trouble to vote.

It is well understood by workers at elections that every effort made to "get out the vote" fails miserably in its object and that only by large expenditures of money can even a small percentage of qualified voters be induced to do their duty.

In the presidential election of 1920 women were entitled to vote for President in many States, and this swelled the vote somewhat. But thousands of women after qualifying failed to vote. One of the questions that bother the politicians is whether the women will vote in the future or are they tired of their new toy and privilege.

Dr. Williams on the question of money in politics says:

"Until every one of us is ready to contribute to election expenses, the rich man will keep his pull, because we, the great we in voting, the small we in giving, are not willing to do our duty. Big gifts will have big weight. All of us who do not give are responsible for those evils attendant upon large contributions."

Earning It.

Emerson tells us that most men are as lazy as they dare to be. Some are planning how they can be lazier still and get away with it. Conferences of men are held to discuss "How Can We Raise Our Wages?" Why do we not hear of conferences on "How Can We earn our Pay?"

Writers on success for young men usually devote most of their room to talking about money as the be-all and the end-all. As the incentive and bait to the reader, they offer sure-fire recipes for getting rich in a hurry. Riches and success are regarded by these writers as synonyms.

Much is said of the money that rewards the effort, but not enough is said of the work done to deserve the pay. The laborer who plans to give as little and get as much as he can is like a storekeeper who cares more to keep his price-harks high than to keep the quality of his goods high. For some years the public has suffered from a type of merchant who thought last of all about pleasing his customers and first of all about making a profit. That reverses the order of truly successful business. One who is to continue to buy our work or our wares must first be satisfied that we are trying to please him and do our best for him.

The first men to be laid off in an economic pinch are those who were most willing to "lay off" before the pinch came. They passed the buck. They let George do it. They said, "It isn't my work. Or they said, "I wasn't hired for that." Or they said, "The union won't let me." They sought excuses for non-performance and non-production. Sometimes they didn't even bother to look for excuses; they lay down in the shade of the job and went to sleep while other men toiled in the heat of the sun.

But when payday came, the shirkers were first at the window. They never failed to mobilize when the money was passed out, they never failed to kick if they thought anybody else got more or better. They did not ask the reason for the preferential treatment of the others. They did not ask if others were more deserving. All they cared about was to get the same—as if they had done the same.

We must put more stress than we do on this matter of earning. We must see to it, if the world is to be rightly ordered, that the slackers do not get the portion of the toilers. There is every good reason why the man who sweats for it should get the bread; there is no reason at all why the drones and the dissolute should get it.—Phila. Ledger.

Same Old Story But a Good One.

Mrs. Mahala Burns, Savanna, Mo., relates an experience, the like of which has happened in almost every neighborhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another attack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."

Trained Envoys.

If the Administration has its way, the country will see less and less of the humiliating phenomenon of the American representative at foreign capitals who does the wrong thing because his training and his tradition are merely political.

There is a technique of diplomacy to be learned as in other professions. A man cannot suddenly be picked from the "barter and exchange and quid pro quo" that is politics and flung into situations requiring a perfect mastery of statecraft without running a grave risk of saying and doing things that jeopardize international relations.

Now more than ever we need the experts, not the amateurs. We must have men who know the ropes and wires. When we accredit our envoys to distant lands we do not send them to condemn and break down the accepted amenities of those countries; we expect them in Rome to behave as the Romans do and in all other places to conform. But some have a fatuous pride in being "democratic," as they call it, by being simply contemptuous and discourteous.

It is good to know, then, that men who have served us long and well abroad are not to be supplanted for the fact that they are veterans. Long tenure of a diplomatic post is not moral turpitude; the test of retention ought to be not partisan affiliation, but performance. When a man ceases to be useful to his country let him be brought home; but let not the spoilsman be the one to issue the recall because somebody has been useful to the party and a berth must be found to pay him.—Phila. Ledger.

Indigestion and Divorce.

Is indigestion one of the causes of divorce? The Texas judge who suggests that it is has laid himself open to the charge of frivolity, for those who regard divorce as one of the rotten spots in the moral life of America are not likely to admit that it has its origin in an unromantic argument between a man and his food. But, after all, isn't it possible that indigestion, bad teeth, eye strain and all the other ills of our effete civilization have much to do with disturbing the even tenor of life, whether a man be married or single? If the victim of such ills is single, he must perforce suffer in silence, except as he takes out his misery upon the waitress and street car conductor and his office boy; but when he has been thoughtful enough to marry he can express himself with fervor to his loving wife—who after a while will naturally ask for a divorce. There is reason to believe that not only divorce but all sorts of dissension and litigation would be greatly reduced if the American people were physically up to par.—Balt. Sun.

HELPED BY SENSE OF HUMOR

Possibly Man Who Would Incorporate It in the Marriage Ceremony Is Right.

A man got up the other day and said it was his opinion that a sense of humor was so important in life that it ought to be put right into the marriage ceremony.

It is needless to add that the man who got up and said it was a bachelor. If he had been a married man he wouldn't have been allowed to get up in the first place, and even if he had managed that he couldn't have dared say anything so radical.

This gentleman's suggestion was that, since the "obey" had been amputated from the service, the loving couple should be required to "love, honor, and have a sense of humor" until death do them part.

Undoubtedly a sense of humor has its place in the home, but we don't see the advantage of thrusting it into the wedding service.

If you really had a sense of humor in working order you wouldn't be doing anything so ridiculous as promising anything. A man getting married is in no condition to enjoy a joke—even if he is one.

When a man can hardly keep a wife, the way prices are, how can he be expected to keep a sense of humor? Even if he did manage to scrape up the remnants of one after the wedding it would be knocked out by the first of the month, when the bills begin to come in.

Generally speaking, a sense of humor in matrimony is about as much use as a map of Europe, published in 1912.—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

SIMPLE DIET ALWAYS BEST

As True Now as When Addison Advised It, More Than Two Centuries Ago.

Two hundred years ago Addison wrote: "Nature delights in the most plain and simple diet. Every animal, but man, keeps to one dish. Herbs are the food of this species, fish of that and flesh of a third. Man falls upon the smallest fruit or excrescence of the earth, scarce a berry or mushroom can escape him.

"It is impossible to lay down any determinate rule for temperance. Were I to consider my readers as my patients, and to prescribe such a kind of temperance as is accommodated to all persons, I would copy the following rules of a very eminent physician: 'Make your whole repast out of one dish; if you indulge in a second, avoid drinking anything strong till you have finished your meal; at the same time abstain from all sauces, or at least such as are not the most plain and simple.'"

Persia's Sales Methods.

In Teheran are aristocratic shoe shops where the styles of Europe and America are copied from illustrations in catalogues that have somehow or other found their way out there. These shops have glass windows and real doors, and they display their goods in a way thought to be truly Parisian. The glass windows, though the panes are small, must have cost a deal of money, for glass is almost unknown in Persia.

The master shoemaker stands proudly at his door and welcomes a customer with the greeting, "All that I have is yours—my shop and all the goods." But once the prospective customer is inside the shopkeeper forgets to be the Frenchman of the Orient and the bargaining methods of the East begin.

The customer is assured that the price asked is half the actual cost, while all the time a quarter of the sum named would buy the goods. If no business results, politeness is still the order of the day, for a Persian does not consign a man to Hades, but just insinuates, by referring to him as the "son of a burnt father," that his honored parent is already there.—Roland Garbold in Ash.

Columbus' Landing Place.

For four centuries there have been dispute and disagreement as to the first landing place of Columbus in the new world. It is known that he landed on one of the Bahama islands, but in that widely-scattered group there are 36 pieces of land, large enough to be classified as islands, and about 700 "cays" or "keys," like those which lie along the Florida coast, and in some cases pretty well out to sea. The early narratives have it that Columbus landed at or on a place which the native Indians called Guanahani, and which the Spaniards named San Salvador, or Holy Saviour. Cat Island has been given as the landing place of Columbus and so has Watling Island. Attwoods Key or Samana has been chosen by some as the place which Columbus called San Salvador, and other investigators who may be termed authorities have picked Turks Island, and others have chosen the island of Mariguana.—Washington Star.

Adams' "Midnight Judges."

The "Midnight Appointments" was a term applied to executive appointments or nominations made by President John Adams the last night of his administration. Congress had passed a bill authorizing the appointment of eighteen new United States Judges, and Adams, with the consent of the senate, appointed judges to fill these newly created vacancies. They were sometimes known as "Adams' Midnight Judges." The new law was repealed early in Jefferson's administration and the Judges lost their offices.

POULTRY CACKLES

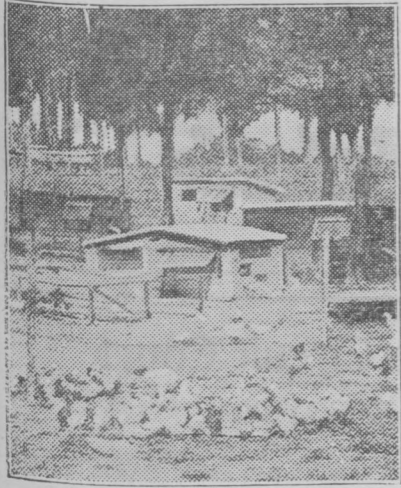

CARING FOR GROWING CHICKS

Essentials to Best Growth Are Good Coops, Cleanliness, Feed, Water and Free Range.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The care of growing chicks, especially during warm weather, is most important, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Every boy or girl member of a poultry club should give them the best of attention if success is to be had. The baby chicks may be smart little fellows from strong, vigorous parent stock, and they may have been brooded carefully for the first two or three weeks, but unless they receive proper care and management during their later growing period they will not develop properly, and many of them will be lost through disease or sickness. The chief essentials to proper growth are good coops or houses, cleanliness, proper feed and water, shade, and free range.

Every coop or poultry house used for growing chicks should be kept clean at all times. Sickness or disease starts usually in unclean quarters, and in such places lice and mites are always more plentiful. Coops and houses should be cleaned and sprayed once a week, and clean shavings, chaff, or sand put on the floor. Examine the chicks and houses often for lice and mites, and if found they should be got rid of at once by following the directions in Department Circular 16, Lice, Mites and Cleanliness, which may be had, free, upon application to the division of publications, United States Department of Agriculture.

A variety of feeds, with fresh, clean water, is necessary if chicks are to grow properly. Perhaps the three most necessary for rapid growth are grain feed, green feed and dry mash. Poultry specialists of the department say that in addition to the green feed and dry mash, which should be provided regularly, a grain mixture should be fed night and morning, giving as large a quantity as the chicks will eat clean, but no more. A good grain mixture for growing chicks consists of three parts cracked corn, two parts wheat, and two parts hulled oats. When available, kafir or rolled or hulled barley may be substituted for hulled oats. In localities where hulled oats, kafir, or rolled barley cannot be obtained, or are too expensive, a mixture of cracked corn and wheat only may be fed until the chicks are old enough to eat whole oats, when two parts may be added to the corn and wheat mixture.

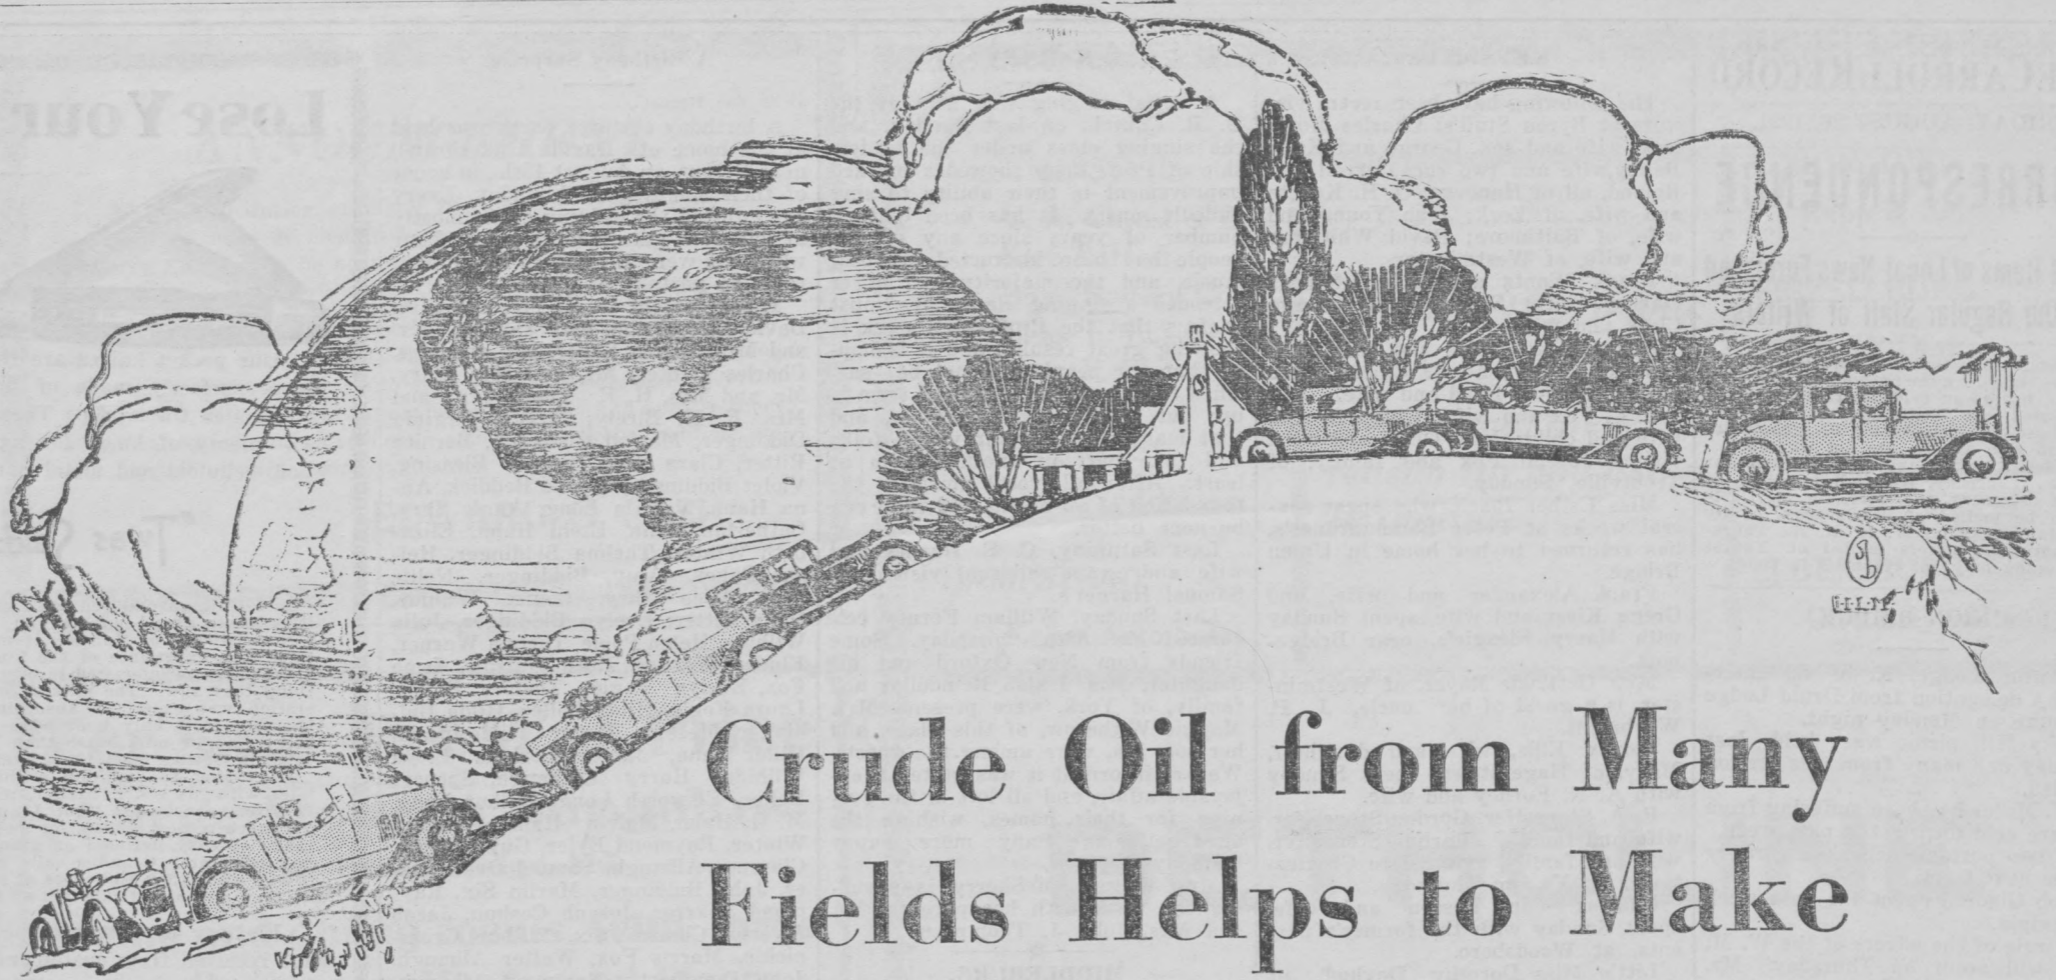

A reasonable supply of fresh green feed is almost as necessary as grain for growing chicks. If allowed liberty they will get much of it for themselves, but if confined, or if in quarters where green feed is not abundant, it should be supplied regularly. Lawn grass, beet tops, cabbage and lettuce are excellent feeds. When chicks are confined to brood coops with runs, they should be placed on ground where the grass is green and tender, and as fast as it is eaten off, the coop and run should be moved to a place where the grass is plentiful.

In addition to green feeds and grain, dry mash should be kept before growing chicks at all times after they are three or four weeks old. It is best to feed it in a hopper inside the building, or where it will not be exposed to rain or wet. Here is a good dry mash mixture: Two pounds corn meal, two pounds middlings, one pound oatmeal, two pounds wheat bran, one pound beef scrap and one-fourth pound charcoal. Grit and oyster shell also should be provided.

SMALL FLOCK IN BACK YARD

Two Hens for Each Member of Family Are Recommended as Best by Poultry Specialists.

The average novice can reasonably expect to get an average of at least 10 dozen eggs per hen per year from his small flock in the back yard. On the basis of two hens to each member of the family this will give 20 dozen eggs a year to each person, which amount is about half way between the average of farm and city consumption. No backyard poultry keeper should be satisfied with less than this, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Every backyard poultry keeper should try to get as much more as possible. To provide an egg a day for each person, two hens would have to lay 183 eggs each a year.

Crude Oil from Many Fields Helps to Make "Standard" the Best Gasoline

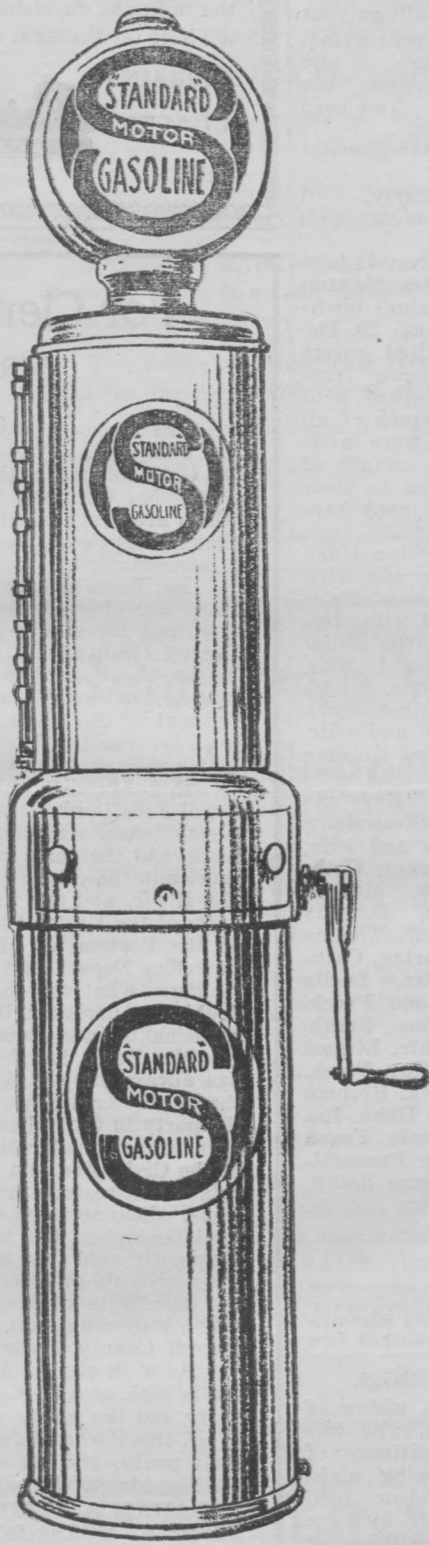

PETROLEUM varies greatly according to its source. Some crude oil is best for one purpose while other grades are superior for different products. In many years of experimental work we have discovered that our widely varying sources of supply—covering almost every developed field—are of great value in contributing to the ideal balance in gasoline.

You cannot get out of the motor anything more than you put into it—via the carburetor. No amount of skill in operation will make a one-sided gasoline act like a balanced fuel.

A one-sided gasoline may be quick-starting, or be efficient in some other one respect, but it is not capable of delivering the all-round efficiency of a well-balanced gasoline. A gasoline of proper balance can be depended upon not only for quick-starting but for smooth-running, maximum mileage, and a clean motor as well.

It is the easiest thing in the world to test this improved gasoline yourself. Wait until your tank is nearly empty and then try out "STANDARD" MOTOR GASOLINE on hills with which you are familiar.

You can buy it wherever you motor.

HARNEY.

A social singing was held at the U. B. Church, on last Sunday, and the singing class under the leadership of Prof. Roop showed a marked improvement in their ability to sing difficult music. It has been quite a number of years since any of our people had been instructed in vocal music, and the majority had never attended a singing class. We must confess that the Professor's work is showing great results, and it is hoped that our people will not be satisfied to stop when the second term is up; but that all will keep on, and that many more of our young folks will take part in another term at least. After all, vocal music is the foundation of all music, and there can be none better.

Last Saturday, C. E. Harner and wife and grand-children, visited at Samuel Harner's.

Last Sunday, William Forney celebrated his 88th birthday. Some friends from New Oxford and his daughter, Mrs. Isiah Reindollar and his family, of York, were present, Mrs. Maggie Witherow, of this place, and her son, Ira, were among the guests. We are informed it was quite an enjoyable affair, and all left in the evening for their homes, wishing the aged gentleman many more happy birthdays.

Null got in some of those awful curves and was a hard mark for the Smallwood boys. Schaffer played first base without an error. The next game will be played at State Wood, this Saturday, at 2:30.

"No locust blossom; no corn," that is what we heard last spring. Those who held to this theory are about convinced there is nothing to it.

MRS. LAVONIA BARNES.

Mrs. Lavonia E. Barnes, widow of the late Augustus Barnes, who was one of the best-known citizens of Carroll county, died Tuesday night at her home, in New Windsor, aged 82 years. She is survived by one daughter (Mrs. Grant Devilbiss, of New Windsor), and three sons, Harry Barnes, of Ohio, and Edw. and Walter Barnes, of New Windsor.

In Loving Remembrance of my dear husband JOHN F. CURFMAN, who died one year ago, Aug. 28, 1920.

Dearest husband you have left me. Here the loss we deeply feel. But it is God who has bereaved us. He shall all our sorrow heal.

Still again we hope to meet you. When the days of life have fled. In Heaven will join to greet you. Where no falling tears are shed.

By His Wife, HARRIET E. CURFMAN.

Farewell dear father a sad farewell. The loss to us no tongue can tell. A faithful father both true and kind. A better one you could not find.

The home seems sad and lonely. Every spot so desolate and dear. We listen for the voice of our dear father. That we never again shall hear.

The flowers we place upon your grave. May wither and decay. But love for you who sleep beneath. Will never fade away.

Lose Your Pocket Knife?

Did you ever lose a good old pocket knife that you would give most anything to get back? Those are the kind of knives that become a friend and companion through long ownership.

Our pocket knives are the kind that you can carry and use for years—perfectly made of finest materials, in the largest cutlery factories in the world. There's a knife here that you'll be glad to own—plenty of kinds for light or heavy work and in pearl, horn, wood, celluloid and metal handles.

'Twas Said:

Two Chicago children were visiting their grand-parents on a farm northeast of Muncie. It was their first experience of the kind, and they were interested in everything they saw. The milking operation was especially absorbing. Hitherto their only knowledge of the origin of milk was that it came in bottles from the grocer. Discussing the milking a little later with his sister, Arthur, who is seven, concluded: "But I ain't got much respect, Helen, for a cow that's as easy flattered as grandma's cows are. Grandpa calls 'em 'Boss' when they ain't boss at all, and then seems to tickle 'em so they give up all their milk."

Flattery does turn some heads, but the many compliments we have received from customers about our goods and our courteous service, has never diverted us from our policy of giving the best kind of hardware for the least money.

The cow was fully appreciated for the quality and quantity of the milk she furnished and we are sure that our efforts in providing the best for the least is also appreciated.

For Clerk of the Circuit Court.

MR. JOSEPH B. BOYLE.

The Democratic voters of Carroll County are asked to nominate Mr. Joseph B. Boyle, of Westminster, as their candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court at the primary election which will be held on Friday, September 9th, and judging from the expressions of public opinion which are heard on all sides there seems to be no doubt whatever but that Mr. Boyle will be selected as his party's choice for that office by a large majority.

Mr. Boyle is eminently qualified for the office to which he aspires. He is one of the best known and foremost business men of Westminster, and his ability and integrity are unquestioned in all parts of Carroll County. He has passed his entire life here and probably is known to as many people as any man in the county. All his life-long he has been foremost in all that tends to the improvement and betterment of the whole community, and no more public spirited citizen is to be found in Westminster, and his word in all his transactions, both public and private, has always been his bond.

In 1894, when the National Government decided to establish the Rural Free Delivery of mails, Mr. Boyle, who was then Postmaster at Westminster, was chosen by the Postoffice Department to start the work, and the early success of that great improvement to the Postal service in the country districts was justly given to the skillful work of Mr. Boyle, and the rural free delivery as it is now carried on in all parts of the United States owes its inception to the care and efficiency of the Postmaster of Westminster, who was complimented by the Postoffice Department at Washington for the manner in which he had managed what was then looked upon by large numbers of people as a doubtful experiment, but which has since proved to be one of the greatest benefits ever conferred on the people of the whole country.

Mr. Boyle has been a regular, loyal democrat all his life, and has always supported the regular nominees of his party. His father, the late Colonel Boyle was for many years the unquestioned leader of the party in Carroll county, and was long one of the best known members of that number of Democrats who came to the front at the close of the Civil War, and helped re-organize the Democratic party of Maryland and restore the franchise to a large proportion of the best citizens, whom some people were endeavoring to keep in a state of political bondage. The late United States Senator, Arthur P. Gorman frequently said that he owed his political fortune for many years to the active aid of three men, of whom Colonel Boyle was one, and that the democrats of Maryland owed a debt of gratitude to Col. Boyle which they could never repay, and that his personal obligations to the Carroll County leader were beyond compensation.

As a citizen, as a business man, as a Democrat, Mr. Boyle's record is without a flaw, and that he is deserving of any honor which his party and the people of his county may confer on him is the opinion of all those who know him, and the Democrats of Carroll will honor their party, and the voters of the county will honor themselves by electing him to the office to which he aspires.

S. Clingan and son, Jesse; Philip Stuller, Mrs. Emory Null and daughters, Margaret and Thelma; Mrs. Carrie Yingling and four children, of Littlestown.

All expressed themselves as having had a fine time. As the day was warm the tables were carried to the grove adjoining the home, where dinner was served. The organ was also carried there and was played by Mrs. Spessard. Mr. Groff and daughter furnished some fine singing, aided by the company, and Mr. Tritsch sang several German selections.

Didn't Want to Join.

There is one man in the United States to whom quarterly income tax "notice due" didn't bring a frown. Instead, his letter of acknowledgment caused smiles to treasury officials.

The letter read: "Dear Treasury, 'I received your application blank. But I already belong to several good orders and do not care to join your income tax at this time.'"

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. COURT SETS VALUE ON TREES

Decision That Will Be of Interest to Many Communities Throughout the Country.

In Salem, Mass., a resident sued the town gas light company for damages caused by the killing of five shade trees through the escape of gas from a leaky main. A verdict for $1,000 against the company was rendered—$200 a tree. The decision is said to have been awaited with a good deal of interest by surrounding towns, for tree killing from this cause is a common thing. It has happened many times in Indianapolis, according to report, though complaints have not been heard lately with the frequency that characterized them back in the days when natural gas was piped through the streets, hastily and no doubt often carelessly.

The killing of a thrifty, well-grown shade tree is usually a distinct loss to any property, commonly lowering its value. In view of the time required for the growth of such trees $200 is a moderate sum in the way of damages, and no amount of money, when it comes to that, can really recompense the owner of the trees. They have to him, especially if he planted and cared for them, a sentimental value that dollars cannot measure. They have added beauty to his home and he has counted them among his treasures. To a real tree lover, a beautiful tree, whether his own or not, seems almost to possess a personality of its own and to see it struggle for life and gradually die, brings real sorrow. It is to view a calamity.—Indianapolis Star.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each County of the State, with the exception of Cecil, Harford, Howard and Queen Anne, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1921-1922, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the four counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the County and City Scholarships in the School of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in Engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. One of the scholarships in each County and in each Legislative District of the City carries the sum of $200, and is known as a "Senatorial Scholarship." Senatorial Scholarships may be awarded for 1921-22 in Baltimore City (first, second, third and fourth Districts), Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Kent, Montgomery, Prince George's, Somerset and Washington Counties.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. John's College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, University of Maryland, (Maryland Agricultural College) Mount St. Mary's College and Rock Hill College.

The Combustible Limited

The Battered Brothers of the Rich lounged in non-executive session on a side-tracked gondola-car at Lethargy Landing. Four in number, they had been thrown together by the cosmic swirl which governs the movements of the derelict. Volition to them was a negative factor.

"Say, fellows," remarked Phonograph Pete, "I'll bet that the man who invented work was a professional labor agitator."

"What you want to talk about work for?" growled Sleepy Sam. "You make me tired."

"I rise to a point of order," interrupted Loquacious Louie. "If Pete is prompted to put in a record merely for the sake of standing before his own megaphone and hearing himself vociferate, I protest, but if he can slip in something that possesses the quality of novel entertainment, I'm no protestant."

"What you got on your mind, Pete?" asked Pugilistic Patrick.

"A couple of years ago," began Pete. "I was doing some topographic research work up in Pennsylvania. Investigating the lay of the land with an eye to the future. Locating havens of rest where a fellow might secure three meals and liberty without the consequent ennui of ringing up on the time-clock."

"One day, after shaking the dust of a bum burg from my clothes and the constable from my trail, I hit the railroad track a few miles out and waited the arrival of my private car. There must have been a holiday on the line, for nothing came along, and I was finally forced to locomote by my own powers of locomotion."

"A little farther on, the village loomed into view. It was a fair-looking town, judging from my point of vantage, and I hoped to add it to my list of eligible localities."

"The sight of that likely looking burg put ginger into my halting footsteps, and I soon arrived at the outskirts. There was a string of cars drawn up on a siding along the fence which surrounded some buildings."

"I was wondering what kind of plant it might be, when on passing a place where the string of cars was broken about fifteen feet, I saw painted on the fence in huge white letters against a black background:

DANGEROUS: POWDER WORKS.

"I quickly put out my pipe, which I was smoking, and stuck it in my pocket. I had no desire to start on an expedition in search of the milkmaids up in the milky way."

"Work, in the abstract, has never appealed to me, and how a man in the full possession of his faculties can associate with a job in a powder factory beats me."

"Just think, fellows, of working along for five days with your eye on the clock, calculating how many more hours it is before pay-day comes around, and then, when the timepiece has only one more lap to go, somebody does a fool thing and the whole outfit blows up, sending you to kingdom come with a full week's pay uncollected."

"Well, I knew from hearsay that a powder works is a sort of slumbering Vesuvius, so I proceeded to disassociate myself from the proximity. I hot-footed it past that open space in the string of cars. As I was passing the last car in the bunch, I happened to look at it, and I nearly jumped out of my socks when I saw a thin wreath of smoke coming out from it."

"I did a hundred-yard dash down the tract in record time, then stopped. I looked around to see if I could locate any one who was trying to qualify for the 'Nobel courage prize,' but the place was shy on candidates."

"I ran back to the car and tried to open the door, but found it locked. I thought that if I could find out what the car contained I could proceed more intelligently with the first-aid stunt, but it was a clean lockout, so I was forced to proceed along other lines."

"The smoke was pouring out in thick volumes by this time, and I realized that I had to get it moving pretty soon or hustle myself out of the danger zone. I worked the bar until I had a crop of blisters on both hands, but the fiery freight was immovable as a tenement house rent collector."

"Suddenly I made the startling discovery that the brakes were set. I ran around to the front end of the car, and climbing up I quickly loosened the brake. Then climbing down, I rushed back and had that car going in no time."

"After moving it along a few feet, the car started to run of its own accord, and I realized that there was a slight grade at that point, sufficient to allow it to travel by gravity."

"I ran ahead and swung aboard. As I climbed to the top the flames began to eat their way through the roof, at the rear end. I grasped the brake-wheel and spun it around so as to get control of the car should the grade get too stiff."

"Slowly, my fiery chariot gathered speed, and by the time we struck the village we were exceeding the speed limit. As we struck the crossing the watchman rushed out of his shanty and made some unintelligible remark to me, but I kept on going."

"I looked ahead and saw that the track was clear for a good stretch, but I also saw that it was down grade, so that there was no possibility of stopping. On we rushed, the wind fanning the flames, but fortunately for me, sweeping them rearward.

"Suddenly I heard a shrill whistle ahead, and I realized that an engine was on the same track as my car. It had stopped about a mile off."

"Here's where we make a sensational finish," I said to myself. Then I saw the engine get into motion and start down the track. That fellow at the throttle certainly let her out some, by my pyrotechnical Pullman kept gaining on him steadily. I grew interested in the race, and wished that I was close enough to bet the engineer on the outcome."

"Talk about the mountain of fame being down hill on the other side! That grade had the mountain of fame looking level. Slowly we gained on that engine ahead, which was speeding like an automobile endeavoring to outdistance a pursuing fine collector."

"Ahead, in the distance, another town came into view, and I wondered whether there would be a reception committee to greet us."

"That engineer seemed to get an extra burst of speed out of his puffing engine as we neared the town, and just as he struck the outskirts he slackened up, and his fireman jumped. He ran back a short distance, and I saw him desperately trying to throw a switch. He got it over just in time, and my special left the main track."

"I thought we had been going some before, but this new line that they had switched me onto was in a class by itself. The fellows that laid that track must have worked on ladders. You've seen those gravity roads where they pull trains up with a steel cable, and let them run down by holding them back?"

"Well, that's the kind of proposition I was up against. At the end of the track, about a mile down, I caught a glimpse of a river, which seemed to be rushing up to meet me, and before I had time to get the mental impression registered, that carload of fire hit something, and I made a long-distance dive into the watery depths."

"I hit the water and went down about a mile. When I came up, and got the water out of my eyes, I struck out for the shore."

"Say, Pete," interrupted Loquacious Louie, "when and where did you learn to swim?"

"Oh," replied Pete, "I learned to swim before I cut my wisdom teeth. I was born on a canal boat. Well, as I was saying, I struck out for the shore like a bullfrog going a wooing. The car had struck a bumper on the river edge, and the wreck was burning fiercely. By the time I had pulled myself ashore a crowd had collected to enjoy the fire."

"Say, sport," said a fellow who looked like a railroad man, 'where'd you come from?"

"Up by the powder works about five miles back," I answered.

"Powder works," said the fellow. "What powder works? There ain't no powder works within 20 miles of this place."

"I guess I can read," I said. "Especially when the letters happen to be about five feet high. If that place isn't a powder works, they ought to take in their sign."

"The village constable pushed through the crowd and asked the cause of the trouble. The fallroad-looking fellow told him, and advised that he lock me up until they found out how I came to be joy-riding around the country."

"The constable took me over to the town burgess. When I told my story he seemed to be favorably impressed."

"There is one weak point in your story," he said. "You claim that this car was standing alongside the powder works, but there are no powder works within 20 miles of this place."

"But I can take you to them," I insisted.

"All right," he replied. "How far is it?"

"About a mile straight up, and five miles back along the line," I replied.

"Jake," he said, turning to the constable, "hitch up my team, and we'll drive up. I haven't anything particular on hand."

"Well, we drove up, and finally reached the point where I had started my trip on the combustible limited. The pike ran along the railroad tracks at the point, and as we came opposite the open space in the string of cars, I told Jake to pull up his prancing plugs."

"There! I said triumphantly, pointing to the sign. 'What does that mean?"

"The judge and Jake gave a look, and then burst into hilarious laughter."

"Gosh all hemlock!" laughed the judge, when he could control himself. "This sure is a joke on you. Come on, Jake. Let's take him over and show him, and then ship him back to Missouri."

"We all got out of the wagon and crossed the railroad tracks. They took me through the open space in the string of cars, and then the cause of their hilarity broke upon my astonished gaze."

"Painted along the whole length of the fence, in letters like the ones I'd read between the cars, was this:

PEACHBLOW FACE POWDER WORKS WONDERS.

AVOID THE DANGEROUS KINDS. "When I recovered my faculties, I put distance between myself and that beauty bulletin. As I faded from the landscape, I heard an explosion in the rear, but it was only Jake and the judge laughing."

"Quite a difference between face powder and the kind you was thinking of. Hey, Pete?" remarked Loquacious Louie.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Pete. "They are both used to wage warfare on mere man."

John H. Repp

Union Bridge District
For Republican County Commissioner

TO THE VOTERS OF CARROLL COUNTY:

I wish to address you a short letter on the subject of business men in office.

We, who have lived many years and have witnessed the close of three wars when the destinies of our institutions, and of this great Government were threatened, can speak intelligently and authoritatively on the subject of business men in office, from the President of the United States to the smallest County Office.

We will be called this fall to elect our County Officers again, and taking a business view of the situation, the County Commissioner office is the most important in the County.

John H. Repp, of Union Bridge, is an applicant for the nomination for County Commissioners. I have known Mr. Repp from childhood, went to school with him and was associated with him in the Hardware business for many years. I am in a position to know that he is a well educated and intelligent man, and has proven himself to be a very efficient and successful business man.

Mr. Repp has spent his life in business affairs, is not a politician and never sought office, but the office is now seeking him, and you will make no mistake in voting for him.

Respectfully Submitted,

WM. WOOD.

TO ALL VOTERS OF CARROLL COUNTY:

Now that John H. Repp has been induced by his many friends to become a candidate for nomination as County Commissioner for Carroll County, I feel it my duty to say a few words regarding his fitness for this responsible position.

Having known Mr. Repp since boyhood, I have always found him a man of exceptional business judgment, successful in his ventures, possessing keen business foresight, a man of few words but firm in his convictions adhering strictly to the Golden Rule throughout his long business career.

Feeling that no one could be found possessing all these qualities to a higher degree, I can conscientiously commend him to the voters of the county as a fully competent man for this office.

Respectfully,

DR. JOHN N. WEAVER, Union Bridge, Md.

Having known John H. Repp for a long time and having been associated with him in a business way for several years, I consider him an ideal man to perform the important duties of County Commissioner. I therefore urge the Republican voters of Carroll County to give him their support at the primaries and, if nominated, voters irrespective of party convictions will be working for the best interests of the county if they unite in securing his election in November.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 28

FROM ASIA TO EUROPE.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:6-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—And they said, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house—Acts 16:31.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Rom. 15:15-21.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Wonderful Dream.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Crosses Over Into Europe.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Beginning Work on a New Continent.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul Carries the Gospel to Europe.

I. Forbidden by the Holy Spirit to Preach the Word (vv. 6-8).

We have here a lesson on divine guidance. The inclination of Paul and his companions was to tarry in the provinces of Asia preaching the word, but contrary to their inclination they were hurried along. They might have reasoned "What difference would it make as to where we preach, just so the Gospel is preached?" Though seemingly small, the question as to whether the Gospel should be preached among the people in the East or in the West has determined the entire history of the church. Had they preached among the people in the East, Christianity would never have become worldwide. On the other hand, by laying hold upon the Grecian intellect and combining with it the push and energy of the Romans, it became worldwide. In the guidance of the Spirit we find Him just as active and as faithful in closing doors as in opening them. "The stops as well as the steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord." We ought to as truly recognize God's hand in the "shut-ins" as well as in the "open-outs."

II. Called to Macedonia (vv. 9-12).

A vision was given to Paul of a man from Macedonia pleading for help. This was the solution of the mystery of closed doors about them. There is a negative and a positive side to the Spirit's guidance. If we will note both we shall be able to determine with a surety the proper course of action. In order to be led aright we must be sure that we are willing to be led, pray definitely for leading, and then render willing obedience as fast as the light comes. As soon as the divine way was known they rendered immediate obedience.

III. The First Convert in Europe (vv. 13-15).

The missionaries went to Philippi. The Jewish element in this city was very insignificant; so much so that they could not afford a synagogue; therefore the devout people were accustomed to worship at the river side. To this humble gathering Paul came and preached to the women gathered there. A certain woman from Thyatira believed his message, and was baptized. Lydia was a woman of wealth, culture, and wide experience, and yet she had need of Christ. The steps in Lydia's conversion are worthy of note:

1. Attendance at the place of prayer (v. 13). This is the case with most people who are saved.

2. Listened to the preaching of the word of God (vv. 12-14). The instrument used by the Holy Spirit in the conversion of sinners is the word of God. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17).

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14). Regeneration is a supernatural work. When the Gospel is preached the Spirit of God makes it living and active, opening the sinner's heart for the reception of Christ.

4. She was baptized (v. 15). It is natural for the one who believes in Christ to desire to be baptized.

5. Her household also believed (v. 15). Thus we see that her's was a typical conversion.

IV. A Spirit of Divination Cast Out (vv. 16-18).

As the missionaries went out from day to day to the place of prayer they were accosted by a young woman possessed by a spirit of divination. She was owned by a syndicate of men who derived large gains from her soothsaying. This act of the woman became a great annoyance to Paul who, in the name of Jesus Christ, commanded the evil spirit to come out. Here is a case of a spiritual medium, a fortune-teller, being freed from demoniacal possession. Many men today are making money by the degradation of womanhood, and they resent all efforts to destroy their infernal business, even try to destroy those who interfere with their business. Here as everywhere Satan blocks the way as the Gospel of Christ is carried into new fields, but the Lord is again triumphant.

The Multitude of His Mercies.

For the Lord will not cast off forever; but though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies. For he doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men—Lamentations 3:31-33.

Word of Lord Was Precious.

And the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord before Eli. And the word of the Lord was precious in those days; there was no open vision.—1 Samuel, 3:1.

The Ten Commandments in the Life of Today
Exodus 20:1-17

During a recent visit to a New England town where the writer first confessed Christ as his personal Saviour, he was informed from reliable sources that the pastor of the church had strongly objected to the teaching of the Ten Commandments to the Sunday School children because they were not up to date. That same preacher had also declared himself against the inspiration of the Bible and the deity of Christ. Modernists of this type usually consider themselves to be in advance even of the Lord and wait impatiently for Him to catch up with them in their marvelous progress. It should be said that the people of that church had the grace and grit to oppose such teaching and to demand a change of leadership, which demand was granted.

The Ten Commandments are intended to regulate and control the varied relationships of life. These relationships existed before the commandments were given and were partially regulated and controlled by conscience, but conscience, like every other faculty, is dimmed and darkened by selfishness and sin. An unchanging standard was necessary and God gave that standard in the Ten Commandments. Conscience needs the Ten Commandments as a builder needs his plumbline.

These commandments should be instilled into the minds of all generations. They act as the greatest check on lawlessness that the world has ever known. They should be taught in all of our day schools. We must distinguish clearly between the Ten Commandments and the gospel. They are entirely different. The commandments are advice or counsel. They tell us about things to be done or not to be done. The gospel, on the other hand, is not merely good advice, but good news telling us of something that has been done, of a Saviour who died for our sins and was raised again in acknowledgment of our justification. This is a piece of good news. It is the testimony of God concerning His Son and it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. Those who believe and are saved are also indwelt by the Holy Spirit of God. The fruit of this indwelling is love. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor," therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law.

English Labor Leader Cared Little for That "Divinity That Deth Hedge a King."

Kings have no longer any ruling power in a first-class nation. A little incident in which the king of England figured last year may be told in connection with the new spirit of affairs. The late Will Crooks, a labor member of parliament, a cockney with a big black beard and devoid of aitches, a sincere and much loved man, as remote from highbrow socialists as from hidebound conservatives, was among the fashionable crowd of guests at the royal garden party.

The king got him into conversation. Will Crooks talked as freely to his monarch as he would to a follower in the East end of London. Both men were soon deep in the troubled times which were upon England. The king plainly showed his anxiety about the future. Will Crooks, who was the most sympathetic soul in the world, tried to reassure the king as they shook hands in good-by: "Now, look here, old chap; don't you go worrying about things; everything is going to turn out all right, old fellow."

There is cause for a little speculation in what must have been the mental attitude of the nobles and dignitaries clustered round as they observed the familiarity. But what the king thought of it is best expressed by the fact that before the next garden party he and the queen together sent a special letter to Will Crooks and his wife, saying how much they wanted them to be present.—Frank Dilmat in the Outlook.

Constant Search for Tannin.

The oak is one of the best known natural sources of tannin, although it is found in many other trees. The spread of industry has increased the call for tannin to such a degree that search has been made all over the world for some new tree capable of supplementing the oak, hemlock and other trees in furnishing this indispensable substance.

A certain degree of success has attended the search in Argentina, where there is found a tree called the quebracho, from which excellent tannin can be obtained. The wood of this tree is very hard and durable, and it grows in large forests. It has been known as a tannin producer for about 30 years, but only in late years has the extraction of the tannin been conducted in Argentina. Formerly the wood was exported.

Bobby replied: "Oh, grandmother, I can't unthink you!"

WAR ON INDUSTRIAL UNREST

"Community Service" Idea Is Spreading, for Many Good and Substantial Reasons.

"Community Service, Incorporated" shortly will take its place as a definite factor in the industrial life of Illinois.

This announcement comes through Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the executive-financial committee for Illinois. Organization has been completed for Illinois and the plans for the establishment of the work are under way.

The aim of Community Service is to improve living and leisure conditions that through their development a peaceful, settled and contented community atmosphere will prevail and industrial unrest to a great degree be removed.

The work of the organization has passed the experimental stage. It has been found to be a very solid and substantial success in the big industrial communities of Bethlehem and Chester, Pa. The main work of Community Service is the solution of the leisure hour problem. A trained organizer will be sent to various communities to study conditions and make a survey of the social and recreational life, determining what is most needed and most desirable for the occupation of the leisure hours of the community, and then assisting them to provide and build up a service system for themselves.

House Painting.

When the home owner's thoughts turn to house painting problems Californians, particularly, begin to wonder what color will be best for the movies. A location director for motion pictures in Hollywood, Cal., says that white houses are almost impossible for use in motion pictures and he hopes the people within the area of the picture industry will use neutral or dark shades when they do their house painting.

"Darker shades are more agreeable to the eye than those of dazzling whiteness," so this movie director says, "and they photograph better, in addition to blending with the natural colors of the landscape."

Willie Had a Reason.

Willie Hopkins is only ten years old, but, strange to tell, he brushes his own hair and washes his ears without parental coercion. It must be admitted that Willie just started this most uncommon practice within the last few days. The young man's mother was dumfounded when she walked into his room and found him plastering down his hair with a brush.

"You're a very good boy," she said "How did you come to think of brushing your hair and washing your face?"

Willie looked sheepish and then replied: "Mary Brown told me I wuz good lookin'."—New York Sun.

Taneytown Baseball Notes.

On last Saturday afternoon the Taneytown Club journeyed to Hanover, and met defeat in one of the best-played games of the season, with the Boys' Club of that place, on the Blue Ridge grounds. The score stood 1-0 up until the eighth inning, when a timely hit by Hanover tied the score, and again in the ninth, with one down, another hit scored, making 2-1. Each side had seven strike-outs; Taneytown seven hits, and one error. Hanover five hits and one error. The score: Hanover 0-0-0-0-0-0-1-1-2 Taneytown 1-0-0-0-0-0-0-0-1 Taneytown lost a ten inning game on the home ground, on Wednesday, to the Charmain, Pa., club, score 12 to 10. The home club should have won—but didn't. Perhaps the absence of the regular pitcher and 1st. baseman was responsible, or it might have been two errors. Anyway, had the team played its usual tight game, the score would have been different. The visitors were a fine set of fellows and played a good game. The score was: Charmain 2-0-3-0-0-3-0-2-0-2=12 Taneytown 3-1-3-1-0-2-0-0-0=10 It has developed, later, that the score was really 11 to 10 in favor of Taneytown, at the close of the 9th. inning, and that the Taneytown scorer failed to enter one of the runs, causing the additional inning to be played, in which the visitors scored 2 runs.

Hot Weather Diseases.

Disorders of the bowels are extremely dangerous, particularly during the hot weather of the summer months, and in order to protect yourself against a sudden attack, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It can be depended upon. Many have testified to its excellence.

REAL HEAT IN PHILIPPINES

Traveler's Description of Weather During Some Months Is Not by Any Means Alluring.

The rainy season is behind time, and the dear garden burns yellow brown. It is so hot that even the crickets are still. The long, black-raftered rooms are unendurably warm. Caroline S. Shunk writes in Asia Magazine. Smoke from the servants' fire in the yard drifts in over us. The yellow earth at our back door stretches, a glaring plain, to meet the jungle, which rolls up a rich green carpet to the "Secret Place Mountain," where, so runs the legend, a Negro chieftain hid his favorite wife. There she died, and, at her request, the delicately carved comb that held her long hair was buried with her. From this grave, the natives say, grew a tree with leaves like the fine, soft hair of a woman—the useful and beautiful bamboo tree.

Out in the yard the women have ceased their chanting to the beat of their washing paddles, to sit around a chow pot of rice and smoke long, black cigars. Their sphinx-like faces have no illuminating expression, save when a baby toddles too near the open fire. Then the look of fear and love with which the child is hastily snatched away into the arms of the little brown mother includes us for an instant and is gone. We are shut out in an alien world again. I hear the plaint of the Chinese cook: "China not same. Allee samee China boys go. Too muchee Melican man." Then, a harsh, clattering word like a tin pan falling from a table—perhaps a Chinese swearword!

Solved.

Uncle Hi had just passed his first night in a hotel and was still curious. "Son," he inquired of a bellhop, "what's that funny contraption out the window?" "That's the fire escape," replied the youth. "By hickory! I wondered what made it so dad-blamed cold in here last night!"—American Legion Weekly.

Too Much to Expect.

Jud Tunkins says he doesn't hope for a general drop in prices to equal the one that takes place when you come to sell a brand-new fiver that you have run a couple of days.
