CARROLL COUNTY GOES REPUBLICAN

Notes on the Result, County, State and General.

As a net result in Carroll county, the Democrats lost the County Clerkship and one member of the House of Delegates. The only Democratic elective officials in the county now, are County Treasurer, and one Judge of the Orphans' Court.

The big majorities in the county, are for Mellor for Clerk 874; Martin for Sheriff 845; and Bricker for Register of Win 277 ister of Wills 755.

Although the candidates in Carroll were more than usually active in canvassing the county, and although election day weather was ideal, and although the candidates were "primary" picked "by the people," there was nevertheless a very large are in order.

Mr. Stone, for County Treasurer, the only Democrat elected owes his election to Westminster district, very

Bollinger the highest Democratic candidate for House of Delegates; was only 29 votes short of Spencer, the lowest Republican candidate. Apparently, the four last candidates for the House lost some votes because of arrangement of the names. A lot of voters seem to have marked their ballot on the "vote for four" instructions, and marked the first

In Frederick county four places on the ticket, Register of Wills, Sheriff, a County Commissioner and a member of the House of Delegates, were captured by the Democrats. William Grove, another Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates, came within 25 votes of winning. James A. Jones, the new Sheriff, won over John L. Dutrow, his Republican opponent, by a majority of 1,620, the largest majority ever given a Democrat for a county office. a Democrat for a county office. Hickman, Republican, for Regis-Hickman, Republican, for Register of Wills, the best office in the county, by 105 majority. John W. Holter defeated Roger A. Nationally, the election had little real significance. As was to be expected, the Democrats recovered, to some extent, from the Waterloo of last vear. In the east, Democratic gains were made in New York, New

Maryland Poultry Show.

The Maryland State Poultry show which opens next Tuesday, Nov. 15, in the State Armory, Westminster, will exceed the most sanguine expec-tations. Every available inch of space on the main floor, will be occapied. More than 1,000 specimens of poultry will be on display and every variety will be represented. Turkeys, geese, guineas, pigeons and pheasants will join the Silver Spangled Hamburgs, the Black Langshans, Dark Cornish, and Blue Andalusians in adding variety to the more popular breeds. More than 100 Rhode Island Reds will be in competition and the Barred Rocks, are White, Buff and Columbian Wyandottes are also strong.

Every day of next week will have special attraction for visitors. On Wednesday the poultrymen of Maryland meet at 3 P. M., in Firemen's Carroll county that day will have as guests poultrymen from all over this State and Pennsylvania. At night a banquet and High Jinks will take place at the Westminster Hotel.

Thursday at the meeting in Firemen's Hall,, at 3 P. M., Mr. C. E. Bryan, president of the newly organized Agricultural Corporation of Maryland, will explain the purpose this co-operative buying enterprise which promises so much to the farmers of Maryland.

Friday the children will guests of the show and a special meeting for them is to be held in Firemen's Hall, at 3 P. M.

Saturday, Military Day, at 2 P. M., will find Company H. Maryland National Guard in a competative drill on the campus of Western Maryland

The show will be open every night until 10 o'clock, including Saturday. Everything for the comfort of visitors has been arranged. There will be a rest room in the basement and a pastor, with services held Sunday

A GREAT INVENTION. ried Across Continent.

When President Harding delivers the funeral address over the body of the "Unknown Soldier" on Armistice Day his words will be heard by the largest audience the human voice has ever reached. His voice will be carried across the continent to New York and San Francisco, where meetings composed of American Legion members and friends will hear him plainly and distinctly through the medium of "Loud Speakers." In addition, a loud speaking system has been installed in the Arlington National cemetery and if half a million people could gather on the broad slopes of that beautiful place they could hear with perfect clearness every word of the President's address, every note of the singers, and every syllable of the solemn commitment services when they lay this "Unknown Hero" within his

For several weeks past organizers of the American Legion and the engineers of the Bell System have been working together to bring about these meetings and the transmission of these Arlington ceremonies. Everything that the engineers have done has been predicated by the fact that Armistice Day will be the most solemn minute in the history of America. For that reason the American Legion, veterans, who have a vital part in the day's events, were asked to co-operate. Another Weekly Suspends.

The Red Lion (Pa.) News has suspended publication. The paper was well patronized, but the Editor says that on account of labor costs he is unable to continue, at least for the present. Even though there has been a partial drop in paper toward old prices, expenses in general are as high as ever, which makes "keeping on," in many cases, a very serious proposition.

THE CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON.

Waiting For the United States to Point out the Way.

With the international conference over limitation of armaments at hand, speculation is naturally greatly exercised as to the outcome. The average spectator of affairs, seeing only the announced purpose of the conference, and feeling optimistic that at least no harm can come out of the gathering, may perhaps be taking too much for granted. At any rate, deep students of world politics appear to see in the conference the possibility of very serious results, even to the extent of another and

Naturally, there must be proposals—very definite proposals—laid face up on the table, and the United States is looked to, to present them—in other words. are simply waiting. By general consent, Japan and the disposition of China, that big helpless country that seems unable care for itself, constitutes the big problem, which in effect largely means satisfying Japan, Great Britain and the United States.

If the conference is to mean anything, it must mean something bigsomething definite—something satisfying to great present antogonistic interests. All who believe the conference will be a love-feast, full of self-denials and confessions, and a final harmonious and united agree-ment to stop war preparations, like

The Bonus Bill.

The Senate did not permit itself to be coerced into tacking bonus amendments to the Federal tax bill, which we think a fully justified action. There does not appear to be any 'emergency" existing with reference to this bonus proposition, even if it is considered a just one to pass, later on. The probability seems to be that some sort of a bonus bill will be passed by the next Congress, but there appears to be a great deal of "politics," and some "stand and deliver," in the entire proposition.

The burning of corn, instead of coal-on account of the high cost of the latter-is both recommended and condemned, in the great corn states of the west. The one argument is to save in cost of fluel, and the other is to save the corn for feed, or perhaps against a short crop next year-that it is contrary to nature to burn a food product for heat.

Sooner or later, the Public school system of the state must be made a "public" system in fact, by the election of its officials by the people. Under the present system, there is bound to be conflict and lack of cooperation between the tax-collecting tax-spending, and tax-paying powers. Maryland is one of few states that holds to the appointive plan for its school officials, and it must go into the discard.

One of the disgraceful incidents of the campaign just closed, was the sneering, belittling plan of attack against Dr. Kelly's candidacy in a Baltimore district for member of the House of Delegates. While Dr. Kelly is a newcomer into partisan politics, his character and ability along all lines is far above that of the average candidate, and as such he deserved a fully respectful consideration from the city press but did not get it.

Now that the election is over and tag has been played around in a ring with statements and figures, we suspect that the county's finances are not in a very deplorable condition, after all, and that there are no thieves in the Court House, on either side. But, if there is anything wrong, we suggest that the wrongs -real or imaginary-be not held back for campaign material for use two years hence, but that they be "gone after" right now.

The Strike Evil Strongly Exemplified

The strike of union drivers of milk wagons in New York and Cleveland, last week, forcibly presents the evils of the strike plan, as in this particular class of strike the victims are children and the sick-those depending on milk for life. The strike was caused by a reduction in wages. In Cleveland, the average weekly pay of milk handlers was $38.00, and the reduction was $6.50 a week, leaving the average pay at $31.50.

We suppose there is wide difference of opinion as to whether this is adequate pay, or not, and as we are not familiar with all the facts, it is not our purpose to enter into the question. We rather desire to call attention to the difference between individually quitting a work that is not sufficiently paid— an act always open to workers-and to the organized strike plan of all quitting at once.

It seems to us that the use of the organized quitting is an exercise of force, directed largely against public necessity, in order to compel the payment of higher wages, and that it is contrary to the spirit that should exist in the matter of paying prices generally.

There is certainly justification in the quitting of any job, on the grounds of improper pay, but we fail to see the justification for workers in combining to force a certain higher pay. When we go into a store to buy an article, it is optional with us whether we buy or not. If the price is too high, we can walk out, and so doing is no interference with either the store's, or the public's, business. If the prices at this particular store are notoriously high; naturally it will do little business, and eventually the fact will compel the proprietor to sell at lower rates, or go out of business. So, in the matter of wages. No man can continue to secure help if he pays too little for it. As man after man quits work, if the proprietor wants to do business he must increase wages. What we call "supply and demand" will adjust matters in either case, and in like cases, and is the only

"force" that seems to us justifiable. Even if there is collusion between illegal-or if there can be side agreements having the same effect, and other matter; but that when the whole year around."

destroying the natural operation of "greater representation" question there is always plenty of capital to ered and commented on in no uncer-step in and break such agreements. There is no difference between the iniquity of trusts, monopolies, or business on the basis of combined force, whether they be operated by business firms, or by labor unions. All combinations restraining natural laws, are wrong. Moreover, the "strike" does not, as a rule, end by the use of combined of which can see nothing but the abforce, or "collective bargaining" but goes further and interferes with "strike breakers" and "open shops," conducts organized "boycotts," uses unfair methods against non-unionists, and very frequently indulges in open violence, in order to help gain an end. Even the united quitting work, does not peaceably end with that.

Editorial Advice.

There is no class of men on earth who have greater opportunities for making many, and big, mistakes, than the makers of newspapers, daily and weekly. Every day and every week there is a certain amount of space to be covered and sent out on a continually varying list of topics, and these opportunities must be represented by words and opinions, open to the criticism and disagreement of thousands of readers, and there is no evading this continuous round of chances to say the wrong thing.

That there are not more "bad breaks" made, should stand to the credit of the newspaper-makers, and give them more of a reputation for level-headedness than falls to their lot. Perhaps it may be given, by way of explanation, as to why they do not get such credit, is that the newspaperman understands "his job," but not much else, which is placing a very low estimate on the requirements of said "job" itself.

It must be said, however, that the good record for not making many mistakes is improved mightily by the very large number of editors who are not editors in fact, but merely "job printers" of what somebody else has originated, leaving the "somebody else" bear the blame, if there is any. This is a very prevalent plan of securing popularity without much risk, and perhaps in itself shows wis-

Taking the question as a whole, perhaps the great reason why newspapers do not have their old-time influence on readers, and why newspaper writers are not as fully "believed in" as they are apparently entitled to be, is because of influences back of these writers that demand specially colored and biased opinions. If this is the case, then the general public is fully justified in well salting a lot of the stuff that is handed to them. But, lent. we are unwilling to believe that this breed of editorship obtains very widely, and that it is only applicable to cases in which there may be so much money-power, or other strongly intrenched backing, that apparently makes such papers and their editors independent of public sentiment.

The rule is yet, we think for newspapers to be responsive to, and anxious to harmonize with, the best phases of public opinion, and to spread abroad only a healthy moral tone, and when this is the case, it is pretty safe to give the newspaperman's opinions pretty wide consideration, even outside the strict confines of his job, because that in itself requires a great deal wider vision than the average reader is apt to

In most respects, a newspaper's position in a community is advisoryproviding it is a real newspaper. It is that, whether it wants to be, or not. As it sees and records happenings and evidences of public thought, it must at the same time enter into the why and wherefore of things generally, for but few things "just happen" by chance, and as these "wherefores" are discovered, the natural duty of the newspaper man is to make them known. His fidelity in this, takes his measure as a safe adviser.

For Later Consideration.

A great deal of capital was made by the Baltimore News, especially, that there appeared to be little or no issue in the counties over the question of the extent of "greater representation" for Baltimore, evidently assuming that the quietude in the counties represented consent to the deas held on the subject by the News. We rather think that the counties-and especially the weekly press-simply failed to see in the past campaign any great necessity for trotting out and getting excited over such an issue, so far in advance of its real presentation.

We should say, too, that most of the weekly papers of the state are storekeepers and employers of labor, unlikely to take, ready made, from to "fix" prices-which, by the way, is the city papers, the prompting for their course of action on this or any supply and demand, even this could actually comes before the people of be only temporarily successful, as the counties, it will then be considtain manner.

As the delegates from the counties have been elected, practically without instruction, they are free to consider the question on its merits; and we believe that they, too, will be able to see through the situation without a great deal of prompting by the city's various interests, some solute desirability of a much greater voting power in legislative matters,

Just whether this sort of influence will "put over" the votes of the county delegates, remains to be seen. In our judgment, that consummation would be the more probable had the influence of the city papers, in the past, been more in harmony with the views of the voters in the counties on various moral questions, present and past.

Unemployment and Farming.

Otto H. Kahn, of New York, is perhaps one of the most expert students of business and industry, as well as of the science of taxation, in this country. In a recent letter from him to Senator Lenroot, the following appears with reference to unemployment, and the present plight of the farmer.

"The road to the relief of unemment and an improvement in the plight of the farmer lies, among other things, along a system of taxation which seeks to promote industry rather than lame and retard it. I realize fully, and deplore, the situation in which the farmer in this country finds himself. It is a situation which has been created by no fault of his, but it is a situation from which he cannot escape by narrow or sectional devices. The greatest aid which the farmer can exert on his own behalf is to take a helpful attitude toward industry and insist upon his representatives in Congress giving effect to this enlightened point or

"In so far as revival of manufacturing and productive industry generally is made possible, will there be created that purchasing and consuming power upon which the farmer must depend to sell the commodities which he produces. It is largely because purchasing and consuming power is so greatly reduced that the farmer's plight has been rendered so grave. What he needs most is to restore that purchasing and consuming power on the part of the people at large to whom he must sell his products, and nothing can contribute more effectively in this country to the attainment of that consummation than a sound and broad-minded revision of our tax laws."

The Best Worker Wants Work.

There is less and less of a mind on the part of busy, productive toilers to drop their tools and stand idle at the call of those who love to loaf and hate to work.

The busiest of men enjoy their business. They are miserable when -iust because they have reached a certain number of years-some ancient force of precedent or prescription retires them against their desire to keep on. They pine and fret and chafe in the holiday enforced. They must find something else to do; sometimes they die.

Men who have the will to work don't want anybody's pity. They consider work, hard work and plenty of it, the grand blessing of their lives. Commiseration is wasted upon them; the time to be sorry for them is when they have nothing to do. And it is never true of a real man that he has nothing to do.-Phila.

Industrious Bootleggers.

"Harbaugh" in the Middletown Valley Register, sizes up the liquor law violations, as follows;

"We still have the busy bootlegger with us and he is the most indus trious citizen we have. If you don't believe it, just look at the published violations of the liquor law. Not one half of the violators are punished and not all the biggest offenders are brought to book. It is pretty difficult to make the country bone dry, but I believe it would be done if we have the right sort of n.en in office. Recently a lot of Chicago policemen were caught bootlegging and a small still was found operating in the basement of a church. gregation was singing Psalms above, while some of the members were filling their flasks below the altar. We are getting along pretty fast and time will get our graduation di-

THAILLED BY STATE "LINES"

English Woman Surprised at Simplicity of Crossing Boundaries in the United States.

I like the feeling of crossing from one state into another, especially as the American states are as big as European countries. Especially also as here is only a stone to mark the division, and the transit is as simple as going from one county to another.

At Ticonderoga you cross from New York state to Vermont, or from Vermont to New York state. This might seem an important process. Actually, you stand on one shore and toot your horn, taking a soft drink the while, and presently a vessel appears which is none other than a roomy red punt, propelled from the side by a small launch. The punt lets down a tailboard, the motor gives a hiccup over it, and there you are until the process, reversed, takes place on the other side. This is one of the few ferries by means of which you span the great waterways from New York to Canadawaterways over which, most of the time, bridges are unthinkable.

It is also the gateway from the Green mountains in the Adirondacks, blue and shapely, and from the one you can see the other on either side of Lake Champlain, and between the two on the sparkling blue surface of the lake plies a little white steamer, bearing visitors to the most historic spots of North America, and taking the place of the birch bark canoe with its load of Indians, who also had their own particular interest in historic spots. -Muriel Harris in the Manchester (England) Guardian.

SPANIARDS' DEBT TO MOORS

Art of Tile-Making Is a Legacy Which Invaders Left When They Were Driven Out.

The Spaniards have been fighting the Moors for the last 1,000 years, but the Moors, during the centuries of their eccupancy of the Iberian peninsula as conquerors, developed much in the way of art and architecture that is most highly valued today. To them we owe, for one small item, the tiles which so beautifully adorn our bathrooms and which, utilized in various ways, contribute so much to the artistic finish of dwellings and other buildings. The Moors established at Seville great tile factories, and at the present time that city is a very important tile-making center. In its neighborhood are deposits of a clayey earth highly suitable for the purpose, which is ground fine, sifted, lampened and stamped with designs, then burned with a slow fire. Colors are applied and the tiles are finally baked with high heat for twenty-four

Many of the designs are artistic, representing scenes from Don Quixote, bull fights, etc. Sacred paintings are reproduced in tiles for churches. In fact, thanks to their ancient enemies, the Moors, the Spaniards have developed art in tiles far beyond anything with which we are familiar.

Treasures for University.

Four important manuscript letters from the Sixteenth century have been placed in the manuscript room of the University of Chicago. Two are letters of King Henry III of France, notorious in connection with the massacre of St. Bartholomew, and are dated in 1574. One is a letter of his successor, King Henry IV of Navarre, signed by him in 1589. Two of these letters are on parchment and one bears the royal seal. A fourth letter in the collection is that of Cardinal de Rambouillet addressed to King Charles IX of France and dated in Rome December 2, 1570. These original letters are important documents bearing upon the religious wars in France in the Sixteenth century, and were discovered in Paris by Prof. James Westfall Thompson of the university in the course of his investigations on the Huguenots. Professor Thompson has presented them to the university.

What She Must Know.

In a woman's magazine has been set down a list of twenty-five accomplishments necessary before a young woman can be said to be educated. And this in these days! If this test is accepted as a whole it is as hard as ever to be a woman. According to this standard a woman must know how: to sew, to cook, to mend, to be gentle, to value time, to dress neatly to keep a secret, to avoid idleness, to be self-reliant, to respect old age, to darn stockings, to make good bread, to keep a home tidy, to control her temper, to make home happy, to be above gossiping, to take care of the sick, to take care of the baby, to sweep down the cobwebs, to marry a man for his worth, to read the very best of books, to be a helpmate to her husband, to take plenty of active exercise, to keep clear of trashy literature, to be a womanly woman under all circumstances.

Office Boy Got Even.

There was a knock at the office door, says the London Chronicle, and a clerk threw up the communication panel, through which was thrust a parcel wrapped in brown paper, some two feet square.

Thinking to "take a rise" out of the office boy, the clerk called out; "Johnny, here's your lunch arrived!" Some time later another package arrived, with a quantity of straw exposed to view through an opening in the end.

"Mr. Jones," yelled the office boy, "your lunch has come now!"

Writer Waxes Sarcastic.

The trustees of the city of Roseville, Calif., have clearly no eye for art. At first, it may seem as if they were justifled in refusing permission to a certain adverse. advertising firm to erect billboards within the city limits. But then these were no ordinary billboards—at least, so the advertising firm declared. They were in fact, "beautiful panels, real Works of art." Yet the city trustees refused. Worse and worse, the women of Placer county, in which Roseville is situated, have banded themselves together to prevent the erection of any more billboards in Placer county, whether in the form of "beautiful panels" or otherwise. Woman in Civic Affairs.

There is promise of betters things for Connecticut in the fact that the League of Women Voters of that state has sent out a questionnaire befitting the slogan, "Know Your Own Town." This should be well worth doing for the information to be obtained, intended for the local communities, and as a basis of future state legislation. But no doubt the most important factor in the activity is, as the workers seem to think, the awakening among women of an interest in civic affairs. The neighborhood is certain to hold interest for anyone, and so is a good starting point.—Christian Sci-

TOO STARVED TO BE HUNGRY?

There Comes a Final Stage in the Horror, When Taste for Food Is Lacking.

I cannot quite bring myself to tell tales of famine horrors—the monkeyfaced, pop-eyed babies tugging hungrily at the cold breasts of dead mothers lying on the frozen ground; the piteous old women and the stoical men; the incredibly deformed starving waif whom I picked up outside of the city of Tsingkiangpu; the boy on the wall of Chinkiang who was carrying home a starved cat for food, and in response to a query, tried so hard to sell it to me as a delicate morsel, and such tessellated patterns by the use of con- general concomitants as the incidence of smallpox plague with the famine.

One of the unexpected aspects of work in the famine camps came when I was accompanying Mrs. Paxton of Chinkiang as she made rounds to distribute medicine to the sick among the hungry. As a matter of fact, relatively few persons ever die in a famine directly from actual hunger, but rather from diseases induced by Obligingly, Mrs. Paxton freely translated for me as we went along, and we found, in pathetic paradox, that the commonest request of these starving creatures was for medicine to give them an appetite! Even when they succeeded in getting a bowl of food from the relief station, ran the repeated tale, they could not eat it, having no taste for food.

To us this meant, obviously, that the sufferers had reached the final stages, where craving for food had passed away. They were not hungry, because they were starving!-William T. Ellis in the Outlook.

NEW TOY FINDS MUCH FAVOR

Parisian Children Hail With Joy Idea Which Has Been Imported From Central Borneo.

The latest toy which Parisian children are buying, and which threatens to displace the scooter in popular favor, is a modern form of the old "jumping stick."

The new "jumping stick," which is called a "pogo," is more scientific than its predecessor, which was nothing more elaborate than a single stilt with two rests for the feet.

It is made with an india rubber pad and with a strong spring, which ena bles its possessor to take a series of leaps without jar.

The pogo was first found in use, in a primitive form, among the Dyak natives of central Borneo, who gave it that name. It was a stick with a cross-piece, on which certain favored young men used to perform a kind of dance at sacrificial ceremonies.

As the chiefs took charge of the pogos after the ceremony, hiding them until the next occasion for their use, it was very difficult to obtain them, but a French traveler who saw the dance in progress, described them on his return to Paris. From his rough sketch the new Paris toy has been

The Dominion police was a small body of men, the uniformed members of which were employed largely in guarding the parliament buildings, the mint and other government structures in Ottawa. To it was attached a number of highly trained experts, skilled in dealing with international criminals and their schemes, and having knowledge of the finger print system. These are now all members of the Royal Canadian mounted police, under the command of Col. A. Bowen Perry.

The force is now recruited to its prewar average of 1,200. Canadian bladder and uric acid troublesgovernment officials hope soon to be able to increase it far beyond that number, but the dominion's war debt has to date made that impossible.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for colds, croup and whooping cough for almost half a century and has constantly grown in favor and popularity as its good qualities became better known. It is the standard and main reliance for these diseases in thousands of homes. The facts that it can always be depended upon and is safe and pleasant to take are greatly in its favor when it is wanted for children.

In Memory of my wife, JENNIE E. WEANT, (nee Koons) who departed this life, 2 years ago today, November 11, 1919.

Today recalls the memory, Of the one I laid to rest, And those who still remember her, Are the ones who loved her best, Farewell, ferewell, Jennie dear, I have spent two sad years, You left me with an acting heart. The night you and I did part. My heart is sad and lonely yet, But time may come soon When I may with you dwell.

The saddest day of all my life Was when God took you, my precious wife We did our best—God only knew, To save your life we could not do.

Often when the days are brightest, There is a gloom steals in my heart; Then it brings sad remembrance, Of the days we had to part.

Angels watch this steeping dust, Till Jesus comes to raise the just, Then she'll rise in sweet surprise, To see her loyed ones at her side.

More and more each day I miss you, Friends may think the wound is healed, But they little know the sorrow, That lies within my heart concaled.

I think of you in silence,
Few eyes that see me weep,
But many a silent tear I shed,
When others are asleeep.

A salesman sold a bill of goods to a merchant in a small town. They were returned as not satisfactory. The wholesale house undertook to collect anyway and drew a sight draft on the bank at the customer's town. The bank returned the draft unpaid. Then the house wrote to the village postmaster and asked if the merchant was good for the amount of the bill. The letter was returned O. K.'d at the bottom. Next the postmatter that the bill in master was asked to put the bill in the hands of a local lawyer for col-lection. The answer received by the wholesalers ran as follows:

Experiments in Road Building.

How a reinforced concrete road holds up under heavy traffic is to be determined by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, through experiments to be conducted on such a road now being built in the suburbs of Washington in co-operation with Arlington County, Va.

The road is being reinforced with many different arrangements of wire mesh and round steel rods embedded in the concrete. The joints will be either a crack left in the road, to be filled with tar, or simply a sheet of corrugated metal set on edge with the concrete poured around it. Some sections are to have joints running along the middle of the road, some across it, and some will be built without joints.

Of especial interest is the construction of ribbed sections. Instead of placing the concrete on a nearly flat subgrade, trenches will be dug in the subgrade running parallel to the edges of the road and also across the These trenches will be filled with concrete, giving the slab downward projections of concrete, and presumably strengthening it. Experiments also will be conducted to determine the strengthening effect of treating the earth under the concrete. On one section the earth for a depth of 6 inches will be mixed with cement, using 1 part of cement to 20 parts of earth. In some places where there is a grade a trench under the concrete will be filled with gravel. These trenches will slope toward the edges of the road and drain away any water that that might otherwise accumulate under the surface.

Influencing the Judge.

In these days when strategy and subtlety may win as many victories as oratorical explosions, we commend to the careful attention of politicism. politicians and others the account of a certain law case which occupied northern New England some years ago. It was a land case; and one of the parties, eager for a verdict, consulted his lawyer as to the advisability of sonding the judge a fine brace ity of sending the judge a fine brace of ducks. It appeared to him to be a neat sort of thing to do. The lawyer rose in honor.

"Do nothing of the kind!" he said.
"This judge is an upright and honorable man; under no circumstances could he be bribed. In fact, he is of such rootifude that were you to send such rectitude that were you to send him a brace of ducks in advance of the trial, he would probably lean so far backward that he would find against you. Forget all about the duck scheme."

In due course the case came up and the decision was given. It was in favor of the man who had planned the gift. He met his lawyer. "Well," he said, "we won our case."

"Yes," said the lawyer; "and aren't you glad you didn't send the judge those ducks."
"But I did send 'em," said the client.

"You did?"
"Yes, I sent 'em; but I remembered what you said about the judge leaning backward, so I put the other fellow's card with 'em."—Boston Herald

COLONIAL DESIGN ATTRACTIVE

Architects Too Often, However, Do Not Apply Its Details With Courage.

The average house of Colonial design, however attractive may be its general ensemble of graceful form, consistent detail and pleasing color, is, as a rule, not picturesque: that is, according to the common conception of a term which implies more than a modicum of individuality and informality. Indeed, in the design of the majority of new Colonial houses, the keynote is almost invariably a rather rigid formality—and formality is never the ideal foundation upon which to rear a picturesque superstructure.

The low, rambling, English countryhouses, the steep-roofed, turreted French chateaux, the characteristic thalets of Switzerland and the lowroofed homes of Italy have usually an indefinable element of picturesqueness, undoubtedly attributable in large measure to their pronounced informality of composition, as well as to a perfect adaptability to their respective locations. Countless American homes are, of course, also picturesque; nevertheless the average American house to which the possession of picturesque qualities may truthfully be ascribed s, as a rule, a replica after some foreign prototype, rather than an outgrowth of that Colonial style which perhaps, our most nationalistic phase of architecture.

The only apparent reason for this phenomenon must lie surely in a lack of courage, on the part of the architectural profession, to apply the details of Colonial precedent to other than a house of symmetrical plan. It cannot be due to any lack of inspiration in the many beautiful examples of early Colonial work which still

In the early days of Pennsylvania, a snug little stone homestead was built by a sturdy pioneer in a bit of a clearing not far distant from now widely-famed Valley Forge. Probably, even though he built his home with strength of construction uppermost in mind, that pioneer was impelled more by thoughts of contemporaneous security than by any altruistic consideration for a coming generation. Whatever the builder's motive, his humble farmhouse was destined to withsand the vicissitudes of a century and more, and eventually to become the nucleus of the imposing structure which now adorns an attractive country estate 'n one of Philadelphia's most aristoratic suburban communities.—Charles Vaughn Boyd in the House Beautiful.

MAKING NEXT YEAR'S LAWN

Except in the Northern Tier of States Autumn Seeding Is Most Sat-

Next year's lawn depends, in great measure, upon this autumn's making. Except perhaps in the northern tier of states and New England, early autumn seeding is much more satisfactory than spring seeding. South of New York and New England states spring seeding should rarely, if ever, be practiced, say specialists of the United States Department of Agricul-

Young grass, they say, does not stool well in the spring and summer and is not sufficiently aggressive to combat crab grass and other summer annual

After the preliminary preparation, which involves the thorough working of the soil, the surface of the area to be seeded should be thoroughy fined with a rake or similar implement, and bone meal should be applied at the rate of about 20 pounds to a thousand square feet. The bone meal is of much benefit to young grass, since it assists it in making sufficient growth to pass the first winter in good condition. The main point to be observed in seeding is to sow the seed evenly and to cover uniformly but lightly. The covering can be done on a small area with an ordinary garden rake or on a large area with a weeder. Light rolling after covering is frequently beneficial.

Care of Rose Bushes.

Climbing roses that are apt to be badly winter-killed should be carefully taken down from their supports, the tops tied together, laid along the ground next the porch or wall and covered with litter or manure. In early spring they can be tied up again to their supports and you will have the benefit of all the flowers.

Single specimen hybrid roses simply need manure around the roots. If they are hardy, do not tie them up with straw, for if the winter is moist and warm they will start to put forth new growth at the top and when uncovered in the spring will be so soft that the slightest frost will do them in-

Tender and ever-blooming roses, growing in beds, should have the ground covered six inches in depth with good stable manure. This will protect them, although they are nearly always frozen down to the top of the manure. In the spring take the manure away from them as soon as the danger from frost is over and cut

Marry a Shoplifter?

By R. RAY BAKER.

1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndi As a department store detective, Bob Jacobs felt that he would make an excellent laundryman. He had always thought himself a pretty fair sleuth, but since the Elston company took him' away from the Jenkins agency, he had not been a huge success. Almost with the beginning of Bob's services at the store the thieving started. That was four weeks ago. and it seemed that the shoplifter was becoming bolder. More and more articles were being missed, some of them useless trinkets but all representing a commercial value.

his private office and asked him how

"You've been with us about a month, Mr. Jacobs," said the proprietor, "and for about the same length of time systematic shoplifting has been going on. Before we engaged a detective we had no trouble with thieves, but now that we have one the shoplifters get busy. We thought it was the proper, up-todate thing to have a house detective, and that was the reason we hired you. Now, this thing cannot last. I have here a fairly comprehensive list of the articles stolen, and the aggregate of value is quite impressive. The articles cover a broad scope; for instance, here is a 25-cent rag doll, a three-dollar vase, a two-cent whistle and a man's necktie.

"I've done my best," retorted Bob, "but I'll keep at it. I, too, have a list, and I've been studying it. There is such a wide variety of articles taken that they offer absolutely no clew. If I do not catch the culprit within a week I shall tender my resignation."

Bob left the office and in a brown study walked into the notion department. His mind was so preoccupied that he almost ran into his sister Hazel and his fiancee, Clara Summers.

"We're shopping," Hazel told him, "In preparation for the hard times party. Most of the girls from school are going."

They were both pretty young ladies, although of distinctly different types. Hazel was a blonde and she dressed in becoming black; while Clara was a pronounced brunette and was garbed in blue, carrying a parasol to match.

Your Astute Detective Has Solved the Mystery.

The girls were school chums, attending Clayton college, located in a city 100 miles distant. They were home for the summer vacation, which started a month ago.

After exchanging a few pleasantries with the house detective the girls left the store and Bob returned to his problem. Somehow he must catch this shoplifter. He had a good memory for faces, and yet he could not recall seeing any one person in the store a sufficient number of times to arouse suspicion, except, of course, his own sister, who frequently dropped in to see him in company with Clara, and Mr. Elston's daughter, who called for her father every evening and drove him home.

No solution had presented itself when Bob left the store that evening for his home. His mind continued to dwell on the subject until he arrived at the front gate, where he met Hazel and Clara coming out of the house. The sun was shining brightly as it neared the western horizon, but Clara's parasol was not in use.

"Aren't you afraid you'll blister your face?" Bob inquired.

"No," she laughed. "I want a good

I just carry the parasol for looks; it matches my dress." Bob went into the house and sat in the living room, smoking a pipe while

'he continued his cogitations. Of a sudden he bounded from his chair and crossed the room, picking up an object that reposed in a corner behind a floor lamp. It was a rag doll. "Good heavens!" he exclaimed, standing and staring at the doll in his hands. "To think I should come across the first clew in my own home!" He replaced the doll in the corner, and when his sister came home he asked her about it. "Oh, that," she laughed, "is a present from Clara-for the hard times

That started Bob on a trend of thought that was decidedly displeasing. It could not be that Clara was the shoplifter, and yet-it looked bad.

The next day Bob came across Hazel and Clara at one of the lace counters. They were talking to Esther Elston, who also attended Clayton college. They introduced Bob, and after remarking about the excellent weather Miss Elston moved away.

The two girls were again at the Jacobs home that evening when Bob arrived. They were making costumes for the hard times party. Shortly after Bob's arrival Clara prepared to leave and Bob offered to drive her home in his runabout.

Bob loved fresh air and sunshine, and except when it rained he kept the top of the car down. The sun was shining with unusual intensity for so late in the day and he offered to raise the top for Clara's benefit.

"It's not necessary," she said. "I can use the parasol. I'm afraid I will Finally Mr. Elston called Bob into get blistered if I don't have some

She opened the object in question, and as she did so something fluttered from it to the floor of the car. Bob picked it up and handed it to her with a sinking heart. It was a piece of

"Why, where did that come from?" Clara exclaimed in evident surprise. "Looks like some of Elston's goods," commented Bob stepping on the

"I'm sure I didn't buy it," declared Clara. "It must have dropped in when was at the store today.

But Bob was convinced, and all night he tossed and tumbled in his bed, his brain in a turmoil. He loved Clara and they were to be married in the fall, but this horrifying discovery was enough to daunt any man on the matrimonial brink. Marry a shoplifter? Impossible!

He was in a trance all the next day, caught between conflicting emotions. Love was arrayed against duty-to himself and his employer. He must reveal the shoplifter; it was what he was paid for, and surely he could not marry the girl in the face of such publicity. Still, he loved her.

That night he came to a decision. He would marry Clara, regardless. He loved her and he would take her for his wife, shoplifter though she was. Perhaps she was a kleptomaniac and not responsible for her thieving ways. If she persisted in the habit he would try to reform her, but his bride she would be at all costs. He would resign his position rather than inform on her, and they would live in some other city.

Two days later Clara came to the store again with Hazel, and Bob lingered by them, determined to watch. Miss Elston was there, waiting to take her father to the golf links, and the girls engaged in conversation at the silk counter. Presently Mr. Elston appeared and his daughter left with him. "There goes the biggest cut-up in college," commented Hazel. "She keeps the facutly in hot water all the time." The following morning Mr. Elston again summoned Bob to his office.

"The shoplifter is continuing operations." he announced, "and the week you gave yourself is nearly up. Silks were stolen yesterday and laces the lay before. Have you a clew?"

"I have," Bob declared. "I believe I have the shoplifter spotted, but I assure you I dislike revealing her iden-

"What!" exploded the boss. "You nean to say you know the guilty party and yet want to shield her? What do I pay you for, young man? I demand that you solve this mystery!" "Very well, I shall do so before the day is over.' He waited until Miss Elston arrived and entered her father's office. Then Bob tapped at the door and was told to enter.

"Mr. Elston, I am about to reveal the identity of the shoplifter. She is standing beside you now."

The proprietor's face turned livid, and he seemed about to make an attack on Bob. But Miss Elston stepped forward, smiling sweetly.

"Father, your astute detective has solved the mystery. When I came home from school and learned you had hired a detective I saw an opportunity for some fun-to match my wits against the smart sleuth. So I have been taking things from the store for a month. This is such a prosaic establishment: nothing ever happens, and I thought it was up to me to create some excitement as well as puzzle this bright young man. Clara Summers had talked so much about her detective lover that I decided to show her he wasn't so much. I was terribly brazen about it; even went so far as to give Clara a rag doll I had taken; and the other day I dropped a piece of stolen lace in her parasol, right under Mr. Detective's eyes-and today I got away with some silk while he was talking to his sister and fiancee. I've had the whole store guessing, and, it was a lot of fun-and now I'm ready for the penitentiary, father. if you wish it."

"You had me guessing," confessed Bob. "I thought it was Clara-until I saw you take that silk today.'

How Dates Are Grown in Bags.

The government plant bureau has been trying out a new idea with dates in Arizona, inclosing bunches of them in paper bags while ripening. By this means sudden changes of temperature and bumidity are modified and, as a result, the yield of first quality fruit is doubled.

It is further found that, when all the dates on a tree are treated in this way, the number of pickings required is reduced from twelve to two. Incidentally, they are kept free of dust.

ON THE MAKING OF MATCHES | CLEVER SYSTEM OF SIGNALS |

Chinese Factories Now Are Producing Thousands of Tons, to the Great Alarm of Japan.

There is a joy in considering the old verse which told of fleas having other fleas upon their backs to bite 'em, the process continuing ad infinitum. Because out of the Far East comes the interesting intelligence that the Chinese have gone into the manufacturing of matches, and are so diligent and skillful in the business, that the Japanese trade is becoming fearful of their progress, as competitors, the Cincinnati Enquirer states.

Not so long ago the American markets were flooded with cheaper imitations of the cheap Swedish matches, which compete with the sturdier and more dependable flame-makers turned out as profusely in America. It was not thought that there could be made anything worse than the Scandinavian product, but when the Japanese fraud arrived, this view was revised sharp-

If it is possible that the Chinese have been able to make the matches at a lower cost than their Nipponese rivals, then indeed they have accomplished the miraculous, and the world will applaud them for the feat. Apparently success has come to them, four large factories at Tien-tsin being needed to supply the demand, which is measured by the thousands of tons. If they are being shipped to this country, as undoubtedly they will be, it is to be hoped that the triumph over the low-grade Japanese imitation of the erratic and undependable Swedish splint has not been effected through the sacrifice of efficiency in striking fire and holding it. Nothing could be worse.

NEW WAY TO FOIL ROBBERS

Hard to Get Away With Satchel That Is Equipped With a Powerful Alarm Gong.

Holdup men who have been specializing in the robbery of bank messengers and pay-roll carriers will not rejoice in the invention of the latest security satchel, designed, as it is, to prevent their silent getaway, says the, Scientific American. The satchel is ordinary enough in appearance, save that it is of steel. In the lid it carries a monster bell, operated by two dry cells, which are capable of ringing the alarm continuously for six hours. The switch is hidden in the grip handle and has two buttons so arranged that when the messenger discovers that he is being held up he can instantly push one of them.

The alarm will go off and stay off, and can be heard for a distance of half a mile. The second button is for previous adjustment, and leads to a delayed action that holds the ringing up for ten or twenty seconds-enough to enable the messenger to make his getaway from the immediate range of the holdup man before the latter discovers what he is up against.

We must agree with the inventor that no crook is likely to march through the streets carrying a ringing satchel, or to get very far with it if he attempts it.

Certainly, until the stick-up artists learn how to put the muffler on the bell instantly and permanently, the new trick ought to be effective. And that is all that could be asked, for the man who is coping with a robber must expect to change his plan of campaign as fast as the thief learns what

Something to Fall Back On.

Little Owen lived near a southern Indiana town where a hub factory had just been built. The new industry had just caused a great deal of discussion among his elders as to increased property values, sale of timber and opportunities for employment. Owen one day went across the sunny fields and up a hill to the old farmhouse where his great-grandfather was spending the summer afternoon on the wide porch. A short time afterward an aunt, listening to the conversation between the two, heard the following:

"Owen, what are you going to do when you're a man?"

"Well, I guess I'll be a preacher or maybe a teacher. When I'm not preaching or teaching I guess I'll work at the hub factory."

Wanted the Best.

"I want you to teach my son a foreign language," said a lady to a teacher of languages.

"What shall it be, madam?" the teacher replied. "Would you like Polish, Czechoslovakian, Armenian, or perhaps even Arabic?"

"Well," mused the lady, "which is the most foreign?"-Houston Post.

More Ingenious Scheme Than That Contemplated by Germans Probably Never Was Devised.

German war secrets are now being disclosed in scientific literature. At the close of the conflict the Germans in their laboratories were working on secret-signal lights of special character. To the ordinary observer nothing would be present to indicate that the light was sending out signals, but changes would be going on which would be apparent to an observer equipped to view it with a suitable optical device. Different principles were employed for accomplishing this. In one of them polarized light was to be sent out by the signal, the character of which would change in accordance with the dots and dashes of the code. When viewed through properly fitted binoculars, the color would no longer be white but would alternate between red and green. In another method, a glass screen containing compounds of the rare element didymium was arranged to alternate in the beam of light with another screen of suitable shade. When the resulting light was viewed with binoculars equipped with prisms, a black line would appear in the yellow region of the spectrum formed whenever the didymium glass was interposed, permitting the signals to be read. Another method consisted in first breaking up the light at the source into a spectrum across which was placed one or more wires cutting out narrow regions of color, and these were arranged to be moved back and forth a short distance along the spectrum in signaling. The colors were then recombined into white light and transmitted. With binoculars provided with suitable prisms to re-form the spectrum, the signal was perceived in the motion of dark bands back and forth along the spectrum, corresponding to the movement of the wires at the transmitting station. One important application of this method of signaling would be at sea.-Popular Mechanics Magazine.

REFERENCE MATERIAL-Luke PRIMARY TOPIC-Why Paul Was Not

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
Paul's Defense Before Felix.

I. Paul Accused (vv. 1-9)

Tertullus, perhaps a Roman barrister, formally made the accusation according to Roman law. He began with flattery. He gave Fellx the fullest praise when he and all the people knew that he lied; for Felix was one of the worst governors-destitute of morals and justice. He brought a fourfold charge against Paul:

1. "A pestilent fellow" (v. 5). This would indicate a fellow utterly base and corrupt—a plague.

2. An inciter of rebellion, a mover of sedition (v. 5). This they hoped would bring him into conflict with the

3. That he was the ringleader of a sect-a schismatical party-a heretic

4. That he had profaned the temple (v. 6).

II. Paul's Defense (vv. 10-21). In this defense note:

1. Paul's frankness and courtesy (v. 10). Flattery is entirely wanting. He gives recognition of the fact that Felix had been ruler of this people long enough to be able to judge justly, as the habits and ways of the Jews were familiar to him; and then, in a dignifled manner, assumes that Felix will render a just decision based upon the facts of the case.

2. The charge of sedition denied (vv. 11, 12). He flatly and scornfully de hled this charge, showing its utter falsity, since the time was too short, being but twelve days since he went to Jerusalem, and half of that time had been spent as a prisoner of the Romans. His conduct while there disproved it—he disputed with no man in the temple; neither did he make any attempt to incite the people in the city nor in the synagogue.

3. The charge of heresy (vv. 14-16). This charge he met by a concession and a denial. He admitted that he was of the "Way" which they called heresy, but clearly showed that it was in keeping with the Hebrew religion: (1) he worshiped the same God (v. 14); (2) he fully believed in the same Scriptures (v. 14); (3) he had the same hope of a coming resurrection of the made as the principle of life a con- of personal evangelism: First, Science void of offense before God and

4. The charge of sacrilege, or profanation of the temple (vv. 17-21). This charge he refuted by showing (1) that he had come all the way from Greece (v. 17) to worship at the feast; (2) that he had not come up empty-handed, but had brought alms for his nation (v. 17); (3) that there were not competent witnesses present to testify as to his behavior in the temple (v. 19); by challenging his enemies to testify as to his conduct in the council

III. Paul Before Felix the Second Time (vv. 22-27).

This is a sort of a sequel to the trial. Wicked as Felix was, Paul's manner somewhat won his favor, though he did not release him. His sentence was indulgent imprisonment, which kept him free from his enemies while under Roman protection. Felix sent for Paul that he might hear of Christ from him. Paul behaved himself aright before these sinners in high He reasoned of righteousness, self-control and judgment to come, before Felix and his sinful wife, with such power that Felix was terrified and declared that he would hear Paul further at a convenient time. This was a most flimsy excuse for not changing his life and granting justice to Paul. He was so in bondage to sin that he was unwilling to change. Also he hoped that by delaying matters he

November 13 Bible Examples of Personal Evangelism

Matthew 4:18-22; 9:9, 10. To the Scriptures given for the topic, there should be added John 1:35-50; 3:1-21; 4:1-42; Acts 8:26-40. Our Lord beleived in and practiced personal evangelism as well as public preaching. So did the apostles and early Christians. The history of the church in Korea in our time is an illustration of the wisdom of this

Many Christians are willing to do the work of the Lord by the contract method, rather than by the contact method. They will subscribe a certain amount to some agency for the promotion of evangelization, but personal evangelism through personal contact with the lost they entirely ignore. To them the Scripture might be applied which says, "This ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

In the Bible examples of personal evangelism, we may find the qualities essential to its success. First, there is the matter of continual watchfulness. "Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee saw two men." More than that, He saw two possible workers. It's a good thing for a Christian to keep his eyes open in order to see the opportunities round about him. In Ephesians 5:15, 16, there is a speeific word concerning this; "See that ye walk circumspectly, not as foolish ones, just taking in the sights, but as wise, buying up the opportunities, because the days are evil." We are familiar with such sayings as "The diamond in the rough" and "The an-gel in the stone." Let us be watchful to get hold of the diamond or release the angel. Some one has said that God makes His saints out of mere common clay. To be conscious of the future possibilities of an individual will inspire us to earnest endeavor for that individual. The Sunday school teacher through whose personal evangelistic effort D. L. Moody was led to Christ, doubtless saw something of promise in the uncultured boy in his class.

The other essential quality to successful personal evangelism is a firm faith in the saving power of Christ. Unless we are sure of Christ as a Saviour, we shall despair of mind as a sinner. The words of our lesson, "I will make you to become fishers of have an application at this point. Our Lord has sufficient power to transform lives. When Andrew brought his brother Simon to Jesus as recorded in John 1:41, 42, Jesus looking at him said, "Thou art Simon, thou shalt be called Cephas," or Peter. This promise was fulfilled by the saving and transforming power of Christ. Simon the vacillating, undependable man was changed to Cephas the rock, or stone, one who could be trusted and depended on.

A few days ago Marjorie toddled into the street and was struck by a passing auto, being knocked down and suffering a bump on the head. She was able to hurry into the house, where she said to her father:

Growing Children Often Need Pepto-Mangan.

Some children grow too quickly—it saps their strength. They lapse into careless, desultory habits, or develop shrinking attitude. Their faces look pinched.

The blood becomes overtaxed by too rapid growth; and poisons from the system take the place of strengthgiving red corpuscles in the blood. Red corpuscles are those little red particles that swim in blood and give it its color. Gradually that child loses interest in its play.

Poor blood needs the building that the iron in Gude's Pepto-Mangan gives to weakened blood. Gude's Pepto-Mangan enriches the blood by increasing the number of red corpuscles, and restores the blood by driving out the poisons. When the revived blood gets to work, the appetite becomes what a growing child's should be. Your druggist has Gude's Pepto-Mangan in liquid or tablet form. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on every package.

DEFENDS THE "DIME NOVEL"

Canadian Writer Points Out That at Least It Shunned the "Sex Stuff" Now Common.

This is not a plea for the return of the dime novel. In fact, we fear that the dime novel can never come back; they don't sell anything for a dime any more. All in all, however, the only thing about the dime novel that was as bad as it was painted was the cover. Most of us remember much that was pleasant about the old "paper cover" that flourished in the '80s and '90s. Under Diamond Dick we gang-fought all sorts of thugs and bad men; with Old King Brady we detected the bank robber with our detectors hitting on all six; we rode with Buffalo Bill as he put the Indian sign on Indians, that were at least supposed to be bad. Sometimes it was rough stuff, but at that it was rarely that more than one throat a day was cut or more than a pint of gore left clinging to the deftly-removed scalp. We remember that in the end Virtue (spell with a capital V. please) always triumphed and that honesty, if not the best policy, didn't do anybody any harm. The muchabused dime novel, it will have to be said, tended the young shoots of the imagination in many a creaky woodshed loft and in many a sheltered spot behind the cedar fence.

As we remember the dime novel, we are unable to recall one bedroom scene, one neglected wife, one young heroine sobbing in her pink boudoir because she is not understood, one wasty sex problem. Which may lead some of us to think that the dime novel had nothing to fear in comparison with the $2 novel.-Manitoba

PRIMITIVE LAND OF ALBANIA

Conditions There Today Much as They Were at the Beginning of Civilization.

Albania belongs to a time as far back as the annals of the world can reach and is as primitive as if it were in central China, almost as difficult to penetrate as Tibet itself. It is a land unfamiliar to the traveler and shunned by the tourist of today.

If the three or four centers of population in southern Albania are a little disappointing as cities, this is not true of the country or of the picfuresque villages which gather like gray splashes upon the grayer hills, where they appear to have nestled since the beginning of time. Rough stone huts they are for the most part, with flat stone roofs. For purposes of defense, they are usually situated half way up the lower hills, and the houses and outbuildings are often surrounded by strong stone walls.

The valleys are rich and well cultivated, chiefly by the women, but present a desolate, deserted appearance, except in the daylight working hours. Not a farmhouse nor a stable is to be seen amidst all the fertile acres. The crops cannot be stolen; no bandit would think of destroying them, and "In order to become personal evan- so they are left unguarded.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

Secret Gold Field.

There is no doubt that there is gold in the Soudan, and the French government is taking steps to get it out. Concessions are being given to companies which will endeavor to operate gold mines in that country, and the natives will be rewarded for revealing the places where nuggets have been found. Twenty years ago some natives brought in a 60-pound rock, which was found to be 90 per cent gold, and recently there have been found a number of smaller nuggets which were almost as rich. The Soudanese fields are at present very difficult to reach, but the announced fact that a colonial railroad project is to be completed in a few years makes the outlook very hopeful, and the prediction is made by some that the Soudan will some day outrival the Klondike. Heretofore the natives have been clever enough to guard as a secret the source of their gold findings.

Origin of Lunar Features.

Mr. Walter Goodacre discussing the photographs of the moon taken at Mount Wilson with the Hooker telescope, says that the hypothesis ascribing the formation of lunar craters to the impact of meteors is now generally discredited, but if additional arguments against it were necessary the control of which were almost as rich. The Souarguments against it were necessary they would be found in a careful study of the superb photographs above mentioned. He states that a consideration of the fine detail found in these pictures, especially in relation to the many crater chains and clefts, suggests that their existence can only be accounted for on the supposition that they are due to volcanic agency held on September 1, 1920, and showed that on that date there were in the country 11,594 private passenger cars, 2.276 motor cabs and omnibuses, 3,787 motortrucks and 12,182 motorcycles. The rapid increase in the number of cars and trucks in Denmark during the past three years is noteworthy. The increase was especially great in the country districts.—Scientific American.

5,000-Year-Old Seeds.

A morning glory seed, reputed 5,000 years old, has been planted in the garden of Mrs. W. Champun Robinson, in a Maryland village. The seed is one of twelve found in the hand of a mummy of a young Egyptian girl.

Who Owns The Bell Telephone System?

OME people look upon the Bell System as a large corporation owned by a group of

On the contrary, the stock of the Company is owned by 175,000 people. This does not include many thousands who are owners of the Company's bonds, or those who are paying for stock in installments.

More than half of these stockholders are women. The average number of shares held is 30 and no shareholder owns as much as one-half of one per cent. of the stock. More than one-third of the stockholders own five shares or less each.

These people buy this stock because they believe in the efficiency of the organization and the integrity of its management. They believe their money is safe and they expect to receive a continuous dividend on their invest-

The further extension of our system is dependent upon these people and others who may be attracted as investors. If we are going to continue to meet the growing demands for extension of our service, it is imperative that these people shall continue to receive satisfactory pay for the use of their money.

"Along Came Ted."

Of this play Mr. Holbein has this to say, "I have seen this play twice and it is a good one, capably acted." This criticism, favorable as it is, and, coming from such a source should be sufficient to assure all who attend a very enjoyable evening. A play which will bring no blush of shame to the cheek, nor leave a smudge of evil in the heart, is the kind of entertainment which will be offered at the Opera House on the ve of Thanksgiving.

A meeting of the Carroll County Agricultural Asspociation was held on Friday evening, Nov. 4th. Min-utes of the meeting of Oct. 22, were read by the acting Secretary, Chas. E. H. Shriner, and approved. Next order was the nomination and election of a Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. E. M. Dutterer was nominated and elected to fill both offices. Next, two members of the present board, C. E. H. Shriner and Wm. Eckert were elected from the board, and another will be selected from the new stockholders for the third as an Executive Committee.

Next were bids for the work on the old Grange Hall, of converting the hall into either a double dwelling or an apartment house. Three bids were received, but action on the bids was deferred until some future meeting when more members of the Association are present. Mr. Eckert reported having the subscription blanks ready for distribution, which was done among those present.

The date and place of holding the Fair was next considered; but decision was deferred until next meeting. The officers will be installed at next meeting. The meeting adjourned to meet again on Dec. 2.

Mysterious Mr.

Featuring Walter Miller, Paul Panzer and Edna Mason An interesting story of mystery that is as cleverly told as it is unique in character. Walter Miller, who plays the lead is seen in a dual character, first as a millionaire bank president and then as

"Red" Harrigan, of the underworld. The plot is such as to sustain the mystery right to the end of the picture, and as it unwinds itself there is told a story that is unusual. The scenes laid in the underworld of New York are interesting and the thrilling moments experienced by Harrigan in his search for his lost brother are equally exciting. ALSO A COMEDY PICTURE -- SPEED --
