THE POULTRY SHOW A BIG SUCCESS.

One of the Best Shows Ever Held in This State.

The poultry show held in Westminster, this week, was a great success, and was largely attended. The exhibits were fine, large and numerous, and pronounced by experts that for quality and choice assortment, the show has never been surpassed in the state.

One of the outcomes of the event was the formation of a new state Poultrymen's Association, Thomas W. Kemp, of Union Mills, being chosen president, and Aaron Fell, of Bethesda, secretary. The following were named as the first board of directors, who, with the officers named, will at once proceed to incorporate: George O. Brown, Baltimore; James A. LeGore, Frederick county; Alexander Carr, Baltimore county; Frank Riggs, Baltimore; Robert Byers, Washington county; Roy H. Waite, Maryland State University.

The banquet in connection with the show was given at the Hotel Westminster, Thursday night. Five hundred poultrymen and their guests including a number of women, were at the table.

Thos. W. Kemp, president of the Carroll County Association, presided and Dr. G. Lewis Wetzel was toastmaster. Those who responded to toasts were George O. Brown, Baltimore; J. Harry Wolsieffer, Vineland, N. J.; Aaron Fell, Bethesda; George D. Penniman, Jr., Baltimore; Alexander Carr, Roslyn; Howard Thompson, Baltimore; F. J. Gornican, Roanoke, Va.; Frank S. Barr, Pennsylvania; State Senator R. Smith Snader, New Windsor; Mayor H. E. Koonz, Westminster; John H. Cunningham, Westminster; George W. Yeiser, Union Mills, and former State Senator Wade H. D. Warfield.

Why Republicans Won, in Carroll.

We have been asked, several times—Why did the Republicans win in Carroll, and lose in other sections? We think the answer is found largely in the fact that in Carroll the vote was out to a greater extent than in most other voting units. This is the history of Republican victories—the party's chances are always best in active, aggressive, campaigns, when the people vote pretty generally.

That there should be a large Democratic majority in Baltimore and in the state, was largely because only 45 per cent of the registered vote of Baltimore was cast, and that a large stay-at-home vote existed also in the counties. The figures from Frederick and Washington counties verify this opinion.

The Republican party has always succeeded best, when the fight was the hardest. This is largely the origin of the saying that a rainy election day is best for the Democrats; they are more persistent voters than Republicans. The quiet, "still-hunt," campaigns, are always best for the Democrats, and this is a country-wide fact.

Sunday School Classes Formed.

The interest in Bible Class work, following the great parade and mass meeting in Westminster, on Oct. 30, is still being maintained. Two new classes have been formed. St. Matthew's Union has organized with 28 members; St. James M. E. South, reports a new men's class of 20, while Deer Park M. P. has definite plans on foot for a new organization.

Many other classes are striving for their 25% increase. Definite reports have come from Carrollton Church of God, with six organized classes, and an increase of 13; Grace Lutheran, of Westminster, 1 new member in Women's class; New Windsor Men's class has increased one, and the young ladies class of Stone Chapel, has five additions.

Point in Advertising.

I hastened into a barber's shop the other day and asked if I could be shaved in five minutes. "Yep!" was the reply. The barber quickly applied the soap. He began lathering and lathering and kept on lathering until I felt sure I would miss my soap brush. I was saying to myself: "Why doesn't he quit this process and get busy with his razor?" That would have been my way of shaving myself in a hurry. When he did finally take up his razor, the job was over in a jiffy. And I caught my train.

The incident, for some reason or other, begot this thought in my mind: Lathering is to shaving very much the same thing as advertising is to selling. If you do enough preliminary work and do it properly, so that groundwork has been thoroughly prepared, then the resistance is very greatly reduced, and it is possible either to shave with less trouble or to sell goods with less trouble.

A good many business men are as foolish as I would have been in trying to shave myself in a hurry. They don't use enough advertising before starting to try to get results. They don't apply enough advertising lather.

Is it not so?—B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine (New York).

OUR DETROIT LETTER.

The Industrial Situation Gradually Growing Better.

I have felt for some time that I ought to try my hand at getting another article into the hands of the Editor of the Record, not because my letters contain anything important, or very interesting, but simply to please the friends that seem to like to read them. But the trouble seems to be that I do not know what to write about. I have written so much about the work situation, that I fancy everybody gets tired of reading about it.

I want to say this, however; things look much brighter for the winter than they did last year this time. I saw stated today that a close estimate shows about 50,000 men out of work—too many, by far, but quite an improvement over a few months ago. If the threatened railroad strike had been pulled off, it would have looked black, for that would have meant the shutting down of a great part of the industries here, for want of shipping facilities, either of rough stock in, or finished products out. Happily for the country, as well as for the railroad men, this menace to returning prosperity has been postponed for a while, at least.

As I said in one of my former letters, a strike does not look the same in a small town that it does in a large manufacturing city, like Detroit. There you hardly realize that a strike is going on, while here it paralyzes industry. So you can see why all Detroit drew a long breath of relief when the papers announced that the strike had been called off.

I received a letter from a friend some time ago, in which he stated that coal is $13.50 a ton. It is a dollar higher out here, but a great many people burn soft coal, especially in furnaces. But I do know that for $9.00, and lasts nearly as long as hard coal. And when I say "hard coal" I mean the white ash—nobody seems to know anything about red ash anthracite, like that used in the East. Speaking of coal prices reminds me of the prediction that prices generally would fall when wages came down. Well, wages have tumbled, but the profiteers manage to keep prices up on almost everything that a working man must have, in order to live. Maybe things will even themselves up some time, but that time seems slow in coming.

Winter has started in strong and if the week is a sample of what we are to have the next six months, we are in for a "stinger." The weather puts me in mind of the time we landed here, four years ago, only it has started about two weeks sooner. We have had snow every day this week, and it has been real cold along with the snow. Mild and severe winters seem to alternate here, and this is the year that the coal dealers would like to see come true to form.

I can hardly realize that four years have passed since we left Taneytown. So many things have happened since then—not particularly with us, for it has been a pretty steady grind, as all shop work is the same routine, day in and day out. But by keeping track in the Record of the happenings in the town and vicinity, we can see that there has been quite a change there. In fact our friends tell us that not only has the appearance of the town changed, but the population also. So many have died, and new ones moved in to take their places; the paving of the streets, with the change of grade; the erection of all those fine residences out along the state road, the Soldiers' Memorial and other things, all speak of changes.

Some time in the future I intend writing a few letters which may interest your readers more than this rambling stuff. They will contain reminiscences of Taneytown a good many years ago, when I was a boy. So with this promise to my friends, I will close for this time.

JOHN J. REID, Detroit, Mich.

Penalty for Being Active "Dry."

As showing the mental and moral calibre of some of the very "wets," the following is reproduced from the American, of last Saturday, Frederick, Md., Nov. 11.—Active participation in temperance legislation and steadfast refusals to allow hunters to use his farm have been costly to Rev. R. J. Ridgely, of near Myersville. This week his orchard of fruit-bearing apple trees was bodily chopped down. He awoke to find every tree a stump, and no clue to the identity of the choppers.

This is a new form of revenge in this section. Occasionally letters threatening property damage and bodily injury have been mailed to reform leaders or to persons who have refused hunting permissions, but it is the first time so extensive a damage has been done. The community is aroused over the act and has formed itself into a vigilance committee.

Demonstration in Meat Canning.

Miss Rachel Everett will give a demonstration in the home canning of meats, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rockward Nusbaum, near Fairview school this Saturday, all day. This will be specially interesting meeting for women, as processes will be shown for effectually saving all meat products.

VIGOROUS CHARGE TO GRAND JURY.

Eastern Shore Judge Says Volstead Act must be Obeyed.

Judge Philemon B. Hopper, in his recent charge to the Queen Annes County Grand Jury, did not mince words in his instructions as to the Grand Jury's duties with reference to liquor law violations, nor as to his opinions of those who evade or violate constitutional law. We regret that we do not have the space for his entire charge, as the rest of it is equally as clear and forceful.

"There are rumors circulating in this county which, if true, should make every law abiding citizen of the county blush with shame at the alarming and degrading conditions that exist here. I refer to the rumors that intoxicating liquors are being imported and sold in this community persistently and almost openly.

Some reputable people have said to me that they have seen more drunken people in the county in the last six months than they had observed here in any year since our local option laws were enacted. I do not know that their observation is correct; I do not know that the rumors of the defiant violations of the law are based on facts. I have tried to find out, to discover the truth, but I have not been successful in my inquiries; if I had found any persons who knew the facts, I would now give you their names so that you might have them brought before you to testify.

I have no inquisitorial powers. I cannot summon people before me and compel them to tell me what they know about infractions of law. My investigations were, therefore, limited and abortive. But I do know that the conditions in this county are alarming, degrading and dangerous if the rumors about the traffic in intoxicating liquors here are even half true. Heretofore, I have stated to your predecessors in office that there were no criminal classes in this county, meaning by criminal classes people who adopt crime as their means of livelihood, who habitually prey upon others for gain or through viciousness.

But if what I have heard be but partly true, this community has lately been invaded by a most dangerous class who operate for gain, and who corrupt and degrade others by their evil example. As I view the matter, there is no condition that is more alarming and more destructive of the peace and safety of a community than the lowering of moral standards, disregard of lawful authority and wilful disobedience to law. When a lawfully constituted law making body enacts a rule of conduct, that rule must be obeyed, whether it be wise or unwise, just or unjust, so long as it remains un-repealed.

Contempt and disobedience of one law leads insidiously to disregard for all law and breeds anarchy. One cannot select laws that he will obey and others that he will not obey, for such selection will undermine and destroy organized society, and bring about a situation in which each man will be a law unto himself with no respect for the laws and rights of others. You cannot indict, and this court cannot punish, those who violate the provisions of the Volstead Act unless the act that infringes that law also violates the laws of Maryland or of this county. Unfortunately the local law restricting the importation of alcoholic liquors into this county was repealed some years ago, so we are powerless to punish those who do no more than bring intoxicants here. But it is nonsense to say that it is being brought here for any legitimate purpose.

Those who are importing it are bringing it here to sell and the sale of it violates our local laws. It ought not to be very difficult for you to discover who is importing it and I think you may feel quite certain that the man who brings it into this community is selling it. If your investigation uncovers those who are importing it, but fails in proof as to the salesman, report the names of all whom your proofs show are bringing it here so that I may report them to the proper officers of the United States.

For, although we cannot enforce the Volstead Act, I think it is the duty of every law abiding man or woman to report any wilful violation of it that comes to his or her knowledge. And this duty rests upon you, according to my view, whether we think the Act is wise and good, or bad."

MORE ABOUT SHADE TREES.

The Best All-around Tree is the Norway Maple.

An article in the November number of the American City Magazine for November, written by Carl Barnhart, Superintendent of the shade tree division of Newark, N. J., is very interesting, and contains a great deal of valuable information as to trees, their habits and desirability, and the results of trial of many varieties of trees in Newark.

The article makes it clear that the ideal tree for all places and purposes does not exist, but the tree that combines most of the good qualities, is the Norway Maple; desirable in size, stands well both excess of drouth and moisture, heat and cold, keeps its foliage well, is tough, substantial and long lived.

Both pin oak and red oak are desirable city trees, but require more room than maples. Another tree, desirable for narrow streets, is the European linden. It is a good tree, rather more rapid in growth than the maples. It is hardy, likes moisture, but is a good tree under almost all conditions.

The American elen, that is otherwise a desirable tree, is particularly the subject of pests, and requires considerable area. The Oriental plane is also recommended on wide avenues. The horse-chestnut is given many good points, but is slow in growth and its foliage is too dense to be desirable close to buildings. The ginkgo is also given a good reputation.

The article speaks of the Carolina poplar as desirable where quick growth is wanted, but even then recommends that it be planted in alternation with Norways, and after they have become well started, cut out the poplars. It says the poplars should never be planted where clay drain pipes are in use, on account of its roots. The poplar is given the reputation for growing where no other tree will grow, and that for this reason alone has its peculiar desirability.

The planting of silver maples is regarded as a waste of time, money and space, as it is short lived and infested with borers, and is one of the trees under the ban for planting in Newark.

For streets, the writer advises the selection of one variety of tree for both sides of the street, and uniform planting, as being most desirable for good looks, or if more variety is desired, then that all of the trees in one block be of the same species.

SECRETARY HUGHES' NAVY PROGRAM.

Big Surprise in Extent of the American Proposal.

Secretary Hughes, with characteristic directness, surprised the powers of the world, last Saturday, in presenting at once, and in full, the American proposition to the Disarmament Conference now in session in Washington.

It proposes a ten-year Naval holiday, calling on the United States, Great Britain and Japan to at once scrap sixty-six capital war ships, aggregating 1,878,043 tons. The United States would lose 30 vessels aggregating 843,740 tons, Great Britain 19 vessels of 583,375 tons, and Japan 17 vessels and 448,928 tons.

Within three months the United States would have 18 capital ships, Great Britain 22 and Japan 10. That for a period of at least ten years, naval building shall cease entirely in the three countries, and that no naval work, on account of other countries, shall be undertaken in either of the three countries. There are numerous details, all aiming at a large measure of disarmament.

It would cost this Government nearly $400,000,000 to finish the building program, now less than half completed at an expenditure of $380,000,000, and the money would have to be appropriated at a greater rate than is now being done if the program is completed in 1924, the year set for finishing the job. Only $90,000,000 was appropriated for construction during the present fiscal year, although the Navy Department asked Congress for considerably more.

The further saving would be in navy operation and maintenance. The reduction in these items under the new proposal is estimated at $150,000,000 annually or about one-half of the amount now expended for upkeep. The navy appropriation for the present fiscal year independent of the item of $90,000,000 for new construction, was $320,000,000.

As France and Italy have no extensive naval program on hand, they would not be greatly interfered with and these two countries have agreed to act in harmony, and no other Navies of the world are of importance, since the German navy has been completely destroyed.

The representatives of Britain, France, Japan and Italy, all approve the plan in general, but each will present some reservations. The approval of Great Britain is especially marked and open, and their representatives speak as the most interested, perhaps, of all the nations.

The conference, so far, has been most encouraging, but it is conceded that the most difficult question is yet to come—an agreement on what is known as the Eastern question, involving especially, Japan and China.

THE RED CROSS APPEAL.

Carroll County Should Give Double the Number Asked for.

Last week, The Record could not find space for an article received late in the week, relative to the Red Cross Roll Call for 1922. As The Record is in full sympathy with the movement, it takes pleasure in giving the effort its indorsement, now. There is hardly any need for exploiting the work of the Red Cross. Not to know what this splendid organization is doing, means being out of touch with information relative to the world's greatest benevolent agency.

Wherever there is disaster and suffering, there the Red Cross is at work, at all seasons and all places, and among all peoples. It needs no invitation. It goes as the leader of relief.

Its work costs money, as no organization can work effectively without it. It ought not to be placed in the position of begging for financial support. If there is one movement in this world that should meet with liberal voluntary support, it is that of the Red Cross.

The campaign in Carroll County is for only 2400 members, or less than one-fourth of the number enrolled in 1918, and the fee is only $1.00. Carroll County should respond to double the number of memberships asked for.

Annual Report of Schools.

We have received a copy of the Sixth Annual Report of The Public Schools of Carroll County, issued by the Board of Education, apparently a very exhaustive review of the status of the County's schools; together with a comparison with the schools of other counties, followed by a condensed financial statement showing the receipts and disbursements for the year ending July 31, 1921. The total receipts are given as $284,512.021, and the total disbursements as $281,987.36.

Christmas Cards and Folders.

Some business and professional men like to send out a special Christmas card or folder, with a personal message. We can supply these, if the order is given to us, now. Call at the office and look over the sample line. Pastors of churches may be specially interested.

COURT ORGANIZED

And Petit Jurors Excused Until next Monday.

The November term of the Circuit Court for Carroll county began on Monday with Chief Judge William H. Thomas on the bench, John W. Deberry was appointed bailiff to the grand jury, Fred Harver bailiff to the petit jury and W. D. Cratin and Samuel Fogle bailiffs at the gate.

Judge Thomas appointed Robert W. Carter, Skyesville, foreman of the grand jury, and the following other grand jurors were drawn:

Nicholas J. Walsh, Oliver D. Boose, Thomas Haver Gill, Tobias Harner, Joseph O. Dayhoff, Joseph H. Frounfelter, Michael R. Bentz, William F. Hoffman, John T. Day, Cleff C. Beachtel, George W. Hoff, J. William Glennan, Albert D. Nagle, Thomas O. Lindsay, Albert H. Young, Jr., George W. Webers, Lester D. Troxell, Stewart Z. Leister, Carroll G. Raver, Jacob H. Handley, J. Walter Englar and John H. Brown.

The following constitute the petit jury: Ezra D. Spangler, William R. Trenowith, Charles W. Conoway, A. Frank Miller, Howard C. Keefer, Oliver Cagle, Edward J. Rinehart, Charles Coppersmith, John H. Myers, Robert V. Arnold, Robert E. Lee Hutchins, Clifton G. Devilbiss, Abram Price, Clarence E. Bachman, C. Edw. Carlisle, John T. Lemmon, William H. Bennett, Paul H. Krumrine, Wm. H. Main, James I. Dutterer, William E. Williams, William E. Koons, Amos Sauble, Norville P. Shoemaker and George D. Hosfeld.

The petit jurors were excused until Monday, when the trial of the criminal docket will be taken up. It is probable that no civil cases will be tried before November 28.

Pitching Horseshoes in Indiana.

Richard Spillane, a talented writer on "Men and Business" in the Philadelphia Ledger, occasionally branches out into the lighter stuff, and recently in carrying out the illustration based on some peculiarities of Indianapolis, said:

"Pitching horseshoes is a thrilling affair with an Indian. There is a space set aside in the park by the river bank for the horseshoe devotees. They cannot get enough play in daylight, so the Park Commissioners have installed electric lights in the horseshoe-pitching 'courts.' A gifted horseshoe pitcher is looked upon with as much respect in Indiana as if he were Booth Tarlington, Tom Marshall or David Gibson. The trainers and 'seconds' of the champion and near champion pitchers growl and kick about the 'delivery' of the opponent of their charges with a vigor and earnestness that equals similar bickering on the baseball diamond or in the prize ring. Horseshoes are weighed and examined just as carefully as a pugilist's seconds examine boxing gloves, and when a pitching contest is on, the whole town (or at least the sporting element) is all 'het up.'"

Wedding Announcements.

The Record office always has on hand a nice grade of wedding stationery, suitable for either invitations or announcements, and we use a script type closely resembling the regulation engraved style. Inside and outside envelopes. Orders from parties known to us, can be filled by mail. Can be had in lots of fifty, or more.

Diphtheria is epidemic in McSherrystown, Pa.

There are reports that the whole town may be placed under quarantine, though most of the cases are responding to treatment.

Maj. A. M. Hall, in writing to the Sykesville Herald a "booster" letter for Florida, mentions among other things that there are no "coal bins" there. We suppose he means they just dump their coal on a pile?

Success depends largely on what people believe is true, rather than on what is true. The successful business man, therefore, catches trade through creating a favorable impression in the minds of the public with reference to his prices and business methods, even though, as a matter of fact, he may be using deception. It is not so much what people know, as what they think they know, that knocks the pessimists.

On the day before election, the head-line of the leading editorial in the Baltimore American, was, "Vote! Vote for your city's interest." The advice, so far as the "greater representation" interest is concerned, was disregarded by 55 per cent of the voters. But, the captain of the editorial is worth weighing—"Vote for your city's interest"—because it represents the continuous policy of the city's newspapers, and overtops every other interest and effort.

What is the Answer.

Less than 45 per cent of the voters of Baltimore city thought it worth while to vote, last week. What is the answer?

The churches complaining of slim attendance, on the average; while if comparison was made between the actual attendance, and the number of people of proper age to attend church, the shortage would be still greater. What is the answer?

All of the Fraternities—or so-called, "Lodges"—complain of slimly attended meetings, and lack of interest. What is the answer?

We cite Baltimore, not specially, but as representative of conditions in all cities, showing lack of interest in government, in religion, and in fraternal and benevolent relations. What is the answer?

On the other hand, there is apparently great interest in sports and amusements. Sentiment is strong for Sunday diversions of all kinds; it is strong for "booze"; it is largely against what are termed "blue laws." What is the answer?

The papers of Baltimore—and of large eastern cities generally—are "wet," and are for more or less "open" Sundays; they sneer at reformers and moralists, and to what is called restraint of "personal liberty." What is the answer?

Do these papers simply follow the big crowd, for business reasons? If there is another and still a bigger crowd in favor of law and order—and we believe there is—why does it hide under cover? What is the answer?

The Baltimore American, in an editorial on the day following the election, pictured the disastrous results—at the polls—of a policy of attempting to reform the country through legal statutes. It tells of an indicted brewer, in Buffalo, having been elected Mayor; and that in New Jersey the Republicans lost some "dry" members of the legislature. What is the answer?

Is it true that reformers and prohibitionists must buckle under to those who object to such efforts. What is the answer?

Mayor Hylan, of New York, owes a large portion of his big majority in New York city to his open stand against the Volstead Act. What is the answer?

Counting Too Long Delayed.

Among other objectionable features connected with our election laws the long time required to count the ballots, is one. In the first place, it is too much continuous work for one set of officials to receive the ballots for a period of thirteen hours, then spent another six or seven hours doing the counting, or a continuous service for practically twenty hours, as was the case this year.

We are not an advocate of more expense, but believe that common-sense dictates that no set of officials, after having spent thirteen hours continuously receiving the ballots, can be in the fresh and alert mental and physical condition that should attend the counting.

The public may, or not, be considered as having interests in the matter. At any rate, the announcement of results is naturally very late, and hardly up to the standard of the American way of doing things, especially things of such importance.

We are of the opinion that there should be another set of officials to do the counting, and that the ballots should be removed from the box every hour, and counted. The objection to such a plan may be that it would be difficult to prevent the result of the count "leaking" out, in which case the information might easily be taken unfair advantage of; but, it seems to us that this contingency could be safeguarded.

It also seems to us that in the counties, especially, the polls might be closed at 5 o'clock or 6 at the latest, and be opened an hour later. Ten hours ought to be a day's work for a job of such vast importance, and some plan should be invented whereby to prevent the necessity for carrying the count until from 1 o'clock to 3 o'clock the next morning.

Lawlessness.

We do not know the author of the following paragraphs, but every sound and right thinking person will agree to their truthfulness;

"There surely is a deplorable quantity and quality of lawlessness manifest in all parts of our country. Murders, bandits, hold-ups, robberies, frauds and swindling. Quite every day brings some new and startling crime.

Not only these greater violations, but there are lamentable transgressions which are considered less flagrant—violations of revenue laws, anti-trust laws, laws regulating commerce and trade, etc.

Take the prohibition laws, for instance. However much opinions may differ regarding them, they were called for by the loud voice of the people, were solemnly enacted and are legally in force, yet how generally they are sneakily violated by even pretty good people and how these violations are encouraged and participated in by influential men and women, with decided complacency.

Even indifference to the sanction of law begets a dangerous looseness, while defiance is anarchy."

President Harding's Plea.

Below are found a number of the most striking portions of the address of President Harding, delivered at the Arlington cemetery, Washington, on Armistice Day, the occasion being the burial of the "unknown" American soldier. They contain fine sentiments, worth reading and remembering.

"On such an occasion as this, amid such a scene, our thoughts alternate between defenders living and defenders dead. A grateful Republic will be worthy of them both. Our part is to atone for the losses of heroic dead by making a better Republic for the living.

Sleeping in these hallowed grounds are thousands of Americans who have given their blood for the baptism of freedom and its maintenance armed exponents of the Nation's conscience. It is better and nobler for their deeds. Burial here is rather more than a sign of the Government's favor, it is a suggestion of a tomb in the heart of the Nation, sorrowing for its noble dead.

Today's ceremonies proclaim that the hero unknown is not unknown. We gather him to the Nation's breast, within the shadow of the Capitol, of the towering shaft that honors Washington, the great father, and of the exquisite monument to Lincoln, the martyred savior. Here the inspirations of yesterday and the conscience of today forever unite to make the Republic worthy of his death for flag and country.

Ours are lofty resolutions today, as with tribute to the dead we consecrate ourselves to a better order for the living. With all my heart I wish we might say to the defenders who survive, to mothers who sorrow, to widows and children who mourn, that no such sacrifice shall be asked again.

I speak not as pacifist fearing war but as one who loves justice and hates war. I speak as one who believes the highest function of government is to give its citizens the security of peace, the opportunity to achieve and the pursuit of happiness.

The loftiest tribute we can bestow today—the heroically earned tribute—fashioned in deliberate conviction, out of unclouded thought, neither shadowed by remorse nor made vain by fancies, is the commitment of this Republic to an advancement never made before. If American achievement is a cherished pride at home, if our selfishness among nations is all we wish it to be, and ours is a helpful example in the world, then let us give of our influence and strength, yea, of our aspirations and convictions, to put mankind on a little higher plane, exulting and exalting, with war's distressing and depressing tragedies barred from the stage of righteous civilization.

There have been a thousand defenses justly and patriotically made; a thousand offenses which reason and righteousness ought to have stayed. Let us beseech all men to join us in seeking the rule under which reason and righteousness shall prevail. Standing today on hallowed ground, conscious that all America has halted to share in the tribute of heart and mind and soul to this fellow American, and knowing that the world is noting this expression of the Republic's mindfulness, it is fitting to say that his sacrifice, and that of the millions dead, shall not be in vain. There must be, there shall be, the commanding voice of a conscious civilization against armed warfare.

As we return this poor clay to its mother soil, garlanded by love and covered with the decorations that only nations can bestow, I can sense the prayers of our people, of all peoples, that this Armistice Day shall mark the beginning of a new and lasting era of peace on earth, good will among men."

Why Adams County has no County Fair.

The Adams County Independent, last week, commented editorially on the proposition to hold an Agricultural Fair, in the county, the question having been brought to the front by a consideration of the success of the "Farmers Day" celebration at Gettysburg, recently held. The Independent says:

"At once came the cry for a county fair. This was heightened by the recent announcement that sufficient land was available for such an institution through the offer of John M. Warner to take stock in exchange for the real estate at the southwestern edge of Gettysburg adjoining the hospital property. Adams county could provide just as creditable a show as any of its neighbors, the advocates urged; the attendance on Farmers' Day indicated the interest, the financing was partly provided for, other fairs drew heavily. Why should not Adams county with its fine spirit of pride and loyalty produce its own county agricultural exhibition every fall and covering a period of a week?

The answers are even more numerous than the question themselves. In the first place objectors point to the fact that such rich counties as Franklin, Cumberland, and Dauphin do not support fairs, and that within only a few years the Cumberland county society found it inadvisable to try to continue. The vast expense necessary to start a fair is brought forward and the outlay for erecting buildings, constructing a race track and stables, and all other structures is shown. The prevailing financial stringency is also urged. The substantial footing of other nearby fairs is shown and the argument made that a new Adams county exhibition could not hope to compete with rich organizations at other places.

Furthermore it is shown that most desirable dates are pre-empted by nearby fairs. Hanover and York on the east, and Hagerstown and Frederick on the south draw thousands from this county; while many go even to Lancaster and Allentown. With such competition Adams county could not hope to wage a successful effort. So claim the opponents to the fair idea."

"The Farmers' Day idea is a grand success. It is a sure thing, an annual institution that will be improved and enlarged as time goes on. And it should not be supplanted by a fair with the great uncertainty surrounding it and the other difficulties enumerated. At least so think those to whom the county would have to look for the bulk of the financial support necessary to put across the fair idea."

How Better Than Pills?

The question has been asked. Is what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is, they are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then, they not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

The Welcome of Strangers.

There are many towns, which while meeting strangers very pleasantly, yet never do anything to see that they make friends and are taken into the life of the place.

A man was telling the other day about his experience in such a community. He found the people very courteous, and there was no apparent stiffness. Yet no one seemed to realize that he might care to join organizations and enter social circles. After a couple of years in which he made many bowing acquaintances, but no friends, business called him elsewhere, and he removed with his family.

After a couple of years he went back to this place of former residence for a few days. He found that many people still remembered him and as usual they were smiling and agreeable. But it was a complete surprise to them that he and his family had moved out of town. Very few other than his immediate neighbors seemed to realize it. A person can drop into a place like that and make no more of an impression than the ripple that is created when you throw a stone into a lake.

People with social and friendly natures get awfully homesick in such a town. If they are of a pushing kind, they make their way in spite of all indifference. But if they are of a quiet and reserved nature, they might live in such a city for many years, and create no warm associations, and form no sentiment of attachment to the location.

What is needed is not merely the friendly smile to strangers, but the warm invitation to come into a city's social circles and to take part in its activities. Strangers should be made so welcome that they will at once find associations that will be friendly and helpful. Where that spirit exists deep ties of attachment to a town are quickly formed and people hate to move away from a city with these open hearts and homes.—Elliott City Times.

VARIETIES OF HUMAN FOOD

Decidedly Odd Material Sometimes Employed for the Purpose of Providing Nourishment

It is interesting to consider some of the more or less odd material which man has been led to choose for the purpose of food. Environment, of course, must be a factor in regard to this choice, and necessity also. It is hard to imagine that earth would be used as food, and yet such has been the case in many countries during famine. The Laplanders mix earth with their bread, the Russian uses a "rock flour" and the poorer classes in Hungary (where now nearly every one is poor) are driven occasionally to eat an earth which contains only a trifling proportion of nourishing principles.

The use of seaweed as food is an example of the determining factors of both necessity and environment. It is not a little astonishing to find that a number of seaweeds are really edible and nourishing. Perhaps the best known example is laver, which is a kind of stew made from a weed, an algae. The laver made on the Devonshire coast of England, and to be found in some London shops, is said to be excellent. The sea algae, indeed, prove on analysis to contain a considerable proportion of nitrogenous matter, and as they are usually tender, they are digestible. There are also several sea mosses which are esteemed for their esculent properties. Agar sugar is another example of a sea yielding a nutrient jelly. It is supposed that the edible birds' nest so highly esteemed when prepared in the form of soup by the Chinese has its origin in the birds feeding on agar sugar. On the other hand, it is said that the substance of which the nest is composed is secreted from certain glands which are developed during the nest-building season, but which lose this function afterward.

BEST THAT LAWYER CAN DO

Discovery of the Preponderance of Doubt Is About All That He Can Hope For.

A member of the bar tells of a young man from the West who, some years ago, was so fortunate as to be enabled to enter the law offices of a well-known New York firm of lawyers. Very soon he was intrusted with a case, although a very simple one. He was asked by the head of the firm, a distinguished jurist known throughout the land, to give an opinion in writing.

It was observed when this opinion was submitted that, with the touching confidence of the novice, the young man had begun with the expression: "I am clearly of opinion."

The head of the firm smiled as his eye caught this and he said:

"My son, never state that you are clearly of opinion on a law point. The most you can hope to discover is the preponderance of the doubt."—Exchange.

How many apples did Adam and Eve eat?

Some say Eve eight and Adam two—a total of ten only.

Now we figure the thing out far differently: Eve eight and Adam eight—total 16.

We think the above figures are entirely wrong.

If Eve eight and Adam 82, certainly the total will be 90.

Scientific men, however, on the strength of the theory that the ancients were giants, reason something like this: Eve 81 and Adam 82—total 163.

Wrong again. What could be clearer than if Eve 81 and Adam 82 the total was 893?

I believe the following to be the true solution: Eve 814 Adam and Adam 8124 Eve—8938.

Still another calculation is as follows: If Eve 814 Adam, Adam 81242 oblige Eve, total 82056.—Exchange.

Gorgeous Fountain for Indian Garden.

A gorgeous electric fountain has been designed and built in this country for the garden of the Maharajah of Mysore, India, which will cost that distinguished gentleman about one-quarter of a million dollars before it is completed. It was designed by Walter D.A. Ryan of the General Electric company, and built by the latter company. It is constructed of translucent glass lighted from within by hundreds of electric lights projecting colored rays, the lamps being hidden from view. It is said to be the most beautiful electric fountain in the world.

WARNS AGAINST THE "UGLIES"

Architect Gives Wise Advice to Those Contemplating the Establishment of a Home.

The architects have passed through six lean years. Had it not been for the "uglies" that were erected they virtually would have been idle. Remodeling "uglies" into beautiful homes is about all the architects have done. However, if these houses had been designed and constructed right at first the remodeling would not have been necessary.

"Uglies," like the billboards, are doomed to destruction; popular sentiment demands that they be destroyed.

That the home must be beautiful, both interior and exterior, is readily recognized by every mother, as she realizes that it is the most essential element of the home and it is that which causes children to love and cherish it. That it should be furnished beautifully and should have good pictures goes without mention. Well designed furniture may be handed down through generations, and well planned and designed homes increase in value with age. We have houses in this country, built two hundred years ago, that are used today as samples of good work and architects look to them for precedent.

Young people who are about to build should consider it with great care, as building is a serious thing. They should invest in good magazines recognized for their good taste, study thoroughly every article, read also every criticism of these articles and then invest only in expensive things—in fact, those things they think they cannot afford to purchase; then buy one article instead of six that they think they need. In this way they will have established a nucleus from which they cannot depart. Moreover they will never desire a change, because beautiful things remain beautiful.

To those contemplating the establishment of a home I would say select your lot with a view to the future development of it. Do not invest in cheap additions that have been laid out on lines of the least resistance. Select a place surrounded by romantic conditions. Select a large lot, build a small house, add to it as you progress and be sure that the lot has sufficient restrictions to assure you that your investment will not depreciate and that your neighbors are of good report and intelligent.—Selby H. Kurfiss in Kansas City Times.

KANSAS CITY SHOWS WISDOM

Determined to Protect Its Pleasanter Streets From Billboards and "Uglies" in General.

Among the things which critics of the Anti-Main street school leave out of account, in the supposedly objective statement of their case, are the many healthy little movements in towns of the Gopher prairie section toward making two blades of grass grow, so to speak, where none grew before. Do you know the things for which Milwaukee ought to be famous besides its one-time beer? They are worth looking up. Do you know Kansas City? It is one of the pleasanter places to live in in these brightened "states," and it is so because its citizens have discovered that beauty pays.

Probably beauty, like honesty, is nobler when achieved for its own sake, yet it is something to achieve beauty even by the commercial route. And the parks, good streets, agreeable rather than ugly buildings, actually increase general real estate values.

They have coined a useful word in Kansas City—"uglies." They have an ordinance halfway through the city council—perhaps by this time it is all the way through—protecting the pleasanter streets from billboards, gasoline-filling stations and "uglies" in general. How this particular ordinance fares is not particularly important. The important thing is that the public knows what are "uglies" and is determined to do away with them.—Leslie's.

Urges Building of Fireproof Homes.

Fireproof homes, built to last, and standardization of plumbing supplies and builders' hardware were given as partial solutions of the housing problem by Dr. J. W. Stratton, director of the National Bureau of Standards at Washington, in an address to the New York building congress. Doctor Stratton said the greatest waste of housing was caused by fire, and this had an unquestionable effect on the shortage of homes.

"Recently I returned from a trip abroad, where I inspected the homes being erected there and which have been erected in the past for the laboring classes," he said. "These houses are of fireproof construction and are built to last. The construction which has been going on in this country has been almost entirely of wood. Such houses will disappear in a few years."

Good Pantry Is Necessary.

It is to be regretted that so many of the smaller houses have no proper pantry or cupboard for the storing of food. A dry and well-ventilated pantry should be a sine qua non if food is to be kept in a wholesome condition.

WONDERS AT MIGHTY RIVERS

English Visitor Declares Those of America Put Celebrated Streams of Europe to Shame.

Is there anything in nature so majestic and spirit-stirring as a great river? And are there any nobler rivers on earth than those of America? The traveler who does not study up his map in advance is constantly coming unawares upon majestic yet uncelebrated streams, which in Europe would be world famous.

Not long ago, journeying from Massachusetts into New Hampshire, I found the train following for hours a beautiful river for whose existence I was quite unprepared, writes William Archer in the Atlantic. Inquiring its name, I learned that it was the Merrimac, and was further informed that it drove more spindles than any other river in the world. A little later business took me to Blinghamton, N. Y., and again a beautiful river lent dignity to an otherwise undistinguished town. Once more I had to confess my ignorance; this was the Susquehanna, just entering the state of Pennsylvania on its way to Chesapeake bay.

Yet these are so to speak, hole-and-corner rivers, not to be compared to the great arteries of the continent. The superb expanse of the Hudson puts Rhine and Danube to shame. No less grandiose than romantic is the confluence at Pittsburgh of the Allegheny and the Monongahela, with the tiny little blockhouse of Fort Pitt still occupying the tip of the tongue of land, overshadowed by the giant buildings of the city of steel. And the Allegheny and Monongahela unite in the mighty Ohio; and the mighty Ohio itself is but a tributary of the still mightier Mississippi, the father of waters.

Without any disrespect to the Nile, the Euphrates or the Ganges, great rivers of the past, I venture to find these great rivers of the future every bit as thrilling to the imagination.

Beecher and Books.

Somebody happily recalls what Henry Ward Beecher said about books and believes it is well worthy of reproduction, more especially because there seems to be a revived liking for books just now. Well, it is worthy of reproduction anyway:

"Books are the windows through which the soul looks out," said the Plymouth pastor. "A house without books is like a room without windows. No man has a right to bring up his children without surrounding them with books, if he has the means to buy them. It is a wrong to his family. He cheats them. Children learn to read by being in the presence of books. The love of knowledge comes with reading and grows upon it. And love of knowledge, in a young mind, is almost a warrant against the inferior excitement of passions and vices. A little library growing larger every year, is an honorable part of a young man's history. It is a man's duty to have books. A library is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life."

Goose Girls Still Exist.

The goose girl doesn't exist only in fairy stories. She is still a reality in Germany, says the Kansas City Star. One of the departments of the bureau of child welfare put a small notice into the papers a few weeks ago saying that boys and girls from fourteen to sixteen years old, who had left school, but were, by reason of ill-health or of scarcity of labor, unable to get work, would be sent to farms for the summer, where they would have plenty of good food and fresh air in return for such light work as tending geese and cows.

A thousand or more children applied in the next few days and were sent to the homes of farmers who made known their wants through the offices and representatives of the child welfare work in various small towns and villages. Many of the children are those who have for long suffered from undernourishment, and all of them have been saved a summer of fruitless searching for work or loafing about on city streets.

Novelists' Wealth.

The wills of two popular authors have just been published, one being that of Mrs. Florence Louisa Barclay and the other that of Mr. Ernest William Hornung. Mrs. Barclay, the writer of "The Rosary," "The Mistress of Shenstone," and "The Broken Halo," left property of the value of $168,000 with net personality of $100,000. The whole of the estate is bequeathed to her husband, the Rev. Charles Wright Barclay. Mr. Hornung, the creator of "Raffles," left $56,000 gross. He bequeathed his literary works and copyrights and the residue of the property to his wife who is a sister of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, for life, and then to his children.

Sowing Salmon.

In a desperate attempt to preserve a cheap food for the people, Canada and the northwestern states are literally farming the sea and sowing salmon seed in all the important streams from California to northern Alaska. The tremendous drain upon the natural resources of supply has been so exhausting that salmon fisheries must soon have traveled the road of the forests and buffalo.

Those Useless Questions.

"Now, tomorrow," said the teacher of the summer school. "I wish you each to write an essay on August." "Shall we write it on paper?" "I have no objections to your writing it on papyrus if you have any."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

At one moment idling—
at the next the full power load

IT IS fine to be sure of quick response when you want to jump your car ahead. It is just as necessary to be able to idle on a low throttle.

It is not so difficult to make a gasoline that will do either of these things well. But to produce a balanced gasoline that does both, that combines power, economy, clean burning and big mileage, took years of experience in refining, experiments with crudes from every producing field, innumerable tests in chemical and physical laboratories, and with thousands of automobiles of all types and under all conditions of service.

This balanced motor fuel is "Standard" Motor Gasoline of surpassing goodness. It is wonderful in volatility, flame speed, completeness of combustion and mileage. It assures quick starts, rapid acceleration and unusual pulling power up heavy grades. Even in cold weather, when less perfectly conditioned gasoline is sluggish, you can operate on a lean, clean-burning, economical mixture of "Standard" Motor Gasoline. Why try your temper with others "just as good"?

And when you need oil say POLARINE. Made with the same care—always right.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for colds, croup and whooping cough for almost half a century and has constantly grown in favor and popularity as its good qualities became better known. It is the standard and main reliance for these diseases in thousands of homes. The facts that it can always be depended upon and is safe and pleasant to take are greatly in its favor when it is wanted for children.

Fatten Geese on Noodles.

A method said to produce a much better fattened goose than almost any other, involving, however, considerable work, is that of stuffing the geese with noodles for three or four weeks. The feeder sits on a box in a corner of the pen, holds the goose between his legs, and stuffs it with noodles, usually beginning by feeding from 3 to 5 noodles three times daily, and increasing gradually to 6 or 7 noodles five times daily at 4-hour intervals.

The noodles are made of scalded corn meal, ground oats, ground barley, and ground wheat or wheat flour, using about equal parts of each. Add salt as for bread, thoroughly mix the feed, and put it through a sausage stuffer, cutting the product into pieces 2 1/2 to 3 inches long. Boil them for 10 to 15 minutes, or until they float, in a wash boiler containing a wire rack which stands 1 1/2 inches above the bottom of the boiler. Dip the noodles in cold water and roll in flour to keep them from sticking together. Pour hot water over the noodles just before they are fed to make them slippery and keep them warm.

The geese are put into the mouth one at a time, and worked down with the hand on the outside of the neck. If any feed can be felt, no noodles are given at the next feeding time; otherwise the bird will go off its feed. Keep plenty of water before the geese. Young ganders are used for this special fattening and any older ganders or geese to be marketed.

"Noodled" geese average 25 to 26 pounds, and individual weights of nearly 40 pounds have been obtained.

Electric Irons Save Fuel, Labor and Time.

Any woman who has used an electric iron would never think of going back to the old style sad irons any more than she would think of going back to candles. It makes ironing twice as easy, saves fuel, saves time and temper. It is a small investment that will bring years of pleasure and convenience. Prices $5.00 and up.

'Twas Said.

The schoolmaster was talking about miracles.

"Supposing," he said, "you saw a man fall from a high roof, land on his head, get up and walk away; what would you say?"

"No answer."

"Supposing the same thing happened again soon after?"

"No answer."

"Supposing the man did it three times in a day, what would you call it?"

"Habit," answered the small boy.

And if you come to this store several times for hardware needs, you'll get the "habit," because you will be treated courteously, promptly and you'll obtain just what you want at a fair price—we treat our customers just like we would want to be treated, and this accounts for the fact that so many of your friends have the habit of coming here for their needs.

Hotly Contested.

A young man from sunny Italy was testifying in the Cross County (Arkansas) Circuit Court in a case in which he was plaintiff, and, true to his race, was very excited and talking as fast as his knowledge of the English language would permit. Looking down at the stenographer, he noticed for the first time that his testimony was being reduced to writing (the reporter was trying his best to keep up), and thereupon began to talk faster than ever, until finally he burst forth at the reporter: "Don't writ-a so fas; I cant'a keep up with you."—Argonaut.

Nothing Noteworthy.

The cripple thumbed his crutch on the ground as he confronted his lawyer. "Heavens, man your bill is outrageous!" he exclaimed. "You are taking four-fifths of my damages. I never heard of such extortion."

"I furnished the skill, the eloquence and the necessary legal learning for your case," said the lawyer coolly.

"Yes," said the client, "but I furnished the case itself."

"Bosh!" sneered the lawyer. "Anybody could fall down a coal hole."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

JUST FUN

Spending Other People's Money.
"Did you see Senator Snorts-worthy?"
"Yes," said the constituent who was stranded in Washington. "Precious little good it did me."
"He didn't help you out, eh?"
"No. He'd just helped to pass a $50,000,000 appropriation, but he couldn't lend me $50 to pay my way back home."

Explicit.
McNab (conductor of our village orchestra)—An' you, Sandy, will take the double bass this time.
Sandy—I dinna play the double bass. I dinna ken the fingerin'.
McNab—Fingerin'! There's no fingerin' w' a double bass. You just play it in handfuls!—Passing Show, London.

Candid Appreciation.
"Your country should be grateful for your services."
"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "my country has had the benefit of my best efforts. But it has shown me enough kindness to prevent me from trying to convey the impression that the obligation is all on one side."

No Cranking for Her.
"I want to look at a car."
"Yes, ma'am," said the suave salesman. "We handle positively the best automobile in the world. Is there any particular style you want?"
"No; I'm not particular about the style, just so it's a self-beginner."

Complimentary Speaking.
He—Just imagine that fresh guy telling me that I change opinions as often as I change my shirts.
She—Why, that's complimenting you on your sense of cleanliness.

Wall Street Conversation.
Jack—Have you quit speculating?
Bill—No. At present I'm speculating as to how I shall avoid bankruptcy.

RESIGNATION
Mrs. Knagg—If you had your life to live over again you'd probably make the same mistakes.
Her Husband—Probably. And if I did marry some other woman she'd doubtless turn out the same.

Drat Her.
Mary had a little cook
With hands as white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went
The cook refused to go.

A Cooftul Compliment.
The lights were low, and stillness reigned in the back parlor. Presently a female voice was heard:
"Freddie, dear!"
"Yes, angel."
"Does my head seem heavy on your shoulder?"
"No, darling. It is very light, indeed!"

The Eternal Feminine.
Old Gentleman—If I give you a quarter, little girl, what will you do with it?
Six-Year-Old Miss (contemptuously)—Why, spend it, of course.
Old Gentleman—And what will you buy, a peppermint stick?
Six-Year-Old—No, a lip stick.

The Last Straw.
It was a cruel shaft that a Philadelphia girl shot at a persistent suitor of hers. "They say," he observed, "that people who live together get to look alike."
"Then," said the girl firmly, "you must consider my refusal as absolutely final."

Valuable Discipline.
"Josh says he's going to take up aviation."
"If he does," replied Farmer Corn-tassel, "he'll learn to be a heap more careful about keepin' machinery in repair than he ever was while workin' around the farm."

No Wonder.
"Talking about attracting attention, here is a girl in Pennsylvania who has been striking men forcibly by her appearance."
"Does she fascinate them?"
"No; she sandbags them."

Of Course.
"Hello, Jim, I hear you were sick."
"Yes, I was threatened with a fever, but the doctor succeeded in arrestin' it."
"Ah, he arrested it for making threats, I suppose."

Evening Up.
"How can Jobson cut up so with his poor wife in a sanitarium?"
"He considers himself and his wife one, and he is having as much fun as possible to make up for her lack of it."

STREAM A FREAK OF NATURE

But Phenomenon in State of Washington Seems Simple—After It Is Explained.

A small stream called Bear creek flowing from the glaciers of Mount Adams, near Husum, Wash., is a freak. It plays hide and seek along its course through the forest, slipping into a cave here, a crevice there and reappearing below a full fledged rivulet. Its bed is ice coated nearly the entire year; on the surface rocks float and in the water logs sink.

The water is bright yellow in one place, red in another and light bluing when it flows into the Columbia river. Bear creek, differing from other streams, freezes at the bottom first instead of the surface. This is caused by a rocky formation, similar to a corrugated washboard, retarding the movement of the water, forcing the surface to move swifter. In this way air bubbles are shot downward, carrying freezing temperatures, and ice forms. Often in winter the stream flows while the bed is solid ice.

This stream also contains more water in one part of its system than in another. A 4-foot depth quickly becomes a tiny brooklet by the water disappearing into the porous volcanic bedrock. Later it reappears and resumes its course.

The logs that readily sink are a species of black jack pine with a specific gravity heavier than water. They are carried into the creek by landslides.

Rocks seen floating are a sort of pumice or lava clinkers released by melting glaciers.

The yellow color is directed from the glaciers, the red caused by red clay bluffs, and the blue by a deposit of copper quartz through which the stream has cut its bed.

MYSTERY OF OLD EGYPT

Archeologists at a Loss to Explain the Presence of Buttons Found in Country.

Historians, archeologists and other experts in ancient lore are trying to solve the mystery of the buttons found in ancient Egypt; used in a country and at a time in which all garments were fastened by means of bands slipped into place, or by ties and loops. Buttons were not used.

The button, so far as is known, is of south European origin and it was only in the last two or three centuries that it came into use in north Europe, where the dress had been tied together and hose and doublet were fastened with point and laces.

Somehow buttons found their way from south Europe to Egypt. Some of these arrived in Egypt at about 2500 B. C., and others 1500 B. C. Historians are hoping that by the buttons as clues they may be able to obtain more information connecting the so-called prehistory of Europe with the ages-old records of Egypt.—Cleveland News-Leader.

Tinted Writing Paper.

Oculists have often called attention to the fact that the eyes are easily fatigued by the reflection from white paper, especially when the surface is under a strong light. Since green is known to be the color most restful to the eyes, it is a common practice to use wall papers and private studies. For writing paper, however, green is an unsatisfactory color. It imparts a reddish appearance to the writing and makes it hard to read. Yellow writing paper is not open to the same objection. In strong daylight it is softer than pure white paper, and in artificial light it is not too dark. Black letters on a yellowish background show clear and distinct. Many mathematicians use yellow paper in figuring long and difficult calculations, and many writers have adopted it for manuscripts. It has the additional merit of cheapness.

First Great Warship.

The first real advance in securing stability and great carrying power in a ship was made by a British architect, Phineas Pett, who built the Sovereign of the Seas, to carry 100 guns, in 1637. After launching he found that her enormous upper works, in which he had followed the fashion and, incidentally, the shipping defect of his period, made her somewhat unstable. So he took her back, boldly swept away all the cumbersome upper fittings, increased her length, gave her two decks instead of the original three, and refloated her as the Royal Sovereign.

Mythological Birds.

The Australian thick-headed shrike is about six inches long, rich-yellow below, with a jet-black collar and a white throat, black head and partly black tail. It is sometimes called the black-breasted flycatcher and white-throated thick-head, and it has also a variety of French and New Latin names.

In the mythology of some low tribes such as the Caribs, Brazilians, Harvey Islanders, Karens, Betchunas and Basutos there are legends of a flapping or flashing thunder bird, which seem to translate into myth the thought of thunder and lightning descending from the upper regions of the air, the home of the eagle and the vulture.

Home Town Helps

SYSTEM IN PLANTING TREES

Beautiful and Pleasing Streets Are Dependent Upon Care in Choice and Uniformity.

Large towns and cities have ordinances regulating the species, spacing and care of shade trees on the parking. Ordinarily these regulations prevent mistakes and are wise in their construction. In smaller towns the denizens plant what and where they please. The result is not as pleasing and in time, if the town prospers and grows, much early effort needs to be undone.

The common mistakes, according to W. J. Morrill of the Agricultural College at Fort Collins, are too close planting, the use of more than one species, often several, on one street and different alignments of trees.

Care is required in choosing species suited to climatic and soil conditions. Too often rapid growing, inferior species are selected; they may be used satisfactorily as fillers to be removed early but planting of the best species for permanence will be done by the most far-seeing communities.

If one will draw the following mental picture, he will not go far wrong in street tree planting. Trees along the street serve as formal ornaments, like pillars ornamenting a Greek temple. They should all look alike, in shape and size, on an entire street. Like the temple pillars, they should be in one alignment and equidistantly spaced. The ideal may not be attained but the nearer the approach to it the more pleasing will be the street.

MANSFIELD TO LEAD THE WAY

Ohio Town Selected as Place for Demonstration of Healthful Development of Children.

Mansfield in Richland county, Ohio, has come into a new and unique fame. A city of less than 30,000, it has a certain distinction as the former home of John Sherman. It has the census distinction of having increased in population 34 per cent between 1910 and 1920. The new distinction comes from its having been selected from among eighty communities by the National Health council as a place for the demonstration of what can be done for the most healthful development of children. Its qualifications for the high experiment are said most nearly to approach those of "a typical American community."

Huxley's definition of disease was "a perturbation of the normal activities of a living body." As Dr. John M. Clarke, the geologist, in a most engaging report on "Organic Dependence and Disease," has put it: "Disease is any departure from normal living." The proposed experiment, carried through a period of at least five years, should not only keep this typical city of Mansfield and the surrounding county in normal health, but also help to show the ways of preventing disease (through sanitation, health education, the formation of health habits and the like) in thousands of other communities. So Mansfield will lead the way to "normalcy" in national health.—New York Times.

Needless Discomfort of Cities.

When the dog-star rages and the fierce heats envelop the earth, the imperfections of the city as a dwelling place become most apparent. Hot weather is hot everywhere; but the baking pavements, reflecting furiously the rays of the sun, add a peculiar discomfort. And, as they retain their heat long after the sun has gone down, they play a leading part in making the night uncomfortable.

Here is where the value of grass and trees is most conspicuous. Every little park, every shaded street, is an asset of enormous value.

It has come to be realized that even manufacturing districts need not be ugly and uncomfortable. The modern factory is a very different sort of affair to the old. Suppose all our cities had been laid out with tree-lined streets, abundant open spaces, frequent playgrounds and with no huddled alleys or dreary stretches of brick and stone. A good many vital problems of health and happiness would have been solved in the simplest way.

But in the building of their cities men have too often deliberately made themselves miserable.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Pupils Build School's Walks.

From the sodding of the school yard to the planting of trees and shrubs, school pupils have now taken to the laying of concrete walks about the grounds. Taking just pride in their pretty stucco and brick schoolhouse, the pupils of a country school in Nebraska have laid about 3,000 square feet of walk. This includes the walks leading to the highway, circling the building and protecting the various features of a playground in the rear. Everything considered, the job compares favorably with that done by experienced labor. The concrete consisted of five parts of good gravel and sand to one part of cement. No top coat was used, but the surface was well floated.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Girl From Goshen

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Peter Bancroft surveyed the little party with critical blue eyes, and at last his good-humored face crinkled into a wide smile.

"Some bunch—didn't any of them know this was a picnic—a boating party that might turn into a water fete at any moment if any one should rock the boat. Why, those girls are dolled up for a shindy!" No one listened to Peter's mutterings and he grumbled still more as one girl used a lipstick and another dredged her pretty nose with powder. "Good-night!" sighed the practical young man. "Don't they want the sunshine and fresh air to get at their skins? There's one, however—the little girl from Goshen—she's got sense!"

The pretty girls and the stalwart young men gathered on the pier waiting for Ben Hampton and his motorboat had not paid much attention to the girl from Goshen, who was the country cousin of Adele Parks, the lipstick girl. Adele was rather ashamed of Mildred Moore, who wore a wool skirt and a white middie blouse and rubber-soled canvas shoes.

"She looks a fright," thought Adele as she teetered about on her French-heeled pumps—"those lisle-thread stockings are cheap looking and there isn't a speck of powder on her face—freckles on her nose—mercy, what will the girls think of her?" The girls probably thought as did pretty Adele—that the demure girl with the rosy complexion and the powdering of golden freckles across her charming nose and the vivid red lips of perfect health was a fright, while they, attired in expensive silk sport clothes, spent stray moments in renewing their hidden complexions.

"Everybody ready?" sang out Ben Hampton as his boat shot up to the pier; "got all the lunch baskets, sweaters, cameras, etcetera, and so forth? Pile in—trim ship there—you can't all sit on one side, even if it's more sociable! No room for lunch baskets, eh? Put 'em in the skiff astern and I'll trail it; you, young feller, meaning Mr. Bancroft, jest sit there and keep your eye on the skiff—"

Mildred Investigated the Pantry.

I know that's tough luck when there's so many pretty girls about—all a-b-o-a-r-d!"

The good launch Fairy Queen puffed her way out of the harbor and off toward the long beach in the outer bay. Beyond Long Beach was their goal for the day's outing. Little Gulf Island—young Mrs. Fay was chaperoning them, and the picnic baskets would furnish refreshment after the bathing.

Mildred Fane, the girl from Goshen, sat beside Peter Bancroft, and because Peter was so busy watching the skiff full of baskets that he could not talk to her she had rather a dull time; the other young people all knew each other so well and were so merry over their own interesting affairs that Mildred wondered if she had not made a mistake in coming. But Adele had insisted, and Mildred had so longed for the day's fun.

After Ben Hampton had landed them at the island and his boat had chugged away, not to return until sundown, the picnicers scattered along the beach. They did not have to gather driftwood for a fire, for they had brought thermos bottles and cooked foods in abundance? So they missed half the fun of a beach picnic.

It was Mildred Fane's eyes that discovered the loss of the lunch baskets. "Where are the baskets?" she asked the other ten as they tripped down the beach toward the water, clad in bathing garments donned in the shelter of some weather-beaten bath houses. "Where have they gone, Mr. Bancroft?"

"Why—I put them right there," confessed Peter, guiltily, pointing to a spot entirely covered by the rising tide.

Dismal shrieks rose from the girls, while the men breathed deep accompaniment of wrath.

"Look!" cried Mrs. Fray, with a tragic gesture.

They looked—and saw the six baskets bobbing away rapidly; once they thought the tide would return them on the crest of a wave, but, alas, the baskets were lost in a smother of foam and went manfully to the bottom to astonish the fishes.

"Every—last—one—gone," said Peter in a hollow tone.

Adele turned a pretty face toward him, her dark eyes flashing angrily.

"Peter Bancroft, I hope you'll starve to death!" She spluttered.

They all laughed then and Peter apologized, but apologies wouldn't feed eleven hungry people for "kind words butter no parsnips," as the old saying goes.

"We might forget it all, until Ben comes for us and then we will all dine—heartily, of course—at the hotel," remarked Lorimer, who was longing for a swim. "It isn't much of a hardship to skip a meal now and then."

"Who ever heard of a picnic without food?" asked one of the girls mournfully.

"Let us make this the first one," he was adding, when Mildred stepped forward, blushing warmly under the fire of ten pairs of eyes.

"Wait a moment, please; my cousin, Gregory Brown, has a cabin in the pines back here, and his friends come and camp for days at a time, and there is usually a good supply of food—some canned things—and I believe he would not care if we entered and helped ourselves."

"Fine!" they all agreed, and forgetting the swim they followed Mildred to the cabin in the pines. Peter forced a window and entered, opening a door for their entrance into a cozy interior. Mildred investigated the pantry.

"Plenty of salt codfish, potatoes, flour, lard, sugar, coffee, some butter—eggs, but doubtful! Tinned milk, and fruit and vegetables. Call for volunteers in the kitchen!" She surveyed the crestfallen face of the girls with merry eyes.

John Lorimer eagerly volunteered and Adele reluctantly followed his example. The others deserted shamelessly for the water. Adele watched her cousin so thoroughly at home in an atmosphere of domesticity. It was Adele who stood awkwardly while Mildred managed the blue-flame oil stove with a practiced hand; she deftly tossed biscuits together and put them into the oven; it was the Girl from Goshen who made a pie from dried peaches with a lattice-work top crust, even baking a "pie-crust-patty" for John Lorimer. "My mother used to do it that way," he kept saying until envious Adele flung out of the house and forgot her troubles in the fresh salt bath.

Those hours of intimacy as they prepared the delicious meal of creamed codfish and potatoes, fluffy biscuit, pickles, pie and coffee, were worth days of casual social intercourse to Mildred and grave John Lorimer. He unburdened from his dignity and pared potatoes and humbly waited upon her; then, when the meal was over he delivered the clearing up into the hands of the well-fed, happy picnicers, while he and Mildred walked to the point and took a well-earned rest on the cool sands.

"And that," said Adele tragically, as she dressed for Mildred's wedding, "is the way I lost John Lorimer!"

QUAINT OLD ENGLISH TOWN

Place of Infinite Quiet and Rest Poetically Depicted by Great English Novelists.

The town was ancient and compact—a domino of tiled houses and walled gardens, dwarfed by the disproportionate bigness of the church. From the midst of the thoroughfare which divided it in half, fields and trees were visible at either end; and through the sallop of every street, there flowed in from the country a silent invasion of green grass. Bees and birds appeared to make the majority of the inhabitants; every garden had its row of hives, the eaves of every house were plastered with the nests of swallows, and the pinnacles of the church were flickered about all day long by a multitude of wings. The town was full of Roman foundations; and as I looked out that afternoon from the low windows of the inn, I should scarce have been surprised to see a centurion coming up the street with a fatigue draft of legionnaires. In short, Stallbridge-Minster was one of those towns which appear to be maintained by England for the instruction and delight of the American rambler; to which he seems guided by an instinct not less surprising than the setter's; and which he visits and quits with equal enthusiasm.—"The Wrecker," by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne.

How Word "Farm" Originated.

In this day of unprecedented farm organization and development it is noted that the very words farm and farmer grew out of the first "rural revolution."

As told in a history of the English people it is shown that it came about in the fourteenth century. In describing the peasant's revolt, 1377 to 1381, the history states:

"The lord of the manor, instead of cultivating the demesne through his own bailiff, often found it more convenient and profitable to let the manor to a tenant at a given rate, payable either in money or in kind.

"It is this system of leasing, or rather to the usual term for the rent it entailed (feorm, from the Latin, firma) that we owe the words farm and farmer, the growing use of which made the first step in the rural revolution which we are experiencing."

CUT DOWN LOSSES BY FIRE

Recommendations That Should Be Heeded by Every Dweller in City or Country.

Roof all tall buildings, using standard equipment and see that it is properly installed. Inspect every inch of rodding at least once a year.

Put up "no smoking" signs about barns and outbuildings, and enforce them.

Ventilate the barn, but also see that tight doors and windows are provided against the invasion of sparks and blizzards.

If you have nothing to fight fire with, get something if only a bunch of buckets.

Do not put the well pump too close to the barn—you may need that water to save your property some night.

Get non-freezing pumps.

Know where the ax is, and have two ladders on hand long enough to reach over the eaves of the tallest buildings.

Talk over with the family just what each is to do in case of a fire in home, barn or field.

Keep oils out of the house and barns.

"Stagger" your buildings with reference to the prevailing winds. Do not let a fire in one building wipe out your entire place.

Watch for spontaneous combustion in the barn.

Cut the weeds and do not "bank up" the house with dead herbage.

Keep matches in a metal box away from children, mice and rats.

Never leave an outdoor fire for the night nor leave an indoor fire without safeguarding your home from fire.

Do not stack crops close to buildings and see that your road from pike to house and barns is in good shape.

Conserve your water supply.

CARELESS DRIVER WARNED

Instructions to motorists who disregard signs merely calling attention to steep hills or railroad crossings must be explicit, according to the Travelers' Standard. Any novice should be able to make a safe crossing if he follows the advice set forth by this warning near Ithaca, N. Y.

Grow Flowers With Vegetables.

There is no reason why flowers and vegetables should not be grown together. It is difficult to draw the line, anyway. The dahlia, now one of the most popular flowers, was originally planted with the intention of using the tubers as a potato substitute. The scarlet runner bean, grown by the acre on the farms of England, is most often used in America as a climbing vine around the house; in fact, there are many persons not aware the beans are good to eat.

The ideal garden is one which combines flowers, vegetables and fruit. Such a garden should have a place on every farm and back of every suburban home. Oftentimes the vegetable plot can be surrounded with a border planted on two sides with small fruit like raspberries, currants, gooseberries and grapes, and on the other two sides with annual and perennial flowers.

May Restrain Billboards.

Many people, especially those that go down to the country in motorcars, will welcome the efforts that are being made in Maine to deal more faithfully than ever with the billboard. If an amendment to the state billboard regulations now before the senate is carried, no billboard or advertising sign may in future be erected at any point where it can obstruct the view of a curve or angle. It is a good amendment so far as it goes. A better one would be to abolish the billboard in the country, altogether.—Christian Science Monitor.

Four-Handed Twin-Grand Piano.

A twin-grand piano, the first of its kind ever constructed, was recently demonstrated at an orchestral concert, at Leipzig, Germany. This novel instrument, of which a photograph appears in Popular Mechanics Magazine, is like two grand pianos placed end to end and enclosed in one frame, excepting that it has only one soundboard. Consequently, the keyboards are at opposite ends, and the players face one another. The soundboard is constructed so that there is no intermingling of sound waves.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 20

PAUL BEFORE THE KING.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 25:1-26:32.
GOLDEN TEXT—Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.—1 Cor. 15:20.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—1 Cor. 15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Tells How He Came to Obey Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Before King Agrippa.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—An Appeal to Caesar.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul's Courageous Testimony Before a King.

I. Paul Before Festus (25:1-12).

As soon as Festus, the new governor, goes to Jerusalem, he is besieged with accusers against Paul, and they desire that he be brought to Jerusalem for trial, intending to lie in wait and kill him on the way. Festus refused their request, but agreed to give them an opportunity to accuse Paul if they would go down to Caesarea. They go, but are unable to prove anything against him. Festus, willing to please the Jews, proposes to send him to Jerusalem for trial. For this Paul issues a rebuke to Festus by asserting that he very well knew that he was innocent. Seeing that it was impossible to get justice before Festus, Paul makes use of his right as a Roman citizen, and appeals to Caesar. Paul well knew that to go to Jerusalem meant death, and since Festus was too much of a time-server to release him when he knew that he was innocent, he makes use of the radical step of appealing to Rome as the last resort. Festus seems to have been taken by surprise. His failure to release an innocent man had placed him in an awkward position, for he could give no explanation as to why an innocent man should go to Rome for trial. For a man to appear before Caesar would cast reflection upon Festus. He now consulted his council as to what to do, but since the Roman law gave every man the right of appeal to the emperor, there was nothing left for him to do but to grant his request.

II. Paul Before Agrippa (25:13-26:27).

1. The occasion (25:13-27). This was the visit of Agrippa and Bernice to Festus. Upon their arrival they expressed a desire to hear Paul, whereupon Festus told them of his perplexity; so it was arranged that Paul be brought before them for examination.

2. The defense (25:1-27). (1) The introduction (vv. 1-3). In this he expressed his delight that he now could speak and tell his case to one who was able to follow his line of argument, for Agrippa was an expert in questions concerning the Jews; but most of all he was now happy in that he could witness to him of the Savior and perhaps lead him into the light of God. (2) In his manner of life (vv. 4-12). This he showed had been in strictest accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. He possessed the same hope—that of a coming Deliverer—and reminded them of the fact that formerly he was most bitterly opposed to Christ, as his zeal would prove. These facts make the change from a persecutor to an ardent advocate all the more remarkable. (3) His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). Jesus Christ appeared to him on the way to Damascus and revealed himself to him. (4) Jesus Christ commissioned him for his work (vv. 16-18). He was sent unto the Gentiles (a) to open their eyes, so awfully blinded; (b) to perform the blessed work of turning them from darkness to light; (c) to turn them from the power of Satan unto God; (d) that they might receive forgiveness of sins; (e) and that they might obtain an inheritance among the saints. (5) His consecration (vv. 19-23). As soon as he received his commission he obeyed. The very vigorous prosecution of his work brought him into conflict with the Jews, for which they sought to kill him. (6) The interruption by Festus (v. 24). Seeing how thoroughly in earnest Paul was, he attempted to account for it by calling him a crank, attributing it to the ravings of an unbalanced mind. (7) Paul's appeal to Agrippa (vv. 25-27). Still maintaining his courtesy, he appealed to his knowledge of the work of Jesus and of the prophets, for they have an intimate connection.

III. Agrippa Almost Persuaded (26:28-32).

Whether this answer is a contemptuous sneer or not, it is evident that his soul was unwilling to yield. Paul took Agrippa seriously. Paul's heart longed that Agrippa and all concerned would accept Christ and be saved.

"God is Love."

We never know through what divine mysteries of compensation the great Father of the universe may be carrying out His sublime plans; but those three words, "God is Love," ought to contain, to every doubting heart, the solution of all things.—Selected.

The Goodness of God (Thanksgiving Meeting)
Psalm 34:1-10

The goodness of God is vividly portrayed in this Psalm. It is presented by one who had experienced the evidences of that goodness. Because of this, his soul boasts not in himself, but in the Lord, and he calls upon others to unite with him in magnifying the Lord and exalting His name.

The goodness of God is merely a nice sounding phrase until the soul has a real experience of that goodness in salvation. Until one can say in a personal and possessive sense, "The Lord is my Shepherd," one cannot say with meaning and power, "Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

The goodness of God is a fitting theme for a Thanksgiving meeting. Personal experiences of that goodness ought to find expression in such a meeting. Our lesson Psalm is suggestive in that respect.

In verse four the writer is thankful for deliverance. His search had been rewarded and his prayers answered. Peace had displaced fear, all of which gave cause for thanksgiving and praise.

In verse five, he is thankful for enlightenment and spiritual illumination. There is much darkness in this world, much that vexes and perplexes. At the best "we see through a glass darkly," but in the goodness of God we are enlightened, and then enabled to radiate that light amid the darkness. Can you not thank God for the light of His Word and His Spirit?

Verse six deals with salvation from troubles. Notice the expression, "All his troubles." There are a lot of troubles through which one may pass, such as broken health, disappointing friendships, loss of position, unrealized hopes, and so on. In all these things the Lord hears prayer for help and either gives grace sufficient to bear the burdens or delivers us out of it. What a cause for thanksgiving is this!

Verse seven reveals the fact of angelic ministry and reminds us of Hebrews 1:14 where it is revealed that the angels are "ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation."

Having experienced these manifestations of goodness which give rise to thanksgiving and praise, it is no wonder that the Psalmist says in verse eight, "O taste and see that the Lord is good." Let us repeat this invitation to others.

Spring Shrubs Blooming in Fall.

The fall blooming of trees and shrubs which ordinarily bloom only in the spring, is not an uncommon occurrence. However, it is only after rather unusual growing seasonal conditions that much of it is noted. It is most apt to occur after a dry summer followed by fall rains and favorable growing conditions during September and October, or perhaps after trees have been defoliated early in the season by insects or disease attacks. Then they start new growth in the late summer or early fall. Usually it weakens the trees or shrubs somewhat, and they do not produce quite so much bloom the following spring.—V. R. Gardner, Professor of Horticulture, University of Missouri.

Strength in Tiny Bodies.

Probably the most wonderful feature of a mosquito is its muscularity, writes L. E. Eubanks in Our Dumb Animals. This may seem a ludicrous statement, but a great surprise awaits anyone who for the first time examines one of these insects under a glass. Size for size, a mosquito's wing muscles are equal to an eagle's. Even on a calm day, a mosquito can fly forty or fifty miles without a halt; and with a helping wind three times this distance! The ordinary house fly, too, has astonishing wing strength, tests have shown that when it desires really to hurry it can "dash" 160 feet in a second—110 miles an hour straightaway.

PEPTO-MANGAN
KEEPS BLOOD PURE.

Growing Children Need
Plenty of Red Cells
in Blood.

When the young body is growing, children frequently experience weakness. Girls and boys sometimes play too hard and over-tax their systems. They become pale, weak, and sickly. They lose their appetites, become languid, and are not able to make progress in school work. "Growing too fast" is often true. It is most important to keep the blood of growing girls and boys in a healthy state.

Pepto-Mangan keeps the blood pure. The red cells in the blood are increased. They carry life-giving oxygen to all parts of the body, and wholesome youthfulness blooms again in clear complexions, bright eyes and buoyant spirits. Sold both in liquid and tablet form by druggists everywhere. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package.

ARE YOUR JEWELS GENUINE?

Many Precious Stones Now Are Imitated So Closely That Detection Is Difficult.

Rubies, sapphires, emeralds, many other stones, can now be imitated so beautifully that it is no longer easy to detect the difference, upon a casual examination. Pearls are made in a number of varieties, and imitation pearls are plentiful and often worn.

While only an expert can determine whether some gems are genuine, there are certain simple methods by which in most cases "the genuine article" may be detected at home.

Color is usually considered the first great criterion of all precious stones. It is now generally conceded, however, that color alone is not a criterion by which stones may be judged; other physical properties must be taken into consideration by the jewel expert.

The structure of the stone is a more certain test. The optical properties of the stone, however, are the most certain test—generally known as its "refractive property." This can be ascertained by means of a small instrument known as a "refractometer."

Refraction means simply the bending of the light rays out of their normal course, when passing through certain solid objects. The degree to which these light waves are bent is called the "refractive index."

In most transparent bodies, including gems, the refractive index is constant and known. Hence a degree of refraction which differs from that established for the species leads to the certainty that the stone under examination is not a genuine one, but an imitation.—Hereward Carrington, Ph. D., in Leslie's.

WIG TOO SMALL FOR FRANKLIN

Representative From the New America Had to Appear Before French King in Bald Pate.

Benjamin Franklin was about to be presented to the French king on the occasion of his first visit to France in the capacity of representative from the new America. The court custom of the time demanded that one going to an audience with the king must wear a wig of the proper fashion. A count, who had Franklin in tow, sent a wigmaker the day before to take Franklin's measure and fit him out for the audience. The wigmaker arrived at Franklin's lodgings, measured the poll of the great American fore and aft and around and about and took his departure. An hour before the audience the wigmaker returned with the wig. But when Franklin attempted to put it on it would not fit; he couldn't begin to get it on his head. "Sir," said Franklin to the wigmaker, "your wig is unfortunately too small for my head."

"Pardonnez moi, monsieur," replied the wigmaker, "your head is vastly too large and quite beyond the fashion of the court."

Franklin appeared, therefore, at court with his bald pate and shaggy gray hair.—Detroit Free Press.

Osculatory.

The gob was on shore leave and happy because he had found a girl as affectionate as he. His joy was dimmed, however, for a bluecoat had forbidden spooning in the park and his girl had tabooed it on the streets. But life took a new turn when he saw a man kiss his wife farewell in front of the Pennsylvania station, New York. He rushed his girl toward a crowd hurrying toward the Philadelphia express, and bade her a fond farewell. When the crowd thinned, they joined a throng for Washington, and repeated the act. They repeated it again before the Chicago train.

This was too much for a colored porter who had been watching. He stepped up to the gob. "Boss," he said, "why don't you go downstairs and try the Long Island station. Dem local trains am a-leavin' mos' all de time!"—Everybody's.

Oldest Frame Building.

The quaker meeting house at Easton, Md., is probably the oldest frame building standing in the United States—just where it was built and as it was built, without any change, additions or subtractions, and with an authentic record since 1683. An occasional replacing of the shingles on the roof and of the weather-boarding are all the repairs it has had. Its frame, inside woodwork, and some of the weather-boarding are the same as when built about the same time that William Penn, who visited the building, was trading with the Indians and laying out Philadelphia.

The only preservative used on the wood has been old-fashioned white-wash on the outside. Seven of the original plank seats and the wood-work inside have had no paint whatever. White oak, white pine, cypress and southern pine from the Maryland forests were the woods used.

Tides in the Stars.

Some time ago it was reported by a distinguished astronomer that the star called Xi Geminorum, which has long been known as a variable, is in reality double, but its two components are so close that no telescope is able to separate them, and their existence is proved by the shifting lines in the spectrum. The variations in brightness, it is thought, can only be due to the attraction between the two stars raising immense tides in their molten or vaporous globes, which, through the efforts of compression or otherwise, displace the spectral lines.

A Public Utility's Obligation

A PUBLIC utility has two outstanding obligations to the users of its service.

One is to give a good, reliable service at all times. To do this, it must have a competent, trained force of employees and pay them a living wage; it must use the best materials and equipment and pay for them at the market price.

The other obligation is to expand its system to be in a position to give service to all new patrons. This requires new capital. To command this new capital at all times, the investor—the person who has money to lend—must receive a fair return for its use.

The telephone system offers a striking example of these two obligations. Each new subscriber to the system involves not only a direct increase in the expense of giving service, but an outlay of new capital.

Therefore, a telephone system that does not earn an adequate revenue fails in its obligations to its patrons.

DRAWBACK TO HIGH POSITION

Plaint of Wife of Famous Statesman Was That She Was Deprived of His Company.

Mrs. Gladstone, wife of William E. Gladstone, prime minister of late-Victorian days, was, in addition to being an unusually fine-looking woman—always spoken of as "the handsome Miss Glynne"—the very essence of tact and diplomacy, the typical wife of a statesman, who never said too much and always enough, and who guided her distinguished husband with just the right proportion of firmness and gentleness.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone were married happily for more than half a century, and at their golden wedding Mr. Gladstone paid fitting tribute to her success as a wife.

"Words fail me," he said, "in expressing the debt I owe my wife in relation to all the offices she has discharged during the long and happy period of our conjugal union."

The one drawback to Mrs. Gladstone's complete happiness during her marriage was the enforced frequent absence of her husband. She used to tell her friends that when Mr. Gladstone was in office and in London during the season she considered it a great treat to be invited to a friend's house to dinner with him. If possible, she would sit next him at dinner.

"Then," she said, ruefully, "it is at least possible for me to have some conversation with my husband. Otherwise I see nothing of him."

Poet's Tie Shop "Ad."

A poet in whose breast the cares of a collar and tie shop in Asakusa cannot stifle the Parnassian urge has written the following sign and placed it over his master's shop to cheer the passerby:

"Those who belong to our company are always endeavoring to express their delicate mood and individuality through the goods they are dealing in, from the point of view of making all existence best and most beautiful first of all and then let themselves upward from earth to paradise that is to say the eternal peace—the ideal—under the elapse of time."

What it means would be difficult to say. While it draws attention to the admirable qualities of the collars and ties and garters, it also seems to indicate a little weariness with Asakusa considered as a stepping stone towards "the eternal peace under the elapse of time."—Japanese Advertiser.

Why He Kicked.

Wife—You complain that I am always asking you for money. Why don't you give me so much a year and have done with it?

Husband—I do give you "so much." That's just what I complain of.—London Answers.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

John A. Garner, of Baltimore, was a caller at the Record office, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cox, of Washington, are visiting relatives here of Mrs. Cox (nee Miss Alice Crapster).

Mrs. Laura Lentz, of Frederick, is visiting her niece, Mrs. W. A. Myers, and brother, Wm. G. Fair.

At least two weddings are scheduled, locally, for Thanksgiving day, accounts of which will appear in our next week's issue.

Misses Edna and Martha Aulhouse of Littlestown, Pa., spent the week-end with William Anders and family, near Taneytown.

Misses Mary Ness and Gertrude Ruler, of York, are visiting Rev. and Mrs. Murray E. Ness, of Baust Church over the week-end.

John McKellip was 93 years old, on Thursday, and celebrated by walking up town and being active about his home duties, as usual.

The Lutheran C. E. Society will hold a Social on Friday evening, Nov. 25, in the church. All members, and all who attend regularly, are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Elvin D. Dern, of Athens, Ohio, have sold their property and purchased another one at 77 N. Congress St., nearer the centre of the city.

Judging from the very few calls for the pamphlet on "The Care and Planting of Trees," there is very little interest in the subject, in Taneytown. We still have a supply.

The Record office has a fresh supply of the Cook Book "Feast of Good Things," that ought to be in great demand from now until Christmas. Price 25c at office, or 30c by mail.

The office of The Record is open, on Saturday afternoons, until about 4:00 o'clock; not for work, but for the transaction of business. The Editor does not take a Saturday half holiday.

The solution to the little problem in addition will be given next week, along with a simple problem in subtraction. In the meantime, if any others have answers, let them be sent in.

(For the Record.)
Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Miller and daughter, Violet, of near Littlestown, and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Frounfelder, of near Middleburg, spent Sunday with Jacob Strawsburg and wife, of Otter Dale.

The city council of Gettysburg has ordered all Carolina poplars in the city cut down, where they are contiguous to a sewer, on account of the roots from such tree clogging up sewer pipes.

Sherman Gilds was taken to Frederick Hospital, on Monday, where he was operated on for rupture and piles. He withstood the operation very well, and is reported to be getting along nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Douglass, Mrs. Margaret Reindollar and Miss Nannie Buffington, of Baltimore, were visitors in town, last Saturday, and on their return home were accompanied by Miss M. Louisa Reindollar.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Erdman, Mrs. Edmund J. Meskill, Miss Mercedes Meskill, Mrs. John F. Tierney and son, William, all of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Shaum and son, David William, spent Sunday with D. B. Shaum's.

Residents of this district are especially urged to come forward with volunteer subscriptions for the Red Cross. It is unfair to those who live in towns—where personal canvassing is the easiest—for them to continually bear the burden of supporting financial propositions that apply alike to town and country.

(For the Record.)
Mr. and Mrs. Abram Hahn and father, T. C. Hahn, entertained at their home, last Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Welty and daughters, Lillian, Alice and Agnes, and Mr. and Mrs. John Myers, all of Westminster; also Luther Hahn, and Charles Hahn, and Wilbur Devilbiss called at the same place in the afternoon.

We said, last week, that there was a "very large stay at home vote." A careful analysis of the non-voting list shows that the shortage in the vote, in this district, was largely due to sickness, and to the fact that a large number of voters were away from home, for one reason or another. The number that apparently might have voted, but did not, was comparatively small. The shortage was the largest among the women voters.

Chautauqua Coming.

The Swarthmore Chautauqua will open in the Taneytown Opera House on Monday, December 5, with a high class program, affording entertainment and instruction of high grade at an exceptionally low price. Every day will furnish a treat. Here are two attractions of the first day.

The Cartwright Brothers quartet. Twelve different musical instruments! When the curtain rises for a program by the Cartwright Brothers quartet, the platform must look like a musical instrument shop, for they play a dozen different instruments.

Experienced in Chautauqua work, their professional skill is added to their artistic ability in a way to get the best results. They know what you want, how you like it, and when you wish it, and what is better, they give it to you. The Cartwright Brothers have been working together for years, and the other members of the company fit perfectly into their system. Vocal and instrumental music and novelties make up their always popular programs.

Julius Caesar Nayphe, "an oriental pageant." A native of that historic region made famous by the Bible, he draws a picture so vivid as to hold enraptured the most biased listener. There is nothing else like his pageant on the platform. It is unique as is he himself, a young Athenian born of the Grecian aristocracy and educated in Palestine and America.

Get a season ticket. A single admission will cost 75 cents, and you can get the whole course for $1.50. Children's ticket, $1.00. Buy tickets in advance as no season tickets will be sold at the door, and the committee can not sell season tickets after the chautauqua opens.

"Along Came Ted."

The action of the comedy occurs at the Rip Van Winkle Inn, in the Catskill mountains, and the plot has to do with a struggle for supremacy in a furniture factory between Ted, the rightful heir, and Ira Stone, an unscrupulous adventurer.

The first act takes place the day before the annual meeting of the stockholders. According to the by-laws of the company, every stockholder must register by midnight preceding the meeting. Ted has failed to put in an appearance; all the other stockholders have signed, and Stone is hoping that Ted will not arrive in time as this would cause him to hold the controlling vote.

Mollie and Skeet persuade a young civil engineer to impersonate the missing Ted. All is well until the attorney for the company announces that he is personally acquainted with the real Ted. Mollie and Skeet are at their wits' ends to know what to do, when the lawyer mysteriously disappears.

Complications come fast and furious in the next two acts. The engineer is kept busy trying to dodge a spinster who used to be in love with Ted; at the same time, trying to further his own interests with Diara Garwood, one of the guests. Ted comes along and brings a bride with him. A mysterious widow, who is a stockholder in the company, places her certificates in the safe for the night. After the guests retire, a burglar rifles the safe and escapes.

Slowly, bit by bit, the mysteries of the play are solved. A mysterious deaf man appears; the widow turns out to be the lawyer's wife; Ted turns out to be somebody else, and the real Ted turns up. Ira Stone is ignominiously routed and the plucky little manager, Mollie, finds the road to happiness with Skeet, the boy from the bowery. There are twelve actors in the play.

To Gain a Good Reputation.

The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you appear. That is precisely the manner in which Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has gained its reputation as a cure for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Every bottle that has ever been put out by the manufacturers has been fully up to the high standard of excellence claimed for it. People have found that it can be depended upon for the relief and cure of these ailments and that it is pleasant and safe to take. —Advertisement

AT THE NEW THEATRE

Saturday, November 19, "The Apple Tree Girl"

A Shirley Mason Picture That Appeals. The title indicates that it is a novel story, and it is. Just imagine a country girl who goes to the city and sees others who do not equal her in wit or wisdom receiving more attention in the world and rebels against it and you will have the real picture of "The Apple Tree Girl." She does not grieve or give way to envy, however, but decides to bring the world to her feet. She decides to make everybody like her, to become famous and to marry a millionaire. She wins out on all but one point, and that is the point that makes the story of "The Apple Tree Girl" so thoroughly interesting. If you want to find out what it is, come to the New Theatre on Saturday night. You will not be disappointed.
