SOFT COAL STRIKE PRACTICALLY ENDED.

The Anthracite Agreement Not Yet Reached, but Expected.

The bituminous coal strike has been settled in seven states, with operators controlling an output of 60,000,000 tons. The mines are in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Oklahoma and Washington. Illinois operators have not signed up, and all of the Pennsylvania operators are not in the agreement. The strike leaders say that the union has won a victory, all along the line, winning on all essential points.

The anthracite situation is yet unsettled, with conferences under way that may last a week or more. Even if an agreement is reached, normal production can not commence before October 1, owing to the bad condition of the mines.

The Georges Creek, Md., operators say their main trouble is inability to meet competition of non-union fields. The local operators have never recognized the union, but have been operating their mines under agreements. The claim is made that these mines can not operate successfully without a wage scale equal to that of the Somerset non-union fields, their nearest competitors, where the mines have been operated ever since the strike.

Barn Burned on LeGore Farm.

The large barn on the farm of J. W. LeGore, near Piney Creek Sta., N. C. R., tenanted by Monroe Bankard, was entirely destroyed by fire, Saturday morning, about 1 o'clock. The fire was first discovered by Mrs. Bankard and was then burning fast in the top of the building. None of the neighbors arrived in time to be of any service.

Mr. Bankard saved his horses, but lost one mule and a calf, also his entire crop of wheat and hay, about 125 bushels oats, all harness and a lot of small articles. The insurance applying to the loss will be about $1100, to $1200., which will likely about cover the loss on wheat.

The barn, which was of brick and frame construction and had been but recently remodeled, was insured for $1600., not half the actual loss. The personal property and $600. on barn was in the Dug Hill Company, and $1000.00 on the barn in the Taneytown Mutual. The cause of the fire is unknown, but was perhaps due to the heating of hay or grain.

The Buy-at-Home Campaign.

The advertisement under the above caption is nearing its close. It was not our idea, nor our effort, nor do we know what benefit has grown out of it. What we do know, is, that the effort was well-meant, and that it was co-operative on the part of business men, with the hope that it would result in co-operation on the part of our nearby citizens.

"Pulling together" is as necessary for a community as for a team of horses, if the best results are to be attained. Sometimes we call it "team work," and there is greatly too little of both, and too much pulling at random, and in contrary ways.

We believe that Taneytown business men are ready and willing to do more than their part toward better "team work" for the interests of our whole community. It is not true that they are entirely selfish and "on the make." Real self-interest alone, prevents this, as it never pays anybody to try to make too much money, nor too fast; and this applies to buyer, as well as to seller.

A fine plan is to place one's confidence in people one knows best, and not to act as though the best fruits are always in some far away orchard. "Pulling together" pays in the end.

A Model Barn at Springfield State Hospital.

In a short time the new dairy barn at the Springfield State Hospital at Sykesville, this county, will be completed. This will be one of the finest barns in the State of Maryland. It is "T" shaped, the front building being 82x120 feet and the back building 38 by 134 feet. The first story is of concrete.

The construction is frame with asbestos siding. The roof is also of asbestos. At one end there are two built-in silos, each 14x37 feet. The lower floor contains stanchions for 58 cows, eight box-stalls and two additional stalls for calves. The feed troughs are of concrete with individual metal drinking cups. There will be washrooms for the men who milk and care for the cows and the latest devices for sterilizing and pasteurizing the milk. The entire upper story will be used to store hay and fodder and will be equipped with labor-saving devices. Automatic ventilators insure an abundance of fresh air and the whole building will be lighted with electricity.

The old barn will be torn down as soon as the new quarters are ready and the new herd has been procured. The cost of the new barn, completely equipped, will be from $35,000 to $50,000, and will give to this institution the very best of facilities for the most economical production of pure milk.

THE HEATING PROBLEM.

State Forester Advises Rural Sections to Use Wood.

The formation of a committee in Maryland for the distribution of coal, as recently published, makes it very certain that when it comes to priority shipments of coal, the private buyer for home use in the small towns and in the rural sections is going to be very close to the end of the list.

At first thought this may seem alarming to one who is accustomed to depend on coal for winter use. But this alarm is unnecessary, because right at hand in every part of the State, wood is growing, wood is going to waste, wood that could readily keep you warm. It may be a surprise to learn that a cord of seasoned oak or hickory has a heating value equal to that of a ton of anthracite, and yet it is a fact. Of course, wood is a little more bulky to handle, you have to give the stove a little more attention in cold weather, but you certainly get the heat. Who hasn't felt the genial warmth just pour out of one of those old air-tight stoves? There are plenty of pipeless furnaces now on the market that will burn wood equally as well as coal, just an air-tight stove on a larger scale.

Thousands of cords of wood are wasted every year in the woods, which if cut up, seasoned, and delivered in towns would readily sell for $6.00 to $7.00 per cord. It takes some little time for wood to season properly, that's why the State Board of Forestry is calling attention to getting the wood now. Oak and hickory, of course, stand at the top of the list, but locust, beech, river birch, and wild cherry are very good. Pine gives too quick and hot a fire, but it will help to mix in with some of the poorly seasoned hardwoods, and is especially adapted for cooking.

If you are lucky enough to own a bit of woodland, the problem is still more simple. You will be surprised how many cords of wood to the acre you can take out and really leave the woods in better condition than they were before. In the recently cut-over woods, there are the tops to be worked up, in the immature stand, you can take out a lot of inferior species, such as black gum, maple, beech, etc., and make way for more valuable trees. And then in the mature stand, just take a walk through and see how many crooked, defective trees there are that the lumberman would not touch anyway.

For further particulars, address the State Forester, 815 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Maryland.

Who Should Elect the Sunday School Superintendent?

This important question was written by one interested in Sunday Schools, to the editor of a religious weekly.

"Would you please give reasons why, or why not, as the case may be, for the election of the superintendent of the Sunday School? Should it be by the congregation, by the church council, or by the Sunday School itself? Just who should exercise this right and authority?"

The reply below, was given. What is the opinion of readers of The Record on the subject?

"There has been much loose practice concerning this very important matter. Much unpleasantness and harm have been the result. The office of Sunday School superintendent is next in importance to the office of pastor; for it has to do with religious instruction. The congregation is just as responsible for the kind of man who is to be in charge of the Sunday School as it is for the kind of man it selects as pastor. As the directing and governing body of the congregation is the church council, the superintendent should be elected by the council. The Sunday School is not an independent institution, and is so important a matter as the religious instruction of the young, it should not act independently.

There should be the closest possible relation between the church council and the Sunday School—which, also, there often is not—and there is not a department of the congregation's activity in which the council should not be deeply interested. This is especially desirable in the case of the Bible school, and it does not speak well for any church council not to be interested in it. There is need in our day of preserving unity in the administration of the congregation's affairs, and the sooner the council functions as the directing head the better. Where the council takes no interest in the Sunday School, can the latter be blamed for becoming a law unto itself?"

For September and November Use.

From now until after the primaries in September, and the general election in November, readers of many daily, and some weekly papers, are warned that it is a natural part of "wet" propaganda to "play up" all cases of death and crime due to liquors, with particular emphasis on the fact that it is "bootleg" liquor, that is responsible; the object being to impress readers and create sentiment that the Prohibition laws are failures, and that there is now more drinking and more crime than when liquors were legally sold.

Write-ups of interviews with prominent men, and stories of how long-time "dry" territory is changing its mind in favor of "beer and wine" and the revision of the Volstead act, are also naturally a part of the propaganda, designed to have effect on voters, to the end that heretofore "dry" voters may let up on their past policy of voting for "dry" candidates, and change to "revisionists," as being the lesser evil.

Apparently, the country is being combed for every case that can possibly be used as a "horrible example" of the results of "boot leg" and almost every man willing to permit his name to be used as a Volstead act revisionist, can obtain an audience through many of the newspapers, without difficulty.

The widespread benefits of prohibition, clearly manifest in every city and town, are not mentioned. Crimes, deaths and abuses, under legally sold liquor, years ago, are conveniently forgotten. The fact is, half of them never appeared in print, as they were of too common occurrence.

The Carroll Record does not want to be too extreme in its opinions with reference to the Volstead act. It is a very plausible position to take, that its very severity weakens it. The liberal side of one's nature is apt to agree that light wines and light beer might bring about greater popular acceptance of the 18th Amendment, and cause no great amount of harm. But, one must remember that "light" wines and beer could not possibly be kept "light." If no wines and beer, and no alcoholic liquors of any sort, fail in being prohibited in their manufacture and sale now, under the strictest of laws, would we not be vastly closer to no prohibition under more liberal laws, because such laws would be still more difficult to enforce?

It is also worth while remembering that the "revisionists"—consciously or unconsciously—are working, almost shoulder to shoulder, with the 100 per-cent wets, which means that the tactics being used during the campaign should be very carefully and conscientiously weighed, in order that voters be not misled.

MURDER AT UNION BRIDGE.

Russian Shoots his Wife, then Commits Suicide.

Theodore Karyamva shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Clara Karyamva, at Union Bridge, on Wednesday, then fired a bullet through his own heart. Karyamva was a Russian about 34 years old, and is said to have come to Union Bridge, this week, from New York, in search of his wife, who is said to have come to the town about ten months ago with a man named Jack Bonsava. The latter worked at the cement plant, and was killed some time ago when attempting to enter another man's house.

Mrs. Karyamva then went to live with a Russian named Shmatha. Tuesday night Karyamva located his wife and asked her to return to him, but she refused. Wednesday morning he again visited her and asked her to go with him, and on her refusal shot her twice, death resulting in a few minutes. He then turned and walked away a short distance and shot himself. His wife was also a Russian.

Spectacle Salesman Assaults Deputy.

W. H. Long, a spectacle vendor, who assaulted Deputy Sheriff Albert Adelsberger, Emmitsburg, Friday, when the latter went to levy on his automobile for debt, is still at large. It is believed he made his escape to Baltimore by a back road and is now in that city. After leaving Emmitsburg he headed for Frederick, but it is supposed that he reached Baltimore by the Taneytown road.

Long had been at Emmitsburg for about two months selling spectacles. While he made a number of acquaintances, among whom was Deputy Adelsberger, he was regarded as a man of mystery and little was known of him. Deputy Adelsberger received a writ of attachment from a firm in Ohio, and he went to the Maryland Garage, where Long kept his machine to attach it.

The officer found Long at the car and told him that he would take charge of it. Just as Adelsberger was leaning over the car to take the key out of the switch, Long struck him a hard blow with his fist, felling him. When the deputy gained his feet, he found himself looking into the muzzle of an automatic held by Long.

Employees of the garage, fearing that shooting would follow, scattered in all directions. The officer found that he was powerless to do anything. With his gun still leveled at Adelsberger, Long jumped into his car and left. The Sheriff's office was then notified.

Long, who is between 45 and 50 years old, did not stay at a boarding house, but took his meals at a restaurant and slept in the car, which was stored at the Maryland Garage. It is said that his mother is living in Greencastle, Pa. The attachment had been taken out on the car by a Cleveland firm which claimed that Long owed them money on the car. The machine carried Ohio license tags.

In the nine cornered primary vote for the nomination for Governor (Republican) in Ohio, the vote was, Thomson 200,421; Knight (Progressive) 76,064; Durand (Beer and wine) 53,190; Smith 51,689; Day, 37,980; Beetham, 16,927; Smith (negro), 16,552; Williams, 14,571; Durnell, 6,224.

Wm. P. Jackson, prominent Eastern Shore Republican leader, has openly endorsed Joseph I. France, for Senator. Mr. Jackson is a National Committeeman, and is supposed to have a considerable following.

WOMEN FOR GARRETT.

So Says Miss Pearl Eader, a Garrett Organizer.

Miss Pearl Eader, organizer of women for John W. Garrett in his campaign for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, returned to headquarters yesterday from a trip to Western Maryland, where she held meetings at Hagerstown and Hancock. She said the meetings were successful and that she met with a gratifying response to her appeals for candidate.

"Women of the State are flocking to Mr. Garrett to show their bitter resentment against Senator France for standing alone against the Five-Power Treaty for the limitation of naval armament," said Miss Eader. "They are writing and telephoning to headquarters to say they think he was standing in the way of the peace of the world by his stubborn resistance to the agreements reached at the Conference on Limitation of Armament."

"The active part taken by Mr. Garrett in this conference as its secretary-general is turning their hostility to France into definite enthusiasm for Garrett."

"The telephone is kept busy by women who want to know what Senator France did. His stand against two treaties—the Four-Power and the Five-Power treaties—at a time when the Far Eastern situation was threatening, is counted by many women as his worst offense, although many are emphatic in opposing him for participation in radical meetings. His utterances on many occasions and his vote on important measures have aroused women who by their letters and telephone messages show they are alert to the issues in this primary fight."

"Many women have remembered things that their husbands had forgotten. In asking for literature many women show they merely want to have something to back up their own memories. Over and over again France has offended the Republican women of the State."—Balt. Sun.

Intemperance in Ireland.

Serious-minded Irishmen are concentrating upon temperance propaganda and reform. It is felt that there is laxity in the enforcement of the existing licensing laws, that there are too many saloon stores and that intemperance is accountable for many offenses against peace and order.

In Armagh diocese a Temperance Congress, attended by 200 delegates, was held. Cardinal Logue presided. His Eminence observed that a great deal of the rapine, cruelty and murders that had marked the last few terrible years was due to the fact that intemperance was prevalent among those who participated in the struggle on both sides. No matter how the political issues were settled they could not hope for any noteworthy progress so long as indulgence in drink was so general throughout the country.—Baltimore Catholic Review.

Candidates for U. S. Senate.

W. Cabell Bruce, attorney to the Public Service Commission, has entered the race as candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator. Mr. Bruce will contest with David J. Lewis and William I. Norris, providing all run to the finish; while Joseph I. France and John W. Garrett will line up for the Republicans. There will be no other candidates, as the time for filing has expired.

FARMERS SET GOOD EXAMPLE.

Country Would Prosper if All Followed their Lead.

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 14.—Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, in an address before the Farm Bureau here this afternoon, said that if other groups would do as the farmer has done our economic troubles would soon be over. Prices would soon be adjusted to their normal relationship, Mr. Wallace declared.

Secretary Wallace discussed farmers' wages as compared with other wages and also the farmer and the strike. He told the Virginians that the farmers of the country, who number about one-third of the population, had borne the heaviest burden of deflation. In discussing wages of the farmer, Secretary Wallace said:

"Figures show that the wages of the farmer, as represented by the prices paid for his crops, are lower than his wages were before the war, measured in purchasing power, while the wages of other workmen, especially in organized industries, are considerably higher than they were before the war, whether measured in dollars and cents or in purchasing power."

"Purchasing power of the wages of railway employees in 1921 was 51 per cent. greater than in 1913. The purchasing power of the wages of the coal miner in 1921 was 30 per cent. greater than in 1913. The purchasing power of the farm hand, who worked for wages in 1921, was 4 per cent. less than 1913, while the purchasing power of the farmer himself was, on an average, from 24 to 45 per cent. less than in 1913."

Secretary Wallace declared that while the farmer had endeavored to get relief from the great deflation by all lawful means, the farmer had not gone on a strike.

"They have not created disorder," Mr. Wallace continued. "They have kept on producing and in the face of low prices have grown this year one of the largest crops in our entire history. The farmer believes in law and order. He believes in government. He believes in fairness between men. He believes in working hard and producing efficiently."

"There are too many people who seem to be thinking only of themselves and how they can profit at the expense of the community at large and especially at the expense of the farmer. He is disgusted with these recurring disputes between capital and labor, especially as connected with the essential industries."

"The farmer calls upon capital and labor to cease their petty bickerings and resume production, trusting to American institutions and the American sense of fair play to see that justice is done to both of them."—Balt. Sun Cor.

Destruction of Railroad Property.

Thirty cars of coal being hauled from non-union fields in Kentucky, were uncoupled from a Mobile and Ohio train at Percy, Ill., and set on fire by a crowd of men, on Monday.

The 400-ft. St. Louis & San Francisco bridge across Sac river, near Springfield, Mo., was damaged by a dynamite explosion, on Sunday night.

Fire of unascertained origin destroyed the shops of the Wichita Falls and N. W. Railroad, at Wichita Falls, Texas, and three engines and other rolling stock, early on Monday.

Dynamite bombs were exploded under a passenger train, a mile west of Weehawken terminal, on the West Shore R. R., on Monday. Most of the damage was to the track.

Fifteen engines of the Maine Central R. R. Co., were destroyed in a Portland, Maine, round-house, on Sunday. The machine repair shop, water tower, and other plants, were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000 and is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

300 men and boys attacked the roundhouse of the Central R. R., of New Jersey, where strike-breakers were employed. Railroad guards were unable to check the crowd, and every window in the building was broken. The arrival of the riot squad prevented greater damage.

The dead body of a strike-breaker was found in an engine pit in the shops of the Lackawanna R. R., at Newark, N. J., Monday morning.

Strikers in Ambush, near Channing, Mich., kept up shooting into bunk cars, dispatchers office and roundhouse, for several days.

Employees at the Easton, Pa., shops of the Lehigh Valley, R. R., were attacked by strikers, on Monday, by being shot at and stoned. None of the men were seriously hurt.

The County Statement.

The County Statement appears on another page. It is more condensed than usual, but will no doubt answer the purpose of giving proper public information. It should be examined by taxpayers, as it is a financial statement of the stewardship of their representatives chosen to administer public affairs.

The State of Pennsylvania has a tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline and the amount it received for the month of June was $265,864.20 and the receipts for the first months of 1922 was over a million dollars. In other words in June there was sold in the State 26,586,420 gallons of gasoline which at 27 cents per gallon cost $7,178,333.40 and for the six months there was 100,000,000 gallons purchased at a cost of $27,000,000 dollars.

RAILROAD STRIKE STILL IN OPERATION.

President Likely to Ask Congress to Take a Hand.

The Railroad strike continues in the same situation as last week—no agreement between strikers and operators on the conditions connected with going back to work, the railroads being firm in not giving all of the strikers their old places and status.

The President has announced that he has gone as far as he has the power, without taking extreme measures not fully defined in law. This being the case, he has been ready all week to appear before Congress with a statement of the situation, but has so far delayed, waiting on further conferences between the warring parties.

Some of the members of Congress are fearful that if further legislation is called for, the strong labor interests in Congress will make a fight to have the entire labor act repealed, outright, a movement that would be very unconsoling just before the election of a new Congress. Members of Congress have so far been very willing that the President should assume all of the responsibility, without placing themselves on record.

Boys and Girls Club Week.

Five boys and four girls spent the past week at the Maryland Agricultural College, in company with 232 boys and girls from all the counties of Maryland. Several county and home demonstration Agents had charge of the coming farmers and farm women of the state.

An interesting and instructive program had been arranged by the State Agents for the club work. Instruction in tractors, dairy cattle, swine, poultry and crops was given to the boys by the specialists in extension work. Demonstrations in health, food, clothing and poultry were given to the girls.

Short talks were given the visitors by Louis McL. Merryman, Milton Danziger, in charge of club work in the northeast; Dr. T. B. Symons, Director of Extension work in Maryland; F. B. Bomberger, Assistant Director; and Dr. A. F. Woods, President of the University of Maryland. These talks were short but inspiring and urged the young folks to realize the advantage of their position on the farm and make use of it.

A very interesting feature of the week was the exhibit of the gold cup, which the members of the Maryland calf club, from Cecil county won in London, this summer. It sure is a beauty and dear to the hearts of all the club members of Maryland, because they all had a hand in winning the cup. The cup will be returned to London, next June, to be competed for again at the Royal Livestock Show of 1923. How about boosting club work in Carroll, so we can have a Carroll county team to go across.

The trip to Washington is always a big feature of club week. Three special trollies were engaged to take the club members to see Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. He addressed the young farm people on the steps of the Department of Agriculture, had his picture taken with them and shook hands with all.

The President could not keep his appointment with the club, owing to the labor troubles, but he gave them permission to go through his home which is a privilege not granted to all.

The Zoo was next and all were anxious to see the animals. Lunch was delivered from the college in a big truck. It did not take long for lunch and the rest of the day was spent viewing the animals. Most of the time was spent at the monkey house.

Campfire and vesper services ended each day. This ceremony is always impressive when held around a campfire in the twilight and not soon forgotten.

Every farm boy and girl should plan now to attend club week at the University next year.

Stultz Quickly Indicted.

The Frederick county Grand Jury called together in special session, on Tuesday, quickly indicted William A. Stultz, for the murder of policeman John Adams, of Frederick, last Wednesday, and for assault with intent to kill Deputy Sheriffs Bartgis and Smith. Stultz is confined in the Baltimore city jail. An early trial is expected. More than $1700. has so far been raised for the family of policeman Adams.

Paper Again Advancing.

The International Paper Company has advanced the cost of newsprint paper, $5.00 per ton. This is the second $5.00 advance within a month, and even higher prices are in prospect.

Oil Stove Sales Increasing.

Manufacturers of oil heating stoves are reported to be doing a rushing business, and a number of new models are being marketed, and a high-refined oil is being tested out for heating, and will soon be on sale. Fuel oil is likely to be cheap, this winter, as there is said to be more crude oil on hand than there is a market for. Oil burning, even in big industries, is on the increase, and equipments are being changed from coal to oil, perhaps permanently.

President Harding is in the position of being "damned if he does, and damned if he don't" in the matter of the strike settlement. Political capital is never choice of the material of which it is made.

It is somewhat difficult to figure out, how the various labor unions manage to get along in peace and harmony, when the "striking" of one union throws members of other unions out of their job—for instance, lack of coal shutting down mills and other industrial plants, where there are no wage troubles.

Chief Justice Taft is not so overcome with official reticence as to rest on his job, but makes bold to advise Congress against withholding power from the courts, causing decisions to lag in important cases. He believes in speeding up justice, especially against the growing tide of anti-Americanism, and as usual, Judge Taft is not afraid to speak out.

The revolt that placed hides on the free list, shows a decided breakdown in the partisan line-up on protection at any cost. The "you carry me, and I'll carry you" plan of making tariff schedules, has always been bad, and that it can be beaten, is reassuring. It shows that party solidarity on the tariff is no longer to be depended on, and that means political good sense.

Mr. Common Man appears to be of little consequence, these days. He calmly mopes around listening to a minority of laborers dictating terms of justice for themselves, and to another minority of operators just as sure that they are right. He takes what he gets, and gives what is demanded. But, some day Mr. Common Man will come out of his hypnotic state, and make the other fellows sit around and take notice; for he is, after all, a part of "the people" and necessarily, of the "government," and will ask for a show down as to the biggest crowd.

Taxes and Risks.

This country is growing more and more toward "passing the buck" to those who pay the taxes and support the government, and who invest capital and take the big risk that makes business go. The ownership of capital and property, is getting to be a serious obligation and responsibility. They are the visible commodities that seem to be becoming more and more the prey of, not only the tax-gatherer, but the discontented, and even "government by the people" hits those financially responsible, first and hardest.

So-called individual rights—unaccompanied by financial responsibility—are everywhere getting more than their share of consideration, in all cases that reach tests of law. So strong has sentiment grown for the "under dog," that the upper dog is almost never regarded as having any rights, other than to be upset and chased, no matter how honestly, or justly, he may have reached his "uperness."

There is an opinion, too widely accepted, that capital is always able to take care of itself. It isn't true. There is nothing in this world more susceptible to danger than capital—investments, whether in stocks or bonds, real estate, or business ventures. Taken as a whole, and as the rule, capital earns small dividends, and is continually depreciating when invested in buildings, machinery, and the average business venture. It is subject to as many diseases, as is the human system.

The railroads, the mines, the big producing plants, mills of various kinds, do not, year in and year out for long periods earn big profits. Some do, but not the majority. There are big "clean up" periods, and often big profits for original promoters, but often the final chapters in the history of such cases picture loss, and often ruin.

So, when we come to a close analysis of the trend of the times, we find great classes trying to profit at the expense of capital, and without assuming any financial risk themselves. The tendency is to use somebody else's machinery, and plants, and to wrest from the owner, not only his management of it, but most of the profit, without any allowance for ultimate replacement—very much like doing one's work entirely with borrowed tools—enjoying benefits, without taking financial risks.

Foreigners and Industrial Strife.

Whether or not it is the foreign element that foments industrial strife in this country, may be a debatable question; but the fact stands out that foreign elements are always found, in mass, against the government, against individual ownership, and operation, ready to comment acts of violence, and when occasion demands, to refuse to be bound by American leadership in their own organizations.

Another un-American trend is seen in the lack of formation of co-operative, or stock company, organizations, for the operation of great public necessities. Considering the large number of employees in many lines, and the comparative ease with which large capital can be assembled on the stock plan, it seems strange that the unionists do not finance such operations and show the country how to operate railroads, coal mines and big industries on the right plan, fair to all, and without conflict between labor and capital.

No doubt there are hundreds of concerns very willing to sell out, and avoid labor disputes and business uncertainties. The most men in business simply want to save their capital invested, and are not particular whose cash makes the purchase of it.

There are many thousands of foreigners here, who came to better their financial condition, and have done so. Why should they not chuck together, and run their own labor paying and product selling operations, and be happy? The real reason why this is not done must be because they are born trouble-makers, and prefer to fight against authority, not of their own making.

Hot Weather Diseases.

Disorders of the bowels are extremely dangerous, particularly during the hot weather of the summer months, and in order to protect yourself and family against a sudden attack, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It can be depended upon. Many have testified to its excellence.

"The Armed Guards."

Everybody knows that if it were not for the "armed guards" the railroad strikers would bring non-unionism in the shops to a bloody end. These guards are police, sheriffs, United States marshals and State troops. All of them have a sound legal status, are acting as peace officers, are on duty to protect men in their right to work and to prevent another union-made Herrin.

They have succeeded. The strikers have been forced to keep the peace and the shops are filling slowly with new men. The railroad men know they are losing, and their union brethren know and fear it.

To help them win, the rail brotherhoods propose to open the way for the mobs. The "Big Four" say the "armed guards" must go. Because, somehow a guard spoke brutally to a brotherhood man, because somewhere else another brother of the brotherhoods was hurt by the accidental firing of a guard's rifle and somewhere else another brother was killed in a fight with a guard, the overlords of rail labor say these men must be removed or there will be "sporadic strikes" in a hundred rail centers.

The excuse that peaceable non-strikers' lives are endangered should not fool a half-wit. The "Big Four" may as well be frank about it and announce they are out to break down rail service, whip non-unionists out of the ruck of defeat.

Obligated by existing contracts, the brotherhoods cannot call a strike, but they may and are pulling their men off trains on any pretext. The "armed guards" excuse is their latest. The first was the plea that "equipment is unsafe."

This last, however, takes the form of an ultimatum not to the roads but to lawful authority. It is a direct warning to the Federal Government to remove its officers and to the Governors to call off their sheriffs and send home the National Guard or there will be serious consequences. It is a notification that no man has a right to work unless he carries a union card.

This is not a challenge to the railroads. The roads did not order these sheriffs, United States marshals and national guardsmen on duty.

Full in the teeth of Washington and the States who did place these guards where they are comes this union-made challenge to authority. There can be no mistake about that.—Phila. Ledger.

MOST SPLENDID OF AGES

Surely, in the New Era of the Last Few Years, Life is Really Worth the While.

Do you ever stop to tell yourself what a good time this is to be alive? For is it not a new era; has not life become life indeed in these last few years? The generation which has reached middle age or middle age and a half used to boast of its new world, meaning thereby a world which had made automobiles and airplanes and fast printing presses and telephones and had in turn been made by these. It was a mistaken boast, asserts the Villager. Machinery creates things, not life; the new heaven and earth which we bought in electric supply shops was merely the old, disguised for the moment under a clutter of new furniture. It takes new life to make a new world. Who today can be deaf and blind to the evidences that life is once again at the spring? Movements are afoot stirring literally half of earth's population to new offices and to vast new dreams. Contrast the age of machinery with the age of women and say which involves deeper-reaching changes in civilization! Put the age of physics beside an age in which the half of the world that is Asia is rubbing its eyes and getting to its feet, and say which is going to make deeper impress on the spirits and ways of thought of mankind! For that matter, think of the world in which there was an America busy with problems of liquor and trade, of trusts and taxes, and then think of a world in which there is an America, immense, untamed, standing on tiptoe before a world adventure! Whichever way you look you must ask yourself, What will come out of it? And who can cast the horoscope? Who can, indeed, and is not this of itself a happy omen? Is it not good to be done with an age in which men were sure of everything, in which the future was made as definite as the past, in which events went by calculations, statistics, charts, diagrams, curves? What can you predict now by the charts and curves? Where are now your prophets which prophesied? No broken knows any longer how to "read the tape;" no banker can tell you just what turn finance is going to take; no professor can demonstrate how the close knitting together of the nations must make war certainly impossible; no preacher is saying what religion is going to dominate the world in the next 500 years; no politician is promising what form of government will be in the ascendancy when he is a little while gone. Where cocksureness ends faith begins. Yes, it is a good time to be alive!

Grafting Tails on Goldfish.

It seems that when goldfish are very young their flesh is entirely transparent, so that no Roentgen ray is necessary in order to see every bone of the spinal column—that is to say, if one has a pair of good magnifying glasses. It is during the time that the flesh is thus transparent that the grafting must be done. The operation is a most delicate one, and must, of course, be done under water, and with nicely adjusted instruments. The tail is cut off, and two, three, or four more are grafted on in its place. Many die during the operation, but a sufficient proportion live to make the business a paying one. A fish with four or five tails is worth a good deal of money, as there are likely to be many rare specimens among its offspring. Generations of this kind of culture in Japan have made its goldfish superior to those of any other country. The climate also favors their growth, as abundant air and sunshine are of the utmost importance to their health and coloring.

Origin of "Adam's Apple."

Where the Book of Genesis merely relates the episode of Eve and the apple in the briefest and most concise language, legends go much farther—connecting various kinds of animals and birds with the Fall of Man, and introducing scores of trimmings which do not appear in the original version. One of these legends is responsible for the name "Adam's apple," as applied to the thyroid cartilage of the larynx, a projection which usually is much more apparent in men than in women.

This legend states that Adam, when he attempted to swallow his bite of the apple from the Tree of Life, choked, and the fruit stuck in his throat. All males since Adam have had this protuberance as silent evidence of the indiscretion of their ancestor.

Cause of Appendicitis.

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

LOCK OF GRAT MAN'S HAIR

Old Watch Has Long Held Interesting Relic of the Mighty Emperor Napoleon.

A new Napoleon souvenir has just come to light at Viareggio, Italy, now a fashionable seaside resort not far from Naples, and its history is interesting. A short time after her brother's death at Longwood, St. Helena, Princess Pauline, favorite sister of Napoleon I, sent a souvenir of the great warrior and emperor to one of her intimate friends, Professor Pacini, a musician, who wrote the musical work "Sapho." But she sent it in a gold watch carefully pressed between the watch's outer and inner covers, explains a writer in the New York World. As the hair was so well hidden from view the princess wrote to the musician telling him of the treasure that was inside.

The letter, still preserved by his granddaughter, Francesca Franchi, born Pacini, is a long one, and for some reason or other the family, like the original recipient of the gift, never bothered about the words, "The lock of my dear brother's hair is between the two covers of the watch," and only treasured the watch and the letter because both came from Princess Pauline. So, great was Signora Franchi's surprise when, on taking the watch to the watchmaker, she discovered a glossy lock of hair between the two covers. The letter from Pauline was carefully reread and the words telling of the lock of hair now become the most important part of it, giving proof that the hair is a hitherto undiscovered relic of Napoleon.

Several offers have been made for the relic and the letter which explains it, but Signora Franchi says she will not part with it except the Italian government buys it for one of the national museums.

Scriptures for Journalists.

"Nomad," writing in the Boston Transcript about the late Edward Everett Hale, the centenary of whose birth was recently celebrated, says of his religion:

"His conception of Christ was as a great human being—of a human being great enough to be God. A Boston newspaper youth, who often reported Hale, tells the Nomad how, when going to Leipzig to study, he wrote and asked him what he should choose for a best course of reading, 'intending, as I am, to stick to journalism.' Dr. Hale replied with suggestions as to which volumes of Bancroft he should read and what others he should miss, etc. But he said at the beginning and end of his letter: 'In my opinion what the American journalist needs most is a strict and impartial course of the New Testament.'"

Pumps Soft or Hard Water.

In domestic water supply systems it has been necessary to have two pumps, one for the hard-water well and the other for the soft-water cistern. Now this service can be supplied automatically with one pump fitted with a patented double-acting valve, says a writer in Popular Mechanics Magazine. This valve is cylindrical in form and has six openings, two to the inlet and outlet openings of the pump; two to the hard and soft-water discharges, and the two for the suction pipes to the hard and soft-water supplies. In the barrel of the cylinder are three pistons made to move one way or the other, according to the direction of the greater pressure, and to close automatically the ports so that when water is drawn from a soft-water faucet the hard-water ports are closed, and vice versa.

Why He Lingered.

"Mr. Grabcoan can't see you now." "I'll wait," said the caller. "He may be engaged for an hour or two." "I'll wait." "And even then I can't promise that he will see you." "Nevertheless, young man, I'll wait." "Patience on a monument, eh?" "No,—impatiently waiting for a loan."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Got What He Wanted

You remember in the old Arabian Nights tales, how Aladdin got everything he wanted by simply rubbing his magic lamp. That was quite a snap.

But after all, that was a long time ago and pretty much of a fairy tale at best. There are no Aladdin Lamps on the market these days. If there were they would soon be bought and rubbed into holes by the average owner. The nearest one can come to Aladdin's soft snap is to have an account at a good, reliable Bank like ours. Then rub your pen on one of our check books and presto! you get what you want. Not such an easy thing as Aladdin had, but more reliable.

MOVED WALL WITHOUT INJURY

Engineering Experts Proved It No Trick at All to Lengthen Big Buffalo Church.

In olden days, when the medieval cathedral builders wished to lengthen one of their great churches (and this happened very frequently), there was nothing for it but to pull down the western wall with its two towers, if it possessed any, or the eastern face, and lengthen the structure to the desired extent.

Today, however, thanks to the highly developed art of "house moving," we can lengthen a church without any preliminary destruction of its principal front. As witness of this, the front of the Central Presbyterian church, Buffalo, was recently moved 30 feet eastward, to permit a lengthening of the auditorium to that extent. The front of the building is 78 feet wide over the lateral buttresses, 65 feet high and 8 feet wide at the thickest parts. The weight of the wall, as moved, is 1,000 tons.

The preliminary operations consisted of removing the front, preparing the new foundations, 30 feet to the eastward, and making a clean cut through the roof and through the side walls, where they abutted against the church front. While this was being done the front wall was jacked up upon rollers. The work of moving the 1,000-ton mass was done by means of screw-jacks, operated by 15 men, and the wall completed its journey of 30 feet without injury in 16 hours.—Scientific American.

Unafraid.

"This is a nice canoe, isn't it, Maud?" said the tall, dark, young man.

"Very nice indeed, Charlie," replied the pretty girl sitting in the stern.

"There's just one objection to it," said the young man.

"Indeed! And what is that?" she asked.

"Oh, well, you see, if you try to kiss a girl in this canoe there's great danger of upsetting it, and then both the fellow and the girl would be thrown into the river."

"Oh, indeed!" said the girl reflectively. And she sat silent for a while at length she remarked softly: "Charlie, I can swim."—London Tit-Bits.

TRADE WITH THE FAR EAST

Writer Points Out How It May Be Developed Almost Beyond the Imagination.

Some people say the Chinese are so poor that it will be difficult to increase their trade with us, writes Robert Dollar in the Nation's Business. I say that opportunities in China are greater than in any other country, and I will illustrate how this trade can be enlarged with a conversation I once had with a Chinese on a street in his native city. I said to him:

"We are going to increase trade here by increasing the purchasing power of the people."

"But," said he, "it cannot be done."

At that moment a wagon load of lumber from my lumber yard came along; it was being pulled by thirteen men. It was in the winter and snow lay on the ground, but those men were all barefooted. I was paying them eight cents a day. I said:

"You take those thirteen men off that wagon, put a horse there with one man to drive and put the other twelve men into a factory and you will increase their purchasing power. They will buy more and develop the commerce of your country."

I asked him how many persons in China were going barefooted, and he replied that there must be 100,000,000 anyway, if not more. I told him that they were going barefooted from necessity and not from choice and that if they could earn more they would not go barefooted. Each one of them wanted to buy a pair of shoes and stockings. Maybe a shoe manufacturer will read this. What would it mean to him to supply 100,000,000 people?

And bear in mind that shoes are not the only necessities that these 100,000,000 people are doing without for the simple reason that they have been too poor to buy.

Toxicological Studies.

Poison squads are not always made up of humans or guinea pigs. Famous toxicologists have gained their lore by hiring companies of men to whom they have fed many kinds of poisons. Some of the men have gotten over it, but they generally showed the effects of their diet. Other scientists attack a lonesome-looking guinea pig or a squad of guinea pigs and give them enough diseases to fill several hospitals. Tiny germs that cannot be seen with the naked eye are fed and housed and studied for the benefit of mankind.—New York Sun.

Tribe That Devours Its Children.

"Since the doctor came here we have seen the most wonderful things happen. First of all he kills the sick people; then he cures them, and after that he wakes them up again." So a native girl wrote of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, author of "On the Edge of the Primeval Forest," who went out in 1913 to the Ogowe lowlands of the French colony of Gaboon, there to maintain for four and a half years a surgical and medical clinic for the negroes.

"Our country devours its own children," was the sage remark of an old chief. A vicious climate, a plentiful lack of proper food, overindulgence in rum and strong tobacco were killing off the natives rapidly when Doctor Schweitzer arrived. One of the worst problems was chronic nicotine poisoning, producing acute constipation and nervous disturbances. The tobacco comes from America in the form of leaves, frightfully strong, and is so highly prized by the natives that it is used as money—a single leaf buying two fine pineapples.

Fine View of Waterspout.

It is rarely that an opportunity occurs to make a truly scientific observation of a waterspout. Yet an engineer on board an American schooner had what is said to be a unique experience of this kind off the coast of New South Wales. Fourteen complete waterspouts formed off the shore where he was at work with a theodolite, and he made careful measurements of them. The largest spout consisted of two cones, connected by a pipe-shaped spout. The top of the upper cone, which was inverted, was 5,014 feet above the sea. Each cone was about 100 feet in diameter at the base, diminishing gradually until it merged into the spout. The length of the cones was about 250 feet each, leaving 4,500 feet for the length of the spout connecting them.

SPLENDID FOR THE GARDEN

Flower Known as "Painted Tongue" Will Well Repay Time and Trouble Bestowed on It.

No more gorgeous bed for August and September and until the hard frost comes in October can be planted than one of the Painted Tongue, Salpiglossis, the flower with the veins of gold. This annual is one of the most beautiful of the summer flowers and is not often met with, although florists are using it very largely for cut flowers the last two years; its gorgeous, purple, maroon, scarlet, rose and bronze shades, all with veins showing a glint of gold, a metallic shimmer found in no other flower, making a brilliant display when cut.

The improved forms show a great increase in size over the older forms and resemble the finer petunias in general appearance, although the blooms are more trumpet shaped than those of the petunia. The Painted Tongue is a native of Chile.

One reason for the rare appearance of the Painted Tongue in the garden is that many people have tried to grow it and have had difficulty. It should not be coddled. Planted indoors to get an early start, they have a disappointing habit of dying off inexplicably after they are transplanted into their beds, leaving blank spots and ruining the appearance. Too much coddling is the trouble. They should be raised outdoors. It is best to wait until May and plant them in the open. The seed is fine and germinates quickly and should be scattered thinly where the plants are to stand and thinned to 15 inches apart. A pinch of seed scattered at 14-inch intervals would solve the problem, thinning to the healthiest plants in the colony. They can be transplanted successfully if moved with a good ball of dirt so the roots are not disturbed too much.

The Painted Tongue.

Their growth is surprisingly slow at the start and they seem to have decided to stand still. It may take them a month or more to reach a height of three inches, but after that they start a sprint if the weather is warm and by August will reach a height of from 2 feet to 30 inches. They need a rich soil and it is well to allow two or three plants to stand in each little colony to select the sturdiest as even with this care some of them are likely to give up the ghost. They resent any check in growth which is one reason why they stand transplanting badly. Give them liberal cultivation and plenty of water and you will have a wonderful sheet of bloom.

The Orderly Country Town.
The ordinary country town can not expect to present a fine appearance as the result of having many costly edifices. It may have some handsome buildings, but it usually cannot invest any great amount in expensive architecture and building materials. It has to acquire a pleasing appearance in other ways largely by a scrupulous care of its business buildings, homes and streets, with the patient effort to beautify the same.

Property that is kept in perfect repair has a finish and trimness about it that counts more than costly architecture. You see many towns where a great deal has been spent on ornate and elaborate buildings, but where the streets are not kept clean, and where many people still tolerate disorderly conditions. A place like that looks far inferior to many simply built country towns which are carefully maintained.—Louisville (Texas) Enterprise.

Reminder of "Cattle Lifting."

A singular natural curiosity located in the valley of the Annan in Scotland is what is known as the Devil's Beef-tub. It is in the form of a hollow or basin, surrounded by high hills which make it so secluded a spot that a large number of persons can conceal themselves in it and remain unseen by others in the immediate neighborhood. In ancient times it was frequently used as a hiding place for stolen cattle, and it is this fact which has given it its name.

Pleasant Laugh, Which Can Usually Be Cultivated, Well Worth Trouble of Acquiring It.

You can cultivate a pleasant, contagious and spontaneous laugh just as well as you can cultivate a good speaking voice. But you must work for it. No doubt you hold an opinion of every one else's laugh but your own; and unless you have a frank and analytical friend or famously pleasant laugh, you may never have stopped to consider how your voice sounds in laughter. And yet it's part of your personality and you ought to know and care.

A young business man who laughed spontaneously and heartily and contagiously confessed that he had cultivated it.

"I've learned to laugh," he declared. "Once upon a time I didn't laugh easily, but I found many situations relieved by a good laugh at the right moment. I find it a mighty helpful business and social asset. And at the same time the mere act of laughing has made me more optimistic. So it works well all around."

"Give a grin at yourself in the mirror and see what other folks see when you smile or laugh. If it isn't an ideal picture, consider what you can do to improve it."

"First of all, you can of course, keep the teeth absolutely clean. They ought to be brushed night and morning. Then they can be straightened and filled and generally fixed up by the dentist. Yes, there will be dentist's bills, but you will be investing in a good-looking smile. You buy hats and veils and face powder to improve your appearance, so why not buy a good-looking smile?"—Rhoda Vale, in Designer.

GOT IDEA FOR CASH REGISTER

Original Maker of Machines Copied Device From Automatic Indicator Used on Ocean Vessels.

The invention of the cash register was due to one of those happy accidents of which only the alert mind takes advantage. A business man of Dayton, Ohio, named Jacob Ritty, had a store in a good location in that city, and it attracted many customers, yet somehow it was not profitable. He worried so much about his lack of success that a vacation became necessary, and he decided to take a trip to Europe. While on the voyage, Mr. Ritty one day visited the ship's engine room. His attention was caught by the automatic indicator which recorded the revolutions of the propeller shaft. The idea occurred to him: Why not devise a machine to record the sales in a store? Hence the cash register.

At the time of this invention John H. Patterson owned a retail shop in a small mining town near Dayton. He tried two of the machines—then of a rather crude type—and was so pleased with the results that he realized the opportunities they offered. He bought out the company that was making them, and became its president.

Lopez Real Discoverer.

Francisco Lopez, the discoverer of gold in California, died in poverty, and the place of his burial is unknown. Marshall who accidentally discovered gold in the mill race at Sutter's Ford six years afterward, was given $3,000 a year by the state and a monument of brass was erected to his memory. Sutter, who had nothing to do with the discovery, and did not own the land upon which his mill stood, also was given a pension. Lopez immediately reported his discovery to his employers. Sutter and Marshall kept the discovery a secret until they had taken possession of large tracts of land, for which they gave the Indians almost nothing. Both Sutter and Marshall knew that their claims as first discoverers of gold were false. They were adventurers, and were at San Fernando in 1846 during one of the Mexican revolutions, and had heard of the gold fields in the San Fernando district.

To Secure Clouds on Negative.

Amateur photographers are delighted to find, sometimes, that they have natural clouds upon their negatives, and they imagine that these have occurred by a lucky chance. Really the result is a proof that they have made a correct exposure.

In order to secure clouds on the negative, it is necessary to remember an old rule—"Expose for the shadows, and the high-lights will take care of themselves." In other words, one must look for the darkest part of the picture, and give that part sufficient exposure. Usually, clouds are lost because the sky, being bright, is much more exposed than other parts of the picture. On development the image becomes dense there before the darker parts are strong enough. Hence the sky will not print.

Explanation of Dreams.

Numerous forms of fever are announced by dreams of an uncommonly terrifying character; while in cases of severe neuralgia and rheumatic affections, disturbed dreams are occasionally found to be forerunners of an attack.

Indigestion gives rise to very morbid dreams, into which weeping, sorrow, deaths, funerals, suffocation, and strange animals enter.

All these things, are due to the curious effect which the mind has over the body during periods of sleep, for dreaming is a very natural thing, and those who never dream at all are said to be mentally afflicted.

ORIGIN OF COATS OF ARMS

Employed as Method of Recognition in Days When Learning Was in Its Infancy.

Almost every name of European origin, which has been passed down for the centuries unchanged, except for a slight alteration in its spelling, had in the earliest time, before surnames were used, and when language was undeveloped and few could read or write, a totem or seal, which represented it.

The totem was used as a seal. All persons of property had a seal, and when knighthood was introduced in feudal times, after the Roman era, the device of the seal was painted on the knight's shield, and he was known thereby when the helmet was closed in warfare or in tournaments. The earliest knights had no crest. Later, when the knights in a family multiplied, crests on the top of the helmets were adopted to distinguish those who bore similar arms on their shields. Crests represented the Christian name, the arms the surname. The arms were often printed or embroidered on the knight's mantle and horse blanket, and hence was termed "coat of arms."

PERFUME MATCHED HER SOUL

Incident That Caused Girl's Chum to Believe There is Something in Psychology.

Miss Rose has just divulged all the terrible facts about poor Adelaide's ordeal at the studio of the psychological perfumer.

So pleased was Miss Rose with her experience in having a special perfume invented for her, one that represented her soul, her coloring and her point of view, that she suggested that poor Adelaide should go to the perfume studio and have the psychological perfumer mix up something for her that would represent her personality and deepen the impression she should make on all who breathed in the aroma of her presence.

"So Adelaide went along," confided Miss Rose, "and really she looked very expensive. You know Adelaide always does. She was a bit snappy, of course, I mean, and rather put it over Mme. La La, the psychological perfumer, and she was awfully frank—she feels that not to be frank is to be bourgeois. She said rather brutally to Mme. La La that of course the whole idea of getting one's perfumes to match one's soul was absurd, and Mme. La La must be making lots of money out of it.

"Mme. La La seemed perfectly smooth, but one can never tell about these Latin. She looked Adelaide carefully up and down, and then she seemed to go into a sort of trance. Presently she came out of the trance and told us that she had been dwelling intensively on Adelaide's characteristics.

"Madam," she said to Adelaide, "I will distill for you the very essence of your soul."

"And when the perfume came home, what do you think?" demanded Miss Rose. "Bob, Adelaide's Persian cat, began acting terribly. It was the strangest and most pungent odor I had ever smelt. It was beautifully bottled in a queer-shaped flask with a sort of Egyptian device.

"And it was a familiar odor, too, but none of us could name it for a minute, while Bob began mauling about the apartment.

"And then grandma came in and said:

"For heaven's sake, who brought in the catnip?"

"And so it seems there really is something in psychology," added Miss Rose—"at least I mean"—New York Sun.

"I don't see any sense in that monkey gland operation the papers made so much fuss about."

"Why not?"

"From the way the man who had the operation performed has been acting I should say he was born with monkey glands."

SENATOR FRANCE, WHY DID YOU DO THIS?

(From Baltimore Sun, September 8, 1919.)

"RADICALS CHEER FRANCE

"United States Senator Joseph Irwin France last night addressed a meeting at the Garden Theatre, staged by the Socialist Labor Party and drew from about 200 men and women who composed his audience warm cheers because of his advocacy of 'throwing open the prison doors for all sentenced for words they had the courage to utter,' and for definitizing this principle by espousing the cause of Eugene V. Debs and Victor G. Berger in their efforts to gain freedom.

"His audience welcomed the address. It was an audience warmly in sympathy with that group of radical Socialists of which the Socialistic Labor Party is composed, as was evidenced by the rapid sale of the various Socialistic Labor pamphlets offered in the audience. These included 'A Message to the American Workingman,' by Nicolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier; 'The Russian Constitution,' which the salesmen announced as the 'I. W. W. Constitution in the making'; 'Soviet Russia,' a pamphlet which the salesmen announced, with the slogan, 'No Eats, No Work'; 'Violence and Solidarity,' and like radical literature."

CARROLL RECORD.

A Little Thing Like Clothes

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"That," said Tom Winship, knocking the ash from his cigarette, "is the primmest girl in this town."

They both looked after the retreating figure of Daisy Miller, dressed so neatly in her blue serge that concealed her ankles, with a black hat that was meant to cover, not adorn, the red-brown hair tucked out of sight.

"If you give me a month I could have that girl so dead in love with me that any one could see it!" Arthur Baldwin offered.

"You've lost already, and I'll put ten on it, Art."

Daisy Miller's heart beat very fast as she washed the dinner dishes. She had really not seen anything of Arthur Baldwin since they were in high school together; she had thought less of him, and yet tonight he had telephoned to ask if he could come to see her.

She heard the complaining voice of her father as he hunted for the evening paper, and hurrying into the other room she cried, "I'll find it for you, dad!"

Daisy settled the old man in the chair by the fire, slipped to her knees and put on his house slippers, retrieved his lost glasses and retreated again to her waiting dishes.

"I don't see why he should want to see me," she thought, "I can't understand—and yet her heart fluttered strangely and she felt a new glow in the dullness of her gray days and a new romance spring out of monotony."

In her own room she surveyed her wardrobe critically. The gray chalice was past redemption and her best waist needed a patch under the arm; the only thing left was what she had on, the blue serge dress that had never been anything but useful.

"You've Lost Already, and I'll Put Ten on It, Art."

She turned away from the vision of herself in the mirror.

"You're hopeless! There's no use. Of course he's come to see you on business."

Yet again she felt that strange new excitement when the bell wheezed and she opened the door to Arthur Baldwin. He stood a moment in the hall under the tiny blue flame of gas, retaining her hand.

"I am glad to see you, Daisy!" he said, scrutinizing her white face.

There was an awkward silence for a moment after he had seated himself in the comfortable living room in the big chair across from Mr. Miller.

"How're you getting on with your law?" old Mr. Miller gasped.

Arthur Baldwin found himself in the clutches of that inveterate old talker, and he listened to drowsy reminiscences of the '40's while he fidgeted in his chair.

When at last he said good night he admitted it was one of the duller evenings he had ever spent and quite unsuccessful except for his last remark to Daisy.

"You certainly have wonderful hair, Daisy," he said as he took her hand under the whimpering gas flame in the hall.

He smirked to himself as he remembered the slow, almost painful flush that touched her cheeks.

But when she was all alone, she stood for a moment in the hall, with her hands pressed to her hot cheeks. She heard her father lumbering up the stairs to his room and she followed noiselessly and swiftly.

When she had lighted the candles on either side of her dressing table she peered in at the "wonderful hair." She unwound the great red-brown twist and began to arrange it with delicate care. With great waves over her forehead it seemed to transform her—almost—or she fancied so in the uncertain light of her candles.

"I'm old enough to know better," Daisy thought next morning as she scanned the paper; but a new infection in the air had caught her and she explained to her father briefly that she was going to the city.

It must have been the hair that did it, but Daisy was unable to resist a hat that looked altogether amazing in one of the smartest shops on Fifth Avenue.

But the hat made her suit look even older than ever, and Daisy plunged. She gasped when she saw herself in the new suit with its long, slim lines and its delicious golden brown color; with the hat with the pheasant's wing it was bewitching. But how snabbly her shoes looked; besides every one was wearing strapped pumps!

As a very last touch she bought herself a new veil, and trembling with excitement she adjusted it carefully to her hat.

"It'll take me years to save it all again," Daisy thought shamefacedly. "All the money that I put by for a rainy day!"

She settled herself down by the window in the train, feeling in her new clothes that she was too noticeable. She prayed that she would meet no one she knew. She moved over to the very margin of her seat as a big man sat down beside her; he looked at her casually and then cried, "Why, if it isn't Daisy Miller!"

"Mr. Armstrong!"

"It used to be Bill when we were in school together," he laughed.

Daisy looked up at him, perhaps it was the new hat with the daring wing, perhaps it was the consciousness of that smart veil, yet there was a charm about that shy, bird-like glance that touched William Armstrong.

"Just come back to civilization," he explained. "I'm going to surprise my people. It's a long run from Arizona to New York!"

"How wonderful!" Daisy exclaimed softly. "I've always thought that was about the most interesting place to live—" then for some unaccountable reason she blushed.

"Not for your kind!" Armstrong said gruffly.

He touched tentatively the rich fur on her cuff.

"Oh this!" said Daisy with disdain, "as if clothes matter!"

"When a girl's as pretty as you are, Daisy, I guess you're right!" he said.

If she had looked sweet before, she looked downright pretty now; and it was this very knowledge that made Daisy say, "To have to hear about Arizona; perhaps—"

"I would like to drop in and talk with you about God's country!" he said as he wrung her hand in farewell.

That was why two days later Daisy Miller, answering the telephone, said softly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Baldwin, but I have another engagement tonight!"

"Congratulations!" Tom Winship cried, holding out his hand to his betting partner. "When it comes to a lady-killer, Art, I must admit you never fail," he pointed with a jeering finger to the notice in the evening paper.

"The engagement of Miss Daisy Miller is announced to Mr. William Armstrong of Tucson, Ariz."

THINGS THAT NEVER SATISFY

Wrist Watch, or Automobile, or Other Luxuries Do Not Give Peace and Strength and Joy.

I wanted a wrist watch. I thought I couldn't live without a wrist watch. I could see nothing but wrist watches when I passed the shops. I hinted wrist watches daily to my family. And then, at last, I got that wrist watch. Just like I wanted. And for a week I was the proudest skirt in town.

Then . . . The wrist watch broke. I took it to the jeweler to be mended. That was six weeks ago. The wrist watch is there yet, for I can never remember to go after it.

Life's like that. We're always wanting something and thinking that that thing will cure the itch in our souls, writes Elsie Robinson in the Milwaukee Journal. We're always blaming our discontents and failures on the lack of that thing. A wrist watch or an automobile, a more stylish set of clothes or a more expensive house.

Then, provided we fish hard enough and aim straight enough and work long enough, we usually get that thing. And at once we find that the soul itch goes on just the same! For the truth is that things never satisfy.

No matter how costly or long desired or wonderful, a thing is only a thing. It may interest and amuse for a while, but it will not, cannot feed our spirits. The only thing that can feed a spirit hunger is a spirit product—the reactions and concentrates we manufacture within our own personalities. Not something you can strap on your wrist, but something you grow in your heart—that alone will give you peace and strength and joy.

Criticism.

There are two modes of judging of anything: one, by the test of what has actually been done in the same way before; the other, by what we can conceive may be done in that way. Now this latter method of mere imaginary excellence can hardly be a just criticism, because it may be impossible to reduce to practice what is perfectly easy to conceive. Fastidious men are always judging by the former standard; and as the rest of the understanding cannot fill up in a century what the imagination can sketch out in a moment, they are in a state of perpetual disappointment, and their conversation is one uniform tenor of blame. At the same time that I say this, I lift up both my hands against that pernicious facility of temper, in the estimation of which everything is charming and delightful. Among the smaller duties of life, I hardly know any one more important than that of not praising where praise is not due.—Sydney Smith

TAKE TO 'KIDDIES'

Writer Corrects Misapprehension Concerning Bachelors.

Really They Have a Better Understanding of the Childish Heart Than Have Many Parents.

I have long been convinced that the people who have no children are secretly maligned and treated with injustice by those who have, and it is for the purpose of defending them and setting them right that these lines are written, Thomas L. Masson writes in the New York Sun. There is a kind of confraternity of those who have children arrayed against those who haven't.

The thing has gone far enough. In the interests of good fellowship and all-around sport, it certainly ought to be stopped.

I frankly plead guilty myself to this sort of thing. I can recall the many occasions in which I have remarked to somebody else who had children, speaking of some one who had them, not:

"You see, he doesn't understand. He has no children of his own. Great pity, isn't it?"

Yes, I have said this so often myself, and I have heard it said so often that it is now high time to record my sense of contrition. For it isn't true. The truth is that those who have no children quite generally understand them much better than those who do. They have a kind of sense about children, very much like a sixth sense, and which appears to have been given to them to take the place of the children themselves.

I could give many instances that occur to me to corroborate this view. I know two or three old bachelors who have devoted their lives to the bringing up of boys, and the astonishing insight into boys that they have certainly could not be excelled, if paralleled, by any parent. As for maiden ladies, their perceptions about children are uncanny.

I have seen boys considered thoroughly bad and denounced and trounced by their parents, and made to feel quite worthless and unredeemable crawl under the wings of some spinster lady, and be immediately revived and mentally and morally set upon their feet, merely by the fact that the spinster lady was able to look into their hearts and to have such faith in them as to accomplish this miracle.

For this is the real miracle after all—that one may touch a human being, perhaps only by the pressure of the hand or an understanding smile and a listening ear, and immediately restore him to moral health.

I am free to confess that there are so many things about those who have no children that indicate their superiority to those who have that I find it difficult to know where to begin. They may be lost in every other way. Owing to their freedom from responsibilities of this sort, and joyousness the heart of the crusty, in their ways and cranks, and all that sort of thing, it is nothing less than marvelous the way they will let children upset them.

I have seen an elderly gentleman who had lived in bachelor apartments all his life, and who, if his newspaper was ten minutes late, or was folded the wrong way, would fall into a profound rage. I have seen this gentleman submit to any indignity imposed upon him by a small band of children at a week-end—and cry for more.

Thus, you see, there are two sorts of miracles; there is the miracle of the childless person understanding and seeing into the child's heart when the parent is blind, and there is the miracle of the child bringing back to responsiveness and joyousness the heart of the crusty, childless person, who has become immersed in the machinery of his own selfishness.

Then, again, have you noticed that childless persons love all kinds of children? Their impartiality is as wide as the world. A nice little girl with flaxen hair blowing back of her as she runs in the wind, and who sits on one's knee in the twilight and asks for a fairy story—such a divine creature as this will appeal to any childless person, no matter who she is or where she comes from.

But the average parent sniffs at any other little girl like that who doesn't belong to him. The prejudice and intolerance of parents have never been measured!

Mass of Camels.

The mass of Faisal's army filled the valley from side to side. There were hundreds of brushwood fires burning, with Arabs round them making coffee, or eating, or sleeping like dead men muffled in their cloaks, as closely as they could in the confusion of camels. I had never imagined so many camels together, and the mess was indescribable, as they were couched or tied up here and there all over the camping ground, and more were always coming in, and the old ones leaping up on three legs to join them, roaring with hunger and agitation. Patrols were going out, and caravans being unloaded, and some dozen of Egyptian mules were bucking angrily all over the middle of the scene.—World's Work.

Reconsidered.

Philippi—You know, I fell in love with Jack Huggins at first sight. —Perdita—When is your engagement to be announced? Philippi—Never. I took a second look.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 20.

SECOND RETURN FROM EXILE

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 7:1-8:38.

GOLDEN TEXT—The hand of our God
is upon all them that seek him, for good.
—Ezra 8:22.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Ezra 9:1-10:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Ezra's Prayer for Help.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ezra's Prayer for Help on a Journey.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC
—Ezra: Teacher and Leader.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
—Religious Teachers: A Need and an Opportunity.

I. The Leader—Ezra (7:1-10).

1. Who he was (vv. 1-6). (1) A priest (vv. 1-5). The leader of the first company was Zerubbabel, a sort of military governor. The great need now was for a religious leader, for the people had gone far from God, as we see from the noble reforms which Ezra effected. (2) A ready scribe
(v. 6). He was a teacher of the law of God.

2. His high ambition (vv. 7-10).
(1) "He set his heart to seek the law of the Lord" (v. 10). He definitely set out with the noble purpose to know God's Word. To be successful in anything one must set out with a purpose.
Daniel was a success because he "pur-posed in his heart." Ministers and Sunday-school teachers should have this set purpose. (2) He set his heart to obey the Lord (v. 10). He was not only concerned with knowing God's Word, but to obey it. God's Word cannot fully be known by the intellect;
it must be experienced. The essential qualification for a teacher of the Bible,
a preacher or Sunday-school teacher,
is obedience to God's Word. (3) He set his heart to teach Israel God's statutes and judgments (v. 10). He not only had a love for God's Word, but a desire to implant it in the hearts of others. When one has an experiential knowledge of God's Word he longs to teach it to others.

3. His commission (7:11-26). The king Artaxerxes gave him a copy of the decree authorizing him to lead a company back to Jerusalem. He was empowered (1) to collect funds (vv.
15, 16); (2) to levy tribute (vv. 21, 22); (3) to appoint magistrates and judges (v. 25); (4) to execute penalties (v. 26). So great was the king's confidence in Ezra that he gave all these powers into his hand. For this great honor Ezra lifted his heart to God in thanksgiving. He was mainly concerned with the fact that he was to beautify the Lord's house and acknowledge that God had put this purpose into the king's heart.

II. The Company (8:1-20).

The company was small—only 1,754
males, but including women, children and servants, there were perhaps 6,000
to 7,000 people in this caravan.

III. Ezra's Prayer and Fasting
(8:21-23).

The first thing he did was to seek God's guidance. Not only God's leaders, but all Christians should seek divine guidance and help in every undertaking—every new journey, every piece of new work, every business adventure, every relationship. That which we cannot invoke God's blessing upon should not be undertaken.
Further, success can only be realized when God's blessing is upon us. He did not minimize the dangers attending such a journey, but he had told the king that the hand of the Lord
would be upon all for good who sought him, and now he was ashamed to ask the king for a military escort to protect them from the marauding Arabs.

IV. The Successful Journey (8:24-32).

God heard their prayer. The treasure entrusted to them was great. Perhaps the entire value of all the money, etc., was $5,000,000. For a weak caravan to go on a journey requiring four months through a country infested by these robber bands, carrying such an amount of money was most perilous;
but Ezra knew that God was able and would protect them. Note:
1. The care and honesty (vv. 24-30).
The money was weighed unto them at the start and was to be weighed when turned over to the authorities at Jerusalem. The incentive to honesty and strict accounting of the trust was that they were holy men and were entrusted with that which was holy because it belonged to God. Most exacting care should be exercised in handling the Lord's money. We should guard sacredly our trust.

2. Their safe arrival (vv. 31, 32).
Some four and one-half months were required to make the journey. God proved himself to be faithful, having protected them and brought them safely to their destination.

Overrating Ourselves.

In the same degree that we overrate
ourselves, we shall underrate others;

likely to be corrected abroad.—Washington Allister.

Let the Injuries Pass.

injuries; it is policy to let them pass
by us.—Franklin.

arator in social life.—A. Helms.

Following and Setting Good Examples

2 Chronicles 24:15-19; 26:3-5

A brief biography of Jehoiada is given in the words of verse 16, "He had done good in Israel, both toward God and toward his house." Because of this the people gave him well-merited honor and after his death he was buried in the city of David, among the kings.

His example is a good one to follow. He did good. This brings to remembrance the life of our Lord as portrayed in the words of Peter, "He went about doing good" (Acts 10:38).
To follow such an example is to set a good example to others, and this becomes possible to Christians through the indwelling of the Spirit of Christ
who is the only source of real goodness. Inasmuch as this indwelling is a gift of God to His children there is power to follow the good example of our Lord. The act of determination to do this is comparatively easy. The maintenance of the attitude involved in that act is more difficult. It calls for the renewing of strength and purpose through fellowship with God.
(See Isa. 40:31.)

An ancient philosopher once said,
"The science which it is most necessary for us to learn is how to preserve ourselves from the contagion of a bad example." There is only one way and that lies in a persistent pursuit of the good. At this very point Joash failed (v. 17). He listened to the flattery of his courtiers and followed them in their departure from God with the resultant loss of His kingdom and his life.

The lessons are so obvious as to make comment almost unnecessary.
The ways of good and evil lie before us. Peace and prosperity are the result of the first; deterioration and endless death are the outcome of the second.

One does not have to be a genius in order to set a good example. Let such ordinary matters as cheerfulness, punctuality, endurance, fidelity, and purity of thought and speech be considered. Exemplification of these common virtues in the daily life will make one a good example to others.

OLD BELIEF FIRMLY ROOTED

Cushman, Who Should Know Better, Incist Puff Adder Can Make
Long-Distance Jump.

One of the greatest causes for dread
to be found in the African jungle is "snakes" and every camp fire brings to light fresh stories of reptile terrors.

There is one camp topic that sustains more thrills even than the Koster caves, and that is snakes. You have only to say "snakes," and as though you said "potsa" to a pack of keen dogs, everyone at the "rondist"
is off on full tongue after mambas,
cobras, ringhals, shaap-stickers, puffadder, and python; and of all the yarns that are related, says a well-known traveler, I swear nothing will beat the absolutely rooted belief that a puff-adder can and does jump backwards over a full-sized tent wagon!
A man has told me with evident sincerity that he has "seen it." Yes! He has seen four feet of puff-adder that is built on lines of immobility—
spring backwards and spring ten feet high! However, every puff-adder I have had the honor to meet declined,
even at the threat of death, to spring
an inch. What he did was to anchor three parts of his bloated body on the ground, and then lunge with the fourth part. His reach might be a foot, and as his fangs are long and curved he gives the appearance of "striking backwards" because the head is lifted to bring the long fangs into position. An active puff-adder, very angry, can exert itself to strike, prepare, and strike again—thus covering, say, two feet in two swift lunges. The idea that this sluggish reptile can spring clear of the ground is ridiculous, yet it prevails among a class of men whose business takes them into the veldt, and who are proud of their observation powers.

RELIC OF SPANISH ARMADA?

Anchor Fished Up Off Scottish Coast
Is Thought to Be Three Centuries Old.

Not long ago the crew of an English trawler engaged in lobster fishing, near Kinsale, had great difficulty in getting their anchor aboard. It was firmly fixed in some massive, hard substance in the sand bank.

When at last they succeeded in bringing it to the surface, there was attached to it a very ancient anchor, five tons in weight, the shank being over ten feet long and the bend of equal proportions. Fastened to the anchor was a small cannon.

This anchor, which probably belonged to one of the ships of the Spanish armada, wrecked on this coast, has become covered with marine matter, and this, in the three centuries
during which it had been embedded in the sand, had been converted into a rocky fossil substance.

The anchor is, of course, considerably worn, but it still presents a very massive appearance, and must have belonged to a very large ship.

PROUD OF LONG ANCESTRY

English Families That Can Trace
Their Descent Directly for More Than Ten Centuries.

The Asshetons, in direct descent,
have held land at Downham, Lancashire, during the reigns of 17 sovereigns of England. The present lord of the manor of Downham, compared with whom many dukes, earls and marquises are mere parvenus as far as pedigree is concerned, is Ralph Cockayne Assheton, who has been high sheriff of Lancashire and is a deputy lieutenant and an alderman
for the county of Lancaster.

But the long record of this family is equaled by others in a humbler sphere of life.

William Purkis, the groundman at University of College school, is a direct descendant of Purkis, the charcoal burner who picked up William Rufus' body in the New forest and took it in his cart to Winchester.
Other descendants of Purkis still inhabit the New forest district, and until two generations ago one of them owned a small plot which had come down to him in the male line from Norman days. The groundman Purkis claims that up to recent times
his family had in its keeping a genuine spoke of the wheel of the cart
which took the king's body to Winchester!

"It was kept in a glass case," he told an interviewer, "until one night
when my grandfather in a fit of temper threw the spoke in the fire. The burning of the spoke caused a great stir and next Sunday the parson preached a sermon on it."

Not long ago there died at Gattonside, in Roxburghshire, a farmer named Thomas Boston, whose ancestor settled there in the time of Robert Bruce. He went to Bannockburn as a harpist in the train of Edward II to celebrate in song the victory which the English king anticipated; instead, he fell into the hands of Bruce, who spared his life on condition that he compose a ballad in Scotland's honor. Boston fulfilled the condition so satisfactorily that he got in return the grant of Gattonside.

An inn at Lamberhurst, in Kent, has been held by the same family for over four centuries, and a blacksmith at Muckleston, Shropshire, claims that his forge has been in the family at least 500 years and that one of his ancestors shod Margaret of Anjou's horse in 1459.

His Excuse.

Service on a jury is a task that is shunned more generally than any other public service. Practically every excuse imaginable is presented by talesmen as a valid reason for relief of this onerous labor. But to stay awake until almost midnight before reaching a verdict and then to leave for home, only to find that during the jury deliberation your car had acquired a "paster" for some violation of the city parking laws, would be too much for the average man's endurance. This predicament faced a juror in one of the Marion county courts
the other night when he started for home after hours of jury sessions.

The jury reached a verdict late at night and the verdict was sealed. It was to be opened by the judge at nine o'clock the next day. Nine o'clock came but only 11 jurors were present and the reading of the verdict was delayed. It was later than 9:30 when the twelfth man came into the courtroom and related his story. He had spent the early part of the day explaining things at the City Court building, he informed the judge.—Indianapolis News.

Illegal Fishermen's Spy System.

The Columbia river is as much a river of mystery, of adventure and of romance, even though the romance be unrecognized by the stern eye of the law, as it ever was, according to a dispatch from Astoria, Ore.

Deputy John Larson of the state
fish warden's force, state department of fisheries, vouches for the mystery
at all events. Larson patrols the river from Astoria to Multnomah Falls, 25 miles above Portland, in the patrol boat Governor Olcott. He believes illegal fishing is going on, but admits the fishermen have a clever system of evading detection.

Flashing signal lights from river
bluffs warn of the approach of suspicious craft, even as the signal fire
of pioneer days advertised for the suspicious Indian the approach of the white man's birch. According to Larson, the signal may be a blazing bunch of newspapers, or a spotlight,
but when he gets there the quarry has departed for safer waters.

A Graceful Surrender.

"You don't stand a chance," said the prominent citizen's campaign manager.
"The best thing for you to do is to withdraw and escape being snowed under at the election."

"But confound the luck, how am I going to get out of the race without acknowledging that I can't win?"

"Easily enough. Just announce that however much you may desire to serve your country in a position of honor and trust, you are first of all a husband and father, and the claims of your family are such that you cannot afford to sacrifice a lucrative law practice to engage in the turmoil of a political contest."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Such Is Fame.

"Who is the guest of honor this evening?"

"Scribner, the author."

"Then I'm out of luck. I'll have to avoid him."

"Haven't you read any of his books?"

"I didn't even know he wrote books."

Tennis Under Difficulties.

Tennis in the South Sea islands is not as delightful as it might be,
although it has its ardent devotees.
Play usually commenced in the alleged "cool" of the evening. The players wore shirts and a vest, nothing else, and with inch-thick rubber glued to the soles of their shoes by way of protection against the heat and hardness of the courts. In five minutes everybody would be a mere dripping rag of profuse perspiration. But no matter, it was tennis, though arguments across the nets seemed the player's strongest point. One of these resulted in a bet as to who would win
a game played in diver's helmet and boots, respectively. It was put to the test with the utmost gravity and resulted in a dead heat, the man in the helmet being unable to see through his three glass windows quickly enough to take the ball, and the booted competitors being unable to move.

to bring about greater co-

it.

THE SEASON'S SCORE

Taneytown Won, 16 — Lost, 5

Taneytown 5—New Windsor 3.

New Windsor came to Taneytown, last Saturday, loaded up to win, and made a good effort toward it. The team wasn't recognizable as belonging to New Windsor; but, the same may be said, more or less, of most local teams. Anyway, it was a strong aggregation, and the game was a hard one to lose after a 3-0 lead, and making 11 hits to Taneytown's 9. Taneytown scored 2 runs in its half of the 5th, on a couple of hits and some swift running, and in the 6th, with bases filled, made three more by lucky bunting, while New Windsor was unable to score after the 5th.

Bonsack, for Taneytown, struck out four of the first six men up, and had 9 strikeouts in the game to only 2 for Metzgar, but was hit hard in streaks, when he let up. The fact that he passed but one man, and that one late in the game, while Metzgar passed three, had something to do with the result. But few errors were made on either side, and it was a good exhibition of real baseball. Doyle, of Westminster, umpired with good satisfaction to both sides. The game was attended by interested "fans" from New Windsor, Uniontown and Union Bridge. The score was—
New Windsor 0-0-0-2-1-0-0-0-0-3

Taneytown 4—Westminster 6.

Taneytown lost to Westminster, on Wednesday, in a close contest, 6 to 4. It was a rather easy game to lose, as the Westminster boys are good sports, and the series stands, Taneytown 3, Westminster 1. The game was 4-4 up to the 9th inning, when the visitors chalked up two more. Westminster made 12 hits to 7 for Taneytown, which explains the result. The score; Taneytown 0-0-2-2-0-0-0-0-0-4 Westminster 0-0-0-4-0-0-0-2-6

Crops Rotting for Fear of Loss.

Thousands of bushels of peaches, beans, corn, tomatoes and other farm produce are rotting in fields and on trees in Southern New Jersey while the city housewife pays high for a small basket of fresh edibles at the corner grocery.

The farmers are permitting their crops to waste rather than send them to market and receive barely enough for them to cover the cost of packing and shipping. It is not being done in an endeavor to hold out on the commission merchants, but because the farmers dare not take the chance of loss.

The year's crops have been unusually bountiful. The farms surrounding the towns of Vineland, Salem, Bridgeton and Glassborough have produced more per acre than for many years, and today all lies wasting on the ground.

The farmers blame the retailer, who, they say, buys only in small quantities from the commission merchant in order to keep the prices high. The remedy they suggest is that the householder should go to the large markets and, combining with neighbors, buy in quantity. Such action would keep the market open and not allow the supplies to become a drug on the hands of the commission merchant and a scarcity across the counters of the retailer.—Phila. Ledger.

Came to Make a Visit.

A little boy called on his aunt who lived next door, allured by certain savory smells. "Hello, Aunt Sue," he greeted her, "nice day." Then after a minute's embarrassed pause, he came to the point. "Aunt Sue, I smell somethin' that smells like first-rate pie with raisins in it." "Yes, Billy, I have some mince pies, but they're for company." He pondered this and then suggested hopefully, "I came to make a little bit of a visit myself."—Judge.
