AUTO COMMISSIONER MAKES REPORT

212 Killed by Autos in the State this Past Year.

Maryland autoists paid $2,841,648.13 to the state during the fiscal year of 1921-1922, according to the annual report of Automobile Commissioner E. Austin Baughman, which has just reached Gov. Albert C. Ritchie.

In the report Commissioner Baughman, makes a special plea for a law that will permit special deputies to function, and also for an increase in pay for members of the state police. Because of the low wages paid these men, it is hard to keep sufficient police to properly patrol the roads of the state, he declares.

Autorists paid into the coffers of the state, municipal and county governments a total of $165,989.30 in fines for violations of the many laws. This was an increase of $22,602.35 over the year preceding.

More persons were killed in the state by autos last year than in any 12 months of the last five years, 212 having lost their lives in accidents.

In the 12 months ending September 31 last the period covered by the report, automobile licenses were refused to 426 persons and the licenses of 1,-516 were suspended. There were 371 who had their licenses revoked, while a total of 8,931 persons were reprimanded on the roads or from the office of the automobile commissioner for minor infractions of the laws.

It costs money to operate the office as is shown by the fact that $179,166,-89 was spent for this purpose. This was divided as follows: Salaries, $67,-514.76; stationery and printing, $19,-523.29; tags, $44,888.89; postage, $9,-787.21; patrolling and examiners' expenses, $11,639.11, and motors $25,-

Automobile stealing is becoming a lost art in this state. It is true that more cars are taken than in former years, but the successful thefts are being cut down.-Frederick News.

Protection of Children from Autos.

Washington, Jan. 11 (Capital News Service.)—The arousing of the Nation over the increasing death toll taken by the automobile is evident in the many proposals as to how fatalities shall be prevented. suggests that mathematics be given a chance. "No one knows," said Dr. Lauden, "what causes accidents. We variety of potatoes, and calls them know of any individual accident that it was because of too great speed, slippery streets, brakes which didn't hold, neglect of signalling, etc., but not of accidents as a whole. We have no real accident statistics. If, for instance, we could say that of five thousand accidents in a given period of time, in a given section of a given city, three thousand were caused by poor brakes, we could immediately make it mandatory to have all brakes examined monthly. If we know that of five thousand accidents, four thousand came from failure to give, or observe, signals, we would make the law more severe on violations. If we proved that any larger percentage of accidents involved trucks, or taxicabs, than the percentage of such vehicles bore to the whole number of vehicles, we could insist on higher standards of operation by such drivers.

"Here is a great chance for some institution with the money and the time to gather and work out the results from such statistics. And as a very large proportion of accidents involve children, on which the state spends much money to turn them into good citizens, it seems reasonable to suggest it as a Federal or a State ac-

Dropping Names of Subscribers.

We try hard not to lose subscribers, and do our best not to have a name dropped, by sending each person a notice from two three weeks before the subscription expires, but it appears that these notices, in many cases, are not observed. Besides, we always try to have an understandable date on the label of the paper, showing the time of expiration.

In spite of these efforts, and notwithstanding all of our past explanations, there are still some who take offense because their paper is "dropped." It is the last thing we want to It is the last thing we want to do, and there is no thought of "not trusting" the subscriber; but, we simply must obey the law relating to subscriptions, and must have a system of treating all alike. Be fair, friends, and see our side of it.

The Bonus, and Taxation.

The soldiers' bonus and taxationor the ultimate cost of the bonus-is pointedly discussed in an editorial in this issue clipped from the Dearborn Independent. It puts a face on the matter-not a new one-not commonly discussed, nor understood-the money-lender getting the most out of it, and the soldier himself, in large measure, taxing himself to ultimately

CONVENTION OF FARMERS.

Big Effort to Consolidate their Various Interests.

The big convention of Farmers' organizations is in progress in Frederick, and about 1000 delegates are in attendance. The new million dollar hotel is naturally the headquarters, but meetings and accommodations are held in various parts of the city. The first public meeting was in the Empire theatre, on Wednesday night, where Gov. Ritchie and J. R. Howard were the principal speakers; also Miss Laura Amos, who spoke on Boys and Girls Club work.

Governor Ritchie in his address,

"It must be the farmer's turn now, It is his right to look to the Legislature of 1924 to give him whatever legislation his needs and interests require, and it is his right to look to the State government to place nothing ahead of helping him solve his problems. To that high purpose, with your cooperation, I pledge all that the State can give."

The Governor also pointed out that the working partnership between the farmers and the official agencies of the State, including the Executive, could not be had unless the farmers should organize so as to develop a Statewide unity of thought and counsel.

"I cannot urge you too strongly,"he said, "to perfect your organizations in every way, to strengthen them and to solidify them until, through them, you are able to evolve, with the agencies of the State, whose duty it is to co-operate with you and help you, the ap-propriate plans to meet all your needs and when that is done, so long as I have influence in public life in Maryland, that influence shall be whole-heartedly behind whatever is thus decided upon as your best interests."

The program on Thursday was very interesting and important, in the Opera House. A message from President Harding to the convention was read and a speech made by H. C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. Also, Dr. H. J. Patterson spoke on a 25-year agricultural program for Maryland and C. C. Gelder, of Princess Anne, Md., on the Maryland Agricultural Corporation. At the armory is an exhibit of every conceivable farm and dairy product raised in Frederick county. Peas, to rule that default has been only potatoes, soap, eggs, butter beets, corn, cheese, fruits pickles and home bottled fruits are included.

Perhaps the most interesting exhibit is the array of goldfish that swim in small and large glass bowls and takns. These fish, gold, black county produces more goldfish than any other part of the United States.

In the corn exhibit section are the traffic experts devise one way street 10 ears of corn that won first prize systems; police chiefs urge more at the International Livestock and rastic laws, and so on.

On the stage of the Armory is an array of rural women's club work. Time, labor and stepsavers are there, as are home hand-made dresses, quilts, foot and table mats, decorations, sweaters, hats and other things. They were made by members of the clubs throughout the State. Of special interest in the women's exhibit are some hats, which were made at a cost of 10 cents, and some dresses made at a cost of a few dollars. It was said the hats cost the purchaser at a store from $8 to $10 and the dresses from $7 to $50.

FRENCH TROOPS ENTER GERMANY

The determination of France to practically go it alone in attempting to force Germany to make good war reparations, is causing worldwide comment and interest. That France is doing this against the protest of her two great allies during the war—England and the United States-greatly complicates the situation, and strains the friendship of these two countries to the limit.

Both of these are acting without any special new friendship for Germany, but because they feel that country is not able to meet the terms imposed on it, and that forcing measures may result in another world-war outbreak, and cause defeat of the very object that France most wants, safety and ultimate fair reparations. Finance and business no doubt has great influence on the nations, all of which are so involved in debt, with the exception of the United States, there seems to be no solution for settlement.

The Belgians are working in harmony with the French, and preparing troops for entry into the German territory likely to be seized, which includes the rich mining district. The probable action of Italy is in doubt. It is said that the object, at present, is merely to take charge of the mines and secure their product, but to fight,

The American forces stationed along the Rhine, have been ordered home. As the force is only about 1200 men, it is not important from a war standpoint, but the act may serve as showing the displeasure of the U. S., with the French aggressiveness.

The entry of French and Belgian troops into the Ruhr section of Germany seems to be in accord with treaty provisions, the only doubt being as to the extent of actual default in making reparation settlements under the treaty. France decides that the default has been serious, while England and the United States seem partial, and with some justification. The troops are held to be sent only for protection of French workers, and not for the subjugation of the country, or the permanent acquirement of territory.

The French forces are meeting with no armed opposition, German citizens taking but little account of them, while government officials are making quiet resistance.

Carroll County Society of Baltimore.

The fourth annual banquet of the Carroll County Society of Baltimore City, will be need at the Emerson Horiday evening, January 19, at 7 require prompt attendance.

The program promises to be the most interesting that the Society has ever had. Among the speakers of note will be one of national interest: Hon. Albert Johnson, member of Congress from the State of Washington, a soldier and a newspaper editor, who has views of Immigration and Patriotism, that will be of interest to us all. Joseph D. Brooks, attorney and editor, of Westminster, who will speak on Carroll County. Lafayette Temple, of Baltimore, with his unmatchable stories, will make you glad that you attended. We will also have with us the famous Westminster quartette. John Bohl's orchestra, and of course many other attractive features, including a very enticing menu.

It is the wish of our Society to have every one interested in Carroll County present at this banquet, no matter where he or she lives. tendance is not limited to members and dress will be informal. The cost will be $3.00 per plate. For tickets, address Willis A. Myers, Sec'y, 10 E. Favette St.

EACH FAIR GETS $2727.

The Amount to be Expended only for Premiums.

Each of the eleven Fair Associations of the state will receive slightly more than $2,727 as its portion of the $30,000 fund to be divided among the Fairs of the State.

The fund is made available through contributions of the race tracks of Maryland. Action to distribute the $30,000 equally among the eleven fairs of Maryland was taken Thursday at the annual meeting of the Maryland Association of Agricultural Fairs held in Baltimore, when the Association was the guest of the Pocomoke Fair.

The money derived from the race tracks, it was decided at Thursday's meeting, should be expended only for premiums for agricultural exhibits and it was required that each association shall file a sworn statement as to what use is made of the funds. It is proposed, so far as possible, to standardize the premiums.

Afraid of Cold.

The question of whether people are more afraid of winter than they used to be is being debated with the enthusiasm which only persons of long experience can put into such arguments. Elderly residents who recall the meager heating facilities in pioneer homes and compare them with the heating systems now in use, contend that people are now afraid of the cold—or at least that they have spent a good deal of money and ingenuity in protecting themselves from the rigors of winters, which according to common belief, are not nearly so severe as winters once were. Certainly the over-heated room has come to stay, and with it has come a winter health problem which did not bother the pioneer, who spent most of his day in the open and lived in a house in which a lone fireplace did its best to warm the drafts that found their way in through cracks and chinks in the cabin. In giving some advice about winter weather, one of our local doctors observe among other things that "overheated dry air lowers the resistance of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat, the body's natural defense against colds."

It is the doctor's belief that the amount of winter disease could be reduced 20 to 30 percent. by observance of a few simple precautions, such as proper ventilation and due regard for the fact that a person with a cold is likely, if he is not careful, to pass it on to many other persons.—Ellicott

Spring Sale Advertising.

Our prices for advertising, posters and cards, for Spring sales, will be the same as last year. We will again use the yellow and white posters, with red border, and the assorted color sale cards. The cost will of course vary according to the space required and time taken.

There can be no such thing as a fixed charge for all sales, but all are charged for in the same proportion, depending on the amount of work to be done. The best sale advertising is newspaper advertising, but cards and posters are worth their cost. Record's service for your sale.

The Price-Cutting Game.

The following, from the Standard Oil Magazine, while using some rather blunt English, has a lot of sense in it, and is worth thoughtful consideration by those the article may "fit."

"The price cutter is worse than a criminal. He is a fool. He not only pulls down the standard of his goods, he not only pulls down his competitors; he pulls down himself and his whole trade. He scuttles the ship in which he himself is afloat.

Nothing is so easy as to cut prices; and nothing is so hard as to get them back when once they have been pulled

Who gets the benefit of price-cutting? Nobody. The man who sells makes no profit; and the man who buys soon finds himself getting an inferior article.

No manufacturer can permanently keep up the standard of his goods if the price is persistently cut. Pretty soon he is compelled to use cheaper materials, and to cut down the wages of his workers.

a salesman. He admits he has been defeated according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules of business.

He admits he cannot win by fighting fairly. He brands himself a hitter below the belt. If the business world were dominated by price cutters, there would be no business at all. Price cutting, in fact, is not business any more than smallpox is health."

OKLAHOMA HAS BIG INAUGURAL

Cowboy Exhibitions and Barbecues Among the Attractions.

Oklahoma indulged in a three-day inauguration program, this week, celebrating the beginning of the term of Governor Jack Walton. The event was without a parallel in American history, as restraint was practically unconfined, except to actual law violation. The State House was turned into an immense dance hall, on all floors, and the whole city was open for frolics where bands, and all sorts of noises and stunts vied with each other in producing an Oklahoma "good time."

The inaugural itself was the simplest part of the program. The Governor's message dealt in moderation with the planks of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League platform. It did not advocate State ownership of flour mills or elevators or public utilities. It asked for rehabilition of the bank guaranty fund and the distribution of the people's money that it may serve the people. It asked for free textbooks, women's rights, better highways and a petroleum bureau.

Teams of oxen driven through the streets, painted and blanketed indians, cowboys and range riders, ranchers, industrial laborers and business men, all mixed themselves together, determined to make the event and the big feast, a success.

Meat by tons, all kinds, was barbecued over glowing coals in a mile of trenches; buffalo, bear, antelope, beef, pork, mutton, chicken, goose, duck, opossum, coon, rabbit and squirrel, made up the assortment, enough to feed 200,000 people. Coffee made in two immense urns, both of 10,000 gallons capacity, and bread was consumed by hundreds of thousands of loaves.

Coue, on Auto-suggestion.

Emile Coue, French scientist, has attracted much attention through his book, "Self-mastery through Autosuggestion." Simply stated Mr. Coue, believes in the influence of the mind over bodily ills; that it is possible to think one's self into an illness; and through the same process to cause illness to disappear.

He says the imagination can be so trained and controlled as to cure many physical and mental ills, requiring only proper concentration; just think a pain is going, and little by little it will be felt to disappear.

Do not spend your time in thinking of illness you might have, for if you have no real ones you will create artificial ones. Every one of our thoughts, good or bad, becomes concrete, materializes and becomes, in short, a reality.

Dr. Charles E. Sajous, professor at the University of Pennsylvania, in by Emile Coue, says; "Much stress is laid today by medical men on the influence of the mind over the conditions of the body. Psychotherapy is the name given by the profession to that treatment. "It is futile to pretend or believe that where tissue is extensively disarranged, and particularly where pathogenic organism are causing local or general disturbance that psychotherapy will do anything more than be a source of encouragement to the patient by eliminating a factor which tends to compromise recovery, mainly undue anxiety concerning the final re-

"But such teachings as Coue's become dangerous to the community when it is claimed that psychotherapic treatment can influence all disorders. They tend to delay timely study of the case and thus the taking of necessary active measures to eliminate the cause of the disorder where bacterial origin is involved or to cure other pathological states that are in no way dependent upon or influenced by the will."

A narrow escape from a serious fire was made at the Wm. G. Fair farm, near Taneytown, about 3 o'clock Thursday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. "Flu" Epidemic in State.

The spread of influenza in the state has been pronounced enough to be called an "epidemic." State health officials profess no alarm, although they urge the importance of taking precautions, chiefly avoiding wet feet and badly ventilated places. Cleanliness in general is regarded as a good way to fight the disease, which so far appears to be in a mild form. Clear cold weather, and keeping well clad and shod, are emphasized as import-

FARMERS ARE BLAMED.

Failure to Adopt Modern Methods: Severely Scored.

A chart has been issued by a committee of the University of Maryland, Agricultural Extension service, showing the practices at present in use by Maryland farmers, and some proposed remedies as to production and marketing. To a large extent farmers are blamed for their failures; if not for ignorance, then for lack of co-operation and neglect in adopting improved methods, according to a review of the report in The Sun, as follows;

"The report of the committee is in the form of a chart showing in parallel columns the present practices in marketing and suggested remedies. The chart can be obtained from the secretary of the Maryland Agricultural Society or from the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Baltimore, which co-operated with the committee on extension service of the University of Maryland in making the survey.

In the column showing present practices of farmers most of the faults apparently are due to their un-intelligent action. Most of these de-fects can be remedied with little application of additional capital, with practically no additional physical labor, but simply by a better understand-ing of the elements of farming.

The defects, due to ignorance or carelessness, may be divided into four classifications; Failure to select proper seeds, stocks or eggs from which to propagate, failure to give proper attention to raising farm products, failure to pack intelligently, and ignorance of market conditions as they vary from day to day.

Faults in handling wheat are given as follows: Sowing of unclean seed, too early sowing resulting in injury from fly, leaving harvested wheat standing in the field too long, failing to clean wheat properly and holding wheat in storage too long without proper treatment. To remedy these faults requires no additional capital and practically no additional labor. Correction of the defects would result in larger and bet-The advantage to the customer would be greater in other products of the farm, such as fruits, eggs and

The consumer pays the cost of production of all that is thrown into the discard, for this charge simply is added to the prices of the goods that are sold. The farmer does not benefit, for he receives lower prices.

The farmer is blamed for failure to feed stock properly, for feeding and shipping low-grade stock, lack of grading and standardization, lack of purebred sires, selling to local buyers, shipping in less than carload lots."

A copy of this chart can be examined at The Record office. In fact, it is suggested by the committee preparing it, that it be criticised, and other views be given, looking to the preparation of another and more complete. survey, later.

Better Than Promised.

The tendency of mankind is to exaggerate. The man who wants to make a sale, the mechanic in charge of a job, the promoter of new enterprises, the firm that wants to impress a customer, the man who seeks a position, is apt to over-describe the article he has to dispose of. This is considered good salesmanship, and looks only to the present successful landing of the one thing.

Promises have a way of coming back to roost, at their home. The man who buys an unsatisfactory article, on a glowing description, or is led into an investment on promises that did not materialize, does not go to these same sources for future to being a pawnbroker, to being a transactions. So, as it is part of sound business permanency that confidence be maintained between man and man, it is greatly better that the one with a sale to make, or a contract to fill, should do better than he promised, even should he not gain a reputation for brilliant performances at the expense of ultimate disappointments.

There are men who undertake all the work that offers itself, on promises of fulfilment by certain specified times, who must know at the time of taking the contract that fulfilment, on time, is an impossibility. There are others who make promotive guarantees, who know at the time that there is an element of doubt in the transaction that party of the second part is not fully informed of. There are still others who just manage to get by in their promises by so scant a margin that their credit for reliability is strained.

Doing better than is promised is the safest way. Iti s the way that builds a business, or reputation, on the soundest of foundations that stand best when men are seeking reliabilitv. first of all-and some are always seeking just that. The difference between the reliable and the unreliable, is more than is commonly estimated; and it must be acknowledged that there is too much persistent seeking for the impossible, that leads others to fall into the bad habit of trying to accommodate the seeking.

Anything that is promised should be delivered, according to promise. Explanations and excuses made afterwards, that should have been made before, do not explain, in any satisfactory manner. Any contract entered into, even in good faith, that turns out badly, should be made good by the contractor, without quibbling or evasion. It is better to lose, than to make the innocent lose. Giving more than promised, rather than less, always pays in the end. It pays not only in a business way, but in strong friendships, and in the general reputation for dependability that a man carries with him through life, and leaves as a legacy to posterity after he passes on. The trimmer, the corner cutter, the one who just slips through, the smart dealer, the word splitter, is very far from being the man whose "word is his bond."

Radicals and Their Special Interests.

If the "radicals" in the next Senate -Wheeler, of Montana; Norris and Howell, of Nebraska; Brookhart, of Iowa; Frazier, of North Dakota; Shipstead, of Minnesota; La Follette, of Wisconsin, and others, and perhaps Ferris, of Michigan, and Copeland, of New York, can make crooked ways straight, and all wrong govenmental policies right, these gentlemen will fill a long-felt want, and should be given full rein to at least say what they want, out in the open.

Running for office before the people, then filling that office after it is once secured, are two very different things. The people, before election, will listen to, and be influenced by, almost any line of plausible talk; but after elec-

We suspect that the "radicals," while excoriating capital and special privileges, are merely agents for other special privileges. Everybody wants "the government" to help them conduct their business, these days. Senator Williams, of Mississippi, said, the other day, in speaking against the Norris warehouse bill, said;

"I think of all the bad things I know of a Ship Subsidy bill is about the worst, and when I see a man who pretends to belong to the holy, sacred ew party, which is standing for special privileges to none and equal op-portunities to all, and find him adocating a bill even worse than the Ship Subsidy while he is opposing the Ship Subsidy on the ground that it is a special privilege and a taxation of equal opportunity, I find myself in an wful sort of a fix.

The old Ocala platform which the Populist party adopted 30 years ago in this country was an angel of light in comparison with the Norris bill. After nearly 30 years of public service I have the honor to say that I still believe that the best government in the world is the government which a man exercises over himself. I still have the honor to believe, with Thomas Jefferson, and even George Washington, that the power of government over the individual and over business ought to be restricted; and I still believe with Thomas Jefferson-not to the extent that he went, but to some extent, at any rate—that the least governed people is the best governed people. Government was not intended to be you and me. Government was intended to restrain you and me from transgressing against one another. Government was not intended to carry on the business of a nation. Government was to see to it that in carrying on the business of a nation, justice and fair dealing and honor were maintained. I say honor, although, so far as I know, the idea that honor should be maintained in private business has never been suggested as a question of Government regulation, but I believe

But to prostitute the Government commission merchant, to being an elevator owner or elevator seller or ele vator warehouseman is a totally dif-ferent thing. So far as I am con-cerned, I would just as soon live in Prussia as to live in any other country, whether my own or any other, that undertook to say that the Gov-ernment had the right to carry on with me every sort of business."

MOTHER.

By J. Thomas Wilhide. It is the privilege and birthright of every normal woman to be a sweetheart and wife, but to be a mother is the most wonderful, precious and highest gift of an All-Wise Creator,

The Nation is composed of individuals. The individuals compose the home life. The National life can be no purer, nobler, more patriotic and spiritual, than the home life of the people.

The home life of the people, on the whole, is no better than the individual life and character of the Mother.

Tell me the talk, walk and company, of the Mother, and I will tell you the character and practice of the children, the dependability of the manhood, and the hope of the Nation. Water never rises above its level.

The youth makes the man, the child the youth, the infant makes the child, and the Mother the infant, that makes the man—that makes the Nation's weal or woe.

It takes years of teaching, study and practice to fit and qualify men for the highest efficiency in the trades professions, arts, sciences and various calling in life.

They must have correct knowledge men and things, and understand the laws governing their respective vocations, to make a success, and be uplifters of men and Nations or commonwealth builders.

How vastly more important, then, that real practical, wise, sane, common sense, natural and intelligent teaching or instruction be given to the coming Mothers and Fathers, for home making and Nation building, that the coming generation may be better than the past?

Today, if you mention the subject of Fatherbood to a company of young men, or of Motherhood to a bevy of young women in their teen age, and carefully watch the lights and shadows on their faces; to say nothing of what you may hear, we are compelled to conclude, few are thinking about, and seriously impressed with their coming prospective, high and honorable calling, purity of association; and by constructive thought, fitting themselves physically, mentally, morally and spiritually for the first and best that can come to any man and woman-parentage.

This training and fitness can only be taught in its best and purest form, in the quiet and sacredness of the home by the Mothers, during the suggestive life of the child and youth.

The Mother who fails to teach her children to know themselves, their sex-nature, and Divine purpose in purity and in love, and the power and purpose of reproduction, not only "misses the mark," but sends their innocent and unsuspecting loved ones. but into a lecherous world, unguarded from without, and unprotected from within. Innocency and ignorance of our natural desires is no safeguard or protection from the subtle wiles of the procuress and seducer. The proof of all this is apparent in the many splendid wrecks of humanity, who are uselessly drifting down the stream of time, a curse to themselves, a menace to society and a dishonor to the home, because, Mother-Father never told me.

We must not forget the child is the victim of suggestion. For the firsttion the "show me" time comes, not five or seven years it is absolutely un- money which the government certi-

The Bonus and Taxation.

One fact concerning the soldiers' bonus has never been disputed; the money lenders will get more than will the soldiers. That is a fact which should be kept to the front of the discussion. Amid all the propaganda, ranging from the variest melodrama to the stern assertion that a certain organization has demanded the bonus and is going to get it if for no other reason than to prove its power with the United States Government, amid all the drifting talk for the bonus and against it, let the fact stand out and let the soldiers themselves face it.

The whole bonus question has fallen into an unfortunate posture. What should have come, if it had come at all, as a gift from the people, a national gesture of gratitude, has become instead a demand, and, much worse than that, a political football. The whole bonus aspect of the matter has been wiped out. The spirit of generosity and gratitude has been completely eliminated. The question has descended to the region of cold finance, and the ugly fact confronts us that whatever sum may be given to the soldiers, a much larger sum will be given the money brokers.

If the question should be put up to the service men in this form: Are you in favor of giving the money brokers another big chunk of war profits in the shape of a bonus larger than Congress would give you? -would the soldiers vote for it? It is well understood that one of the grievances the returned soldier has against the whole business of which he was a part, is that while he was giving himself to the army, the profiteers at home were looting the country. The expression of this grievance is justified. No more hideous form of gain exists than that which coins the war distresses of a nation. Not the soldier only, but the nation joins in the condemnation of it. Yet, it is to these money brokers, the chief beneficiaries of the war, that the United States Government will have to go to borrow money for the bonus, and in borrowing will agree to a rate of interest which will certainly give the brokers about 25 percent more than the soldiers would receive.

In one of the states, a bonus was given the soldiers of that state. The sum given was $30,000,000. The sum which the money brokers will eventually collect will be $57,000,000. It will cost the soldiers resident in that state as taxpayers just $87,000,000 to handle $30,000,000 in very small driblets of dollars per man.

There ought to be some expression of opinion on this aspect of the question from the prospective beneficiaries of the bonus. They represent the generation which will be paying the bulk of the taxes during the life of the loan. For the next 30 to 50 years, the soldiers who may receive the bonus will be paying it back-nearly double. And the interests to whom they will be paying will be the same interests that have already swamped the world by their unholy profits.

Do the soldiers vote to give them another big slice of war swag? The likely thing is that, from this point of view, the soldier would vote

This does not necessarily dispose of the bonus. Does young America as represented in the disbanded legions have no suggestions to offer which would eliminate the money brokers? Does the young soldier relish the spectacle of his Government being compelled to go down to the money stiff rate of interest for the very

the soldier, honestly witnessing such spectacle, feel that it is just right? Does it not strike him as being wrong somewhere, even though he may not be able to say just where it is wrong?

Does he think he is justified in forcing the government to do that, if there is another way?

Does he not think that one of the greatest services the legions can render the country is to set its multitude tion from bondage to the masters of weet memory always.

Tho' her boys and her lassies may roam far and wide;
Her words, her counsel, her loving caresses are rooted to stay, Blessed memory of Mother, dear Mother, in our heart, will ever abide.

money? Would it not be the winning of another great war, the conquest of the cause of all wars, if the legions could restore to the United States Government control over its own money? Would it not be the winning Government control over its own money?

It is a question which will repay the serious thought of every man who saw service in the army. Here, in connection with the bonus discussion, is another service that may be rendered the country. Let the legions ponder it .- Dearborn Independent.

CHINA DEMANDS GOOD ROADS

Oriental Country Awakes to the Necessity of Immediate Development of Its Highways,

A plea for good roads as a necessity for the proper development of China is made by the Oriental Motor of Shanghai, which began publication a year ago to encourage interest in motor use. Asking where the United States would have been if the good roads movement had not been earnestly supported throughout the country, the editor says:

"Yet at this time of greatest development in the making of roads China lies dormant. If any nation in the world needs roads, good roads and national highways, it is China. Means of communication in the country are inadequate and medieval, transcontinental travel is only possible by water at the rim of the country, while the great heart of the nation is still inaccessible to any mode of transportation except the most primitive.

"China can never become a nation until her roads are developed. With them the penetration of the interior, both for commerce and pleasure, would mean a few hours or a few days by motor. The people of the interior would be brought into touch daily with motors and motorists from all sections of the nation. They would begin to realize that there are parts of the country other than their own province and city, and the great welding influence which would make China a nation united would begin."-New York Times.

Concerning Moonlight.

It is probable that few persons are aware of the fact that the full moon gives several times more than twice the light of the half moon. They may be still more surprised to learn that the ratio is approximately as nine to

Stebbins and Brown, taking advan tage of the extreme sensitiveness to light of a selenium cell, measured the amount of light coming from the moon at different phases, with the result above mentioned. The reason for the remarkable difference shown is to be found in the varying angles of reflection presented by the roughened surfaces of our satellite to the sun. The moon is brighter between first quarter and full than between full and last quarter. The cause of this is evident in the more highly reflective character of that part of the moon that lies west of its meridian.

Early Canadian Insurrection.

In the latter part of 1837 there was an insurrection in Canada. A portion of the people, dissatisfied with the British government, broke out in revolt, and attempted to establish their independence.

The insurgents found much sympa thy and encouragement in the United States. Seven hundred men from New York seized and fortified Navy island, in the Niagara river. The loyalists of Canada attempted to capture the place, but failed. They succeeded, however, in firing the Caroline, the supply ship of the adventurers, cut her moorings and sent the burning vessel over Niagara falls.

President Van Buren issued a proc lamation of neutrality, forbidding interference with the affairs of Canada. The New York insurgents on Navy island were obliged to surrender, and order was restored.

Bright Idea. The performance at a crowded pic. ture theater had just concluded. Round the exits there was the usual crush to get outside. "This crush is a nulsance," complained a disheartened one, sinking into a seat beside a man who had retained his place to wait until the press

"It is," assented the comfortable one. 'If only everybody would do like mesit still until all the others had got out -there wouldn't be a crush at all."

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

This is a pleasant, safe and reliable medicine for coughs and colds. It has been in use for many years and is held in high esteem in those households where its good qualities are best known. It is a favorite with mothers barons and beg for money, paying a of young children, as it contains no opium or other harmful drug. Try it when you have need of such a remedy

KEYMAR.

Mr. Frederick Mehring died Jan. 9, 1923, at Myrtle Hill Home, Bruceville. He spent his entire life at the home where he was born and died. He was a successful business man and much loved and respected by his friends. The community has lost one of its greatest and best men. Locally, he was always loyal in helping to promote the best interests of the community, and was a liberal contributor of his means in many directions.

He is survived by one sister and one brother, Miss Maggie Mehring, at home, and Luther Mehring, of Indianapolis, Ind. Four nephews and two nicces, Wm. Mehring, of Keymar; Upton Mehring, Rocky Ridge; George Mehring, Cal., and Orval Mehring, In-dianapolis, Ind.; Miss Anna Mehring, Keymar, and Mrs. Ada (Mehring) Schrum, Crawfordsville, Ind. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor Rev. R. S. Patterson, as-sisted by Rev. L. B. Hafer, of Taneytown. Interment at Mt. Zion, on Thursday, January 11th. Mrs. S. R. Waybright, near Frank-lin school house, spent Friday with Mrs. W. F. Cover.

Miss Reda Leakins, accompanied by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Fogle, of Walkersville, spent Sunday at George Harman's, where the former's grandmother, Mrs. Clabaugh is visiting, and has been ill with pneumonia, but is improving.

Charles Ambrose, of Thurmont, is spending some time with his aunt, Mrs. M. W. Bell.

We are glad to say the many who were on the sick list with colds are Surely Qualified.

Recently a well-known western senator was importuned by a constituent to secure for him a place in the diplematic service, and inasmuch as the applicant had rendered signal service to the senator in several of his campaigns, the request received more than passing attention. The lawmaker wrote to his constituent stating that it would be necessary for him to set forth in writing his qualifications for the post in order that the same might be filed with the State department, and this is how one part of the letter read: "I speak the language of the country, I am familiar with the customs of the people and, in addition to that, I occasionally wear

Letters as Big as Lots.

There are odd and interesting real estate signs in various parts of the country, and California claims to have one of the largest if not the oddest. On a steep hillside in the southern part of the state is a huge outdoor signboard containing but one word-"LOTS." Each of the letters in this sign is 75 feet high and 20 feet wide. It can be seen and read for miles from one of the leading boulevards. At a distance the sign appears to be built of concrete, but a "close-up" shows that the owner gathered together hundreds of parts of packing boxes and forming them into letters painted them white. It is easily the most conspicuous and distinctive advertising sign in the West.

His Lingual Agility. "The presiding elder, fat as he is, is right agile on his conversational feet, as it were," admitted Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Tuther day he took dinner at our house, and afterwards rambled out onto the porch and decomposed himself in a rocking chair to have a nap. His head was close to the porch rail and his hat was off. Bimeby, one of the mules sa'ntered up. rotched out and got a mouffle of his hair, gave a jerk, drug the elder half way over the rail, and then r'ared back and turned loose a long and loud bray. The elder woke with a leap, and yelled, "Tobias, Sanballat and the Devil!" which I reckon fitted the case about as well as any anecdote I ever listened to."-Kansas City Star.

MR. JOHN W. MERING.

Died at Great Bend, Kansas, Jan. 10, 1923, John W. Mering, son of the late George T. Mering and Clementine Mering.

He leaves a wife, who was Ada Deleplaine, of Taneytown, Md., one son and daughter at home, one son in Kansas City, Mo.; one brother, H. B. Mering, and two sisters Misses Ida and Bessie, of Uniontown, Md.

MR. FREDERICK MEHRING.

Mr. Frederick Mehring, one of the best known residents of Carroll county, died at his home in Bruceville, on nesday morning, Jan. 9, 1923, aged 83 years, 2 months, 1 day. Mr. Mehring had long been in failing health, and death was largely due to natural decline in physical strength.

For many years Mr. Mehring conducted a fertilizer business on a large scale, at Bruceville, and always enjoyed a fine reputation for "square dealing" in all of his transactions. He was a director of the First National Bank, of Westminster, for many years, and was a man judgment in financial affairs, and in public matters generally. He was unmarried, and lived quietly in Bruceville all of his life.

Mr. Mehring was a prominent member of Mt. Zion (Haugh's) Lutheran Church. He and his sister, Miss Maggie, were liberal financial supporters of Lutheran institutions, and their benefactions were extended to numerous non-denominational objects, notably the cause of Temperance and Sabbath observance.

He is survived by one sister, Miss Maggie, with whom he lived, and by one brother, Luther Mehring, of In-dianapolis. Funeral services were held at his late home at one o'clock, on Thursday, by his pastor, Rev. R. Patterson, and by Rev. L. B. Hafer of Taneytown. (See Keymar corres-

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, our Brother E. Garfield Rout, therefore be it Resolved, That we bow in humble sub-mission to His will who doeth all things

OUTLAWS DROPPED TO DEATH

Mexican Authorities Alleged to Have Devised Unique Punishment for Murderers and Robbers.

Thrilling stories of his experiences with Mexican bandits are told by E. W. Hammond, who has charge of land matters in Mexico for the Humble Oil and Refining company. He has been traveling through the wilds of that country for many years and has come into close contact with many bands of brigands. On several occasions he was captured by outlaws and his life threatened but he always managed to come through unscathed.

One of his interesting statements a few days ago was that the government authorities of the Tampico district have adopted a new method of putting bandits and revolutionists to death. Instead of standing the condemned men in front of a firing squad, as has been the usual practice, the prisoner is tied to an airplane and taken to an altitude of 4,000 or 5,000 feet and there the rope is cut and the man falls to his death. It is asserted that this unusual form of meting out the death penalty has thrown terror into the hearts of the criminal element and that there has been a very noticeable decrease of murders and robberies since the aerial route of dealing out death was adopted.

DUCKS KILLED BY OIL WASTE

Polluted Waters, It Is Declared, Have Destroyed Thousands of the Finest Game Birds.

The destruction of thousands of game birds each season by their alighting in oil-polluted waters has been before the attention of sportsmen for some time, and many efforts have been made to remedy conditions in different sections of the country. A bulletin of the American Game Protective association says that if the oil-burning transatlantic and coastwise steamers would take the same view of the matter as the Northern Pacific railway we would have little cause to worry about the oil menace on tidal waters.

For years many birds have been killed by the oil waste at a roundhouse pump of the Northern Pacific system at Las Vegas, Nev. The United States bureau of biological survey took the matter up with the company and has been advised that conditions will be remedied immediately. The railroad company is installing an oil-recovery plant at considerable cost, which will not only eliminate the menace to water fowl, but will prove a source of revenue to the company in utilizing materials that up to this time have gone to waste.

"Plastic Wood" Is New Product. A new product, made by colloidal processes and just put on the English market, is announced by the Chemical Age. The interesting thing about this product is that it may be used to repair broken or worn wooden articles. A pattern is made of the article and the plastic wood is filled into the mold and allowed to set hard. This takes but a few hours, and extremely hard and possessed of all the characteristics of wood except that it will not absorb moisture as wood does. The hard plastic wood can be worked with the usual carpenter tools, and nails, screws, etc., can be driven into it without fear of splitting.

Man of Her Own.

It was a conversation on the 'bus. "Yes, she's a good girl, satisfied to work hard as long as she gets one afternoon off a week. But last week she changed her day. It was a little awkward for me, but I didn't like to refuse her.

"She had planned to get married on her afternoon off, but she had had a special delivery letter from her young man telling her he couldn't make it and change it to Sunday. So she took Sunday off.

"Back again? Oh, yes, she's back. And they've got it fixed now so they both get off at the same time. She says it's so much nicer to have a man of her own when she goes out than to go out with the other girls."-Chicago Journal.

Urge Adoption of Metric System. In a report made to the house of representatives by the committee on coinage, weights and measures, which favored the adoption of the metric system by the government of the United States, it was pointed out that, according to estimate made by the bureau of education and others, two-thirds of a year would be saved by the adoption of the metric arithmetic. It is also averred as a matter of evidence that the metric system and its application to the solution of problems may be learned in one-tenth of the time required for gaining equal facility in the use of the English system of weights and measures.-Washington Star.

URGES NECESSITY OF ZONING

Kansas City Newspaper, in Strong Appeal, Pleads for Passage of Law Commanding It.

Evidence that zoning has come to be an accepted necessity in American cities is found in the act of the Department of Commerce, division of building and housing, preparing a standard law to be used in the framing of state statutes. Such statutes or enabling acts are necessary in practically all cases of zoning, since towns and cities do not themselves possess the power to set aside districts or zones for the purpose of maintaining property values and encouraging appropriate building. The necessary authority is found in the police power of the state, and a zoning statute is brought within this power on the ground that zoning has to do with the promotion of "health, safety, morals or the general welfare."

It has not been difficult to establish the legal basis of zoning, but improper framing of some measures dealing with the subject has led to trouble when there came to be appeals to the courts. The model statute provided by the building and housing division ought, therefore, to be of highly valuable service and contribute to the enactment of uniform zoning laws in the various states. Missouri already has zoning statutes, but they confer power only on the larger cities.-Kansas City

BEFORE STARTING TO BUILD

Expert of Federal Department of Commerce Gives Some Good Advice on the Subject.

Nearly every American family should plan to own a home, but the family should first know how to finance a home, in the opinion of Dr. John M. Gries, chief of the building and housing division of the Department of Commerce.

Therefore, as the chief contribution of the Department of Commerce to the nation-wide "Better Homes" week, Doctor Gries gave advice to the American people on "how to finance a

Be sure and ask yourself how much you can afford.

Kansas Builds Floral Roads.

Floral highways are being established in Kansas to the memory of the soldiers who laid down their lives in the Spanish-American war. The memorial highways will be lined on each side with flowers of great range of size and colors, and those who pass and repass along the roads will have brilliant and fragrant reminders that republics are not ungrateful. The boy scouts of the state will plant the seeds. They will take packages of them on every hike and plant them along the roadsides. Preference will be given to flowers that will reseed themselves, so the great bulk of the initial work will not have to be repeated. Of course some of the seed will fall on unfriendly soil, and in such cases the boy scouts will repeat the sowing. Patrols will be organized to inspect the floral lines and keep them in seed.

In the development of private gardens it frequently happens that the construction of drives and walks, of walls, terraces, steps and balustrades, of fountains, rills and swimming pools, game courts and other recreational areas; also belvederes or casinos will go on simultaneously with the erection of the residence and related buildings.

It is desirable and strongly advisable in such cases, that the owner, architect and landscape designer have early conferences on the ground so that the resulting work may be satisfying and coherent. A house and its gardens should be suitably married, and both should fit naturally into the neighborhood, free from discordant contrasts or ostentation.

Concentrate on Home.

An American editor says: "All effort, all reasonable expenditure, all devotion and loyalty should be concentrated on making the home worthy of every good instinct, every ambition, every justifiable form of family pride.

So to Speak. An author, paying his first visit to married acquaintance, asked the name of a sprightly little girl whose winning ways had attracted his attention. "We call her Elia," said the child's mother.

the lady, "her name is Cornelia, but It's easier to call her Elia." "I see," the caller rejoined. "It is the painless extraction of a corn!"

MORE OR LESS

Campbell Foster was once addressing a jury and was much annoyed by Digby Seymour's carrying on a conversation the while.

Scottish Barnyard Freak. A cock's egg is certainly a freak of nature, yet an authentic report from Forfar, Scotland, states there is a Sussex-Leghorn cock that has taken to imitating his sisters and wives and laid some diminutive eggs. It may be nature has been a little uncertain as to the bird's sex and endowed it with more of the female than the male make-up in its anatomy. The owner was certainly puzzled at first to explain whence came the little eggs, perfect in shape and form but without yolk. So the rooster was isolated and in the privacy of its own coop it continued to produce eggs. This bird has certainly something to crow over, for it is not every cock that can lay an egg, even of bantam size.

WHY MEN BECOME CANNIBALS

Writer Asserts Cause Is Natural Craving for Meat Where There is a Scant Supply.

Why does man became a cannibal? Mr. W. D. M. Bell, a contributor to "Country Life," thinks that the cause is constant craving for meat in a land where mostly grain abounds. He tells some interesting things about the extraordinary diet of the natives of the Bahr Aouk in Africa.

When they inhabit a stockless area, he says, they go for months without flesh, except of course for an occasional rat, mongoose or bird. In those circumstances the craving for meat naturally becomes intense and in my opinion is the cause of cannibalism.

When the people suddenly have almost unlimited meat, as they do have when they kill an elephant or a hippopotamus, they simply gorge themselves. A man will eat from fifteen to twenty pounds in twenty-four hours. All night long he will eat and doze and doze again. As a result his skin turns a peculiar dull color, and his eyes become yellow. On the third day he has completely recovered his natural appearance and is again full of energy. In a short time he wants his grain food again and if he has the choice will eat a large portion of grain to a small portion of meat.

If, as with the elephant, there is much fat with the meat, the natives are likely to become extremely fit on that diet. For example, for sixtythree days of consecutive marching a kilangozi, or head porter, of mine who was of slight build carried his mat, his blanket, fifteen pounds of rations and a tusk that weighed one hundred and forty-eight pounds! The shortest day was five hours, and some days were very long indeed. For rations throughout the march he had two pounds of native grain every day and as much meat and elephant fat as he cared for. His physical condition was magnificent throughout.-From the Youth's Companion.

LAMENTS CHANGE IN FASHION

Captain Dingis Says Paris Dress Craze Has Hit South Sea Island Femininity, Too.

Capt. Charles Dingle of the freighter Bay Port, which arrived in Port Newark from Hawaii and the South Sea islands, brought a dismal tale of the ravages of fashion in those once guileless and innocent regions. It's the Paris-born craze for long skirts, says Cap'n Dingle and his crew, that has sophisticated the spicy isles.

"They're wearin' them straw dresses all right," explained Skip Slattery, first assistant chief engineer of the freighter, "but they're wearin' 'em like a wine bottle useta be-from neck to heels, you might say. Then they got a new-style petticoat made o' moss. Oh, it ain't like what it used Even Lucky Bill Fanning, optimist that he is, joined in the threnody. It was enough to make an old-time sailorman shed tears, he said, to see the girls all wadded up in straw and moss like that. Why, he could remember when putting in at some of those islands was better than a Fourteenth street burlesque, but now it was duller than Teaneck .- New York Tribune.

Loss Would be Irreparable

There is much curlosity and anxiety to know what has become of the famous Codex Sinaiticus, which was, before the Russian revolution, in the Imperial library at Petrograd. This most ancient manuscript of the Bible was discovered in the monastery of St. Catherin, on Mount Sinai, whence its name, and was acquired by Tsar Alexander II in 1869. What has become of this precious document during the Russian revolution?

More than the loss of the jewels of the last Russian dynasty its destruction would be an irreparable act, even though there is another similar document, known as the "Vaticanus," an uncial manuscript of the Fourth century, found by Tischendorf in 1844 in the same monastery.

Economic Error.

New Jersey's forests are being burned up at the rate of 70,000 acres a year, which means not only that her area of growing forests is being reduced annually to that extent, but that land which should become a public asset of great value is being converted into a public liability of unsightly and embarrassing proportions. There are 2,000,000 acres of forest land in New Jersey almost within trucking distance of the greatest lumber market in the world, according to the estimate of the American Forestry association, which offers the opinion that sooner or later the people of the state of New Jersey will awaken to the economic significance of the fact, but that the awakening may come too late.-Thrift Magazine.

When Merchants Coined Own Money. The action of the German government in allowing certain firms to print their own money in small denominations recalls a somewhat similar state of affairs in the early years of George III in England.

In those days the amount of copper coin in circulation was inadequate, and tradesmen all over the country issned tokens of their own which attained almost equal standing with the regal coinage. One manufacturer in Birmingham issued over 9,000,000 pennies and 3,500,000 half-pennies in the course of a few years and the amount of "tokens" in circulation in 1780 outhambered the genuine coinage.

LEARN FACTS ABOUT STEEL

Interesting Discoveries Concerning Most Useful Metal, That Have Recently Been Made.

Very fascinating are the unsolved problems of metallurgy which were discussed at a recent meeting of an institution of civil engineers.

There is a common carbon steel which, when heated to 725 degrees centigrade and quenched in brine bends on becoming cold, 43 degrees, and possesses the hardness number 228 on the Brinnell scale. If heated only ten degrees higher, to 735 degrees, and then quenched and cooled, it bends only 11/2 degrees and its hardness becomes 512. Finally, when the heat is increased another 5 degrees, to 740 degrees, the effect is that the steel will not bend at all and its hardness number rises to 713. All these results are produced by a range of temperature less than that experienced by the air on an ordinary spring day. There is a steel containing 20 per cent of nickel which is almost non-magnetic and has a tenacity of 40 tons per square inch. If immersed in liquid air it becomes strongly magnetic and its tenacity rises to 115 tons. Then, after returning to ordinary temperature, it retains a tenacity of 115 tons.

RELATIVES DIED WITH CUSTER

Many Members of the Famous Soldier's Family Lost Their Lives in the "Massacre."

In the battle of the Little Big Horn, popularly known as the "Custer Massacre," in the government's campaign against the Sioux Indians in the summer of 1876, and in which, besides Gen. George A. Custer, every man in his command lost his life, several near relatives of Custer were among the killed. With Custer in that memorable fight was his brother, Capt. Tom Custer, the only man in the United States army who held two medals for capturing two flags with his own hands in the Civil war. After the battle the Sioux chief, Rain-in-the-Face, made good a previous threat, and accomplished a terrible revenge for an old grievance against Captain Custer by cutting open the breast of the brave young soldier and eating his heart. Calhoun, a brother-in-law of the general, was among the slain, as was Boston Custer, another brother of the general, who was civilian forage master of the Seventh cavalry, and Autie Reed, the general's nephew -a mere boy, who wanted to see something of life in the West, and who had welcomed with joy this opportunity to make the campaign.

Learned Barbarisms.

The use of Greek or Latin roots from which to form new words required by the advance of scientific knowledge, is almost universal among learned men. On the whole the practice is useful, but it can be carried to absurdity. Dr. Brudenell Carter, the English oculist, in one of his books, protests against doctors who air their supposed acquirements by coining horrible verbal compounds that are usually intended to express very simple conditions. I have, he writes, seen dacryocystosyringokatakleisis used to express obstruction of the tear duct, and amphiblestroicitis to express inflammation of the retina of the eye. I once met a country cabinetmaker who built wooden frames, covered with needlework. to protect polished fenders against the feet. He sought a name for his contrivance from the local schoolmaster. who furnished him with antitribospodothecidion and with a literal translation-an against-friction-of-the-ashes receptacle!-Youth's Companion.

Paradise of Departed Heroes. The way in which the departed Scandinavian heroes passed their time in Valhalia, or in the palace of Odin, is described in several places in the

They have every day the pleasure of arming themselves, marshalling themselves in military order, engaging in battle, and being all cut to pieces; but when the stated hour of repast arrives their bodies are reunited, and they return on horseback safe to the hall of banquet, where they feed heartily on the flesh of a boar and drink beer out of the skulls of their enemies, until they are in a state of intoxication. Odin sits by himself at a particular table. The heroes are served by the beautiful virgins named Valkirie, who officiate as their cupbearers. But the pleasures of love do not enter at all into the joys of this extraordinary paradise.

Made No Hit That Night.

A certain actor, who walked across the stage in a street scene of a thirdrate drama, was very fond of telling his friends what he would accomplish when he had a speaking part. No matter how small it was, he would show them what real acting meant.

Eventually his opportunity came.

He was to appear in one of the scenes and say two words-"It is." For three weeks, nightly, before his mirror he rehearsed; trying all sorts of gestures, expressions and tones, until he felt perfect. The eventful night arrived when the curtain was to rise on the new play for the first time, and the actor impatiently awaited his cue. It came.

"And so this is the end?" With his best tragedian air he stalked to the center of the stage and in a voice of thunder cried: "Is it?"

How Jane Taught Jim a Lesson

By JANE OSBORN

Farmanaman

"If you pass up Jim Crane-well, you needn't come to me for sympathy if you never get as good a chance again. That's all," Bruce Borden spoke with the full authority of twenty-two years to his twenty-year-old sister Jane. They were sitting together alone in the Borden living room. Bruce had noticed for the first time that Jane was not wearing her engagement ring, though it had been missing from her finger for a week, and then it had suddenly dawned upon him that he had not seen Prof. James Crane in the Borden home for several days.

Bruce demanded explanations with brotherly exactitude, and Jane had in a manner that Bruce considered much too flip, announced that she had hroken with Jim, and was glad she had done so,

"Sis, you're crazy," Bruce announced, slamming closed the heavy volume he was trying to study. You'd be darned lucky to marry a man like Jim Crane. I guess you don't realize what his standing is. Why, he's barely thirty, and it's generally acknowledged that he knows more about oysters than any man in the country."

"Oysters," gasped Jane. "Don't talk to me about oysters. Who wants to marry an oyster expert?"

"But don't you realize that to have won that reputation Jim has to be one of the best scientists in the country? I guess if you knew how the fellows admire him at college you'd be sorry for what you've done. He's one of the most brilliant members of my fraternity."

ne's a crusty old professor, and as absent-minded as the worst of them," snapped Jane. "That's the trouble. We'd only been engaged two months, and three times in that time Jim forgot to call for me when he had promised to, and once he had tickets for the theater. He got interested in some work in the laboratory, fussing around with his old oysters, and forgot all about me, And once he brought me a loaf of bread instead of a box of flow-His sister had asked him to get the bread, so he had the flowers sent to his sister and handed me the bread.

"Signs of genius, sis; signs of genius," commented Bruce; but Jane was not to be persuaded.

So matters stood between Prof. James Crane and his erstwhile fiancee, Jane Borden. Meanwhile, the professor perceptibly lost weight and became more absent-minded than ever, and Jane was secretly perfectly forlorn. After two weeks of the severed engagement she had reached the point where she assured herself that she did not wish ever to renew it—that was out of the question—but that she would like to be friends. She admitted to herself that she longed for the sight of Jim Crane.

It happened that week that there was an exhibition in town promoted by persons who had interest in seashore property. It was called the "Ocean Front Exhibit." Some interested projector of the affair had dumped a number of admission tickets on the secretary of Bruce's fraternity. Bruce had brought one home for Jane, realizing that Jane's time hung heavily on her hands, and an afternoon spent at any sort of exhibit would be better than time spent mooning at home. Prof. James Crane had wandered into the fraternity house after lectures anu, feeling too distraught for more serious work, accepted a ticket for the exhibit. He didn't really intend to use it himself, but, going to his rooms in his sister's house where he lived, he discovered that his sister had his afternoon's work planned for him.

"It's nurse's day off, and I must do some shopping. Can't you manage to take care of Lucile while I'm gone?"

Lucile was four. Not infrequently she had accompanied her Uncle Jim and Jane Borden on walks and had been the excuse for trips to the zoo and the circus, but Jim did not feel qualified to play nurse girl alone, his task might be less difficult if he took his charge to the exhibit. A bus ride, thrilling for Lucile, brought them to the door of the exhibition hall, and before many minutes had passed Lucile's eyes were agog with admiration of the gay lights and gayly decorated booths. What took her eye from the first was a corner booth set up to advertise a newly opened stretch of seashore. Orchard Beach was as yet a stretch of dune-dotted sandy shore, but its promoters hoped to boost it into prominence among summer resorts. The booth in question consisted of a space 20 feet square filled with white sand from the beach. At the back was a canvas drop painted to resemble the far horizon of ocean and sky and foamy breakers playing on the shore. There was a bit of board walk, a bench and a collection of children's

This looked good to Lucile and she yearned to join the three or four children who were already playing in the Prof. James Crane spied not very far off a booth set up by the state fisheries. There was a special display snowing work in oyster culture. James Crane was interested. He was always interested in oysters. "Suppose you stay here a few minutes, Lucile," he suggested, "and I'll go over to that booth and pretty soon I'll come back and get you." Lucile gladly agreed. The oyster exhibit proved especially interesting, not, of course, that the state fisheries could show James Crane anything about oysters, but he met an ovster specialist there with whom he struck up a lively conversation anent their pet hobby.

Meanwhile Jane Borden had arrived. She looked about but saw nothing that especially interested her. Still there was nothing else to do, so she decided to walk around. She approached the Orchard Beach exhibit and spied Lucile. In a second she had crouched down beside her and was asking her a dozen questions.

"Uncle Jim's gone to look at something and left me here," said Lucile. "He's been gone a long time and maybe he won't come back." As a matter of fact, Uncle Jim had been gone scarcely five minutes.

"It's a perfect shame," exclaimed "He's probably forgotten all about you. You come with me. I'll take you home." And under her breath, she added, "I'll teach Jim a

So Jane Borden departed with Lucile, cautioning her not to dally and not to look around for the missing

Going home to the Crane house, Jane had misgivings. She would, of course, be giving James Crane a scare, and she had no real right to walk off with his niece. Still, she would be teaching him a lesson, and the whole thing gave her an excuse to go to the Crane house.

She found no one but the cook, so she decided to spend the remainder of the afternoon on the grounds of the Crane place, playing with Lucile. But she had only played about 15 minutes when she saw the long shadow of Jim Crane speeding toward her on the grass. She looked up and her eyes met those of her one-time flance.

"I suppose you are perfectly furious with me," she defended, "but really "Furious? Why should I be furious?" questioned the professor.

"For taking Lucile away. It must have given you a dreadful fright, but really you ought to be ashamed for leaving the child there all alone-"

"I knew where she had gone," said Jim beaming. "I had no reason for alarm. I asked the young woman in charge of the booth where the child had gone, and she said with a lady whom Lucile seemed to know-a very pretty lady."

"How could you tell from that?" asked Jane, blushing in spite of her-

"Because you're the only very pretty lady that Lucile and I know," said the absent-minded professor, looking intently into Jane's face. Her eyes fell. She wanted to say, "Don't be ridiculous," but instead she said, "Do you really think so?"

"You know I do," sighed the professor, and Jane sighed.

Then he took her two hands in his and he looked at Jane and Jane looked at him, and it was perfectly obvious to both that their engagement was re-

"Well, I hope I taught you a lesson," Jane said.

"A very useful lesson," agreed the professor. "You have shown me how very much I need a wife to keep track of my affairs. Jane, marry me very And Jane said she would.

Where the Birds Beat Us.

Nothing that man has ever invented can compare with the wonderful flying mechanism which Nature has given to birds. Gulls, in particular, are far ahead of any airplane or glider. Their movements through the air are amazingly graceful and effortless. When a gull starts on its flight, it lifts its wings, thus trapping a volume of air beneath its body. On the downward stroke this air is compressed and forced out, and in its efforts to escape it naturally forces the bird upward and forward. Then, when it has reached a sufficient height, the gull can glide for enormous distances without any effort. In landing, too, birds can achieve what no machine has ever done. They can alight against a vertical cliff, using their wings as brakes and holding on with their specially equipped feet. Compare this with the space However, he consented. General Tendency Today Among Home Builders Is to Build Smaller Homes, and This Design Meets All Demands of Small Family.

Home is the place where those who dwell therein find contentment and enjoyment, rest and inspiration to do the greater things of life.

Home is the place, above all others, where love, sincerity, honesty and good cheer should reign supreme. Home is the place where one's friends may share those joys, and sorrows, too, if they come, and with the intimate members of the family, possess the happiness that is sure to abide

The house is 34 feet 6 inches from front to rear and 31 feet 6 inches wide and designed for the average size lot. It can be built very economically, as the materials and equipment are of standard and regular grade.

MORGAN HAD NOTHING TO SAY

In This Particular Instance Even That Power in Finance Was Not in the Reckoning.

Ever since the elder Morgan dazzled the banking world by putting over the huge merger in steel, the house of Morgan has had the ordinary American banker "buffaloed" into a state of coma. "What does Morgan say?" has been his first eager question as he scans the morning paper and about his last thought at night. One vital reason for having a home is to be able to share it with one's friends, to be able to extend a generous hospitality and good cheer to those with whom we come in contact who are not our immediate family.

The charming bungalow described in this article is designed to fulfill all the requirements we have mentioned. It is a place that anyone would be proud to call home. It is compact, attractive, neat and cozy. The general tendency among home builders today is to build smaller homes. They are easier to live in and easier to take care of. The modern apartment houses have demonstrated the advantages of living in compact quarters. People are building their homes along the same lines. The architect designed this bungalow with that idea in view. It is ideally adopted for the small couple is cozy and compact and easy to take | side:

The floor plan follows the usual interior arrangement of American bungalows. There are five rooms and bath, all of convenient and comfortable size. From the front entrance one enters the living room. It is well lighted and ventilated, having three windows on the front and two on the side. It is 12 feet by 17 feet, and is the largest room in the house. The Spirit of Christian Service.

I. Jesus Dines With a Pharisee (v. 1) Jesus entered freely into the common social customs of the day. We see Him at a wedding, a dinner party, in the home of sickness, and at a funeral. He was truly a man among men. He was unlike John the Baptist in this respect. The Christian's influence is best when mingling with his fellowmen in all right relations and positions in life, even though selfish and evilminded persons are found among them. This does not mean that he should be a partaker of their evil deeds. Jesus in thus moving in all circles of human society showed the divine sympathy. While Jesus was in society he was not of it. So should the Christian be. Jesus was in a company outwardly courteous but inwardly hostile. Doubtless the motive of the invitation was to find an occasion against Him. This is implied in the statement "they watched Him."

II. Jesus Healing a Dropsical Man (vv. 2-6).

1. Why This Man Was Present (v.2). There is no way of absolutely determining it, but likely it was part of a plot of the Pharisees to trap Jesus by getting Him to violate the Sabbath rules.

2. Jesus' Question (v. 3). Jesus' question was an answer to the thoughts of the lawyers and Pharisees who were watching Him, for they had not spoken. Before healing this man He submitted the case to their judgment. They were free on the Sabbath day to hold a feast where their selfish pride and vanity could be displayed, but they were horrified that a fellow-man should be healed on the Sabbath. They were silent because their consciences made them ashamed of their heartlessness.

3. Healing the Man (v. 4). While they were in a state of embarrassment Jesus healed the man and let him go.

4. Jesus Rebuked Them (vv. 5, 6). He laid bare their hypocrisy by showing them that their willingness to show mercy to a beast on the Sabbath should induce them to regard as not sinful to relieve a human being of distress on the Sabbath. They were again silent. for they perceived their inconsistency and inhumanity.

III. Jesus Rebukes Selfish Ambition (vv. 7-10).

1. The Occasion (v. 7). He observed that the guests while taking their places at the table chose the best seats for themselves. This is still true of men and women. In the railway cars, hotels, street cars, etc., they scramble for the best places. In the homes even members of the same family will try to get the best food, etc.

2. Instruction Given (vv. 8-11). When bidden to a feast, take the lowest place lest you suffer the humiliation of being asked to take a lower seat. This is more than a lesson on courtesy or table manners; it is a severe rebuke of that selfishness which fills the human heart, causing it to seek to be ministered to instead of ministering to others. Unselfishness will express itself in humbly taking the lowest place, esteeming others better than ourselves. The fundamental principle of the philosophy governing the moral world. Jesus declares to be: "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased. and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

IV. The True Motive in Deeds of Charity (vv. 12-14).

Jesus takes advantage of this social occasion to teach a great principle. The Jews, like many of the rich today, made social dinner occasions for display. They invited only those whose wealth would enable them to recompense them by inviting them in return. Jesus took note of the selfishness thus displayed and set forth to them the right principle, namely, that they should extend their hospitality to the poor and afflicted. All charitable deeds should be done with unselfish motives. Jesus assured them that compensation would be made at the resurrection of the just. This does not mean that friends and neighbors of certain rank should never exchange pleasant hospitalities. Wealth should be used to confer blessings upon the poor and needy instead of ministering to the pride and vanity of the possessor.

How Churches Grow.

Once there was a Chinese laundry. Then is became a store. Then it became a church. For ten years it served in this capacity, and from it has come a group of 47 communicants and 100 children who, this year, have acquired their own new building, St. Philip's chapel, New Orleans.

January 14 Why Do You Think the Bible Is the Word of God? 2 Timothy 3:14-17

The Bible claims to be the Word of God. "All scripture is inspired of God and is profitable." The word "inspired" means God-breathed. Every Scripture is God-breathed. This breathing of God upon men qualified them to write the various books of the Bible. The word "breathed" indicates a conscious and forceful movement by which the Bible writers were mov-ed or carried along. This corresponds exactly with the words in 2 Peter 1:21, "Holy men of God spake as they vere moved (or carried along) by the Holy Spirit."

In Hebrews 1:1, 2, we read that God "spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets" and also that He has spoken by His Son. In both instances it was God who spoke. He spoke through the prophets in their writ-ings. Such expressions as the follow-"The Lord spake," "The Lord said," 'The Word of the Lord came unto me.'
There is nothing vague or uncertain in this. It is very different from modern books. Mr. Darwin, for example in his Origin of Species uses the phrase, "We may well suppose" about 800 times. Comparison between "Thus saith the Lord" and "We may well suppose" makes one grateful for the firm foundation provided for faith.

The testimony of our divine Lord in this matter is pointed and powerful. In Mark 7:8-13 He speaks of the utterances of Moses as "the command-ment of God" and as "the Word of God." Then again concerning the authority of His own words he de-clared "I have not spoken of myself but the Father which sent me, he gave me commandment, what I should say and what I should speak" (John 12: 49.) Once more in His intercessory prayer (John 17:8), we hear Him saying, "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me." It is plain then that God spake in the prophets and in His Son. It is equally plain that God spoke through the apostles and the writers of the New Testament. See Holyens 2:2 Testament. See Hebrews 2:3, 4 and 1 Thessalonians 2:13. These passages should be carefully studied and their contents noted.

The testimony of Scripture is conclusive that the Bible is the Word of God. We can readily accept this testimony of the Book to itself because its testimony on all other matters is true. Read Psalm 19:7-11.

GOOD THINGS AND LEFTOVERS

A very dainty patty or meat ball may be prepared as follows: Take one cupful each of finely minced ham, mashed potato and bread crumbs and one tablespoonful of milk mixed with a teaspoonful of dry mustard. Form into balls, roll in crumbs, dip in egg and fry in deep fat.

Curried Chicken .- Season a cupful or two of boiled rice with melted butter and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Arrange a baking dish with alternate layers of minced chicken and the rice with some chicken gravy. Have the rice at the bottom and on the top of the dish with a layer of chicken between. Dot with butter and put into a moderate oven to become thoroughly

Shepherd's Pie.—Butter a small bread pan and line the bottom and sides with seasoned mashed potato. Fill with any cooked meat or fowl and cover with the mashed potato. Bake until the potato is brown, turn out and serve on a hot platter garnished with Coconut Pie.—Take one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of lemon extract, the whites of four eggs. Put the milk into a double boiler and when boiling add one box of shredded coconut and the cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk. Stir until well cooked. Add half of the beaten whites. Fill a baked shell with the mixture and cover with a meringue made of the remaining whites. Return to the oven and brown.

Oatmeal Gems.—Soak two cupfuls of rolled oats over night in one and threequarters cupfuls of sour milk. Add one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of light brown sugar, one cupful of flour and two well-heaten eggs. Dissolve the soda in a little hot water. Mix and bake in hot, well buttered gem pans in a hot oven twenty-five minutes.

Beet Relish .- Chop cooked beets to make a quart; add one quart of chopped cabbage, one cupful of grated horseradish, two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of salt, and vinegar to mesten thoroughly. This is a good relish to serve with fish.

FIGHT

Resolves Itself Into Duel Between the Principals.

Good Teamwork by Detectives Relled On Mostly for the Successful Protection of Public.

If every detective were as skillful as Sherlock Holmes in ferreting out crime crooks would have a sorry time of it. Unfortunately, every detective cannot be a Sherlock Holmes, and, besides, even granting that truth is stranger than fiction, solving them in real life are different matters. Detectives, when it comes to skill, are not unlike men in other professions; some are better than others, and the real brilliant fellows are not numer-

In modern detective work good teamwork, after all, counts more than individual effort. A pack of dogs pursuing a wolf is better than a lone dog, and the same is true in running down crime-collective heads can accomplish, as a rule, more than a single head. When a murder is committed, two detectives are assigned to the case. They belong to the precinct in which the crime occurred. After they have made themselves familiar with the facts, they are often able to tell with certainty who the murderer is. This knowledge is obviously of great advantage to them, since they have only to get their man and build up a case against him. Naturally, it often follows that to know the assassin is one thing-to get him another. He may lead them a merry chase before he is finally captured. But few known assassins escape altogether, and detectives are content to know that some day the suspect may fall into their net.

There is another type of murder which presents an entirely different problem. This is a case like the Edwell murder, in which the identity of the assassin is unknown. Like the former case, two detectives are at first assigned to the "squeal." When it becomes apparent that the police have a real mystery on their hands, other detectives are set to work. As the mystery grows and deepens all the precinct sleuths are striving to dig up clues, and detectives considered as the "best brains" of the department are assisting in the work.

"The successful detective today," said a veteran in the service, "is not necessarily the brilliant, brainy fellow. There are men in the bureau who use their heads to good advantage. They belong to the analytical type, and they study a problem from every angle. They often make valuable suggestions which, when followed, lead to good results. Undoubtedly without them the service would be badly crippled. But if they have a place in the unraveling of crime, the same may be said of another type.

"This type is the fellow who, though not brilliant, is a silent, persistent plodder. I have known these fellows to accomplish wonders simply because they worked hard. When a man feels that his life is at stake, and he is making every effort to throw you off his track, you are not going to catch him if you are not as active in going after him as he is in running away from you and covering up his tracks. You have to work hard to catch a clever criminal. He knows that he is being hunted and he becomes tired and discouraged when he realizes that you are giving him no quarter.

"As detectives go today, I would say that the most valuable are undoubtedly those who have the best sources of information. The detective who has what we call 'good information' is bound to accomplish results where others fail. To have this valuable possession a man must have been in the department a long time. He may receive his information from a stool pigeon, or from others who know many underworld secrets."

Detectives who have worked in certain neighborhoods for many years have a rich fund of knowledge of conditions past and present in these sections. They are familiar with the haunts of underworld characters, and they know by sight and by name many residents of good and bad repute in the neighborhood. When a crime occurs these detectives know where to go to get results. There are scores of men and women who are ready to assist them. Such people hesitate to talk to a strange detective, but they know they can talk to these men

Where to Locate a Store.

A store on the shady side of the street will often do 50 per cent more business than one on the opposite side. Ten per cent of those who pass a drug store will enter and 60 per cent of those who enter will buy. Take a store devoted to useful novelties which are of a somewhat practical nature and one woman out of every 100 passing will enter and nearly all of them will make a purchase averaging $3. There are men so familiar with the street throngs that they will make a survey of the passersby and tell you just how much business you are likely to do in a store which you may be consider-

BORROWED FROM THE FRENCH

Word "Hello" an English Corruption Which America Has Adopted as Own Expression.

You should try to learn the old wolf hunter's call, because you know the wolf is a scout and that should be the scout call, says Dan Beard, in Boy's

This call was used in France first and afterward in England, but there are no wolves in England now and the bugle call has been forgotten in both countries, therefore we "paint it green and call it our own." Even though William Tell and Robin Hood bugled the same calls before America was discovered, we can make it American the same as we have made the old French wolf hunter's cry American. French was spoken in English court circles, so the titled wolf hunters used the French cry of hab le loup or a' lop loup, loup being pronounced loo, the cry being a la loo; the English put on the H and made it halloo, and we made it hell-o, which is an American expression, as all the telephone girls

So the old wolf hunter's bugle calls which came here with the Huguenots will also be American when blown through a wooden flatboatsmen's trum-

NECKTIE DATES FROM 1660

Was Introduced Into France by a Regiment of Cravates-Fashion Sometimes Became Extreme.

The neck was left unconfined by the ancients. The earliest form of necktie was a simple cord worn around a starched band of linen attached to the shirt. The modern tie was introduced in 1660 by a regiment of Cravates which came to France. A bandage of silk or muslin was worn about the neck of the officers, while the soldiers wore simpler stuff. The ends which fell over the breast were disposed in bows or hung in tassels.

After the Revolution cravats disappeared along with tight breeches. In 1796 it recovered its popularity, and was increased to a degree of extravagance. Huge pieces of muslin were worn around the neck by some persons, while others wore a padded cushion of numerous folds. The collar worn at this time arose about the ears, and the mouth and chin were buried nose-deep by the upper edge of the cravat. The neck was puffed out larger than the head.

Effects of Stimulants.

New and curious experiments have been made on the action which alcohol and tea may exercise on the intellectual faculties.

It has been demonstrated that alcohol diminishes the ideas but reenforces the association of words. Under its influence one easily learns a speech by heart, but the work of the thought seeking to join the ideas favors the ideas and intellectual work. The experiments in question have also been made on coffee which produces a certain excitation, but it is not known whether the depression following this excitation weakens the cerebral value.

The Earthquake Belt.

The immunity of Great Britain from earthquakes is due to its geographical situation. It lies at least 1,000 miles north of the nearest point of the great earthquake "belt," which seismologists have located and traced right round the globe. This troubled zone runs roughly parallel to the equator through Japan, China, Asia Minor, the Mediterranean countries, the Canary islands and Central America, with an auxiliary belt running southward along the west coast of South America. Every big earthquake of modern times has happened somewhere along this belt, and generally when the sun and moon have been so placed that their combined pull along the critical region has been at a maximum. We owe to the Japanese, whose country is so often the seat of a disastrous earthquake, the invention of the seismograph and the most thorough study of earthquake phenomena.

Would Speak for Itself. The small boy entered the butcher's shop whistling briskly, and deposited a sheep's head on the counter. "Mr. Jones," he said, "mother's sent back this meat," and turned on his heel and started to leave.

But the butcher wanted an explana-"What's wrong with it, sonny?" he asked. "Well," sonny replied, "mother didn't say what was wrong with it. She only said 'leave it, and the head will speak for itself!"

Curious Hedgehogs. There are several living specimens in "zoos," of the "tenrec," the hedgehog of Madagascar. It is said that stuffed specimens in museums give no adequate idea of these very curious ereatures. Their resemblance to hedgehogs rests only upon their possession of a spiny covering. The shape of their bodies resembles that of an inflated globe fish. They are insectivorous, and are declared to be restricted to the Island of Madagascar. The specimens seen in this country are remarkable for their nabit of yawning.

The Carroll Record Co.

We DO HAVE a good country town plant, not crowded with useless machinery, nor out-of-date junk, keep busy what we have, and turn out GOOD printing.

The Carroll Record is NOT "the best" weekly paper in the state; it does NOT have "the largest circulation" in the county, and it is NOT claimed to be a model in every respect.

It DOES have an excellent circulation in one of the best agricultural sections of the state and county; it DOES have certain policies different from many other small town papers; and it IS one of the best advertising weekly papers in the

We try, as a business concern, to live up to our motto, "WHATEVER IS WORTH DOING. IS WORTH DOING WELL," no matter whether this be the job work turned out, the advertising, or the news, editorial and other matter, published each week.

The Carroll Record Standard is the best we are able to make, considering ability and facilities; and we take pardonable pride in knowing that a very large list of patrons are apparently well satisfied with this standard.

The Carroll Record DOES carry more public sale advertising than any other paper in this county. It originated the "Sale Register," and popularized sale advertising rates. It DOES NOT pretend to offer the cheapest rates for sale advertising, but it DOES consider its publicity value more than equivalent to the rate charged. The value of sale advertising is best measured by the returns one gets from the investment.

New Version of the Invention of the Rosary Found in Pages of Ancient Historian.

Catholic authorities have attributed the invention of the rosary to St. Dominic, founder of the famous Dominican order. But evidence of a still earlier origin of the rosary has come to light. It is related of Lady Godiva by William of Malmesbury that she bequeathed to the monastery of Coventry "a circlet of gems, which she had threaded on a string, in order that by fingering them one by one, as she successively recited her prayers, she might not fall short of the exact num-

"This, if authentic," says Cornelius H. Patton, in Asia Magazine, "is interesting as disposing of the theory, often held, that the Roman Catholics of Europe learned the use of the rosary from the Saracens at the time of the Crusades. Lady Godiva must have passed from the scene several years before Godfrey led his conquering host into Asia Minor and Palestine. More recent Catholic authorities call attention to the fact that, although the Roman Catholic rosary in its present standard form of 165 beads, divided into "mysteries" or decades, is Dominican, the followers of St. Dominic did not become interested in the rosary until the closing years of the Fifteenth century.-Detroit News.

Not Personality.

The Antiquarian society of Smithville was holding its anniversary meeting, an occasion of much splendor and importance.

A young woman who acted in the capacity of society reporter for one of the morning papers of the city, in making her rounds for the purpose of securing the names of those in attendance, approached a somewhat elderly but well-preserved spinster, who was moving in her stateliest manner amid the throng.

"I suppose, Miss Dunkum," the reporter said, jotting down the name, "you are an Antiquarian?"

"I am a member of the Antiquarian society," responded Miss Dunkum, with great dignity, evidently having an impression that an "antiquarian," objectively considered, was about the same thing as antiquity.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Honey and Honey Plants. It is reported that the honey crop of the United States approximates 250,000,000 pounds. It may be pointed out in this connection that as the nectar of flowers does not become honey until it is worked over and partly evaporated by the bees, these insects must move fully 150,000 tons of material during the season to make the honey crop, not including the honey consumed by the bees themselves. About half of this honey is produced from the nectar of white clover. Next in importance comes alfalfa, followed closely by sweet clover. These are all leguminous plants, as is logwood, which produces much honey in the tropics.

Among the few plants yielding a honey that can be recognized are cotton, basswood, tulip tree, buckwheat, goldenrod and mountain sage.-Washington Star

INTENSIVE FARMING

"How are you making out with that abandoned farm you bought?"

"Fine! I sold the quarry rights to one crowd, and rented the surface to another as a golf course. Now if I can lease the air to some wireless company I'll have about everything under cultivation. Who says intensive farming doesn't pay?"

A Disputed Passage. Some years ago Longfellow, the poet, and Fields, the publisher, were on a walking tour, when, to their surprise, an angry bull stood in the pathway, evidently intending to demolish them

"I think," said Fields, "that it will be prudent to give this reviewer a wide margin."

"Yes," replied the poet, "it appears to be a disputed passage.'
