DWELLING BURNED, ALSO OUTBUILDINGS.

Selby and Haugh Properties Victims of Fire.

The fire alarm was sounded on Thursday afternoon, shortly after 3 o'clock, and in about two minutes the fire apparatus was on its way to Jas. M. Haugh's, on the Uniontown road, about ¼ mile from the corporate limits. The fire originated in the stable on the Haugh property and commu-nicated to the hog pen and chicken house, all being ablaze in a few minu-

The breeze carried the flames away from the Haugh dwelling to the adjoining property of Noah P. Selby, and soon all of the buildings owned by Selby were on fire—dwelling, summer kitchen, smoke house and

The Fire Company was unable to save the dwelling, though there in ample time, due to several causes; mud in the short main from Baltimore St., to the plug at Mrs. Clabaugh's; great difficulty in opening the plug; the bursting of the hose near the plug, and to insufficient pressure from the standpipe. After the hose line cleaned up, and remarks hose line cleaned up, and pumping into the standpipe commenced, there was sufficient water force, even through about 1100 feet of hose, to have saved the dwelling.

The Westminster Fire Company responded to a call in a short time, but the fire was under control when it arrived. They were prompt, and ready for service, just the same.

The loss to the Haugh property was small compared to that of Selby's. Insured in Montgomery County Co., the amount we have not learned. Mr. Selby had about $1000. insurance on buildings and contents, in the Plant-ers Company, of Hagerstown, which will not nearly cover replacement

Some household furniture was saved, in which, state policeman, Charles Hagner, was very active together with others. Mr. Selby was working at the new Fair grounds when the fire broke out. As the heat was intense—about 94°—the firemen and others who rendered assistance were in danger of being overcome.

There is a row of five dwellings at this point, well separated, and the breeze carried the sparks away from all of them, a very fortunate circumstance considering the great heat of the day and the highly inflammable condition of buildings. Milton D. Crouse an aged resident of the George Hilterbrick home, one of the dwellings in the row, who was one of the first to discover the fire, came near being overcome by the excitement. Trees and gardens, on both properties were

An Auto Mishap at Bridgeport.

Two men running a handsome Packard car, on their way from Baltimore to Buena Vista, had an upset on the curve just beyond the bridge at Bridgeport, Monday evening, with the result that the car was considerably injured, as well as the occupants. The car was towed back to the Taneytown garage for repairs and the men brought here for treatment. After getting fixed up, they hired a car to take them to Buena Vista. Both of them had evidently been drinking and were in an unfit condition to operate

The car is reported to have been liberally stocked with liquors. A state policeman happened to come along at the time of the accident and secured two pints, as evidence. He then came to town to notify the Garage to come and get the car, but when he returned to the scene the rest of the stock had mysteriously disap-

Maryland the Best.

A gentleman whose home is in Los Angeles, Ca., who visited the Shriner's convention in Washington, and who later toured through this section, stopping at Westminster, remarked that this section of Maryland is the finest all-around country he saw on his entire trip, which was made by automobile. His remark was reported to us by auctioneer J. N. O. Smith, it having been made in his presence. We have heard like expressions made before, by Californians, as well as by others from the far west. They are Waynesboro Cashier Arrested.

Charles H. Coover, cashier of the Waynesboro, Pa., Trust Company was arrested, on Tuesday, charged with embezzling $158,000 of the bank's funds. The arrest was made on the order of E. H. Cameron, State Bank Commissioner. Losses in speculation are blamed by Coover for his alleged shortage. The bank will not be closed, as his bond and the directors will make good the shortage.

Teacher-Training Commencement.

Come to the graduating exercises of the Church of God Teacher-Training class in Uniontown, on Sunday morning, June 24, at 10 o'clock in the Bethel. Each member of the class will present a theme upon some phase of their work. The President of Carroll County Sunday School Association will present the diplomas. Everybody welcome.

TWO FIRES AT LITTLESTOWN. Both at the Shriver Canning Factory Property.

Fire destroyed the large barn at the Shriver Cannery, near Littlestown, on Monday morning, causing a loss of fully $3500. One horse was burned to death, also a quantity of hay and straw. The barn was built about 4 years ago. The Littlestown and Westminster Fire Companies responded. The cause of the fire is a mystery and evidently originated on the inside of the building. A second fire occurred on Wednesday before noon, destroying a cattle and storage shed 60x125 feet, the loss being estimated at about $3000, partially insured. The fire originated in the interior of the building, and burned very rapidly, destroying two automobiles belonging to employees, William Bish and Bernard Bowers, also an International tractor and a gasoline engine belonging to the Shrivers. Three hogs owned by J. Edward Gran, superintendent, also burned, along with a quantity of box material and agricultural implements. Five fire companies responded; two from Hanover, and one from Littlestown, Gettysburg and Westminster, the latter arriving within 18 minutes with 15 men. Both fires are believed to have been the work of an incendiary, and a careful investigation is being made. For-tunately, the buildings at the Shriver plant are well separated, and the help of the firemen prevented a general conflagration in both cases.

Senator Snader Complimented.

In the minds of the dairy interests the laying of the corner stone of the building to be used for dairy husbandry was the feature of Farmer's Day at College Park. Hon. John M. Dennis, state treasurer, was the master of ceremonies. Mr. Dennis has for years taken an active interest in the development of dairy husbandry and his interest in the promotion of dairy husbandry projects has been of such material value as to incur, at times, considerable financial outlays. Senator R. Smith Snader, of Carroll county, vice-president of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association, who was late arriving, was spoken of with especial kindness by those present. His efforts have materially contributed to the prosperity of the dairy interests of the state, particularly those shipping into Baltimore City.

In his remarks Dr. A. F. Woods, president of the University of Maryland, said of Senator Snader: "Senator Snader was the first chairman of the old Dairymen's Association and he is vice-president of the present organization and has been one of the most active workers for the dairy industry and this new dairy husbandry building. He was to be here today and was to make an address from this platform and, as president of this institution. I want to sa you that we appreciate the faithful interest that Senator Snader took when this building was under discussion. He kept it in the bill and made it so that the money could be expended for no other purpose than the erection of this building and I want to take this occasion in his absence to thank him for his untiring efforts and the interest he took this matter and to make this public announcement of it."—The Maryland

EXTENSION SERVICE FARM BUREAU NEWS.

Caponizing, Spraying and Winter Egg Production Notes.

County Agent Fuller has received several applications from boys of high school age who want to spend the summer on a farm. Most of these boys have had farm experience, and due to the shortage of farm help these boys could be used very well by most farmers. Anyone interested should get in touch with the County Agent, at once.

The Maryland Farm Bureau Corporation is the name of the official paper of the Maryland Farm Bureau The first issue of which was gotten out the 9th., and should be in the hands of each Farm Bureau member in the very near future.

Over fifty birds were caponized in the four demonstrations held last week by County Agent Fuller with the assistance of Mr. Rice, Poultry Specialist at the University of Maryland, at the home of Franklin Fenby, Reisterstown; Jacob Null, Taneytown, Mrs. H. B. Miller, Taneytown, and Irvin Flickinger, Union Mills. These demonstrations were all well attended and quite a number, under Mr. Rice's guidance, became quite expert in the caponizing of cockerels. Caponizing demonstrations will be arranged for by the County Agent for anyone who is interested in this work.

Mr. Rice is planning to be in the county the last of July and again in October, at which time he will demonstrate the culling of hens for next year's breeding stock, and culling of pullets for winter egg production. He will also make arrangements to carry on winter egg production work, and farmers and poultrymen interested are invited to put in their application for this work at once, as only a limit-ed amount of work can be done for this fall.

The spraying demonstration will be held at W. H. Long's orchard, on Friday, June 29, at 1:30 P. M. Mr. Long's orchard is at Carrollton, which can be reached by machine by going to Reese on the Reisterstown pike, four miles east of Westminster, at which place there will be a sign directing you to the orchard. The demonstration is for the purpose of showing the use of the power spreading outfits, both liquid and dusting machines, and the different types of spraying nozzles and rigging. We expect to have M. A. Spangler, of Flora Dale, Pa., M. A. Slade, Biglersville, Pa., and H. V. Hart, Hagerstown, Md., present to demonstrate the makes of machinery which they represent.

S. B. Shaw, Horticulturist, and E. N. Cory, Entomologist, both of the University of Maryland, will put on this demonstration. All orchardists farmers having small orchards should be present at this demonstration as it is impossible to grow fruit of good market and keeping qualities without spraying. By organizing spray rings the farmer having a small orchard can have the benefit of the power sprayer and produce the same quality of fruits as the commercial fruit growers can.

W. C. T. U. to Raise $250,000.

The Pennsylvania legislature, at the last minute defeated an appropriation of $250,000 for the enforcement of the Volstead Act. As a result, the W. C. T. U .of the state will make an effort to raise the sum, and it has the indorsement of Gov. Pinchot and other state officials. It is planned to enlist the active aid of all churches, civic organizations, women's clubs, and Temperance, Patriotic and Fraternal bodies, and to set aside Sunday, July 1, as enforcement day in the Sunday Schools which will be invited to take special offerings for that purpose. The following statement has been issued by the W. C. T. U.

"To Pennsylvania, the Keystone
State of the Nation, the home of the Liberty Bell, and the birthplace of the Constitution, we hereby proclaim that the traditions of loyalty to the national Constitution, upheld by the patriots of our State on the fields of Valley Forge and Gettysburg, shall be maintained by our loyal citizens and to that end we call to the active co-operation all temperance, prohibition, religious and philanthropic bodies, all patriotic, fraternal, civic organizations and all Pennsylvanians who love their State to make good the $250,000 for law enforcement, refused to our Governor by our State Legislature.

Gov. Pinchot says the state authorities will go right ahead enforcing prohibition, and that ways will be found for using the Y. M. C. A. fund. He says the loss of the $250,000 appropriation leaves the state no worse off than before, and that good progress has been made without it. says "We are going ahead, full steam, believing whole-heartedly that we are right, and confident of the support of all right-thinking people."

Attroney-General Armstrong, who seems to be the Republican's only hope 😓 win the Governorship, is reported to be seriously considering the question of his candidacy. By com-mon consent, he is regarded as the man for the rather doubtful chance.

Babe Ruth, the renowned baseball slugger, gets a salary of $4,333 a month. And he does not make more hits than some other players, because it is the extensive custom of pitchers to give him a free pass to first base.

THE GREAT HEAT WAVE. Covers Entire East. Over 75 Deaths Reported for the Week.

The whole eastern section of the country is suffering from heat and drouth, while much of the far middle west and south is suffering from rains and lack of sunshine.

In Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, high record temperatures were established this week at a number of points.

In Ohio, torrid weather caused the death of at least 14 persons within 60 hours, terrific thunder storms prevailed on Wednesday, in New Jersey, south, and at Atlantic City the downpour was near a cloudburst. New Jersey has been experiencing a million dollar drouth.

The entire section of the country east of the Mississippi is suffering from the great heat and drouth. On Wednesday, the temperature reached 92° in Chicago and Toledo; 90° in St.

Louis and Kansas City.

Maryland weather observer Spencer says:

"The cause of the high temperatues is an area of high pressure over the Middle and North Atlantic States and an area of low pressure over the West and Northwest. That, with the skies unclouded, the sun beating down and no rain to cool the face of the earth, influences the direction and the velocity of winds.

"The two areas are stagnant," he says, "there is absolutely no movement. Until one moves and an atmospheric disturbance results, the present weather is likely to continue."

The official heat record in Baltimore on Thursday, recorded 100.2° at 4:00 o'clock. Reports from over the east show at least 75 deaths for the week, due to heat. In the cities, thousands of people are trying to sleep out of doors, and in many cases foundries and factories are running with short

At a number of places dogs are reported to have gone mad, due to heat, and a general warning is given to be very careful, and watch all dogs closely for signs of rabies.

Slight relief is expected by Saturday, but no rain is reported in sight, though there may be local thunder

- X A Chance for Investors.

The N. Y. Consolidated Card Co., is responsible for the following remarkable proposition which, however, is no more "wild catish" than some others that find ready takers.

"Knowing that you are always interested and open for an investment in a good live business proposition, we take the liberty of presenting to you what seems to us a most wonderful business, and in which, no doubt, you will take a lively interest, and perhaps write to us by return mail the amount of stock that you wish to subscribe towards the formation of this Company. The object of this Company is to operate a large Cat Ranch in or near Golden, Colo., where land can be purchased cheap for the pur-

To start with, we collect about, say, One Hundred Thousand (100,000) cats. Each cat will average twelve kittens a year. The skins run from (10c) each for the white ones, to Seventy-five Cents for the pure black. This will give us twelve million (12,000,000) skins a year, to sell at an average of Thirty Cents (30c) a piece, making our revenue about Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) a day,

A man can skin Fifty (50) cats a day, for Two Dollars ($2.00). It will take 100 to operate the ranch, and therefore the net profit will be about Nine Thousand Eight Hundred Dollars a day. We will feed the cats on rats and will start a Rat Ranch next door. The rats multiply four times as fast as the cats. If we start with One Million rats, we will have therefore, four rats per day for each cat, which is plenty.

Now then, we will feed the rats on the carcasses of the cats, from which the skins have been taken, giving each rat a fourth of a cat. It will thus be seen that the business will be self acting and automatic all the way through. The cats will eat the rats and the rats will eat the cats, and we will get the skins. Awaiting your prompt reply, and trusting that you appreciate this opportunity to get you rich quickly, we remain, yours truly, etc."

YOUNG WIFE KILLED AND FOUR INJURED

Husband Completes the Tragedy by Killing Himself.

Last Sunday night, Roy Smith, aged 20 years, living near LeGore, shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Helen Wilhide Smith, aged 19 years, and injured his father-in-law, Harry Wil-hide, and Mildred and Beatrice Wilhide, two sisters of his wife, and Frances Saxten, 11 year old daughter, of Rev. J. A. Saxten. Fifteen minutes later, he shot and killed himself.

The shooting occurred while the party was on the way from church at Woodsboro, to their home. The Wilhides and Mrs. Smith were all seated in a wagon, Mrs. Smith being on the back seat, with her sister Mildred and the Saxten girl one on each side. The shot killed Mrs. Smith instantly while the others were sprinkled with the charge. Smith had stepped out of a clump of bushes by the road side and fired into the party as it passed. He then jumped into a field nearby and fired another charge into his own

Smith and his wife were married 14 months ago, when they eloped. Following the marriage they lived with Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith, of LeGore. Trouble ensued soon after marriage, and Smith is said to have abused his wife, causing her to finally return to her parents home.

It is said that Smith both tried to obtain a divorce, and to effect a reconciliation, and failed in both. Also, that he had attempted to have a talk with her at the church, but she refused. The shooting seems to have been planned, as the gun must have been placed in the bushes beforehand. The other four were not seriously injured by the shot.

Board of Education Meets.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was called to order in the office of the Board on Wednesday, June 6, at 10:30 A. M. Commissioner Glover was absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The annual re-organization of the Board then took place. Commissioner Milton A. Koons was made temporary chairman, Mr. J. Pearre Wantz was re-elected President; J. H. Allend-er was re-elected Vice-President.

The list of bills presented to the Board was approved and ordered

Requests for contributions to local funds raised for purposes indicated, were presented to the Board which contributed ten dollars to the amount already raised in each case, and an additional amount of $18.00 was allowed to compensate Miss Lauterbach and her school for the extra cost of janitor service in operating the furnace of that school, but the contribution will not become available until after the opening of school next fall, in view of lack of funds.

Baust, Anna Sirre, $22 phonograph; Patapsco, Emily Miller, $10, school equipment; Salem, Elzie Ripley, $31.25, phonograph; Oakland Mills, M. Lauterbach, $58, school equipment. Supt. Unger then made the annual appointments of the executive force, which appointments were duly approved by the Board and their salaries fixed: Miss Lula H. Grim, Supervisor of Elementary Schools; Miss Gertrude Morgan, Supervisor of Music Miss Dorothy Fisher, Supervisor of Physical Training and Attendance; Miss May E. Prince colored supervisor; Miss Mirian Gibson, County Nurse, Charles Reed, Clerk; Charles O. Clemson, Attorney; Miss Helen E. Ohler,

No bids were received for the building at Sykesville in answer to the advertisement of the Board for the same Bids were received for the purchase of paint, and the Superintendent was authorized to purchase the same if it were necessary to purchase any paint.

Supt. Unger was given authority to proceed to purchase the necessary coal for the schools for 1923-24. Robert Etzler was appointed trustee to the Linwood school to succeed

H. L. Reese. The application of George W. Hess for a pension was laid before the Board. In view of the fact that Mr. Hess has done practically no teaching in the schools of Carroll County, the Board does not feel justified in considering his application, and has suggested to him that he apply to the for same. The Superintendent reported to the Board that he had authorized B. E. Starr, artchitect, to proceed to devise plans for a two-room school at

Supt. of Schools of Frederick county

Springville. The Board after careful consideration respecting the purchase of portable buildings, decided that the purchase of the same be left in the hands of the Superintendent, providing the item for portables is allowed in the budget by the County Commissioners.

Commissioner Allender was ap pointed as a committee of one to take the necessary steps to correct the spouting on the Charles Carroll school building.

A motion was adopted that pupils in New Windsor High School whom the county is paying tuition will have this tutition paid only when they pass up three out of the four required subjects in each year, and the attendance must be very nearly or altogether perfect.

MORE CATTLE FEEDING.

Urged as a Profitable Expedient for Maryland Farmers.

According to an article in The Sun, of Monday, more cattle feeding is said to be in order to help the business of farming in this state, and to relieve the condition of labor shortage, as cattle feeding requires less labor than diversified farming, and at the same time greatly enriches the soil for the purpose of raising feed. The article gives the recent sale of 26 head of white-faced Hereford cattle, as a specimen of what may be accomplished, and says; "Fed for 152 days by a Howard county farmer, the beeves were bought early in January at $7 per 100 pounds and sold at $10.75, the transaction netting a profit of $1,991 to the feeder. They averaged 960 pounds per head when feeding began and tipped the scales at an average of 1,355 pounds when sold, having put on an average of 2 3-5 pounds per head daily. For the first week of feeding, it was explained, the cattle were put on rough feeds. Following this they were put on a daily ration of 320 pounds of ground corn, sprinkled slightly with cottonseed meal, and all the alfalfa they cared to eat. Spring water was before them all the time and they were well sheltered and bedded. After the first month the corn ration was doubled and the stock began to fatten rapidly. With a diminish-ing appetite for corn, more cotton-seed meal was added and during the last week they were put on clover, which was as desirable as alfalfa. All feed was cleaned up daily and feed-ings were conducted regularly at daybreak and sundown. At no time were they over-fer, appetites were kept keen, and disquieting and disturbing features were removed.

Although Maryland does not rank with leading beef cattle producing states of the country, the industry is said to be forging ahead in importance with considerable capital invested and with profitable returns. Lack of prominence of the industry is attributed to activity in the production of other agricultural crops, for which Maryland is fitted particularly as regards soils, climate and transportation facilities."

Mayberry Farmer Injured.

William Myers, who resides on the Charles King farm, near Mayberry, Md., met with an accident Monday afternoon which may have proved serious. While in the act of raking hay the two horses which he had hitched to the rake became frightened and unmanageable and dashed across the field, throwing Mr. Myers back on the rake in which he was caught and dragged a distance of about 50 yards before some workmen succeeded in stopping the horses. Mr. Myers' right leg was fractured about three inches above the ankle and he suffered bruises and cuts about his

Henry Ford is reported to have said in an interview in Springfield, Mass. "I have no desire to be President. I am too much occupied with my own affairs to become President, and I do not intend to run."

The Commissioners are Right.

We believe the majority of taxpayers will agree with the County Commissioners in the manner in which they handled the estimates called for by the School Board, even though hasty conclusions to the contrary may be that Carroll County is a "back number" in the matter of its schools. We are quite apt to try to follow the highest example set us, as being the one nearest right, without thinking of the possibility of the leaders being wrong, and ill-advised in their doings.

When we buy, we are apt to think that the lowest price offered is the right price, and when we sell, that the highest price is right, while as a matter of fact both may actually represent poor business judgment. So it is with our schools, and their work and equipment. The examples we feel like following, may be those beyond our reach both financially, and as meeting our real needs. Even in the matter of public education, enthusiasm may carry us too far.

Public schools in agricultural districts can not be expected to have command of the same amount of during such times as we are passing raised where those paying the taxes are making the most money. That ultra dry policy. our children in Carroll County deserve the best in educational facili- question through the Amendment of ties, is unquestionably true; but, de- the Volstead Act, is a dangerous proserving and having are two different propositions. Many people do not defensibly absurd in its rigidity, as is get the rewards they deserve, because true of cider and home-made wines. the distribution of the wherewithal to the laws should nevertheless be get just deserts is not equally appor- made along the lines of fairness and

Coming down to exact facts, our schools are costing too much money, largely because schools in other states are spending more money on teachers than we can afford to spend. The pay of teachers is exactly on par taunt the latter for being "stingy."

fore, are right in the denial of the have not acted from personal inclination, but from a knowledge of the ability of the majority of tax-payers to pay. Spending other people's money is a remarkably easy thing to do, and getting more of it to spend than the people ought to be expected this, as well as the County Commissioners; but the big difference is, the school authorities are not reachable by the voters, while the County Commissioners are.

Being "Up-to-date."

Almost everywhere, and on almost every occasion calling for discussion of future outlooks, we hear a slogan in some way connected with being "progressive" and "up-to-date," which is held to mean favoring something, or some plan, that stands for increased equipment, higher quality, larger capacity-more expense, in one way or another. If we build a new house, we want a much better one than the old. If it is interior furnishings, they must be more elaborate. No matter what we contemplate buying, or doing, we plan for the best possible.

In most ways, this is all very commendable. It sounds "up-to-date," sure enough. It stands for progress to get away from cheapness and the primitive. It is a credit to our inclinations to want to have, and enjoy, good things. All of this is well enough-but, how about the cost, and can we afford it?

The whole country, everywhere, is playing at the same policy, and that is largely what is wrong with the country. We want new things faster than they can be made, and this is calling for the man labor to make them, making labor scarce for producing products of the soil that can be improved but little on. Nature has fixed limitations on such things as are ordinarily produced on farms; while there is no limit to human ingenuity and skill in producing new things, and improvements on old

So, as we have been adding to the money in bank, and in our pockets, we have all taken up this new idea of spending it freely. We no longer aim o much to match the Goulds and Vanderbilts, as we do the fashionable spenders. We would rather be 'progressive' than rich. Where it is all going to end, nobody knows, but it seems a pretty clear conclusion that the "up-to-date" bug is being over propagated.

The big question is, whether we are not at least mildly insane, and whether we are not carrying out our extreme wants to our own hurt in some cther directions, and blaming somebody else wrongly? The old saying, "We can't eat our cake, and have it, too" may be altogether more applicable to us than we think. It is difficult to realize, but there must be such a condition as "having too much of a good thing," and no doubt many wise old-time sayings apply to our present day up-to-dateness. Perhaps you can think of some of them?

Wines on Foreign Vessels.

Unquestionably, since the Supreme Court has decided that it is illegal under U.S. law for liquors to be brought into American waters for beverage purposes, Treasury officials can not possibly make any exceptions to the decision, in favor of foreign vessels of any sort whose crews demand wine allowance while in port in

At the same time, we believe that Congress should modify present laws to this extent, extending to crews of foreign vessels. Traffic in liquors in this country is an entirely different proposition from use of liquors on foreign vessels, where they are as acmoney as in manufacturing districts, customed to wine as Americans are to coffee or water; and it is not worth through. School taxes can best be while to invite possible foreign trade complications for the sake of our

It is impossible, however, to miss the inferences that set themselves forth in sentences like these:

"When President Wilson returned from Paris with the Treaty of Versailles, perhaps 80 percent of our people were heartily in favor of a League of Nations in some form. * * The President was determined to have his way and the Senate was equally determined to have its way. Unfortunately, the Senate had the power to compel the President to yield or lose the confirmation of the treaty, and equally unfortunately, he refused to give way. intent that carried us into the war have oozed out of America. He has sensed that shift of opinion, that resentment against continuing isolation and that new friendliness toward international co-operation that is making a new and vigorous growth everywhere in America.

He is not alone in hoping and expecting that this shift and change will take the form of political action. In his opinion, the League of Nations still is a great political issue and finally must be fought over again. It is certain that if Colonel House or the Cox-Wilson wing of the Democratic Party has a hand in shaping the platform and the policy of that party in 1924, the Democrats will not recede from their position in 1920. They will stand by the Treaty of Versailles and the Covenant of the League.

Colonel House and men like him who refuse to accept the League issue as dead and done for are as sharp thorns in the flanks of political strategists of both parties. Theirs may be voices crying in the wilderness, but they speak for a great body of voters in both parties whose wishes may not forever be ignored.-Phila. Ledger.

What Difference Does it Make?

Governor Smith, of New York, enjoyed a manufactured prominence for several weeks in a matter that means really nothing at all. New York State had and has an absolute right to modify or abrogate any law made by it. It has abrogated the prohibition enforcement act made by it. The act was no good anyway. It was never enforced. It never would have been enforced had it remained on the books for a thousand years.

The principal causes of the recent eruptions in print were the desire to make Governor Smith's action a decisive blow at the Constitutional provision regarding liquor and, secondly, to enhance his importance as a Presidential candidate-or, to be perfectly honest, not a candidate but a name with which to trade state delegations. Both these efforts have failed. Governor Smith did not act with the directness and decision of a statesman, and what New York does in the question at issue makes no difference

If the Federal Government desires to enforce the Prohibition law in New York, it can do so, but such a course would probably be unpopular except with the small American colony residing in New York City. The American Colony in New York, like the American colonies in other foreign cities, would doubtless be glad to keep on layal terms with the Government of the United States .- Dearborn In-

LAND OF BEAUTY AND RICHES

Arctic Alaska Well Worth a Visit by the Tourist Tired of Ordinary Travel.

Great, wind-swept tundras. Far away in lonely grandeur, sharp peaks of snow-crowned mountains. Silent lakes among the hills.

Ptarmigan flying like snow, drifting clouds. Fox and hare with soundless steps among the bushes. Reindeer browsing on silver-gray moss. Fish darting like shadows in the streams. Squat figures of solitary Eskimos against the sky line. The throb of surf upon a desolate beach.

Flowers like jewels among the grasses. Soft, green mosses starred with tiniest blossoms. Glowing red vines clinging closely to Mother Earth. Blue berries hanging fairy bells on low bushes. Wild cranberries scattering red beauty for bird and beast. Tawny grasses and whispering willows waving in the wind. A tapestry of rich color in wild solitudes. A flaunting of delicate perfume on soundles air.

Gleam of gold, soft tint of copper, sparkle of silver, dull thread of lead, glint of tin, glow of garnet—the bosom of Mother Earth bursting with riches.

Lovely, remote, unknown, an empire, superb in tundra and towering mountain, tonic in purity of crystal clear air, royal in wealth of exhaustless possessions.—Christian Science Monitor.

Showing That Spirit Can Be Triumphant Over Bully With Only Beef and Muscle.

A Big Man tried to bully a Little Man. The Big Man was a coward, of course, because he depended upon his physical superiority to back his policy. The Little Man, being a Man, what there was of him, spoke to the Big Man, as follows:

"You great big cowardly beef! You think you're a Man, but you're just a beast with clothes on. You haven't got as much manhood as a baby louse. If you weren't twice as big as I am, you wouldn't take a chance, because your heart is afraid, and you're a coward, and a liar, and a bum. Now, you're going to take it back and apologize or I'm going to tell you a lot more of what I think about you. Then I'm going to drive my fist into your face, if I can get up high enough to reach it. And I'm going to take a licking if I have to, but I'm going to be a bigger man than you are, with both eyes closed and three ribs gone! And if I can't lick you today, I'm going to try again tomorrow, and I'm going to keep on coming back until I've equalized your beef with my brain.

The Big Man apologized.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DUNCE"

DURING the middle ages certain theologians were called "schoolmen" because they were taught in the cathedral schools and cloisters founded by Charlemagne and his successors. At first these men were revered and looked up to. Their writings were the court of last resort; their opinions, authoritative. Later, however, their works fell out of favor because the form of their speculations was unattractive and their works were not written in classical Latin.

There were some, though, who still clung to the teachings of the schoolmen in general and to the doctrines of one Duns Scotus, a great teacher of the Franciscan order, in particular. Whenever an adherent of the old learning would seek to bolster up his contentions by referring to the works of Scotus, his opponent would seek to silence him with the rejoinder: "Oh, you are a Dunsman," or, more briefly, "You are a Duns," an epithet of scorn which gradually found its way into the language with the slightly altered spelling "dunce". Thus it is that the name of one of the best known doctors of the church, admitted a keen and sharp-witted teacher, has been turned into a by-word for stupidity and obstinate dullness. Reporting Service Troubles

Telephone service embraces a variety of operations: the installation of telephones and changes in location; operating; maintenance of the central office equipment, outside plant and other apparatus; accurate and up-to-date directory listings; billing; collecting and numerous other things needed to give complete and satisfactory service.

We realize that at times difficulties will arise. Usually these are quickly remedied but there is always a possibility that some defect may develop which, in spite of our efforts, is not detected immediately.

It will help if you will make reports to us in the following way:

> CALL THE REPAIR CLERK if your telephone is out of order. It will be repaired without delay.

> CALL THE CHIEF OPERA-TOR if your calls are not completed satisfactorily. You will receive prompt and courteous attention.

> CALL THE BUSINESS OF-FICE on matters concerning applications for telephones, bills, adjustment of accounts, directory listings, advertising and the like.

WHY= Game Birds Should Be Planted

in Suitable Covers Planting game birds means liberating them in suitable covers where they may remain and increase their kind. In states having state game farms thousands of pheasants are sent out each year to sportsmen for liberation. Many sportsmen's organizations purchase these birds to improve shooting conditions in their vicinity. Bob white quail are imported by the thousands from Mexico, while the Hungarian partridges are brought from Europe, all with the intent of furnishing more game for the sportsmen.

Few realize the necessity of liberating such birds properly, remarks a New York Evening Post writer. We were greatly surprised only recently to hear a man who had been liberating a great number of birds remark that he enjoyed doing this kind of work because he liked to see the birds fly.

What sportsman does not like to see a game bird fly? We all do, but when liberating birds with the view of restocking depleted covers we would feel that our efforts had almost been wasted should we see any of the liberated birds fly immediately after they were released.

When birds are received in a crate and it is the intent to liberate them all at one place, the problem of keeping them from flying is a very simple The crate should be placed at the edge of a suitable cover for the birds and a quantity of grain scattered nearby. Darken your crate by covering it with canvas or burlap excepting one corner, where, by opening the sliding door, sufficient space should be left for the birds to walk out. Having done this, go away and leave them and do not return to get the crate until there is no chance of frightening the

This method permits the birds to walk out cautiously and look over their new home at leisure. They stay banded together for the time being and return for several days to the place where liberated to secure the food that has been placed there for them.

WERE NAMED FOR STATESMAN

Why the Sandwich Islands Were So Called Explained in Narrative of Captain Cook.

Capt. James Cook, who christened the Hawaiian group of islands the "Sandwich islands," in 1778, gave them that name as a compliment to John Montagu, fourth earl of Sandwich, an English statesman, traveler and author, who at the time of Cook's most celebrated voyage was first lord of the admiralty, the United States equivalent for secretary of the navy. The reason for this compliment is doubtless to be found in the following extract from Cook's narrative:

"While we lay in Long Reach the earl of Sandwich, Sir Hugh Pallister and others of the board of admiralty, as the last mark of the very great attention they had all along shewn to this equipment, paid us a visit on the 8th of June, to examine whether everything had been completed conformably to their intentions and orders, and to the satisfaction of all who were to embark on the voyage. They, and several other noblemen and gentlemen, their friends, honored me with their company at dinner on that day; and on their coming on board, and also on their going ashore, we saluted them with seventeen guns, and three cheers."

How Japan Is Progressing.

The government of Japan has framed a scheme for the construction of new railway lines with a view to improving the transportation system throughout the country. The plan includes the construction of 28 new lines with a total length of 842 miles, the lines traversing 31 prefectures. The cost of construction is estimated at 170,000,000 yen. The program is spread over 11 years, the work being expected to commence by the next fiscal year. This scheme will be submitted to the railway council, which will be convinced shortly, and afterward will be introduced in the imperial diet. If the plan is approved, the construction of 12 lines will be started in the course of the next fiscal year, to be followed by 16 other lines the following year.

How Mocking Bird Fights.

It is not only as a singer that the mocking bird of the South wins the admiration of his human friends. He's plucky, and just as ready for a fight in defense of his nest as for a song. He and his mate will attack a chicken hawk in flight, a dangerous procedure for any bird.

On one occasion a great buzzard was seen sitting on a large limb within a few feet of a mocking bird nest. He was attacked first by the hen bird, which left her nest to scold and shout imprecations at the unwelcome guest. Her mate soon heard the rumpus and joined the fray. They never paused a moment in their efforts until even the sluggish vulture was forced to flap slowly away through the trees, defeated.

CARABAO CALLED IT A DAY

Animal Willingly Made Three Daily Trips to the Well, but Absolutely Refused the Fourth.

Our water supply on Bongao island in the Sulu archipelago was obtained from a well that had been dug by our Spanish predecessors. It penetrated to the underlying coral rock and gave up water so brackish that we at an early date went back to the high ground and tried to find a fresh supply. We found it about a mile from the shore and sufficient in quantity for all purposes. I sent up to Jolo by the next steamer for a water cart and a carabao, and in time a huge carabao bull with a 150gallon cart was added to our colony. He was as usual a stolid but cheerful animal, inured to any amount of labor; but we soon found that three trips a day gave us a sufficient supply for all

This continued for about one month with no variation, when for some reason it became necessary to increase the supply. We then found that the carabao declined to make the fourth trip and nothing would affect him-bribes, punishment or torture of any kind. He simply lay on the ground and chewed his cud and placidly declined to move. He had made up his mind that three cartloads of water were sufficient for any well-regulated garrison and declined to make any further effort. The next morning he was perfectly willing to bring in another three loads, but nothing would induce him to bring in a fourth. He was perfectly willing to allow a barrel to be slung on the cart and have his load increased to that extent but another trip he would not make.—Sydney A. Cloman in the World's Work.

ODD SOURCE OF INSPIRATION

Beethoven Said to Have Found Motif In the Persistent Sound of Door Knocker,

To an ordinary mind it would scarcely seem possible that much music could be got out of a door-knocker. Yet it was this sound which is said to have inspired Beethoven's glorious violin concerto in D. As the musician lay awake one night shaping the concerto in his mind, his musings were interupted by a belated neighbor who was endeavoring to arouse his housekeeper and get her to come down and let him in. Beethoven heard his persistent knocking for admissionfour slow deliberate knocks at a time, The constant repetition gave the composer the idea he sought and those four knocks are heard all through the opening movement of the concerto, which begins with four unaccompanied D's on the drum-seemingly as unmelodious and unpromising an opening phrase as one could imagine In commenting upon the circumstance Sir George Grove has said "those four knocks were to Beethoven what the hulk of the old Temeraire was to Turner, or the daffodils to Wordsworthcommonplace in themselves, but transmuted by the fire of genius into an imperishable monument.'

As one enters the booth in which the scene is installed, one finds it hard to believe that he is looking at the combined work of the artificer and the painter, and not on the actual shelving rock hundreds of feet above the Hudson, with the mother-bird polsed in the summer air, hovering over the nest with the food for her young grasped in her claws.

"Well, the heroine came stealthily on the stage and knelt, dagger in hand, behind a clump of ribbons. The hero emerged from a large bunch of purple flowers and as soon as she perceived him she fell upon him, stabbed him and sank half-conscious into a very handsome aigrette. GRAVES-HORGAN.

The following memorandum appeared in the Army-Navy Journal, last

"Colonel Rogers Birnie, Ordnance retired, and Mrs. Birnie announce the marriage of their daughter, Lucy Birnie Horgan, to Major Ernest Graves. Engineers retired, at Baltimore, Md., June 8, 1923.

Colonel Birnie before retirement was one of the most prominent officers in the Ordnance Department of the Army. Afterwards, during the World War, he supervised large munition manufacturing for the Interna-tional Arms and Fuse Company.

Major Graves is widely known throughout the Army in connection with West Point football. He was on the Punitive Expedition into Mexico with General Pershing, and later was taken to France by the General. There he was awarded the Distinguished Service medal for exceptionally meritorious services on construction work.

IN MEMORIAM MISS MARIA ANGELL who departed this life June 28, 1922.

Ripe in years, Rich in faith, Unselfish in life Victorious in death.

We remember you! We recall every glance and flash of your eye,

And even the way that you used to walk;
And the fair sweet sunrise of your coming nigh, And we listen still to your old sweet talk; We have never forgotten a thing you said,

said,
No, not a gesture that went with a word;
Nor a wave of your hand, nor a turn of your head,
We can recall all we saw, all we heard.
We remember you! We remember you!

And so often we listen to hear you speak

And are so certain and sure that you will;

And then in surprise, we grow suddenly

That cometh no word from your lips That cometh no word from your hips so still.

We would gladly miss aught of good in our life,
Could we but see you, and feel you anear;
For our hearts are a weary of cruel strife Which you could so easily heal, our dear

We remember you!

Chinese Fortune Teller Was Merely Wishing That Good Luck Might Follow His Customer.

To have your fortune told in China is likely to be rather an ordeal. In "Beyond Shanghai" Mr. Harold Speakman describes a curious experience that he once had with a fortune teller at Wuchang. What the fellow told him was something astonishing-considering the length of time he took to tell it.

Asking Ah Chow, my interpreter, to listen attentively, says Mr. Speakman, I sat down at the book-littered table of a large prophet with a benign expression and horn-rimmed spectacles. All that he had to work with was a pair of dirty hands with long, razorlike nails that he instantly began to play about my face with all the abandon of an excited orchestra leader. Hoping that the prophecy he was to make might not include the immediate loss of my eyesight, I sat still and waited. After he had felt my head, thumped my chest and looked at my palms he seized my left hand and began to shout; his voice boomed out like a bell. In a minute I was the center of a large and eager crowd. In three minutes the crowd that listened breathless to every word blocked all ways of escape.

The fortune teller gave his prediction in short, precise sentences each of which began vociferously with the preface, "Yehalla!" What with the humidity of the crowd and the steady bombardment of yehallas close to my ear, I decided after five minutes that it was time to depart. With a smile and a bow that I meant should convey thanks and finality I tried to withdraw my hand from the grasp of the prophet; but he only held on the tighter and fairly peppered me with yehallas. Should he cheat a foreigner? No-no! Four hundred cash had been paid, and the yehallas were only half finished! At last after I had begun to have morbid thoughts of knocking him on the head and of escaping in the confusion he let go his talonlike grip. We rose moistly and made our way out through the sweating crowd, which opened in respectful silence in front of us. For nine minutes by the watch he had foretold just what the future would hold for me, and, though I thought him a faker, I was curious to know just what he had been saying during all that time, "What," I asked Ah Chow, "did the fortune teller say?" "Oh," replied Ah Chow, "he say, 'Good luck!' "-Youth's Companion.

New Camera Does Wonders. Instant changeabilty from standard-size moving pictures to doublesize still pictures, through aperture and shutter control; adaptation of the intermittent movement, replacing the customary claw movement; reduction in size, increased capacity, daylight loading; wider range of utility, with elimination of tripod, if necessary, are features of a new moving picture camera designed by a Seattle war veteran who served as aviation photographer in France for 14 months. The new camera, described in Popular Mechanics Magazine, can be carried about and used for still pictures like an ordinary hand camera. Used in this manner it has a capacity of 3,200 pictures, either standard moving picture size, 34 inch by 1 inch, or double size, 11/2 inch by 1 inch, which latter can be enlarged with sharpness up to 8 by 10 inches. About 200 snapshots can be made in the time consumed in taking six with the ordinary roll film camera. This is, perhaps, the most important

Shows Power of Lenses. An instrument, by the use of which the effective power of lenses may be ascertained, has been designed so that. although it will give accurate results, it is comparatively low-priced. The mechanism, described in Popular Mechanics Magazine, consists of an upright bracketed support carrying at one end a sliding telescopic lens system and a seat for the lens to be examined. Projecting from the other end of the bracket is a triangular bar marked with a dioptric scale, upon which is mounted a sliding carrier, fitted with an illuminated target and a rotating axis dial. The target is mounted inside a rotating dial, which is graduated so that the axis of the

CLAIMS EARTH IS TOPSHAPED

French Scientist Puts Forth Theory That Will Be Found More or Less Interesting.

A French scientist finds in the great depths of the Arctic ocean an argument tending to show that the earth is slightly topshaped, the protuberance corresponding to the point of the top being at the South pole. This, he thinks, would explain the different results arrived at by the various measurements of astronomers and geodesists. The differences are very small in comparison with the entire bulk of the globe, yet they are readily appreciable, and one of the explanations that has been suggested for them is that the earth is tetrahedral in form. But the Frenchman thinks the topshape theory is preferable. The fact that to an eye looking at the earth from a point in space it would not sensibly differ in appearance from a true sphere shows how refined are the methods of science which enable men living on the surface of the globe to detect variations in its general contour .- New York Herald.

Theory of Relativity.

Einstein is said to have made the statement that only 12 men could understand his theory. This statement referred to it in its mathematical entirety, and not to a common sense understanding. In a general way everyone understands Newton's law of gravitation, although to grasp it fully one must know the calculus. In a similar way the layman can understand the relativity theory, stated by a famous mathematician to be: "One cannot determine the speed of any object moving at a uniform rate of speed in a straight line, by any experiment in motion or light, and the moving object changes its length in relation to speed and direction of its motion."

This theory had its forerunners in many countries, but is an outgrowth. more specifically, of the attempt to find the velocity of the earth's motion by a very delicate experiment with light. The theory also makes instantaneity a relative matter.

Looking Both Ways. Billy Kane, an Irish hackman of Ma-

It was in evidence that three boys were standing on the edge of the platform as the train came in. The lawyer for the railroad was cross-examining Mr. Kane pretty severely, and the sharper he became the more exasperating seemed the witness' answers. Finally he demanded the witness tell him the exact position of those boys. "Well, sir," replied Mr. Kane smoothly, "their backs was a-facing the east."

Taneytown 17-Union Bridge 2.

Taneytown more than squared matters for the present, with Union Bridge, by unmercifully hammering pitchers Jett and Martin in the game of last Saturday, at Union Bridge, but it was not until the 5th. inning that the bombardment commenced. Martin replaced Jett in the box, in the 9th., but was hit harder than Jett. Bock was hit, too, but sharp fielding prevented scoring.

Taneytown 10-New Windsor 8.

New Windsor was defeated by Taneytown Wednesday though outhitting her opponents, by a score of 10 to 8 due to careless base running and a weakening of pitchers at critical times. Fisher in right shone for Taneytown, both a field and at the bat. Although credited with one error, the fielding of O'Keefe was most brilliant, handling severe hard hit balls and starting two double plays. The fussy station master of a small village near Edinburgh found one night a fellow country-man standing, nonchalantly smoking, with his feet half over the edge of the "up" plat-

While the Osage Indians of Oklahoma are idly wallowing in the inherited wealth of oil lands, the Blackfeet tribe of Glacier National Park reservation today has achieved a reputa-tion for thrift that brings to its 3,000 members high compliments from the Indian Department. So much wheat was raised last year by these Indians that the government built them a $65,000 gristmill to grind their grain for them. This is the first time in the history of United States civilization of the Indian that a tribe has become self-supporting through its own thrift

The Cherry Is Popular.

The wild cherry is dever found growing in abundance in any locality. Its popularity for decorative work has led to the destruction of much cherry, and there has never been sufficient provision for replacing the trees cut, says Nature Magazine. Those who have given the matter study note with alarm the growing scarcity of the black cherry and see that unless greater care is taken in future it will soon become extinct.

Bridge Connecting Florida Cities Is to Be in Many Respects a Remarkable Structure.

A thousand spans! Where fromwhere to? New York to Liverpool is perhaps suggested, as you undertake to calculate mentally how far a thousand spans like those of the Queensboro bridge in New York would reach. It is no such ambitious project, however, for the thousand spans of this bridge would not cover the distance from the Woolworth building to Sandy Hook. The spans will be very short -only about 14 feet each, but even so. it will be some bridge!

A mere $2,000,000 will build the 14,000 feet of structure and 16,000 feet of approaches, which seems a modest sum for so much bridge.

The Gandy bridge, as it is called, will be the largest undertaking of its kind in America, with two exceptions -the Flagler-Key West extension and the structure at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Its purpose is to shorten the distance between Tampa and St. Petersburg, Fla., 38 miles.

How long does it take to drive 38 miles? How must does it cost? Many could answer the first question-very few could correctly answer the last. The Gandy Bridge company is betting $2,000,000 that at least 2,000 motorists a day will spend 75 cents rather than drive an additional 38 miles to go from one of these Florida cities to the other .- Popular Mechanics Maga-

ORIGINATOR OF "UNCLE SAM"

Government Worker Sald to Have Created the Phrase Following the War of 1812.

This is one story of how the expression, "Uncle Sam," popular name for the United States government, is said to have originated: Immediately after the declaration of war against England in 1812, Elbert Anderson of New York, then a contractor, visited Troy, N. Y., where there was concentrated and where he purchased a large quantity of provisions, beef, pork and so forth. Samuel Wilson, an inspector of these articles at that place, was generally known as "Uncle Sam." He superintended, in person, a large number of workmen, who on this occasion, were employed in overhauling the provisions purchased by the contractor for the army. The casks were marked "E. A .- U. S." This work fell to the lot of a facetious fellow in the employ of the inspector, who, on being asked by some of his fellow workmen the meaning of the mark (for the letters U. S., for the United States, were then entirely new to them), said he did not know unless it meant "Elbert Anderson" and "Uncle Sam"-alluding exclusively, then, to the said "Uncle Sam" Wilson. The joke took among the workmen and passed currently; and "Uncle Sam" himself, being present, was occasionally rallied by them on the increasing extent of his possessions.

Matrimonial Adventures

The Bright Bees of Toupan

JUST A LITTLE ABOUT JAMES BRANCH CABELL

Mr. Cabell is to me a very pleasant voice over the telephone. I called him up when I reached Richmond. He lives five miles out of town. He had already joined the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures through the solicitation of Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer.

town. He had already joined the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures through the solicitation of Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer.

I wanted to talk to Mr. Cabell about his story for the series, but the warm sunshine and the spring flowers that the New Yorker sometimes erroneously associates with Virginia were visiting elsewhere. It was snowing when I arrived and Richmond had become a jeweled city of gleaming icicles when I left the next morning. I did not meet Mr. Cabell, because the roads to town did not take kindly to the weather and motor traveling was unsafe.

If James Branch Cabell had written nothing else, as the author of "Jurgon" alone he would have a unique place in American letters. But Mr. Cabell's other books are an additional reason for his high place in American literature. "The Bright Bees of Toupan" follows, and I know of no other writer who would have treated the very intricate subject of marriage in this perfectly delightful fairly-tale style.

After all, should artists marry? I leave it to you—and Mr. Cabell, MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

Miramon Lluagor had very wonderfully prospered at magic; he was, as they say, now blessed with more than any reasonable person would ask for, and the most clamant of these superfluities appeared to him to be his wife.

They tell how Miramon was one of the Leshy, born of a people that was neither human nor immortal, telling how his home was builded upon the summit of the mountain called Vraidex. Here in the old days dwelt Miramon Lluagor, at a discreet remove from the prudishness of men and the disreputable amours of the High Gods, retiredly in his Doubtful Palace; wherein, as they report also, this wizard designed the dreams for sleep.

His taste was for the richly romantic. But his wife Gisele had quite other notions, a whole set of notions, and her philosophy was that of belligerent individualism. And the wizard, to keep peace, at least in the intervals between his wife's more mordantly loquacious moments, would design such dreams as Gisele preferred. But he knew that these dreams did not express the small thoughts and fancies which harbored in the heart of Miramon Lluagor, and which would perish with the falling of his doom unless he wrought the fancies into dreams that, being fleshless, might evade carnivorous time. And Miramon hungered for the lost freedom of his bachelorhood.

His wife also was discontent, because the ways of the Leshy appeared to this mortal woman indecorous. The doom that was upon the Leshy seemed not entirely in good taste to her who had been born of a race about whom destiny did not bother; in fact, it was a continual irritation to her that her little boy Demetrios was predestinate to kill his father with the charmed sword Flamberge. This was a doom which Madame Gisele found not at all the sort of thing you cared to have imminent in your own family; and she felt that the sooner the gray Norns, who weave the fate of all that live, were spoken to quite candidly, the better it would be for everybody concerned.

She was irritated by the mere sight of Flamberge. So her thinking was not of silk and honey when, after polishing the sword as was her usage upon Thursday morning, she came into Miramon's ivory tower to hang the weapon in its right place. With Miramon sat that sleek person whom men called Ninzian. It was not known to all of Ninzian's friends that he was an evil spirit who had come out of the Bottomless Pit to work iniquity; but Miramon Lluagor knew this, and therefore he made appropriate use of the demon, and indeed upon this very afternoon the two were looking at that which Ninzian had procured for the wizard at a price.

"Good-day to you, Sir Ninzian," says Madame Gisele, politely enough. And then she spoke, in a different tone, to Miramon Lluagor. "And with what are you cluttering up the house now?"

"Ah, wife," replies Miramon, "these are the bees of Toupan, a treasure beyond word or thinking. They are not as other bees, for theirs is the appearance of shining ice; and they crawl fretfully, as they have crawled since Toupan's downfall, about this cross of black stone—"

"That is a very likely story for you to be telling me, who can see that the disgusting creatures have wings to fly away with whenever they want to. And besides, who in the world is Tounan?"

"He is nobody in this world, wife, and it is wiser not to speak of him.

Let it suffice that he made all things as they were. Then Koshchei took the power from Toupan, and made all things as they are. Yet three of Toupan's servitors endure upon earth, where they who were once lords of the Vendish have now no power remaining save to creep humbly as insects; the use of their wings is denied them, the charmed stone holds them immutably. Oho, but wife, there is a cantrap which would free them, a cantrap which nobody has as yet discovered, and to their releaser will be granted whatever his will may desire."

"This is some more of your stuff and nonsense, out of old fairy teles, where everybody gets three wishes, and no good out of any of them."

"No, my love, because I shall put them to quite practical uses. For you must know that when I have found out the cantrap which will release the bees of Toupan—"

Gisele showed plainly that his foolishness did not concern her. She sighed, and hung the sword in its accustomed place. "Oh, but I am weary of this endless wizardry!"

"Then, wife," says Miramon, "then why are you perpetually meddling with what you do not understand?"

"I think," said Ninzian, at once, for this demon, too, was married, "I think that I had best be going."

But Gisele's attention was reserved for her husband. "I meddle, as you so very politely call it, because you have no sense of what is right and proper, and no sense of morals, and no sense of expediency, and in fact, no sense at all."

Miramon said, "Now, dearest—!"
Sir Ninzian was hastily picking up his hat. But Gisele continued, with that resistless and devastating onflow which is peculiar to tidal waves and the tongue of her who speaks for her husband's own good.

"Women everywhere have a hard time of it, but in particular do I pity the woman that is married to one of you moonstruck artists. She has not half a husband, she has but the tending of a baby with long legs—"

"It is so much later than I thought, that really now—" observed Ninzian, ineffectively. "-And I might have had an earl, or a well-thought-of-baron, who would have had the decency to remember our anniversary and my birthday, and in any event would never have been in the house twenty-four hours a day. Instead here I am tied to a muddlehead who fritters away his time contriving dreams that nobody cares about one way or the other. Yet if only you would be sensible about your silly business I could put up with the inconvenience of having you underfoot every moment. People need dreams to help them through the night, and nobody enjoys a really good dream more than I do when I have time for it, with the million and one tlings that are put upon me. But dreams ought to be wholesome, they ought to point an uplifting moral, and certainly they ought not to be about incomprehensible thin nonsense that nobody can halfway understand. They ought, in other words.

pretty good sort of place after all—"
"But, wife, I am sure that it is,"
says Miramon, mildly.
"Then the more shame to you! and such morbid notions to yourself, and you can do is to keep to make you feel that the world is a not be upsetting other people's repose with them."

"I employ my natural gift, I express myself and none other. The rosebush does not put forth wheat, nor flax either," returned the wizard, with a tired shrug. "In fine, what would you have?"

"Oh, a great deal it means to you what I prefer! But if I had my wish your silly dream-making would be taken away from you so that we might live sensibly."

Now as she spoke Gisele slapped viciously at the black cross. And a thing happened to behold which would have astonished the magi and the enchanters who had given over centuries to searching for the cantrap which would release the bees of Toupan. For now without any exercise of magic the scouring rag swept from the stone one of these insects. Koshchei, who made all things as they are, had decreed, they report, that these bright perils could be freed only in the most obvious way, because he knew this would be the last method attempted by any learned persons.

Now for an instant the walls of the ivory tower were a-quiver like blown veils. And the bee passed glitteringly to the window, and through the clear glass of the closed window, leaving a small round hole there as the creature went to join its seven fellows in the Pleiades.

Toupan, afloat in the void, unclosed his ancient unappeasable eyes; and Jacy returned to his aforetime estate in the moon, and all plants and trees everywhere were withered, and the sea also lost its greenness, and there were no more emeralds. And the High Gods were appalled to see their doom so near at hand, and they cried out to Koshchei who devised them.

Koshchei answered: "Have patience! When Toupan is released I fall with you. Meanwhile I have made all things as they are." And in that instant Miramon Lluagor, as he stood blinking in his ivory tower, was aware of a touch upon his forehead, as if a damp sponge were passing over it, and he perceived that he had forgotten the secret of his wizardry. Something he could yet recall, they say, of the magic of the Purin and the cast stones, of the Horse and the Bull, of the Water, and most of the lore of the Apsarasas and the Faidhin rune remained to him. He could still make shift, he knew, to control the bitter Duergar, to build the fearful bridge of the White Ladies, or to contrive the dance of the Korred. He kept his mastery of the Shedeem who devastate, of the Shehireem who terrify, and of the Mazikeen who destroy. But such accomplishments, as he despairingly knew, were the stock in trade of any fairly competent sorcerer anywhere; and that supreme secret which had made Miramon Lluagor the master of all dreams was gone away from him completely.

He was very angry. "Accursed woman!" he cried out, "now indeed has your common sense completed what your nagging began. This is the doom of all artists that have to do with well-conducted women. Truly has it been said that the marriage bed is the grave of art. Well, I have put up with much from you, but this settles it, and I wish you were in the middle of next week."

With that he caught the soiled scouring rag from the hand of Gisele, and he slapped at one of the remaining bees, and brushed it from the black cross. And this bee departed as the other had done.

Toupan now moved his wings, exulting, and by his moving the worlds in that part of the universe were dislodged and ran melting down the sky; Gauracy swept the fragments together and formed a sun immeasurably greater than that which he had lost. And the High Gods were frightened now with reason, for in this intolerable glare they showed as flimsy and incredible inventions, and they knew that if ever the last remaining bee were freed from the cross, the dizain of the Pleiades would be completed, and their day would be over, and the power would return to Toupan.

Yet Koshchei, lifting never a finger, said only: "Eh, sirs, have patience! For I made all things as they are, and I know now it is my safeguard that I have made them in two ways."

But Miramon, in his Ivory tower upon Vraidex, knew only that his wish had been granted, for Gisele had gone just as a bubble breaks.

"And a good riddance, too," says

Miramon. He turned to Ninzian, that smiling fiend. "Why, did you ever see the like of such outrageousness!"

"Oh very often" replied this Ninger

"Oh, very often," replied this Ninzian, who too was married. Then Ninzian asked, "But what will you do next?"

Says Miramon, "I shall wish to have back the secret and the solace of my art."

But to Ninzian this seemed less obvious. "You may do that by releasing the third bee. Yes, Miramon, you can get back your art, but you will be left defenseless against the doom which is appointed. No, friend, by my advice you will employ the cantrap as you at first intended, and will secure for yourself eternal life by wishing that Flamberge may vanish from this world of men." And Ninzian waved toward the sword with which the Norns had foreordained that Miramon Lluagor must be killed by his

The fallen wizard answered: "Of what worth is life if it breed no more dreams?" And Miramon said also, "I wonder, Ninzian, just where is the middle of next week?"

Sleek Ninzian spoke, secure in his infernal erudition. "It will fall upon a Wednesday, but nobody knows whence. Olybrius states that it is now in Aratu, where all that enter are clothed like a bird with wings, and have only dust and clay to eat in the unchanging twilight—"

"She would not like that. She had always a delicate digestion."

"—Whereas Asinius Pollio suggests, not unplausibly, that it waits beyond Slid and Gjold, in the blue house of Nostrand, where Sereda herds the unborn Wednesdays, under a roof of plaited serpents—"

"Dear me, now that would never suit a woman who had an almost morbid aversion to reptiles!"

"—But Sosicles declares it is in Nibalba, where Zipacna and Cabrakan play at handball, and the earthquakes are at nurse—"

"She would be none the happier there. She does not care for babies, she would not for one moment put up with a fractious young earthquake, and would make things most unpleasant for everybody. Ninzian"—and Miramon coughed—"Ninzian, I begin to fear I have been a little hasty."

"It is the frailty of all you artists," the flend replied. "In any event you have one wish remaining, and no more. You can at will desire to have back again the control of your lost magics, or you can have back your wife to control you."

"Yes," says Miramon, forlornly.

"And indeed," the demon went on, with that glib optimism reserved for the dilemmas of one's friends, "indeed it is in many ways a splendid thing for you to have the choice clear cut. Nobody can succeed alike at being an artist and a husband. I hold no brief for either career, because I think that art is an unreasonable mistress, and I think also that a wife is amenable to the same description. But

I am certain no man can serve both." Miramon sighed. "That is true. There is no marriage for the maker of dreams, because he is perpetually creating finer women than earth provides. The touch of flesh cannot content him who has arranged the shining hair of angels and modeled the breasts of the sphinx. The woman that shares his bed is there, of course, much as the blanket or the pillow is there, and each is an aid to comfort. But what has the maker of dreams, what has that troubled being who lives inside the creature which a mirror reveals to him, to do with women? At best, these animals afford him models to be idea!ized beyond the insignificant truth. somewhat as I have made a soul-contenting portent with only a lizard to can live through no half-hour without meddling where they do not under-

Now Miramon kept silence. He was fingering the magic colors with which he blazoned the first sketches of his dream. Here was his white, which was the foam of ocean made solid, and the black he had wrung from the burned bones of nine emperors. Here was the yellow slime of Scyros, and crimson cinnabaris composed of the mingled blood of behemoths and dragons, and here was the poisonous blue sand of Puteoli. And Miramon, who was no longer a potent wizard, considered that loveliness and horror which a moment ago he had known how to evoke with these pigments, he who had now no power to lend life to his designs, and kept just skill enough it might be to place the stripings on a barber's pole.

And Miramon Lluagor said: "It would be a sad happening if I were never again to sway the sleeping of men, and grant them yet more dreams of distinction and clarity, of beauty and symmetry, of tenderness and truth and urbanity. For whether they like it or not, I know that it is good for them, and it affords to their starved living that which they lack and ought to have."

And Miramon said also: "Yet it would be another sad happening were my poor wife permitted eternally to scold the shivering earthquakes in the middle of next week. What does it matter that I do not especially like her? There is a great deal about myself that I do not like, such as my body's flabbiness, and the small nose which makes ludicrous the face I wear; but do I hanker to be transformed into a sturdy man-at-arms? Do I view the snout of an elephant with covetousness? Why, but, Ninzian, I am astonished at your foolish talking! What need have I of perfection? What would I have in common with anybody who was patient with me and thought highly of my doings? No. Ninzian, it is in vain that you pester me with your continuous talking, for I am as used to her shortcomings as I am to my own shortcomings. I regard her tantrums with the resignation I extend to inclement weather. It is unpleasant. All tempests are unpleasant. Ah, yes, but if life should become an endless clear May afternoon we could not endure it; we who have once been lashed by storms would cross land and sea to look for snow and pelting hail. Just so, to have Gisele about keeps me perpetually fretted, but now that she is gone I am miserable. No, Ninzian, you may spare your talking, you need say no more, for I simply could not put up with being left to live in comfort."

Sir Ninzian had heard him through, with that patience which is requisite to frends. And Ninzian, shrugging, said, "Then do you choose Miramon for your wife and no more dreams, or for your art and loneliness?"

"Such wishing would be overwasteful," Miramon replied, as he dusted away the third bee. "Since I can bear to give up neither my wife nor my art, no matter how destroyingly they work against each other, I wish for everything to be put back just where it was an hour ago."

The last bee flew in a wide circle, and returned to the cross. Life reawoke in all which had perished in that hour, and Gauracy's baleful sun was gone, and the dislodged worlds and satellites were revolving trimly in their former places. And the High Gods rejoiced; for there were only seven Pleiades, and Toupan, afloat in the void, again seemed harmless enough, because the eyes were closed wherein is tireless and unappeasable malignity, and a foreknowledge which is perturbing to the Gods.

Koshchei said only: "What need was there to worry? Did I not make my creatures male and female? And did I not make the tie which is between them, that cord which I wove equally of love and of disliking? Eh, sirs, but that is a strong cord, and though all things that are depend upon It, my weaving holds."

But Miramon in his ivory tower knew nothing of how he had played havoc with the universe; he only knew that upon the black stone cross three bees were crawling fretfully, and that his wife Gisele had come back to him enraged.

"A pretty trick that was to play on me!" she says. "Oh, but I pity the woman that is married to an artist!" "But why do you perpetually meddle without understanding?" he redle without understanding?" he replied, as fretful as the accursed bees, as angry as the intolerable woman.

And they went on very much as before.

Ireland's Famine of 1847.

In 1847, famine in Ireland shocked the sensibilities of the people of the United States, who devised means to relieve some portion of the distress, concerning which many painful accounts were printed in the papers at the time, the Detroit News recalls. American vessels were freighted by private subscriptions in the United States and were sent on errands of mercy to Ireland, where entire families were howling with the pangs of hunger, and dying upon the pavements of a crowded city, while speculators in breadstuffs furtively cast the "sweated" portions of their granaries into the nighttide, that it might be carried out

Study. The different characters can be assigned the week before, upon which the pupils are to bring a brief essay or report giving a sketch of the particular hero

A third method is to give a brief summary of each lesson.

Lesson 1—The truth concerning the risen Christ is the answer for all our questions and the impulse of our testimony to others.

Lesson 2-Abraham in obedience to the call of God went out not knowing whither he went. He so completely trusted God that he was willing to go all the way with Him.

Lesson 3-Though Joseph was sold into slavery because of the hatred of his brethren, God exalted him to a place of power in Egypt.

Lesson 4-Even though Pharaoh's decree was for the destruction of all the male children of the Hebrews, Moses was preserved and educated in the Egyptian court.

Lesson 5-When Ruth became acquainted with the true God, she chose to turn her back upon her native land and kindred and identify herself with God's people.

Lesson 6-Samuel was given in answer to his mother's prayer. In early boyhood his mother gave him back to the Lord.

Lesson 7-When Samuel went to anoint a new king over Israel, he had all the sons of Jesse pass before him. Although to human eyes the eldest seemed fitted to be a king, and although outer appearances were favorable, the inner reality as seen by God was against him.

Lesson 8-Elijah threw down to the people a ringing challenge, calling upon the people to decide between Baal and the Lord. The God who answered by fire was to be the true God. Lesson 9-Upon the sight of the Lord, Isaiah was convicted of his sin. When cleansed by fire from the divine altar he heard and responded to the call of God.

Lesson 10-Jeremiah, for his faithfulness in making known the Word of the Lord, was most bitterly hated and persecuted. Though he was regarded as a traitor and put into the place of death, he remained faithful to God.

Lesson 11-When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem, he was moved with pity for them. Although he enjoyed prosperity, he grieved over the grave distress of his people.

Lesson 12-In the providence of God. Esther came to be queen of Persia at an opportune time to save her people. There is a definite place and purpose in every life.

June 24 How Can We Win Friends and Keep Them?

Proverbs 27:5, 6, 9, 10. The words of Proverbs 18:24 may well be added to the verses given above. Here is disclosed the first essential in winning friends and in keeping them. In the Authorized Version, it reads, "A man that hath many friends must show himself friendly. The Revised Version gives a different rendering and reads in this way, "He that maketh many friends, doeth it to his own destruction, but there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." In order to find friends, one must be friendly. People are not drawn to those of unfriendly dispo-sitions. It is also true that the kind of friends one makes determines worth of the friendship. If the friends made are simply feeders, borrowers or so-called spongers, then "he that maketh many friends doeth it to his own destruction. The counsel of the other Scripture verses is worthy of careful attention. "To tried friends be fatihful." Friendships must be tested and tried. To those that stand the test, to those really tried in the various experiences of life and not found wanting, to those be faithful and true at any cost.

Again, "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." A true friend will not shrink from the task of kindly criticism and correction. The process may not be pleasant to either party in the friendship, but it will be for the profit of both.

"There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother"—the Lord Jesus Christ. How may we gain and hold His friendship? "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." These words were spoken to those who had put faith in Him and made Him the Lord of their lives. Have you followed their good example?

WAYS WITH MUTTON

The English appreciate mutton, and America is coming to know more about the wholesome meat, and is learning to serve it in different ways. The wooly taste, which is so objectionable, is not present, if the animal has been carefully dressed. If the cook removes the skin from the meat it will remove every trace of the wooly flavor.

Mutton Macaroni,-Take two cupfuls of cooked macaroni, three cupfuls of diced cooked mutton, one-half cupful of tomato puree, one teaspoonful of curry powder, one egg, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, and salt to taste. Heat the tomato, add the curry, one tablespoonful of butter and a scant teaspoonful of salt with white pepper to taste. Remove from the fire and add the egg beaten lightly, then the diced mutton and the macaroni cut in half-inch lengths. Taste to see if properly seasoned. Butter a baking dish and on it mound the mixture; sprinkle generously with buttered crumbs and cover tightly; place in a moderate oven. When heated through remove the cover and brown. Loosen carefully and slip onto a hot platter. Garnish with parsley; serve with crisp celery and baked sweet potatoes.

Shepherd's Pie.-Take one pound of cold cooked mutton, one pint of cold boiled potatoes, one-half an onion grated, one cooked carrot finely minced or grated. Cut the mutton and potatoes into dice, put them with the onion and carrot into a deep dish, add one cupful of stock or water, salt, pepper and bits of butter. For the crust pare and boil four medium-sized potatoes; mash them, add one-quarter cupful of cream and salt and pepper. Beat until very light, add flour to roll in a thick sheet, cover the top of the dish, making a cross in the crust for a vent to let out the steam. Bake one hour in a moderate oven. A few capers and a stalk of celery added to the pie will vary the seasoning.

Bread Pudding.-Spread stale bread with butter and place in a baking Cover with any canned fruit using plenty of juice. Bake until hot and serve with cream or with a hard

New Use for Stamps.

Auntie was writing letters while four-year-old Maurice was busy with his street car. Presently auntie was called to the telephone, leaving writing materials on the table. Returning, she found postage stamps missing. Maurice had been told that to put a stamp on a letter it was ready

In her search for the stamps auntie remarked: "Oh, pshaw," to which Maurice said: "Why, what's the matter?" On being told of the missing stamps, he said: "Why, I stuck them on my street car, so it would 'go,' " and there they were plain to be seen.

SERVANTS

Let every man mind his own business.—Cervantes.

THERE is a certain type of person who thinks, always, that brusqueness, even rudeness, to the servants of his friends shows familiarity with the ways of the world. Let us hope that these persons are those who have had little chance to get about, little chance to mingle with those who know how things should be done—that they are those who have never had servants of their own, and have had few friends who numbered servants among their possessions. Sometimes, unfortunately, we meet women who have always been used to servants who yet have an overbearing attitude toward the servants of their friends. We always suspect that they gossip with their own servants. Now, in the big cities, at least, servants resent an appearance of friendliness of a too informal sort on their employers' parts. In their relation as servant, especially where they have specialized, they wish to assume a deferential manner, just as they wish to have their employers assume a directing manner. That is part of the game. They expect the same treatment from their employers' friends.

But there is a manner, between one of overbearing haughtiness and one of ostentatious friendliness, that the wellbred man or woman assumes to his friends' servants. And it is really only the outward manifestation of a kindly consideration to others, whatever their rank or walk in life.

To begin with, always greet your friends' servants, if you have visited the house often enough to know them. A simple word of greeting is sufficient. That is, if you are a week-end guest in a house, and the maid brings a letter to your door before breakfast, say "Good morning, Jane." And always thank them, simply, for services rendered. If you call frequently at a house, and the same servant always answers the door, remember a simple word of greeting then. Never ask favors of your friends' servants, either when you are visiting in their homes or when you might be able to make a convenience of them at

RESPONSIBILITY

NOT until you have arrived at the place of life where you can show willingness and ability to shoulder responsibility will you be in a position to keep step with the noble men and women who are moving steadily forward toward success.

You can never hope to get at the top by remaining at the bottom of the ladder in sulks. Nor can you rise from the low level where the complaining masses are without first making sacrifices and fitting yourself for the ascent.

There must be within you superior skill, which you know, as well as those above and below you know, cannot be acquired except by tireless diligence and continuous effort in the right di rection.

To dare responsibility without being properly equipped, both mentally and physically, is to make a hazardous ven ture with all the fates arrayed against

THE HAND OF A MUSICIAN

IN THE hand of a person who is talented in music the skin is very smooth and soft. This indicates a refined, sensitive nature, with a great dislike for anything that is coarse or unrefined. As a musician of either sex must pay attention to details, the fingers must be long in proportion to the rest of the hand.

In the hands of many musicians the thumb, at its outer angle or joint, is quite pointed. This is held to show a good idea of time or rhythm. A sense of tune is sometimes seen in a point or protuberance on the outside of the thumb, below the joint.

The mount of Venus should be fairly strong and high, to show melody, and this characteristic is seen also in a good mount of Saturn at the base of the middle finger. When there are a good mount of Apollo at the base of the third finger and a good mount of of the moon near the wrist, a decided sense of harmony is shown.

Plans of The Railroads For Greater Public Service

"Anticipating the greatest volume of freight traffic in their history this year, the railroads have adopted a concerted policy and intensive working program to enable to them to meet the growing transportation needs of the country.

"In full realization of necessity for the greatest improvement and expansion possible of the country's transportation facilities to meet the growing demands of commerce, the railroads have authorized, since January 1, 1922, for cars, locomotives, trackage and other facilities, the expenditure of $1,540,000,000, of which $440,-000,000 actually was expended during 1922.

"The railroads are raising this enormous amount of additional capital largely through borrowed money on the abiding faith in the fairness of the American people, and reliance on continuance of the policy announced in the Transportation Act of 1920, as a measure of reasonable protection to investment in railroad property.

"From January 1, 1922, to March 15, 1923, the railroads purchased 223,616 new freight cars. Of these, 117,280 have been delivered and put in service. The railroads during that time also purchased 4,219 new locomotives. Of that number 2,106 have already been placed in

"The railroads confidently look forward to the successful movement of the largest volume of traffic in the history of the country and pledge their best efforts to that end."

> -From a joint statement by the Association of Railway Executives and the American Railway Association.

WHAT YOUR FRIENDSHIP MEANS

We want your friendly co-operation. It means much to the railroads, equally as much to the public. Our interests are identical, with a common purpose working towards a common end—the best possible transportation service.

This is the time to give orders for advertising fans for use this Summer or during the Carroll County Fair. We do not want to have more than one shipment of fans, on account of the expense, so get in now, and save expenses charges on later orders.

Newspaper a Business Guide.

The newspaper that carries a good line of advertising is to the shopper what the time table is to the traveler and the published guide is to the tourist. Busy people will study these advertisements in the home or in the office as they do a time table, and, before they start out shopping they have determined where they are going. The newcomer or visitor in the city finds the advertising columns of a newspaper a reliable guide to points of interest a matter of interest and time-saving.—The Ohio NewsCHURCH NOTICES.

Runs His Own Railroad.

The Baltimore American, last Wednesday, contained the following: "William M. Fleigh, veteran Western Maryland engineer, and pilot of the daily 4.30 Hagerstown-Baltimore express, can't get away from rail-roads. When he stops working for the Western Maryland, he runs his own system. When, in recognition of his years of service, the company allowed him three months leave of absence during the summer the veteran breathed a sigh of relief. He said: "Now I can take care of my railroad. It's nice to work for someone else, but once in a while I like to be my own boss. I own the Penmar system, operating more than 1800 feet of track at Penmar amusement park. "I've owned the road since 1904. It had quite an era of expansion right after the Jamestown exposition, when I bought all the miniature locomotives used there to provide power for my own transport.

"The line may be small, but it's the pusiest thing of its power that ever blew cinders. I've carried 2000 people in a day, with little six foot locomotives that a couple of men can lift on and off the track.

Still Buying Army Shoes.

Washington, June 19.—The Georgia Wholesale Grocery Company, of Jackson, Ga., became the owner today of 2,606,300 pairs of unused army trench shoes. The concern was the highest bidder at the War Department sale, offering $1.57 a pair.

More than 6,600 boys have been refused admission to St. Mary's Industrial School, for lack of accommodations since the big fire. No additional building can be undertaken at present because of the big debt. This statement was disclosed at the semiannual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the school last week.

This Will Astonish Taneytown People

The QUICK action of simple camphor, hydrastis, witchhazel, etc., as mixed in Lavoptik eye wash, will surprise Taneytown people. One man was helped immediately, after suffering with sore and red eyes for 15 years. An elderly lady reports Lavoptik strengthened her eyes so she can now read. One small bottle usually helps ANY CASE weak, strained or inflamed eyes. Aluminum eye cup FREE. R. S. McKinney.

How the Doctor Succeeded.

A young doctor, who had just tacked up his shingle, and being anxious for advice and information from an old regular, called on a prac-titioner of this sort and asked for inside tips, as it were.

"Tell me," he pleaded, "how did you manage to become one of the leading doctors of the city? Is there an 'open sesame,' or is it just plain

"Well," the old doctor confessed, "it's really a little of both. I've worked hard, there's no denying that. But I'll tell you how I really got my start. I had been struggling along several years, barely able to make ends meet. Something had to done. So, in order to pay my bills I just doubled my charges. My reputation as a leading physician dates from that time."—Kansas City Star.
