MORE WHEAT IN EUROPE.

NEVER BE

TOO BUSY TO READ

THE RECORD

Farmers Must Decide to Produce More Profitable Crops.

Europe is gradually getting back to normal in wheat production, and promises soon to have a surplus, which means that the market for U.S. wheat is apt to be further depressed. France is reported to have increased her wheat acreage 1,130,000 over last year; Russia has increased 24,-000,000 acres, and smaller counties have increased 30 percent. The U. S. is credited with having decreased its acreage 2,337,000 acres this year, which appears to show that a much greater decrease will be necessary, in order to keep the price anywhere near a profit. On this subject, an editorial in Sen-ator Capper's Topeka Capital, published in the centre of a great wheat belt, says-

"A larger home market for bread is the only thing that will enable the American farmer to maintain his present production of wheat. The European market is certain to decline as Europe recovers production and when Russia comes into the market with a normal surplus."

The following is from another Kansas paper, the Iola Register, edit-ed by Chas. F. Scott, former member of Congress, and one of the best posted men in the west.

"The gradual recovery of the agri-cultural productivity of Europe is in-dicated by the steady decline in the export of American farm products, notably wheat and other cereals. The lesson of which is that the American farmers should get away from the idea of raising crops for export, cut down the wheat acreage especially, and give their attention to products for which there is a sure home mark-

These should be taken for full value by Eastern farmers, as pointing the way for future plans for farming. The folly of continuing great wheat acreage appears to be apparent, for there is not likely to be any great future foreign demand, except in case of war, or great crop failures, and South America with productive lands and cheap labor, always has a big surplus to dispose of.

The hope of the American farmer is in his home markets, with the well paid, constantly employed American wage-earner as his customer. He can-not hope in any circumstance and under any condition to compete in Europe for European markets, with the products raised by the Russian moujik and the peasants of southeastern Eu-rope. He cannot hope to compete in the European markets with the products of South America raised on vast tracts of cheap land and shipped to Europe by European-owend vessels, laid down at European ports for less money than it costs the farmer of this country to lay his products down at his nearest railway station.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S SIDE OF THE CASE. The Reasons Given for Demands from the Board.

1—The Board of Education of Car-roll County has noted the publication of the School Budget in full by the County Commissioners for which it feels duly grateful. In consequence a statement is also due to the public from the Board of Education indicating in some detail the position in which the Board is placed. The following causes increasing school expense should be fully understood by the public before it can understand the reason for the Board's demands. 2-High School enrollment has in-2.00 creased since 1916 from 113 to over 800, and the number of High Schools 2.00 7.00 from one to ten; a high school teach-10.00 ing force from 5 teachers to 52, and along with these increases require-3.00 ments made mandatory in the law of equipment for commercial agricul-tural, manual training, home econom-1.00 ics, and scientific training. To meet this growth naturally more class rooms must be furnished and special rooms for the special work. Actually 43 rooms are in use for this purpose of which only 10 have been added 5.00 since 1915.

5.00 3-This year 439 children have graduated from the elementary school 5.00 and judging from percentages in pre-vious years 375 will apply for en-trance to the various schools next 2.00 fall; 102 have graduated from the high school this year, thus making a probable increase in high school enrollment for the coming year of 273. With the exception of Hampstead and Mechanicsville the capacity of every school plant in the county was filled to its maximum capacity during the school year just closed. 4-We have had a great deal of sickness among teachers during the past year and two deaths, mainly according to physicians' reports on ac-count of over-work. The law re-quires that no teacher shall have to meet classes of more than 40 children in elementary grades, and more than 20 in high school. Yet we have com-pelled teachers in 23 class rooms to carry a daily load of 53 to 62 children. It is not possible to relieve the teaching burden by increasing the number of teachers, unless classrooms are provided in which these teachers may teach.

5-The Board of Education asked for necessary relief where the facili-ties are inadequate and suggested portable buildings as follows:

Westminster, 2 portables; Mt. Airy 2 portables; Union Bridge 2 portables; Sykesville, 3 portables; Manchester, 1 portable; Reese, Washington, New Windsor, colored, each 1 and a two-room permanent or portable at Roller. This building program would have met the congestion for the present and probably for several years, including the necessary provision for the inevitable congestion in Taneytown and Charles Carroll by another year 6-Since this relief was not granted, therefore, the Board of Education is forced to reorganize the school system to the extent, that where there is a teacher overload, to require halfday sessions for certain grades or groups of children. This will become effective in the following schools, in part or whole: Sykesville, elementary; Mt. Airy, elementary; Union Bridge, elementary; Westminster elementary and high school; Manchester, elemen-tary; Reese, Washington, Medford, Detour, Springville, Mt. Pleasant, Priestland (colored). 7—For lack room, no 3rd. year can be granted to the high school children in Manchester, and no 4th. year at Charles Carroll, or Sykesville. platform system must be organized in Westminster if the enrollment increases, this means two sessions from 8 to 1, and from 12 to 5, or actually running two schools in one set of rooms, both for the High School and the Intermediate School. 8-As insufficient funds have been allowed for fuel, the Board will spend the amount granted, which is $11,000, $3500 less than it actually cost this past year for fuel and then close each school as its fuel becomes exhausted. The Board has no option but to violate the law by either closing schools which are required to be kept open 180 days, or by incurring expense for which it does not have sufficient funds 9-It is compelled to take the same position with respect to repairs. 18 roofs are leaking badly. Floors are needed in four buildings and much small repair work and painting is necessary. This will be curtailed within the limits of the appropriation. 10-The Board of Education has had the amount allowed for textbooks and supplies very much curtailed as well as the means of their distribution. While these items are to be furnished free under the law to all pupils, the Board is under the necessity of announcing that when the amounts allowed have been exhausted, no further supplies of any kind will be furnished to the children.

WOMEN'S SHORT COURSE. An Enthusiastic and Greatly Enjoyed Gathering.

In spite of the hot weather of last week, the women who attended the short course at College Park are very enthusiastic in telling of the good time they had. Carroll County had the largest delegation of any county in state. Everyone was delighted, not only with the good times but with the valuable things they learned. Two large buses and four automobiles carried the group from Carroll county. They left Westminster on Monday for College Park, and arrived home on Friday night. Much had been planned by the University for the entertainment of the women, in several concerts and talks on musical appreciation, demonstrations in folk dancing and community singing. The community singing was in charge of Miss Barrows, Supervisor of music in Washington High Schools. One of the most enjoyable occasions was the second night, when setted under the stars on the grassy lawn of the campus, they sang together some of the new and some of the old songs.

On Tuesday evening the social fea-ture was the reception by Dr. Woods, President of the University. It was a delightful affair and in front of the girls' dormitory alight with colored lights, the women soon became well acquainted. On Thursday afternoon, a tea was given by Miss Nount and Miss Stamp, Dean of the University of Maryland. At this time the wo men were delighted by a talk by Miss Risteau.

On Friday afternoon a social feature was the sight-seeing trip in Washington. Aside from all the social features, getting acquainted with the other women of the state, and the delightful dormitory life, was the class room work. It must have brought back to the women their school days, as they registered for class room work. And yet, it was dif-ferent too; in the first place the subjects were the things the women were most interested in, and the things which they are going to immediately use. It was hard to tell which was the most popular course. The subjects were food, clothing, house furnishings, household management, landscape gardening, poultry, home dairying and health. A great deal of interest was shown in the health lectures, and it was an inspiring sight to see a couple hundred wo-men listening regularly to the health information given. Two large class-es were the food and clothing courses. The food work was given by Mrs. Welsh; the canning work by Miss Everett and her assistant Mrs. Duvall. Under the food work came the steam pressure cooking, salads, cooking of vegetables and dietetics.

Bread making was given by Miss Hanna Wessling who came from Chicago for the two demonstrations. Miss Wesseling is considered the best

FARM TRACTOR. Thinks he ought now get in the Farmers' Bloc.

HARDING DRIVES

The President, while in Kansas, vis-ited Hutchinson, the centre of the wheat belt, and demonstrated his knowledge of practical farming. A press dispatch says: "After the handshaking and talk with the children the party walked into the wheat field. President Harding and Governor Davis put up a shock of wheat but, not pleased with their work, shocked another. "Now let me show you the Ohio way," said the President, and after stepping a few paces gathered up several bundles of wheat and shocked them to the approval of Governor Davis and Senator Capper.

"Do I get in on the farm bloc now?" laughingly remarked the President to Senator Capper, head of the Senate farm bloc, as he brushed some of the wheat straw from his dark coat and white flannel trousers.

When the binder was driven up by farm hand who had been cutting wheat during the morning the Presi-dent was asked to drive it about the 100-acre field and consented to do so at the urging of Mrs. Harding.

The President mounted the tractor, a 30-horse-power machine, and after instructions from the operator started it on its way about the field while moving-picture men backed ahead of him, turning their cranks and recording on film the scene of the country's Chief Executive driving a tractor in a Kansas wheat field. The binder outfit, it was explained, was designated for one man to operate, and this is the first season it has been out in Kansas.

As the President went down the field he talked interestedly with the farm-hand who had been operating the machine, but never once forgot to pull the rope to drop the bundles of wheat when the carrier was full. The first turn did not even prove an obstacle, and the President turned the wheel hard down to the left and negotiated the corner to the praise of farmers and others who followed in his wake. Four times the President made the corners of the field, and by the time he had driven the tractor around to the starting point it was re-marked that he did not seem a new hand at the game.

As the President descended from the tractor, perspiration pouring from his face, his clothes covered with dust, Governor Davis of Kansas made the first comment: "You're some farmer."

"You're all right," remarked Senator Capper.

"Now I get into the farm bloc, don't I?" queried the President

If houses are banked in winter with leaves or other readily inflammable materials, a covering of earth should be added to prevent a chimney spark or carelessly thrown match or cigarette from igniting them and spreading fire to the house.

Many fires from exposure have been prevented by wetting down combusti-ble roofs with a garden hose. Frame dwellings have been saved from a nearby fire by nailing carpets or blankets on the exposed sides from eaves downward and keeping them wet.

A candle in the house is dangerous under any circumstances. If it is absolutely necessary to use one, it should be fitted tightly into a sturdy candlestick, having a wide base, and kept out of drafts and away from anything that will catch fire.

Kerosene should not be used to enliven a fire, nor poured into a range or furnace even when the fire is out.

Burning fat may be extinguished with earth, sand, flour or salt, or by smothering with a metal cover; water will scatter flames from grease or oil.

Burying instead of burning dry leaves will enrich the soil and will remove another fire hazard.

Top-heavy and leaky oil heaters are dangerous.

An electric bulb used for warming beds or for drying clothes is almost certain to start a fire.

All gasoline appliances-stoves, lamps and irons-are dangerous, no matter, what salesmen say. It is safest not to use any of them.

Keep matches at regular places, in metal boxes, high up out of reach of children, never under any circumstances let them lie around loose.

Never let old boxes, excelsior, loose boards, paper, or rubbish of any kind, accumulate near buildings.

Thieves Visit Club House.

The Club House of the Forest and Stream Club, located on the Monocacy river, near Detour, Maryland, last Saturday night was broken into by a window shutter being forced, and a lock broken. At this time it is impossible to state the value of property damaged and stolen. This club owns four acres of land and same have been used by the public for some time for camping and picnicing.

On account of the public abusing these privileges, the club has decided not to allow trespassing, and the public are asked to please keep off these grounds. The property is now in charge of competent men who will see that only club members will use this property in the future.

Mr. Shaw has been in the contin-uous employment of the Western Maryland for forty-two years. All but two of these years, he has been a locomotive engineer.

For more than six years he has been working on the Hanover division of the line, covering a daily run of 188 miles between Baltimore and Highfield. Within that time, he has endeared himself not only to every employe of the company from the telegraphers to section hands, but to many patrons of the line as well.

Before he took over the piloting of the Baltimore-Highfield train, he was working on the main line of the road. between Baltimore and Cumberland. on the fast mail train.

He has witnessed the passing of many and various types of locomo-tives in his 42 years of service. It is said he has operated the throttle of every type of locomotives on the road.

years and has now taken up the study of corsets from the health side, and a trunk load of corsets were shown.

A hundred and twenty-five women took the courses in clothing and millinery. A hat form was made which the women brought home with them. Also models and samples of many stitches in clothing work. Mrs. Bell's classes in Home Management and Mr. Rice's in poultry, were both well attended and we can not help but feel although the course was short, that many valuable points were absorbed by the women.

Carroll County has the banner for having the largest registration. We hope this will be an annual affair and that next year she will still keep the lead. On stunt night Carroll County responded with an original song and yell. The group will never forget the happy times spent together. A very pleasant occasion was the presenting to Miss Kellar and her two assistants with a most beautiful basket of flowers. Miss Everett, the Home Demonstration Agent, wishes to thank the women for their splendid spirit throughout the conference.

Cities Lose Building Contracts.

Building activities in the large cities are confined chiefly to existing contracts-to work on hand. But few new contracts are being entered into, or in prospect, on account of high wage costs, of which $12.00 a day for bricklayers, in New York, is a specimen. Labor seems to be defeating itself by its demands, and the victims are taking the only recourse left-not building.

Editorial Advice.

Editors of newspapers do not know everything, and do not pretend that they do. Sometimes, when a subscriber reads something in a paper that does not "gee" with his reasoning, he is apt to ask-"What does the editor know about such things?" then disregard what was said. But, the editor does a great deal of reading, and posts himself from what other people say who "do know." That is what an editor is for; to assemble together, for the benefit of readers, a vast amount of information on many topics.

There is, of course, such a thing as biased editorial opinions, as well as those produced very much on the order of the arguments of a paid attorney; and this is especially true in connection with political topics, or those on such matters as Prohibition enforcement; but taken as a whole, editors when uninfluenced by ulterior motives, are apt to give advice and information worthy of serious consideration, if not adoption.

In a way, an editor is an expert, for same reasons that professional men are experts; he reads-up on the matters he discusses, and weaves together in his own words the opinions of others, and in the course of his work and training familiarizes himself with the true and false in logic and fact. In other words, he qualifies himself as a pretty fair judge, even in matters with which he is not practically familiar, through a wide course of reading and study.

The editor must have opinions babies after 'em. I had that thrill the other day. First thing one morning the girls in the front office said there was a pair of lusty twin boys down at Mason McCann's and they had named them Lysander and Bystander. I got up and floated out to the back shop, where one of McCann's boys works, just in time to hear Martha ask him if they had really named them Martha and Mary. Frank Arend was told later that they had been named Frank and Hank, and Roscoe Hutchinson learned with pride they were called Roscoe and Bosco. All day long that pair of twins changed their sex to fit the moment's visitor. They were Jessie and Bessie and Helen and Ellen. Then Senator Brunk and Harry Haymaker were proud to learn they have been named Larry and Harry, and Brown smiled to hear they were called Emmett and Limit. Potter grew an inch when he learned they were to be christen-ed Jimmie and Gimmie, and saw a great future for them. Sloane and Loane seemed very appropriate to Sloane O'Kelly, but none of them would believe that they had really been named Lester and Chester."

Agriculture in Maryland.

Agriculture in Maryland has made decided progress during the past few years despite the financial difficulties of the farmer, says Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service in his eighth annual report which has just been published and which covers the work of that organization for the year 1922. He says;

"From an economic standpoint the year 1922 was one of disappointment to the farmers of Maryland," says Dr. Symons in reviewing the agricultural situation. "Prices for farm products, which began their rapid downward plunge during 1920, remained low and apparently reacted but little in sympathy with the prosperity that was so noticeable in virtually all other lines of industry.

"The disappointment on the part of the farmers was all the greater because they approached the season of 1922 with enthusiasm and with some degree of hope that the deflation per-iod had passed. High prices were certainly not anticipated, and yet the expectation was prevalent that the returns from agriculture would be adequate to cover the cost of production and to provide a reasonable remuneration for the labor expended. This proved not to be the case. The disparity between prices of farm products continued wide. The problem of meeting expenses and maintaining customary standards of living remained a serious one throughout the year with many farm owners and more particularly with many tenant farmers

"The situation of the past season served mere) y to aggravate conditions that unfortunately have been pressing heavily on the farmers for the past three years. Much of the progress that might have taken place in the agriculture of the State during that period has been rudely checked. In fact it is to some extent true that agriculture has dragged out an existence during the past three years at worth while, or the presumed influence of the press that we hear of and and its productive plant, such as build-national Grain and Hay Show at Chicago, competeing against the finest exhibits of the experienced corn breeders of the Corn Belt States, won a total of twenty-two prizes, one of which was the first prize for the best ten ears of yellow corn exhibited in Region 4. The fact that Maryland, next to Indiana won more prizes than any other State in the show must be recognized as a remarkable achievement, especially when it is recalled that Maryland is a State of comparatively small area and belongs to the Atlantic coast territory, not generally regarded as a leading corn producing region.

"Another indication of the gradual progress which has taken place in the agriculture of Maryland, is apparent in the constantly increasing acreage being devoted to the legume crops. Unfortunately figures are not available to show just how great this in-crease has been in the past year. It is estimated that the area planted to soybeans alone during 1922 totaled 40,000 acres. While this is only an estimate, it is a well known fact that legume crops, and particularly soybeans, have come to occupy an in-creasingly prominent place in the agriculture of the State. In Southern Maryland, Japan clover has been introduced and is meeting a long-felt want. In other parts of the State, alfalfa is now regarded as a crop of prime importance and is being grown more extensively. Clovers and cow-peas have also been planted in in-creasing quantities. An indication of the growing favor of legume crops in the State during recent years can be obtained from a glance at the Census figures which show that for clover the acreage during ten years between 1909 and 1919 increased from 26,545 acres to 41,250 acres, or 55.4 percent; that for alfalfa the acreage increased from 3,188 acres to 11,909 acres, or 273.6 percent, and that for small grains and legumes cut for hay the acreage increased from 8,846 acres to 21,471 acres, or 142.7 percent. This increase in legume crops has continued since the Census figures were taken. What is has meant to the increased wealth of agriculture it is impossible to estimate. Undoubtedly it has been an important factor in the expansion and improvement of the dairy industry and has had a value, impossible to measure, in maintaining and improving soil fertility.

"Another very marked advance in the agriculture of the State is apparent in the position which Maryland now occupies in the production of vegetables. Notwithstanding the comparatively small area of the State, Maryland is now third in the acreage devoted to vegetables, exclusive of white and sweet potatoes, raised for sale. Nearly 120,000 acres of land in Maryland are now annually devoted to the commercial production of vegetables, other than white and sweet potatoes, indicating that farmers are taking advantage of the State's proximity to large nearby markets and engaging more generally in the production of the higher valued agricultural products.

"Closely linked to the expansion of this phase of agriculture, has been the growth of the canning industry and the consequent increase in the acreage devoted to canning crops. While the canning industry in the State has been subjected to severe financial strain during the past few years and economic conditions have seriously curtailed th production of canning crops, the State has, nevertheless, maintained its rank as one of the leading States in this important industry. Moreover, the past year, although not a notably profitable one, has witnessed a distinct advance in the production of canning crops, because of the increased attention directed to reducing production costs. Attention has particularly been centered on the tomato crop, the largest and most important of the canning crops, through successful demonstrations which have illustrated how large acre yields can bring down the cost of production to meet prevailing economic conditions. Every effort is being made to extend the scope of this work throughout the State and on its results may rest the future prosperity of the canning industry in Maryland. "Most important to the welfare of the State during the recent period of depression has been the sound foundation on which the dairy industry has been placed. The progress in this industry has been safe and conservative and it is a noteworthy fact in communities where a general system of farming has been practiced that dairying has served as the principal buffer against the effects of hard times. Not a little of the success which has come to this industry has been due to the substantial organizations, which have been erected around it. During the past year the advancement in the industry has continued. Organizations have been strengthened, better producing animals have been introduced and the whole industry has gone forward, despite the fact that it, too, has felt the ill effects of lowered prices. "Not all of the progress of agriculture during the past year has been of a material character. One of the most important forward steps in the State has been the formation of farm bureaus in many of the counties. While it is true that farm organizations previously existed in many counties and had performed worth while services, it is also true the farm bureau movement has spread the influence of organization to greater numbers, has increased the confidence in the benefits of organization and has stimulated numerous co-operative activities. This has been accomplished in harmony with other important existing farm organizations in the State and the year 1922 must be regarded as a most auspicious one from the organization standpoint. "Progress of a slightly different character, but of no less significance is noted in the record of the agricultural club boys who won the dairy cattle judging contest at the National Dairy Show last October. This victory, which belongs to the younger generation, following on the heels of the record made the previous year by coveted trip to Europe in a livestock judging contest at Atlanta and later defeated an English team in a similar contest at Cambridge, England, indicates that the progress in agriculture is not confined to the realms of the It is, however, an indication adult. that knowledge is reaching out to agriculture in all its branches and that the great industry is forging steadily ahead despite its numerous difficulties.

"It is probably true that the University of Maryland, both through the Experiment Station and the Extension Service, has been able to render a greater service and a more appreciated service during the past few years than ever before in its history. The times were such as to call for modifications of farming methods, changes in rotations of crops, and the employment of every factor looking to economical production and the husbanding of resources. Conditions called for expert knowledge, expert advice and proven, careful practice; and it is gratifying to know that farmers and homemakers have made increasing demands upon the service. thereby showing their confidence in the institution and appreciation of its efforts.'

Law Enforcement.

A subscriber asks us to answer A subscriber asks us to answer three questions. First, concerning the condition of law enforcement in this country. It becomes more and more a question whether laws are en-forced or only their violation penaliz-ed. Putting law into force depends on the inner conviction and good will of the citizen more than on anything else. Officers cannot enforce the law. They may detect violations of it and arrest violators. It may be said that where people believe in the law and want the law they put it into force themselves, that is, they observe it in their conduct. their conduct.

themselves, that is, they observe it in their conduct. The second question concerns the failure of law enforcement. That there is failure no one can deny. But the failure is among those who do not believe in the law which they violate. Take prohibition, for example. Peo-ple who believe in it observe it, many others do not. It is this law which cur subscriber probably has in mind. He is probably thinking of the failure to force the prohibition law upon the observance of those who object to it. The failure to do this rests on two points, first the authorities whose duty includes enforcement, do not themselves believe in the law; second, the number of officers required to make absolute enforcement would be so large that it would probably be equivalent to one-half of the country taking up police duty against the other half—a situation that is not likely to ensue. On the general question of enforce-

On the general question of enforcement, there is this to say; If the conscience or interest of the country were aroused, and if the dangers of law violation were apparent to the intelligence of the nation, there would Foolish Names for Children.

The following, from the Catholic Review, while purely in the interest of more distinctly Catholic names, is worthy of consideration by non-Catholics as well, for the whole country is becoming peopled with foolishly named persons, because of the immaturity of romantic young parents, who perhaps unfortunately have full control over the naming of their offspring.

"A priest of the Cleveland Diocese in a letter to the Ecclesiastical Review calls attention to the growing custom among Catholic parents of giving their children baptismal names that are "merely secular, or fanciful, or romantic, instead of names redolent of Catholic times and faith.'

He complains rightly of the fact that some parents name their children after false philosophers or even avowed enemies of the Church. The parents want their children to be distinguished from birth; to be set apart from 'the common herd.' Often such parents' hopes are blasted when their young hopefuls begin to go to school. The children may have high-sounding names, but that lets them out. Per-haps Waldo Emerson Johnson or Daniel Webster Smith may turn out to be the dunces of their class. We knew of a boy who was named after one of the great naval heroes of the country. He turned out to be a frail, timid youngster, who ran from every fight that was ever started. We know also of a devout pastor in this Archdiocese who was quite puzzled by the names borne by the children of one family in his parish. An investigation disclosed that the names were taken from the father's favorite nov-The children had the names of saints also, but the saints' names were not used. They were adopted at baptism simply for appearance sake

Another newspaper article along a different line, but aimed at the same custom, is from the Atlanta Constitution, written by a reporter who was seeking light on "why men want to be President. He savs:

ings, fences and soil fertility

"Notwithstanding conditions that have seemed almost like unjust disers have not gone on strike but have continued to produce large crops. It is a high tribute to their perseverance to their sensible recognition of economic factors, and to their ability to adjust themselves and their business to trying conditions that they have "kept faith" with the Nation during a period when their purchasing power has been less than two-thirds of what was in 1913.

"Not only have the farmers of Maryland continued to produce in undiminished quantity but they have continued to make a steady progress along the lines of more efficient agriculture. It is needless to say that this progress would have been far more rapid if prosperity rather than depression had prevailed since 1920. Nevertheless, the serious difficulties under which agriculture everywhere has labored, but add to the significance of the real achievements which Maryland farmers have accomplished.

'There is no more striking illustration of the character of the progress which agriculture in the State has been making than the record of the acre yields of corn for the past thir-ty-two years. Ever since 1890, when the average yields of corn per acre in Maryland were between 20 and 25 Maryland farmers have hushels. steadily and consistently been improving the quality of their seed and their cultural methods until in 1922 the average yield mounted to the top figure of 40 bushels per acre. This is 12 bushels higher than the average of the United States for the same year and nearly 18 bushels above the average production of the State 32 years It shows that merely by applyago. ing better cultural methods, the farmers of Maryland have been enabled to raise on 635,000 acres, which was the acreage planted in 1922, 11,430,000 more bushels of corn than would have been possible in 1890. It shows that at 68c a bushel, the farm price for corn during December, the leading agricultural crop of the State has been increased in value by more than $7,500,000.

"Side by side with this progress which the average farmer of Maryland has made in the production of corn, is the no less noteworthy achievement which has been accomplished in the State in the production of pure-bred seed corn. The production of high yielding strains of purebred seed corn has become an important business, particularly in Harford and Cecil counties. Recognition of the skill and ability which Mary. land growers have developed in this industry during recent years came in unmistakable terms during 1922, when "It is because mother names the entries from this State in the Inter- another team which was awarded the

be no difficulty at all about law enforcement. We had military conscription and forced bond sales when whole communities of people objected to it, but nevertheless the men were conscripted and the bonds were sold. The nation can do what it wants to do when its mind is made up.

The third question concerns suggestions for a remedy. There are as many suggestions as there are interested persons. The condition is not amenable to suggestion. It is working itself out and will thrust to the surface its own remedy.__Dearborn Independent.

Couldn't Understand.

Recently a member of the police department was sued for divorce. A man was sent to police headquarters to serve the papers on him. The man, unfortunately, was directed to the sergeant's desk and mistaking the sergeant for the defendant in the suit, started to read the papers without mentioning the defendant's name. The desk sergeant listened patiently, Gradually his mouth drooped, a sorrowful expression came into his eyes and he appeared dejected.

"I can't understand that," he said. "I was only married last December. I just rented a new house and bought some new furniture and two tons of coal. Gosh, she appeared cheerful and happy when I left this morning, I don't see what's the matter."

A few minutes later the mistake was noticed and the desk sergeant showed his relief, and the man with the papers went in search of the defendant.-Indianapolis News.

Shark That Swam in Kansas Sea. Agassizodus variabilis, a shark from Kansas, will soon have his once wicked teeth brought to foodless rest in the National museum. Dr. George P. Merrill, curator of geology, has received as a gift from Dr. Frank Springer the paleontological collections of the late Orestes St. John which contained the fossil remains of this unique fish, which chased its prey through a Kansas sea many million years ago. The cartilaginous body of the shark disintegrated, but a complete set of teeth, such as has never been found elsewhere, remained in the coal measures of Kansas to tell his story. Doctor St. John gave the name Agassizodus to his find in honor of the famous Harvard naturalist, Louis Agassiz, who was his teacher.

HOW=

PHOTOGRAPHERS IN WILDS GET THEIR "SUBJECTS." -The clever achievements of African photography in "Hunting Big Game in Africa" are appreciated by everybody. But only those versed in the subject are aware of the extraordinary difficulties that were successfully overcome. Sidney Snow, the cinematographer, states:

"The fact that most animals are nocturnal in their habits makes it a tough job to get the daytime pictures. Lions, leopards and other junglers of prey must be tracked to their midday resting places, routed out by the native safari's cries and brush beating; then the cameraman must take his chance of keeping up with the pursuit and of filming the animal often almost indistinguishable in the tawny grass. Our picture of the live lioness and her cubs shows it can be done, but it's tough, dangerous work.

"We also located and rounded up with the flivver the plains creatures that graze in large herds for protection like the giraffes, the blaze bucks and the gazelles. I carried a camera equipped with a variety of lenses and mounted with a revolving turret. This I took with me in the car, and chased the herds hour after hour. Eventually they would tire and let us get near. But the giraffes. with their long periscope necks enabling them to sight us over the tops of trees, eluded the camera for three months! Eventually, as no shot was fired, they lost their wariness-and their tired legs refused to carry them further.

"With the animals that appear only infrequently at evening to drink at the water-holes, another procedure was necessary. We would lie hidden in a well-made blind, motionless for hours and days, suffering much from heat and insects, whilst waiting a chance to get some of those realistic closeups. Often the oncoming darkness would foil our efforts. Sometimes we would have to keep the animals from approaching the water for several nights running, in order to make them so thirsty that they would come in the early morning when pictures could be made.

"Another thing: successful hunting requires keeping to the leeward of the quarry. A shifting wind gives the animal your scent, and he is down upon you! On several critical occasions I escaped by quick side jump whilst Dad plugged the charging brute. Both in the rhino and the elephant hunts, the native boys had long since taken to the tops of the trees. Without any egotism I think I may say that only a person fully conversant with wild nature is fitted to go into the jungle after had a

Nature Has Arranged for Sap to Rise in Trees.

WHY=

The very interesting results obtained by Sir J. C. Bose, at the Bose institute, Calcutta, in the investigation of the phenomenon of the ascent of sap are summarized in Nature Magazine. It is shown that the ascent of sap is a process of physiological activity dependent on the pulsation of living cells. This process is arrested by the action of poison, either in entire plants or in cut shoots. The active pulsating cells are not confined to the root, but are continued throughout the stem. It has been ascertained that in the stem of dicotyledons these cells constitute the cortical layer which abuts upon the endodermis.

The velocity of the ascent has been determined by three independent methods which give concordant results. The ascent takes place in plants even in the complete absence of transpiration. In "varnished" plants this velocity has been found sometimes to be as high as 70 meters per hour.

The cellular pulsations have been investigated and their characteristics determined from automatic records; they consist of alternate contractions and expansions. The direction of propulsion is determined by the phase difference of the adjacent cells. The velocity increases with the wave length of the propagated impulse. This wave length is determined experimentally from definite points of electric maxima and minima. Enhancement of velocity is associated with corresponding increase in the wave length. The enhanced rate of ascent is also attended by the increase of amplitude and frequency of cellular pulsations.

Ascent of sap depends upon cellular pulsation in tall trees as well as in herbaceous plants. There is, however, in the former the special adaptation of the woody tissue which serves as a reservoir to meet the excessive demand for water in the season of active transpiration. When this reservoir is more or less depleted, the phenomenon of "negative pressure" is manifest.

GASES ARE MOTIVE POWER

Why Rockets Rise When Light Is Applied Is a Simple Matter When Understood.

If you would see inside a rocket you would find the lower part of the case filled with powder, a chemical mixture that will burn at an enormous rate, and in doing so will produce a very large quantity of gas. The great heat generated by this burning mixture expands the gas and still further increases its volume, till it is bursting to get out of the rocket.

At the bottom end of the rocket is a hole through which the gas rushes into the air. Now the air at the mouth of the rocket strongly resents being kicked out of the way by this rushing stream of gas; it takes a moment to "get a move on," so to speak. But the gas in the case hasn't got a moment to spare; it simply must get out, so it kicks-hard.

dumpling is desired, try these: One-half hour before the soup is to be served drop into it a large potato and cook until done. Drop this paste in small pieces into the soup, boil up and serve at once.

Alleghany Muffins.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour, one cupful of milk, one tablespoonful each of butter and lard, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teasponful of salt and one egg. Mix all the dry ingredients and sift through the sieve. Melt the butter and lard in a cup. Beat the egg very light and add the milk to it. Pour this mixture into the dry ingredients, add the melted fat and beat vigorously for a minute. Pour into buttered muffin pans and bake 15 minutes.

Rice Flour Pound Cake.

Cream one-quarter of a cupful of butter with one cupful of powdered sugar, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of vanilla, the grated rind of a lemon and one-half cupful of cold water. Mix thoroughly and add one and one-half cupfuls of rice flour that has been sifted twice with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and bake.

Spring Salad.

Shred a head of lettuce and line a salad bowl which has been rubbed with a cut clove of garlic. Cut two large tomatoes into slices and arrange in a ring around the lettuce. Sprinkle each slice of tomato with a tablespoonful of chopped water cress and cover the whole with a highly seasoned mayonnaise which has been enriched with a half cupful or more of whipped cream. Serve very cold.

SWELLED HEADS

YOU will find victims of swelled heads on every bench in the park, in every bread line, in every poorhouse, in every jail.

It is an easily communicable and a deadly disease. The only cure for it is a severe jolt, and sometimes it is the remedy that success is made of. Remember that a little success is often easily come by. Sometimes it is due almost wholly to luck. Sometimes it follows advancement through favoritism, which is probably the worst thing that can happen to anybody.

In any event, no success can survive a swelled head.

If in the early years of your career you find yourself well ahead of the fellows who started with you, look out. You have still a long way to travel. If you are satisfied with yourself, be sure you will never get any better. And if you don't get any better you will soon begin to go back.

Authority cannot safely be entrusted to any man till he shows that his head will not be affected by it.

Once let him begin to make bad use of it, to domineer, and to bully, and he might as well bid any further progress good-by.

Remember always that big men never get the swelled head, or if they do get a slight attack they soon recover.

If you have begun to think that you are "doing pretty well thank you," and to pity the poor devils who are not as bright as you are, stop and take stock. Don't think about the men you have passed, but about the men who have passed you. Consider the important men of your acquaintance, and of history.

Read their biographies, and note how they continually struggled to make themselves capable of bigger and better work. There is no time to get a swelled head when a man is really going up. It is the chap who stops to admire himself who falls victim to conceit.

If you are as great a man as Lincoln, as Shakespeare, as Napoleon, puff and strut all you please. But the chances are you are not. And until you are perfectly sure that you are, "Then it will be mere child's play keep on trying. How Extension Work of Horticultural Specialist Has Had Good Results in Many States.

Improvements in the appearance of the grounds and surroundings of farms in the southern states is receiving increased attention as a result of extension work in those states by a horticultural specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, according to reports received by the department. For example, as a result of such work 6,925 fences were repaired in 1921 and 4,436 in 1922; 3,484 unsightly buildings were repaired or removed in 1921 and 3,523 in 1922. The number planting trees and shrubs rose from 8,308 to 26,313; of those planting flowers and vines from 42,396 two years ago to 48,437 in 1922; of lawns seeded, from about 1,600 to 2,600. More than 45,000 planted shade trees and shrubs last year.

In some of the states, particularly in North Carolina and Mississippi, the improvements in farmsteads are very marked. Girls' and women's clubs have been active in stimulating interest in making the home surroundings more pleasing, and the beneficial effect upon communities generally has been verv marked.

How "Utopia" Originated. Utopia is the title of a book written by the famous Englishman, Sir Thomas More, who lived from 1480 to 1535. In this book an account is given of an imaginary island named Utopia, the name being made up of two Greek words, one meaning not, and the other place, the whole expressing the idea conveyed by our word, nowhere. The island is represented to have been discovered by a companion of the famous navigator, Amerigo Vespucci, and as enjoying the utmost perfection in laws, politics, and social conditions, in contrast with the defects of those which existed elsewhere. The name has passed into the language of about all civilized countries to signify a state of ideal perfection. Utopia is represented as a republic, of which the fundamental principle is a community of wealth, that is, everything belonged to the people as a whole, and all shared alike.

If you had on a pair of roller skates, and held an open umbrella in front of you, you could push it away from you slowly without feeling any resistance; but if you thrust hard at the umbrella the air would resist the sudden movement so strongly that you would be rolled backward on your skates. Science shows that is just what happens to the rocket; the stream of gas spreads out at the mouth of the case and thrusts hard at the air below it and at the rocket above. As the air won't move quickly enough, the rocket must get out of the way. And it does -quickly.

Why Women Fail as Spies.

"Women do not make good spies," said Sir Basil Thompson, former head of the British secret service, speaking at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "The real reason is that the woman spy gets compunction at just the wrong moment. She has obtained information from some one who should not have given it to her, and then when she should pass it along she feels it would be unfair to her informant and withholds it."

The speaker said that there is the greatest difference between the patriotic spy and the hireling spy. None of the former type was executed by the British during the war, he said, but 11 of the latter, all men, forfeited their lives .- New York Herald.

Why Do We Keep Pets?

Many pets are of direct use to us. A dog, for instance, protects our house, a cat catches mice, and so on.

There are, however, two far deeper motives.

A pet satisfies our instinct of ownership and mastery-one of the most profound desires at the back of our minds is to be absolute lord and master, arbiter of life and death. We gratify this wish most thoroughly by possessing a pet animal.

Why We Stop Growing.

We stop growing because certain body cells lose their power to increase in size and to produce other cells. It is one of the marvels of physiology that this is so and a wise provision of nature.

Why Snow Is White.

Snow is white because it is formed of an infinite number of very minute crystals and prisms, which reflect all the component rays of which white light consists.

Tuesday night about 11 o'clock, the house on the farm of Wm. Mehring, tenanted by John Harman, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Harman's little child became unrestless and Mrs. Harman got up to see after it. She told her husband she smelt smoke and Mr. Harman got up and went down stairs and found the whole one side of the house ablaze. The rest of the family barely made their escape. Mr. Harman's lost all their furniture and clothing, and have no insurance. It is hoped that Mr. Harman and family will be helped with furniture, money, clothing, or anything in the eating line will be appreciated by them. Mr. Mehring has a small insurance on the house. How the house caught on fire is unknown, but it originated in the kitchen.

HARNEY. On Sunday, June 27, a birthday

SOMEONE once said that a woman may be a proverb for any amount of evil or misfortune, but as long as she is a proverb for beauty, her name will ring through the centuries. In proof of this is the ever-popular name of Helen. Coming from "Helios," the Greek sun god who drove his flaming chariot around the heavenly vault day by day, the name signifies light and brightness, and conjures up a dazzling figure of youth, beauty and cleverness, It is the queen of feminine names, its fame beginning with the oldest of Greek epics, the Iliad, with Helen of Troy whom Tennyson describes as

A daughter of the gods divinely tall,

And most divinely fair. Her loveliness with shame and with surprise Froze my swift speech; she turning on my face The star-like sorrows of immortal eyes, Spoke clowly in her place. I had great beauty; ask thou not my name; No one can be more wise than destiny, Many drew swords and died. Where'er I came I brought calamity.

One of the first to bear the name was the mother of Constantine and restorer of the shrines at Jerusalem, who was called St. Helena. Through careless pronunciation, Helen became Ellen or Ellin, the Welsh version. Elayne followed, the name becoming famed as the mother of Sir Galahad, whom Tennyson later identified with his "Lady of Shalott." From this, Ireland adopted Eileen, or Aileen. Its poetical associations are continued through Ellen Irwin and her piteous death upon Braes of Kirth, and Ellen Douglas, beloved heroine of Sir Walter Scott.

Italy took the name of Helen and transformed it into the soft musical Elena. Provence contributed Alienor, which became Eleonore in France and Lemore in Spain. It was finally brought to England by "good Queen Eleanor" and was long used as a royal name by the Plantagenets as Elinor. Italy contributed one more charming derivative in Leonora d'Estes, object of Tasso's hopeless affection.

Other countries brought the distinguishing mark of their language to bear upon Helen, resulting in the Helenka of Russia; Helene, of Sweden; Leonore, of France; Nellie and Lena. of England and America.

The jewel assigned to Helen, and one to be worn by all who bear the name if they would have health, good fortune, and happiness, is the hyacinth, or yellow jacinth, as it is better known. In early days a jacinth was carried by every traveler to insure them against accident or disease-in fact, the stone is said to warn its wearer against the approach of danger by paling in color. It is also believed to be proof against To dream of a jacinth is

HUMAN AND HUMANE

"Now, Jimmy," said the teacher, "what is the difference between 'human' and 'humane'?"

Jimmy thought deeply for a moment. "Well," he said at length, "suppose you had two pieces of candy and a hungry little dog grabbed one from you. If you gave him the other piece you would be humane, but if you threw a stone at him you would be human."-Everybody's Magazine.

On an evening some twenty-five years ago Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was the guest of Sir Honry Irving at one of those intimate little supper parties in the Beefsteak room of the Lyceum theater over which he loved to preside, Comvns Carr writes in the London Times. The English actor was socially always at his best when his day's work was done, and his gracious hospitality provoked in those he gathered around his table a sense of ease and intimacy that was scarcely to be matched in any other of the bohemian entertainments of the time. During her repeated visits to England Mme. Bernhardt was constantly to be counted among his guests; and in the art of Sir Henry Irving, which she never wearied of praising, she found, I think, that note of strong personality which is also the surviving characteristic of all her own work in the theater. On that particular occasion, as I remember, our talk concerned itself with the age at which some of the great actors of the past had produced their finest effects; when on a sudden Mme. Bernhardt, leaning across the table toward area the size, say of Pennsylvania, Miss Ellen Terry, exclaimed in her how much water is that? broken English, which lost nothing of Do not bother to calculate it; we force from its imperfection, "My dear, did it. Officers Sent to Break Up Poker Party Found Only Harmless Players of Bridge.

Skulking figures circled cautiously and with light tread about a house on the north side. Close observation disclosed that the figures wore on their left breasts the pointed stars of officers of the law. Inside the house the sound of shuffled cards, muffled laughter, and light conversation could be heard. The moon hung low in the sky. All was peaceful. Abruptly, there came a knock at the door of the house.

The sounds on the inside of the house ceased and the door was opened. Before the startled eyes of the police raiding squad, led by Lieutenant Louis Johnson, were disclosed eight well-dressed women, all smiling graciously, and all engaged in the pleasant pastime and popular indoor sport of auction bridge.

Horses On the Decrease.

Man's chief beast of burden, the horse, has decreased in numbers in the world at large about 11 per cent in the last ten years. Figures just made public by the United States Department of Agriculture show a falling off in the total head in 85 countries from 116,500,000 to 103,550,000. The decrease, however, occurred largely in Russia, where the decline was nearly 50 per cent, and the United States, where the total has dropped from 23,-145,000 in 1914 to 20,559,000. Russia's total in that year of 34,700,000 has dwindled to 18,507,000, giving the United States the greatest number. Gains were shown in Argentina, Canada, Spain and the Scandinavian countries.

20 COUNTIES REPRESENTED

The Conference Affirmed Its Interest In The Agricultural Committee Appointed By The Governor, And Piedged Its Support In Resolutions Passed.

Two hundred and thirty-seven women, representing twenty counties of the State assembled last week in a four day conference at the University of Maryland at College Park, came out strongly for plans to advance the agricultural interests of Maryland by improving farm life generally and in favor of a greater State University. In resolutions passed last Friday the conference affirmed its interest in the agricultural committee appointed by the Governor, and pledged its support to the committee in these words:

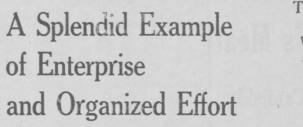

"We affirm our interest in the committee appointed by the Governor to draw up a program for the advancement of agriculture, to improve farm life, to make easier the tasks of farm women, and pledge our support to such a program."

The conference also approved the work of the University and decided to petition the Legislature to pass the general program of the University; and asked especially that the University make the Rural Women's Conference an annual feature of the program. The part of the resolution referring to the University reads:

"We urge that the Rural Women's Conference be made an annual feature of the University program, we endorse the administration of the University of Maryland and commend its policies in trying to make available to all the people of the State the opportunities it offers. We especially approve the Home Demonstration work of the Extension Service, and urge that this phase of the work of the University be broadened to meet the needs of the general program of the University, especially the provisions for additional facilities for the education of young women, and suggest that a legislative committee be appointed before the next legislature in support of this program."

It was left to the Committee on Resolutions, of which Miss Mary Risteau, of Harford county, is chairman, to appoint members of the legislative committee and also appoint its chairman. Miss Risteau announced that Mrs. Hayes Brown, of Frederick county, would be chairman of the committee, and that the other members sentative of each of the twenty counties composed the Committee on Reso lutions.

The conference consisted of general class room demonstrations of

THE KIND OF SERVICE A GREAT ORGANIZATION IS CAPABLE OF GIVING IN A GREAT EMERGENCY UNDER PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

The Philadelphia Inquirer on Wednesday, June 13, published the following editorial:

"AN OBJECT LESSON IN RAILROAD EFFICIENCY

The word efficiency has been greatly overworked in recent years, but it can be applied in all justice to the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad who are meeting the emergency produced by the destruction of the trainshed of the Broad Street Station

While the conflagration was still in progress heads of the engineering and construction departments were in consultation, and the fire had not been extinguished before numerous wrecking crews were at work. In the meantime the traffic department was called upon to make a readjustment of service, and special bulletins promptly informed the traveling public of the disposition of trains.

In less than twenty-four hours after the fire started the builders were employed in restoring platforms. Men had been summoned from everywhere, but there was a minimum of confusion, because every squad had a definite duty. It has been a splendid object lesson in efficiency on the part of the world's greatest railroad. In these days of speed, demoralized train service spells general congestion, and that this should have been so largely and quickly overcome is a matter of congratulation.

The American spirit is shown at its best when meeting seemingly unsurmountable difficulties. Say that a thing is impossible in this country and, as if by magic, men will ap-pear to make it possible. Those who travel may be subject to some temporary inconvenience, but if the public be as patient as the railroad company has been enterprising, there will not be much reason for complaint."

Train service in and out of Broad Street Station has already practically been restored to normal conditions.

SOMETHING ABOUT DOROTHY CANFIELD

Dorothy Canfield has so many successes to her credit and is so versatile a person that one despairs of chronicling even a small part of her achievements. When little more than a girl she had won two degrees, a Ph.B. and a Ph.D., and it was not many years after that that she became famous as an au-一些重要 Her books are the type that live. To speak of one of her latest big successes, "The Brimming Cup," calls up mention of her earlier work and starts discussion of "The Bent Twig" or "The Squirrel Cage," or away from her novels to h books on the Montessori method.

When war came, Mrs. Fisher (she is Mrs. Fisher in private life) went to France with her husband and two children-where she did big and important work. But all the time she was working abroad she was writing, too, stories that appeared in our leading magazines, and books that were published upon her return. MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

The first time I ever heard the threadbare saying about a square peg in a round hole, was when my father used it in an attempt to excuse Aunt Emily. Up to that time I had never heard anyone say anything of her except that she was a detestable woman with the most infernal capacity for being perfectly wretched herself and making everybody else so. What a home she made for poor mild Uncle Charlie, and for their three nervous, scrawny, rabbit-faced children!

You are not to think she neglected her home or her children. Indeed no! She house-kept with a fanatical competence and expended on the up-bringing of her children an extravagant energy which filled the house to its remotest corner, as a sawmill is filled by the strident energy of the saw. Never were three children so brought up as my poor little cousins. Aunt Emily was determined that she should do her whole duty by them, that they should be perfect, and do everything exactly right. Of course she knew much better than they what was right, and hence had never an instant of repose from her labor of pushing and shoving them into the way they should

Oh, how we hated to be sent on an errand to Aunt Emily's house. I spare you the description of what a meal at hudren. whereas a any morning spent with the children in the house. always made Aunt Emily look a thousand years old. "they wore on her so," they upset so the perfect order of her wonderfully kept house. And yet they did their best not to wear on her, by keeping away from her as much as possible. They never went home from school until it was actually suppertime, and always played in our yard, not their own.

The result was that Aunt Emily was left quite to herself in a Sahara desert of lonely housekeeping and desperate economies with the poor pittance which was all that Uncle Charles could earn. Her thin face grew grim and dark, as she mended and patched and turned and dyed and performed miracles on tough necks of mutton and cheap curtain materials. All of it she did with superlative skill but burning and raging inwardly (and many times not so very inwardly) against the necessity of doing it at all, and crying out bitterly with many fits of hysterical tears that she was killing herself for her family, and nobody gave her a bit of credit for it.

Oh, yes, everybody dodged when Aunt Emily hove in view, father as much as the rest, in spite of all his extenuations. Whenever we did have to go there, on unavoidable errands, we children would stand in the doorway, and assure her volubly that we couldn't come in, because our feet were muddy. This brought about the desired result of being told severely to hurry along then, and not get the whole house cold, with that door standing open.

Then came the climax in their misfortunes, as if they were not already sufficiently singled out for misery. Uncle Charles fell on the stairs, and hurt himself terribly, threw several vertebrae out of position, I believe, so that he lay almost wholly paralyzed from the waist down. And not a penny of savings to pay the doctor, not even for the grocer's bill at the end of the month. It was disaster, absolute black. irreparable disaster. Aunt Emily was stunned into silence, a dreadful gray silence, as of some one whose grudge against fate is rising to mania. I remember hearing father say to mother, after he came back from his turn at spending a night of care for Uncle Charles, "I'm afraid of the woman, I positively am. She looks as though she'd go mad." "Well, it's not out of sympathy for her poor husband, that's sure," mother answered acidly. What do you suppose was the result of that terrific accumulation of emotion in Aunt Emily? What was the momentous, tremendous decision to reach which, in 1885, it was necessary for her to rise to that pitch of frenzy? Why nothing more nor less than this . and in those days it was a decision both momentous and tremendous for any married woman with children . . . she put on her bonnet, yes, bonnet, it was in the last days of bonnets, when only young girls wore hats . and marched down town to ask for work in Emery's Emporium. She got it, of course. Even if it had not been Aunt Emily, the humane head of the firm would have felt under some obligation to the wife of a faithful employee of such long standing. And in addition to this, it was Aunt Emily

laughed over "Father O'Flynn," and yelled out the chorus of the "Cruiskeen Bawn"; . . . or negro. There. never was anybody who could sing "spirituals" like Uncle Charles. Oh, they were great concerts, we'll never forget.

And what was Aunt Emily deing all this time? You know as well as I do what Aunt Emily was doing. She was rising like a rocket through every plane of the management of Emery's Emporium. She was passionately interested in her work, because she could use it to serve her ambition; and because she was passionately interested in it, she mastered it, and owned it, and put it in her pocket. Everybody in that line of business in that part of the country soon knew her; she was hail-fellow-well-met with all the traveling men, who liked her bluff manners and sharp tongue, feared her piercing eye, and respected her capacity always to get the better of them.

She was detested but admirably served by the staff of the store, who were bewildered by her really inhuman capacity for endless exactitude of detail, angry at the everlasting high tension of her demands, but placated by the growing fame of the store and by her instant recognition of business ability in a subordinate. "Business ability!" How Aunt Emily adored it! What a starved, wolflike appetite she had for all that it stood for. How intensely she lived in her new life! Before long she had developed a new line, advertising (this was before the modern science of advertising was dreamed of) and while I dare say it would be an exaggeration to claim that she was the first to expand the present principles of psychological advertising, I know a good many people who think she came very near doing so. Merchants from other cities came to see her window displays, and talked with her about advertising. Aunt Emily, who never did anything for nothing, soon saw that she had a marketable product there, and proceeded to put it on the market. She organized what I'm sure was the first advertising agency, and ran it in odd moments of her busy days.

She was up and off to work early, reading the morning paper as she ate breakfast, which Uncle Charles had seen to. Then they saw her no more till night, when she came home walking strongly in the door, looking very distinguished and chic in the beautifully cut tailor suits of the best material that money could buy . .

am speaking now, of course, of the times after that difficult beginning. That period lasted, after all, only till she could get her bearings in the new world. Very soon, she was earning more money than Uncle Charles had ever dreamed of making. By the time Uncle Charles was around on crutches, there was a good competent girl in the kitchen. This left Uncle Charles more time and strength to give to the children, more leisure to perfect his own music, and more energy to plan the thousand ingenious variations, on the theme of domestic life which made their home the most delightful one to visit in, you can imagine.

Aunt Emily fitted in it all very comfortably. She was always agreeably tired by night, and relieved of her surngl

And, there in front of the house, walking round the garden paths, what do you suppose I saw? You will never guess. I saw my Uncle Charles, walking nimbly and briskly without his crutches.

I went home the next morning in a maze of bewilderment, and climbed up to my father's attic study. Speaking all in an excited hurry, I told him what I had seen. His first expression was one of utter amazement, "Your Uncle Charles walking without his crutches!"

And he fell into a long, thoughtful brooding silence, looking over my head, and not listening to my rush of exclamations. Finally he glanced down at me, with a strange, anxious look and with a voice of deep earnestness, such as I have never heard addressed to me before, as though something of terrible importance depended upon me, upon me!

"See here my darling," he said urgently, "you must never, never, never tell anybody else what you have seen. Promise me you will never speak of it again, not even to me. Just put it right out of your mind, as if you had not seen it. Lift your hand and promise."

As soon as I could recover from my awe at the solemnity of his look, I lifted my hand and promised, and a silence fell between us. -32.2 Then I said, "Father, please, I want to ask just one thing. If Uncle Charles doesn't need his crutches But I got no further.

"Doesn't need his crutches what are you talking about?" exclaimed my father. "He needs his crutches! What in the world makes you think he doesn't need his crutches? He couldn't get along a minute without them.'

I stared at him, beside myself with astonishment. My father went on: "They are his only defense against the Inquisition."

"The Inquisition," I faltered, "Westward Ho" in my mind, "We haven't any Inquisition in America."

"Oh, yes, we have," said my father. I struggled up through the overwhelming flood of my bewilderment, till I could get breath enough to speak, and protested, "But father, the only inquisition I ever heard of is . you know, that thing that tortures people because they don't conform to the religion of the particular country they're in.'

"Well, that is the kind we have in America, all right," said my father, "and if it weren't for your Uncle Charles' crutches, it would seize right on him and torture all his family, including Aunt Emily."

"I don't understand a word of what you're saying," I cried out desperately. "Well, maybe you will, sometime," answered my father.

Aunt Emily's table was, with Aunt Emily teaching the children table manners. There are plenty of intolerable things in real life, without dragging into a story what happened when Uncle Charles spilled gravy on a clean tablecloth.

You notice, perhays, that I say "at Aunt Emily's table," and not "at Uncle Charles'"; and that sets me at another angle of their home life; what that home life meant to Aunt Emily's husband. He was what is known in America as a man "with no head for business," and yet there had never been anything but business in his life. He had been a handsome, dreamyeyed, musical-minded young accountant in Emery's Emporium when Aunt Emily, very young herself, had married him; married him, apparently for the same reason that he was in business, because there seemed to be nothing else to do. But Uncle Charles was no money-maker, and imprisoned in a grinding round of petty economies and unescapable shabbiness, how Aunt Emily ate her heart out, and what a life Uncle Charles led! But not even Aunt Emily's terrible energy could put into her husband's gentle, artistic, uncommercial soul, a single gust of the stormy ambition which blew like a tornado in her harried heart. Uncle Charles hated all business desperately, and found the only pleasure in his life in his children.

My mother always said that those three Burton children would certainly just have wasted away, if it had not been for their father at this time. He had as great a gift for calming and cheering them as their mother had for damping the very life out of them. Whenever Aunt Emily was away from home for a few hours, and Uncle Charles was there with the children, what a good time they had in those short hours of respite, Uncle Charles in an easy chair, the children piled on top of him, his arms around them tight, while they had what they called a "visit." This meant a chatter of little voices, birdlike and free, which Aunt Emily had never heard in her life. Or perhaps they'd all sing together, for they had inherited Uncle Charles' gift for music.

If he had only had time he would have given piano lessons to all the children. But, dear me, he had ne time except for that account keeping, and they had no money to pay a professional music teacher. Uncle Charles always looked ten years younger after such a visit with his went after.

She was put . . . well, I don't know that I ever heard just in what small corner she was put at first, as an experiment; something easy and simple to suit her supposed inexperience of business and her supposed feminine incapacity for it. The life at home was organized somehow, any how, as best they could with different cousins taking turns to go in and help out with the work. Uncle Charles did not suffer any pain, and was quite himself as far as his head was concerned, his body like a log in the bed, but his eyes bright, his fine sensitive face pale, but calm and philosophic as always. He was quite able to direct the children as they dressed and undressed themselves and studied their lessons and learned to do the housework,

As Uncle Charles got better so that he could sit up in bed, things ran more smoothly. His bed was moved down to a corner of the dining room, where he could look into the kitchen. He could work with his hands now, which he had always loved to do, and they were never still from morning till night. My father gave him a wheeled tray which was always piled with work, done or to be done. He did all the mending and darning and he and Phoebe did the cooking and the kitchen work together. The children all brought their school books to their father's bedside, and "did" their lessons there, to a running accompaniment of such sympathetic, helpful comments from him, as they'd never known before. By mid-winter of that year, Uncle Charles was well enough to sit in a wheeled chair, which Aunt Emily bought out of the first raise in her salary, and presented proudly to him on Christmas day. After this, he was all over the house at once, active and cheerful, good-natured and easy to get along with. There was plenty of money these days, for competent help, which Uncle Charles managed smoothly; there was plenty of money for good clothes, and good food, and nice china, and pretty glassware, and fine linen. all of which Aunt Emily enjoyed with a hungry pleasure which was never blunted by ceaseless repetition. She was happy for the first time in her life, Aunt Emily was, and although she was by this time, middle-aged and gray-haired, she was handsomer than she had ever been in youth. She grew and grew in acumen and business ability, and ripened with experience, till our small city was not big enough for her. She soared off to New York, carrying the family with her to an expensive apartment, and from there to Paris, where they lived for many years, Aunt Emily being the Paris representative of a great New York department store.

He always sat beside Phoebe, as she practiced her music lesson, to listen, to play the bass in a simple duet, and to teach. My mother says she never saw a child get forward with her music as Phoebe did, after her father began to teach her. In no time she was playing the accompaniment for his light, clear baritone, and then the little house rang with music like a shell with the murmur of the sea. We all used to love to go there, as soon as school was over to "have a concert." Sometimes they sang Scotch airs the tears we have shed over "Loch Lomond," the zest for battipoured into us by "Scots wha' hae': or it might be Irish, . . . how we have dow to look out into the moonlight.

To the day of his death Uncle Charles always kept the children close to his heart, and directed their growth just as lovingly and wisely as ever. Phoebe is a professional pianist now, well known all over America and Europe. For years she was usually companioned by her father, crutches and all. Charlie is a successful architect with a lovely French wife and two babies. It was beautiful to see Uncle Charles with his grandchildren! Bobby would certainly have gone straight to the dogs, if he had not had the most inspired handling at his father's hands. He was a wild, temperamental, unreasonable, warm-hearted, hot-tempered boy, who could not get on an instant with his mother. But Uncle Charles held to him through everything, made a man of him at last, for he is a noted field worker for the New York Natural History museum. This story sounds as though it were petering out, doesn't it, and as though this was about all there was to it? But there is something else, something I never told anyone but father. It was the great shadow secret of my childhood, something father and I knew, and nobody else. But now that. Uncle Charles and Aunt Emily are gone, I can tell it.

This is what happened: When I was nine years old (about three years after Uncle Charles' accident) I chanced to stay at their house over night. I had a bad dream, out of which I woke up with a start, and unable to get to sleep afterward, I got it of bed and wandered to the win-charm. What then?

Her house; her social duties. Put away all the knickknacks. You can have more elaborate beauty when your children are older. Have simplicity now Have your house bare as possible and get your beauty in harmonious colors. Have one room where the children's toys can be dumped, and then have enough control to think about the disorder of that room. Back of all the clutteredness in this world there is a law of order. Back of the messiness of that room is a bigger law of order than the mere orderliness of a roomit is the orderliness of a mind that has decided to keep its charm, its beauty, its strength, so that there will be a personality as the mother of that family instead of just a driven, patient, sweet woman. Take the dining room, if you have to, and have a jolly kitchen and eat there or in the living room. If you've got a spare bedroom, take that. Don't be an immaculate housekeeper-be an irresistible human. -From the Delineator.

Divided Skirt Is Old Idea. No one thinks twice today of seeing a woman in breeches or a divided skirt. This fashion is much older than that of the crinoline, for so long ago as the Thirteenth century women rode astride in divided garments. In 1568, when France was in the throes of a terrible civil war, women again took to divided skirts for greater ease and comfort in riding.

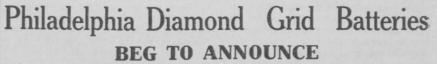

The third great revival of the fashion was in 1850, when an American lady, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, adopted the much-discussed "bloomer" costume.

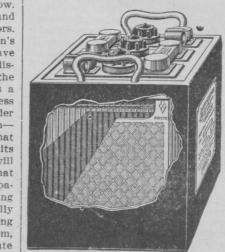

Another feminine fashion much older than most suppose is the form of hat called the "toque." This was first worn by ladies of the court of Henry III.

(May be used with temperance appli-cations.) LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:3-8; 7:24-28. GOLDEN TEXT—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink." -Luke 1:15.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matt. $:1-17; 11:2-15; Mal. 3:1-6. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby, John. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Pre-

JOHIOR TOFIC—The Matt who free pared the Way for Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—The Herald of the Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Character and Work of John, the Baptist.

John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was not only great in the Lord's sight, but was great when measured by the standards of men. In the teaching of this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

I. Birth and Ministry Foretold (Matt. 3:3; cf. Isa. 40:3).

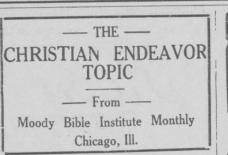

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger. His life was a plan of God. He was said to be a man sent from God (John 1:6). There is a sense in which every life is planned-everyone is sent from God. Everyone should remember that God has something to do with his life. II. His Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation. His supreme concern was to proclaim the Christ. He did not make himself prominent-was only a voice calling upon people to prepare for the Messiah. His person and habits were a protest against the luxury and hypocritical formality of his time.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd. He even denounced the religious leaders of his time and demanded of them fruits worthy of repentance.

III. His Preaching (Luke 3:3-8). 1. Demanded Repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent in preparati n for the coming of the Messiah.

2. Demanded Proofs of Penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false religions be abandoned-their sinful hearts renovated-showed them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. A change of mind, that is, the turning of the soul from sin to God, was necessary. This is a preparation which must be made before one can see and experience the salvation of God.

Lessons from the Psalms Psalm 44:1-8 (Patriotic Consecration Meeting)

The 44th. Psalm is divided by Dr. F. B. Meyer in this way:

Verses 1-3—Thou hast helped us. Verses 4-8—Thou must help us. Verses 6-16—Thou art not helping us.

Verses 17-22-We are not conscious of having done anything to forfeit thy help.

Verses 23-26-We invoke thy help. The Psalm recognizes God's control in all things. History attests His goodness and the fathers confirm it. All that we have and are and hope for is of His goodness and mercy which follows us all the days of our life. Out of this recognition there issue the expressions of confidence found in verses 5-8.

The word "but" in verse 9 indicates change; distress and disaster have come

The closing verses, 23-26, contain a prayer for deliverance from difficulty and defeat, so that all the way through, in prosperity, in perplexity and in prayer God is recognized as supreme and sufficient.

The renewal of such faith in God and of loyalty to His will in community and national affairs should characterize this meeting if it is to carry out the purpose of the committee on topics and be a "Patriotic Consecra-tion Meeting."

A movement has just been inaugu-rated under the name of the "Minute Men of the Constitution" which gives promise of rapid growth and great usefulness. Company No. 1 of the Minute Men was organized at Evanston, Ill., on the first of May of this present year. Three thousand five hundred people were enrolled at the opening meeting. The organization stands for the renewal and building up of respect for law and the Consti-tution of the United States. It declares that loyalty to the government of the United States must be above and beyond that of any other organ-ization or group of any kind. It is a movement for good government and is not launched for the interest of any political party. It has come into being largely because the safety of our great free and constitutional government is endangered through aggressive anl minority organizations to which political leaders and office seek-

Little Boy stood listening. He was afraid the books would all tumble out, they were so excited, when out from a book jumped a little girl and, bowing to all the books, she said, "I am ashamed of you! The idea of quarreling about which is the most popular !"

"Don't you know that there are all sorts of people in the world and that they all like different books? If they didn't, there would be only one book and then where would you be, for you must know that grown-ups and children all love to read about me."

"It is Alice," said the clock in a soft voice to Little Boy.

Little Boy had never had a playmate; he began to smile. "Alice," he said, "do come and play with me. Per haps we can catch the butterfly."

Alice turned around. "Oh, I can't" she replied. "Don't you know who I am? I have to be in the story or there wouldn't be any. I am 'Alice in Wonderland.' Did you never hear the story?'

"No; tell it to me," said Little Boy. "I will have to go back into the book," said Allce, "but if every one will be quiet I will tell the story."

And all the books in the big case, knowing Alice told the truth, slid back into their places. The clock ticked very softly while she told Little Boy her wonderful experiences.

And every night after that at the magic hour Little Boy left his frame on the wall to listen to the story of "Alice in Wonderland," for, just like all folks, big or little, he is never tired of hearing it.

IV. Jesus' Testimony to John (Luke 7:24-28). Because John did not see the interval between the "sufferings of Christ" and the "glory that should follow" he was perplexed. Therefore he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. The prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and His second coming. The two events were so presented as to appear to be in close succession. John in his preaching has stressed the mighty judgments which should take place at the appearance of the Messiah. The turn things were taking (he himself being imprisoned with the gloomy prospect of death). was in great contrast to the coming of the Messiah in fiery judgment-"the ax is laid unto the root of the trees" and "the chaff is burned up with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:10, 12). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not lack of faith, but confusion of mind that prompted his inquiry. Christ's testimony defended him against any such an accusation. Christ vindicated him against a vacillating mind because of the storms of persecution. He was not like a reed shaken by the wind (v. 24). He had lived a life of self-denial, therefore he did not deny his faith in Christ because of the dungeon (v. 25). Jesus declared that no greater prophet had arisen. That which perplexed John was the delay in judgment-the day of God's patience while gathering out the Church. This was a truth not disclosed to the prophets-that which Paul made known-because a special revelation had been granted (Eph. 3:3).

V. The Martyrdom of John (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with the king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death. He sealed his testimony with his blood.

centers with finely-shredded celery and arrange sections of grapefruit around the peaches; sprinkle with chopped pecan meats and serve with the following dressing: Beat until firm onehalf cupful of cream, add paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Place a spoonful of this dressing on the peach and garnish with a candied cherry.

Oatmeal Bread. - Take one-half cupful of boiling water, let stand until lukewarm, then add one-fourth of a cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt. Dissolve one-fourth of a yeast cake in a little water, stir in all the flour it is possible to put into the mixture, using a spoon; let rise over night or until light. Pour into a bread pan and let rise until twice its size. Bake in a moderate oven for two hours.

Shirred Eggs With Bacon.-Into ramekins, brushed with butter, place a tablespoonful of cooked bacon, break an egg into each cup, sprinkle with seasoning and set into the oven to bake just long enough to set the egg.

Hashed Brown Potatoes .- Cut cold boiled potatoes into small pieces, using two cupfuls, season with salt and pepper, cook three minutes in onethird of a cupful of bacon fat, stirring constantly. Let stand a few seconds to brown underneath; fold like an omelet and serve on a hot platter garnished with parsley.

Raisin Gruel .- Take a dozen large raisins, seed, place in a double boiler and pour over then: a pint of boiling water; cook for an hour. Strain off the water and thicken it with one teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a tablespoonful of milk; stir constantly while adding, cook ten minutes or longer, add salt and sugar to taste. Let cupful of good milk.

 FLORENCE

FLORENCE, signifying flourishing, can scarcely be separated from its quaint diminutive Flora, meaning flowers. Flora in mythological legend was the goddess of the flowers, and the festivals of Flora or Floralia were celebrated in the first burst of spring. In later times, the name of Florus was formed from that of the goddess, and is memorable as that of the procurator whose harshness drove the Jews to their last rebellion. It is believed that the feminine Flora came from this

There is a church at Florence of Saints Flore and Lucilla, but otherwise the first instance of the name is in Roman-Gothic Spain, where the unhappy daughter of Count Julian was called by the Spanish diminutive Florinda, and thus caused the name to be so much detested that, while Spanish ballads call her La Cava the wicked, her Christian name was only bestowed on dogs.

A Spanish maiden martyred by the Moors brought Flora into better repute. It became Flore in France, where it was adopted as a romantic epithet, and from there it found its way to Scotland. In the Gaelic, it is spelled Florie, as the island heroine of the '45 wrote herself. Florentia was a natural product, and named a feminine saint martyred in Diocletian's reign in Gaul.

The prevalence of the name Florence, in England, seems to have been due to so many English girls being born in the Italian city of that name. Deeper and dearer honor has been given to it by Florence Nightingale. Many fictitional heroines have borne the name and its derivatives. Blanchefleur, meaning white flower, is one of its forms, and was bestowed on Sir Trystan's mother. Versions, particularly romantic, are found with Ariosto's two heroines, Fiordespina (thorn flower) and Fiordilizi (fleur de lys).

Florence or Flora, used by the Irish peasantry, become Fingnan or Fincen. Florrie and Flossie and perhaps even Lora, are purely American diminutives.

The carnelian is Florence's talismanic gem. Its warm, bright color is said to dispel timidity and give courage, vitality and animation. It likewise brings good luck to the bearer stand until cool, then add one-half of the name. To dream of it, however, signifies impending misfortune. Florence's lucky day is Saturday, and 1 is considered her lucky number. (G) by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

the name of an insane asylum in London and formerly one of the most abominable torture-houses of the British capital. "Bethlehem" itself dates back to 1247, when Simon Fitz-Mary, a sheriff of London, founded a priory dedicated to St. Mary of Bethlehem. Everyone connected with this institution was compelled to wear a black robe, with a single star on the breast, in memory of the star which guided the Magi to the stable at Bethlehem. Some three centuries later a London tailor named Stephen Gennings offered to start a fund to purchase the House of Bethlehem and turn it into a hospital for the insane, but it was not until Henry VII made a gift of the house to the city of London that it became an insane asylum.

Owing to the fact that lunatics were considered at that time to be possessed by devils, Bethlehem was made a place of chains, manacles and stocks, while all manner of hideous tortures were devised to rout the evil spirits which haunted the bodies of the living. During the Sixteenth century the place became so filthy and loathsome that no one would enter it and it fell into decay, to be renovated in 1675, when a stone image of madness, carved in the likeness of one of Cromwell's doorkeepers, was placed on the outer wall. In the literature of the day we find that the name of the asylum is shortened, first to "Bethlem," then to "Bedlem" and finally changed to "Bedlam," in which form it remains.

$111.80; for Carroll County, rural $35.39, graded $34.93, High School, $114.40.

12-The chief item of school expense in proportion to numbers enrolled must be charged to our large number of rural schools. Many these schools have barely a sufficient number of pupils to keep them open under the law. The figures in the State report show that in Carroll the average number of pupils to a rural teacher is 22.6, and to a grade teacher 27.4, and in consequence more money must be apportioned to the rural school than the attendance warrants. In many cases the farmer who is the beneficiary of this system of rural schools, would assist materially in decreasing the cost of education by agreeing to the elimination of many of our rural schools and patronizing the consolidated school, thus receiving for his children a far super. ior type of instruction and lessening his own taxes at the same time.

13-The Board of Education is in entire harmony with the Board of County Commissioners in its desire to keep down school expense and favors a reorganization policy such as it promulgated in 1917. This policy includes these salient principles.

14—Constructing adequate school buildings or portables in the general centers of the county, and transporting by some means all children who are accessible by our state road system to these centers.

15-As it is now, it is costing the county just as much to educate 22.6 pupils (this year's average in the rural schools) as it would cost to edu-cate the 40 pupils allotted to each elementary teacher under the law. In some rural schools where the required average of 12 pupils has been barely maintained, those 12 pupils have proved a costly investment to the county.

16—There are 37 one-teacher schools that could be eliminated, and better provision made for the educa-tion of the children of these schools, whose current expense for the past year amounted to a little more than $30,000, to keep them open. It is very evident that the 700 children involved could be transported for less than half of this amount.

17-The Board of Education in making these announcements of its policy has no intention to criticize the Board of County Comissioners, but simply to lay before the public the problems it has to face. If the peoole of Carroll County desire to have their children educated, and continue to crowd them into the high schools then the necessary building facilities must be provided. As the attendance aw requires all children of elementary grade to attend school, it follows that the necessary provisions must be made for them too, and this is up to the public. This is your problem as well as ours. Economy is sometimes the most costly thing in the world, when it defrauds our children of their rights

18—We as tax-payers feel that the taxes paid should be spent in the best way possible and that no more taxes should be levied for schools than the amounts necessary to give the children of the county a proper education and to comply with the State law, for many of the items we have to deal with is a law of this State, and we are only trying to carry out the law and at the same time give to the people of Carroll County the best schools for the best sch

Work Under Difficulties. Workmen are carrying out repairs to the masonry at the very summit of Big Ben, the great Westminster clock tower in London, which is more than 300 feet high. A large Tudor rose recently fell from the highest point of the spire, and to reach the spot it was necessary to erect a scaffold 100 feet above the highest gallery. It was then found that five other roses were loose, and these have been taken down, repaired and refixed. When there is a strong wind the work has to be suspended

Taneytown baseball "fans" were given the opportunity on Wednesday afternoon, for an exhibition hilarity that does not often come in such a large dose. It was an occasion like Byron must have had in mind when he wrote, "On with the dance! let joy be unconfined."

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Seiss have bought another home in Washington -3812 Eighth St., N. W .- to which they will remove the first week in July, but will retain their first home, as an investment. The new one is semi-bungalow, with modern improvements.

Our lights were "off" on Saturday evening and night, and Sunday evening during the rather light electrical disturbance. Perhaps no fault can be j found for this, especially considering the long line over which "trouble" may occur; but it at least gives another instance of the objectionableness of long distance current. Some day, Taneytown must have its own plant.
