No. 8

CATTLE TESTING NOW UNDER WAY

General Co-operation is Manifested by County Farmers.

Dr. Elmer Wash, from the Department at Washington directing the tuberculin testing of cattle, and Dr. E. E. McCoy, who has in charge the actual testing of cattle in this district, are gratified with the reception with which they are meeting here, and report a 100 percent co-operation on the part of owners, all being willing to help the government in its efforts to make a clean-up of tubercular cattle. They also report that farm buildings and conditions are excellent here, and that the dairying end of farming has been given a great deal of well directed attention along sanitary lines.

The farmers generally are well informed, and need very little explanation of the efforts being made. Without going into details as to the remuneration received for condemned cattle, it is sufficient to say that approximately the amount received for three slaughtered animals is sufficient to replace two inspected ones free of tuberculosis, or perhaps a little better than that.

As the result of tests last week, there were 74 reactors in Taneytown district, that were shipped away on Monday of this week. There were 50 herds of 325 cattle tested this week, the results from which will be known the latter part of this week, and the figures given next week.

The names of the owners of reactors will not be published, although they are not in the least responsible for the ownership of such cattle. After the replacements are made, farmers will be glad—notwithstanding the present financial loss—that their herds are free from all suspicion, and this is their feeling in the matter in this district.

Dr. J. C. Hailman began work in Uniontown district, on Monday, and has been operating north of the state road. He has tested 47 herds containing 215 cattle.

Carroll County Fish Streams.

A report on a survey of the streams in Carroll county was made Wednesday to Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner, by Fred Tresselt, fish culturist of the department, who is conducting a general survey of the streams in all the counties.

"It is to be regretted," the report says, "that Carroll county is so poorly endowed with fishable streams. With the exception of the Monocacy river and Pipe creek (for bass), and Beaver run (for brown trout), and Snowdens run (for brown trout), the streams of this county are naturally unfit for game fish."

"This condition is due principally to the small size of the streams. Pollution, as in the case of a plant at Patapsco, renders unfit for fish a stream which under natural conditions would be a good bass stream."

Other polluted streams in this county are inhabited only by minnows and suckers and are naturally unfit to contain game fish."

Rev. Murray E. Ness Resigns.

Rev. Murray E. Ness, pastor of Union Bridge and Baust Reformed Churches, formally presented his resignation as pastor to the officials of the churches, on Thursday night, the same to take effect on October 1. Rev. Ness has had under consideration for some time, a call to the Arendtsville, Pa., charge, and finally concluded to accept the wider field and opportunity, much to the regret of his present parishioners, as well as of many other friends of himself and Mrs. Ness.

Mrs. Cattanch Entertains.

(For the Record.)
Mrs. James Cattanch, wife of a former pastor of Taneytown Presbyterian Church, entertained a number of ladies, Thursday afternoon of last week from 3 to 5 o'clock, at the hospitable home of Mrs. Robert S. McKinney.

Thirty-seven guests were present, several from out of town. The color scheme was prettily carried out in bunches of beautiful roses, pink candles on the dining room table, pink icing on the cake, and pink peppermints.

Mrs. G. W. Shipley presided at the coffee urn, and the guests were served with delicious refreshments by Mrs. Harry Reindollar, and Misses Miriam Shipley and Eleanor Birnie.

Mrs. Cattanch took several kodak pictures of small groups which included all the guests. Rev. G. W. Shipley, Robt. S. McKinney, Wm. Arthur and Mr. K. Lott, coming in later shared in the refreshments. Every one seemed to enjoy themselves, and there were many expressions of pleasure, at having spent a most delightful afternoon.

The use of a poisonous weed-killing spray has been discontinued on many railroads. While the spray is very effective and economical for clearing the right of way of railroads, it has been the direct cause of killing a great deal of game, as well as a number of cattle and horses.

Thirty nationalities are represented among the 2,200 pupils enrolled in public school No. 96, New York City. Nearly all the children, however, were born in this country.

A NEW ROAD PROMISED.

Littlestown Road to be Built to Maryland Line.

A survey was made, this week, on the mile of unimproved road continuing the Littlestown macadam road up to the Maryland line—in other words, with the Taneytown road. A concrete road 16-ft. wide is planned, to be built on the state aid plan, by which the state pays one-half the cost, the county one-fourth and the township one-fourth.

Maryland should meet this improvement and build a substantial hard road on to Taneytown, and in fact on to Keymar and connect up with the Frederick county system. This is one of the old main roads of the state, and has been in an extremely bad state of repair for some years, especially from Taneytown to Littlestown. Apparently, Pennsylvania is going to do its share of the job first, and it is now up to Maryland to make the connection, as it did in the case of the Emmitsburg and Gettysburg road. It is said that this is on the plans for next year's work.

The Public Health Nurse and Tuberculosis.

Because tuberculosis causes more deaths than any other communicable disease, in Maryland, every year, care and prevention of the great white plague, have an important part in the work of the public health nurses throughout the State.

"The activities of the public health nurse, in the fight against tuberculosis, are largely educational," said Miss S. Ethel Monroe, the Advisory Nurse of the State Department of Health, in a recent interview, "for only through a well grounded knowledge of the disease, can individuals help to combat it. Although the program may vary in some of the localities, the general procedure in this particular field is as follows:

"The State law requires physicians to report to the State Department of Health all cases they diagnose as tuberculosis. The nurse in the county in which the patient resides is notified that this patient has been registered as a tuberculosis case, and she is asked to visit him. She first interviews the attending physician, obtaining his permission to visit the case. When she goes to the home, she talks to the patient and tells him that a cure is possible if he 'plays the game' and carries out to the letter the rules laid down by his physician."

"She tells him that the germs causing the disease are in the sputum and the discharges from the nose, and that they are scattered by coughing and sneezing. She shows him that by the simple method of coughing, sneezing, or spitting into a paper napkin and placing the napkin in a paper bag that can be burned, the germs are destroyed and his loved ones protected."

"The nurse also points out the necessity for providing separate dishes for the patient and for having these dishes boiled after each meal; for having the patient sleep alone in a room that is well ventilated; and for having him remain as much as possible in the open air. She explains the danger in kissing; she urges the necessity for cleanliness by careful sweeping and dusting by some damp method, and she advises as to the proper disinfection of the bed linen, floor, walls, etc. She leaves at the home a supply of the disinfectant distributed by the State Department of Health and demonstrates its use."

"The nurse impresses upon the patient the necessity of rest, as ordered by his physician, and if the doctor has recommended that the patient be treated in a sanatorium, she makes the necessary arrangements for the patient to go, often helping to provide the clothes required, if the case is a needy one."

"After the patient has been taken to the sanatorium the nurse has an equally important duty to perform for the members of the patient's family or the household in which he has been living. Unless great care is taken, there is always danger of the spread of the disease to the other members of the family, especially to those who have been nursing the patient. To be sure that no unsuspected cases have developed, the nurse arranges with the family doctor, or at the nearest tuberculosis clinic, for those who have been in contact with the patient to be given a careful medical examination. Under the joint auspices of the State Department of Health, and the Maryland Tuberculosis Association clinics for the examination of persons threatened with, or suffering from tuberculosis, are held in every county in the state, so that service of this sort is readily available in every section. From January to July of this year, 380 cases of tuberculosis were registered from these clinics."

"Taking it all in all the work of the public health nurse in connection with tuberculosis is full of helpfulness and hope."

Renewing Subscriptions.

A common form, now, of soliciting renewals of newspaper subscriptions, is to send a subscriber a notice of the coming expiration of his subscription, and to enclose a check made payable to the publisher for the amount of another year's subscription with the name of the Bank left blank. All that is necessary is for the subscriber to fill in the name of the Bank, sign his name, and enclose the check in the return envelope furnished and put it in the mails, then forget about his subscription for another year. It is a very simple plan, and a good one—when it works as intended.

THE FARM FUTURE LOOKS BETTER

Low Values at Present, Make Desirable Opportunities.

The present depreciation in farm values, as represented by a few public sales, should not be seriously regarded except by those compelled to make sales. Always when these periods of depression come, purchasers of farms make money by holding them until land values again advance, as they always do, or at least have done in the past. Those who can buy now—such as tenant farmers—have their opportunity, and should take advantage of it.

While the low price of land is to the disadvantage of those anxious to sell, the result of the depression is likely to turn out to be advantageous to the country as a whole, in bringing about more personally owned and operated farm homes, a condition that is always desirable.

The outlook is that farming, as an occupation, is likely to grow better—that the bottom has been reached, and is passing. The only feature that has not adjusted itself to the times, is taxes, and if at all possible taxes on land should be lowered, not only as a matter of fairness, but as an encouragement to farmers to keep on in their business.

Farming can not stay permanently unprofitable, but must always remain as the one source of food supplies for the whole country, and the world. The demand for farm products does not stop, even for a day; but, the farm must not be too greatly over-loaded with expense, nor with too many profits expected, and this means that the best outlook for the future is for personally owned, and personally operated farms.

On the whole, it appears to us that this is both a good time to hold on to farms, as well as to buy them. There must be a certain amount of liquidation—certain sales and adjustments forced by circumstances; but, confidence in farming for the future appears to be in sight, notwithstanding the many problems facing the business and ownership of farms at present.

That the outlook for farming is optimistic, is shown by government estimates received from 24,000 farmers that there will be a 9.7 increase in the acreage of wheat soon to fall; the largest increases coming from Missouri, followed by Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and smaller percentages in most states, a few showing no increase and Nebraska a loss of 2 percent.

There are 6,500,000 farms in the United States, according to the Christian Science Monitor, and these use 4,200,000 automobiles and 670,000 trucks.

WATER SUPPLIES WEAK.

Frederick and Carroll County are in Need of Soaking Rains.

A serious shortage of water exists in Frederick, Brunswick, Middletown and Emmitsburg, due to the protracted drought of the Summer, that is shown in all the streams and in many private wells. In all of the towns, economy in the use of water is being urged and the authorities are looking for leaks in the mains.

The same condition is in evidence in Carroll County. In Taneytown the Commissioners have published a notice urging all to use water as sparingly as possible, as the use of water is becoming so great as to tax the present storage facilities.

The corn and late potato crops are suffering, it is said, though the corn promises more than the average yield, notwithstanding.

The country has not recovered from the long extended heat and drought of June, when the sources of streams were seriously crippled, though the surface was kept in fairly good condition for the major crops.

The water pressure in Frederick is lower than for years, while in Brunswick the situation is critical. In both places it is believed that leaking pipes are partly responsible.

Notice to Hunters.

The squirrel, dove, rail and reed bird season open September 1st. The season for partridge, woodcock, rabbit and wild turkey the opening date is November 10th. Hunting licenses are being issued now in the Clerk of the Court's office.

The fees are: Resident County, $1.10; Resident State-wide, $5.10; Non-resident of Maryland pays, $10.50. Guests of landowners must have a license.

It is unlawful to kill Chinese Ring-necked Pheasants, penalty $25.00 to $100.00.

It is unlawful to hunt at night time or on Sunday. Hunting without a license, penalty $15.00 fine. Failure to display tag carries a penalty of $15.00 fine.

Sportsmen who like to hunt and fish, should co-operate with the Deputy Game Wardens, in the enforcement of all the game and fish laws, especially laws relating to hunting licenses and hunting and fishing in closed season.

Frederick County Road Repairs.

The Woodsboro-Creagerstown pike will be repaired from Woodsboro to Creagerstown, according to information given out at the office of the Board of County Commissioners. The surface of this road is now being scraped with a road plow. Stones will be placed in all holes and the road will be gotten into good shape this Fall. There will be no other resurfacing this Fall, it was announced.

The work of oiling and chipping the Montevue pike from a point one-quarter of a mile west of the city limits past Montevue Hospital will be commenced at once, it was announced. Amiesite will be used for the first quarter mile west of the city. The pike will be oiled and chipped from this point to where the private road from Rocky Springs road, leading toward the mountains at this point, will be oiled and chipped as far as the first stream crossing the road—a distance of one-third of a mile.

The county will complete the resurfacing of the Yellow Springs pike from the Hagerstown and Frederick Railway crossing at Yellow Springs to the corporate limits of Frederick this Fall, it was announced.—Frederick News.

In the Name of the Farmer.

It is predicted that the so-called Farm Bloc in the coming session of Congress will include an attack on the tariff schedules in its program unless the Bloc can secure passage of a measure to assure some form of price fixing on farm products by the federal government and an establishment by the government of an agency that shall buy the farmers' export surplus.

The whole program is carried on in the name of the farmer when, as a matter of fact, the rank and file of American farmers are not today asking for petting and coddling at the hands of the government.

The disgusting part of the situation is that the farmer is used as a dummy around which political schemes are cooked up and foisted onto an uninformed public. The tariff question which should be considered purely from a scientific, business standpoint, is used as a political football and the public pays a terrific price for watching its use in the political game.—The Manufacturer.

Swam the Chesapeake Bay.

Miss Lillian Cannon, aged 22 years, a swimming instructor, successfully swam the Chesapeake bay from Tolchester to Bay Shore, on Thursday, making the distance in 10 hours and 45 minutes. Although the distance between the two points is only 12 miles, it is estimated that Miss Cannon actually swam 21 miles, due to strong currents and cross tides. She says she will now try the English channel.

The Sun rises in the Pacific and sets in the Atlantic in the Panama Canal, because the east end of the Canal points toward the Pacific and the west end toward the Atlantic.

HOW THE COUNTIES STAND IN PRODUCTS.

Frederick Leads, partly on account of its Size.

The land area of Maryland is 6,362,240 acres. A total of 4,758,000 acres is in farms. Improved land in farms totals 3,137,000 acres. Approximately 2,000,000 acres are in cultivation. There are 47,908 farms in the State. Average size of a farm is 99.3 acres, 65.5 acres being improved land.

Eighty-four percent of Maryland's farmers are native white; 13 percent colored; and 3 percent foreign-born white. Corn is the leading crop in money value. Wheat is second. Hay is third. Tobacco ranks fourth as a money crop.

Baltimore county has the largest number of farms (operated by owners) free from mortgage debt and leads in alfalfa.

Carroll leads in hogs, has the largest number of chickens on farms. Dorchester leads in tomato acreage.

Frederick has the largest number of farms, the largest number of acres under the plow, leads in corn acreage, is the largest wheat county, leads in all tame or cultivated hays, leads in rye, has the largest number of bees, produces approximately four-fifths of the Nation's annual supply of goldfish, has the most horses, leads in dairy cattle, is the biggest livestock county in the State, taking into consideration the value of all livestock, ranks first as an agricultural county in Maryland, and is one of the best agricultural counties in the United States.

Garrett county is the largest county in the State. Area 438,400 acres leads in sheep and in wool production, produces practically all of the maple products, has the largest percentage of farms operated by their owners, leads in oats and in buckwheat.

Kent leads in pear production. Prince George's leads in tobacco. Queen Annes has the most mules.

Washington leads in orchard fruits, has the most apple trees of bearing age, and has over a half-million fruit trees of bearing age—mostly apple and peach.

Wicomico leads in sweet potatoes. Worcester produces the most Irish potatoes.

These are facts from the Census of 1920.

(We always feel like saying that statistics are hardly fair to Carroll County, in the matter of productivity. Frederick county, for instance, contains 424,320 acres of land, while Carroll County has only 238,080 acres, or 138,240 acres less than Frederick. Based on production per acre, we believe Carroll county leads the state.—Ed. Record.)

Layers and Loafers.

I love the hen, what'er her breed,
Who shells out eggs for human need,
She sings around from morn till night
She has a healthy appetite
And fills herself with mash and scratch,

That she may lay a bigger batch.
Her comb is red, a pretty sight,
Her legs and bill soon bleach out white.

The first to wake, the last asleep,
Her back is broad, her body deep—
With lively eye and cheerful face—
I want such hens around my place.
But darn the hen that lays no eggs
And keeps the color in her legs.

'Most every flock has got these pests;
They haunt the roost and dodge the nests.

We ought to learn to walk around them
And pick them out with ease, confound them.

Their build is narrow long and shallow,
Their legs and bills untimely yellow.

No idle worthless hen can gull
The man who studies how to cull
He knows the loafers from the layers
He knows the stoppers from the stay-
ers,

He knows the pikers from the payers,
O, when you find some lazy cull,
Some loafer lackadaisical,
Who every chance of profit throttles,
Cut off her tail up near her wattles,

Yea, lay her on a block of wood,
Haul off your axe, and swat her good.

Ye Country Editor.

Oh, I wish I was an editor,
I really do, indeed,
It seems to me that editors
Get everything they need.

They get the biggest and the best
Of everything that grows,
They go free into circuses
And other kinds of shows.

The biggest punks, largest beets,
And all that kind of stuff,
Are blown into the "sanctum"
By an editorial puff.

So I wish I was an editor,
I really do, indeed,
It seems to me that editors
Get everything they need.

North Pole Expedition Abandoned.

The McMillan North Pole expedition has been abandoned for this year, on account of very unfavorable conditions, due mainly to ice and fog that has put in its appearance ahead of the usual time. The expedition, however, will make accurate investigations from the present base at Etah, Greenland, that will be of permanent value for future use.

THE BIG CORN CROP.

Better Than the Average, this Year, in Maryland.

The corn crop calculated to bulge the granaries of Maryland farmers is in sight this year if average growing conditions prevail from now until harvest. This fact is brought to the fore by John S. Dennee, Federal crop statistician for Maryland. He makes the statement, he says, after reading scores of reports from farmer-correspondents on the average date of Aug. 1, and summing up his own observations made while on a trip over the state during July.

Condition on August 1 was estimated by the Crop Reporting Board of the United States Department of Agriculture at 86 percent of a normal, according to Mr. Dennee, suggesting a yield of 38 bushels to the acre and a probable production of 24,556,000 bushels. Production last year was 18,538,000 bushels, and the average for the five years (1920-1924) is 23,926,000.

A short crop last year, caused for the most part by unfavorable weather at planting time and subsequently, combined with a purpose on the part of farmers to increase feed crops this year are believed to be the major reasons for larger acreage—estimated to be 8 percent over that of 1924.

Persistently dry weather in June allowed of close cultivation of the crop. And farmers paid a good deal more attention last spring to the selection of their seed. Figured at current prices the crop in sight this year has an estimated worth of about $30,941,000 at the farm gate. Little of Maryland's corn is marketed as grain. The product goes mainly to maintain work animals and breeding stock on the farms. What is not used in that way is marketed in the form of livestock and livestock products. Corn is the most important single crop grown in Maryland.

If You're Going 30 Miles An Hour.

A car going at thirty miles an hour should require at least one hundred and twelve feet to stop if the brakes are operating properly. This shows how close and how fast you can approach a crossing and retain the ability to stop your car, if it is necessary.

People pay insurance premiums to be collected when they die by other folks. Why can't they give a small amount of time at railroad crossings to keep alive?—From the Flint (Mich.) Journal.

It's a Hard Job.

A preacher has a hard time. If his hair is white, he is too old; if he is a young man, he hasn't any experience. If he has ten children he has too many, and if he has none, he isn't setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir she is presuming, and if she doesn't, she dislikes her husband's work. If a preacher reads his notes he is a bore; if he preaches without notes, he is not deep enough. If he stays home in his study he doesn't mix with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be at home getting up a sermon.

If he calls on a poor family, he is playing the grandstand; if he calls at the home of the rich he is an aristocrat. Whatever he does, someone could have told him how to do better. He has a hard time living off of donations that never come in. There are some hard jobs but next to editing a newspaper we don't believe there's a harder job in the world than the one the preacher has to fill.—Exchange.

The Pic-nic Season.

August is the month of carnivals, tournaments, and home coming days in Howard County. A farmer's life is said to be a hard, busy one, but where is the farmer who cannot find time to go to the nearby pic-nic? Some of the annual affairs have been attended by many generations of the same families. Each event is held to make money for some worthy cause, but the money-making part is of small importance compared with the social value. In this age of hurry and scurry there is time for little of the old-fashioned "visiting." So a day when one may renew old acquaintances; inquire about the neighbors who have moved away; see the new babies; and meet the brides and grooms, brings a glow of friends to the heart that means much to every one.—Ellicott City Times.

Brookhart Behind in Count.

Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, irregular Republican, whose election was contested by Daniel F. Steck, Democrat, is running behind in a recount of votes of the state that has been under way for several weeks by the Senate Elections Committee. With 61 counties completed Steck has a lead of 11,025 votes.

British interests have started in Buenos Aires the largest beef packing plant in the world, even larger than the Swift plant that handles 4,000 beeves daily.

There is a growing sentiment all over the country that what the people really want is more service, greater efficiency and less politics in public office.

Hired men on Western farms often refuse to plow unless the farmer gives them at least 12 horses in a hitch. 20 horses frequently pull six fourteen inch bottoms.

Hunting Trouble.

Most folks can find what they want, by looking for it, especially if it be trouble of some kind—for themselves, or for others. If one does not like a certain person, or is jealous of him, it is a comparatively easy job to kindle the dislike for there is hardly a limit to our imagination when we are looking out for something to misrepresent, as the fellow we dislike is apt to be out in the open, doing things, without first consulting us as to what he may do.

The touchy, snappy, easily ruffled chap, seems to prefer keeping on that way; for, it is almost as easy to find good things as bad, to say, or think, about other people—we merely exercise the ability we have, to find what we most want; and if the evidence is difficult to get, we merely try all the harder to get it.

There is the other type, almost as prominent in every community, but decidedly in the minority—the man who is slow to think ill of neighbors, and who does not try to build up grouches. A man of this kind, instead of welcoming evidence against some one with whom circumstances have caused a "break" with him, will discourage and move away from the evidence, rather than encourage it. They are lovers of peace, and find no pleasure in keeping alive trifling troubles.

There are a few people who never speak ill of any one, no matter how strongly provoked to do so. Too "easy," perhaps, but in our hearts we strongly admire them, and know their course is best. Even the snappy, thin-skinned kind, find no real pleasure in their nature, but get into a rut from which they lack the strength of fine character to get out of; somebody is continually "bumping" them, as they think, but as a matter of fact may be thinking little or nothing about them, and are not very greatly concerned, for "trying to please everybody" is one of the undoable things.

About Buying at Home.

Every now and then somebody puts up an argument against our advice to "buy at home." We do not object to this at all, but rather welcome views opposite to ours, when they are honestly and thoughtfully stated. In this "buy at home" proposition there are of course exceptions to the rule, as in all other rules. Buying everything at home would be impossible, for the excellent reason that we want, and must have, things not obtainable at home; so our advocacy of the plan is always qualified by this fact.

We should simply buy at home whenever in fairness it is possible to do so; our inclination should be toward supporting home industries rather than toward supporting away from home ones. We need business at our home towns, just as we need friends in our home neighborhoods. We ought all show a plain partiality for everything worthy, in our home communities, and this means spending money there, among other things. This is our "buy at home" spirit.

Buy wherever you please, but please to buy at home, unless for some big difference in the price when you can get what you want. Do not forget that away from home prices are not always fair prices. There are price-cutters, merely to get business away from somebody else, and sometimes these "cuts" are really not worth the cost of injuring your home dealers, or workmen, or industries.

Even should you pay a little more at home, what does it matter in the long run? Saving a little money, after all, is a trifle when one considers everything. Get fair prices, and be sure you are not being "robbed" but be willing, at times, to pay the home man a little more, for he is quite apt to pay it out again to home help, home churches or to some home benefit, and after a while it may come around back to you. What you pay away from home, never comes back.

And don't make the decision that if the home price is a little more, it is too much, or too great a profit. It may be, in some cases, but not by any means in all. Besides, when you deal at home you have the home man convenient to go if there is a mistake of any sort, or if you want to make an exchange, or perhaps you would like to ask a favor, some time, from the home business man—we all need favors occasionally.

Prohibition Hasn't Hurt Us Yet.

The president of the American Bankers' Association, Mr. Walter W. Head, of New York, cites the following figures to show that America is enjoying great prosperity:

110,000,000 persons, occupying 3,700,000 square miles of territory and possessing wealth estimated at $300,000,000,000.

Bank deposits aggregating approximately $40,000,000,000.

Earthquakes.

Earthquakes rarely are credited with payment for the damage they do. It is now maintained by California geologists that the recent seismic disturbances at Santa Barbara may have repaid the losses, of more than $10,000,000, by opening up fissures deep down in the earth that will prove powerful sources of replenishment for the regional water supply.

For an immediate result of the recent disaster has been an enormous increase in the flow of water throughout the county, and it remains to be seen whether the present output will continue indefinitely and become the normal production. Ranchers in many cases may be spared the cost of carrying from great distances the irrigation channels that have turned thousands of arid acres into garden lands and teeming orchards. If this is the happy eventuation, the country which applauded Santa Barbara's resolution and independence in her crucial hour will share the satisfaction in her compensatory good fortune—Phila. War Department and Prize-fighting.

Prizefighting at Washington Barracks, Washington, D. C., has been discontinued in deference to the District law forbidding such contests. Fights at Fort Myer have also been called off, presumably for a similar reason.

This is sincere action in accordance with General Orders issued by the War Department, reading:

"Boxing as an athletic exercise and as a sport should be encouraged. Care must be exercised that it does not lose its character as an exercise or sport.

"The following will govern in permitting boxing contests:

(a) A post within the limits of a city or other corporation will comply with the local ordinances with respect to boxing contests.

(b) A post not within the limits of a city or other corporation will comply with the State laws with respect to boxing contests.

(c) A post within the limits of a territory or the District of Columbia will comply with the Federal Criminal Code.

(d) If there be no local laws or ordinances to the contrary, boxing exhibitions may be open to the public."

Criticism of the army bouts has been based upon the fact that matches have been arranged by professional match-makers, that professional prizefighters have been permitted to participate in such matches, that the general conduct of these bouts has made them hardly dissimilar from ordinary prizefighting as conducted in New York and elsewhere, that the men in the service, instead of being encouraged by army "boxing" to participate in a general way, have rather been encouraged to limit their participation to the role of spectator.

The close relation between army "boxing" and outside prizefighting has been humiliating to millions of Christian taxpayers. They have seen the so-called champions developed in the army stepping out into the ranks of professionalism, advertising their army exploits and doing everything possible to retain the suggestion of continued identity with the army. The present policy of the War Department that bouts which are contrary to law in contiguous territory shall not take place within post limits is commendable even though no more than ethical. The identification of professional match-makers and of professional prizefighters with such bouts should stop. It is highly desirable that boxing as a public exhibition to which admission fees are charged be discontinued and that general boxing as an exercise and sport be encouraged. It is contended in this connection that army athletics is not supported by Congressional appropriation and that the admission fees are needed. This is a situation which Congress should and can correct. Temperance forces of the nation at the time the canteen was abolished secured proper support for recreational features to be added to post exchanges. They will undoubtedly give every possible aid to any effort to secure an appropriation to be used for the encouragement of athletics in the army.

Major Thomas J. Johnson, of the General Staff, says, "We believe boxing to be of value but we are going to strive more and more to put it on a basis conforming closely to the spirit of amateurism." Present orders restrict boxing bouts to three rounds with ten-ounce gloves.

It is very much to be doubted that the use of boxing to "teach" soldiers to give and take punishment" is advisable. The average soldier is quite willing to give and take punishment in his country's service, while vicarious participation in the giving and taking of punishment by sitting in a folding chair and watching two other men pummel each other undoubtedly decreases such willingness. In the words of Arthur Brisbane, "One could find material for a first-class retreat at any prizefight."

Intercollegiate boxing is also getting to be a serious evil. Already several institutions have been humiliated because some of their graduates have forgotten that they are supposed to be gentlemen and have entered professional prizefighting. So long as this brutality is licensed in states overwhelmed by immigrants, the United States and our colleges should keep their skirts clear.

Why Misdread Farmer and Workman?

When our present tariff system was framed, between forty and fifty of the principal agricultural organizations of the country were represented at the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee. They succeeded in carrying all their points with the result that practically everything the farmer buys for use on his farm was placed on the free list, and everything the farmer raises for sale was put on the protected list.

In spite of all the political talk to the contrary, it is safe to say that the general opinion of the informed farmer is, that our present tariff laws are as nearly perfect from the point of view of the farmer as it is possible to make them.

To open the flood gates of Europe and the Orient and abolish the tariff on wheat and other cereals, wool, butter, eggs, cheese, citrus fruits, sugar and a hundred other things that the farmer raises which are now protected, would be a calamity for the farmer just as he is beginning to get on his feet.

A blow at the tariff protection to American industry is a blow at the factory worker, which in turn is a blow at the farmer, because American workmen comprise the biggest market for American farm products.

The sooner the public, the laboring man, and the farmer realize these homely facts, the sooner will the tariff question be taken out of politics and considered purely as a scientific business problem, to be changed only as varying conditions warrant a re-consideration of rate schedules.—The Manufacturer.

Fire Cost $1,044 a Minute.

America's bill for fire waste last year, 1924 was $1,044 a minute, an annual loss of $548,000,000, exceeding all previous high records. These are the figures of the Actuarial Bureau of the National Board of Fire Underwriters quoted in a bulletin issued by the Insurance Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Fire Weste Council.

The total amount of property destroyed during the year was equivalent to more than half the annual interest on the national debt.

Much of this enormous loss is preventable waste. "Although the first losses of the United States continue to mount," says the bulletin, "it is not necessarily an indication that they cannot be reduced. The experience of the 1924 Inter-Chamber Fire Waste Contest shows that losses in the reporting cities were reduced to the extent of $4,000,000 over their average for the preceding five years coincident with the activities undertaken by local fire prevention committees. The percapita loss in these communities was $3.10, as compared with the national average of approximately $5.00.

"What has been done in some cities might well be duplicated in others through energetic fire prevention programs carried on under the auspices of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations. Although fire waste is a national problem, it can only be solved through the combined endeavor of all communities."—Commercial World.

Bees That Lay Eggs in Bricks and Wood

Sometimes as you are looking at an old wall you will notice that the mortar between the bricks contains a number of deep pits. If you probe into various holes you will be startled eventually by the exit from one of them of a small, but very angry, bee. You have, in fact, disturbed the mason bee in his home. The hole in which he was lurking was made by his powerful jaws.

The female lays eggs in little receptacles at the bottom of the hole and places a store of food beside each egg. The hole is then sealed up with a mixture of clay and mortar, softened with the bee's saliva. The eggs are left to themselves, and when hatched the young bees eventually eat their way out into the open.

The cousin of the mason bee is called the carpenter bee. He burrows into woodwork, choosing generally the underside of the beam, to protect the hole from rain. At the bottom of the hole an egg is laid. Then comes a partition of mud and wood chips; then another egg, and so on till the hole is filled. The carpenter then seals it securely and leaves the eggs to look after themselves, and when hatched the bees eat through each partition till they get out.

Artist's Fee Too High Even for Profiteer

One of the good stories about the famous painter, Meissonier, is in regard to his experience with a new-rich gentleman who had erected a private theater at his chateau. Meissonier was just then at the height of his fame and was spending months painting pictures and selling them for about $200 a square inch.

The rich man conceived the idea that what his theater most needed was a drop curtain painted by the famous artist, so he went to the studio and proposed the matter to him.

"How large is the curtain to be?" asked the painter.

"It will be 30 feet high and 35 feet wide," was the reply.

"My friend," said Meissonier blandly, "it would take me 30 years to paint such a curtain, and it would cost you $6,000,000."

Counting the Cost

"Don't fidget!" snapped mother.

Little Bertha stopped toying with the lid of her chocolate box and endeavored to concentrate upon the movie. But it was a very dull affair, and her mind soon came wandering back to the box.

In two minutes her small fingers were busy again.

"Bertha, don't fidget!" repeated her mother.

Once again the child obeyed, but once more the production failed to hold her fingers away from the lid of the chocolate box.

"Now, Bertha," exclaimed her mother, "I warn you."

Bertha opened her eyes wide. When her mother spoke like that she was not to be disregarded. Glancing doubtfully at the dull screen and then at the tempting lid, she whispered: "Would it be a hairbrush, mummy, or just your hand?"

The Windmill

Windmills were in use in the remote ages and their discovery and first use is not known, but Titus Livius says when Hannibal crossed the Alps in 180 B. C. the Carthaginians saw windmills in the valley below and there is legendary information that they were brought from the Orient by the Crusaders. They were well established in the country around Paris in the Twelfth century and shortly after that time were put in use in the Netherlands. They were known in the days of Cervantes, who gave them a place of some distinction in his writings.

Effect of Altitude

The geological survey says that according to science there is an altitude at which water would not boil; however, no one has ever reached that point, as it is about twenty miles above sea level. While it is not impossible to boil an egg hard at the top of Pike's peak, it takes longer to do it. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit at sea level, but on Pike's peak it boils at about 180 degrees Fahrenheit.

POULTRY

PLACING INCUBATOR EGGS ON THE MARKET

(By T. E. QUISENBERRY)

Some farmers and poultry raisers make a practice of putting eggs on the market which they have had in an incubator for a few days and found the eggs to be infertile. This is a bad practice and should never be done by any honest farmer or poultry raiser. You may make good use of such eggs by consuming them at home. They will do to fry, for baking and for certain kinds of cooking, but they are absolutely unfit for the market. Such eggs, while good for home consumption are absolutely unfit for shipping. The yolks will break, the eggs will rot before they can reach the consumer, and it is a dishonest practice to offer such eggs for sale as fresh-laid eggs, and you lower the price on all eggs by so doing. Consume such eggs at home.

We have seen severe market losses due to a habit of sending infertile incubator eggs into commerce. This has been especially noticeable in the large houses making a specialty of breaking out eggs where they found it absolutely necessary to candle even in March and early April because farmers and poultry raisers were marketing infertile incubator eggs with their fresh eggs, and the incubator eggs came in in such bad condition and were so numerous that they had to be culled out before it was safe for the breakers to handle the eggs. At that time of the year there is no other reason for candling. You can see what a loss this means to any dealer, and instead of reducing the army of candlers which are now required this practice makes a demand for even a greater number.

Another very serious evil due to the marketing of infertile eggs from an incubator or from underneath a hen is their admixture with storage stock. These incubator eggs usually go on the market at the season when eggs are being stored without being candled. We know it to be a fact that infertile incubator eggs break down during transportation and handling and easily become "white rot."

Infertile incubator eggs can be used for bakers' purposes in the home, but under no circumstances should they ever be offered for sale or for shipment.

Another important reason why such eggs should not be marketed as fresh eggs is the fact that they are liable to be seized by food inspectors as being misbranded. Such eggs play havoc with the storage stock, and we are in hopes that no farmer or poultry raiser will be guilty of such a dishonest practice.

Trap Nest Is Accurate

Test of Hen's Ability

The trap nest is the most accurate test of a hen's ability to lay eggs, but it is not practicable for those who live on farms, with all the other work they must do. Therefore, poultry specialists have been studying the general characteristics of laying hens, so that we might have a set of almost exact rules for telling the layers from the loafers. It has been proven over and over that these rules work correctly and no farmer woman need longer feed hens that will not pay for their feed bill and give a profit. We must also remember that these lazy hens, which have been loafing all summer, fall and winter, will be laying their few eggs next spring at hatching time, and if their eggs are set, we will have another flock of loafers.

The hens that begin to molt in July should be sent to market. There is one exception to this, the hen that has hatched and brooded a flock of chicks, for she will usually go through a partial molt before she begins laying again. August 15 and September 15 is the best time to cull, but it will pay to go over your flock from time to time through the summer and cull out. Sell those that have stopped laying. There are usually a number of hens in every flock whose general appearance indicates they have low vitality. Little vigor and will never be profitable egg producers. A great percentage of these low vitality birds are late hatched pullets of the previous season.

Poultry Hints

Carrots, cabbage and sprouted oats help make strong chicks.

Good hatches are obtained only when the laying stock has been selected for vigor and made to exercise.

Fresh eggs are the best for hatching purposes. If it is regarded necessary to keep hatching eggs they should be stored in a temperature of 60 degrees or lower.

Cull all undeveloped pullets and old hens from the flock.

Early hatched pullets will molt early in the fall and be ready for laying next winter at a season when egg production is low and prices high.

It has been shown that young chicks are most susceptible to infestation of roundworms until about 12 weeks of age. With severe infestation death may occur in two weeks. In mild infestations chicks live, but growth is slower and resistance to disease less.

GRADE CROSSINGS CAUSE 2,000 DEATHS

Fatalities and Injuries Increase Every Year.

By C. B. AUOL, President National Safety Council.

Chicago.—More than 2,000 persons lost their lives at grade crossings in 1924, and there were more than 6,000 injured. In spite of the fact that railroad officials, automobile manufacturers and state and county road commissioners have co-operated to provide suitable warning in the form of mechanical devices to attract the motorist's attention and prevent him from crossing the tracks in the face of a locomotive, the fatalities and injuries have increased from year to year.

Various methods have been suggested for relieving the situation, the principal and most discussed of these being the elimination of grade crossings by separation of grades. Indeed, this would prevent any further railroad crossing accidents, but it is estimated that such elimination would cost $25,000,000,000 and would take at least 300 years. Most people are familiar with the much-talked-of and sometimes-tried schemes of warning at railroad crossings. Motorists all know the railroad cross-buck grade crossing signs at the side of the highway; in some sections of the country the motorists are familiar with the bumps in the road opposite to the grade crossing, they are familiar with the bell systems and the light systems of warning. These devices are effective in that they give warning, but beyond this they are useless.

Drivers to Blame. It is not the crossing wherein the accident hazard lies. It is not the locomotive which bears down on an automobile that is the cause of an accident. It is not the automobile itself. All of these devices are almost mechanically perfect and are not dangerous in themselves, but in their operation. Simmered down to a fine point we shall all have to admit that it is those of us who drive automobiles who are chiefly responsible for grade-crossing accidents.

Strange as it may seem, 70 per cent of all the grade-crossing accidents, wherein motorists are killed, occur in broad daylight. Sixty-three per cent occur at grade crossings where the view is entirely open and unobstructed. Fourteen per cent of grade-crossing accidents are due to the driver of an automobile colliding with the side of a moving train. Twenty-five per cent of all automobile drivers fall to use reasonable care in approaching and passing over the railroad grade crossing. Yet, it is estimated that only about 5 per cent are extremely reckless, using no care whatsoever. On the assumption that we have 17,700,000 automobiles in this country this year, it means that there are 875,000 reckless drivers, each one of whom is a potential train wrecker.

Laws Inefficient. Laws compelling the motorist to stop at grade crossings would be ineffective because we Americans do not react to law and discipline of the person as do other people whose life history has been less rugged. The whole matter of preventing public accidents—and grade-crossing accidents are only a part of the great number of avoidable mishaps which occur every year in this country—can be laid to the public conscience. Without a crystallization of that inner feeling against the public accident, the safety movement will fail.

Undoubtedly a great step toward the solution of this problem will have been taken when the various states require the mental and physical examination of every automobile driver in the country, and do not let him or her drive an automobile upon the streets and highways without essential qualifications.

"Old Faithful" Geyser Alters Eruption Period

Yellowstone National Park.—Even Old Faithful, supposed to be the most constant, and certainly the most celebrated geyser in the world, is undergoing changes.

This year, Old Faithful is erupting every 67 minutes and his outbursts last for about five minutes. In the memory of living scientists, this geyser became active every 60 minutes, and there is much speculation as to changes beneath the earth's surface which are slowing down this old wonder.

Many geysers in the basin of the Fire Hole river, the greatest geyser area in the world, have ceased shooting entirely within the last 50 years, while others which were formerly inactive are again shooting.

Old Faithful still sends steam and water into the air to a height of 150 to 200 feet and is surrounded day and night by throngs of tourists awaiting his outbursts.

Sweden Develops Radio at Expense of Cable

Gothenburg, Sweden.—Wireless transmission of messages has so developed in Sweden that the government's station at Grimeton now sends about 95 per cent of all telegrams from Sweden to the United States. The receiving station, on the other hand, gets only about 40 per cent of the telegrams coming from the United States.

In order to meet the new competition the cable companies have reduced their prewar rates.

The Grimeton wireless station was built for direct communication with the United States.

Use of Power on Farms, Big Item

Agricultural Worker Able to Till Three Times as Many Acres.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of the increased use of power and labor-saving machinery in farming operations and the opening of new lands well suited to the use of machinery the average agricultural worker in the United States is now able to care for almost three times as many acres of crops as an individual could handle 75 years ago, according to a study recently made by the division of agricultural engineering of the United States Department of Agriculture. At the same time the hours of labor on the farm have been reduced and farmers have been relieved of much of the monotony and drudgery which formerly characterized their work.

Power and labor together account for approximately 60 per cent of the total cost of farming and a better knowledge of the power requirements of farm operations and the adoption of more efficient types of power units will do much to cut down production costs.

Second Only to Railroads. The primary horse power available for use on farms is greater than that used in mining and manufacturing, and is second only to that required for railroads. The total power used annually on farms amounts to nearly 16,000,000,000 horse-power-hours and the annual cost amounts to a total of nearly $3,000,000,000.

Up to the present little scientific study has been made of the basic power requirements of various farm operations. Although the plow is one of the oldest agricultural tools for which power is required, the fundamental requirements of plow design are still unknown and no satisfactory method of measuring the actual work done by a plow has yet been discovered. The University of Wisconsin has conducted experiments which show that it is possible to run an ensilage cutter with one-half the power ordinarily used by this machine simply by employing proper speeds and an improved blower.

Farm power is derived from animals, gas engines, (including tractors, trucks and automobiles) steam engines and electric, wind and water motors. Up to about sixty years ago little power other than that furnished by animals was available to farmers. The small gas tractor, the truck, the automobile and electric power have only become important as sources of farm power within the last ten or twelve years.

The estimated total numbers of power units now on farms in the United States is as follows:

Horses	15,916,000
Mules	4,654,000
Oxen	200,000
Tractors	450,000
Trucks	350,000
Stationary engines	2,500,000
Electric installations	500,000
Windmills	1,000,000
Automobiles	4,500,000

Great opportunities exist for the cutting down of the cost of farm operations through the reduction in the labor requirements of each operation and by a better application of the power used. Before such savings can be effected, however, it is necessary to make a thorough study of the basic power requirements, and of the factors which affect these requirements. Among these are: Climate, character of the soil, depth of plowing, cultivating, etc.; condition of the crop, size of fields, size and type of power units needed and mechanical efficiency of the tools or machines employed by the farmer.

Topography a Factor. Topography is a factor to be reckoned with in considering the power requirements of farms in any particular locality. In the Central West the land generally is smooth and is not cut by many streams or ravines. This condition encourages the laying out of large fields and makes possible the use of large machines and power units. In Eastern and Southern states, however, the land is frequently hilly and cut by ravines and streams making small and irregular-shaped fields necessary. This, of course, discourages the use of large machines and results in a predominance of small farms.

Probably the most serious drawback to the efficient use of power in agriculture is the extreme seasonal demand. In each type of farming followed there is usually some single operation which requires a large amount of power for a limited time and it is usually this operation which determines the minimum amount of primary power that must be available. In the corn or cotton belt the operation requiring the maximum power is that of planting or cultivating—in hay or small grain it is harvesting. Such conditions result in what is termed a low-power load factor and a high cost per unit of power utilized. The peak load could frequently be reduced by reducing the acreage of the crop which requires this power, but as a rule the farmer is justified in retaining such a high acreage of the crop in question because of the relatively high net returns which may more than offset the higher cost of power used in this operation.

Other factors which have an important effect on the efficiency of farm power are the diversity of operations and the small power unit commonly employed under the control of one worker.

DEATH OF CHILDREN LAID TO VAMPIRISM

Mysterious Tragedy Stirs City of Buenos Aires.

Buenos Aires.—Public interest here is almost exclusively centered at present on the extraordinary circumstances surrounding the deaths of seven adopted children in the house of a millionaire, Osvaldo Testoni. The chief of police has abandoned the charitable theory that Mrs. Testoni's inhuman treatment of the defenseless children was due to a strange obsession of a mentally deranged woman and is now working on the theory that an unprecedented lust for cruelty impelled her to torture the children to death by slow starvation in order to gloat over their prolonged suffering.

An investigation has revealed the fact that earlier victims were accorded only the plainest of funerals, in strange contrast with the excessive luxury with which they were surrounded for their long martyrdom.

The unaccountable indifference displayed by eminent medical men who attended the children, and also by the woman's husband, Osvaldo Testoni, and by the numerous retinue of servants who saw the terrible drama unrolled before their eyes is the most intriguing aspect of the whole affair.

Village "Devil" Holds Siberians in Terror

Minsk.—An amazing trial illustrating the ignorance and superstition of the Russian peasantry recently was held in this district.

In order to increase the income of the village priest and to strengthen his authority over the local peasantry, a group of parishioners resolved to frighten the peasantry with the pretense of a "real" devil in the village.

A village boy was dressed up to resemble a devil. During the night he went to the village dwellers to frighten them. He was instructed to carry out secretly slight damages to peasants' property.

This went on for several months, and the ignorant peasants took it all in earnest, as a penalty for their sins. They flocked to the church, induced the priest to hold special services and organized common prayers and religious processions.

A special commission had to be sent from the district town to investigate the peasants' troubles, which were brought to an end only by the arrest of the "devil."

The priest and the local authorities were placed on trial and sentenced to many years' imprisonment.

Maoris Trace Forebears to Hawaiian Islands

Honolulu.—Many of the Maoris of New Zealand consider their race had its origin in Hawaii centuries ago, it has been revealed by Ratina Jakoba, a prominent Maori. He is here with a group of Mormon church-workers from Australia to visit the famous Mormon temple at Laie, Oahu.

Jakoba said he had traced his ancestry back to a chieftain named Hema, who ruled the island of Hawaii. After a devastating war in which Hema was defeated badly and forced to flee from the island for his life, he and a few companions set sail for the south in huge war canoes. Maori legends have it that they landed in New Zealand.

Jakoba said the Maoris had established the names of the canoes in which their ancestors went from Hawaii to New Zealand.

Discouragement to Thrift

The neighbor of a man noted for his extreme thrift saw him going down the road on a week day dressed in his Sunday clothes.

"What's up, Jim?" he called out. "Why the glad rags?"

"Haven't you heard the news?" "News! What news?"

"Oh, so that accounts for—" began the neighbor, when the frugal one interrupted him:

"Yes, that accounts for my wearing these clothes. What in thunder's the use of trying to be economical!" —Boston Transcript.

Fierce Storm Thought to Mean World's End

The most terrific storm in the history of the British Isles raged during the month of November, 1703. This terrible hurricane was so devastating that it was generally believed that the end of the world had come. De-foe, best known as the author of Robinson Crusoe, who experienced its worst errors, wrote: "Horror and confusion seized upon all; no pen can describe it, no tongue can express it, no thought can conceive it." The voice of the wind was like thunder. To venture abroad was to court instant death; to stay within doors was to risk the fall of the house. The loss of life on land and sea and in the floods of the Severn and Thames, seems to have been beyond computation. In London the damage to property was estimated at $10,000,000. The first Edystone lighthouse, a ridiculous sort of pagoda, of four years' standing, was swept away, and with it the architect, Winstanley. The hurricane ended in a dead calm at the exact hour when it had started raging a week before.

HUSBANDS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I THINK no woman really knows The things her husband undergoes— The constant struggle day and night, The good and bad, the wrong and right, The endless battle he must fight,

While hers the lot of husbands' wives, He leads a multitude of lives— The club, the office, and the street, The journey, victory, defeat— Temptation ev'rywhere to meet.

One tempts with pleasure, one with gold; Each day around him souls are sold. Are sold for riches, sold for ease, Are sold some bachelors to please— He meets all day such things as these.

While you, the sheltered and the warm, Know hidden sting, or thorny rose, Or shining stream that darkly flows, That meet him ev'rywhere he goes.

Oh, keep the cottage windows bright! That man may find his way tonight! Such golden love your heart should hold That none may lure with love or gold In that mad world where souls are sold.

The loose of tongue and low of mind, The business sharper he will find, The painted woman, gambler, cheat, Who set their traps in ev'ry street, Your love and kindness can defeat.

Home's not a table; home is more; A lighthouse on a stormy shore, An altar and an inner shrine That God has blessed and made divine, And you its priestess, love its sign.

Keep then the lamp of love ablaze To guide him up from darker ways, Till ev'ry strength he has passed— Your temper so strong, your love so vast, You lead him home to God at last. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Among the NOTABLES

EUGENE DE BEAUHARNIAS

EUGENE DE BEAUHARNIAS was the stepson of the great Napoleon—a fact alone that would make him world famous. He was born in Paris September 3, 1781, (he was a child during the French Revolution) and when a very young man, entered upon a military career. He met Napoleon, one day, by going to him with a request for a favor, and made such an impression on the great man—who was not the world conqueror then—that a friendship grew up between them. Napoleon met the boy's mother, Josephine de Beauharnias, and married her.

Leaving, shortly after, for an expedition in Egypt, he took Eugene with him. As Napoleon conquered, so did the boy rise in rank; he was only about twenty-four when Napoleon made him viceroy of Italy. In Italy, de Beauharnias' talent for military affairs showed itself; he built up the army. There was war between Austria and Italy then, and the battles were fought along the Plave. Eugene and de Beauharnias stayed in Italy defending it against Austria.

When Napoleon was deposed, his stepson retired with his wife, a Bavarian princess. The king of Bavaria gave him a duchy, and he lived in Munich until his death, in 1824.

One of his sons married Donna Maria, queen of Portugal, some eleven years after his father's death. (© by George Matthew Adams)

In the JUNGLE

With Cheerups and the Quixies
by Grace Bliss Stewart

JUMPING INTO THE JUNGLE

THROUGH the air flew Cheerups and Brighteyes and Quikgear and Softfoot and Sniffsiff, so fast that you could hardly see them.

"This must be Africa," cried Cheerups, as he stretched his legs and arms and looked about him. "Jumped right into the Jungle, I should say. Great, isn't it?" And he beamed upon the bewildered little Quixies with his broadest smile. "But what is that strange crying sound, like some one feeling very sad? Do you hear it, Quikgear? Hurry, Softfoot, and find out where it comes from! And you,

"I Am Most Dreadfully Upset."

Brighteyes, go too and look about! Dear me, dear me! Perhaps we are going to be useful right away."

Then all at once out of the Thick Bushes and Twisty Vines came the funniest sight Cheerups had ever set eyes on. Walking toward him were Brighteyes and Quikgear and between them trudged a great shaggy animal.

But was this strange looking creature really an animal? It walked on two legs, held itself nearly erect and looked so astonishingly like a man that Cheerups was very much puzzled.

"Please, sir," said Quikgear, "we found this—this gentleman feeling very sad, and we brought him to you because we thought you could help him."

"Churly Gorilla is my name," barked the big clumsy creature, hanging his head gloomily. "I am the largest and strongest of the monkey family. I am almost six feet tall, as you see, and very fierce besides. I assure you there is scarcely anything in the Jungle of which I am afraid, except—except rain, sir."

"Why, what a funny thing to be afraid of, Churly Gorilla," cried Cheerups. "The raindrops are so gentle that they couldn't do any one harm. In this hot climate they ought to be very refreshing."

"But," grumbled Churly, "you don't understand how it is, Mr.—"

"Cheerups; at your service, sir. Cheerups is my name and these are my four good friends and traveling companions—Brighteyes, Quikgear, Softfoot and Sniffsiff. They are broadening their acquaintance, too," replied Cheerups. "Now that we are so nicely introduced, what were you saying, Mr. Gorilla?"

"I was saying that you really don't know anything about my troubles, sir. Excuse me for contradicting you. My temper is never very good, but today I am most dreadfully upset. You see, when it rains in the Jungle it rains very hard, and though it is only a shower which doesn't last long, the water comes down like a solid sheet. Then my thick coat gets wet way through to the skin, and I am very uncomfortable. Please, Mr. Cheerups, could you tell me some way to keep dry?"

"Well, well, well," mused Cheerups, "that's different. Now let me see. I have it!" cried Cheerups the next minute, and he looked so happy and his round merry eyes twinkled so kindly that Churly Gorilla grew more hopeful. "Now, Brighteyes, just look at the hair on Mr. Gorilla's arms and tell me if there is anything unusual about the way it grows."

"Why, in the first place, sir, it is very thick and long, and in the second place it grows downward from the shoulder to the wrist and upward from the wrist to the elbow," said Quixie Brighteyes.

"Good," cried Cheerups, nodding his topknot madly. "Your troubles are over, Mr. Gorilla. The next time it rains, just cover your head and shoulders with your arms, and the water will roll off them as it would from a thatched roof, all on account of the way the hair grows. Then you will find yourself quite dry."

"Goody, goody, goody," cried Churly Gorilla, dancing up and down and barking so loud that Brighteyes and Quikgear and Softfoot and Sniffsiff were frightened out of their wits and went hurrying and scurrying into the tall Jungle grasses to get out of the way.

"Dear kind Mr. Cheerups, you have taken such a load from my mind! Now I know I shall never be wet again," chattered Churly. "I am going right off to tell the other Jungle folks about you," and away he trotted into the dusk, chuckling softly to himself and feeling very happy over his good fortune.

The thick, velvety curtain of darkness fell suddenly, as it does in the Tropics, and Cheerups' first day in the Jungle was over.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

HATTIE

THOUGH somewhat provincial, Hattie is none the less popular as a feminine name. It is a nice, comfortable, cozy sort of a name without frills or ornamentation. It means "home-ruler"; though it comes originally from Teutonic mythology, it has elements of the modern attitude toward home. Even in their heathenism, the guardian of the dwelling of the grave spirits of the dead, known as Heimdell, was regarded as the "home-ruler"—"true to the kindred points of heaven and home."

By various stages, through the German Heinz, the French Henri and the English Henry and Harry, the feminine of this interesting name was evolved in the sixteenth century. It made its first appearance in France in the house of Stuart de Aubigne. Various feminines of Henri were popular in the court of Katherine de Medici.

In the form of Henrietta, the name made its appearance in England with the daughter of Henri IV of France and it was descendants of this good queen who carried the name through successive steps until it reached the quaint diminutive Hattie.

Yet is Hattie's talismanic stone. For her it is not a symbol of sorrow but a talisman against grief. Friday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

RATS

THE popular saying "Rats desert a sinking ship," imperfectly describes the superstition to which it is supposed to give expression. The belief of sailors—and of many who are not sailors—is that when a ship is in port and the rats suddenly swarm ashore, forsaking her, that ship, in all probability, will go down on her next voyage. Many a ship has been held for long weeks in port wanting a crew, the old crew having refused to reshuffle because the rats had been seen leaving the vessel as she lay at her dock.

A common explanation of the superstition is that it has a foundation in a physical fact. A ship in bad repair—unseaworthy—is damp down below and the rats desert to dryer quarters ashore. And a leaky ship is, of course, most likely to go down if she encounters heavy weather.

But sailors scout this explanation and will tell you that well-found ships are as likely to go down as any others if the rats desert them—which is not so, of course. The common explanation of the superstition, unromantic and unclassical as it is, is undoubtedly the true one. But that innate proclivity for superstition which pertains to all mankind in general and sailors in particular, prefers to see a mysterious omen in the desertion of a ship by her rat inhabitants rather than a plain, prosaic intimation that the "old hooker" needs calking.

Trapped by Drawing

Rene Berger, a French painter, was attacked a few nights ago while returning to his house in Montmartre, Paris, by two robbers who knocked him down and stole his valuables. He was taken to the hospital, where, after a few days, he died. Although he regained consciousness, Berger had lost his power of speech and could not give a verbal description of his assailants. But he remembered their faces and on his death bed made a more or less accurate drawing of them. With the help of that drawing the police have found and arrested Berger's murderers.

Little Need for Muscle

Two thousand years from now man may have hoofs, says Prof. Conrad Tharaldsen of the zoology department of Northwestern university. He will probably have a huge dome of a head, a spindling body, dumpy legs and feet something like those of a horse. As a result of inaction and little need of muscular strength man's arms and legs are already beginning to dwindle in size, says the professor. Mechanical inventions are rapidly doing away with the need for muscle, he says, and lack of use is causing the muscular portions of the body to degenerate. But man's ever-growing brain will need more room. As a consequence his skull will get bigger and bigger until it resembles a dome.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Suspicious Resignation

Governor Silzer said at a dinner in Trenton:

"When a man is resigned to a corrupt government, mistrust him. He is likely to be profiting from the corruption."

"Hoskins, clad in deepest black, said resignedly as he drained a large vanilla soda:

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

"Hoskins," whispered a bystander, "has evidently suffered a bereavement."

"Yes," said another bystander. "He buried his mother-in-law this morning."

Remarkable Memories

Germans believe that a member of the staff of the Prussian State library has the finest memory in the world. He has specialized in weather reports and from memory he can describe the weather of any day from 1881 up to the present time. His wonderful memory recently was tested by the Berlin Meteorological society and he came through with flying colors. Colonel Charratie of England once memorized the entire issue of a newspaper on a wager; a stoker memorized Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates," and Lord Randolph Churchill, also of England, was able to repeat a page of print after a single reading.

Old Custom Revived

Great Britain's return to the gold standard has revived an ancient custom at the Bank of England. At four o'clock each afternoon one of the old employees emerges from his sanctum, walks with dignity to the courtyard and there posts upon a bulletin board a list of the bank's sales and purchases of bar gold during the day. At the same hour messengers from the principal private banks, clad in their shiniest silk "toppers," arrive in the courtyard and, after copying the figures on the board, depart in all haste. It is one of the happiest signals of a return to gold currency after a lapse of ten years.

Frankness Rewarded

The debate between Bishop Wellton and the Durham signalman as to the "selfishness" of the railwaymen's demand for higher wages ended in the proper English fashion, "with loud applause for the two protagonists." It is pleasant to find that so much fair play is possible in the heated atmosphere of 1925. It was in 1865 that John Stuart Mill, standing for Westminster, was asked by a heckler whether it was true that he had said the working classes were generally liars. "I did," he replied, exciting, says a biographer, "vehement applause," and he was triumphantly returned.—London Observer.

Temperatures on Mars

During the past year investigations to determine, as nearly as possible, the temperatures on the planet Mars were conducted both at the Mount Wilson observatory in California and at the observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz. The observers at Mount Wilson calculated the afternoon temperatures along the equator of Mars to be approximately 10 degrees above freezing, while those at Flagstaff estimate the temperature at 20 above freezing. These calculations would indicate that Mars would be more temperate as a summer than a winter resort. In the Martian polar regions the temperature must be extremely low.

Never "Out" Is Man

Who Keeps His Head

Take it from ye pastor: Some great things may have been accomplished by excitement or desperation, or wild impulse, but you needn't be particularly wise or observing to know that most is accomplished by the man who retains his mental poise; "keeps his head." I once saw a weak swimmer become exhausted while beyond his depths, and saw a strong swimmer go readily to his rescue. The drowning man forgot what he knew, that it is easy to carry another in water, if the one carried submits willingly and intelligently. Therefore a struggle followed when the two met, in which a double tragedy was averted only by the fact that the strong swimmer kept his head, fought better and knocked out his opponent, after which he carried him to shore. Had both been cool, it would have been easy and had both become excited, it would have been impossible. And the rule applies as well to the other than physical trouble. The fate which seems to have you down and out can be thwarted if you "keep your head." If you do the best you know, instead of merely wasting time in useless worry and anger. And this trait or habit will stand cultivation which will bring it within the range of possibilities even for impulsive, nervous or weak-kneed persons.—Arkansas Thomas Cat.

Here's a Real Record

Now, don't crowd. The Cape Girardeau Southeast Missourian says:

Having established records, as yet unbroken, for the most ancient collar button and the most aged and honorable key ring, the contest now leaps, with added zest into a different field. This is the field of the razor strop and the first to enter it immediately sets a record that would seem close to unbeatable. According to a reliable communique, S. S. Smith of 1438 Bessie street possesses a razor strop that has been in active service since James A. Polk was President of the United States. This remarkable razor strop was acquired by Mr. Smith, who speaks of himself as "only a boy of ninety-two," in the year 1845, and he still uses it weekly, he says, thereby setting a non-stop record of 76 years.

Jade Find in Africa

An important discovery of jade has been reported from a farm near the town of Britts in the Transvaal, South Africa. The stone was found in the various shades of blue, white, pink and green, and in quantities large enough to warrant commercial exploitation. The discovery was made during prospecting operations for chrome iron.

A company has been formed with headquarters in Johannesburg, and has obtained permission from the government to bring in Chinese jade experts as cutters and polishers so that the jade may be marketed as beads and art ornaments.

Birds Follow Icebergs

Each season when the icebergs break away from Greenland and start to the south in the Atlantic they are followed by ever increasing flocks of sea birds, says the Ohio State Journal. Officers of the coast-guard cutters, on duty near the icebergs to warn shipping, report the bird life with the bergs is much greater this year than in the past. Fulmars, shearwaters, murre, kittiwakes and doves are there in large numbers, apparently to get the food supply that is provided when the waves dash against the bergs and disperse the little people of the water, or the melting of the ice releases food imprisoned in the Far North ages ago.

To Make Study of Dams

To determine the weakest parts of dams and just why they sometimes fail, the Engineering foundation, the joint research organization of the American societies of civil, mining, metallurgical, mechanical and electrical engineers, proposes to construct a dam at an expenditure of $100,000 and then cause it to burst. The experiment is to be made near Fresno, Cal. The main object to be achieved is the knowledge of how to build dams of maximum safety, yet with minimum thickness of construction and consequent economy of material.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

GOLDEN TEXT—Acts 16:6-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—“Come over into Macedonia, and help us.”—Acts 16:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul’s Wonderful Vision.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Called to Europe.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Macedonian Call and What It Led To.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Hand of God in Missions.

I. Forbidden by the Holy Spirit to Preach the Word in Asia (vv. 6-8).

The inclination of Paul and his companions was to tarry in the provinces of Asia Minor preaching the Word, but contrary to their inclination they were hurried along. There were many people in Asia who yet needed the Gospel. They might have reasoned, what difference would it make where we preach so the Gospel is preached? We have here a fine lesson on Divine guidance. The Holy Spirit is as active and faithful in closing doors as in opening them. “The steps as well as the steps of good men are ordered of the Lord.” We ought as truly to recognize God’s hand in the “shut-ins” as in the “open-outs.”

II. The Call to Macedonia (vv. 9-12).

The Gospel having broken the confines of the Jewish city and country, the middle wall of partition having been abolished, the time has come for it to leap across the Aegean sea and begin its conquest on another continent. Christianity thus ceased to be an oriental religion, and through the centuries has been mainly occidental.

1. The Vision (v. 9).

Being hemmed in on all sides, a vision was given to Paul of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made plain to him the closed doors about him. In finding the Divine will we should look both ways. Before there can be any great forward movement, there must be a vision. There is no victory without a vision.

2. The Advance (vv. 10-12).

As soon as the Divine way was known, they moved forward therein. Visions must be quickly translated, and aggressive action taken or else they are blotted from our skies. Paul never questioned the wisdom of God nor delayed action. This is characteristic of all God’s true servants. With a straight course, Paul moved out of his own country to the strategic center of a new continent.

III. The First Convert in Europe (vv. 13-15).

The missionaries first went to Philippi and spent several days in studying conditions there. The Jewish element in this city was comparatively insignificant. So much so that they could not have a synagogue. Therefore, the devout people were accustomed to worship by the river side. To this humble gathering Paul came and preached to the women assembled there. A certain woman from Thyatira named Lydia, a proselyte, believed his message and was baptized. The steps in Lydia’s conversion are worthy of note, for they are typical:

1. Attendance at the Place of Worship (v. 13).

Usually those whom God is calling are found at the place of prayer. Lydia was a woman of wealth, culture and wide experience, and yet she had need of Christ. She was seeking the heavenly light. God sends many an inquirer to the prayer meeting.

2. Listening to the Preaching of the Word of God (vv. 13-14).

The instrument used in the conversion of sinners is the Word of God. “Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God” (Rom. 10:17). It is highly important that at every prayer meeting the Word of God shall be spoken so that the inquirer after God may find the light.

3. Her Heart Was Opened by the Lord (v. 14).

Only the Lord can convert a soul. It is His business to preach the Word of God, and it is God’s business to open the heart of the inquirer. Regeneration is a supernatural work. When the Gospel is preached the Spirit of God opens the sinner’s heart for the reception of Christ.

4. She Was Baptized (v. 15).

Every one whose heart the Lord has opened desires to confess Him in baptism. Baptism is an outward sign of inward grace.

5. Her Household Believed (v. 15).

Real conversion cannot be concealed. When one is converted those in the house will find it out.

6. Practical Hospitality (v. 15).

Those who have experienced God’s saving grace are thus disposed to have part in His work by rendering aid to His ministers.

True Humility

True humility consists not in thinking little of oneself, but in not thinking of oneself at all.—Capt. J. Arthur Hadfield.

Selfishness

Nothing parches the soul like selfishness; the heart that feeds upon itself grows old fast.—W. L. Watkins.

Perils of Envy, Anger and Hatred
Matthew 5:21, 22; 1 John 3:11-15

In the first passage there is without doubt a certain progress referred to as far as the punishment in connection with hatred or murder is in mind. The superficial view of murder is that a man has to imbrue his hands in the blood of his fellowman. In the law of the ancients that was doubtless primarily in mind, but our Lord is laying down the Sermon on the Mount, lifted up the conception of wrong doing, so that the former sordid idea should not be in control. To take a man’s life was of course murder and that life was in danger of judgment as administered by the inferior courts in the day in which our Lord was speaking. Added emphasis is given by the Lord in the words, “But I say unto you.” The emphasis is on both the “I” and the “you.” “I am giving the law, and I am giving it to you, who are to sustain a relationship to me that the world cannot sustain.” In the words “Whoever is angry without a cause” there is some dispute as to the appearance of the Greek word that is translated “without a cause,” but the preponderance of testimony seems to sustain it.

In 1 Corinthians 13:5 we have the words “Is not easily provoked” in our English translation, but there is no justification for the use of the adverb “easily.”

The degrees of anger in the Matthew passage seem to be indicated by certain words, “raca” being one of them. This means “brainless fellow.” In the days of our Lord those words had a meaning that do not belong to them in our day, but there was a further indication of anger in the use of the word “fool,” a most opprobrious term.

Degrees of anger seem to have had definite degrees of punishment. The first was simply judgment in the inferior courts, the second was before a more august court, such as the Sanhedrin as known to the Jew, and the third was the judgment of hell fire, which was suggested by the proximity of Gehenna. Our Lord’s figures here were clearly understood by the Jews, but are so clear in our English that there is no excuse if the penalties are visited on us.

The law of love in the kingdom of grace should be supremely dominant. It is worse than folly to try to justify anger by magnifying the provoking cause. However “righteous indignation” may be sometimes justified, yet so perilous is the development of anger that it should be suppressed on its first appearance. “Be ye angry and sin not” is splendid advice.

Evolution of Horse Proved by Skeleton?

Scientists of a recent geological expedition sent to Texas by the American Museum of Natural History (New York) have discovered in rocks more than 1,000,000 years old the fossil skeleton of a horse in one of its ancestral stages of evolution.

In the evolution of the horse the newly found specimen represents an intermediate stage between the type called Pliohippus and the early Ice-age horse called Equus. It is smaller than the modern horse.

While the fossil horse discovered is almost the earliest one-toed horse, long before the day of Pliohippus there had existed quite a number of more primitive or less evolved forms of the horse.

For example, if we go back to the Eocene epoch, when the ancestor of the horse was no larger than a cat, we discover that he had four toes on his fore feet and three on his hind feet. The subsequent evolution of the horse is most clearly marked by the gradual loss of all of these toes, except the single toe on which our modern horses walk.

American Colony

American Samoa, comprising the islands of Tutuila, Aunu'u and others, has an area of 57.9 square miles; population of 8,324, including 266 Americans. The capital is Pago Pago on the island of Tutuila. This town is the most valuable harbor in the South Pacific. It was ceded in 1872 by the native king to the United States as a naval and coaling station. American Samoa is 4,100 miles from San Francisco. The natives are Christians and are regarded as the highest type of the Polynesian race. All of the land of the islands is privately owned. The chief product is coconuts. Fruits are also grown, but not exported.

Fable Worth Remembering

A crow, half-dead with thirst, came upon a pitcher which had once been full of water; but when the crow put its beak into the mouth of the pitcher he found that only very little water was left in it, and that he could not reach far enough down to get at it. He tried, and he tried, but at last had to give up in despair. Then a thought came to him, and he started dropping pebbles, one by one, into the pitcher. At last, he saw the water mount up near him; and after casting in a few more pebbles he was able to quench his thirst and save his life. Little by little gets results.—Aesop’s Fables.

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL.

The "Regular" Customer.

The regular customer, is entitled to, and usually gets, "the best there is" in the way of prices, treatment and service, by all wise business men. We know that there is a tendency toward gathering in the away-from-homes, and making a "hit" with them but it is always with the hope of making "regulars" out of them. The merchant, or business man of any sort, who does not take the very best possible care of his "regulars" is a very short-sighted man who has not learned the first principle of good business.

Regular customers, are not only the foundation of any business, but actual friends—needed in business as well as in private life. The drop-in-occasionally customer gets good attention, of course, in any well regulated business place, but has not earned that friendship and that extent of service that goes to the "regular"; so it is altogether a mistaken idea held by some, that when one is a "regular" he or she is taken advantage of through the presumption that the business concern feels that no special attention, or inducements, need be extended to them because they are already habitual customers, and will stick, without any particular attention.

The regular customer at a store is as highly regarded as the regular attendant at a church, and largely for the same reasons—they are the standbys that all are seeking, consequently are regarded as valuable personages, and their best interests, their opinions and friendship, are not only heartily welcomed, but carefully considered.

It pays to be regular—pays both sides at interest. There is something at stake for both, and after all, it is the "stakes" in life that all are seeking for, in one way or another, and in order to win them, we and they must be dependable—worth having, which means something worth getting—a case of partnership all around.
