MORE CATTLE TESTED IN COUNTY.

in Westminster District Completed, and Franklin Next.

> All the farmers in the Westminster district have finally had the opportunity of having their cattle tuberculin tested, according to Dr. C. A. Turner, Federal Inspector conducting the work in Carroll County. When the county-wide area was conducted last Fall, part of Westminster district and all of Franklin district was not covered when the work was suspended. The State authorities recently authorized the completion of this work before the county-wide retest is made this Fall.

In the past six weeks, 130 lots were tested in the Westminster district, numbering 1045 head. Infected animals were found on 56 premises or less than one-half the total farms tested. From these 177 animals were condemned and removed, showing about 17% infection. This number included seventeen re-tests with 266 animals showing a 5% infection. As the post-mortum results show that most of the animals removed from the district this Fall were very badly diseased, this decrease of infection is very encouraging to both farmers and authorities alike. Of the 113 farms tested for the first time, 164 cattle out of the 780 were found to be diseased, or approximately one-fifth of the entire number. Contrary to the popular be-lief, most of these reactors were found in the small herds.

The success of this attempt to wipe out this scourge of cattle in the county in this district, and the whole county, is severely menaced by the refusal of a few farmers to subject their animals to test. If this only affected their own herds the matter would not be so serious; but it is a menance to their neighbors who have tested, and to the reputation that Carroll County now has the opportunity of building up in the United States for having a product of the county of building up in the United states for having up in the United states for having up in the county of the cou States for having an accredited area. Their action seems short sighted in view of the fact that Baltimore City contemplates within two years that all cream and butter sold in that city be from tested herds. When this time comes, these men who now refuse to test, will have to bear the ex-pense of testing; or be excluded from

In view of the high prices and the scarcity of good cattle in the western dairy states, the time is very close at hand when replacement stock must be raised here in the county. With be raised here in the county. With clean herds to start with, the dairymen are justified in taking steps to raise their own high grade animals by using pure-bred bulls of high producing stock and more liberal feeding of the young stock.—U. Saved Two From Drowning.

Nathaniel Miller, of New Oxford, Pa., sayed Dorcus Billman, aged 8, and Arthur Weaver, from drowning Conewago, on Monday. The girl was trying to swim with an inflated tire tube, but it got out of fix, and as she was going down in seven feet of water, Arthur Weaver, also of New Oxford tried to rescue her but found himself unable to do so and called for Miller who was working nearby, heard the cries and rushed to the stream where he found the pair struggling in the water, near a wire stretched across the creek. He was unable to swim but went out on the wire hand over hand in time to catch the girl who was going down. He slung her over his shoulder and took her to shore, then returned for Weaver who was almost exhausted.

The dispatch states that a report filed in the federal district court by a special master to examine the receiver's account in the failure of the R. L. Dallings companies, investment brokers, showed that the stockholders of the huge amount represented in the investments will receive about 13 cents on the dollar. The report stated the stockholders would probably receive an additional two percent later making their total dividends 15 percent.

MANCHESTER BOY KILLED Fatal Accident at R. R. Crossing near Hampstead.

Vernon Myers, five years old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Myers, of Manchester, was killed when a light truck occupied by the mother of the child, several other children, and the driver, Mrs. Jere Henry, ran into a W. M. freight train at a crossing near Hampstead, Wednesday night.

Mrs. Henry was severly cut and was rushed to a Baltimore Hospital, while Mrs. Myers and her other children were not seriously hurt. Vernon was standing up in the truck, and when the crash came was thrown out and instantly killed.

K. K. K. Presents Flag.

The Ku Klux Klan of Taneytown presented a flag to the Carroll County Fair Association, last Saturday evening, at the Fair Ground entrance gates, where a good sized crowd had assembled to witness the event. Following speeches of presentation and acceptance, the Klansman marched to town, then back again for further ceremonies at the Fair Ground.

The parade consisted of about 225 members, male and female, most of them visitors. It was a very quiet and orderly demonstration and a great and orderly demonstration and a great crowd witnessed it, the streets being lined with automobiles. Some of the paraders were masked while most of them were not. The Detour Band furnished the music.

THE 4-H CLUBS BIG HELP IN THE COUNTRY

Lead to Better Farming and to Better Citizenship.

Those of us who can look back on boyhood on a farm and that is a good many of us, recall most vividly the lack of companionship. At the time, perhaps, it was the round of chores that we liked the least. For there was fun, and chores frequently inter-fered with our plans. In summer there were a thousand and one things As the truck approached the crossing Mrs. Henry failed to see the train, which was in motion and crashed into the eighth car. The truck was almost completely demolished and all of the occupants were thrown yielently to the readside. faces on cold mornings; and we boast, as becomes men whose pocketbooks

The farm youngster of today need not be lonely. The motor car has erased the lines between town and country. Yet just as important as the means of getting somewhere is the new spirit in the farmlands, the the new spirit in the farmlands, the community of interest that has grown up in recent years. For the boys and girls, this spirit finds expression in the "4-H clubs" that our departments of agriculture have fostered. With their calves and pigs and samples of sewing and canning, the boys and girls meet in friendly rivalry at county and state fairs. county and state fairs.

Interesting stories could be told about how a boy's enthusiasm aroused by these clubs has led the father to ways of better farming. But even better than the business training these clubs afford the farmers of tomorrow is their influence for good citizenship. The four H's stand for "head, heart, hand and health," meaning thereby the development of wholesome men and women with an interest in their country as well as in their means of livelihood.

Rain Damages Crops.

Crops in Maryland sustained injury during August, according to a state-ment given out by John S. Dennee, Federal crop statistician for Maryland. Rain fell in copious quantities over all the State between the 11th. and the 24th. varying at times from a drip to a deluge. In more or less degree maturing fruits, particularly peaches, were damaged; as also were cantaloupes, hay, grain in shock, tomatoes, and in some sections tobacco and early corn.

Farmers especially stress the damage to wheat and oats in shock, and to tomatoes by scalding on the pros-trated vines in the hot sunshine which followed close on the heels of the long wet spell.

Late corn and late potatoes benefitted. Pastures and grasses were revived and are looking good, says the statistician. But the heavy rains were very hard on tomatoes, prostrating the vines, and only a light yield is looked for. Plowing for Fall wheat is about half accomplished in some parts of the State.

Frederick Law and Order League.

United States District Attorney Amos W. W. Woodcock, will be the speaker at a meeting held under the auspices of the Frederick County Law and Order League, at Rocky Ridge, Sunday evening, September 5, according to information given out by Jesse P. King, of Ridgeville, president of the organization.

Arrangements for the meeting were completed by M. O. Lawyer, director of the league for Thurmont district. It will be the first rally held by the Law and Order League in that section The hard central core of a cabbage has a sweet, peppery flavor which is tion has been effected by the league especially good when chopped and in that section, however, and it is expected that a good-sized crowd will be in attendance at the meeting.

Other mass meetings have been held by the league in other sections of the county, including Johnsville, Woodsboro, Urbana, Braddock Heights and Frederick. Meetings will be held by the league at other places in the near future.

Vital Seed Corn.

A good way to dry ears of seed corn is to string them, suspending the strings of ears in an open shed or loft, the ears not being permitted to touch one another.

The vitality of seed corn often is reduced by leaving it in a sack or pile for even a day after gathering. With some moisture in the cobs and kernels, the ears begin to sour or mildew in a remarkably short time during warm weather. If left on the plant long after ripening, the kernels may sprout or mildew during warm wet weather or be injured by freez-

Seed ears should be picked, there fore, as soon as thoroughly ripe and placed where they will be safe. If they contain much moisture when picked they must be stored in such a way that there will be a free circulation of air around each ear.

Changes in Long Distance Calls.

Changes in long distance telephone rates for interstate service from Maryland points will become effective October 1, according to information just received by G. H. These changes involve a general readjustment in long distance rates and in the exercise and right period during which evening and night period during which to the teacher giving such order * Theosophy Again Heard From.

Theosophy is again being promoted in this country, and a National head-quarters building is being built in Wheaton, Ill., at a cost of $250,000. Theosophy teaches that all religious are fundamentally the same, whether we believe in Christ, Buddha, Confucius, or Mohammed. They say all lead to a spiritual mountain, but by different courses, and that the word does not matter so long as the objective is the same. A Hindu Theosophist is now preaching the doctrine throughout the central west, and the annual convention of the sect is being held in Chicago. Mrs. Annie Besant, international head of the Theosophists, is now in this coun-

Sweet Corn Crop Short.

According to reports from Frederick county, the corn pack this year in that county will be from 20 to 25 percent less than last year, due largely to decreased acreage, and to some extent to the backward growing season. The canners are also paying from $12.00 to $14.00 per ton, instead of $18.00 per ton last year, therefore the amount received by growers will be considerably less than last year, when it was approximately $375,000.

Due to the introduction of improved machinery, none of the factories are using as many employees as formerly, and this will further cut down the disbursement of money on account of the packing business. Frederick 6 department stores, 5 churches, county packs more corn than any other county in the state.

WHY VACCINATE?

Responsibility Rests on Parents and Teachers.

As the opening of the schools approaches, the attention of teachers and superintendents of schools and and superintendents of schools and also of parents and of guardians of young children, is directed by Dr. R. H. Riley, Chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health, to the State law which prohibits enrollment of any children in the public schools of any children in the public schools of the State, unless they have been suc-cessfully vaccinated against smallpox. "Maryland has been particularly fortunate," Dr. Riley said, "In having had very few cases of smallpox during the last two years, in spite of the fact that there has been a serious increase in the disease all over the country. But the disease has been kept under control in Maryland only by the clos-est vigilance and by strict enforcement of the school law. "Just why there has to be this rigid enforcement of the vaccination law can be better understood by comparing the situation in Maryland with ing the situation in Maryland with that in other parts of the country where they either do not require vaccination or where whatever laws they have in connection with vaccination are disregarded. In every place in which routine vaccination of young children and the periodic re-vaccination of grown ups has been neglected, there has been a marked increase in the disease and the outbreaks have been both virulent and fatal.

been both virulent and fatal. "The records show that there were over 37,000 cases of smallpox in the United States, last year, with over 700 deaths. And the only way we can keep the disease out of Maryland is by vaccination. The examinations that have been made during the summer of the children who will enter school this Fall have shown that not more than one-third of these prospective first graders have been vaccinated. The rest will have to be vaccinated before they can be enrolled in the public schools. The State law is explicit, throwing the ultimate responsibility on the teachers. Here are some extracts from the law:

"'No teacher in any of the public schools in this State shall receive into such school as a pupil any person who has not been successfully vaccinated * * If any person shall apply for admission as a pupil in any of the public schools of this State who has not been successfully vaccinated, the teacher shall give the parents or grardian of any other person having control of such pupil an order directed to any physician in the county or city as the case may be requiring any physician to whom it may be presented to vaccinate such pupil and return of such vaccination when successful Any teacher neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall on conviction thereof befor any justice of the peace having jurisdiction over said offense, be fined ten dollars for each and every of-

Mount Airy is providing a water system that is expected to be completed in a few weeks, that will likely supply sufficient water for fire purposes, but not for domestic use. Unclaimed Whiskey Destroyed.

Judge Morris A. Soper, in the United States District Court, Thursday, signed an order to destroy 287 cases of supposedly pre-war whiskey which has been in the Government warehouse for more than five years. Most of this liquor is said to be quart sizes and would have a retail value in excess of $35,000

Edmund Budnitz, Prohibition Administrator, in his petition to the court to have the whiskey destroyed, cited the recent robbery of the Government warehouse at 409 North Holliday Street, and the fear of another attempt to divert seized liquor to illegal beverage uses. Mr. Budnitz said that all record of the previous ownership of the liquor has been lost.

A Nasty Campaign.

The Democrats, so far have decidedly the edge on decency in the primary contest. With the exception of some very pointed remarks being made by Mr. Maloy against Gov. Ritchie's third-term and other aspirations, the Democratic parade of candidates is quite proper and gentlemanly-even Gov. Ritchie is not answering back; and Mr. Tydings, for Senator, has nothing to do but grin and keep sweet.

The Republican gladiators, it seems to us, are giving a fine exhibition of how not to win a Governorship, and how to actually lose a U. S. Senator and Member of the House. Largely, they are carrying out a rumpus that started some years back, and was of history that many states had prepartly settled by the election of Senator Bruce; and now it looks as though the only way to satisfy all parties, is to hand another Senatorship to Mr.

is not very different from that in want Prohibition, they may remove other states, for the primary law has the amendment by the same means least it seems as though the political country. But nullifying the Constibasket should be dumped, and filled tution is another thing and, as Senawith an entirely new assortment from which to select candidates, and this debasing thing, compared with which is about as much needed in one party revolution is manly and courageous as the other.

so much of the abuse of the franking privilege, for years, that we do not know how far it can be safely abused. But, as the Senate claims to be the final arbiter as to its own members, even to the extent of going behind the returns, it might be that the case against Mr. Weller or Mr. Hill, as threatened by Mr. Tydings-if necessary to bring it-might furnish new and startling political history.

Enforce Laws, or Repeal Them.

It is quite probable that some of our old "blue laws" ought to be repealed. At least we ought to say definitely, as nearly as possible, what constitutes illegal work on the Sabbath day, and set forth more clearly, the things that cannot be done. The greatness of the danger in unenforced laws must be taken up more seriously, for the moment we fail to enforce some laws, we discredit the whole code—and public safety.

We oppose "working" on Sunday, and at least the commercializing of certain games-notably baseballand certain amusements. But there is a question whether those of us who would like to invoke some laws, might not be convicted under other laws, all very much alike in principle when we consider all facts.

The operation of automobiles, busses and trains, for pleasure, represents "work" for a lot of peopleand profit too. Most of us decide for ourselves those things that are allowable, and those unallowable, and we are not always consistent in our decisions.

Some of us think of gambling in one light, and some in another. In the matter of what the Bible calls "sin" we are not fully agreed—in fact, we conscientiously disagree. So, we need to get together and specialize, for as soon as a law is not generally inforced, or respected, it has no rightful place in our system of government.

Shall We Nullify?

If the statement may be made without its being interpreted in a political sense or as preliminary to a presidential 'boom,' Senator Borah is one of the few men in our Government who speaks like a statesman. Regardless of his personal predilections, he seeks a constitutional basis for his positions. In all the welter of 'wet' and 'dry' discussion, his is the farthest carrying voice which lifts the whole matter into its proper present sphere, that of constitutionality. He calls persons of all shades of opinion to consider that ours is a constitutional government, that our national life begins to disintegrate upon the first breath of nullification, and that nullification is the inevitable result of what the liquor interests are urging today.

It is not to be supposed that all the political leaders of the liquor interests take this course deliberately and in full knowledge of its end; it is not to be supposed that they are determined to have their liquor at the cost of the national life of the United States; but it is rather disquieting to observe that simultaneous attack was begun by the 'wet' press upon Senator Borah immediately he brought the constitutional bearings of the question into view.

Occasionally a reader of The Dearborn Independent writes that the only fault he has to find with this paper is that it stands for Prohibition. This paper was not in existence when Prohibition was established in the nation. Coming upon the scene as a magazine The Dearborn Independent found that after nearly a century of public discussion in this country, the states by a great and unusual majority, had adopted the Constitutional Amendment making Prohibition part of our basic law, and we knew as a matter viously adopted that rule by popular Finding the Constitution as it is this paper has no alternative but to uphold the Constitution. If, as the Perhaps the situation in Maryland liquor interests say, the people do not given an awful impetus to political which they used to adopt it. That is indecency everywhere; but here at what Senator Borah is telling the tor Borah points out, a cowardly and and upright. Chances.

While one man is complaining that there is no chance, another man sees and makes one. In life's never-ceasing drama we must promptly take the conducting their campaigns—that cue, or the play halts with the failure of our own part in it. And when the opportunity knocks at any door, we must be as eager to receive it as any radio devotee is to catch the least He may be right. We have heard faint audibility from any distant place. For sometimes the sound of that rare and precious knock is very faint, and it may not recur, however sorry we are that we have missed it.

A good deal of the talk of men about their luck is very tiresome. They had just as much of a chance to make good as anybody had, but they did not perceive it or they did not know how to use it. They are ready enough to rise up and decry or envy him who came and worked the vein where they found nothing and declared it barren.

But the rewards rightly go to those who hold on, after the rest decide that it is quitting time. Nature and fate, such impartial distributors of profit and loss, are certainly never going to play favorites for the benefit of quitters. And the public itself, in the long run, is just in its assessments and appraisals; it has its own way of showing that it can tell the difference between a man and "a stick with a collar on it."-Phila. Ledger.

Steer "Cow Pony"

The school bell rings and Kohler Lobello, thirteen, of Bryan, Texas, runs out the front door, mounts his steer and rides four miles to attend his classes. The boy raised the steer and broke him to ride single or double, He has ridden about the streets of Bryan so regularly that the sight has ceased to cause any unusual interest. One of the favorite tricks of the steer is to round-up cattle. The youth says that in the steer he has the best "cow pony" in Texas.—Indianapolis News.

Discarding Formal Attire

Leaders of fashion are having a difficult time driving Englishmen back into evening clothes. Some of the prominent London clubs have adopted rules that only men in evening attire may dine in the main dining rooms. The result has been that a few members dine in lonely state in the big dining rooms, while the smaller rooms are crowded with diners in business attire. The war raised havoc with formal attire for men.

Ancient Methods of Heating and Lighting

The time when man's curiosity and courage first enabled him to investigate the phenomena of fire was certainly not less than 35,000 years ago. It probably happened in Europe during the Glacial age.

One of the earliest methods was by twirling a pointed stick in a hole in dry wood, leading to the hearth fire. This was followed by the shell lampa shell filled with animal fats or fish ofl, with grass or moss as the wick.

The oldest bronze lamp known was found in Cyprus, and is probably 4,000 years old. In Homer's Odyssey the use of three braziers in the palace to give light is mentioned—a method made possible by the fact that roofs were commonly open in those days.

Coming to more recent times, the cresset, a species of cage filled with old rope smeared with pitch, was in

Candles were first introduced by the Phoenicians about 1000 years B. C., after which they became the regular indoor illuminant. About 400 B. C. candles in all the chief countries of Europe were displaced by oil lamps of clay and bronze and did not return to common use for a thousand years.

The first friction match (the lucifer) was not invented until 1827, and a box of fifty cost half a crown (60 cents). The introduction of the Swedish safety match dates to about fifty years ago .-London Tit-Bits.

Winter Rains Stored

for Time of Drought In southern California, where land without water is worth little, various means have to be adopted to conserve the winter rainfall for the dry summer months. From May till October landowners depend on the underground water supply.

A recent development has been the construction of a vast natural "sponge" destined to hold the flood waters from the great canyons in the district. The water from the melting snow or rains is distributed over nearly 800 acres of rock and sandy land, covered from end to end with sage bushes. This area has been intersected by specially constructed ditches, with concrete distributing gates, by means of which the water is kept circulating, instead of pouring away to waste.

At the height of the season this wonderful "sponge" soaks up not less than 100,000 inches of rain, all of which can be pumped to the surface when re-

Official Sauerkraut

A definition and standard for sauerkraut has been adopted by the secretary of agriculture as a guide for the officials of the department in the enforcement of the federal food and drugs act, upon the recommendation of the joint committee on definitions and standards, as follows: "Sauerkraut is the clean, sound product, of characteristic acid flavor, obtained by the full fermentation, chiefly lactic, of properly prepared and shredded cabbage in the presence of not less than 2 per cent nor more than 3 per cent of salt. It contains upon completion of the fermentation, not less than 11/2 per cent of acid, expressed as lactic acid. Sauerkraut which has been rebrined in the process of canning or repacking contains not less than 1 per cent of acid expressed as lactic acid."

"Laborer" Was Right

Getting one's name on the voting list in an outlying town in Massachusetts for the first time is a serious ceremony, yet with touches of humor. For instance, one lady was asked what her occupation was and she replied "Housewife." Whereupon the registrar volunteered this one: "I asked this question of one woman and she replied, 'Laborer.' " The registrar, somewhat puzzled, again queried, "What kind of labor?" The woman replied, "Well, I'm home all day."-Christian Science Monitor.

Another Diplomat

Five-year-old William, the son of religious parents, has been taught that Sunday is not a day for play. One Sunday his mother was surprised and horrified to find him sailing his toy boat in the bathtub.

"William!" she exclaimed. "Don't you know it's wicked to sail boats on Sunday?'

"Now don't get excited, mother," was the calm reply. "This isn't any pleasure excursion. This is a missionary boat going to darkest Africa."-The Open Road.

Suspicious of Columbus

Columbus had returned to Spain bringing news of a wonderful new land across the sea.

"How much shall I write on it?" queried the maritime reporter of the Cadiz Evening Bulletin.

"Don't write anything," replied the city editor. "Let Columbus pay for his advertising if he wants any. It's probably a real estate promotion scheme."-New York University Med-

Probable Reason

"Well! well! Look at that fellow running and turning his head first one way, then the other, as he flees!" exclaimed a guest. "What do you suppose he is doing that for?"

"Not knowing the gent, can't say for certain," replied the landlord of the tavern at Peeweecuddyhump, "but prob'ly it is b'cuz he ain't able to turn it both ways at once."-Kansas City

Priestly Heroes Died Victims of Massacre

Fifty-one priests gave their lives in their efforts to Christianize the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico during the period from 1542 to 1696, according to records recently unearthed by the Franciscan Fathers of the Southwest. The result of the research contrasts the religious brother with the proud conquistador who invaded New Mexico during the same period, the one for the prize of mythical gold and gems, the other for human souls.

The history of the Christianization of the Indians shows there were waves of persecution of the priests at intervals of 40 to 50 years throughout nearly two centuries. They reached their climax in 1680, when the Pueblos rose in rebellion against the tyranny of the Spanish rule, and killed nearly every white man in New Mexico. By a prearranged plot, 31 missionaries in a score of pueblos, many of them 100 or more miles apart, were slain in one

Five of the religious brothers were killed in another massacre in a lesser uprising on June 4, 1696. The first to lose his life was Father Juan de Padilla, who was killed at Gran Quivera November 20, 1542. In the same year two other priests were killed, one at Tiguex and the other at Pecos. The three padres had remained behind among the savages after the first of the conquistadores had despaired of finding the mythical wealth of the Indians, and had returned to Mexico.-New York World.

Religious Beliefs of

Indians Queer Mixture

At Ysleta, in southwest Texas, are the survivors of a tribe of Indians, perhaps the oldest tribe in the Southwest, whose religion is said to be a mixture of pagan rites and the formalism of the Roman church. Missionaries have been unable to eliminate the paganism and some of it has been left to continue as the only survival of really primitive worship on the Rio Grande, says the Baltimore Sun.

A curious story, also of southwest Texas, was published a short time ago about the Seminole negroes who live near Brackettville and who have a strange religion. For the Seminoles, Christmas, instead of Easter, is the end of Lent. The Seminoles have religious feasts at which pork is the only forbidden meat and their sacramental drink is tea. The religion is a strange blend of teachings from many sources with traces that go back to Africa and the earliest red men on this continent.

No Counties in Louisiana

Soon after the territory which is now the state of Louisiana came into the possession of the United States it was divided into 12 counties. These districts, which were purely arbitrary, proved unsatisfactory from the standpoint of civil government. Therefore, in 1807 the territory was redivided. This time the old Spanish parishes or ecclesiastical districts were used as a basis for the division. Hence the name parish instead of county.-Ex-

"Hummer" Friend of Farmer The male ruby-throat does not "do" as handsome as he looks, writes a correspondent. After the courtship season and the building of the lichenfelted cup of a nest, the hummer husband is much more than likely to desert his mate, who is left alone to hatch the eggs and to rear the young. The hummers earn their right to live and not alone through their display of beauty. Their food consists largely of minute injurious insects.

High Winds on Peak

Half a century ago a group of hardy observers of the weather spent their winters on Mount Washington. They lived in a low stone house, chained to the solid rock, says a writer in the American Magazine. They found that the wind on the peak often blew 150 miles an hour. On one occasion it romped across the summit at the rate of 186 miles an hour; three or four times as fast as an express train.

LINWOCD.

Dr. J. Newton Gilbert, of Annapolis was a pleasant caller at the home of Jesse P. Garner, on Sunday. Miss Emma Garner has returned from a ten-day trip to Central Manor Camp, near Lancaster, Pa. Mrs. Martha Hollenberry, of Philadelphia, is visiting her niece, Mrs. Jesse P. Garner. S. E. Brandenburg and wife, were callers at Jesse Garner's, Tuesday evening. Frank Englar and wife, Seward Englar and wife, and Mrs. Minnie Englar and Marshall Devilbiss, of New Windsor, were entertained to supper, Tuesday evening, by Rev. and Mrs. Orrick, of Glyndon. Raymond Drach, of Germantown, Pa., spent the week-end with his parents, and was accompanied home by his wife and daughter, who spent several weeks in the same home. Miss Dolly Reese was given a surprise party, Monday evening, by her friends.

Last Monday evening, Rev. and Mrs. Paul Yoder were given a farewell surprise, by his congregation and friends of the church. Interesting talks were given by Mrs. L. U. Messler, John A. Englar, C. U. Messler and last Jesse P. Garner, whom we are always glad to have in our midst. The readings given by Misses Katherine Bowersox and Elizabeth Mc-Kinstry were greatly enjoyed. The female quartet rendered two very pleasing numbers. At the close of the program, Rev. and Mrs. Yoder were presented with a nice purse of money, in appreciation of their work while in our midst, and it is with deep regret they leave us.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rinehart, in honor of their son, Harry and bride, on Tuesday evening. Rev. and Mrs. Paul Yoder were entertained to supper, Sunday evening, by J. W. Messler and wife.

German Mothers on Parade

The fad of pushing their own baby carriages has taken fashionable German mothers in Berlin by storm. It used to be extremely bad form for a mother to be seen with her child on Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's Montmartre. Now it is the proper thing for the Berliner frau to show off her latest spring hat or coat while giving the baby an airing. The avenue is crowded in the early afternoons with parades of baby buggies. Uniformed nursemaids are much in evidence, as usual, but mothers do all the work, the maids merely accompanying the

Truth and Liberty

There was a time when men were standing with their love of truth in advance of their love of personal liberty. We see that we are standing now with our love of personal liberty in advance of our love for truth. We anticipate a time when the love of truth shall have come up to our love of liberty, and men shall be cordially tolerant and earnest believers both at once. When that comes it will be a new thing in the world. It has been seen in beautiful or splendid individuals scattered all through the ages, but there has been no age in which the mass of thinkers were at once strong in positive belief and tolerant of difference of opinion .-

For Art's Sake

It was lovely, approaching the divine. A million stars blinked in the heavens. The full moon scattered tiny flakes of silver on the wavelets which danced and sang at our feet. Away off to our right the red beacon of the Round island light shot its message of guidance, good cheer and security out across the endless sea. To the left, and hugging the horizon, a four-masted schooner loomed phantomlike against the blue-black of night. It was all so restful, serene and comforting that I was quite overcome with emotion.

"What a night for lovers!" I confided to my friend. "Yes," he said, "and I got it frame and all, with 45 soap wrappers."

Horses and Mules in War

Motors take an important part in modern warfare, but it is virtually necessary that horses and mules be provided to assume the burden of transportation in places that motors cannot go. Soft ground, by-roads and paths are traversed by animals that are impracticable for automobiles. The Clydesdale, the Shire, the Percheron, the hackney and the trotters are used for artillery and transportation, while the thoroughbreds, the Kentucky saddle horse, the Morgan and the Arab are the breeds which furnish the cavalry and riding horses.

A million dollars is the amount he is said to have taken from his victims. At present, however, Whitman claims to be "broke," despite the fact the detectives who arrested him say he offered to split $50,000 between them for his freedom. He later stated he lost $100,000 to gamblers in Atlantic City before coming here.

Relics From Ur Find Way to United States

Philadelphia.—A fine collection of statues, household belongings and other relics from that ancient capital, Ur of the Chaldees, have found a resting place in America.

These exhibits, which show how the arts were practiced over 4,000 years ago under the protection of the Moon goddess, are a prominent feature of the new wing in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. The wing, which recently was opened, is dedicated to Eckley Brinton Coxe, Jr., in recognition of his services in aiding the museum to conduct researches and excavations, and especially for his great interest in Egyptology.

The collection from Ur is a result of the joint expedition sent out by the museum of the University of Pennsylvania and the British museum to excavate the famous old metropolis.

Stuffed Owls Used

as Decoy for Crows There is one way in which a wild crow may be shaken out of his accustomed wary composure or may be reduced even to a state of hysteria, says Henry C. Cary in Bird Lore.

Procure a stuffed owl, preferably one of the largest species, like the great horned or the barred, and place it out in the open in the country.

The crows will gather more quickly than do the vultures when they see carrion and they will follow each other, as the vultures are said to do, so that the whole crow population for miles around will soon be pouring out the vials of its wrath on the poor stuffed head with its yellow glass

The crows have an instinctive fear of the owl tribe, and hence they unite in an attempt to drive the stuffed owl, which they suppose to be alive, away from their own neighborhood.

This method of decoying crows seems to work best in the nesting season. Its efficacy may be due to the owls' preying upon old and young crows in and near the nest at night. Certainly the habit of nesting and roosting very near the topmost branches of tall trees would seem to make the crow, more than most birds, an easy victim of both hawks and

Tribute Seems Rough on Wedding Finery

Rice and confetti, for use after wedding ceremonies, both have their opponents, but they seem preferable to the coal dust which, we are told, was thrown at St. Pancras recently after the wedding of a coal heaver and his bride.

But the idea of this occupational tribute is not quite new; some years ago a confectioner and his bride were pelted with the little sweets which are known as "hundreds and thousands." The idea might be endlessly extended-tea leaves for the grocer, sawdust for the joiner, chopped suet for the butcher, buns for the baker, buttons for the draper, orange peel for the greengrocer, and pills for the doctor and chemist. In the case of writing people and journalists, presumably all their friends would turn up and empty their fountain pens at the bride and bridegroom. That sounds a curious compliment—but, then, so does coal dust .- Manchester (England) Guardian Weekly

"Kelly, the reason your wife gets the best of every domestic argument is because she figured her side all during the day. She knows just what you will say and what she will reply, and if you do not say it, she has a reply already arranged for whatever you do say. RATTLESNAKE CROP BIG IN SOUTHWEST

Reptiles Never More Numerous Than Last Year

Omaha, Neb.-A fine year for rattlesnakes was 1925—the finest year for the crawling death since the trans-Missouri country was thrown open to settlement. Rattlers and more rattlers. Nobody knows why they were so numerous and so savage during 1925, but they simply know they were both numerous and venomous. Scarcely a neighborhood in Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming or Colorado but what has a snake story to tell.

Leading all the rattlesnake stories of the year, and probably for many years, for that matter, was that of Mrs. H. H. Slaughterback of Fort Lupton, Weld county, Colorado. In a two hours' battle with rattlers late in the fall Mrs. Slaughterback killed 182 of the deadly reptiles. Mrs. Slaughterback is the wife of a ranchex and was attacked by the rattlesnakes when she inadvertently came near the den in which they were preparing to go into winter quarters. They surrounded her and she had to fight for her life. Her weapon was a

Contrary to the oft-told tales of rattlesnakes "leaping" at victims, the snake can only strike about two-thirds of its own length. About one-third of the snake remains on the ground, while the other two-thirds goes forward in the lunge. But the entire snake never leaves the ground when the reptile strikes.

Near White River, S. D., Henry Jenkins ran on a rattlesnake den on the bluffs of the river and killed about twenty-five. The snakes had rolled themselves into a ball and had gone to sleep for the winter.

Around Rattlesnake Ledge in northern Colorado, probably 250 rattlers were killed during the year, but no one was bitten by them. Rattlesnake Ledge is the most dreaded place in northern Colorado because of the scourge of rattlesnakes which infests that range of hills.

Old Wayside Inn Sign

Found in Hayloft

Wellesley, Mass.—The swinging sign that formerly hung over the front door of the old Wayside Inn at Sudbury has been found in a Wellesley hills hayloft and Henry Ford, who now owns the inn, may have it "if he's 'a'mind to call for it."

William Diehl, a farmer, dug the relic out of the chaff of years. About twenty years ago, he said, a party of Harvard students bent on a lark, hired one of his sleighs for a trip to Sudbury. When the sleigh was returned the sign was in it, and Diehl tossed it into the hayloft. It shows a prancing, chestnut horse, on a gayly painted background, and bears the title "Wayside Inn." A painter who examined the work said it must have been done 80 years ago.

Monte Carlo.-Sixes, but no sevens, was the system by which a gentleman from Cannes nearly broke the bank at Monte Carlo recently, winning $70,000 in one sitting. Had he won an additional $30,000 the bank would have had to close for the day.

The player explained that his Christian name and surname were both composed of six letters each; his automobile license number was 6,666 and when he first entered the rooms, he heard the croupier call out six as the winning number.

He then staked the limit on number 6 and all multiples of six and won steadily.

Letter Tells of Sale of Building to City.

N INTERESTING letter, written in 1816 by Robert Wharton, then mayor of Philadelphia, to William Finley, treasurer of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, concern-

Suggestion Great Aid in Preserving Youth

"My, but Americans are young looking people!" exclaimed Miss Alma Law, an Australian, on her first visit to San Francisco. "There don't seem to be any old ones. And such handsome, well dressed and pleasant folks."

We do look young and, in fact, are looking younger every day. This is partly the applied science of the pulchritude parlor, but in larger measure it is due to a mental attitude in which a native optimism is reinforced by friendly suggestion. We have not discovered the elixir of life-that is, not the elixir put in bottles-but we have the secret of keeping young, and it is telling each other that we look so. Americans do know how to greet one another, and though greetings Philadelphia, paid into the Bank of cannot make any difference to the calendar they may make a world of difference to one's appearance. Years are cut off when we are told we are looking well, and if we feel younger we cannot help looking younger. Statistically we know that modern medical science has added at least ten years to the average American life, but the average man, and certainly the average woman, looks ten years younger than he and she did 20 years ago.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Etruria in History

In ancient geography Etruria was a division of Italy, north and west of the Tiber and west of the Apennine mountains, and including the valley of the Arno. Modern Tuscany and the northern half of the province of Rome cover about the same territory today. Etruria proper contained a confederation of twelve cities, each of which was independent. The people of Etruria, called Etruscans, were the most advanced of any in Italy before the rise of Rome. They had a highly developed political organization. They were at the height of their power about 500 B. C., and were the allies of Carthage. With the rise of Rome came a struggle in which the Etruscans were worsted, becoming virtually tributary in 309 B. C., to the more powerful Roman state.-Exchange.

DOLORES AND HER LOVE

(© by W. G. Chapman.)

OLORES GARCIA sat on the step of her adobe hut and looked out across the hills. Her-slim, brown hands were clasped tightly in those of Dick Chapin, the manager of the Oswego mine. Dick was only twenty-four, but his father had the controlling interest in the property. Dick had been sent to Mexico to keep him out of just such scrapes as that into which he was now running.

"So you see, Dolores, we will be married next week," Dick was saying, "and I will take you back to New York with me. The old man? Well, he will kick, of course, but he'll soon quiet down. Nobody could see you without falling in love with you."

Dolores was seventeen, which is a marriageable age for a Mexican girl with Indian blood in her veins. At least Pedro, the foreman, thought so. He had handled his knife for several days past whenever he saw Dick riding past. Pedro and Dolores had been sweethearts once; but Pedro's love-making was not like Dick's.

"Will you marry me?" Dick asked for the twentieth time. And for the first time Dolores answered "yes." She turned and kissed him on the lips and fled into her hut, while Dick rode home in the moonlight, smiling foolishly and dreaming, as youth will.

He did not see the gun that Pedro leveled at him as he rode past the foreman's house. Pedro's finger trembled on the trigger. But while he hesitated Dick rode out of gunshot

"Dolores," said her wrinkled old mother, that evening, "the Gringo loves thee, eh?"

Dolores nodded. She was wiser than Dick, though her years were fewer. "He will take me to New York," she said. "His father is rich. He has a castle there."

"Listen to me, child!" exclaimed the older woman, beating her breast "Before thy father passionately. courted me I had a Gringo lover. Thou hadst not known that? Would I had not, too, for the first love is the strongest, and even now, wrinkled as I am, and withered, my heart is his. Can the white mate with the brown? Thou wilt come back sadly, and Pe-dro will laugh at thee."

Dolores cried herself to sleep that night. Dick's love seemed to be eternal! yet she had heard other women speak as her mother had spoken.
- Pedro was glad that he had withheld his hand that night. On the following morning there came a rumbling sound among the masses of rock that overhung the executive offices of the mine. The whole mass slipped from its anchorage and toppled down upon the buildings. Three men were in them at the time. Two were never found. One was carried out, crushed and mangled. That one was Dick.

"There is one chance in a dozen." said the mine doctor, after examining him. "He must be kept absolutely quiet, and his father had better be notified to start for Mexico at once."

They telegraphed to Dick's father, but to keep him quiet was not so easy. All day and night in his delirium he called for Dolores. To pacify him, they sent for her. Upon the doctor's supervision she glided in and out, her presence only bringing momentary rest to the sick man's tortured frame.

Pedro was not so glad then. He wished now that he had used his gun that night.

The crisis came on the third day. The doctor had repaired the shattered framework of the body, but he could do no more for Dick. Life and death were fighting that afternoon for Dick Chapin. He lay in a stupor upon his bed, occasionally opening his eyes and muttering Dolores' name.

The doctor was gone away. "I will be back at nightfall," he had said. "There will be no change till then."

Dolores had just finished soaking a bandage when she looked up to see Pedro standing in the doorway. He had not spoken to her for weeks, not since the week after Dick's arrival, in

"You love the Gringo, hey?" he demanded.

Dolores flashed out at him:

"That is my business, Pedro. I have said 'no' to you. Why do you come creeping in here when nobody is about? That is like you, to torment me. You are a coward, Pedro." "Say what you like," said Pedro, shrugging his shoulders. "His sweetheart comes from America this evening."

. "You lie, Pedro," answered the girl. Pedro grinned and held out a copy of a Texas newspaper. Neither of them could read Spanish, let alone English, but photographs speak the same tongue in every land. It was impossible to mistake that of Dick Chapin or that of the girl in the same picture, about whose waist Dick's arm was resting. Dolores looked at it and grew pale as death. "He may have broken it off, Pedro," she gasped.

"Well," said Pedro, philosophically, "that remains to be seen. I say that she will come this evening, with his mother. Such is the story in the mine."

The mother's words came back to Dolores. Pedro saw the indecision in her face.

"Will you be shamed by a Gringo woman when the way lies open, Dolores?" he asked. "Remember, I love you. I know the Gringo makes fine promises to women, but he is not your kind. He will never marry you.'

"Come here, Pedro," whispered the girl. She drew him outside. A moment later Pedro walked away grinning. As he left her Dolores heard Dick's call for her. She hurried back. Dick's eyes were wide open, and he recognized her again. The crisis was

"Dolores!" he whispered, drawing her toward him.

"Dick," she said, "thy-thy mother comes this night."

"My mother!" he exclaimed. "How long have I been ill, then? What happened? Ah! The landslide!" Memory was returning, and with it came the solution of the crisis.

"He will live now," said the doctor when he returned. "I'm glad that the crisis ended before his mother came." The night train brought Mrs. Chapin and a young woman. Dolores, cast out from the sickroom now, watched them in bitterness of soul as, with hurried steps, they hastened toward the mine hospital.

"If he returns her kiss," she said to herself, "I shall know."

She followed them, gradually gaining upon them, until she reached the door of the sick man's room, a few paces behind. Neither of the women paid any attention to the Indian girl; she was not even seen by them. Do lores stood at the door and watched.

With a cry Mrs. Chapin sprang to the bedside and flung her arms about her boy. And then, while they still clung together, the younger woman drew near. Her tears fell on Dick's face. His arms were round her, too.

Dolores crept away. Pedro drew near her, but she ran from him. She could not see him yet. She had one more duty to do. She went to the doc-

"Senor," she gasped, "tell me one thing faithfully. You said that he would live. Will he live to stand upon his feet again, like a man, or will he only crawl in the sun?"

"God bless you, my child, of course he will stand on his feet again," the doctor answered, looking at her curiously. He was not too ignorant of Dick's flirtation with her, and, knowing the ways of Mexico, had not been greatly disturbed by it. Dick could look after himself. And the girl-he understood that love was only an episode in these girls' lives. Still, her tone moved him.

"Why do you ask me?" he inquired, curjously. "I have heard," said Dolores, "that when a Gringo is crippled his sweetheart leaves him. The Gringo women do not love as we love."

"Oh, I guess most women are alike," replied the doctor, carelessly. "But don't be distressed about him. Dick Chapin will be as fit as ever he was in a few weeks."

"Thank you," replied Dolores, list-lessly, and went away. "Who is that 'Dolores' that Dick is all the time asking for?" inquired Mrs. Chapin of the doctor.

"Oh, just a native woman who him," the doctor answered. "She left here suddenly last night fellow named Pedro. Married? Let's hope so; but marriage doesn't count for very much among these

"I'm glad she's gone," said Mrs. Chapin. "Dick's sister and I were rather worried to know who she could

"I think there was a little tenderness on both sides," answered the doctor. "Best say nothing about her, and I'll break the news to him tomorrow

Gangster Surely Gave

Judge Uneasy Moment A noted Chicago criminal judge, alone in his office, heard a noise and looked up to meet the menacing gaze of one of the city's most daring criminals, who had slipped in unawares, says Capper's Weekly. The judge thought his time had come, especially when the crook reached into his hip pocket and began fumbling for some-

Six months before the judge had refused a parole for this man, known as "Jimmy the Fence." "You here?" stammered the judge. "Yes," answered Jimmy, "I told you I was comin' when I got out." But, when the man took his hand from his pocket there was no gun in it. Instead, he handed the judge a piece of folded paper. On it the judge read a declaration made by Jimmy to his wife. He had obtained a job in a lumber yard and sworn he would go straight

"You see, judge," Jimmy began, "it was during that six months Jimmy Jr. was born. My wife pleaded with me to lay off the underhanded stuff so we could give little Jimmy the education neither of us had. And say, judge, you ought to see him-nine pounds to the ounce and kickin' just like his dad."

The judge congratulated Jimmy Sr. and then shook hands with himself."

SEEKERS FOR GOLD NEVER LOSE HOPE

Fortune Ever Just Ahead of Placer Miner.

Most people believe that "placer" mining went out of existence about the time that Robert W. Service began to live on his reputation as a poet, but many prospectors still are sluicing the yellow dust around Cariboo

Many of them are not making what could be termed a living wage when judged by city standards, but when the rent problem is no longer a problem and firewood is there for the taking, man requires but little in the wilderness to get by. His fare consists largely of bacon, beans, "punk," or homemade biscuits, pepper, salt and coffee, and $5 or $10 worth of this kind of fodder will last a long time.

There was great excitement in one little camp a few days ago, says a dispatch from Vancouver, B. C., when the Houser brothers uncovered a $24 nugget. Such findings are rare in the district, which was supposed to have been sluiced dry several years ago, but just such a strike as this is what keeps the gold-bitten moilers at their selfappointed task.

Placer mining is at once the most exciting and disheartening work under the sun. Harry Eden shoveled many tons of bowlders in May and the total production of his labors for one month vas 95 cents. Such poor returns are rare, however, and it is the eternal hope which burns forever in the breasts of all miners which keeps them going back day after day, confident that the big strike is just ahead.

Since the diamond drills, rock crushers and smelters have come into vogue the whole complexion of gold mining has been changed. Up-to-the-minute miners refuse to be pestered with the antiquated methods and yearn for the slap and dash created by modern machinery.

To the old-timers, however, mining will never be mining without the pick and shovel and the sluice boxes. What matter if the sun parboils their necks and their backs break with the unremitting toil of hoisting the gravel to the surface with a tiny hand windlass and then washing it in the boxes, the while they pick the tiny gold flakes from the riffs. Their regard is in finding the precious metal, no matter how small the quantity may be.

The sentiment of the miners of bygone days can best be summed up in the words of Paddy Hodnutt, who has shoveled gravel for more than sixty of his eighty five years.
"I wudn't have anything to do with them things," he snorted, with a deprecatory wave of his hand. "Sich traps is not for the likes o' me, what has seen fortunes dug out of the ground with bare hands. When the time comes that I have to use such as that old Paddy'll give up minin' for

Furs From Russia by Plane

The Russians at Moscow are now planning to bring furs by means of planes from the most inaccessible parts of Siberia. The cost will be repaid, for the trade with America alone $5,000,000 a year. At present during the nine months of the year when the northern rivers are icelocked, dogs and reindeer must be the carriers. Three new air routes are therefore to be opened between Archangel and Siberian points and the distant frontiers bordering the Arctic ocean. The airplanes, furthermore, will serve to carry the supplies required by the traders and trappers, and it is planned to use them to link the lonely peninsula of Kamchatka, with the nearest railway points of the mainland. Already in Russian central Asia the plane makes it possible to travel from Bokhara to Khiva in a few hours, instead of the fortnight or more required by toiling caravans.

Piling Up the Errors

Grace had reached the age when the use of new words greatly appealed to her-sometimes with amusing results.

In a conversation, an older sister had contradicted something which the younger girl had just said, whereupon Grace had exclaimed: "Why, Helen, don't you know better than to controduct me?"

Judging from the laughter which followed her speech she saw that something was wrong and sought to correct her error. With a toss of her head, she remarked:

"I didn't mean controduct anyway; meant interdict."

This time her audience yelled.

Machine Gun Speed

The Browning 0.50-caliber machine gun, the most powerful of the kind in the United States, is belt fad and fires at the rate of 550 to 600 shots a minute. A new type of gun, in which centrifugal force is employed instead of an explosive, has been tested out by a gasoline motor of special type. This gun is said to be able to fire at a rate of 1,200 a minute, and at their greatest velocity it is claimed that the shots are capable of killing a man at 2,000 yards.

Luck-Both Kinds

At a nearby golf club a player walked away and forgot his bag containing a $50 set of clubs. On the same day another player, after a dismal shot, threw a decrepit mashie far into the rough. The first player searched all next day for his expensive set and never found it. But a golfer picked up the old mashie and it was handed back to the second player with the information that he "certainly was in luck."

Desert Warriors Who

Keep Faces Covered Out in the central Sahara men of wandering desert tribes go veiled and bare-faced women have as free and independent a status as their sisters in Europe Bearing traces of having started out as a matriarchy, this warlike nomad race of Tuaregs, very little known to Europeans, was the subject of an address by Francis Rodd to the members of the Royal Geographical society at London recently.

Mr. Rodd has made a prolonged stay in northern Africa studying the customs and language of this strange race, of whom there is cultural evidence, he says, of having once enjoyed a higher degree of civilization than that displayed in their present state. They have a written script which is not used by any other existing people, the origin of which scientists have not yet been able to trace. That a pastoral race of confirmed nomadic habits should have a well-developed script when their daily life calls for no need of writing is, Mr. Rodd points out, exceedingly remarkable.

Though Mohammedans, the Tuaregs are monogamous and women occupy a position of independence, very unusual in desert tribes. They choose their own husbands and are the repositories of learning and the art of poetry. They teach the children to read and write and the lore of their people. They have men friends who are not relatives, give evening parties to recite their poetical effusions and enjoy independent property rights as well.

The early history of the "People of the Veil," as classical writers called them, seems to be lost for the most part, and scientists cannot agree on the basic facts in its reconstruction. More investigations are needed, according to Mr. Rodd, to clear up the mystery of the origin of this littlestudied race.

Work Is Best Cure

For this reason the program of combating the disease now adopted by the ministry of colonies contains both medical and moral factors. On the medical side the number of specialized doctors and nurses and the quantity of medicines is to be increased. On the moral side it has been found that in those communities where the opening of roads and the beginning of industries has given the natives a chance to work and earn, they take more interest in life, are more active, eat a more nourishing diet and oppose a greater resistance to infection.—Chicago News.

Wanted to Have It Over

Ruth, age five, had coaxed repeatedly in the afternoon to be permitted to go two doors down the street to visit with a little playmate, but the permission had been refused. Sitting on the back door step her course of action had been decided upon, and she called to her mother and said: "Mother, I'm going now."

Mother replied: "Ruth, if you go, I shall have to whip you."

Ruth was silent for a while, but moved by a sudden inspiration came into the house, approached her mother gravely, and said:

"Well, mother, if you're going to whip me, whip me now, and then I'll go."-Indianapolis News.

"'It's hard on us poor married women in South Africa,' the latter lady said. 'I live in with my husband on an ostrich farm, and it's nothing at all for him to be away two whole days at a time on an ostrich.'

"'Humph. What of that?' said the Canadian woman. 'My husband is often away two whole weeks at a time on a lark."

One Way to Find Out To return from a shopping trip to find her husband's coat hung over the back of a chair with a note pinned on it saying that he was returning home sick and if he fell unconscious to notify his wife to pay up the insurance was startling enough, but to go upstairs and find him stretched out on the bed was too much for a newly married wife.

She picked up a pin and vigorously prodded the reclining husband, who soon proved that at least he hadn't expired by exclaiming:

"Darn it. I'm not unconscious yet." -Indianapolis News.

Paris have failed to induce the archbishopric of Paris to increase their wages and are now suggesting the possibility of a strike that would deprive the city's churches of the services of professional musicians.

The complaint has been made that while the cost of living has risen to a point five times as high as that of 1914, and the church has increased its charges for burials and marriages in that ratio, the pay of musicians has remained unchanged since the beginning of the war.

I. The Divine Command to Possess the Land (vv. 1-6).

1. The abiding purpose (v. 1). They were to go up and possess the land despite the fact that the calf worship had broken the bond between them and their God. God spoke of them as the people whom Moses brought up out of Egypt, not as His own people. They had not shown any true penitence for their awful sin, therefore God could not claim them as His own.

2. Divine aid promised (v. 2). Though their sins made it impossible for God to go with them, He still agrees to help them by sending an angel before them to drive out their

3. The threatened withdrawal of the divine presence (vv. 3, 5).

God said, "I will not go up in the midst of thee, for thou art a stiffnecked people, lest I consume thee in the way." The presence of God in the midst of a sinning and impenitent people would mean death unto them.

The mercy of God is often strikingly shown by God's withdrawal from His people.

4. The effect upon the people (vv. (1) "When the people heard these evil tidings they mourned." They had not understood the seriousness of God's threatened withdrawal. They knew that no angel could make up for the great loss of the personal presence of God. They called it "evil tidings." Surely no tidings are so evil as those which tell of the withdrawal of the divine pres-

As a token of the severed fellowship, the symbol of God's dwelling place, the tent of meeting was placed without the camp. While this showed the excommunication of His people, it showed also God holding out an opportunity to such individuals as sought the Lord to continue in fellow-

2. Moses in communion with God

Because Moses had not transgressed God's law, he still had fellowship with God. The visible sign to the people that God honored Moses was the descent of the "cloudy pillar" as Moses entered the tent of meeting.

3. Moses the friend of God (v. 11). This is one of the most beautiful expressions of personal fellowship to be found in all the Bible, if not in all literature. Friendship implies mutual confidence and sympathy, a disposition to share each other's secrets. 4. Joshua at home in the tabernacle (v. 11). Joshua was not involved in the rebellion of the people. Because of his fidelity he was privileged to abide in the tent in the divine fellowship.

III. Moses' Prayer (vv. 12-23). Moses' mind was somewhat perplexed, therefore he came to the Lord for the solution of his problem. God had said that He would send an angel to carry out His covenant obligation concerning the people in the possession of the land. Moses desired fuller knowledge of this angel so that he might act intelligently with reference to the matter. He asked for three

1. Fuller knowledge (vv. 12-14). In order to lead the people he needed to know more fully his God. God graciously responded to this request by assuring him that His presence would go with him and that He would give him rest.

2. "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not hence" (vv. 15-17).

Moses was convinced that no substitute could take God's place even though that one be an angel. He argued that it would be better to perish in the wilderness than to attempt to go into Canaan without God. 8. "Show me thy glory" (vv. 18-23).

Manifestly Present

Never in all the world's history has God been more manifestly present in it than when Jesus died upon the cross. We can all see that now. God was there, if He was ever anywhere in the world of men.

The True Prayer

The true prayer in time of great trial, care, or sorrow, is, not that we shall be delivered from the experiences, but that we may pass through them unharmed.

September 5 Christian Ideals and How to Reach Them

Philippians 3:13, 14; 4:8, 9 Christianity has its ideals, but Christianity itself is more than idealism. At the heart of the Christian message there lies the redemptive power of the cross and of the risen Apart from this, Christianity would be simply a narrative of events. Because of this it becomes the one and only power for salvation. It is a piece of good news in which the power of God to save operates. Christian ideals are higher than any other ideals. A primitive Christian ideal is found in the opening verses of the epistle of James. This epistle is probably the first piece of writing composing our New Testament. This primitive ideal is expressed in the words, "That ye may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing." To be perfect and entire means to be mature and complete as a Christian. The same ideal practically animates the apostle Paul, who in the third chapter of Philippians gives us a leaf out of his own experience. In verse 9 he tells us of his position, he was found "in Christ." This position was settled and secure. In response to his faith the Spirit of God made him a member of that spiritual body of which the living Christ is the head. But this was not all that the apostle desired. He had a great ideal before him, as expressed in verses 12 to 14. Here we see him following after and pressing toward "the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." His ideal was that of attaining to all that his position made possible. He was a progressive Christian, desiring to be mature and complete, lacking nothing.

The remaining Scripture in Philippians 4 deals with the thought life. Ideals are necessary here. Many Christians experience trouble because of wrong thinking. In the eighth verse of this chapter the remedy for this is disclosed. Read the verse carefully putting a heavy emphasis on the word "think" which appears at the end of the verse. This will give the true meaning of the apostle's teaching concerning this matter of idealism in the realm of thought.

Railroad Would Join

President in Hades

A young man had succeeded his deceased father as president of a small railroad in the Southwest. The old man had been heartily disliked, for he had worked his employees and his road to the last gasp and the new president on his first inspection trip found the equipment in bad shape. Toward evening his special stopped at a division point and he got out. As he walked alongside his private car he met a grizzled old "car tink" who was busy tapping the car wheels with his little hammer.

"What do you think of the car?" the president asked.

"Good enough for the rails it rides on," was the ambiguous reply. "Well, how about the rails?"

"Rotten." "Listen here," said the young executive, "do you know who I am?" "Sure. You're the president. knew your father when he was prest dent, and he's going to be president "What do you mean? Don't you know my father's dead?" "Yep," the old-timer nodded. "I know he's dead. And the road's going to hell, too!"-The Funny Side Out, by Nellie Revell.

French Middle Class

The term "bourgeoisie" is applied to the great middle class of the French people, consisting of the merchants, manufacturers, and upper tradesmen. Previous to the Thirteenth century they were included among the serfs, and for long after were forbidden the use of certain ornaments and stuffs reserved exclusively for the nobility. Owing to the favor shown them by Philip Augustus (1189-1223), their social position was much improved. As late as 1614 the president of the States-General, speaking of the bourgeoisie, said, "It is a great insolence to wish to establish any sort of equality between us and them; they are only to us as the valet to his master." The nobles further demanded that "the common people be forbidden to carry pistols, to wear velvet or satin, or to own any but hamstrung dogs."-Ex-

Too Cold to Snow

The weather bureau says that the greater number of more or less heavy snows come with southerly to easterly winds-i. e., in what is known as the "rainy" portion of the cyclonic or storm area. These winds generally are relatively mild. As the storm passes the winds come from the northwest, roughly, and are relatively cold. In short, precipitation comes with relatively warm easterly to southerly winds, and clear weather follows with relatively cold northwest winds. If, then, the winter wind is from the northwest, it is cold, and from the wrong direction to give much show. This, presumably, is the origin of the saying, "It is too cold to snow." 'This statement, however, is not literally true, for light snows can occur at any temperature; and, indeed, it occasionally happens that heavy snows occur when the surface air is quite cold.

When Elba failed to hold Napoleon he was placed on St. Helena, well toward the middle of the South Atlantic, out of harm and out of the shipping lanes. That was in 1815. He died in 1821.

chelles on the east coast of Africa north of Madagascar are more recent prison stations. In Africa the British occasionally find it expedient to absent certain native rulers from their subjects. So, when Prempeh, king of the Ashanti on the Gold coast, spilled too much blood, they sent him to sojourn in the soothing climate of the Seychelles. Prempeh, after twenty years, returned to his people, so apparently he did not like the asylum. But the English did, so they sent Mwanga, deposed ruler of Uganda, to join him and then Kabarega of Unyoro, Sayyid Khalid of Zanzibar and Saad Zaghul of Egypt. The Seychelles detention was not nearly so effective in the case of Zaghul, who is now the leader of a popular party in Egypt. To Funchal was sent the deposed emperor of Austria-Hungary immediately following the end of the World war. He died in exile. His wife and children are now in Spain.

Tourists Visit Chateau d'If.

"Czarist Russia, for a time, sent 18,000 prisoners to Siberia annually. Much of the famous Trans-Siberian railway was built with prison labor. The chief horror of Siberian exile was the knout. By it, or by terror of it, guards kept prisoners docile. The handle of the knout is a heavy wood stick, 18 inches long. Fastened to it is a thong of rawhide. About eight feet from the handle the thong is split in three parts. These streamers are three feet long. The ends are tied into hard knots, although lead or iron knout the victim was tied face downward on a rough table. Close to the knout wielder stood a clerk with a book in which he checked the number of strokes as that worthy swung them and called them. For the first 25 strokes the skin was marked white by the lash as II a chalk mark were drawn on the flesh. After that the thongs began to cut through. When a knout sentence called for 100 strokes the last one was usually omitted as a 'token of imperial magna-nimity.'"

The treasurer will not pay, and will demand the return of the document as stolen property which, he asserted, was taken by the troops of General Sherman in the famous march through Georgia.

Also, it is not a real bond, inasmuch as it was not issued, the treasurer said.

The blood of an insect does not circulate through a system of closed blood tubes, as in man, but, instead, it more or less completely fills that part of the body cavity which is not filled with other organs. Oxygen is thus brought in contact with the blood by means of the tracheae. Insects have the most powerful muscles of all animals of their size. Relatively, an enormous amount of energy is released during the jumping or flying of a grasshopper. The tracheae pass directly into the muscles and other tissues. Here oxygen is passed into the tissues and oxidation takes place when the work

Rather "Near" Relative

A Chicago woman gave a relative a box of expensive stationery. The following Christmas the relative asked her to buy it back, offering to sell it for half she paid for it. He explained he preferred a paper with lines and that he was giving her the opportunity to buy a mice gift for some one else at a reduced price. We are reminded of the story of a little boy who has just asked his mother what a near relative is. The Chicago man was a "near" relative.-Exchange.

Taneytown won a seven inning contest on Wednesday afternoon from the strong Hamilton-Baltimore team by the score of 4 to 1. It is regretable that the game had to be abbreviated-due to the fact that two of the local players had to leave at 5 o'clock—especially as the visitors were playing a stronger game than in the early innings, and it was hardly fair to them that two innings were dropped off.

The home team had the best of the batting and played the sharpest fielding game. Most of the hits were weak and some were of the scratch variety, difficult to decide whether to call hits, or fielders' errors.

The visitors, however, played a snappy game, and that they kept the score down to 4 to 1 shows that they were doing good fast work.

Mental Safety Valves.

Sometimes we think that the best editorial work we have ever done, has been in the writing and tearing up of a lot of productions that never appeared; productions that on more mature thought appeared too extreme or unhealthy, or perhaps just untimely and unnecessary. At any rate we have found a lot of satisfaction in just letting our mind unload itself—blowing itself off, and nobody hurt.
Very likely this is a common experiance though differently experience.

perience, though differently exercised by different people. Sometimes we get "all het up" over something and want to unload; but before we shoot our intended victims a reaction sets in and we let the charge go into the air, or into the waste basket—or perhaps we kick a dog, instead.

So, we get considerable satisfaction in figuratively having had "our say," thereby saving our self-respect, yet not hurting anybody. The plan of thinking twice, or sometimes more than that, before acting, saves a con-siderable amount of trouble, and often real regret; we depend too much on a single track, and emphasize too strongly the straight and narrow way, without sufficiently considering whether—though our way may be right—it is fully worth while to insist on it, for sometimes we actually win by apparently losing.

A mental safety valve, that amounts to personal self-control, is a very necessary part of everybody's make-up, for a hot temper and sharp tongue perhaps breaks more friend-ships than any other part of our men-tal mechanicism, and even an apology never quite cements the break. So, as the editor lets his opinions slip off the tip of his pencil, while others let them slip off the tip of their tongue, both are all the better off when they occasionally use the waste basket, and let their opinions go to the junk dealer.

Harawood Floors

In addition to the beauty and comfort hardwood floors give to a home. considering the small cost added necessary to their installation, they are really economical. It is questionable if a home can be called modern that if without hardwood floors, and as a time and labor saver there is nothing among the things that are considered extras in home construction that affords greater satisfaction.
