

TANEYTOWN BILL IS INTRODUCED.

For the Extension of the Corporate Limits of the Town.

A bill providing for the extension of the corporate limits of Taneytown, was introduced on Thursday, by delegate Chas. B. Kephart.

The bill is the natural consequence of the rapid growth of the town in the east end, the present limits now being over-run by nearly a mile of homes, many of which have the benefit of the town's water supply, electric lights and fire protection, all of which have been made possible by the taxpayers of the town proper.

Usually, there is more or less opposition to such extensions, due to incorporation taxes. In this case, however, those who carry Stock Company Fire Insurance are likely to get back $2.50 on each $100. worth of property insured, to apply to the additional tax, and it is very probable that Mutual Company rates will also be lowered.

In the end we believe that the extension will benefit all, through the laying of sidewalks and curbs that will increase the value of the properties, without a great burden on any.

The extension will also be of indirect benefit to the town, in giving it its proper standing in population, as these figures are published after each ten-year census in a large number of directories, and no town gets credit for the population outside of its limits.

The bill, we are informed, does not require a referendum because no bond issue is attached to it.

Prayer Day Services.

(For the Record.)

Friday, March 4, 1927, was a world day of Prayer for Missions, by resolution of the International Missionary Council, meeting in Sweden, last July; the resolution being—"We resolve to enter afresh into an experience of sustaining and victorious prayer, to dedicate ourselves anew to a life of which communion with God is the inspiring principle and to cooperate in every way possible in extending the fellowship of prayer."

Services were held on Friday, March 4, 1927, at 2:30 P. M., in the Taneytown Presbyterian Church. The members of the three Missionary Societies of the three Presbyterian churches, Taneytown, Piney Creek and Emmitsburg, participated in the program, which consisted of responsive Scripture readings, hymns and prayers.

"A Pilgrimage of Prayer around the World," showed the progress of the Gospel, beginning with Palestine and following the general course taken, as it spread from Jerusalem to the whole world.

Miss Amelia H. Birnie, with the aid of a world map, made this pilgrimage most interesting, and inspirational.

Thirty-two women were present, "When women pray together they always work together."—"Pray ye therefore."

"Shop Talk" on an Exchange.

The Public Welfare, an excellent weekly still in its first volume, published at Frostburg, gave its community a little heart to heart talk, last week, and among other pointed things had the following to say:

"We have a $10,000 equipment, all paid for, and do not ask any one to purchase stock as a promotion scheme. We have taken the chance. We ask no one to furnish the cash to purchase equipment, or speculate with."

"In the matter of subscriptions, we do not ask advance payments. We will take the chance. In advertising, the same proposition prevails. We don't expect to receive one cent until our part of the contract has been fulfilled. Our patrons simply can't lose."

"Then, why should anyone hesitate to become a subscriber or an advertiser? We confess we don't know except that it must be for something different from an upright business proposition."

"Give us your patronage and let us show you what a creditable paper we can give, under proper business conditions that will compensate in a reasonable measure for the effort and expense required. Why won't you do your part?"

Barn Near Gist Burns.

The large frame barn of Herschel Poole, near Gist, was completely destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning together with its contents, including barley, oats, harness, farming implements, and hay, as well as four cows and four heifers, which could not be turned loose. Mr. Poole had gone out to the barn about 4:30 A. M., to do the feeding when he smelled smoke. Thinking it might come from a fire which he had just started in the kitchen stove he returned to the house. Finding nothing wrong there he went back to the barn, when he saw flames coming from the hay mow. He called to his brother-in-law John Easton, but soon the whole structure was ablaze. A two-mile stretch of dirt road leading to the place and the fact that it was raining, deterred the farmer from calling the Westminster fire company, as he did not believe the firemen could reach the place. Some insurance is carried on the loss, which may reach $3,000 or $4,000.

LET SUNDAY LAWS ALONE.

Efforts Being Made for Pleasure and Profit.

Three bills have been introduced in the Legislature which, if enacted into law, will make the Sabbath—the day designated by the Almighty for rest and worship—a day of general frivolity.

One is the Kennedy bill to legalize Sunday movies; one is the Marbury bill to legalize Sunday commercialized sports with the exception of horse-racing, and one, the Callan bill to legalize Sunday bowling and Sunday basketball.

The following comments on these bills, by The Jeffersonian, Towson, Baltimore county, have our approval:

"The open advocates of such bills as mentioned above are very diplomatic in giving their reasons for them. They claim that our present Sunday laws are obsolete and are not regarded by the people and that laws should not remain on the statute books that are not enforced. In fact, they feel we have outgrown them.

But these are not the real reasons. The gentlemen who have the most at stake, and who are behind the scenes, know exactly what they want; however, they are afraid to come out into the open and ask for it. What they want is an open Sabbath—open theatres, open movies, baseball, prize-fights, horse racing, open shops and saloons—in fact, their idea is to do away with the Sabbath altogether.

Let the Sunday laws stand on the statute books as they are and create no more fool ones. No one suffers for any necessity or is anyone unduly inconvenienced by them, and at the same time we have one day in the seven for peace and quiet.

The majority of people in Baltimore county (also Carroll) do not want an open Sunday, and our delegates at Annapolis should realize it and act accordingly, and the Legislature as a whole should have the wisdom and vision to see the importance of holding fast at least to some of the old landmarks."

Oratorio "The Holy City."

On Sunday night, March 13, at 8 o'clock, the Glee Clubs of Blue Ridge College will present the oratorio, "The Holy City," by the English composer, A. R. Gaul, in the College Auditorium.

This oratorio will be, without doubt, the largest religious production that has ever been given at Blue Ridge. It is divided into two parts, the first called "Contemplation" and the second "Adoration." "The Holy City" excels in vigor, melodious treatment, interest and deep religious sentiment, being one of the most highly recognized of standard works of this character.

The trained chorus consists of forty voices, including singers from the town of New Windsor. The local soloists are: Mrs. Donald John, Miss Frances Harsberger, Miss Frances Hackett, Miss Mary Malcolm, Miss Viola Moreland, Miss Genevieve Early, Mrs. Marie Thompson and Mrs. John Baile. Tenor solos will be taken by Mr. Nelson Huffman who is director of music in Bridgewater College, Va. Bass solos will be rendered by Mr. Ralph Myers, also of Bridgewater College. The oratorio will be conducted by Mr. Nevin Fisher and accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruth Weybright.

The public is invited to this sacred concert. Admission is free. A silver offering will be lifted.

"The Story of Esther."

On March 16th., at 8:00 P. M., the dramatization of "The Book of Esther" will be presented in Alumni Hall by the College players of Westminster Maryland College. There will be no charge for admission.

No one can fail to appreciate the charm of one of the loveliest Bible characters in a casual reading of the story, but as is always the case, the dramatic presentation appeals much more strongly.

All who are interested in the rather rare dramatic presentation of Bible stories in this vicinity, in the study of the Bible or even in secular drama are invited to come and witness it.

A special invitation is extended to the churches of Westminster and neighboring towns.

Rabbits and Quail for County.

"District Deputy Game Warden, J. G. Diffendal, received 288 Cotton Tail rabbits from Missouri, but 65 of them died en route. Also 100 bob-white Quail to be liberated in the covers throughout the County for propagation purposes. The Game Warden and sportsmen liberated the rabbits and birds in the rural districts and ask the farmers to keep their dogs under leash during the breeding season.

Dogs running at large between March 1st. and August 1st. destroy more game, especially rabbits, than the hunters kill during the open season. A lot can be accomplished by helping to take care of the game we have. Kill off the hawks, owls, and crows, keep the dogs up during the breeding season, feed the game birds and game animals when the ground is covered with snow, and co-operate with the Deputy Game Wardens."

The above was received from Mr. Diffendal, with request to publish. We fail to see in the restocking of game, anything but more sport for hunters, and more trespassing on property; with the request that farmers aid in making the sport more attractive.

WANT BOND ISSUE FOR SCHOOL BUILDINGS

Mass Meeting at Westminster Indorses the Proposition.

The Westminster correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, gives the following:

"A mass-meeting under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association of Carroll County was held at the Courthouse, this city, to consider proposed legislation providing for a bond issue in the county to provide funds for the erection of necessary school buildings.

More than 200 people were present, representing most of the election districts of the county. Dr. Thomas H. Legg, of Union Bridge, presided. William L. Seabrook read the bill prepared by him at the request of the Parent-Teachers' Association, the Board of Education and the County Commissioners. The measure specifies the school buildings to be erected or improved and the sums to be expended for each. The gross sum to be provided by bond issues is $600,000, to be applied as follows: $60,000 in Union Bridge, $75,000 in Sykesville, $50,000 in Manchester, $25,000 in Westminster, $100,000 in New Windsor for purchase of the Blue Ridge College property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to erect a new building, whichever may be thought most advantageous by the Board of Education; $25,000 in Mount Airy; $25,000, Winfield; $10,000, Charles Carroll School, and $5,000, Uniontown.

On motion of C. E. Easterday, of Union Bridge, a resolution was adopted requesting the Carroll county representatives to have the bill passed by the Legislature, with a referendum to the voters at a special election, to be held at a time to be agreed upon later, if the plan is successful.

"Inside" Information for Women.

Unbleached sheeting makes excellent slip-on covers for mattresses.

Try hot gingerbread, split and spread with cream cheese mixed with chopped dates and nuts.

Among the early vegetables which can be started in the house in flats or boxes are: Tomatoes, cabbage, peppers, cauliflower, celery and lettuce.

When drop cakes spread out too much in baking the trouble is sometimes that the oven is not hot enough, rather than the mixture is too soft. Drop cakes bake best on a baking sheet without high sides, or on an inverted pan.

The sheen on properly mercerized cotton is permanent. True mercerization makes cotton fabrics stronger, and very attractive in appearance. For summer dress goods, mercerized cottons are hard to equal. They are durable, cool, and easily laundered.

Painted furniture is attractive and much used nowadays, but don't paint all the furniture in the house just because you like to paint. If you have any furniture made of beautiful wood, such as mahogany, walnut, or others, it should not be painted, but refinished by an expert.

A rug that curls up and wrinkles on the edges needs resizing. Stretch it face down on the floor, tack it firmly and sprinkle generously with a solution made by soaking and dissolving one-quarter pound of flake glue in half a gallon of water. Let it dry for at least 24 hours. The glue should not penetrate to the right side of the rug.

In making chicken salad let the diced chicken meat stand several hours in a French dressing. This is called "marinating" it. If you like to make the most of the chicken flavor, use chicken fat instead of oil for this dressing, and give it a suggestion of onion flavor by soaking a few slices of onion in the vinegar before mixing with the fat. Use equal parts of chicken fat and vinegar.

Protection Against Corn Borer.

One of the most important methods of suppressing or controlling the European corn borer necessitates the destruction of infested material. This may be done to best advantage by burning, placing in silo, feeding to livestock, burying in heated manure, or plowing cleanly, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Burn cornstalks and stubble in spring or late winter when the stalks are in a dry condition.

Special attention should be given to the complete burning of all cornstalks, cobs and stubble which might harbor larvae. The process of shelling does not kill the borers in corn cobs, and in heavily infested regions all cobs should be burned immediately after shelling. Corn carried through the winter or the cob and not shelled before May 1 in such regions should be placed in a container so that the moths can not escape after emerging. A 12-mesh wire screen is satisfactory.

In disposing of cornstalks, they may be destroyed either by placing in the silo, shredding and feeding direct to livestock, plowing under, or burning. The practice of dragging fields of standing stalks with a pole or iron while the ground is frozen, and subsequently gathering and burning the broken stalks is recommended if followed by raking in windows, burning and plowing under of all debris.

United States immigration today is less than one-fourth that for 1907, the peak year of immigration.

HIGH PRICED LANDS

Largely the Cause of Demands for Farmer Legislation.

The real influence back of the McNary-Haugen farm bill that the President vetoed, is now coming out. In few words, Iowa, Minnesota, and to some extent other western states, are loaded down with abnormally priced farm lands, purchased at $500 and $600, or more, per acre, during the war boom. The same turn over occurred in Maryland, but not to so great an extent, nor at such abnormal prices.

The Iowa farmers who sold have taken their money and largely left the state, many going to California where they are living at ease. Those who bought the land, as well as the banks that loaned the money, were largely the ones backing the vetoed bill, hoping that through it they might find relief. It is said that 70,000 farms, in Iowa alone, changed hands at war boom prices.

This, of course, was not the sole reason for the strong backing of the bill. There are other reasons, west and east, why it was thought the bill would help agriculture, mostly in states, however, where land values are too high; and in all states there was a following "for" the bill, on the general principle that if there was "anything good" in sight, it might as well be had.

Kansas is reported to be one of the far west states that is not very sore over the veto. Better state laws and better business judgment, with better farming methods, finds the state prosperous; but everywhere in the west, as in the east, there is the hope that legislation may yet be passed, sounder in basis than the McNary-Haugen measure, that will be beneficial to farmers without arbitrarily raising prices on everybody else.

Pension After Fifty Years.

Eli Null, of this county, has been granted a pension of $50 per month, after he had his application before the war department for fifty years.

Mr. Null is 80 years old. He served in Company F, Third Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Infantry. He enlisted as a private on March 8, 1865, at Frederick, Md., and was honorably mustered out with his company on May 29, 1865, giving him in all less than 90 days of service. Under the present law, soldiers who served less than 90 days are not entitled to pensions. Upon recommendation of the War Department Mr. Null's claim was considered favorably, and a pension allowed him.

Pension bills passed at the closing session of the senate granted the pension to Mr. Null.

Frederick Man Sentenced.

T. A. Nokes, of Frederick, scholarly and dignified in appearance, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretense at Martinsburg, W. Va., Friday morning, and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. He was returned to jail after a tearful parting with his wife.

Nokes had been indicted by the grand jury of grand larceny. He had posed as a representative of a grain and seed corporation. He had obtained funds with he is said to have hypothecated. He was arrested in Frederick about four weeks ago.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Summary of the Week's Leading Events at Annapolis.

A measure authorizing the use of voting machines in elections in Baltimore city and in the counties was introduced in the Senate Tuesday by Senator Meyers, Sixth Legislative district of Baltimore city. It was referred to the Committee on Elections. The bill is permissive and not mandatory in character. If it is passed the Supervisors of Elections in Baltimore and the counties at their discretion would have the power to install voting machines in their respective jurisdictions and to use them in primary, general or special elections, both state and municipal.

Actual relief for widowed mothers is sought in a measure introduced in the House to make effective the Mothers' Relief act of 1916. By inadvertence the tax to be levied under it to provide funds for payment of the stipends set out was fixed at one-tenth of 1 mill, instead of one-tenth of 1 cent, which was intended.

Under the amendment, payments would be increased from $12 to $14 a month for the eldest child, from $10 to $12 for the next and $6 to $10 for each additional child provided that the total amounts shall not exceed $40 a month. The bill would strike out the limitation of one-tenth of one mill which shall be levied as tax to pay such pension and would make it mandatory on the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore city and County Commissioners to levy as much as may be necessary.

Mr. Rounton introduced three bills in the House; authorizing Hampstead to borrow $15,000; changing the Hampstead tax rate, regulating the use of public roads in Carroll county except those controlled by the State Road Commission.

The Crisfield "dry bill" passed the House. Passage of the bill was largely due to the attitude of E. Brooke Lee, Speaker, who said the Democratic platform favored home rule for States and counties in such matters, and if the people of Crisfield wanted such a law they ought to be permitted to have it, in as much as the drastic features had been eliminated. Some of the wet delegates challenged this and objected strongly the debate lasting nearly four hours.

The provision of the Maryland law, requiring separate railway cars or compartments on trains and separate compartments on steamships for Negro passengers, will be repealed if a measure introduced in the Senate today by Senator McCardell, Frederick county, is passed.

The present law only applies to Negro passengers being transported within the State. The bill was referred to the judicial proceedings committee.

The bill to abolish the Public Service Commission was defeated in the Senate.

The creation of a State debt of $210,000 to pay the present indebtedness of St. John's and Washington Colleges and for general building construction and equipment purposes at the latter institution, is asked by two bills introduced in the Senate.

The Garrett County Local Option bill passed in the Senate, on Thursday, 17 to 9, and it had already passed the House. This is taken as an indication that all local bills of this character will be passed.

The fate of the gasoline tax bill seems uncertain, a fight over the question having been quietly in progress all week.

A committee appointed by teachers of the State attended a joint meeting today of the committee on education of the Senate and the House and urged the adoption of the bill, create a retirement system for public school teachers.

As representatives of various organizations, more than fifty persons attended a meeting today of the Finance Committee of the Senate and asked that body to return a favorable report on the measure authorizing the State to raise $150,000 to be used in connection with the proposed construction of a plaza adjoining the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore.

L. F. Miller & Sons Fire Loss.

The L. F. Miller & Sons grain elevator, in Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire, on Monday morning. The building was owned by the Pennsylvania R. R., and operated under lease by the Miller firm. The building was a total loss and made a dangerous fire calling for the efforts of hundreds of firemen to control.

Fifty employees of the Railroad Company were in the building when the fire was discovered, all of whom escaped. The building was of frame construction, eight stories high.

The Millers are formerly from Detroit, this county, and are well known here for their business ability. We have not seen any statement of the loss, or of the insurance.

Marriage Licenses.

INFORMATION FOR FARMERS

Facts Worth Knowing on Various Every Day Topics.

A vast control offensive against the corn borer will be set in motion this spring in the hope of cutting damage to a minimum. And it will take a big fight. The corn borer is a pest of prime importance. Since 1917 when the pest was first seen in the United States, it has spread destruction over 93,000 square miles.

Other corn insect pests are often mistaken for the European corn borer, but none is equally serious. The corn earworm, the stalk-borer, smartweed borer, the lined stalk-borer, the large corn stalk-borer resemble the European corn borer in many ways. In fact, it takes a trained entomologist to tell some of these insect pests apart.

When warm weather begins in April or May, the European corn borers resume business. About the middle of May, a small hole is cut from the tunnel to allow the moth to escape. The hole is closed over with a thin partition of silk and the borer then spins a cocoon and goes into the pupa or resting stage. After remaining in the pupa stage about 19 days—until about the first week in June—the skin of the pupa splits and the fully developed adult or moth emerges into the light of the June day.

Sour milk, due to its acidity, seems to act as a mild internal disinfectant and should be kept before chicks all the time. If they have plenty of sour milk you won't need to give them any water during the first month.

Experiments show that size doesn't make much difference as to hatchability of eggs—but it does make a difference in the kinds of chicks you get. Good sized eggs as a rule, produce bigger and more vigorous chicks. Extra large eggs should not be used at all.

A 50-pound calf at birth should have about 8 pounds or a gallon of milk a day, and one weighing 80 to 90 pounds about a gallon and a half. It is better to give too little at the start than too much. Feed the milk at the same temperature—about 90 degrees—all the time.

Always use particular care in building a milk-house floor. Concrete is the best material for the purpose. It resists moisture, decay and wear. Make the top coat one inch thick of 1 part cement and 2 parts sand; the base five inches thick of 1 part cement, 3 parts sharp, clean sand, and 5 parts stone.—U. S. Dept. Agriculture.

President Coolidge Going West for Summer Vacation.

President Coolidge has decided to spend the summer somewhere in the west, and make a first-hand study of farm conditions. The probability seems to be that he will select a location west of the Mississippi, where the altitude is reasonably high.

During the summer it is probable that Mr. Coolidge will make several speeches, but it is unlikely that they will have a political tinge, or give any inkling as to his intentions a year hence, when Presidential nominees will be selected.

In establishing a summer home in the West, Mr. Coolidge will be the first President to do so since the days of McKinley, who went back to his home town in Canton, O., for extended summer visits. Since then Presidents have made excursions into the West, sometimes going to the Coast, but none of them tarried at any one point for any length of time.

Since entering the White House Mr. Coolidge, who made a transcontinental trip while Vice-President, has been as far West as Omaha and Kansas City to deliver speeches, and on one occasion went into Minnesota to speak at the Norse centennial. He has received invitations to visit every State west of Pittsburgh, dozens of desirable summer homes having been placed at his disposal.

Tuberculosis Among Colored People.

Tuberculosis, Dr. Fulton says causes one out of every ten deaths among the colored people and is the leading cause of death in the colored population. The same disease causes one out of every sixteen deaths among the white population and has fifth place in the causes of death in the white population.

The death rate among the colored babies is also much higher than that of the white babies, in some counties being twice or even three times as great among the colored babies. For reasons of this sort, he said, emphasis is placed in all health programs on the importance of constructive health work and on the establishment of health habits among the colored people.

No Appropriation for Radio.

The new Radio law, intended to give a special commission "control of the air", finds itself without an appropriation for its operations, the Senate having failed, through its last week of filibustering, to pass the second deficiency bill that included the appropriation. It has been suggested to President Coolidge that he declare a "National emergency" in the broadcasting field, and take over the directing authority himself.

The United States has more than 90,000 miles of oil-pipe line. Oklahoma alone has 19,180 miles, while California, though the leading state in production is only seventh in pipeline mileage, because most of the California wells are near or on the seacoast.

Anti-Coolidge papers, that approved of his veto of the so-called "farm relief" bill, are nevertheless featuring as news, every knock that the President is getting because of the veto. That may be good partisan politics, but it isn't decent honesty.

The Senate in its last two weeks, gave Vice-President Dawes a lot more good arguments to use against the Senate rules—first hand arguments in actual operation. And by the way Mr. Dawes is making a very competent presiding officer, whether he relishes the job, or the rules, or not.

The Philadelphia Ledger says: "If no better reason can be given for legalized racetrack gambling in Pennsylvania than that it would turn about $2,500,000 over to the highway department, the legislation should have nothing to do with the measure." How unkind it is to hand out such a "cut" to a just across the line neighbor!

A lot of warm Republicans dislike Frank R. Kent's political first pages in the Baltimore Sun. Well, there is this much to be said for Mr. Kent. He uses good English, attractively put together; he does not profess to be anything but a Democrat; and all of his articles are labeled—like radio attractions they are "announced"—and one has the choice of "tuning them out" and listening to something else.

Instalment Buying.

We have at different times remarked rather disparagingly of the "instalment plan" in making purchases, perhaps not always properly qualifying our objections, which we now desire to do. The "instalment" plan that we consider harmful and wrong, is when a business is conducted on such a plan and in such a way, that abnormal prices are quoted, and the total payments, when made, are above a fair price with fair interest added.

And when, in conjunction with such plan, persons are persuaded to go into debt, often for the unnecessary of life, or of home keeping, perhaps of inferior quality. It is the "instalment" plan as a "bait," that is harmful. Even though we may argue that such contracts are voluntarily entered into, and there is nothing actually illegitimate in the contract, it is a form of encouragement toward debt that appeals to many who should not incur debt. It is "salesmanship" at its worst.

Partial payments on real estate, or on money regularly borrowed, or on mortgages, represent "instalment" payments, but hardly the "instalment plan" that we have in mind. Almost any form of credit may be accompanied by partial payments. The bulk of the business of the country is carried on through credit of some sort; but, whenever credit is encouraged to the extent of making very small cash payments and the balance payable at stated times over a long period, there is the likelihood of the credit business being overdone.

The same danger is involved in mortgage and bond issues. As long as they are restricted to things needed, and to emergencies, or for the purpose of actually making a saving of some sort, such contracts are next to invaluable. But running into bond issues or debt as a habit, and through encouragement, is another matter; and so it is with the credit business in general, including "instalment" buying.

It is much too easy, these days, to get credit. There are encouragements innumerable to buy things, and pay later; and not enough encouragement to "save up" and buy with cash.

There are too many skilfully made plans to encourage debt for non-essentials, and not enough in the direction of "saving up." All of this may not make our ideas clear on the subject; but there are some right times for "instalment" buying, as well as many more wrong ones, and it is the latter that should be warned against.

Is There a Growing Sentiment Against Prohibition?

Most of the large dailies speak of "a growing sentiment against the Volstead law." The cry is so unanimous on the part of the dailies as to be suspicious. We wonder whether these same newspapers ever consider that if there is a "growing sentiment" they are aiding to the extent of their influence in the growth? Also, whether they consider the full weight of their responsibility for the consequences of doing so?

From our point of view, we believe that if the leading men and leading newspapers of the country had supported the Constitution of the United States, in this particular, from the enactment of the 18th. Amendment, there would not now be this "growing sentiment," either claimed, or as a fact, in this country today. It is also our point of view, that there is little real foundation, except the newspapers say-so, for the claimed growth.

If the editors and managers of the newspapers are genuinely truthful, it is a strange—almost unprecedented—situation, that they should all voluntarily and conscientiously agree to combat the constitution on this one lone point, that has such a wide influence in the direction sanctioning the use of intoxicants, and in fact strikes at the root of government itself.

Considering the none too great popular desire of many classes to respect government and order, the newspapers are taking a stand to encourage anti-law and anti-constitution sentiment that can not be disregarded, nor the responsibility overlooked. Law enforcement ought not be a dead issue coupled with the so-called "blue laws" and the revival of "states rights."

So, it would be far better and safer for our country, we think, for the newspapers to err on the side of constitutional government and strict law enforcement, than to err on the side of the enemies of these foundations of the United States—without even considering such questions as morality and sobriety.

Texas Election Laws Declared Unconstitutional.

The laws of Texas, keeping some 370,000 negroes from the polls, were declared unconstitutional, on Monday, by a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, the substance of it being that "the laws of all states must stand for the black, as well as the white."

The decision was announced by Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes who said the Texas law was a "direct infringement of the Fourteenth Amendment." The case was brought by a Negro who wanted to vote at the Democratic primary, but was refused.

From One Muddle to Another.

The County Commissioners muddle seems to have been settled. Whether it was settled right, or wrong, is a matter of opinion. But, the settling of the make-up of the Board has not settled the problem of what is to be done about more school buildings, and more good roads.

Roads and schools can not be constructed without money, either borrowed, or provided by increased taxation; and Carroll County taxes are already burdensome, and an object of criticism. So, here is a real problem. More new school buildings are needed, and more roads are wanted.

Therefore, considering the pressure that is sure to be brought on the Board of Commissioners, to our way of thinking the unsuccessful candidates are not without the consolation, that they need not worry over the situation that the present board has inherited.

Of course, there is the bond issue remedy. Such an issue, made large enough to cover wanted schools and roads, would be a large one—perhaps over $1,000,000. It would be possible to present, and perhaps have passed, a bond issue bill at this session of the legislature; but this would call for a referendum, and either a wait of two or four years—or, a special election which in itself would be an expensive proposition, our regular elections costing something like $8000. The whole problem, therefore, is a difficult one to work out.

The Dying Congress.

The dying Congress has done about all that was expected of a short session. The main supply bills were approved. The Banking Bill was enacted. The Farm Relief Bill went through to a veto. Radio control was passed. Both houses acted favorably upon the bill to reorganize the prohibition service.

On the whole, the House got along better than the Senate. Usually it does. The Senate went filibuster-cloture crazy at the end. For days and nights it deadlocked over the purely political question of what committee should deal with the Vare-Wilson contest from Pennsylvania. Hardly a legislative wheel moved while Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, tried to destroy the Special Inquiry Committee, led by that other Senator Reed, of Missouri.

Certain bills of considerable importance were lost or imperiled, while the Senate made a show of itself. It has been a wearisome business; so wearying that a disgusted Senate is inclined to turn more and more to the cloture method of speeding legislation in the future.

Filibusters may be regrettable, but so is a too-often resort to cloture. It is probable hereafter that one of the first moves is enacting a bill will be the passing around of a cloture petition. No wonder many Senators are worried about the spectacle the Senate has offered to the Nation during the last week!—Phila. Ledger.

Kaiser's Experts Let Big Opportunity Pass

Colonel Deport, inventor of the "75," the rapid-firing gun that saved France, died a few years after the war. Before he passed away the colonel wrote the story of the gun and revealed how France came within an ace of losing the plans and models long before the war. When the first models had been constructed, they were carefully sealed in a freight car and shipped to an isolated section of the country for a tryout. The car was by mistake hooked up to a goods train, destined for Germany and actually landed on German soil. The Germans opened the car and immediately officers of the artillery school came down to examine the guns minutely. But they let them go again, reporting that no officer would be able to manage a battery of guns that could each fire a hundred shots per minute. And so the gun came back, though the Germans managed to make an imperfect copy. The real secret of the hydro-pneumatic was never mastered in Germany, even in 1914, when the kaiser's armies captured plenty of models.—Pierre Van Paassen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

Napoleon Unique in Capacity for Work

Napoleon "could work for eighteen hours for a stretch at one subject or many." No 8-hour day for him. "Never," says Roederer, "have I seen his mind weary; never have I seen his mind without spring; not in the strain of body, wrath or the most violent exercise." One of his ministers complained that "it would require a constitution of iron to go through with what we do. After a day's ride in a carriage we no sooner alight than we mount on horseback and sometimes remain in our saddles for ten or twelve hours successively." In his fortieth year Napoleon rode ninety miles without stirrups in five hours and a half. His surgeon, Percy, said that he was "made of iron, soul and body, always on horseback, galloping about in all weathers, bivouacking, working like ten men, never ill, never tired." Even his enemies declared that Napoleon had a capacity for work equal to that of four other men.—Scientific Monthly.

Few Truffles in America

Truffles are subterranean fungi, and in Europe, especially in France, are collected quite extensively for food. While a few varieties of truffles or related forms are found growing wild in this country, their cultivation is not a commercial proposition. It is recognized that truffles grow especially in association with certain oaks, and some years ago the Department of Agriculture imported and distributed two or three species of these oaks, but the industry has never really been developed in this country. Abroad, in regions where truffles are abundant, they are collected by aid of a dog or pig, or small animal having a keen sense of smell. Truffle hunting is an important business and requires considerable experience and knowledge of forests.

First "Elevator" Ideas

The first parents of the today's elevator came into being in Europe in the reign of Louis XIV, and began the revolt of weary legs against the age-long tyranny of dark, corkscrew stairs. The first in date, 1670, was the "curious invention" by which an Italian duchess (of Turin) conveyed herself to her bath. Worked by a pulley and swing (counterweight), it was in the form of a cage, and held one person standing up, who could ascend or descend at will. It was covered with green velvet, and the ropes—for signaling "up" or "down"—were of silk. A similar elevator was said to be in the Palais Mazarin in Paris.

Clever Dog Thief

Within five days the police of Abington, Pa., received reports that 51 quart bottles of milk placed on as many doorsteps had been tapped and the cream extracted. The only clew was that in each milk bottle cap a hole was punctured and the cap lifted from the bottle. Watchers then solved the mystery. The thief was a big collie dog with more than usual intelligence. The dog punctured the cardboard tops with one of his fangs, lifted out the caps and thus was able to lap out the cream with his tongue.

The community was shocked, on Saturday, when they learned that John Kerr, Seventh Grade teacher, was in the lockup at Hanover, charged with driving a car without operator's license on his person, under the influence of intoxicants, 3 bottles in car, and for having hit a car parked on Baltimore St., and going on without offering assistance.

Three other occupants of the car at time of collision were not in the car when a motorcycle policeman overtook the car at Mt. Olivet cemetery. They were two High School Sophomore girls and the teacher (gentleman) of a nearby rural school. Mr. Kerr was bailed out to appear at April Court. Mr. Kerr showed his wisdom following this experience better than before, by voluntarily resigning his position, thus forestalling the need of its request due to unpleasant charges being preferred against him.

This incident is but an evidence of the fruits of a community whose sentiment is still as wet as the Atlantic Ocean, in these prohibition days. One of the results of the lark which might have been fatal, was the attempt on the part of one of the girls when her part was learned, to commit suicide by imbibing iodine. This may leave irreparable physical consequences and a moral and social stigma which time can not efface.

And all this because of the arguments of folks of fifty years or more with 3rd. grade intelligence vociferously exploding that the 18th. Amendment is an infringement of their "personal liberty" and who break it every time they want to and can. Is it not about time that the rights of the mothers of sons and daughters are of more importance than the appetites of rumsoaks? How long will the Lord withhold his vengeance?

Tribe Named "Seneca"

by Dutch Colonists

Seneca is not properly an Indian name. It became the designation of one of the Iroquoian Five Nations by a curiously roundabout way, according to the explanation given in the "Handbook of American Indians," published by the bureau of American ethnology.

The five great tribes of the Iroquois were the Mohawks, the Oneidas, the Onondagas, the Cayugas and the Senecas. When the Tuscaroras were admitted to the confederation it became the Six Nun-da-wa-o-no, "the great hill people," and that was the name of their oldest village, situated on a hill at the head of Lake Canandagua. Their cousins and allies the Oneidas were "the people of the standing stone"—the Onenlute-o-ka or Onenlute-ron-non, and the name Oneida is simply an Anglicized simplification of the tribal name.

The Dutch settlers of New York first came to know the Five Nations through their nearer neighbors, the Mohegans. The Mohegans called the Oneidas the Skinneken, a translation of "standing stone" into the Mohegan tongue. But the Dutch, adopting the term, applied it to several tribes of western and central New York, to only one of which, the Oneida, was it properly applicable. Then "the name Skinneken became the tribal name of the Seneca by a process of elimination which excluded from the group and from the connotation of the general name the nearer tribes as each, with its own proper native name, became known to the Europeans."

The other settlers followed the Dutch in employing the term, and thus "the great hill people" had fastened upon them the name of another tribe, in another tongue. And even this under the influence of the Roman name, became modified into Seneca.

Power From Peanut Oil.

It seems that one of the advantages of the Diesel oil engines lies in its ability to produce power by burning not only the cheapest grades of natural mineral oils and the by-products of coal distillation and coke plants, tar and creosote oils, but also vegetable and animal oils. Indeed, it is said it can use peanut oil almost as effectively as mineral oil.

The use of fat oils from vegetable sources for fuel will, it is predicted, promote industrial development in regions where the cost of coal is prohibitive—in northern Africa, for instance, and in many parts of our own country. It is declared that those oils make it certain that motive power can still be produced from the heat of the sun, even when all our natural sources of solid and liquid fuels are exhausted. —Washington Star

In Sad But Loving Remembrance of our dear brother, LUTHER A. ECKARD,
who suddenly departed this life, March 1st, 1927.

Short and sudden was the call,
Of one so dearly loved by us all;
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near.

The midnight stars are gleaming,
Upon a silent grave;
Where sleeping without dreaming,
Lies the one we could not save.

Farewell, dear brother, thou are at rest,
And will forever be;
You could not stay on earth with us,
But we can come to thee.

By his Brother-in-law and wife,
MR. and MRS. RUSSELL REINAMAN.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to friends and neighbors, who so kindly helped through the death and burial of our husband and father.

Silk Socking Ingratitude

David Clark, the textile expert, said at a dinner in Charlotte:

"Woman won't help the cotton grower in his extremity by wearing cotton stockings, and this is a piece of ingratitude towards a class of men to whom we owe much.

"Ingratitude!" An Englishman said to his children one day:

"Yes, children, David Lloyd George saved his country in the dark days of the World war just as truly as Joan of Arc saved France."

"Then, father, piped a little girl, why didn't they burn him to death?"

Coincidence, of Course!

For three weeks the San Quentin (Calif.) penitentiary had received no prisoners from Los Angeles and the officials were puzzled. Then all was explained. Los Angeles had saved up for three weeks and gathered thirty-six prisoners. Fourteen deputies were required to take charge of the new guests of the state. Exactly fourteen Los Angeles deputy officials had tickets for the California-Stanford game that day at Berkeley.

Much-Married Savage King

Dr. Daniel Crawford, the famous missionary who recently died on the Congo, was for seven years the prisoner and friend of King Mushudi, a savage with 500 wives.

"Crawford," said a Chicago misfortune, "used to spin many a thrilling yarn about Mushudi, his human sacrifices, his almost daily slaughter of a wife or two for proven infidelity.

"For his wives were very unfaithful, though their seclusion was terribly strict. Crawford would tell Mushudi sometimes to give the young women more liberty, and in return they would be truer to him, but Mushudi would sneer and quote the proverbs of his race.

"What proverbs they were! I remember three or four. They run like this:

"For whom does the blind man's young wife adorn herself?"

"In the kraal trust not your wife too far or your friend too near."

"A woman who sits at the window is like a fig-tree planted on the highway."

Doors to Human Mind

There are seven doors to the human mind, according to Prof. Victor Alvin Ketcham, who is a specialist in expression at Ohio State university, his announcement having been made at a meeting of the advertising club in Boston recently. He listed the seven as follows: Visual, auditory, motor, tactile, olfactory, gustatory and thermic. Orators can be rated according to their ability to open one or more of these doors, possession of all being an important power in developing the art of making people see the facts the speaker is presenting.—Ohio State Journal.

Rotor Kites

The lifting ability of kites used for meteorological purposes has been improved by the addition of the Flettner-rotor-apparatus, which had previously been applied with success to increase the speed of ships at sea, and which had even displaced sails on an experiment ship. At the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the aeronautical observatory at Lindenberg, Germany, Dr. Hugo Hergesell, its distinguished director, gave a public demonstration of the successful application of this new principle to kite flying.

Didn't Hatch

A school teacher relates that she was giving her small pupils a lesson on birds, and after telling about the hatching of the eggs, the care of the mother bird and the first lessons in flying, she said: "Now, children, I am the mother bird and you are the little birds nestled in your cozy nest. I want you all to spread your wings and fly away."

Each child, waving arms to the music she beat, skipped to the dressing room, with the exception of one little fellow who remained motionless in his seat. Turning to him, she said: "Donald, why didn't you fly away with all the other little birds?" "Cause," came the prompt and unexpected reply, "Cause I was a bad egg."—Boston Transcript.

Many Postage Stamps

The little postage stamp is one of a huge family. There were more than 18,000,000,000 of them born in Washington last year, being sufficient for supplying each man, woman and child in the country with 160. They represented a face value of $450,000,000 and required 900 tons of paper and $70,000 pounds of ink in their manufacture at the bureau of engraving and printing. Placed end to end they would girdle the earth eleven times. The cost of producing them was about one cent for each 125.

Cockfighting Is Being Revived in England

Derby, England.—Cockfighting is being slowly revived in England, notwithstanding the law against it. During the present week a fight was secretly staged in one the Derbyshire hills. A large crowd witnessed seven battles in which five birds were killed and two maimed. The sweepstakes totaled $2,000 and there was considerable betting. "Cocker" societies are said to exist in almost every county in England and fights are staged without interference by the police.

Describing Charity.

"Pa, what is charity?" "Charity, my boy, is something which nobody likes to ask for, but everybody is glad to get. It is best when it is remembered by the receiver and forgotten by the giver. It shines brightest as a duty, and becomes dull and odious as a favor, later to be boasted of."

THE BONDS THAT HOLD

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

THE day when Lella and Tommy came into the life of Jim Peters was his reddest of red letter days. He always saw the scene just as he had seen it then. The early snows had begun to whiten the hills, and Peters had driven his stock down into the lower country for the winter pastures.

He was sitting in his hut, thinking over things. At thirty, he felt vaguely that he ought to be doing better for himself. Not that he wanted to leave the cattle country for the city. But life in a two-room shack, where he cooked his own meals and made his own bed, was becoming unbearable.

Most of the settlers of his age were already married. The settlement was beginning to prosper. Neat little flower beds appeared round the houses and the young wives were very gaily dressed upon occasions. A church had been built; altogether it was a place for a young man with two thousand dollars in the bank to rejoice in.

But Jim had always lived a lonely life; he did not know how to change it. Too bashful to make advances to any of the town girls whom he saw on his rare visits, and with a vague feeling that he wanted a wife of a special, hardly defined type, something above the common run, he was brooding in his chair when there came a tap at the door.

It was a timid tap, such as he had never heard. The men who tapped at Jim's door hammered with hairy fists until he opened to them. Jim opened now, and was amazed to see a woman and a boy outside.

Both were thinly clad and shivering from the cold. Nevertheless the woman did not attempt to enter, but only asked where lodging could be obtained.

She had come in on the evening train, she said. She offered no further explanation, but it was evident that she was gently bred. The look of weariness in her eyes haunted Jim for days.

He took her down the hill to a woman of the valley. The hospitality of the West prevailed over suspicion. The stranger and her son were given shelter.

Next day Lella Drayton, as she called herself, went to work for one of the richer settlers. But soon she was asked to fill a pressing need. The children were growing up and, in spite of its advantages, there was no school in the valley. She became the schoolmistress.

Speculation was rife about her. She never mixed with the valley people, never talked about her past. And the West accepts women as well as men for what they are, and asks no questions.

The days grew into weeks, into months. Jim Peters often found occasion to saddle his horse and ride down into the valley. He and the boy became fast friends. But Lella was as indifferent to him as to the other men.

Perhaps Jim would never have found the opportunity he craved, of becoming her friend, but for an accident. The boy was straying on the railroad embankment in search of birds' eggs. His mother was with him, but seated a little distance behind the rise. Jim, watching them impatiently from the other side, knew that the afternoon train was due.

Becoming uneasy, he hurried across the valley. He was just on the opposite ridge when he heard the train in the distance. The sound, which burst forth suddenly as the train came out of the tunnel, startled the boy, perched on a ledge. He lost his footing and fell twenty feet, to lie unconscious across the rails. At the same time the mother rose, discovered him and screamed.

Jim plunged down the steep embankment, seized the boy, snatched him from the rails and covered with him against the cliff, while the train went sweeping by, so near that the draft almost blew him from where he had planted himself. Afterward the boy opened his eyes.

The distracted mother knelt before Jim with her hands clasped. "How can I thank you?" she cried. "He is everything I have, he is everything in the world to me."

"Be my friend," said Jim holding out his hand. That was Jim's chance. Friendship ripened. One day he asked her to become his wife. Then the strange look of fear that he knew so well came into her eyes.

"No, you must not ask me that," she said. "I shall never marry again." And, seeing Jim's distress, she added: "I will tell you the truth. I am a runaway wife. I cannot speak ill of my husband now. I could have borne with his infidelities, with his abuse, but—I did not want my boy to grow up to be like him."

It was weeks afterward that she told him all. Her husband was a wealthy man. When she found that she could endure life with him no longer she had run away, penniless, save for her railroad ticket. He had one redeeming quality; he loved his son. On this account she knew that he would leave no stone unturned to find them.

Jim went away, sorrowing. He knew now that she could never be his. For she shrank instinctively, he felt without asking, from the publicity of divorce. Besides, to seek divorce would be to put her husband on her trail. She wanted to let the years roll between them, creating an ever widening barrier, until she felt that the past could never stretch out its grisly hand upon her.

So the months changed into years. It was nearly three years since Lella's coming when something happened which Jim had always known to be inevitable.

It was morning, and he was on the high pastures with his cattle when he saw her running toward him, with the boy, scrambling up the steep hillside. She reached him; her face was white with fear.

"He has found me!" she gasped. "O, save me! Help me!"

Up the road came the toot of an auto horn. Jim saw the car climb the grade like a heavy locomotive. And in the ensuing interval of silence he made his resolution.

The car stopped. A man leaped out, a man in the prime of life, absurdly strong, absurdly healthy, with the bluster and yet the sense of power that sometimes accompany the successful man.

He leaped to the ground and advanced upon the woman, smiling. Jim barred his path.

"My wife," he said.

"I know," answered Jim.

"See here, young man. You don't perhaps understand. I am here to claim my own, my legal own, my wife and child. She has nothing to fear from me. I have never laid my hands upon her. Stand out of my path."

"You may have a legal right," said Jim, "but you ain't going to take her."

The man laughed, whipped off his coat, and displayed a pair of muscular arms. "Her lover?" he sneered.

"God witness, there has never been love between us," answered Jim.

The woman sprang between them. "Jim, he is right," she said. "Now he has found me, I must go with him."

Jim, amazed at the change of attitude, stood absolutely mute. The man nodded.

"Good for you," he said. "Lella, the past is past. 'You'll never hear of it from me. It's only for the boy's sake I want you back. And I guess—you'll be happier than you were."

Mechanically the girl entered the auto. They lifted the boy inside. The horn tooted. They were gone. And Jim stared foolishly after them.

How strong the bonds between husband and wife! She was gone out of his life. He had never dreamed of such a thing. But why had she gone with him, when he was ready to fight for her?

Jim did not understand women, their changes, their sense of duty coming in so oddly at critical moments. Like a man in a dream he watched the car shoot down the hill.

It was going very fast. The brake was damaged by the rough road, in fact, but Jim did not know that. All he thought was that it was going very fast toward the cutting. And suddenly there came the roar of the train leaving the tunnel.

The auto shot forward. It was now evidently beyond control. Jim began to run.

But he was much too far away to be of any help. As he ran he saw the dreadful picture: the train racing along the narrow cutting, the auto caught and overturned; the desperate efforts of the occupants to free themselves.

Then he saw the man stagger to his feet, lift the boy in his arms and toss him to the farther bank. The train was almost upon him, a hissing snorting monster with flaming breath. But he caught up the woman in his arms and flung her clear of the rails; and the next instant the train was upon him, bearing him down grinding out his life beneath its wheels, tearing the decapitated body along the way and passing onward.

Jim was sick with horror when he reached the scene, to find that the woman and the boy still lived. He knelt before Lella, trying to shield her from the knowledge of what had happened. Then, picking her up, he carried her to the top of the embankment. And the look on her face told him that she knew.

So mixed was life, so mixed the qualities for good and evil in all. This man she hated had given his life for her. Some gate in Jim's brain went down at that moment, and he knew that life must be faced very soberly thenceforward—even with her.

Ancient Wedding Rings
The Egyptians, probably, were the first people to use a wedding ring. Primitive men, however, made cords and bound round the waists of women they wished to marry, and later it became customary to bind the wrists and ankles of the woman. It is probable that the ring as we now know it originated from one or both of these customs. In Anglo-Saxon days the man placed a ring on the woman's right hand, where it remained until the marriage ceremony, when the bridegroom transferred it to her left hand.

Civil War Landmarks
The superintendent of Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military park says that the small buildings known as the "Kelly house and barn" occupy the sites of log structures in existence at the time of the battle of Chickamauga. The farm on which they were located is referred to in the official reports as a part of the Union line under General Thomas, that extended around the Kelly field. The buildings are maintained as landmarks, identifying the positions of troops engaged in the battle.

AMERICANS HEROIC IN ARMENIA QUAKE

Doctors and Nurses Aid Victims of Disaster.

Moscow.—A stirring story of American heroism in the face of a disaster has reached here in a telegram from the American Near East relief committee in Leninkan in the heart of the Armenian earthquake district where 400 were killed and thousands injured.

While the earth rocked beneath them and the panic-stricken population fled madly through the streets, the American doctors and nurses operated all night long on the earthquake victims in the open air. The committee telegraphed:

"The earthquake centralized in the Kars-Leninkan district. Erivan was not touched. Twelve towns were totally destroyed and thirteen others practically wiped out. Hundreds were killed and thousands injured. Over 600 houses were destroyed in Leninkan. The damage to the Near East Relief buildings was considerable. Heroic work was done by the American and native personnel. Our doctors and nurses operated on victims all night during the continued shocks.

"The government transferred cases to our houses on account of their buildings being shattered. Our hospital was evacuated and we worked under tents. The orphans and the American personnel miraculously escaped injuries. The government's martial law is efficiently controlling the situation. The entire population is sleeping in parks and fields in the crudest shelters."

Billion-Year-Old Fossils

Discovered by Scientists

Washington.—Fossil deposits of the earliest known animal life on earth, dating back between one and two billions of years, furnished the material for field work in Utah and Montana, from which Dr. Charles E. Resser and Erwin R. Pohn, Smithsonian paleontologists, have just returned.

These fossils are found in the Cambrian rocks. They consist mainly of trilobites—a crustacean life which became extinct about the time the coal measures were deposited. Their closest modern relative is the brine shrimps, curious creatures abundant in the Great Salt lake and in the Dead sea. A billion and a half years ago these trilobites were the dominant life in the sea, there being, so far as is known, no land animals. Up to the present time about 2,000 different kinds of them are known from the Cambrian alone. Ultimately this number may reach 5,000.

A few fossils have been found in rocks older than the Cambrian, but in the Cambrian life flourished suddenly into startling abundance. It is only in comparatively recent years that life has been known in the Cambrian. Fifty years ago geologists believed the Ordovician, two periods later than the Cambrian, contained the oldest life. But the life-long work of Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, proved the older view to be incorrect.

Reach Same Opera Post
From Poverty and Wealth

New York.—Two American artists in the San Carlo Opera company this season have careers in marked contrast.

Rose des Rosiers, who sings Marguerite in "Faust," is a French-Canadian girl from Holyoke, Mass. Miss Rosiers struggled for years against the poverty that stalked an orphaned family of 19 children, of whom she was the youngest. After singing in theaters and bands for a time to earn a livelihood, she was found by a wealthy Holyoke woman, and sent to Paris to complete her career.

In contrast is the seventeen-year-old Boston society girl, Lucretia Goddard, who made her operatic debut also as Marguerite in "Faust." She is a soprano, whose achievements have been attended by every assistance from her wealthy and influential family.

Wins Scouts' Highest Honor for Heroism
New York.—The heroism of John J. Henley, a boy scout of Evanston, Wyo., in saving a companion from drowning at the risk of his own life, has been rewarded with the gold medal of honor, the highest decoration in the boy scout organization. It was announced at national headquarters, 200 Fifth avenue. The award was made by the national court of honor, and was accompanied by a certificate for heroism and a letter from Daniel Carter Beard, national scout commissioner.

Young Henley's exploit occurred on August 15, 1925. It was remarkable in that he is only fourteen years old, four feet ten inches tall and weighs 90 pounds, whereas the boy he rescued, Ernest Donnellan, was four inches taller and out-weighted him by 18 pounds, though of the same age.

Stone Lantern Is Old

Probably the most picturesque, artistic and enduring object in the realm of Japanese art is the stone lantern. Its origin is unknown, but it is believed that it was first made to illuminate the road at night to protect travelers from attacks by robbers. Whatever its origin, the stone lantern is believed to have been in existence for more than 13 centuries. This view is maintained on the belief that the stone lantern in the compound of the Kitsu temple in Yamato was erected at the time when the temple was built by Prince Shotoku some 13 centuries ago.

All From a Tooth

If you ever go to the Metropolitan museum in New York you will see some specimens of "prehistoric men," men who have lived before we had any history. The question is, how do we know they existed? Nobody has even seen a living man like the ones they have modeled there.

Some of these strange specimens are built up and written about when all we actually have seen or found out about them is one tooth. Imagine building a man and telling his life story from a tooth!

From the tooth, scientists tell what he ate and the size of his jaw and what sort of a head he must have had, and then go on and guess all sorts of interesting things about him until they have built up enough information to model a man who will fit the single tooth they have found.

The Faith of Woman

Scattergood McL. Harris, the eminent Pittsburg divorce lawyer, was praising the faith and trust of woman. "A young woman," he said, "said to me the other day with a laugh: 'Isn't it simply incredible how careless the post-office people are?' 'Careless?' said I. 'How so?' 'Why,' she said, 'take, for example, the case of Pete.' Pete was her rich and profligate young husband. 'Here's Pete,' she went on, 'being kept in that nasty, dirty city of Altoona, hard at work in the rolling mills for the past month, and every blessed letter I get from him is postmarked Palm Beach.'"

Moose's Little Joke

On the day before the closed season ended, a big bull moose strolled across the bridge from Milford to Oldtown, Maine, and placidly took in the sights. The time chosen was 8:30 a. m., and the moose moved leisurely through the business section, quite unaware by autos, trolleys, and human beings. After a thorough survey he vanished in the woods. No one interfered with his visit, but the fact that it was timed so nicely excited due comment among the Yankees.—The Outlook.

Just Cause for Murder

What's the use?
An Indianapolis woman recently made a trip to her old home town, where she had not visited for at least 20 years. In preparation for her homecoming she bought a lot of new clothes, among them an expensive hat of which she was very proud.
So imagine her surprise when, on the very first day of her visit, she met an old acquaintance, a man, of course, who greeted her with this remark, "I knew right away it was you; I remembered that old hat you used to wear."

MAKING THE WORLD CHRISTIAN

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 28:16-20; Acts 16:6-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore and teach all nations.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Everybody About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Winning the World
for Christ.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—How We Can Spread the Gospel.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Christian Missions the Hope of the World.

I. The Great Commission (Matt.
28:16-20).

1. When and where given (v. 16).

It was shortly before the ascension in a mountain in Galilee where the disciples met Jesus according to appointment.

2. The foundation upon which the commission rests (vv. 17, 18).

In order to prepare the disciples to receive this commission, Christ declared to them that all power in heaven and in earth was given unto Him. Before the disciples would enter upon the execution of this commission they must be convinced of His Lordship. To create doubt in the minds of believers as to the deity of Jesus Christ is to cut the nerve of missionary endeavor.

3. What the commission is (vv. 19, 20).

1. "Go—teach all nations" (v. 19).

This means make disciples of all the nations, not Jews merely.

(2) "Baptize them in the name of the Triune God" (v. 19).

Those who have become disciples of the Lord should receive the rite which signifies their relation to him.

(3) "Teach them to observe all Christ's commandments" (v. 20).

Those who have become Christ's disciples should be taught obedience to all His commandments.

4. The promise attached (v. 20).

Those who obey the king in evangelizing the world have the promise of His unfailing presence.

II. Forbidden by the Holy Spirit to Preach in Asia Minor (Acts 16:6-8).

The inclination of Paul and his companions was to tarry in Asia Minor preaching the Word, but contrary to their inclination they were hurried along. We have here a fine lesson on divine guidance. The Holy Spirit is just as active and faithful in closing doors as in opening them.
"The steps as well as the steps of good men are ordered of the Lord."
We ought as truly to recognize God's hand in the "shut-ins" as in the "open-outs."

III. The Call to Macedonia (Acts 16:9-12).

The gospel having broken the confines of the Jewish city and country, the middle wall of partition having been abolished, the time has come for it to leap across the Aegean sea and begin its conquest on another continent.

1. The vision (v. 9).

Being hemmed in on all sides, a vision was given to Paul of a man of Macedonia pleading for help. This made plain to him the closed doors about him. In finding the divine will, we should look both ways.

2. The advance (v. 10-12).

As soon as the divine way was known they moved forward therein.

IV. The First Convert in Europe
(vv. 13-15).

The devout people were accustomed to worship by the riverside. To this humble gathering Paul came and preached to the women assembled there. A certain woman from Thya-tra named Lydia, a proselyte, believed his message and was baptized.

The steps in Lydia's conversion are worthy of note for they are typical:

1. Attendance at the place of worship (v. 13).

Usually those whom God is calling are found at the place of prayer.

2. Listening to the preaching of the Word of God (vv. 13, 14).

The instrument used in the conversion of sinners is the Word of God (Rom. 10:17).

3. Her heart was opened by the Lord (v. 14).

Only the Lord can convert a soul.
It is our business to preach the Word of God, and it is God's business to open the heart of the inquirer.

4. She was baptized (v. 15).

Every one whose heart the Lord has opened desires to confess Him in baptism.

5. Her household believed (v. 15).

When one is converted those in the home will find it out.

6. Practiced hospitality (v. 15).

Those who have experienced God's saving grace are thus disposed to have part in His work by rendering aid to His ministers.

Pursuit of Happiness

Many people are on the wrong scant in pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting, and being served by others. It consists in giving and in serving others.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Salvation

Salvation is not from you, nor in you, nor by you, nor of you, but only in Christ, and by Christ, and of Christ,
but thanks be to God is for you.—

STORY OF LIGHTNING ROD

King George III Was Opposed to Franklin's Device and Ordered Points Made Blunt.

France has probably done more than any other nation to make the world safe against lightning. This is the centenary year of a revised set of rules printed by the Academie des Sciences for the protection of buildings by conductors. The glory of discovery, however, must be shared by other nations.
Benjamin Franklin begins the story.

"In 1745," he wrote, "I met at Boston a certain Doctor Spence, who came from Scotland. He performed some electrical experiments before me." Then a little later, while in Philadelphia, the great American received from Mr. Collinson of London, a member of the Royal society, his first toy glass tube. "I seized eagerly on the chance of reproducing what I had seen done in Boston."

From these experiments to the famous kite was an easy step, and from the kite to the lightning conductor the magic leap. Of course, the lightning conductor had a hard struggle for recognition. It was received churlishly by George III, who took his revenge on Franklin by ordering the substitution of blunt ends for pointed ones on the Kew palace conductors.

Sir John Pringle, president of the Royal society, was invited by the king to back him up. Sir John replied that the "laws of nature are not changeable at royal pleasure." The offended king suggested resignation, and resign Sir John did. But the wits were on the side of the president:

While you, great George, for safety
hunt
And sharp conductors change for blunt,
The nation's out of joint,
Franklin a wiser course pursues,
And all your thunder fearless views
By keeping to the point.
—London Chronicle.

NO PLACE TO REST ON LINER

Modern Ocean Vessels Offer No Haven
for "Tired Business Man"—Equipped With Radio and Newspapers.

Some persons take ocean voyages for rest. They can no longer. On many of the Atlantic liners branch banks have been or are being opened. On not a few steamships small newspapers or apologies for newspapers have been printed. Now larger and more pretentious sheets are to be issued. A linotype machine has been installed on one liner. Other machines soon will be in operation on two other liners.

Between editors, printers and reporters one well-known liner's newspaper force comprises six men. There is no escape from the radio even in mid-Atlantic. Or the phonograph. Or the ship's band. Or stock market, cotton market, money market or crop reports,
Or baseball scores, prize fights, gossip or results, political rumors, reparation wrangling, crime news or war rum-blings.

The calm of the sea isn't what it used to be.—Forbes Magazine.

Hadn't Seen Quite All

The late John Wanamaker was deeply interested in salesmanship. He said one day at a luncheon:

"In the London department stores the salesmen and saleswomen have a patient courtesy that is wonderful to see. Our own salesmen are more efficient, but they haven't got the patience of the English."

"I know a good enough young salesman who sells men's underwear. A middle-aged woman came to his counter one morning to look at underwear for her husband. She was very fussy.
She kept the poor young fellow showing her underwear for two hours. Finally, when they both were exhausted, she got up from her stool and said discontentedly:

"So I've seen all the underwear
you have, eh?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the young man,
"all except what I've got on."—Boston Globe.

The Truth.

The auctioneer was endeavoring to dispose of a stock of cigars of which the labels were undoubtedly the best part.

White was among the listeners, and having sampled this particular line, was not quite in agreement with the auctioneer's recital of their virtues.

"Yes," said the auctioneer, waxing eloquent, "these cigars are absolutely without equal in this country today.
You may go and pay three times the price, but you will never obtain better quality. In short, gentlemen, you can't get better; whatever you do you can't get better."

White was unable to restrain himself any longer.

"No, you can't get better," he broke in, "I smoked one last week and I haven't recovered yet."

The Clocks We Wear.

The three marks on the back of a glove and the clocks on a stocking are due to similar circumstances. The glove mark corresponds to the fourthette pieces between the fingers, and in other days these pieces were continued along the back of the hand, braided being used to conceal the seams.
A somewhat similar origin is assigned to the ornamental clock on the stocking. In the day when stockings were made of cloth the seams occurred where the clocks do now, the ornamentation then being used to conceal the seams. The useless little bow in the leather band lining a man's hat is a survival of the time when a hat was made by taking a piece of leather, boring two holes through it and drawing it up with a piece of string.

All Knowledge Not

Possessed by Youth

Dear me, with all their superior knowledge, how ignorant the younger generation, one might say the youngest generation, is about some things.
A new story came into the house and mother essayed to read it aloud. It was about "gypsies." Hardly had she begun when a chorus of small voices asked, "What's a 'gypsy'?" And it was hard explaining about a covered wagon, for the next question was, "What's a 'wagon'?" And some didn't even understand what a "pair of horses" was.
Never did mother have it brought home to her so keenly that this was an automobile age.

And there is nothing that makes a high-school pupil feel that her mother is more ancient than to have that same mother say, "There were no automobiles in my high-school days; we always went buggy riding." Instantly the high-school maiden thinks of her mother, as dated some time before the Civil war, and one high school child had the nerve to question her mother as to her experiences during the Revolutionary war.

Mother came back at daughter a bit, though. She said casually, "There was no such thing as a radio in your life until you reached high-school age, was there?" Daughter tried to prove that radio only happened the other day, as it were, but mother emphasized her point that inventions are coming along faster than people are.—

Credit for "Want Ad"

Goes to Englishman

In 1672 John Houghton, a fellow of the Royal society, established a weekly paper for the improvement of husbandry and trade, and undertook to educate the merchants of England in the art of advertising, says World's Work.

First he established a bureau for supplying servants to masters and masters to servants, carrying on operations through advertising. From this he went into the advertising of schools, houses and lodgings to let and so forth, laying down the idea of what has grown into our present "want ads."

He instructed the public class by class, inducing lawyers, physicians and farmers to use his columns and built up a large miscellaneous patronage for his paper. The clergy in particular found his columns an excellent medium for securing or disposing of second-hand sermons, for there were no Monday morning papers in those days, with ever-present reporters, and a sermon could be preached around in various parishes until it was worn out.

Jewels in Watches

Watches do not have even numbers of jewels. If a watch has 23 jewels, then the going band or center wheel and third wheel, the fourth wheel the escape wheel, the lever and the balance have a whole jewel at each arbor, which make 14. The balance, the lever and the escape wheel have end stones as well, which make 6 more. Then there are 3 jewels in the escapement, which make 23. If the movement has 21 jewels, then the hole jewels of the going barrel have been omitted. If 19, the end stones of the escapement wheel have been omitted also. If the watch has only 7 jewels, they usually consist of the 3 escapement jewels and 2 end stones for the balance arbor.

Legend of Faust

Faustus (D. Johann Faust) was a person born at Kündling, Wurttemberg, or at Roda, near Weimar. He is said to have died in 1538. He was a magician, soothsayer and astrologer, and boasted of having performed the miracles of Christ. It was believed that the magician was carried off by the devil, who had lived with him in the form of a black dog. Legends say that this event occurred on the night between the twenty-third and twenty-fourth of October, 1538. Goethe's tragedy (published in 1808) is based on the Faust legends.

Must Have Pulled Hard

The occupation of dentistry is not usually rated as dangerous. Unless a patient snaps at a dentist while the latter is busy with one of the former's molars, and seldom does a patient act in such a way, there is small hazard to the profession.

Nevertheless at times accidents do occur. A man tortured by a toothache called up a dentist and asked him for help. The office attendant replied that Doctor Soanso regretted to state he would be unable to take patients for some days to come as he had sprained his wrist pulling a tooth.

Beauty in Dislocation

A peculiarity of the Siamese dancing girls is the position of their fingers, which are held at all times turned upward as much as possible. Not turned up to heaven, but turned the way opposite to the normal bend of the knuckles. This is considered very beautiful, and dancing girls spend long hours pressing their fingers against their knees to the point almost of dis-location in order to induce the desired back curve.—Adventure Magazine.

Usage Makes Difference

Some men fall where others are successful. The former regard as obstacles what the latter see as opportunities. This suggests that the real difference between stumbling blocks and stepping stones is in the way one may use them.—Grit.

PAY YOURSELF

IT'S great to "spend" money when you pay it over to yourself: There's a thrill about it—a pecu-of our depositors enjoy this sense of security as they make regular deposits in their accounts. They know they are just taking it from themselves now,

The local Fire Company always receives liberal local financial support. There is therefore no real need of holding "Carnivals," such as have been held here several times; and we trust that the Company will not bring such a feature here again. The town as a whole does not want it.

Last week, we fortunately had quite a stock of surplus copies of The Record for which there was an unusual demand, that ordinarily we would not have been able to fill. We never know when extra copies will be wanted; so we wish a lot of our weekly customers would let us add their names to our regular list. It would be a help to us, and perhaps at times save themselves from disappointment.

Of course, we are always adding "new subscribers"—every week has its crop—but, we also "drop" a lot of "old ones" just as regularly, and this takes the pleasure out of boasting of the new ones. Back us up, friends and neighbors! We have to make our money out of job printing and advertising. Was it not for these two sources of income, there could be no Carroll Record, and Taneytown would be the loser.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Zepp and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Andrews, of Washington, visited Mr. and Mrs. Roy B. Garner, last Sunday. Master Fred Garner went home with them to stay a while.

Long Theatrical Record

Frau Amalie Haerting, the doyenne of Berlin's stage prompters, has just celebrated an anniversary rare in theatrical history. For twenty-five years she has been prompter at the theaters directed by Max Reinhardt. She estimates she has stood in the little prompter's box more than 8,000 times. She has been so reliable that some of Germany's greatest actors have refused to play unless Frau Haerting gave the cues.

Roman Numerals

The Romans had no symbols to indicate mathematical processes and operations. Originally they expressed every process and operation in words of full length. Their mathematical calculations were never simplified further than to abbreviate centum, 100, into C; mille, 1,000, into M, and so on. The Romans were never reputed specially good mathematicians and they contributed little to the science.

STRAINS OF MUSIC HELPFUL TO SICK

Certain Aims Proved to Have Curative Effect.

Doctors have long discussed the possible therapeutic powers of music, possibly ever since the Spartans, back in 620 B. C., if you happen to recall, invited Thaletas, a musician of Crete, to hurry over with his lyre and try to lull to sleep a wild and raging pestilence.

And now, in several New York hospitals and others throughout the country it is at last having its chance, applied with the benefit of a new psychology which takes it into consideration.

Responsible for the present endeavor to prove the point long debated is Mrs. Isa Maud Ilsen.

Mrs. Ilsen is a trained musician and a trained nurse as well. She is a Canadian by birth and was left a widow in her early twenties, at which time she looked about for a field and entered a hospital training school. It was during her early years as a nurse that she became interested in the effects of music upon the ill.

"During my first months of hospital life," she says, "I felt keenly the gloominess and the depression. Most of my time off duty I passed at concerts, and then I began to wonder about my own craving for music and whether the patients did not react to the same surroundings in the same way.

"I began to take notice, and soon I found that very frequently a patient would ask to hear 'a piece on the piano.' Some of the youngsters would ask me when I tucked them in at night to sing to them. And some from the slums would express a desire to hear a hand-organ.

"Then one night an old Irish woman, suffering from inflammatory rheumatism, could not get to sleep. Despite the fact that she had been given 'quantum sufficit' of an opiate, she rolled and tossed and moaned. I began to sing an old Irish tune. She quieted immediately and was soon asleep.

"There are many things to be considered in the introduction among the ill," she says. "Jazz, for instance, might have a very impractical effect in many cases because of its stimulation and shock. In apathetic cases it might have some value, but its nature is such that it should be used carefully.

"However, certain musical compositions have given very strong indications in experiments of having beneficial effects. The quieting, soothing strains of Schubert's 'Ave Maria' have proved excellent in cases of insomnia, for example.

"In other cases of distraught nerves, and even hysteria, the 'Barcarolle,' the 'Meditation' from 'Thais,' MacDowell's 'To a Wild Rose' and Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song' have brought excellent effect. We are still experimenting with others and are making steady advances in working out the psychological effects of various sorts of music."

Placing the "Blame."

In many cases it is not necessary to fix "blame" at all, especially when matters are so mixed up as not to be seen clearly; and we should be especially careful not to fix the blame until we are positive, beyond any question, that we have all of the evidence in a case.

We sometimes blame those we prefer to blame, and screen somebody else. There is such a thing as being so partisan for our friends, or for some institution with which we are closely affiliated, that we set up unsound opinions, and voice wrong conclusions, in order to white-wash our preferences.

And, when we find that we have blamed the wrong person, unintentionally, we ought to be man, or woman, enough to try in every way to correct the wrong; for there is hardly anything finer in character than to "take back," if we can, a wrong impression that we have helped to create, even if we did not wholly originate it.

Censure seems to come natural for us. It is about the first thing we think of doing, when a wrong thing happens; and we can easily take upon ourselves the habit of acting as publicity agent, and enjoying it. Remember about "glass houses" and "throwing stones," and get the habit of withholding, rather than broadcasting, some of our half-baked censure—or blame.

Remember what Christ said about the erring woman; "Let him who is without sin, cast the first stone." Don't be a "blame" factory, without just cause!

They Marked the Place.

Two Englishmen had rented a boat to go fishing in the lake. They had wonderful luck in fishing that day, never having caught so many before. The first Englishman suggested that they ought to mark the place, in order to find it the next time.

The second agreed, so he took a piece of chalk from his pocket and marked the side of the boat with a cross. When they returned the first Englishman asked the second if he had marked the place. The other said he had, placing the cross on the side of the boat.

The first Englishman said: "Why, you silly donkey, how do you know we will get the same boat the next time?"
