COOLIDGE CHOOSES NOT TO RUN AGAIN

Announcement Causes wide Surprise Throughout the Country.

President Coolidge furnished the big news item of the week by calling the reporters together, on Tuesday, and handing them this message: "I do not choose to run for President in 1928," and made no further comment. The day was exactly four years after he took the oath of office following the death of President Harding, which indicates that his decision was not a sudden one, but had been in mind for some time, as well as the date of its announcement.

On March 4, 1925 President Coolidge will have served but five years and seven months, which makes the claim that he should not run for a "third" term ridiculous, providing the country wanted him to do so and elected him.

Comments on the statement are various. His political enemies are overjoyed, while his friends are correspondingly depressed; and a third element has had their own chances for the nomination unexpectedly brightened.

Still another element is skeptical, and is not convinced that the brief statement shows more than that the President will not be a candidate; that he has merely stated his "I do not choose" which does not mean that he would refuse if the National Convention "chooses" otherwise. And so the matter stands, for the present.

The Roop Reunion.

On account of several other family reunions, the date of the Roop reunion is changed from August 14 to August 21. It will be held at Meadow Branch church, near Westminster.

The descendants of the following Roops, who came to Maryland from Lancaster county, Pa., in the latter part of the 18th Century—1780 to 1800:

Joseph Roop, who married Mary Nefsinger and lived near Pipe Creek Church. Christian Roop, who married Esther— and lived near Pipe Creek Church. John Roop, who married Catherine Royer and lived near Meadow Branch Church. Anna Roop, who married Peter Royer and lived near Meadow Branch Church.

The descendants of the above include nearly all the Roops, Royers, Geimans, and a great many Englands and Stoners, besides many others. Come and spend the day; bring lunch. Program at 2 P. M. Remember the date is changed from the 14th to 21st of August.

K. of C. Reunion at Pen-Mar.

The State-wide Committee appointed by State Deputy Walter E. Kennedy to manage the 11th Annual Reunion of the members of the Knights of Columbus of the State of Maryland, have again selected Pen-Mar Park as the place of holding this year's reunion. The date selected for the reunion being Thursday, Aug. 25th.

Mr. George T. Evans, Chairman of the Committee, has announced his intention of introducing several new features which should make this the most popular of all Knights of Columbus reunions.

Mr. Frank N. Barley, Chairman of the Western Maryland Committee, has under his direction a large committee of enthusiastic workers who contemplate bringing to the reunion the largest delegation of members and their families ever brought from Western Maryland.

WHY? WHY? WHY?

We notify every subscriber several weeks in advance of the coming expiration of their subscription, and enclose an addressed envelope for a remittance. Most people like this, and respond. Some do not. Why?

All they need to do is slip a $1.00 bill in the envelope and mail it to us. Many throw it aside, and forget about it. Why?

We send a second notice, before discontinuing a subscription, and call attention to the first notice. Some respond to this, but others do not. Why?

We then send a notice of discontinuance, after the first two notices fail, and again request a renewal. Then, some become offended pay up, and say "stop" the paper. Why?

We have dozens of times publicly asked subscribers who want a little credit, to notify us of it, when we will make note of the fact and continue their paper. Some have done this but most have not. Why?

Some want their subscriptions dropped when the time is out and some do not; and all seem to expect us to know what they want. Why?

Banks can notify their patrons when a note is coming due, and that is "business," but when we send a notice of a subscription coming due, to some, that is an offense. Why?

Why should not the rules of a newspaper office be entitled to as much respect as any other business?

The Emmitsburg-Thurmont Road.

E. C. Valentine, contractor, completed the shoulders on the west side of the Emmitsburg-Thurmont road, the first of this week, and has commenced the shoulders on the east side, with the expectation of completing the entire job, this summer, providing the work is not delayed by rainy weather.

FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

Carroll County Stands Fourth in Whole State.

Extending the appreciation and thanks of the Near East Relief, Potomac Division through Harold F. Pellegrin, Director, sends a statement of the total amount of cash contributed by this county for the last year, up to the opening of the fiscal year, July 1st.

The list which also shows the amounts contributed by the other counties of the state for the same period, is as follows:

Alegany	$4025.94
Anne Arundel	1868.64
Baltimore	4592.63
Calvert	484.06
Caroline	598.36
Carroll	3545.48
Cecil	2265.25
Charles	508.64
Dorchester	815.52
Frederick	3878.05
Garrett	587.82
Harford	1956.99
Howard	705.89
Kent	800.77
Montgomery	1789.15
Prince George	1512.89
Queen Anne	643.68
St. Mary's	138.88
Somerset	639.50
Talbot	1107.60
Washington	3376.81
Wicomico	418.92
Worcester	552.07

During the last year, the money contributed has aided in the relief of nearly 80,000 orphans, in orphanages, outplaced in families and elsewhere, in the Syria camp, in refugee schools and in the earthquake zone, says Mr. Pellegrin. Nearly 3,000 adults were fed in the Syria camp, and over six thousand were aided with money in the earthquake zone. The total number of individuals aided in child welfare, other service and with clothing, according to the last statement, made a few months ago, when the latest statistics were compiled, was 461,501.

Carroll county stands fourth among all the counties, which is a very creditable position.

Midsummer Care of the Baby.

Because the summer weather, especially during the following a heat wave, is likely to be accompanied by a flare up of diarrheal diseases among babies and young children, the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, gives the following suggestions to mothers:

1—Mother's milk. Give your baby mother's milk. No food can compare with it. It is especially suited to the baby's needs; it is practically free from germs and it is usually given in just the quantities the baby needs.

2—Cow's milk. If mother's milk is not available, give the baby the next best substitute—carefully handled, clean—cow's milk, diluted with water according to the doctor's directions. The mixture should be boiled for two or three minutes to destroy the germs that enter cow's milk even with the most careful handling. The milk should be boiled in the same way when given to the older children.

3—Feeding Intervals. Let at least three hours pass between feedings. If cow's milk is used it is better to have four hours between feedings.

4—Cooled Boiled Water. Give the baby cooled, boiled water to drink between feedings.

5—Flies. Keep flies away from the baby; from his food and from everything connected with him.

6—Clothing. Dress the baby according to the temperature. Be careful to have a light cover at hand to slip over the baby when there is a sudden drop in the temperature.

7—Your Doctor's care. Keep in touch with your doctor. Take your baby to him regularly. Get his advice promptly at any indication of digestive disturbance.

Though the babies outside of the larger cities have the advantage of fresh air and more open spaces than the city babies and have long been supposed to be sturdier than the city babies, the records of the State Department of Health show less sickness and fewer deaths among the babies and young children in Baltimore City from diarrheal diseases than among the babies in the counties. Taking the figures for the last ten years, it is interesting to note that from 1917 to 1921 the county babies had the advantage. But from 1922 to 1926 the conditions were reversed, with many more deaths among the babies in the rest of the state than in Baltimore City.

Commenting on the greater loss among the county babies, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene said "The marked decrease in sickness and deaths from diarrheal diseases among the babies in Baltimore City corresponds closely to the greater care in the handling of the milk in the city and to the greater ease with which the mothers in the city can secure the necessary advice".

Who has an Old Bible?

It would be interesting to publish a list of owners of very old family Bibles, and the dates of them. We know who has an English Bible dated 1809, but there must be some back in the 1700's, especially German ones. Bibles published about 1840 are quite common, and are not in the antique class. The Record would like to hear from the owners of the real old ones.

Cast iron is being tried out as a paving material in France. Should the experiment prove successful, it will provide a use for the great quantities of old iron now being shipped out of the country.

THE DOLLAR DAY.

The Dollar Day idea, that has been in use elsewhere for some years, is new to Taneytown, and the results of next Tuesday, Aug. 9, will be watched with interest. Of course, it is "advertising"—advertising in a dull month when merchants are quite willing to give greater bargains in order to move stocks—and this of course results to the advantage of purchasers.

Taneytown stores compare very favorably with stores in other like towns, and their stocks are better and larger than in many towns. We therefore conclude that their "Dollar Day" offerings will be entirely worth while, and will represent real bargains to the community. The full page advertisement in this issue tells the story.

Come to Taneytown, next Tuesday, and get the full benefit of the day's offerings. If the day is successful this year, it is apt to become an annual event; so, helping it along this year will also mean helping yourselves, this year, and other years to follow.

EMMITSBURG'S FOUNTAIN

Now Regarded by Many as an Obstruction to Traffic.

The Burgess and Commissioners of Emmitsburg are considering the advisability of removing the fountain in the center of the square, a petition to that effect having been presented to them signed by over 100 of the leading residents of the community. The opinion expressed was that the fountain had outlived its usefulness, and now represented an obstruction to traffic.

A letter was read by Burgess J. Henry Stokes from John N. Mackall, chairman of the State Roads Commission, in which the chairman stated that the fountain takes up too much room for the size of the square and something more practical should occupy the present site.

It was the general opinion of the meeting that something should be done to overcome the present difficulty.

Burgess Stokes was empowered to confer with W. F. Childs, Jr., district engineer of the State Roads Commission, and make a report at the regular meeting which will take place Tuesday, August 9.

The fountain is now in a partly wrecked condition, due a recent attack on it by a "rummy" car driver; but the fountain survived the attack much more successfully than the car.

"Inside" Information for Women.

Baked pears are a pleasant variation from baked apples. If the flavor is not very pronounced, a little lemon juice will tone it up.

Send to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," before you are confronted with a large garden surplus.

Cooked cucumbers may be a novelty in your family. Pare and quarter them, and prepare as you would steamed squash. Serve with melted butter or a sauce if desired.

It is never the wrong time of year to start a budget or a savings fund. Plan for the next month ahead, and the next big expense you have to meet and gradually you will have enough accumulated to take care of what lies before you.

Don't throw away sour cream. Serve it simply clabbered for dessert, with powdered sugar, honey, maple sirup, strawberry or other preserves, and a little sweet cream. Or use it in griddle cakes, waffles, biscuits, muffins, cookies, or cake. Make it into salad dressing, or use it as a sandwich spread, with chopped nuts or olives or both.

To make good iced tea you must first make good hot tea. Use from half to one teaspoonful of tea leaves per cup, according to the kind of tea and the strength preferred. Scald an earthenware pot, put in the tea, pour on freshly boiled water, and allow to steep from 3 to 5 minutes—no longer. Strain, cool and chill, so that very little or no ice need be added at serving time. Pass sliced lemon and powdered sugar.

To eradicate household ants, a sirup poisoned with arsenate of soda is effective where it can be safely used. To make it 1 pound of sugar is dissolved in a quart of water to which 125 grains of arsenate of soda is added. Use it after boiling and straining, on sponges, placed where the ants will find them easily. The sponges are collected several times daily and the ants swarming on them are killed by immersion in hot water.

Two Assessors Removed.

The State Tax Commission has ordered the removal of John W. Grove and Roger G. Harly, two Frederick County assessors, and the County Commissioners have been asked to appoint two "suitably qualified" successors. Two other assessors, John L. Dufrow and J. Thomas Burke, are to be given further trial.

Grove and Harly were considered ineligible on the ground that they are in favor of "arbitrarily low appraisements," and therefore unfit to perform the work required of them.

THE CARROLL RECORD AT $1.00 ON "DOLLAR DAY"

For "Dollar Day" only—next Tuesday—we will give The Record for one year for NEW SUBSCRIBERS ONLY—to persons whose names are not on our list now. We will accept $1.00 for NEW subscriptions either mailed, or received, on Tuesday the 9th., but absolutely NOT AT ANY OTHER TIME. This offer is largely for the purpose of adding to the attractions of "Dollar Day" in Taneytown.

GOV. RITCHIE DECLINES

To Debate Prohibition Issue with Wayne B. Wheeler.

Governor Ritchie, who was invited to debate the prohibition issue with Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, in the University of Michigan Opera House, has declined to accept the opportunity, giving as his reasons, as reported:

"I can see no possible reason for debating with him, unless it be to give publicity to him.

"While personally I believe our prohibition friends are taking the wrong track and are injuring our Government, nevertheless I recognize that there are many fair and sincere men and women for whom I have the utmost respect, who differ with me, and with whom it would be an honor to debate if I could arrange it.

"But to be entirely frank, I cannot bring myself to feel that way about Mr. Wheeler. He is the paid protagonist of a cause, a professional propagandist, a special pleader, pure and simple.

The Governor seems to be missing an opportunity, through differentiating between Mr. Wheeler and somebody else for whom he has the "utmost respect." It seems to us that "publicity" is what both "wets" and "drys" should welcome; for after all, it is the argument itself—the right or wrong of the law—that counts, rather than the personality of the debaters, or whether they are paid, or unpaid.

Information for Farmers.

All roots which taint milk should be fed immediately after milking. This applies especially to turkeys and similar roots.

Cows in good condition and producing less than one pound of butterfat daily, will usually not require grain if the pasture is good.

In marketing fruits and vegetables no one factor is more important than careful grading. If constantly adhered to it builds good will and creates confidence.

Mineral food for hens is best supplied in the form of oyster or clam shells, or limestone, which supply the calcium for eggshell formation. Bone meal may also be used to advantage, especially to supply the phosphates, and is usually mixed in with the mash ration.

The acid present in a good grade of silage is not believed to injure the stomachs of cattle. On the other hand, it is thought a benefit to the digestive system. It helps to keep down undesirable fermentations in the silage and aids in the digestion of the feed. This acid is largely, "lactic acid", such as is found in sour milk.

In many cases, the damage to timber and the killing of young trees from allowing stock to graze in farm woodlands more than offsets the value derived from the forage. Two dollars per acre per year is probably a liberal estimate of the value of the forage in average farm woodlands, while thrifty, fully stocked stands of timber will often grow at a rate of 250 or more board feet adding a value of from $2.50 to $3.75 per acre per year.

Henry G. Hood and Chester R. Hood, executors of William H. Hood, deceased, received order to sell real estate.

Tuesday, Aug. 2, 1927—Cora B. Guyton, guardian of Arlene V. Guyton, Miriam L. Guyton, Charlotte E. Guyton and Edgar G. Guyton, Jr., infants, settled her first account.

Roscoe G. Stonesifer and Walter J. Stonesifer, administrators of Annie R. Stonesifer, deceased, returned inventories of personal property and debts and received order to sell personal property.

The First Fox Reunion.

The Fox family reunion will be held on Wednesday, August 10th., in Fickinger's Grove, just beyond the Taneytown Fair grounds, at the bridge on the Westminster road. All relatives of Samuel Fox bring basket of eats and be present for a grand good time.

Over in Adams County there is great demand for the office of County Commissioner; this year, there being eleven Democratic and five Republican candidates already in the field.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, who is among "those mentioned" as a possible Democratic candidate for President, will be the main orator at a meeting at Mt. Lake Park, Md., Aug. 21, under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland in the interest of law enforcement.

AUTO TRAFFIC DEMANDS WIDER ROADS

Advance Light on a Subject of great Future Importance.

The following article was clipped from a publication issued in the interest of Cement and Concrete. It is worth reading, and considering very carefully, especially from the standpoint of the cost and taxes involved, not only in "wider" roads, but "more" roads in the future. Another article in the same publication, on "Motor Cars Bring Better Roads," develops the same question.

"As the number of motor cars in the United States mounts nearer the 23,000,000 mark, the need for wider highways is being recognized in many communities. The super-highway, with its wide lanes, is growing in popularity.

Wayne County, Michigan, a pioneer in modern road construction as well as in automobile manufacture, has established a minimum width of 40 feet for all county road pavements, to which all its thoroughfares will soon comply. Highways of even greater widths are being provided.

One of the most notable super-highways, the Detroit-Pontiac road, is 204 feet wide and 17 miles long, which was completed last year. This road provides two 44-foot lanes and a 40-foot area for rapid-transit tracks between. The traffic on this road, before widening, was upward of 25,000 vehicles daily. Now that adequate room has been provided for the swift passage of many more cars, it probably is the most heavily travelled piece of concrete in the United States.

Milwaukee County, Wisconsin, and four counties in the Chicago district have also adopted 40 feet as the standard width for all county roads.

Several other well known highways have been widened to take care of the increasing traffic. One of these, the Boston Post road, the historic link between New York and Boston, has been widened to 36 feet from New York as far as New Haven, Connecticut. Widening of the remaining section is now being carried on.

Chester Pike, another bit of well known highway, has been widened to 35 feet from Darby to Chester, Pa. It is soon to be widened to 55 feet.

It is predicted that before many years, the Lincoln Highway will be at least 40 feet wide from coast to coast. The Ideal Section of this famous road near Dyer, Indiana, has already been widened to 40 feet. The state of Pennsylvania plans to carry the 40-foot width from boundary to boundary.

Similarly, other districts are building wider highways. In the Buffalo-Niagara Falls region a 290-mile system of paved roads of from 40 to 60-foot width is to be constructed. The Albany Post road has been widened to 40 feet in some sections and further improvement is planned. One of the finest achievements of 1926 was the completion of the Cahuenega Pass Road near Los Angeles, a 72-foot concrete super-highway."

Fire Engine for New Midway.

New Midway, Frederick county, has ordered a fire engine that is reported to arrive within the next two weeks.

A public demonstration of the engine will be staged August 27 and a festival will follow in the evening. A musical and literary program is being prepared for the occasion. The engine will be a modern fire fighter in every particular. It will carry three chemical tanks and two reels of hose. After its arrival it will be given a temporary home in the garage of the Renner Motor Co. Members of the company have planned to build a separate home for the engine at the earliest possible time.

At present, efforts are being made to sign up firemen to manage the engine. The new department will be operated by volunteer firemen. Money for the purchase of the engine has been raised by holding suppers and festivals and by soliciting subscriptions among the residents of Woodsboro district. Funds for the erection of an engine house will be raised in the same manner, it has been announced. It is the intention of officers and members of the company not only serve the residents of New Midway and vicinity, but to afford fire protection throughout Woodsboro district.—Frederick News.

High Taxes Explained.

The notice of the letting of 15 road contracts, last week, totaling 16.33 miles, at a cost approximating $1,000,000, or over $62,000 per mile, is worth serious consideration, especially at this time when reassessment is under way, and the assessors are finding difficulty in returning increases in the basis satisfactory to the State Tax Commission.

A little thought on the subject must bring the conclusion that the needs of the State Road Commission go a long way toward furnishing the attitude of the State Tax Commission, which means, of course, that the taxpayers themselves are very pointedly interested, as they are the source of the state's revenues.

The time is rapidly coming, unless a halt can be called in the outgo for roads—and we may add, schools—when one of the chief financial problems of property owners will be to make money enough to pay their taxes. When money is being made easily, one need not mind paying liberally in taxes; but when public expense continues to increase, and the money-making of property owners continues to decrease, that is a very different matter.

Bluntly stated, we seem to need, right now, something that we do not have in the management of our governmental affairs—a greater consideration for the ability of people to pay taxes. And right here comes in the question—whether those who pay the bulk of the taxes are having the main say in planning public expenditures, or whether somebody else is "putting over" a burden on them?

If the taxpayers are largely responsible for heavy public expense, they have no just cause for complaint. If they are not largely responsible, then they have a right to find out who is; and if they do not want schools and roads built at present high costs, they should say so.

All of which brings up two important questions—Is the majority ruling, and is the "majority" made up largely of non-taxpayers; and is majority rule always right, when it forces almost unbearable burdens on the property-owning, heavy tax-paying, public?

Farms for Sale.

Offerings of farms for sale are in order now, as the time for making plans for next year, is at hand. Every year, without regard to "the times," there is an offering of farms, because always somebody wants to retire, or sales may be required for the closing up of estates; therefore, because there are farms for sale, does not necessarily mean that this is any evidence of discontent with farming.

Our own opinion is that this is a good time to buy a farm, and that values will not likely ever be lower. Farm land in this section always has sold at lower prices than in most other good farming sections not far distant, and there does not seem to be any reasonable cause for it. Our land here also sells for not more than half, or less than half, that it sells at in most western states, and again without good reason, considering the crops produced.

We consider investment in farms, by farm workers, a good one at this time. Farms merely as an investment, for letting to tenants, is a different proposition. What the country needs, is greatly more farms operated by owners—and in many instances, smaller farms.

Mr. Ford's Apology.

And now, a few "very deep" prognosticators concerning the wiles of political expediency connected with fishing for Presidential nominations, intimate that perhaps Henry Ford, in his recent withdrawals of aspersions against the Jews, growing out of articles concerning the race published in The Dearborn Independent, may have in mind a disagreement at the Democratic National convention, and trend

Ford, is equally absurd, and this can be said without any disrespect to the latter.

Manufacturing geniuses and multi-millionaires have not in the past ever been selected by either party as National leaders, and are not likely to be; nor have been men with mixed political pedigrees ever been selected—except in the case of Horace Greeley, and what happened in his case, though old, is pretty generally remembered as a political blunder of the first magnitude.

The truth likely is that, Mr. Ford genuinely regrets the publication of the anti-Jewish articles, and is man enough to admit it. Besides, he is much too busy a man to be worried over affairs like that.

Reckless Drivers.

Proponents of compulsory automobile liability insurance laws advance the argument that such laws would assure all persons damages in case of injury by the driver of an automobile. This is not correct because persons injured through fault of their own, and a large proportion are so injured, could not collect damages.

In Massachusetts, where a compulsory automobile insurance law is in effect, the courts have upheld an insurance company which canceled a policy because the driver got drunk. In order that drunken drivers or incompetents may secure insurance, law makers have gone so far in some states as to introduce laws requiring insurance companies to accept all risks, on the ground that if they do not accept all, they are showing partiality. Such arguments are childish, for the only safeguard the insurance company has is the right to reject risks which are known to be bad.

Why should an insurance company be forced to insure a known bad risk? The state should refuse an automobile license to such a party, and not give him the chance to go on the highway and endanger the lives of others.

Instead of reducing personal responsibility and carefulness through compulsory insurance, let the law increase personal responsibility and thereby indirectly force every driver to either voluntarily carry insurance or so conduct himself that accidents will be reduced to a minimum.

The murderer and the highwayman, as well as the reckless and irresponsible driver, cause death and suffering for which there can be no adequate remedy or reparation any more than there can be for the horrors of war. We should work to remove the cause of these misfortunes rather than to make it easier for them to occur.—The Manufacturer.

What Andy Gump Said.

You know Andy Gump of the comic strip. We do not often read his "words of wisdom," but the following caught our eyes. He has had a broken leg, which gives him the opportunity to do quite a bit of reading. This is what he says:

"These new books are putrid—in- stead of romance you get muck—in- stead of looking toward the stars for inspiration those literary garbage men search the gutter for ideas. You have to wear rubber gloves when you pick up a best seller to keep your hands from getting dirty."

"The publisher of those up-to-date novels about flaming flappers and maudlin morons ought to give away a box of anti-bilious pills every copy. The old books inspired a man to better things. The new books inspire you to go out and kill an author."

"They spoil three hundred pages knocking love, marriage, law and religion. Instead of books about beautiful souls, they write about down- trodden heels. I believe in the freedom of the press but the people's common censorship ought to stop those pimples on the brow of literature. Reading a book by Scott or Dickens after wading through a modern novel, is like strolling through a sweet old-fashioned garden after a visit to the glue works."—Lutheran Observer.

Aside from the Point.

Commenting on the "collapse of various boogies conjured up to scare Mr. Coolidge" from becoming a candidate for re-election, the Wall Street Journal says:

"The candle in the turnip head of the third term spook has guttered out. The argument was unreal from the start, and not none of its propounders dared to face the logical converse, Forward for the compromise candidate."

The intimation is hardly worth the effort of mentioning, except as a curiosity showing what the human mind is capable of finding. That Mr. Ford had any such thought, nobody with a sound mind believes; and that the Democratic party would under any circumstances seriously consider Mr. Ford which is that the Vice-President who happens to succeed to a President's unfinished term is thereby deprived of his unquestionable Constitutional right of two elective terms as President, if he can get them."

There has been no discussion of the Constitutionality of Mr. Coolidge's candidacy or of that of any other Vice President who assumes the Presidency by reason of death or disability of the occupant of the office. There is no Constitutional question involved in a third term for a President who is elected and serves two terms and seeks another. It is all a matter of precedent, tradition and public sentiment. Colonel Roosevelt was so well convinced of public opinion in the matter that he refused to stand for a third successive term, declaring his own belief in the wisdom of the limitation placed by common assent on continuance in power beyond the time set by earlier Presidents.

It is not the Constitution which troubles Mr. Coolidge and his supporters. It is perplexity over whether the electorate, which thought twelve years too long for Grant and agreed with Roosevelt that seven years and five months was long enough for him, will not think that ten years is too long for Coolidge.—Balto. Sun.

Risked Life Seeking Ideas for Explosives

When in 1864 Emmanuel Nobel, the Swedish inventor, was experimenting with explosives and his building blew up, killing one of his sons and several other persons, the government forbade him to continue such dangerous work. However, he bought a scow and anchored it in Lake Malar, and there he and his son, Alfred, best known today for the Nobel prizes, continued their experiments that were to revolutionize the explosive industry and prepare the way for modern high explosives.

It was on this old boat that Alfred made the discovery that his liquid explosive, nitro-glycerin, could be mixed with an inert porous substance such as clay or chalk, thus making an explosive that was much more powerful and much more safely handled, as it was in solid form. It was not till 1876 that this explosive, to which he gave the name of "dynamite," was perfected. Before long there were factories in all leading countries making it.

He also brought out other forms of explosives, including the first smokeless powder. Nobel believed in mildness and peace and regretted that his inventions were put into use by anarchists and others who employed them for evil purposes. He also regretted that they would be called into service to make war more destructive and terrible.—Kansas City Star.

Dominated Athens by Virtue of Her Intellect

The pulchritude of Aspasia is a matter of dispute among historians, but those who claim that she was a ravishing beauty, and those who set forth the opposite—that she was a severely plain woman—agree that she was the voice back of the silver tongue of Pericles and the fountain of much of the wisdom of Socrates.

According to Plutarch she was a splendid conversationalist and by her intellect she virtually ruled the men of Athens. Aspirations of the bitterest degree were thrown upon her character by some poets of her time, especially those envious ones who desired to injure Pericles, but most Athenians believed in her purity and certainly in her wisdom regardless of her actions. Husbands and their wives came to her for counsel and she, sitting as a court of justice, smoothed out the rough places for them.

Her decrees were accepted without question, even though she, instead of encouraging a separation, counseled them to make the most of a bad bargain and do the best they could. Because of this attitude it would be one of the most interesting revelations history could make if it told how she reconciled Pericles to divorcing his wife to become her own mate.—Exchange.

Used the New Name

Years ago a young London dramatic critic blessed with the fine old name of Moses, got the idea that he would make greater strides in his profession were he to change his name. And so he did, blossoming forth as—Morton. Israel Zangwill, a brilliant wit, although fond of Morton, never quite forgave him the change of name, and on one occasion when the critic was the guest of honor at a dinner, over which Zangwill presided, the latter "stopped the show" for several minutes when he began his remarks with: "And the Lord spake unto Morton, saying—"—Kansas City Star.

Bird Has Wide Range

The sora is a bird of the rail family. This is a swamp bird that lives entirely in marshes, usually fresh or brackish waters, and ranges over the entire North American continent, as far north as southern Canada. It winters from the southern part of the United States south to northern South America. These birds are all poor flyers. They run through weeds and rushes and have the appearance of being weak-winged. However, they make rather long migratory flights. The sora lays 6 to 13 eggs. In some regions the bird is hunted as game, and an open season is provided by federal law.

Too Many Butts in Joke

When Peter Campbell of Elaine, Australia, entered his bachelor quarters he was knocked flat on the floor. Regaining his feet he was knocked down again. Crawling out of the way of danger, he struck a match, and found facing him a large ram with a district-wide reputation for butting. Campbell sustained severe bruises and lots of shocks. His door was locked when he left home, and the police are looking for the practical joker who opened it to pass in the butter that caused Campbell nearly to pass out.

Knew the Others

"You are a traveler, sir," said a passenger in a local train, "and perhaps you are familiar with Mudwich?" "Yes," replied the other passenger, "I call there on every trip." "Glad to hear it. I've never been there. Which hotel would you advise me to stop at?" "The Majestic." "Do you always go there?" "No, I've never stopped there, but I've been to all the others."—Los Angeles Times.

Historic Quai D'Orsay

Quai D'Orsay is the quay or wharf on the south bank of the River Seine in Paris. Here is situated the buildings of the corps legislatif, and in particular the office of the ministry of foreign affairs. Hence the name, Quai D'Orsay, is given to the government of France, just as the British government was once frequently referred to as the government of St. James.

The "Bible" was a Dictionary.

An old, rare and valuable dictionary was recently discovered in Eatonton, Ga., after having served for more than fifty years as a Bible in a local court house. It has an interesting history.
Court was about to be opened for the first time when it was discovered that there was no Bible on which to swear in the witnesses. A clerk was dispatched to the office of another court-house with instructions to secure and bring back a Bible. Time was short and the clerk was hurried. Not being able to get in touch with the proper official, he saw what appeared to be a Bible on a desk nearby and brought it back with him.
For half a century it was used by this court to swear in witnesses by, and no one ever thought to open it or read it. Then a visiting judge, tired of listening, no doubt, to the long-drawn-out technicalities of a case picked up the time-worn book and began to glance through it. Imagine his surprise when he discovered that it was not a Bible that had been in use all the years, but a dictionary!

Although badly worn outside, within there was not a thumb-mark to denote the passage of time. It was an old dictionary in almost perfect condition and a rare and valuable book.—Printing.

Horn Heralded Coming of Early Locomotive

The earliest locomotives had nothing more in the nature of a warning of the engine's approach than a tin horn blown by the engineer at more or less frequent intervals, but under some circumstances this proved inadequate. The resulting volume of sound depended largely upon the lung power of the engineer and the direction and force of wind.
On a spring morning of the year 1833 a farmer was driving to market with a load of butter and eggs and, being unfamiliar with locomotives, he loitered on the track too long and failed to hear the warning signal from the tin horn, whereupon the whole outfit was scattered over the landscape.

The bill which the company had to pay was regarded as staggering and Asbland Baxter, who was director of the company concerned, paid a visit to George Stephenson at Alton Grange to confer with the great inventor to ascertain if something in the nature of an adequate warning could not be invented to keep people off the track. The result was that Stephenson made the steam whistle which was immediately adopted for all locomotives then in use and has continued as a permanent feature of all locomotives built in the meantime.

Comments on Britons' Lack of Individuality

Among the visitors to this country just arrived from the West is a man who left England 35 years ago. He has prospered abroad and now comes to take his case in his "ain countree."
What are the differences he notices chiefly in our national make-up from the people he left a generation and more ago? He tells you frankly: "You're all alike, as like as two chips. There is a similarity of faces and expression, of occupation and idling. I find less individuality among people here at home now, less character, less sharply defined natures. I think the fact that so many of you play some sort of game is responsible for a general lack of character. Games don't develop anything but your muscles. They cramp the character, I'm sure."
"In times gone by I can recall nine out of ten of my father's friends who were real characters, individuals. They had a zest in life and blazed their own trail, whether it was footpath or high road. It was their own way of living. They had a definite reading of life. Then every person you met was a new experience. Today everybody's cut and dried, an economical factor, eh?" And his cheery laugh mitigated the sting.—London Chronicle.

Highest Civic Pride

To have beautiful homes, well-kept homes, inside and out, however modest or pretentious they may be, is civic pride in the very truest sense.

"Double-Crossing"

Doctor Vizetelly says in regard to the expression "double-cross" that a New York boss in the early '80s testified before an investigating committee that when a constituent asked a favor he made a record of the name and fact and if he intended to grant the petition marked a cross after the name. Sometimes he would change his mind, in which case he added a second cross. In his testimony he would say: "I crossed Smith; I double-crossed Jones, etc." Possibly this is the origin of the expression "double-cross" as used today.

Edelweiss From Asia

The edelweiss, the one Swiss flower with which travelers are sure to become acquainted, is not of Swiss ancestry at all, not even of European. According to Dr. Heinrich Handel-Mazzetti, of the Vienna museum of natural history, it is an immigrant from Asia, where the human race itself came from. The Austrian botanist's researches on the distribution of the living and fossil relatives of the edelweiss have reached across the Near East, through the Himalayas, down into Indo-China and north across China and Japan.

Rice Weevil New Foe of Grain in Storage

Omaha, Neb.—A "yellow peril" among insect pests is taking the place of a "native American" nuisance, according to O. E. Gookins of Ottawa, Kan., in an address before the meeting here of the American Association of Cereal Chemists. The once-troublesome grain weevil, he stated, is becoming extinct, but its decline is accompanied by the increase of the rice weevil. The two insects look very much alike, but the rice weevil can easily be distinguished because it can fly. Mr. Gookins recommended granary fumigation as a cheap and sure method of finishing off the granary weevil for good, and for combating the hordes of the rice weevil.

His Mean Revenge

A fish peddler in Australia has discovered a new method of revenge against the woman who jilted him for a local prohibition leader. Twice a week he stops his cart in front of the woman's home and goes around to the rear with a bag in his hand. Returning to the cart he removes numerous empty beer bottles from the bag and lines them up in a row beside the cart. The neighbors do not suspect that he carries them in with him.

For Meditation

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

ENTHUSIASM

SET a building on fire and a crowd soon gathers. The motive which brought the crowd may have been curiosity, excitement or the desire to be of some assistance. It is nevertheless true, that a fire brings a crowd.

The word enthusiasm comes from two Greek words, which, translated literally mean, "the divine in us." Enthusiasm is only another word for fire, the fire which burns in the heart.

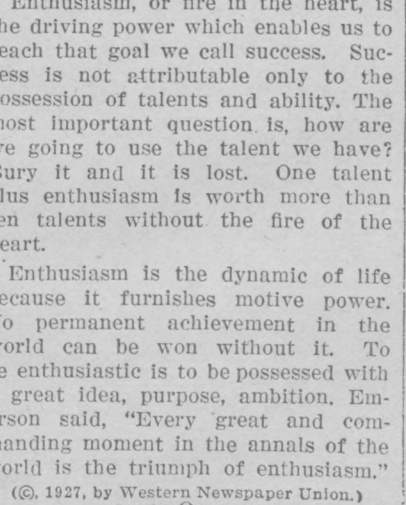

You will not remain a half hour in an artist's studio without learning something about the value of this fire. Watch the artist. He is all alive. He shows you one piece of work after another upon which he has spent time and energy. His whole life is aglow with his art. He is on fire. Nothing to him is so important as his art. His success in his profession is not a mere accident nor is it attributable to "good luck," but rather to the fact that fire burned in his heart. The musician transfers his soul to you through the instrument he plays. His music carries a message that is convincing and helpful. Another plays the same instrument, striking the same note and playing the same piece. It carries no message to you, and you leave the concert regretfully. How can you explain the difference between the two musicians? They both played the same instrument and the same musical selection. The difference is explained by the fact that in the one case the music was real; in the other only an imitation. The one had fire in his heart, the other did not.

Enthusiasm, or fire in the heart, is the driving power which enables us to reach that goal we call success. Success is not attributable only to the possession of talents and ability. The most important question is, how are we going to use the talent we have? Bury it and it is lost. One talent plus enthusiasm is worth more than ten talents without the fire of the heart.

Enthusiasm is the dynamic of life because it furnishes motive power. No permanent achievement in the world can be won without it. To be enthusiastic is to be possessed with a great idea, purpose, ambition. Emerson said, "Every great and commanding moment in the annals of the world is the triumph of enthusiasm."

BRICK-MAKING GOES FAR INTO HISTORY

Introduced Into Europe During Crusades.

Just when the first brick was made history is unable to tell us except that at the time of the first historical writings the Chaldeans were already making a sun-baked brick. It is not known when the art of burning brick was introduced, but when construction was begun on the tower of Babel burned brick as durable as granite were in use, and during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, the great Babylonian king (604-562 B. C.), hard-burned, exquisitely enameled brick of great beauty and expert workmanship could be had.

In Egypt the most ancient brick remains do not date back earlier than the Fifteenth or Sixteenth century B. C., and incidentally we may give to Egypt the credit for evolving the first brick "ad," for it was upon a pyramid constructed entirely of sun-dried brick, found at Dashur, slightly south of Cairo, that Herodotus is purported to have seen the following unique advertisement which was interpreted to him by his Egyptian guide as follows:

"Disparage me not by comparing me with pyramids built of stone. I am as much superior to them as Ammon is superior to the rest of the deities. I am constructed of brick made from mud which adhered to the ends of poles and was drawn up from the bottom of the lake."

Europe learned to make and use brick from the Romans. The remarkable dome of St. Sophia of Byzantium, the baths of Caracalla, the basilica of Constantine at Rome are striking examples of Roman architecture in brick.

During the period of the Crusades brick found its way into Italy, southern France, Germany and the low countries.

The Moors of Spain, too, proved themselves masters in the use of this material. Examples of this mastery are found in the Alhambra at Granada and the mosque (now cathedral) of Cordova.

Brick was introduced into England by the Romans who occupied that country for three and a half centuries. The industry was not adopted by the English themselves, however, until during the reign of Henry VIII (1509-1547), probably under the Flemish influence. The fire of 1666, however, transformed London into a brick city and a decided vogue for this commodity resulted. Consequently, scattered throughout England we find many fine old country houses built of brick, which so fittingly express the solidity, dignity and practicality of the English country gentleman of that day.

America naturally acquired the art of making and using this material from her English cousins, but even America may boast of a degree of antiquity in the use of brick, for the early Spaniards found excellent examples of adobe brickwork in Peru and Mexico. In North America the Colonial days produced fine types of brick architecture from New England to Virginia, and from that time until the present the industry has steadily grown and developed.

HELEN WAS ON THE JOB

(By D. J. Walsh.)

HAROLD JENNISON resented the strident peal of the door-bell. It was his afternoon off and he wanted to spend it in peace. Helen should be there to answer it, anyway. That was her job. Harold was very particular about doing anything that was Helen's job—that is, what he considered to be her job.

He opened the door scowling. It was a little boy with a basket of vegetables. Before he had opened his mouth to solicit Harold had said "No" quite firmly and shut the door.

He settled himself again in the big wing chair he liked so much and spread his paper. Was it going to be impossible to rest even at home, he wondered. Such a good chance, too, with Helen away for the day. She wouldn't be there to keep on asking her eternal questions.

Why was he so late getting home? . . . Yes, he was late—fifteen minutes later than he was last night. . . . She had been so worried about a train wreck or something. . . . What would he like for dinner? Did he care for the potatoes boiled or fried tonight? Well, she just wanted to know about it. . . . She had thought that fried ones would be a change. The telephone interrupted his thoughts. He felt like pulling the instrument from the wall.

"Is Jimmy there?" came a strange voice.

"This is Main 6350," said Harold with a great deal of patience.

"Oh!" came a peevish voice at the other end and Harold heard the click of the disconnection.

"Well, it wasn't my fault that she got the wrong number," snapped Harold to the transmitter. "She might have said, 'Sorry!' at the very least!" He very carefully inserted a thick cardboard between the bells then. Well, that was that.

He settled himself in the wing chair again. The house was quiet as death. It seemed as if some disaster were impending. He rose and adjusted the cushions once more.

There was so much he needed to think out. First, of course, there was Helen. He had known for a number of months now that he no longer cared for her. It wasn't anything he could help, you understand, but they had simply grown apart instead of growing closer together. It wasn't his fault, of course. Neither was it hers—exactly.

Three years before he had thought she would be the only one, but how young and foolish he had been! A man is bound to change as the years pass. He had his business and the stimulating influence of keen business competition. He would naturally progress. Helen had allowed domesticity to get her. She couldn't think farther than the butcher's bills of last month.

He realized and admitted with a twinge that she had helped him quite a bit. She had been thrifty. It was that as much as anything that had given him this good start. But he was so sick of her infernal domesticity. He hated to be asked what he wanted for dinner and what he would have for breakfast. She didn't seem to realize that she had repeated herself for three years on the same subjects. Day after day.

If she only knew a little about the topics of the day. If she would brush the cobwebs from her mind and use it he had no doubt she might be interesting. But it was going to be hard to tell her. Rather bad for him to say: "Well, Helen, I am going to the club to live after this. I am utterly sick of the sight of you!" He winced. It would hurt her, of course. But what was a man to do?

It was worse to stay on and pretend something you did not feel. No, there was no other woman—not definitely at least. It was just—all other women. They kept so young and interested in life and affairs.

He stirred uneasily in his chair. He looked at his watch. It was past five and she hadn't arrived yet. What on earth could be keeping her?

He removed the card from the bell of the telephone. It whirred impatiently. He frowned as he put the receiver to his ear. Calling, no doubt, to tell him she would be late. That was like her. As if he didn't know that now.

"Oh, Harold," shrieked a woman's voice. "Something awful has happened. Helen is on No. 4 and it's wrecked—in the ditch—"

"On No. 4!" he repeated dazedly. "What was she doing on a train?" But the hysterical voice had rung off. He couldn't even think who it might have been.

He strode up and down the room. What was she doing on that train—any train? Great guns! Could it be that she was leaving him? Why in thunder should she want to leave him—him, her husband?

Suddenly he realized the terrible import of that message. She might be injured, dead. Dead! His wife lying mangled.

He hurried out the door, forgetting even his coat. He started the car and dashed down the drive. It was one of his pleasures to keep the car for his own use. Helen never had it. If he had allowed her to use it today, his mind accused, she wouldn't be lying in the ruins of a wrecked train at this minute—perhaps dead.

He followed the road along the tracks, expecting at any minute to come upon the blazing ruins of the wreck. His imagination pictured varied and terrible panoramas of that chaos. Curse it, anyway. Why did he think so much?

Only once did his thoughts suggest to him very slyly that if Helen should chance to lose her life, that would be such a simple way out of their mess. He swung the car violently about as he thought of that. He didn't want to dwell upon that. It angered him that his mind had played him such a trick.

He had gone miles and miles and still no sign of the wreck.

All at once then he knew that he had been going the wrong way. It must be down the line instead of up. He turned and sped through the town again and out to the other side. It was miles and miles and miles that he traveled.

He turned the lights on the car and hunched over the wheel, his drawn face turned to the road ahead. Livid pictures of Helen raced about his mind. Why hadn't he allowed her to take the car? It was as much hers as any one's. Then his fevered mind suggested that they might have taken Helen home by the time. No sooner had the thought come than his car whirled about and was traveling again toward the city.

Lights blazed in the house when he brought his car to a stop. He dashed, a gaunt, anxious figure, into the hall. He saw Helen come through the room from the kitchen. He saw her come toward him, but she must be a ghost. Presently she would vanish in a puff of smoke. Sweat stood out in beads on his forehead.

"Where have you been?" she asked first. "Why do you stare at me so, Harold—hurry—dinner is waiting. I fried the potatoes for a change," she rambled on in a monotonous voice.

Still he looked at her. "The wreck?" he muttered through cracked lips.

"Oh, did you hear?" she asked, brightening. "Wasn't it lucky that I just missed taking that train?" Then her face clouded. "There's been something that I wanted to say to you, dear—"

He mopped his face wearily. Would she say that she was tired, that she wanted to leave?

"You won't like it, I am afraid," she began timidly. "That is the reason I haven't told you before." She stopped uncertainly.

He tried to tell her that he knew already, that he understood and didn't blame her at all. He had been a selfish brute. But the words wouldn't come.

"I've been giving lectures in the next town on the home and its duties," she went on, not looking at him. "That was the reason I usually took the train, but now they want me to take on more work—you had to know. It's in the college," she explained.

Helen, his wife, giving lectures in a college! He smiled blandly. A wonderful woman, his wife. Not another like her. He rose and straightened himself vigorously.

"Say now, that is a great idea—where's my coat?" he boomed. "I hope the dinner isn't cold—fearfully hungry," he went on as he got into the coat she held.

She smiled. The anxious expression had left her face.

"I didn't know what you wanted for dinner," she apologized. "So I fried the potatoes—"

"Great! Fried potatoes are great!" he laughed. It seemed so funny. "Do you want to drive the car mornings to the college?" he asked finally.

"I can take the train," she murmured.

"But I prefer you to take the car," he insisted. "Trains sometimes are wrecked."

Recalling Days When Hawking Was Pastime

The days of hawking in Leicestershire have been revived in a curious fashion. A well-known farmer living on the outskirts of Leicester owns a fox terrier that is an expert in the art of rat catching, says a writer in the London Post.

Recently, while the farmer and his friends were out with the dog on a slaughtering expedition, it was noticed that a large hawk followed and hovered about them the whole time. In every subsequent outing the bird appeared on the scene. Gradually its hunger and its killing propensities overcame its natural timidity of man, and it now takes an active part in every expedition.

Usually it flies a few feet above the heads of the men as they are hunting, occasionally alighting and hopping about their feet waiting for the rats. The moment the terrier makes a kill the bird swoops down on the body and carries it away. If the dog misses a chance, and its prey appears to be escaping, the bird descends rapidly and does the killing.

Occasionally the dog will go out alone, and then the bird, which is usually perched on the roof of the farmer's house, always accompanies it.

BIRDS IN THE ZOO

"I AM a Trumpeter Swan, and I belong to the bird family though I walk on my long legs. Flying isn't for me.

"Of course, as you can tell by my name, I can make a trumpetlike sound and it's a wild shriek I can tell you. It can be heard a long distance off.

"Now I am snowy white and very beautiful, it is said. I am tame and I love my keeper and I make the greatest noise when he feeds me to show that I want him to know that I'm thanking him.

"In fact, we all do that. We all shriek with delight and we all thank him, too, in our different ways.

"When people come to the zoo and are around our part of the park and hear all of us making our thank-you sounds and sounds of delight when we see the keeper with our food they don't know what has happened.

"They rush toward us and they come along saying: 'Whatever does all the noise mean?'"

"They seem to think that something dreadful is happening, but that is because they do not know our shrieks of delight. They don't understand the different sounds birds make and what they mean, but our keeper knows. Oh, yes, he understands.

"He knows so much about birds. He will tell you that the Bald Eagle and the Golden Eagles and the Ducks and the Geese and the Swans and the Cranes and the dear devoted Canadian Goose family are so happy in their home lives and that the mates are true and good to one another all through their bird lives.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

NODDING "YES"

BEFORE a child learns to say "yes" or "no" he instinctively nods his head—a haughty, condescending up-and-down—to show that he approves, or a vigorous shaking from side to side when the imperious will has been crossed. Later on, as he seems to show a preference for this way of expressing himself, it is often necessary to remind him that he can speak.

Many of us may sympathize with the man who said to Darwin, "Your ancestors may have been apes!" but it cannot be denied that we have many things in common with the other species.

Watch a young animal ready to receive food. With eager eyes and mouth open, it makes quick, forward movements of the head. When the food is not acceptable, a tightly clenched jaw and sideward motion of the head serve to keep the mother animal from forcing the food upon it.

So after all these centuries man's mouth is still relaxed when he nods "yes," but there is a strong tendency to clench his teeth and even close his eyes when he shakes "no."

"He will tell of the devotion of robins and thrushes, of swallows and of the herons and of the hawks and the buzzards. He will tell how seldom it is that there are quarrels in the bird families. He will tell, too, how loving the doves are to one another throughout their bird lives, and if a little Mrs. Dove should lose her beloved mate she will not take another mate but will mourn her whole life through.

"So, if people will only learn more about birds and the feathered creatures, perhaps they will want to be nicer still to birds and will want to protect them all they can.

"The bluebirds and the kingfishers put on airs and act very fond of themselves at times, but they, too, are good mates. And the parrots for all their shrieking and yelling are so devoted in their home lives. It is beautiful to see the devotion that birds show.

"Some of the birds from abroad have different ways and are quite curious. The keeper says that there is a Snipe family abroad and that the Miss Snipes court the Mr. Snipes instead of the other way around as it should be. That certainly shows lack of dignity and I should also think lack of charm.

"Surely a Miss Snipe with charm would not have to do anything like that.

"But after they mate Mr. Snipe sits on the eggs and is a regular hombody and does just as Mrs. Snipe says. The Button Quail family are the same way and Miss Button Quail will actually propose to Mr. Button Quail and ask him to be her mate.

"That certainly is queer. Perhaps it is because they have no hind toes. I've heard that they hadn't hind toes. "But now I've told all I've heard the keeper say and I hope my language can be understood."

Billie Brownie, who had been listening, explained how he understood because of the way Mother Nature had given him the power to understand her children.

"And I will tell all my friends and they will tell their friends and we'll get the information about you've told me, beautiful Trumpeter Swan, for it is all very interesting."

"And all quite true," said the Trumpeter Swan.

But then the Trumpeter Swan gave a long, piercing whistle, and the other birds began to yell and shriek and flap their wings and look very much excited.

"You'll excuse me, won't you?" asked the Trumpeter Swan. "It is very important I keep this engagement I have."

And Billie Brownie looked, and along came the keeper with food for all his birds. So, of course, Billie Brownie understood what the Trumpeter Swan's important engagement was.

CURE FOR HOOF DISEASE

SHOULD any of your "horned cattle" become afflicted with a hoof disease watch what part of the turf the cow steps on, dig it up, tie it with a cord and hang it in the open air. As the piece of turf wastes away under the action of the weather so will the disease disappear from the hoof of your cow.

This "cure" is exceedingly popular in England and enjoys a considerable reputation in Canada and the United States.

It is primitive magic in its simplest form. Sir James Frazer calls it "the contagious magic of footprints." The old Norse heroes, when they wished to form a lasting bond of friendship, sprinkled each other's footprints with blood drawn from their own veins and the savage. Today the savage will throw his spear into the footprints of an enemy whom he wishes to injure. In southern Europe a good way to avoid the influence of the "evil eye" is to stiek some sharp-pointed instrument into the footprints of the person suspected of possessing that baleful attribute. The negroes "down South" say that a "conjurer" can "work a man mischief" by digging up his footprints and "conjuring" over them. Marian Roafie Cox, in "An Introduction to Folk-Lore," speaks of an old practice among the Germans of "cutting out the piece of turf whereon a person to be destroyed has stood and hanging it in the chimney that he may perish as his footprints dry and shrivel."

Primitive man conceived a close relation existing between a man and his footprints. It was like the relation existing between a man and his shadow and what was done to the one reacted upon the other. Thus the disease-demon (with primitive man all diseases were evil spirits) in the cow's hoof having left a part of him self by contagious magic on the piece of turf trod on by the cow, it naturally follows that when that piece of turf disintegrates the disease-demon will disintegrate, too.

House Reflects the Character of Owner

In painting a house, even if the owner is painting for purely economic reasons, due consideration should be given to beauty. It is just as inexpensive to select an attractive color scheme as an unattractive one. Just as easy to apply the paint. It simply requires a little forethought and care. Color, which always plays a dominant role in determining artistic effect, is particularly important for the exteriors of homes. Even more than the lines and construction of the house, it reflects the character of its owner. It can be an expression of cheer and life, or one of depression and gloom. It can make the home pleasingly modest or glaringly conspicuous.

Several points must be taken into consideration in making the selection—the size, the type and the location of the house. A large house with fairly extensive grounds is adapted to almost any scheme. But a small house on a small lot requires particular thought. Light, bright colors give an effect of increased size and are therefore well adapted to such conditions. A good point to remember is that a trim lighter than the background makes a small house look larger, while a trim darker than the background gives the opposite effect. For instance, a small house of pearl gray might well be trimmed in deep cream, whereas a good combination for a larger house of the same color would be dark gray.

"The End of the Trail"

The statue of an Indian with a spear under his arm, sitting on a horse, in an attitude of utter abandonment, is intended to symbolize the passing of a great race—the Indian, once the proud, unchallenged master of this continent and its plains and streams and forests, but who now, as the sculptor, James Earl Fraser conceives it, stands hopeless and despairing at "the end of the trail." The statue is very literally at the end of the trail, too, in Golden Gate park, San Francisco.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. F. H. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for August 7

DAVID SPARES SAUL

LESSON TEXT—I Sam., chap. 26.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.
PRIMARY TOPIC—David's Kindness to His Enemy.
JUNIOR TOPIC—David Shows Mercy.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Treat Those Who Wrong Us.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Overcoming Evil With Good.

I. Saul in Pursuit of David (vv. 1-3).
Ever since David took his departure from Jonathan (ch. 20), when that crowning act of friendship was shown, Saul had been hunting him as a wild animal. He now pursues him with 3,000 chosen men. David flees from place to place and is in hiding as an outlaw. Sometimes he is in the enemy's country doing disreputable things. This is the period of his schooling, which fitted him to be the future eminent king. It was a bitter period in his life, but God sent him to this school and adapted the instruction to his needs. David could never have been the broad man that he was had he not been prepared in this crucible of bitter experience. He learned many lessons, among which may be mentioned:

1. His own weakness. It was necessary that he be humbled under the sense of his infirmities. Before any one is fit to be raised to a position of prominence he must be made to know his limitations and weaknesses. Unless a man has learned this lesson, sudden elevation to power will utterly ruin him.

2. His dependence upon God. David's many miraculous escapes caused him to realize that the Lord had redeemed him out of his adversity.

3. He learned the country and people over which he was to rule. By knowing the grievous afflictions which Saul had heaped upon the people, he could sympathize and remove them.

4. He learned the magnanimity of self-control. This a man must know before he can be a true king. He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city (Prov. 16:32).

II. Saul in David's Hands (vv. 4-20).
1. David sends out spies (v. 4). This he did to find out whether Saul was come in very deed.

2. David in Saul's camp (vv. 5-11). He took with him Abishai and went in the night to where Saul was sleeping. Abishai asked to be allowed to kill Saul, but David forbade him because Saul was the Lord's anointed.

3. David takes Saul's spear and cruse of water (vv. 12, 13). Once before at Engedi (chap. 24) David spared Saul's life. Now again he was at his mercy. This David did that he might show tangible evidence to the king that he had no evil intent.

4. David taunts Abner, the king's bodyguard (vv. 14-16). He calls to Abner and taunts him for his listlessness—his failure to watch over the Lord's anointed, the evidence of which is the cruse and spear in his hands.

5. David reasons with Saul (vv. 17-20). David reasoned with Saul, showing that he had nothing but good intentions toward the king. He asked that he would show what wrong he had done, or what evil intent was in his heart. If the Lord was directing Saul he was willing to appease His wrath with an offering. If Saul was only hunting him because wicked men were urging him, a curse should be pronounced upon them. David is very humble and begs Saul to relent, for surely if he had any wicked purpose he would not have saved his life twice when the Lord had placed Saul wholly at his mercy. David recognized the fact that the Lord had delivered Saul into his hands not to kill, but to save. He did not kill, neither did he allow his servants to kill.

III. Saul's Confession (vv. 21-25).

1. He confessed that he had sinned. The sad feature about his confession is that it lacked conviction, for he went right on sinning.

2. He confessed that he had played the fool and erred exceedingly. We see about us daily many using such expressions, but still they go on repeating their sins. David shows his magnanimity of spirit, however, in delivering the cruse and spear to Saul's servant. He knew that Saul's confession was not genuine, so he was afraid to go near. He still appeals to Saul's kindness to him, and they part never to meet again.

GAME BIRD FARMING DEMANDS KNOWLEDGE

Department of Agriculture Gives Out Instructions.

Washington.—Game farming, be it known, is not agriculture with roulette, faro, poker or craps as a side issue, or even with baseball, tennis or croquet. It is the propagation of game birds, and it is an activity of sufficient importance to call for a treatise on the subject from the United States Department of Agriculture.

With increase in population in this country, it states, the number of hunters has grown enormously, and with progressive settlement, areas naturally productive of game birds have been greatly restricted. Propagation is necessary, therefore, if the national supply of game is to be maintained.

The possibilities of game-bird propagation have long been demonstrated abroad. The first thing that an individual or an organization must consider before undertaking anything in this line is the securing of a license or permit. Most states have laws or regulations affecting the propagation of game birds, and many require game breeders to take out licenses. In addition, federal permits are necessary for lawful possession of wild ducks, wild geese and other migratory game birds in captivity. Federal permits are obtainable through the biological survey of the department of agriculture, which is also prepared to supply copies of digests of state laws on game-bird propagation, and the addresses of officials to whom application should be made for state licenses, and for full texts of state laws relating to game farming.

Give the Birds Room.

When the game-bird breeder is all set and raring to go, so far as his license and federal permit are concerned, the next thing for him to consider is the area of land he has available. He must give his birds plenty of room.

Small numbers of game birds can be reared with more or less extemporized equipment moved about within the confines of a roomy dooryard or in a small orchard, says the government bulletin. Game-bird propagation on a sustaining and business basis, however, requires plenty of room. The area of land available should be not less than four times that required to care for the birds properly for a single year. Plenty of space is needed for the further reason that in most cases it is desirable to produce birds that will be as wild and wary as possible.

On the efficient and economical game farm as much as possible of the seeds, grain and forage consumed by the birds must be produced on the ground. Insects, so necessary an element in the food of the young, must be wholly of local origin. This vital food supply, which more than any other factor determines the success or failure of game-bird production, depends almost directly upon soil fertility, for insects can subsist in abundance only upon rank vegetation.

Crops Must Be Rotated.

Moreover, soil fertility is not only an initial requirement, but it must be maintained, we are told. The purely agricultural phases of the game farm must be managed with just as much foresight and care, and in much the same way, as a hay or grain farm that is kept on a profit-yielding basis. Proper cultivation of the soil is important, not only in preserving the basis of production but also in rejuvenating the land after the fouling that is unavoidable when large numbers of birds have been kept on it for a long time.

Plowing, fallowing, fertilizing, planting, and cultivating are as essential to the upkeep of the farm upon which game birds are the crop as on any other. To rest and renovate fields upon which a crop of birds has been reared it is advisable to follow with little change the scheme of crop rotation that has been found satisfactory in the region concerned.

Sanitation, vermin control, fencing, traps for birds of prey, patrolling the game farm, shipping game birds and their eggs, details of breeding, getting a primary stock, liberating the birds in coverts, and improving coverts for upland game birds are some of the other problems upon which prospective propagators should be informed.

Mystery Surrounds Homer

Nothing definite is known concerning Homer, the great epic poet of ancient Greece. He was probably born near Smyrna in Asia Minor, but the date of his birth, as given by various authorities, varies from 1100 B. C. to 700 B. C. He was probably a wandering minstrel, and his great works are the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey."

OLD CUSTOM SEEN IN BRIGHT VOWS

Most of Them Handed Down Through Centuries.

Of all the strange relics of thought, primitive fancies and beliefs so surprisingly a part of civilized life, the marriage customs of different races are perhaps the most fascinating. No one ever stops to think of the meaning of the many practices so obviously a part of the modern marriage ceremony, yet each has a story of its own which stretches back through the centuries. Each little custom that the bride observes links her to the traditions of the dim and dusty past, and, although they have long been recognized as mere superstition, no bride would ignore them for the world.

The marriage rite, emerging from the shadows of prehistory, is one of the oldest of human institutions. Certain writers of authority believe that men and women originally had no higher marriage sense than the animals, while other writers of prominence believe that, although there was a time when the modern ceremony was not observed, marriage in its truer sense has existed since the beginning of time. Marriage has passed through three well-defined stages of development—marriage by capture, marriage by purchase, and marriage through mutual love. The word wedding, often so casually used, in itself reveals the old practice of securing a wife by purchase, for the "wed" was the money, horses or cattle with which the bridegroom purchased the bride from her father. As a slight compensation to the bridegroom for this money or goods, the father in turn presented the couple at marriage with a "trousse," meaning a little bundle.

The "trousse" later gave way to the trousseau, which in turn had its origin in the dowry. At first the value of the trousseau was an important factor in winning a husband, and many girls began making their bridal finery at a very early age. At one time it was quite the proper thing for the bridegroom to examine the trousseau and decide whether or not it was complete, and it is said that the choice of a suitor often depended upon the worth of the girl's outfit.

The hope chest, now a relic of other days, retained because it is a pretty and convenient custom, likewise had its origin in the oldtime dowry. Long ago the hope chest was very important in the life of every girl. In most homes there was a chest set aside for each daughter, into which bits of finery and handmade linens were placed for "the home of her hopes," from which can be seen the origin of the name. A widespread superstition associated with the hope chest is that a bit of handwork by the bride-to-be must be placed on each article contained therein if happiness is to bless the home. For this reason many brides prefer to initial linens themselves, which is well to remember when making gifts.

Out of the Frying Pan

Two deaf men were playing cards in a popular Paris barroom the other afternoon and, as both were poor players, they burst into frequent and violent recriminations in the strained, slightly monotonous tones which some deaf persons use. The room was crowded, and finally the other patrons began to complain of the uproar made by the two card players. Whereupon the manager, observing that it was about time to arrange the tables for dinner, courteously stopped the game and confiscated the cards. "It is the hour, gentlemen," said he, "when playing must be suspended."

"Oh, very well then," one of the deaf men bellowed to the other; "we'll just talk for a while."—From Le Figaro Hebdomadaire, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star.)

Wild Life Organized

Monkeys are said to be "born thieves." In the native jungles baboons organize regular bands to plunder adjoining orchards and plantations. Usually they have their "chief" who distributes sentinels at strategic points and lines up his forces to make sure of a "clean getaway." Some of the most charming and innocent birds are deliberate murderers. But there are few murders in the snake family. Occasionally one snake will swallow another, but this is usually attributed to hunger rather than hate. However, many snakes despise each other. The king snake, for instance, has no use for a rattler and will seek to choke him to death.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Sorry He Spoke

American tourists in Europe must not presume too much on the ignorance of the local residents. When an American tourist touring Greece was met in one town by a large delegation, headed by a patriarch, he called out facetiously to the dignified leader, "Hello, Bill! How's crops?"

The patriarch replied, in equally as understandable English, according to a correspondent of the New York Sun: "Crops is all right. But what the h—l business is it of yours?" The patriarch had lived 14 years in Detroit.

Charitable Physician

That he had given gratuitous advice to about 200,000 poor people was declared by Dr. M. Thompson, of Omagh, Ireland, in a letter sent recently to the Clogher board of guardians. The message was in regard to unpaid fees for the care of poor in the vicinity of Ulster.

Newville 13—Taneytown 0.

Taneytown tried to play a game with Newville, Pa., at Griest Park, York Springs, on Thursday. Tried, is right. It was something like this. Newville could hit the Taneytown pitchers hard, while Taney could hardly hit the Newville pitchers at all. And anybody who could hit a ball hard into that miserable outfield, was reasonably sure of a two base hit, or more. With a fairly good field Newville would have won the game, just the same, but the score would not have been 13 to 0. For the rest, see the score.

Taneytown 7—York 1.

The York "Professionals" on Wednesday, piloted by Fern Hitchcock, dropped a snappy game here. There wasn't much real Taneytown in the game, owing to two of our local regulars being unable to play, but it was "our" team just the same and the game was an all-around good one.

A large amount of the credit belonged to Pitcher Utz, who was in fine form and regular throughout the game, having ten strike-outs, without giving a single pass, and allowed but five safe hits. Simpson, for York, was unsteady, by spells, during the last half of the game and gave four passes and ten hits that counted for 16 bases. The fielding was sharp on both sides, Taneytown's single error not counting for anything, while one of the two errors of the visitors cost two runs.

An odd feature of the game was that the seven winning runs were equally divided between seven players. York was robbed of runs due to the fine field work of the home team, but this was equally true on the other side. All of the scoring, on both sides, was done in four innings.
