WHAT CENSUS FIGURES DEMONSTRATE

Considerable Loss in the County Outside of the Towns.

We have secured information from the Census Department, concerning the population of Carroll County since 1850, as follows;

1850 28,619 1860 30,992 33,860 33,934 1910 34,245 1920

The figures show marked, decline in percentage of increase. From 1900 to 1920 the increase in population of the whole county was only 385. As the various towns in the county have increased greatly more than 385, in twenty years it is reasonably safe to say that the area outside of the towns has to 1928 decreased in population perhaps from 1000 to 1500, allowing for the eight years that have passed since the last cen-

Regarding the figures we have, in another way, we find the population of the state to have grown as follows:

1860 687,049 1870 780.894 934,943 1,188,044 1.295,346 1,449,661

In percentage the increase in the state's population from 1890 to 1900 was 14.0; from 1900 to 1910, it was 9.0; and from 1910 to 1920, it was 11.9, which shows that the state as a whole about doubled its population since 1870 while Carroll county has increased only about 20 percent.

Carrying the analysis further, Baltimore City increased from 508,957 in 1900 to 733,828 in 1920, percentage increases of 24.5 percent to 38.8 percent. Washington county, including Hagerstown, increased 20.3 percent from 1910 to 1920; while Frederick county, including the city, increased only 0.3 percent, or less than Caroll's increases

We give the tables of population for the personal analysis of our readers. In our judgment, they show a very strong trend of population away from agricultural sections, which, if kept up much longer, will so thin out farming sections of help as to make it practically impossible for many farms to be operated. The closing of coun-try schools, of course, is partly due to lack of pupils to keep them open, and in some sections country churches are sharing the same fate.

The defense of Grimes was that he did not know what the bottle he delivered contained, and that it was not his property consequently could not give it; that Owings had asked him to bring him a bottle of "medicine" from his (Owings) truck, and that he had done so. The evidence was that Grimes had another package to de-

Prisoners in the jail, however, testified as to the delivery, and the Justice evidently thought the transaction a violation of the County's local option laws. Owings is in jail charged with buying cattle from farmers, and giving checks for which he had no money in bank to meet.

Lutheran Campaign for $4,000,000.

The United Lutheran Church throughout the U.S., is about to put on a campaign to raise $4,000,000 for the Board of Ministerial Pensions Relief. This will mean, on the percapita basis, about $6.00 per member including the entire membership, which if paid in full would more than raise the amount. The campaign will open February 5 and will close

The campaign was originated by the Lutheran Brotherhood, and will largely be conducted by the laymen of the church, supported by the min- lic back through their special privilistry. In general, the proposition is enthusiastically supported. Payment of pledges may cover five instalments within three years, but most of them will no doubt be made in the beginning, or within a shorter term than the three years.

The $4,000,000 will represent an endowment fund, only the interest of which will be used in connection with the annual amounts raised through offerings for Benevolence.

The minutes of the previous meet-ing were read and approved with two exceptions, namely;

Wm. Bankard reported to the Club that he had consulted Chas. Valentine with regards to becoming Vice-President, of the Auto Club, which he declined to accept due to his obligations to the Railroad Co. S. R. Weybright was then unanimously elected Vice-President of the Club.

The gas committee reported that they had endeavored to ascertain the total amount of gas sold during 1927 at the 15 filling stations in Taney-town District, and reported the total sales as far as they were able to ascertain to be 268,349 gallons, or a total revenue to the state for gas sold during 1927 to be $10,733.96; this however, is not the correct total as the committee was unable to secure an accurate statement from all of the 15 filling stations. The By-Law Committee reported that they had not formulated a new set of By-Laws for the Club, and in view of this fact the present By-Laws still stand approved as read at our first meeting. The meeting place committee was voiced by John Hilterbrick, who said he had conferred with Geo. W. Shriner as to the possibility of securing the Shriner Theatre as a permanent meeting place of the Club. Mr. Shriner told Mr. Hilterbrick that the Club could have the use of the Theatre as a meeting place by paying $1.00 per night for defraying the expense of light, etc.

Chas. E. H. Shriner stated that this is by no means a building open to the public at $1.00 per night for social functions generally, but only for meetings of the Auto Club.

The membership committee reported an enrollment of 59 members at the first meeting of the Club, with an additional enrollment of 11 new members since our last meeting, making a total of 70 members enrolled to date. An opportunity to join the Club was extended to those present which resulted in an enrollment of 10 new members, making a total of 80 members enrolled at the close of the

Chas. E. Ridinger read a set resolutions which was formulated by the Executive Committee at a meet-William T. Grimes, of Westminster, Shriner Theatre, said resolutions were adopted by the Club. The following extract was taken from the aforesaid resolutions:

The resolutions were adopted as read, hence the banquet will be held the Firemen's Building, on Feb. 21st. 1928, at 7:30.

The Secretary was ordered to pur-chase a suitable book for the minutes of the Club, also to have stationery printed suitable to the organization. Quite a lively discussion of the automobile queries outlined at our last meeting took place near the close Taneytown Plant included the Big Merger.

The Western Maryland Dairy corporation, of which the Taneytown plant is a part, previously operating with the Hanover Creamery Co., has consolidated with the Fairfield Farms Dairy, both corporations heretofore operating from Baltimore. The new capitalization is said to represent about $13,000,000.

It is said that President Charles Bowman, of the Fairfield Farms, and but 36 years old, who started in the milk business fifteen years ago, with one wagon will be the new president, and that the firm name will be Western Maryland Dairy Co.

The Company is now the largest south of Philadelphia, and it is believed that the consolidation will result in lower cost of management, and perhaps increased business.

Disease Storm Signals.

Like the weather man who sends a warning up and down the coast when storms may be expected, Dr. R. H. Riley, Chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health, reminds mothers throughout the State that during the winter months, when children are brought together in large groups in school or movies and elsewhere and when they play less frequently in the open air, measles, whooping cough, diphtheria and other diseases that often follow them, particularly bronchitis, and pneumonia, are likely to be prevalent. He accordingly urges Maryland mothers to safeguard their babies and young children, to whom such diseases are especially danger-

"The old idea that children's diseases do not amount to much," Dr. Riley said, "and that it would save time to let the baby stay in the room and play around with Jack and Betty when the older ones come down with the measles or whooping cough or with any of the other catching diseases, so that they may all have it together and 'have it over' has gone into the discard, since health departments have been keeping careful records of when and where and to whom such diseases occur. "The records of the Maryland State Department of Health," he continued, 'like those of other health departments throughout the world, show that these so-called children's disease, and in fact, nearly all catching diseases, go especially hard with babies and the youngsters under school age. It is most important, therefore, that babies and young children be protected against these diseases until We fully agree with The Observer. the period of greatest danger is over.

FATALLY GORED BY A BULL

Mr. Theodore E. Feeser, Retired Farmer, a Sudden Victim.

On Monday of this week, about noon Mr. Theodore E. Feeser, well known retired farmer of Taneytown, while at his farm about a mile and a half from town along the Middleburg road, tenanted by his son, Russell Feeser, was attacked by a large bull and so badly gored that death followed at Frederick Hospital, on Tuesday eve-

Mr. Feeser had gone to the farm to do some repair work at the buildings, and after having put his horse in the barn, and while getting some straw from a stack in the barnyard, he was suddenly attacked by a large bull that tossed him up, then threw him to the ground, one horn entering his left side below the ribs, tearing the ribs from the breast bone and puncturing his lungs, and the other horn tearing his neck and otherwise injuring him.

His daughter-in-law, who heard the noise of the struggle, rushed to the spot, secured a pitch fork and bravely drove the animal away at great risk to her own safety, and managed to get Mr. Feeser into the barn, after which she summoned help.

Drs. Here is at least a partial list of the responsibilities of a farm woman, some of which, at least, distinguish her from her city cousin. They include her housekeeping, her material care of her family, and her responsi-bility to herself, her family and her friends for mental and spiritual growth. She is usually manager of a small farm business such as poultry raising, the home dairy, or the garden. As farming is a true partnership business, she is the farmer's business partner, planning the work with him and deciding with him where the money earned shall be placed to the greatest advantage. "This," a student of relations in farm homes remarks, "gives her an especial opportunity for progress and for happiness, provided she can find time to think about it constructively."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE IN HAVANA

President Coolidge and party left Washington for Key West, by rail last Friday, on the first lap to the Pan-American Congress that meets ran-American Congress that meets in Havana, where the party embarked on the battleship Texas, on Sunday morning for the Cuban City.

The party consisted of President and Mrs. Coolidge, Secretaries Kellogg, Davis and Wilbur, and Charles Evans Hughes, of New York, and other prominent quests of the President er prominent guests of the President, as well as various secretaries and reporters.

The President's landing in Havana, on Sunday, was the greatest demonstration ever given in Cuba to any man, and laid in the shade the big demonstrations to Col. Lindbergh in this country for elaborateness of preparation, and for the tumultuous character of the greeting; much of the same character that was given President Wilson on his entry into

This was the first time that President Coolidge landed on foreign soil since he took office, and the welcome he received from President Machado, and both official and unofficial Cuba, turned itself loose with an enthusiasm and vigor that was not only tumultuous, but evidently extremely friendly. The President and Mrs. Coolidge were taken to the National palace, the Cuban president's home, where both were kept busy a long while acknowledging the crowd's demands, after which the various Cuban officials were presented to them.

On Monday, the Pan-American con-ference was officially opened by Presidents Machado and Coolidge, both joining in the advocacy of a policy of mutual good will, and asserting that American republics could, and would, work out their own destinies, and in doing so would maintain the ideals of the western world. Again there was a wild demonstration of enthusiasm. Graham McNamee the well known radio announcer, reported the events between the speeches, and described the sights in general

Although the audience which jammed the Cuban National Theater was predominantly Spanish-speaking, Pres-ident Coolidge frequently was interrupted with bursts of enthusiastic applause. Homes of Earth.

Earth has been used for building dwellings and other structures for many centuries. One method of use, superior to others and which was known and used by the Romans, is be-ing revived for modern buildings. The method consists of ramming slightly moist earth, without the addition of straw or other material, between movable forms, and is known by its French name "pise de terre" which means "rammed earth." Philadelphia Dead May Not Vote Hereafter.

Philadelphia at last seems to be trying to do a very proper thing-stop the dead from being voted. Washington that fills The Record is most remarkable. At one time or another, about everything has been given a sure cure, but cancer. There is nothing made anywhere in the world that some Senator or Representative does not know all about: and there is never a cure for a political ill advanced by a gentleman on one side of the House, that a gentleman on the other side does not have a better cure for. Omniscience simply runs rampant in its columns. If a crossroads political expert wants more argument with which to replemish his stock in trade, all he needs to do is read a few issues of the Congressional Record, and he is sure to have his order filled. It is an encyclopedia, treasury of wisdom, joke book, fairy stories, and rules of etiquette combined.

If there is any information, line of argument, or hidden secret, not found anywhere else; or any statistics you may want from cod fish to behemoths, it is in the C. R. Or, whether it be the latest rules for playing marbles, or how to construct flying machines and submarines, that is wanted, it's all the same—it's there--for Congress is the "knowingest" place there is.

Humble Beginning of York's Great Minster York minster, erected 1,300 years ago, owes its conception to the passion of an early English king. It was Edwin, the king of Northumbria, whose ardent love for a Christian princess caused him to erect the first minster. Edwin was a pagan then, and Eadbald, king of Kent, refused to sanction a marriage between his sister Ethelburga and Edwin, holding it unlawful for a Christian maiden to be wed to a pagan. However, Edwin's love for the princess ruled his every action and he resolved to become a Christian. History records that they were married while Edwin was still a pagan. Bishop Paulinus, who held great sway at Eadbald's court, did not hide his disapproval of the match, but he was a wise man, and instead of wasting time in idle words he set about the task, with the aid of the new queen, of converting Edwin. On Easter day, 627, Edwin was baptized in a small wooden church called St. Peter the Apostle, and this was the first minster of York. The primitive structure was later enclosed in a stone building at Edwin's request, but before it was completed, the convert was assassinated by Oswald, who became his successor. A Norman cathedral, years after, marked the spot where the first minster stood, and where the present great minster now stands.-London Tit-Bits.

Habit, Not Instinct,

Is Mankind's Ruler

What a world there is behind that one word habit! If you would get close to human nature, forget all you ever have heard about instincts and throw away your notions about natural bents and predispositions and innate talents and "blood," because man is not that kind of animal. He is a creature of habits—a few bad ones can ruin him for life. Look into habits-find out how they start, how they are formed, how they end, how they may be broken, et cetera, and why some are good and some simply ruinous. Note especially how emotional habits eternally move us this way and that. And before you decide that this boy or that woman never was fitted for this or that role, remember that any one of a dozen bad emotional habits may make success impossible in almost any direction. These habits were made, not born-George A. Dorsey, in Cosmopolitan.

Not of Indian Origin

As to the origin of the expression 'Indian summer," Mr. Albert Matthews has shown that it does not occur anywhere either in printed books or manuscripts until the year 1794, popular belief that Indian summer weather was predicted by the native Indians in conversation with the first European settlers finds no documentary corroboration, and the idea that the term "Indian summer" was employed by the early settlers seems to be a myth. In general, neither this term nor anything corresponding to it is to be found in any Indian language. The term "Indian Summer" in its present usage was introduced into England from America. In 1778 Horace Walpole used the same expression, but he evidently had in mind the intense heats of the midsummer weather in India and the West Indies.

Eminent Domain

Eminent domain is the right of a government to take private property for public uses without the owner's permission, provided just compensation is given. In this manner land is obtained for parks, post offices, forts and sites used for other public purposes. Governments often confer the right of eminent domain on railroad, telephone and other private companies engaged in callings generally regarded as essential to the public welfare. Eminent domain is based on the principle that an individual's private interests should not be permitted to stand in the way of the interests of the whole community in which he lives.—Exchange.

Seems to Be Book Surplus

With 55 miles of books on its shelves, the British museum has to find places for 35,000 more each year, according to an article in Capper's Weekly. "To place new books and newspaper and periodical files, the museum has been building extra swinging tresses and supporting them on the cast iron framework of the dome," Capper's Weekly continues. "It has now warned that if more weight is placed on the dome the whole structure may be pulled down. What is the world going to do with its books?"

Swift's Great Power

as Satirist of Vice Swift is unquestionably the greatest of English satirists, and it is interesting to observe why he is so much more effective than our numerous satirists today, of whom we have God's plenty. The reason—apart from the incomparable austerity and beauty of his prose style—is not far to seek. It can be stated in two words. Our present contemporary satirists ridicule virtue; Swift ridiculed vice. Our living satirists attack religious and moral people, and, above all, they make fun of anyone intensely in earnest. If this earnestness is directed not toward the predatory selfish satisfaction of lust or lucre, but expresses itself in religious, moral or social reform, then the satire takes on increasing intensity. Swift attacks treachery, ingratitude, lechery, pimping, uncleanness, hatred, envy, swinishness, avarice, and the wholesale murder sentimentalized under the name of patriotism. And it is because these degrading vices were all about him in England in 1726 and all about us in England and in America at present that the cutting edge of his sword went so deep and made so many victims wriggle, and it also explains why that sword has not lost its edge in 200 years.-William Lyon Phelps, in Yale Review.

Town Failed to Live

Up to Expectations

The old town of Quindaro on the Missouri river above Kansas City was founded in 1856 by free state boomers who came from New England. Kansas City and Leavenworth were either neutral or were dominated by sympathizers of the South.

The New England emigrants wanted a "port of entry" of their own. The town was built up rapidly with a large hotel, great warehouses, a steamboat landing, and other evidences of a "future great metropolis." During the Civil war, however, the men all went to fight. When they returned the Union Pacific was building west through the Kaw valley, and a little later the Hannibal bridge was constructed, forever making Kansas City the "port of entry."

Quindaro was abandoned. Its hotel and warehouses went to decay, and now all that remains are the ruins and the memory of a struggle of a few brave men who believed they were right, but who were mistaken in their judgment as to the geographical location of the "future great metropolis." -Kansas City Star.

Trees in Miniature

Anyone can grow miniature trees. Cut a thick-skinned orange in two and remove the pulp from one of the halves. Put a coating of shellac on the outside of this little "bowl," and fill the hollow with rich soil. In it plant a couple of seeds of an evergreen tree, such as pine or cedar, and prop the bowl upright in a room where it will get plenty of sunlight. Water the soil occasionally, and do not let the room get overheated.

When the roots begin to force a way through the orange skin cur them off level with the surface, taking care not to injure the shellac coating. When the tree has attained fair growth, it may be transplanted to a large flower pot, but the curtailment of its roots will permanently stunt its growth.

I finished a box of figs, and while I write you I am eating my second box of maraspan and drinking a crock of Erfurter rock-cellar beer. It is excellent!"

He figured he smoked 100,000 cigars in five years and killed 5,000 bottles of champagne.

Our Wonderful Language

It takes a spelling contest to bring out how many words there are that are spelled in two ways. Several failed this year on the word "brier," spelling it briar. They were marked wrong—a careful look at Webster's latest International reveals "briar" a variant spelling of "brier." "Skillful" was a poser for many of the graders. Webster permits both the single and the double "l" form. The last man to drop out in one match went down on "ascendant." He spelled it with an "e." Either way is permissible.—Capper's Weekly.

On one occasion after an attack and repulse of a counter-attack an American general officer went into the front line in search of a field officer. Seeing none, he called out: "Who is in command here?" A buck private replied: "I am, sir." All his officers, commissioned and noncommissioned, were casualties.

I believe that our discipline would have held in the face of any disaster, though we escaped the test by good fortune. I never yet have asked an American soldier to do anything, no matter how silly or unreasonable it seemed to him on its face, that he did not grasp at it and obey if the wherefores were briefly explained to him. In this respect the younger officer of the know-it-all type is less responsive than the men.-Maj. Gen. Hunter Liggett in the Saturday Evening Post.

Why Press Is Called

the "Fourth Estate" The daily press is called the Fourth Estate because of its great influence in government and public affairs. In England, as well as France, the church, the nobility and the common people were called the three estates of the realm. Who first described the press as the Fourth Estate is a disputed question. In "Heroes and Hero Worship" Thomas Carlyle says: "Burke said there were Three Estates in Parliament; but, in the Reporters' Gallery yonder, there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all." It is not quite clear whether Carlyle intended to quote the exact words of Burke. At any rate, the phrase does not appear in any of Burke's published writings. Three years before Carlyle published the book mentioned he published "The Fourth Estate." It contains the sentence: "A Fourth Estate, of Able Editors, springs up." Macaulay had used the same phrase as early as

The saying that a cat has nine lives is very old. It was proverbial long before Shakespeare's time. The idea was probably suggested by the fact that a cat is more tenacious of life than most other animals. Those who have undertaken to kill cats appreciate that fact. Attempts have been made to trace the origin of the common expression back to ancient Egypt. It is often said that Pasht, or Bastet, the cat-headed goddess of Egypt, had nine lives and that this circumstance gave rise to the old saying about a cat having nine lives. But Egyptologists find no evidence for the statement. n fact Bastet, being a goddess, would be regarded as im-Nine however was a favorite number in Egypt, as well as with other ancient orientals, and it may have somehow been associated with the cat-headed goddess.—Exchange.

Why Covered Bridges

The United States bureau of public roads says old-time timber bridges were constructed with roofs and sides to protect them from the weather. According to that authority, effective housing usually adds many years to the useful life of wooden bridges. In the old days lumber was so cheap and it cost very little extra to cover a bridge with a roof. Covered bridges were not built, as often supposed, as a shelter in case of storm. Such bridges are still occasionally built in some sections of the United States .-Pathfinder Magazine.

Why Chinese Are "Taboo"

Chinese in New Zealand are said to be causing such unfair competition that they are being feared by business men, who want them barred from the country. Although last reports showed only 3,300 Chinese there, it is said that hundreds are journeying down from China and being coached for the education test by pursers of vessels. A white New Zealand league has been formed, and it recently asked the minister of customs to establish an embargo against all Chinese.

The Reformed Church bell was rung eight minutes on Monday afternoon, in recognition of the eighth anniversary of the time when the Eighteenth Amendment became effective. If the Church people, who ought to be the salt of the earth, would do their duty, our country would soon be rid of that low-down class of detestable traitors, the bootleggers. If any of members present. tous trade think that traitor is the wrong label for them, the writer of these lines will try to prove it to them, by facts and logic if they are capable of absorbing any information. Mr. Charles Miller, of North Main St., was hurt in an auto upset, just over the line, on the road leading from here to Hanover, Pa. He has been in a state of unconsciousness most of the time since then. The car in which he was riding was owned and driven by a Baltimore man, who was cut about the face and stunned. It is alleged that they were transporting material of a questionable character, which is in the hands of proper authorities. "Be sure your sins will Wuxtry Speshul!

The railway line was flooded on account of the heavy rainstorms, and the traveler was obliged to break his journey at a village. He made his way in the pouring rain to an inn, and said to the waiter there: "It is like the deluge." "The what?"

"The deluge. Haven't you read about the deluge.—Noah and the Ark —and Mount Aaraat?" "No, sir," said the waiter; "we have had no papers here for three days.

New Guinea Natives

Hostile to Visitors

New Guinea is the largest island (except' Australia) in the world. It is situated in the south Pacific ocean just north of Australia and somewhat southeast of the Philippines.

There are over six hundred thousand black natives on the island, some of them still very savage and hostile to strangers. Being so near to the equator, the temperature is never cold, except on the mountain tops; and for this reason the natives do not require solidly built houses. Their habitations are very simple structures. They are made of reeds or the branches of certain trees, and covered either with some of the long grasses that grow in the islands or with the leaves of palm trees. Some of the villages have streets as straight as our own, but they are not paved, being merely dirt roads worn smooth by the naked feet of the inhabitants. The houses must be rainproof, for rains in these regions are often heavy; and they are also proof against earthquakes.

Wearing Stairs

Stairways do not wear down at the same rate on both sides, according to a builder. The right side going up, wears down most, he says, because people walking upstairs do so with more effort (and consequent wear on the step) than those coming down. This is especially noticeable in stairways of soft marble where the right side often will be notched deeply while steps on the left hardly are scratched.

Chip Off the Old Block

While the spelling lesson was going on, the teacher gave the class words to use in sentences. Addressing ten-year-old Junior, the drum major's son, she asked, "Junior, will you use the word banquet correctly in a sentence?"

After deep deliberation and a thought concerning his father's vocation, Junior replied: "When the speaker stepped upon the platform, the 'band-quit.'"

DIED.

MR. J. SAMUEL OCKER.

Mr. J. Samuel Ocker, formerly of Taneytown, died at the Fahrney Memorial Home, at San Mar, on Wednesday of last week, in his 90th. year. He had lived in Hagerstown and various other places after leaving the Taneytown neighborhood, but returned here every few years. He was a veteran of the Civil War. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Lewis Galor, of Hagerstown, and two sons; Lewis, of Wichita, Kansas, and John, of Polo, Ill. Burial was in the Reformed cemetery, Taneytown, where some years ago he had quite an imposing monument erected.

MRS. SALLIE STULLER.

Mrs. Sallie Stuller, wife of Mr. Samuel Stuller, died on Friday evening, January 13, near Maidensville, from a stroke of paralysis, after about two hours illness, aged 54 years, 5 months, 19 days. She was married three times, first to Samuel Haines, next to Isaac Gilbert, then to

She is survived by two children by first marriage; Mrs. Philip Weller, of Clear Ridge, and Mrs. John S. Haines; Mrs. Emma Greenwood, Mt. Airy, and Mrs. J. M. Carter, of Hagerstown; two brothers, Harry and Samuel Fritz.

Funeral services at the home on Monday afternoon, in charge of Revs. J. E. Lowe and J. B. Rupley. Services and interment at Winters Church.

MR. GEORGE E. KOUTZ. Mr. George E. Koutz, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Koutz, a well known citizen of Taneytown, was stricken with paralysis on Tues-day night of last week and died Tuesday evening, January 17, without becoming conscious.

He had been afflicted for many years with a form of rheumatism that stiffened his joints, so that he was unable to walk, but made use of a wheel chair which enabled him to get about in good weather. He was agent for the Dug Hill Insurance Co., and was in general a good business man notwithstanding his affliction, and had a large circle of friends. He is survived by his wife and the following children; Mrs. W. Rein Motter, Kenneth and Herman Koutz, all of Taneytown, and by two sisters, Nettie Weaver, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Oliver M. Crouse, of Westminster.

His age was 55 years, 5 months, 22 days. Funeral services were held this Friday morning, at the home in charge of his pastor, Rev. Guy P. Bready. He was a charter member of Washington Camp No. 2, P. O. S. of A., and the funeral service of the order was rendered at the grave.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At the regular meeting of Washington Camp, No. 2, of Maryland Patriotic Order Sons of America, held the 19th. day of January, 1928, the following minutes were adopted as a last tribute of respect to Geo. E. Koutz.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst Brother George E. Koutz, a charter member, who was a most devoted husband, a kind father, a good citizen and one who had the respect of all who knew him.

Resolved, That this Camp send its deepest sympathy to the widow and family of Brother George E. Koutz, and to his relatives and friends in their bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the grief-stricken family, a copy be also published in the Carroll Record, and a copy be spread upon the record of this Camp.

Resolved, That we do humbly submit to Him who gives and who doth take away; also, that we, like Brother Koutz, let our lights so shine that they may resemble the many stars that bestud the canopy above.

Many Persons Unable

to Distinguish Colors It is a curious fact that color-blind persons are not often aware of their defect of vision. Even scientific men frequently fail to detect this defect in

The following is a favorite theory to account for the cause of colorblindness. The eye is capable of four distinct color sensations-blue, yellow, red and green. These arise, however, from only two sources, each of which has a double action, producing the sensations of two complementary colors. One of the sources of sensation corresponds to blue and yellow, the other to red and green. Most color-blind people are deficient in the latter source of sensation and can distinguish, therefore, only blue and yellow, with their compounds, but sometimes the reverse is the case. The number of persons afflicted in this way is much larger than is commonly supposed. The average is said to be one in every 25 men. Women are rarely troubled with color-blind-

Bones of Mammoth Herd

10,000 Years Old Found New York.-Discovery of the bones of a large herd of mainmoths that had "bogged down" in a salt creek in the desert wastes near Carlsbad cavern in New Mexico more than 10,000 years ago, was related in a dispatch to the New York Times from Carl B. Livingston, assistant to Willis T. Lee of the National Geographic society. The society's explorers, Livingston said, had suspected that mammoths had once lived in the desert waste, 35 miles southeast of Carlsbad cavern, because ivory beads had been found among the relics of the cavemen who buried their dead in cave tombs in the Guadalupe mountains, overlooking the region.

Picking up a mammoth tooth at the mouth of a small creek, the party proceeded along the windings of the stream and found fragments of a massive jawbone.

"Reaching some water holes, which turned out to be briny," the dispatch said, "we saw tusks and many huge bones, exposed by torrents that had cut through the gravel bars and clay banks. Apparently a herd of 25 or 30 mammoths had died in this one

"Evidently all these animals during ages past had been lured there by the tempting appearance of good water," Mr. Livingston continued. "It is equally easy to surmise how they met their deaths. We were walking along over what seemed a dry crust in the stream bed-then suddenly, down we went, hip deep in quicksand and soft

Odd Census Taking

Nopaltzin, chief of the Chicthimecan tribe of Indians that once inhabited the valley of Mexico, devised a simple plan for taking the census of his subjects. Under his system no census-taker trod upon the newly washed front porch of the careful housewife, leaving footprints in sticky clay. Nor did the agent inquire into the private matter of the family head. Instead, each subject placed a small stone for each member of his family. Carriers then collected the stones and hauled them to an open field, where they were counted and placed in heaps. Twelve of these heaps have been discovered by scientists and a count of the stones indicates the Chicthimecan tribe contained 3,200,000 members.

Truthfulness in Child

A way to promote a virtue is to give the child the reputation for having it. We all show unmistakable tendencies to live up to labels fastened upon us; if the child gets the idea that he is a liar, he is likely to tell lies. On the other hand, if he believes that he is a truth-teller his habits will conform to that picture. Better still, of course, is to let him live in an atmosphere of truth. If a child is brought up in a home where truth telling is regarded as a simple matter of course, he is likely to develop into a truth-teling child .-Winthrop D. Lane in the Delineator Magazine.

The Wrong Place

One day Mrs. B- saw a bill collector coming and decided to hide. She stepped into a pantry out of sight of the door and lef him knock and knock. Finally he gave up and went away to return another day.

The next time he called Mrs. Bwas ready with her payment and went to the door. Just as he was leaving the agent called back: "If you ever want to hide from me again choose some better place than the pantry. The mirror in your buffet showed me just where you were."

Believe Earth Hollow

The hollow earth theory holds that the earth or universe is a hollow sphere with the sun in the center and that we live on the inner surface of this sphere. This is one of the tenets of the Koreshans, a communistic body at Estero, Lee county, Fla. The colonly was founded by Cyrus R. Teed, a physician, who was born at Utica, N. Y., in 1830. "Koreshan" is derived from "Koresh," the Hebrew word for Cyrus. The Koreshans hold that Jesus was God Almighty and that Teed was sent as the Messiah on earth. Although the central order is celibate, their aim is not to abolish marriage, but rather to purify it.

CHANCE

TO SAY that there is no such thing as luck, is merely to lie.

Din that into the ears of young peo ple, and sooner or later they will find out you don't know what you are talking about.

Then it will be impossible to con vince them of a very important truth -which is that luck or no luck, they will stand a far better chance of get ting ahead if they keep their minds on their jobs, and have a purpose in life than if they do not.

It always amuses, and sometimes irritates me when I hear some ponderous gentleman address a company of young men or women on life and success, and point to himself as proof that it can always be attained by for lowing the copy book maxims.

Given a good mind and native in dustry, it can.

But given a poor mind, and a lazy disposition, it can't-and that is that. There are in the world plenty of people, who prosper, for one reason or another without much effort.

Some of them inherit fortunes, which are so sewed up by their benefactors that they cannot be dissipated. Some of them merely fall into fortunes—as the accidental discoverers of oil wells or gold mines, or the buyers of country property which increase enormously in value because railroads are run through them or cities extend out to them. But first to last, by and large, it is Carbide, $5.35 Can Automobile Batteries. for one person who succeeds by luck there are a hundred who succeed by their own efforts.

But leave out the luck element in talking to young people, and as soon as they discover you cannot honestly leave it out, they will discount everything you say and all your advice will count for nothing with them.

Why not admit that here and there people are born with fortunes on their shoulders-with money, or with some talent which can be turned into money.

Then show them by citing many examples, that these lucky people are but few, and that even they are not sure of keeping their luck, as is proved by the example of many rich young men who squander their money as soon as they get a chance.

Then make it clear that the one sure way to better oneself steadily is to plan a course through life, but it will mean steady improvement in the condition, and greater happiness and self-satisfaction.

If you, dear reader, are lucky, so much the better. Improve your luck and hold on to it.

If you are not lucky, no matter. There is no reason why you cannot go farther than many of the people who are, if you set to work with grim determination to reach some station in life worth gaining. (Copyright.)

Rocky source of wood pulp," says a bulletin headlands run far into the sea. Deep from the Washington headquarters of | fiords cut the fir-covered hills of the the National Geographic society. Interior, where subarctic vegetation dor is in the latitude of London and the fisherman. Grand falls, on the the northern tip opposite Leningrad, Hamilton river, is nearly three times no warm ocean current washes its shores to produce the temperate climate of northern Europe. Cold winter winds sweep from the Arctic across a rocky and sparsely inhabited coast, though explorers say the short summers are delightful.

"The entire region at present has and live in neat wooden houses, sup-Indians and half-breeds hunt the fox, marten, bear, wolverine and other furbearing animals which haunt evergreen woods stretching as far north

"This fir belt covers large areas of the interior of Labrador in all but the extreme northern part, but only touches the rocky coast at the heads of long narrow bays and the mouths of rivers. As a future source of paper pulp this hitherto little regarded region is of immense value, and already a few mills have been established and concessions granted. Pulp forests are one of the potential sources of wealth. Another asset is unlimited water power of the numerous coastal rivers.

"White settlements are mainly on the southeastern coast of Labrador. Here a sparse but sturdy population of Scotch and Scandinavian extraction, together witih a few French Canadians, carry on cod and whale fisheries. The number of white inhabitants is quadrupled during the summer months by Newfoundlanders who come north for cod fishing, the principal industry. Of late years the whale, seal and cod have all decreased in numbers in Labrador waters. This is thought to be one reason for the steadily decreasing population of the coast. Another factor is that contact with diseases of civilization has proved fatal to whole communities of Eskimos and Indians. Missionaries are making heroic efforts to save the remainder of the native races from extinction by teaching them to adapt their mode of living to changed conditions, and these good offices have met with considerable success.

Scenery Rivals Norway.

"One effort to compensate for the diminishing number of sea animals has been the introduction into Labrador of the reindeer, which has for centuries been the main support of the Lapps of northern Scandinavia and which has been successfully raised in Alaska. This attempt is said to have proved successful and promises one solution of the food problem if the development of pulp and milling industries is extended. Another alleviating condition is that work in mills already established has helped lift the workers from entire dependence on the fluctuating fortunes of fishing and hunting.

"Wireless stations are bringing larger settlements into closer contact with the outside world. It is predicted that when this means of communication has been extended and coasts are better charted and lighthouses built that Labrador with its rocky inlets and bracing climate will become, Washington.—"Labrador, since the like Norway, a rendezvous for sum-"Though the southern end of Labra- flourishes, and salmon streams invite as high as Niagara."

Mystery of Rheumatism

Rheumatism used to be thought an ailment due to exertion and exposure. It was considered natural that agricultural laborers should be bent and gnarled in old age.

Slowly there came the knowledge that rheumatism is due to a poison in the blood, and has nothing to do with hard work or the weather. Now we know that rheumatism affects the heart.

In a British ministry of health report, Sir George Newman says that almost all deaths from heart disease of people under forty are caused by the effects of rheumatic infection. The nature of the infection has still to be discovered, and research work in this direction is badly needed.

IT WAS A COLORFUL AFFAIR

EURICULULURICULURIUR

USTIN BIRCH lived alone in the old Birch homestead, as it was called by everybody in Centerville. He was a fine, middle-aged man. In fact he was just the kind of man who might have been expected to win the heart of any woman he sought. But, strange to say, this was not the case.

When Austin Birch was twenty he had fallen desperately and finally in love with Culla Cath. He still loved her and he had tried to win her by every art known to a lover. Culla would have none of him. She lived with her mother in a pretty white house which stood directly across the street from the old Birch homestead. Culla was a pretty woman only a year or two younger than Austin. She, too, might have married anyone of a dozen admirers, but she shook her head to all their pleadings and continued to live on with her mother. Of course, Culla was always friendly in a neighborly way. She was also duly appreciative of the many gifts of grapes, apples and fresh vegetables which Austin was constantly carrying across to the Cath home, but her thanks were usually politely couched in such phrases as: "Those grapes you brought over were perfectly lovely, Austin. Mother enjoyed them so much. She wished me to thank you for her."

Finally in desperation Austin took his problem to old Mr. Burns who had had three fine wives and was supposed to be an authority on matrimonial subjects.

Surely, even the most ardent lover could get but small comfort from this.

"Oh, I say," Austin tried to keep his voice level. "Just how can a man go to work to win the only woman in the world?"

"The only woman in the world?" chuckled old Mr. Burns with a sly twinkle in his eyes. "Well, Austin, that's a pretty big order, seeing that I've already had three of the very best women in the world myself. And I guess every man feels the same way. Who's bothering you?"

"The only woman in the world, Zack, for me," Austain said quietly, "and so far, as I can learn, she don't even know I exist."

"Then you must make her," Zack Burns said firmly, "Judging from what I've seen and heard, the woman you're talking about, is Culla Cath. Now, she ain't in my line at all, but everyone to his taste. She's a fine woman, all right, but she's got some fool notion that she's a little too good for common use. If I ain't mistaken, it's all her ma's doings. She raised that girl first, last and always to be her daughter. She's educated her in art and drummed it into Culla that a career's better than just making some man happy, Art!" Zack snorted. "Why, old Mrs. Cath goes so far as to claim that her religion's color. That our lives are made or marred by the color of our surroundings-harmony in color-bah!" After a moment spent in deep thought, Zack said: Austin, my boy, you've got to jar them Caths out of their colorful religion." "But how?"

"Set tight," Zack said. "I'll think it out. And then you do just exactly as I tell you."

Two days later painters were seen about the Birch house, and they began to apply yellow paint assiduously. It was a great improvement for the house had long had quite a shabby look. Different people stopped Austin to comment on the improvement of the place. Even Culla paused to say in passing: "Great improvement, Aus-

"Thank you," returned Austin noncommittally.

When the body of the house was all painted the whole neighborhood was shocked to see the men spreading bright blue paint on cornice and casings. But to all comments Austin turned a deaf ear. The passers-by thought the very worst had happened when the painters began to hang the blinds back on the windows. The blinds, too, were blue, and such a glaring, brazen blue had never been seen before on the outside of any house. Culla refused to : peak to Austin when she met him on the street.

Two more days passed and Culla still refused to speak to Austin. Old Mrs. Bunts, watching from behind closed blinds, confided to her crony Mrs. Coons, "that Austy Birch ain't carried a single offering across the street to the Caths in more than ten

One morning when the sun was filling the whole street with an unusual warmth for that time of the year, Austin appeared with paint pail and brush and began to paint the big double front doors of his house. After he had applied the brush vigorously for a few moments he stepped aside apparently to view his handiwork, and it was revealed to all watchers that ne was painting the doors a glowing, burning scarlet! He stood a moment in grave thought. Just as he resumed his work Culla Cath came running across the street.

"Austin Birch!" she cried, "are you erazy? Don't you know that you are doing a horrible thing? Oh, it's perfeetly awful!" She actually wrung her hands in the stress of her agition, it's neat, but not gaudy. Something different, you know. Cubisticor-or-futuristic, or whatever you call it in art." "Neat-gaudy!" cried Culla. "Why, mother says if she wasn't so miserable with neuralgia and dared to go out in this cold air-why, she'd run

"Run away, would she? Well, I'm sorry to hear she is having neuralgia, but these cheerful colors ought to warm her up-some.'

"On, they have!" Culla was almost hysterical with agitation. "She is beside herself. Why, I never saw mother so angry in all my life—she says she can't live if she's got to face these awful colors on this house all the rest of her days-"

"Well, she don't have to," Austin laid down his brush and turned to look Culla squarely in the face. "All she's got to do, Culla, is to consent to your marrying me. When she doesand mind you, not until she does-I'll change the paint on this house to any color she may choose—that is, pro-viding you are willing, Culla." He saw her start and color. Without another word he picked up his brush and began to apply red paint with broad, even strokes.

Culla drew a long breath. She stood in confusion. Then swiftly turning, she raced home. Austin looked at her from over his shoulder. He felt doubt, gloom. Was it indeed true, as old Mr. Burn said, that Culla really cared for him, and it was all her mother's do-

For a week Austin saw nothing of Culla or Mrs. Cath. The shades of the front windows of the Cath house were drawn down until not even a ray of light shone forth, even at night. One early morning, Austin harassed by the witticisms of his neighbors, was beginning to feel he had merely made himself ridiculous. He was on the verge of summoning the painters back to undo their work when he was called to the telephone.

"Austin," it was Culla's voice, 'Mother wants to see you. She wants you to come right over—will you come?" "Well, it all depends," Austin answered evasively. "Do you want me to come, Culla?" "Y-yes-I do," Culla answered tremulously.

Austin snapped the receiver onto the hook. He was half way across the street before the sound had ceased to reverberate through the house.

Cooling Without Ice Thought of Long Ago

Iceless refrigeration had its conception fully 75 years ago, even before ice was manufactured commercially. Alexander Gorre, an obscure physician of Apalachicola, Fla., was the first to advance the idea. It was his ambition to perfect an air-cooling system by which he could regulate the temperature of entire buildings, combat fevers and other diseases that he ascribed to torrid weather.

In Goore's apparatus air was compressed and transmitted into water pipes to let the heat of compression pour off into the water. Then, when cooled, the compressed air was allowed to expand in a box and absorb the heat from the inside. This air was pumped out of the box, recompressed, cooled and again expanded n the box to pick up more heat. And so the process was continued and the box was kept cool because the heat was sponged out faster than it could leak in through the walls of the box.

Shortly after Gorre's invention the first apparatus for manufacturing ice on a cheap quantity basis .: as developed by Frederick Carre, a Frenchman.-A. Russell Bond, in St. Nicholas Magazine,

Discoveries Change Map

A map is a romantic index of adventure which is being changed by recent discoveries. Reports of the Putnam Baffin island expedition, off the coast of Labrador, shows a new range of mountains, and evidence that the island was once a part of the mainland, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. From Africa comes news of the finding of snow fields within 50 miles of the equator, at an altitude of more then 15,000 feet in the Ruwenzori mountains. Natives have feared to approach this range, in the belief that the snows would kill them.

Tchekov's Comfort

Tchekov, the famous Russian writer, has been called "the most generous of admirers and the most helpful of critics." In the fact that not all men of talent can hope to be geniuses he saw nothing to discourage the man of lesser power. His close friend Bunin quotes Tchekov as saying:

"There are big dogs and little dogs, but the little dogs should not be disheartened by the existence of the big dogs. All must bark-and bark with the voice God gave them."

Work of Locksmiths

Encouraged by Kings

The evolution of the lock in France may be traced in great part to the direct encouragement given to the craft by her kings. It was Charles VIII who in 1411 made it compulsory for every locksmith apprentice who aimed at becoming a master to produce a "chef d'oeuvre" lock of such degree that it would entail anything from one year to two in the making. The delicate and intricate examples that are treasured in museums are mostly drawn from the test pieces, none of which, however, bears the name of the smith, though the majority are sufficiently interesting to merit a signature. The forge had little connection with such locks and none was cast in the rough. Great is the ingenuity brought to bear on them in order to display some hitherto unexploited device or to break some fresh ground in ornament. For strong boxes there were contrived locks that are a miracle of intricacy.

Under Francois I, an enthusiastic patron of the locksmith, the craft reached its summit, whence it was then to decline, if not in respect of elaboration, at least in respect of true beauty and feeling. Under Louis XIII, who was so keen a lover of fine ironwork that he himself toiled at the forge and in the workshop, the lock excelled in point of mechanism and ingenuity, but rapidly deteriorated from the esthetic standpoint. It had reached the point where the production of puzzle and lette: locks began to take precedence of locks that represented compositions of real artistic quality.

Grasshopper Vane Not Original With Faneuil

It is generally conceded that when Peter Faneuil caused a large grasshopper to be placed on top of Faneuil hall in Boston as a weathervane, he did it in emulation of Thomas Gresham, who 176 years before had given his home city, London, a handsome bourse for merchants, dedicated by Queen Elizabeth as the Royal Exchange and crowned by the Gresham family crest, a gilded grasshopper. The grasshopper had been adopted for a crest by the Greshams obviously because the name Gresham is regarded as a corruption of the German word for grasshopper, "grassheim." Faneuil undoubtedly had seen the London grasshopper and liked it, so he chose it for the building he gave to Boston. The Faneuil hall grasshopper has fallen to the street three times in its 185 years' existence, once in the famous 1755 earthquake, again in 1761 when the building was burned, and finally in 1889, as a result of getting entangled with the flagpole halliards. After the 1755 tumble a demolished leg had to be replaced, and in 1889 new glass eyes, as well as horns and feet were required.—Detroit News.

Nomad Weavers

The inhabitants of eastern Asia are, generally speaking, a very ignorant class, education being almost unknown. From the top of a hill one may look down on a wide valley some 20 miles in width and observe a dozen or more black tents woven of goats' hair which are the homes of nomad weavers. These people, whose livelihood depends almost entirely on their flocks, are forced, and have been forced for untold generations to move about from place to place in search of pasturage, which is ever meager in this land of scanty rainfall. As one would expect, this mode of living has made these people a virile race, strong in body, but entirely devoid of culture.

Vinegar in History

Vinegar was first made from wine, as its name indicates, at a remote period. Biblical writers mentioned it. and Hippocrates used it as a medicine By the Sixteenth century vinegar from grapes was being produced in France for home consumption and for export. In England vinegar was first made from malt liquors, a method of disposing of ale and beer which had soured. For this reason it was known as "alegar." Although this name has long since become obsolete, malt vinegar is still the standard in the British isles. It is not known just when vinegar was first made in the United States, certainly very early as a home product.

Enough Herrings for All

That great sea bird, the gannet or solan goose, requires a large amount of fish. There are not many breeding haunts in these islands, but the few that we have are wonderful bird fortresses, for the birds congregate in their thousands, occupying every available ledge on the giant cliffs they choose for their home. The gannets of Great Britain alone consume not less than 60,000,000 herrings a year, yet there appears to be plenty in the sea for them and us. If every gannet in the world were exterminated, I doubt if it would make the slightest difference to the amount of herrings captured by our fishermen.-London Mail.

He Threw a Turnip

A society woman called on a famous painter who, when necessity arose, could express himself with emphasis. Her ceaseless chatter did not permit him to get in a word edgewise.

At length a pause to take breath allowed him to say, "We had boiled mutton and turnips for lunch today." "What a strange observation!" the

Co-operate to Make

Mail Boxes Attractive

"Things useful need not be ugly," mused Edward N. Hines of the board of county road commissioners, in pointing to a letter he had received from Postmaster Charles L. Kellogg. In it the postmaster complimented the board on the attractive arrangement of mail boxes along the paved roads of Wayne county.

"We were the pioneers in the movement to get rid of unsightly billboards, dilapidated shacks and unattractive mail boxes on public highways," Mr. Hines said. "Wayne county is one of the outstanding counties in the whole country for its good roads, and our board will not suffer that the beauty of the countryside be marred by such unsightly things. As soon as a road is completed, we approach the property owners along it to co-operate with us in grouping the mail boxes attractively and to do all in their power to enhance the beauty of the territory through which the road is passing." Postmaster Kellogg's letter was in pursuance of a country-wide campaign recently inaugurated by the United States Post Office department at Washington by which postmasters and carriers were requested to "make earnest effort, without incurring expense to the department to secure the co-operation of patrons of rural routes with a view to effecting the grouping of boxes wherever possible. The improvement which may thus be made will result in the equipment being a credit to the service and

Beginning to Realize

True Value of Parks

to the communities as well."-Detroit

People have come to realize the value of parks. They are no longer considered merely a pleasurable adjunct to a community, but the public has awakened to the realization that parks have a vital influence on personal and civic growth. They are shock absorbers that help to keep us normal and happy. They are good for ous souls, our minds, and our bodies. We find that we need these stretches of natural beauty to counteract the confining life of a city which narrows our horizon to limited bits of green and occasional patches of sky. This is proved by the fact that not only is there a growing tendency to spend more leisure time in these outdoor breathing spots, but that homes are built overlooking parks, in an effort to make their beauty a permanent part of everyday life. Parks are as necessary as our public libraries, our art institute, or our symphony orchestra. They are one of our most valuable civic institutions.—Exchange.

Benefit in Consolidation

Throughout the country there seems to be a tendency to consolidate small towns and communities into cities. Better streets, fire and police protection, water supply, sewage disposal, park facilities and zoning law administration are only a few of the advantages that follow such moves. Furthermore, consolidation makes for harmonious thought and action in areas the needs of which are similar.

A funnel makes a good protection for a fumigating candle in disinfecting a closetful of clothing which might catch on fire if the open flame were left to burn. Place it over the dish, and only the fumes rise up, leaving the flame safely covered.

Charles Dickens visited the United States in 1842. Of Pennsylvania he reported: "We have passed, both in the mountains and elsewhere, a great number of new settlements and detached log houses. Few Really Contented

With Place in Life Perhaps we humans have no greater weakness than this: we rarely know when we are well off. We seem to lack the kind of judgment we need to convince us that we had better let well enough alone, is a reflection made by Grove Patterson, in the Mobile Register. We are forever wanting to try something different, something new. Much of our path through life leads from the frying pan into the fire and out again.

"I have learned," said the very wise St. Paul. "in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content."

Some comfort is to be had in the thought that through our tendency to change from one thing to another we occasionally hit upon improvement. But the policy we need most is that which leads us to make a complete and thorough job of the thing we are doing in the particular circumstances in which we find ourselves.

Lesson for January 22 JESUS AND THE LAW

LESSON TEXT-Mark 2:18-3:6. GOLDEN TEXT—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets. I am not come to destroy

PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing Good on the Lord's Day. JUNIOR TOPIC-How to Use the

Lord's Day. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-1C— How Jesus Obeyed the Law. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Jesus Declares the Higher Law

I. Jesus and Fasting (vv. 18-22). 1. The questions asked (v. 18).

The scribes and pharisees seeing Jesus eating with the publicans and sinners, raised the question as to why He did so. When Jesus heard their question He declared, "They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick." Another question was then asked as to why Christ's disciples did not fast when the disciples of John and of the pharisees did fast? John the Baptist was now in prison, therefore his disciples were mourning for him. 2. Christ's answer (vv. 19, 20).

In explanation He raised the question, "Can the children of the bridechamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?" He then declared that as long as they have the bridegroom with them they cannot fast. The time will come, however, when they would fast. He is now away. Fasting.

therefore, is appropriate. 3. New wine in old bottles (vv. 21,

The bottles mentioned here were made of skins of animals. In the fermentation of the wine there was expansion which stretched the skin. To put new wine in the bottle after it was stretched would cause it to be rent asunder when fermentation took place. The same thing in principle would be realized if new cloth were used on old garments. The teaching designed was to show the foolishness of imposing old customs on the new

II. The Disciples Plucking Ears of Corn on the Sabbath (Mark 2:23-28) 1. The charge made against the disciples (vv. 23, 24).

Perhaps they were on their way to the synagogue to worship when they plucked the ears of corn. For this act the pharisees accused them of lawlessness.

2. Jesus defends them against the harge (vv. 25-28).

(1) He cites a precedent (vv. 25, 26) He showed them that the very law which they charged the disciples with breaking recorded the fact that David the great king of Israel had gone into the house of God and eaten the bread which should be eaten only by the

(2) He shows the nature of a Sab bath law (v. 27).

The Sabbath was made for man, therefore its right use is to be deter mined by the good o! man. The laws of honesty, truth, purity and love dif fer from the law of the Sabbath and there is no circumstance or condition under which they may be departed from.

(3) Jesus is the Lord of the Sah bath (v. 28).

It was He who instituted it when creation was finished, therefore He had a right to use it as it pleased Him for man's good. III. Jesus Healing a Man's Withered

Hand on the Sabbath (3:1-6)

1. The place—the synagogue (v. 1) Jesus' example shows what He did on the Sabbath. He went to the place of worship. The presence of the man with a withered hand gave Jesus an opportunity to administer a rebuke to the pharisees.

2. The pharisees watching (v. 2.) They knew that Jesus would be in terested in this helpless man. They surmised that some work would have to be performed to heal him.

3. The man made an example (v. 3) Jesus wanted the case to be open to all, so He commanded the man to stand forth where all could see nim

4. The question asked (v 4). "Is it lawful to do good on the Sab bath day, or to do evil, to save life. or to kill?" He made the issue clear; He plainly showed them that to fail to do good, to show works of mercy. to save life, is to be guilty of wrong doing, even of murder.

5. The man heated (v. 5). Christ healed him by speaking the Word, so they could not accuse Him.

6. The result (vv. 4, 6). The pharisees were silenced. There was no ground upon which to accuse Him. But since their hearts were bent upon His destruction they sought how they might put Him to death.

Samplers First Made

for Use as Patterns

The sampler is one of the oldest empositions in needlecraft. It made 's appearance early in the Sixteenth century. It was then called "samcloth," and came into popular use because of the "great scarcity and high price of lace-pattern books," so we are informed by an old authority on the subject. All the earliest laces and openwork embroideries, such as cutwork, reticella, drawn-thread work, and so on, were copied on these "samcloths" by those who had not money to purchase the rare and expensive pattern-books; hence the sampler was originally made for the purpose of obtaining and keeping a worthwhile design, or one that appealed to the worker. Later, when the sources of pattern-supply became more plentiful and less expensive, so that the original service of the sampler was no longer of value, it was then made "to exhibit the skill of the embroiderer," usually a pupil at school, and was often framed and hung up to display to admiring friends. Indeed, no young lady's education during the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries was considered quite complete until she had "embroidered in silks and gold thread a sampler with a bordering of drawn-thread and a center filled with representations of animals, flowers and trees, accompanied by verses appropriate to the undertaking."

Preferred to Make

Her Plea in English

A little five-year-old miss had learned to say her prayers in English, when her grandmother started to teach her to say them in French. It was a part of home instruction in French, and the little miss was picking up the second language rapidly.

However, her program in saying her prayers in French halted a bit, as the youngster had a little difficulty in getting her tongue around several words. One hot evening, in the midst of her home lesson in French, she stopped and said:

"Grandma, can't God understand my prayers in English?"

"Why, yes," replied grandmother. "He understands all languages."

"Well," said the little miss, "if it's all the same to God, I'll say them in English tonight."

His Conditions

The young man waited for the millionaire's reply.

"I don't blame you for wanting to marry my daughter," said the latter. "And now how much do you suppose you and she can worry along on?" The youth brightened up.

"I-I think," he cheerfully stammered, "that £200,000 well invested would produce a sufficient income." The millionaire turned back to his

"Very well," he said, "I will give you £100,000, provided you can raise a similar amount.

And the young man went away sorrowing.-London Opinion.

Population Increase

It is known that every day about 100,000 persons die and 150,000 are born. Which means that every day the sun sets on 50,000 more people than were on earth when it rose. Never before in human history have births been 50 per cent more than deaths. Taking this as a basis for figures, Edward Roos notes in the Century Magazine that doubling the world's population in sixty years indicates that the earth's inhabitants have increased ten-fold in two centuries. At this rate there will be only a square yard of arable land to a per-1,000 years hence.—Capper's

X-Rays in Industry

The game of "button button" is now being played in a commercial way with the aid of X-rays. The device is used to search for buttons and other solid materials in piles of rags that are to be used for making paper. Serious damage to the pulping machinery is likely if buttons, hooks, eyes, and other hard articles are not removed. To find these objects, the rags are conveyed on endless bands over an X-ray tube, where the solid materials are readily detected by fluorescent

Thanks to Jealousy!

Parchment was invented owing to the jealousy of two kings. Papyrus was exported from Egypt, and Ptolemy Philadelphus, being jealous of Eumenes of Pergamus because he was afraid the latter would acquire a larger library than his own, forbade the export of the reed.

Eumenes looked about him for a substitute, and ordered the skins of sheep to be dressed in such a way that they could be used for writing. Hence came parchment, the thin, fine variety of which is known as vellum.

Evil in Unwise Feeding

Two Chicago teachers did a little experimenting the other day. One swallowed a toy balloon attached to a stomach tube. The other blew up the balloon. In a few minutes the man who had swallowed the balloon felt drowsy as one does after heavy eating. Which indicates distention of the stomach is the cause of the feeling of unfitness after a too hearty meal. The stomach is capable of astonishing distention. But it's unwise to take advantage of that fact.-Capper's Weekly.

Taking An Inventory.

Taking inventories sounds like an item connected with merchandising of the right sort, and so it is. Every business man ought to know, each year, just what he has been doing, and how he stands with the world finan-

But taking an inventory of a business is not as important as taking inventory of one's self. We should realize that we must go on with time, and we ought to know how fit we are -physically mentally and morally.

We need to know our weak spots, and how best to strengthen them. We need moral muscle as well as bodily muscle for the hard tasks in front of us. Perhaps some of us need to go to the Doctor for pills, or something to assist nature to rebuild our working body, and a lot more of us need to take physic for the forces that direct the activities of the body. Strength of body is not all of personal fitness, even though it is an essential part. "Come on, let's go!" is a fine motto; but we should first know when and how we are going, and that takes mental courage and right actuating motions that many structures. ating motives that mere strength of body does not supply.

We are likely surrounded by uncertainty, doubt, competition. We stumble and take wrong tracks. There is something wrong. Let us go right after the wrong, after we have completely and honestly inventoried ourselves, and he sure that we have taken selves-and be sure that we have taken account of everything that we have We know all of our stock on hand, or ought to know, and if we have any that is not presentable—not honest, not dependable—let us dump it overboard, and not try to pass it off for genuine, for it will simply keep on accumulating and eventually down us.

The Chevrolet Motor Company in 1928 is planning to break all production and sales records in the history of the company according to Ohler's Chevrolet Sales, local Chevrolet dealer, who recently returned from Washington, where he attended the annual Chevrolet sales meeting, in the Washington auditorium.

Nearly eight hundred Chevrolet dealers who attended the great sales meeting heard H. J. Klingler, General Sales Manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, sound the keynote of the biggest campaign ever undertaken by Chevrolet. Mr. Klingler outlined the plan for the sale of more than a million units in 1928.

Never before did a Chevrolet meeting create such unbridled enthusiasm as was displayed over the Chevrolet prospects for the year, Mr. M. S. Ohler declared.

Detroit, regional and zone officials of the Chevrolet Motor Company assisted Mr. Klingler in the conducting of the meeting which took the form of the most comprehensive sales presentation of its kind ever made by an automobile manufacturer. Talks were illustrated in the form of playlets, depicting the proper procedure to be followed in the successful operation of a retail automobile business.

Immediately following the meeting the dealers were guests of the Chev-rolet Motor Company at an elaborate banquet in the Mayflower Hotel. An added feature of the meeting was an address by M. D. Douglas who is assistant general sales manager, who also serped as toastmaster of the banquet. The Washington meeting was the second of the series of forty-three similar meetings that are to be held this winter and spring from coast to

A few minutes later Willie returned and reported: "Mrs. Brown says it's none of your business how old she is."

A Bargain.

"Hiram, when are you goin' to pay them $8 for pasturin' your heifer? I've had her now for about ten

"Why, Sam, the critter ain't worth more than $10.00."
"Well, s'posin' I keep her for what you owe me?"

"Not by a jugful. Tell you what I'll do, though—keep her two weeks more an' you can have her.'

A Terrible Strain.

Mrs. J. P. McSnorter's new colored cook had seemed to be a jewel in every way, so you can imagine what a shock she received when she found her straining tea through a rather ancient piece of hosiery.

"Why, Gloria," she exclaimed,
"don't you know it is very unsanitary "Oh, don't let dat worry yo", was the reply. "Dat stockin' was dirty anyway."

To Our Customers, Producers and Employees:-

We beg to announce the merger of our two Companies under a plan which makes it necessary to bring in additional capital or pay banking fees or arranging additional financing. We have not added to our overhead ex-

The purpose of the merger of our Companies are as follows: 1—To continue the management of Baltimore's Milk distribution in the hands of Baltimoreans who have spent their lives in this business and who are interested in Baltimore—there being danger of out of town interest get-2-To keep the price of milk a fair one to both the Consumer and the

Producer—for the ever increasing expense of doing business would eventually make us ask for an increase in the price we sell at or a decrease in price we pay—to meet these increasing expenses. This merger enables us to keep down expenses by eliminating duplications. 3—By making this a strictly Baltimore Company we are able to take care of the employees of the two Companies—assure our customers of no increase in price and pay our producers of milk a fair return.
