

HISTORY OF CHURCHES IN CARROLL CO.

Will be Presented in the Coming County Pageant.

Every denomination in the county has been invited to participate in the Pageant of Carroll.

The Lutheran and the Reformed congregations will unite to present the coming of the first German settlers. In 1740 they came down the old Indian trail from Hanover and Conewago to settle on the fertile lands of Manchester and Myers.

The Methodist Protestant and Methodist Episcopal Churches are uniting to celebrate their common American origin in 1764. In the diary of Bishop Asbury we read that "here on Pipe Creek Settlement did Robert Strawbridge found the first Methodist Society in Maryland and in America."

About 1770 the first Episcopal church, the Chapel of Ease, was built at Eldersburg. The contribution of this denomination to the history of the county will be depicted by a float representing Francis Scott Key.

On Feb. 15, 1771, land was granted for the church of Piney Creek to "a congregation called Presbyterians who shall hold or continue to hold the doctrine in the Westminster Confession of Faith."

As far back as 1790 there are records of mass celebrated here in private homes by priests from Conewago. The most noted of these was Prince Gallitzin, of Russia, who forfeited his estate and titles to become an American citizen and a missionary priest.

There are still several denominations who have not yet responded to the invitation of the central committee. But if you will send your acceptance to Dorothy Elderidge, not later than April 16, you can be entered in the Pageant of Carroll.

A Correction.

Our information concerning the Lineboro church dispute, published last week, was incorrect in so far as the statement was made that the Reformed Classis and Lutheran Middle Conference would hold a get-together meeting on April 12, and try to adjust matters along the lines suggested by the Court.

Maj. Hall Buys Apopka Chief.

Maj. A. M. Hall has become the sole owner of the Apopka (Florida) Chief, having bought that portion of the business of The Apopka Printing Co. This will enable Maj. Hall to give his entire time to the paper, while the general printing business will have a separate management.

THE AMERICAN SENTINEL

In the Hands of Receivers, Appointed by the Court.

The American Sentinel Company, publishers of The American Sentinel, Westminster, the oldest newspaper in Carroll County, is in the hands of receivers. The paper has been published since 1832—nearly 100 years—and for some years is said not to have been paying dividends.

On petition to the Court by various creditors, Judge Parke appointed the following receivers: Joseph D. Brooks, representing the American Sentinel Company; James E. Boylan, Jr., representing the Union Bridge Banking & Trust Company; and N. H. Baumgardner representing the Westminster Deposit & Trust Co.

The Court also passed an order granting them authority to continue the publication of the paper and the general printing business, in order that the property may be disposed of on the best terms as a going business and not be unnecessarily sacrificed through a forced sale.

The "Old Priestland" School.

Every now and then we hear from some alumnus of the now sold—and deserted for school purposes—Priestland school house, on the road from Linwood to McKinstry's. Our recollection of this at one time flourishing school, dates back to about 1864, to the original log building, our first teacher being Solomon Englar, followed by Samuel Wolfe.

A single door opened into it, with a bench and water bucket to the right, and a lot of hat and coat hooks on the left; a big ten-plate stove in the center, a black-board on the end wall and the teachers desk against the side wall.

There were two recitation benches on the floor on the stove level, then about four or five rows of desks across the room, each row a step higher as they extended toward the back of the room, and back of the top row—which was pretty close to the ceiling—was a long narrow window for light, with two windows on each side of the room. It surely was an "old-timer."

The new building, built some years later—about 1871—was, for that time a fine brick building, and bore the name in front "Priestland Academy"—no longer a mere "school." It had a front vestibule, with a boys and girls side, an inner door and four rows of modern desks, a coal stove in the center, with teachers rostrum and black-board at the end opposite the front entrance; and a rear door. "Some Academy" it was, and we were all proud of it. A flourishing Union Sunday School was also conducted in it for a number of years.

During our attendance there it had but few teachers. After Solomon Englar there was a lady—Miss Grovanna Davis, or Baker—we forget which—and Samuel Wolfe, and Theodore H. Adams, commonly known as "Tip." Both Wolfe and Adams were real teachers, the latter having had the longest term. He lived on "the Ridge," near Uniontown, and walked the distance of perhaps 3 1/2 miles most of the time; but part of the time used a velocipede when it worked—and the roads were good.

These were the days of the "spelling bee" and nearly every Friday afternoon the school divided in sides and had a contest. There were also visits to and from other schools, and old Priestland had some famous champions.

There are no such spellers in the schools of today, and it was progression backwards when the high-brow rules abolished spelling as a real accomplishment to be taught. But, we do not mean to become garrulous on the subject. The fact is, there is too much sadness about "old times" to call them up too vividly; too many old school-mates who have "passed on"; too many memories that, while one would not want to forget them, one prefers to let them remain—as memories.

P. B. E.

Attempt to Rob Gettysburg Postoffice.

An attempt was made to rob the postoffice at Gettysburg, at an early hour Wednesday morning. The building was entered through a rear window and an attempt was made to crack the safe by the use of an acetylene torch, after which a charge of nitro-glycerine was used.

The use of the torch set fire to a lot of envelopes and cards, and the fire and the fire alarm brought firemen and citizens to the building, though the cracksmen escaped without securing any valuables.

The fire caused damage to between $900, and $1000, worth of envelopes and cards, and the safe was damaged. The robbers were using an automobile that was parked in the rear of the building. All of the burglar equipment was taken away except an empty oxygen tank.

Later a number of other articles were found left by the burglars; a tool used to force the window, a small bottle of nitro glycerine, a dry cell battery and a piece of cloth used to throw over the safe, but none of these act as clues to trace the robbers.

The safe was upset by the blast and was damaged sufficiently to require experts to open it. It contained about $25,000 worth of stamps and about $500, in cash.

It's getting so that an honest Republican doesn't dare own any Liberty Bonds.

STATEROAD CASES NOT YET CONCLUDED.

Five are out on Bail until all Cases are heard.

The cases of five of the six men indicted in the alleged shortage in State Roads Commission funds, have been concluded, except the sentences, the last being that of Wm. J. Falkenberg, charged with obtaining $2317., fraudulently.

The five so far tried were Thomas A. Butler, former purchasing agent; James H. Woods, Frank Woods; Charles L. Robins, former paymaster, and Mr. Falkenberg, a former clerk to the Commission. All of these are out on bail awaiting sentence.

John R. Griffin, not an employee, but who is accused of receiving some of the stolen money, is next to be tried. The system used was making out false vouchers, on which checks were obtained with forged indorsements.

Butler seems to have been one of the chief offenders, and after pleading guilty gave evidence against the others. Butler testified further to a system of "salary advances" which he "worked" before he became purchasing agent and before he "had a chance to get in on the stealing." He said that at one time he remembered that he had drawn as high as $6,000 ahead when his salary was only $3,000 a year. He said that John N. Mackall, chairman and chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, had approved some of these advances. But Mr. Mackall did not know that I was overdrawn to the extent of $6,000, he explained.

The evidence in detail shows collusion between the six men, who seem to have been in position to play the game for a long while without detection.

Falkenberg did not plead guilty but stood trial, and the jury was unable to agree, with the charges still pending. On Thursday the State's Attorney brought in additional charges, involving $3248.12 claimed to have been secured by false pretenses. Falkenberg is out on bail fixed at $10,000.

Taneytown 4-H Club.

On March 31, the Taneytown Girls 4-H Club met at the home of Mrs. Walter Bower. The meeting was called to order by the president, Dorothy Kephart. After singing the Four Leaf Clover song, each of the girls responded to roll-call by giving a color scheme for her room.

The club voted to give five dollars toward the Carroll County ambulance and decided to sell Dust-a-Ways to earn the money.

Dorothy Kephart gave a very interesting talk on "Colors Suitable for my Bedroom." She said, "People show their personality very plainly in the colors they select to wear and to use in their homes. Many color schemes are not suitable for the bedroom. Any soft color as blue, grey, tan, and rose will be desirable." Various color schemes for bedrooms were shown, after which the girls worked out a scheme for a particular room.

The project for the afternoon was the painting of vases by each of the girls for their own particular room.

Carroll County C. E. Publicity.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor asked all the local unions to report the amount of publicity which they had in the newspapers during the three weeks preceding Christian Endeavor Week. Mr. Guy Fowler, of Westminster, the C. E. Booster for Carroll County, collected clippings and forwarded the desired information to the Publicity Department of the United Society. The ten leading unions were given special recognition. Carroll County was among these ten, and Mr. Fowler was sent a very fine picture of Dr. Daniel A. Poling, the President of the United Society, for his work in gathering the information.

This is stimulating to the Endeavorers of our Union; and I must express my appreciation of the splendid consideration of our papers and their editors. Great credit is due to all who so gladly give us space in the columns of their papers. It was by their co-operation that we attained this standing among the Christian Endeavor Unions of the country. The actual amount of space given during these three weeks was three hundred column inches.

It is interesting to note that much publicity has been given us by the local papers for considerable time. Several years ago, in a National contest, the Carroll County Union was the second in the country as to the amount of newspaper publicity, only being surpassed by Brooklyn, New York.

KARL H. WAREHEIM, Pres. Carroll County C. E. Union.

Adams Co. Independent Sold.

The Adams County Independent, Littlestown, Pa., has been sold by J. G. Casner, to F. D. Covey, an experienced newspaper man publishing the Herald-Times, at Delta, Pa., who has taken immediate charge. The sale covers the printing plant only. The purchase price has not been announced.

There is a tiptop hotel in London. Servants are well paid, and it is firmly requested that guests offer no tips. "Reservations at this hostelry are always at a premium," says The Dearborn Independent.

MARYLAND CANNERIES

Leads with Tomatoes and Second or Third With Corn.

The Frederick News gives the following with reference to the state's canning industry.

Maryland leads the United States in the canning of tomatoes, and ranks high in other branches of this industry, Frederick county contributing an important part in the packing of sweet corn. This was brought out in an interesting talk given before the Kiwanis Club at its weekly meeting in the Francis Scott Key hotel Tuesday noon, by the speaker, F. M. Shook of Easton, Md., field secretary of the Tri-State Packers' Association.

Mr. Shook told of the beginning of the industry which dates back to the time of Napoleon. He said that every war has stimulated the need for canned food products. The United States started soon after France in canning food. One of the first canneries was started by Underwood in Boston in 1820. The first plant in Maryland was started in Baltimore between 1845 and 1850.

At the start he said the work was very laborious, everything being done by hand. Tin cans were made by hand, as was done in Frederick at the old McMurray plant, which was one of the first canning factories in the country. Then a can maker could make only about 60 cans a day. Today said the speaker, a line of machinery can do the work of 1,000 men, turning out 100 cans a minute.

He traced the improvements in canning processes, by which canned food has improved greatly in quality and purity. Now canned foods are regarded as among the safest products for human consumption. He told of the researches made by the canning industries and health authorities to insure safe canned goods for the public, and condemned the idea that canned foods caused ptomaine poisoning. Any food that is allowed to spoil or deteriorate after being exposed may become unfit for consumption and cause illness.

Maryland usually ranks about second or third among the States in the quantity of canned corn produced, and first on snap beans.

In referring to the improvements in methods used in canning, the speaker told of a recent invention by a Maryland canner, N. H. Fooks, of Preston, Md., president of the Mt. Airy Canning Company. This is the continuous cooker, by which the cans are carried through steam containers, so that the steam does not escape. This invention is used principally in canning tomatoes, which take a short time to process.

Proceedings of the Orphans' Court.

THE FARMER BILL NOW BEFORE CONGRESS.

Likely to be Passed very soon by Both Branches.

The farmer bill that has been before Congress for several years, and which suffered a veto by President Coolidge a year ago, is up again in an amended form, said to exclude many of its old objectionable features, and is likely to pass Congress by a still larger vote than previously.

It has been before both Senate and House this week. While the debate on it was largely friendly, no one seems able to tell exactly how the law would work in some of its important features. It has been popularized by including cotton along with wheat other farm produce.

The biggest block in the way is the constitutionality of the law, which apparently can only be determined after it is passed. There are other objections of an administrative character. But there is a growing sentiment that it be tried, and repeal it if it fails to produce good results.

"Inside" Information for Women.

For sweetening fruitades and punches, make sirup, using two parts of sugar to one of water, cooked together about 10 minutes and cooled. This sweetens more uniformly than sugar.

To clean a carpet sweeper, empty the box on a damp newspaper, and use a buttonhook or coarse comb to remove hair and dirt from the brushes. Oil the bearings occasionally.

Never fit a garment wrong side out. Few people are exactly alike on both left and right sides, and when the garment is turned right side out it may not set smoothly.

Slip covers on the upholstered furniture not only save the covering of the furniture, but actually make the room seem cooler and brighter it up so that it loses its winter look.

Use eggs as much as possible in the spring when they are plentiful—for breakfast, lunch, or dinner. They may be cooked in any number of delicious ways so as to seem like many different foods. Change the sauce, or the flavoring, or combine the eggs with other tasty foods, and you will enrich the menu without making it monotonous.

Measure your windows with care before buying curtain material. Allow at least nine inches extra for hems and shrinkage. Cut the goods by a thread if possible. Accuracy in cutting and neat sewing help insure well-hanging curtains. Many people like to put hems in by hand, but if a great number of curtains must be made at one time this is not always possible.

Carroll Co. Society to Elect Officers.

The Carroll County Society of Baltimore City will hold its annual meeting for the election of officers for the coming year at Hotel Rennett, Tuesday evening, April 10, at 8 o'clock.

Miss Nellie R. Wooden who has visited many countries will talk on her experiences while traveling last Summer in Egypt, Palestine and Syria. Mr. E. M. Rouzer is President of the Society.

In accordance with the By-Laws of the Society, the President appointed a Nominating Committee, and this Committee recommends that the following members be nominated for officers and board of governors of the Society for the coming year:

President, George F. Frock; Vice-President, Lawrence W. Wooden; Vice President, Mrs. Clayton H. Englar; Rec. Sec'y, William E. Moore; Cor. Sec'y, George R. Babylon; Treas., J. Leonard Eckenrode; Board of Governors, H. Cleveland Logue and Dr. F. L. C. Helm.

Gassing the Groundhog.

The surest method of controlling the groundhog, or woodchuck, is by the use of gas. Carbon disulphide and calcium cyanide are both effective for fumigating the burrows. In using carbon disulphide, pour 3 tablespoonfuls of the liquid on a small wad of cotton or other absorbent material and throw it well down into the entrance of the burrow. Close the entrance with a stone or inverted piece of sod, taking care not to get dirt or other loose material on the fumigant. The gas from the liquid being heavier than air will penetrate to the lowest levels of the burrows and kill the groundhogs there.

In using calcium cyanide, place 1 rounded tablespoonful of the dust as far down in each burrow as possible. Use a long-handled spoon. Close the entrance as mentioned before. If only a few burrows are to be treated, it may be feasible to use the exhaust of an automobile. Set the carburetor to make a rich mixture and connect the exhaust with the den by a hose. Ten or fifteen minutes of running the motor at a moderate speed should be sufficient.

Gassing should be done only in April and May to avoid killing rabbits, skunks, foxes, or other valuable fur animals that sometimes occupy the groundhog dens, but which are always absent during April and May when the groundhogs are preparing their homes for rearing the new family.

A great many animals laugh, says a scientist. And of course a great many people give them good reason to.

DR. HARTMAN DEAD

One of the Best Known Lutheran Ministers in the U. S.

Rev. Dr. Stewart Hartman, educational secretary of the board of Home Missions in the United Lutheran Church in America, and one of the outstanding ministers of the church, who was well known in general, died late Monday evening at his home, 1411 Linden Avenue, Baltimore, after a long sickness, of a complication of diseases. Rev. Dr. Hartman was 83 years old.

Dr. Hartman was a member of the West Pennsylvania synod. He graduated from Gettysburg college in 1868 and from Union Seminary at New York three years later. A year previous to graduation he was licensed to preach by the New York synod, and in 1871 he was ordained by the same body.

His first church was at Ghent, N. Y., where he preached about a year, after which he was elected pastor of St. Matthew's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and in 1875 accepted the pastorate of the First Church at Chambersburg, Pa., where he served fourteen years.

Rev. Dr. Hartman left Chambersburg to become a general secretary of the board of Home Missions of the general synod, serving in that capacity until 1919, when he was made educational secretary of the board of home missions of the United Lutheran church in America.

The funeral was held this Friday, with short services at 9:30 A. M., at the Augsburg Lutheran Church in Baltimore. Concluding services in the First Church, Chambersburg.

Reforestation in the County.

The reforestation of idle and eroded Carroll County land is the principal project being emphasized this week by the County Agent, L. C. Burns, according to reports from his office. Mr. F. B. Trenk, Extension Forester from the University of Maryland is in the county for the purpose of consulting with farmers who are interested in setting out plantations of evergreen trees for timber production, and Black Locusts for fence posts.

A demonstration of interest to farmers with idle or partly forested land, was held Wednesday morning, on the farm of Mr. James H. Brown immediately west of Hampstead. Mr. Brown planted a large number of young white pine trees which had been purchased from the forest nursery of the Maryland State forestry department. The trees were planted at a spacing of six by six feet requiring twelve hundred trees per acre. White pine is one of the most valuable forest trees in the Eastern part of the United States. Mr. Trenk points out, and may be planted in a wide variety of soil.

While in the county, Mr. Trenk visited the plantations of scotch pine and red pine set out last year by Mr. Geo. B. Johns, near Middleburg. These plantations were made on soils that were eroded badly and unfit for profitable cultivation, and already it appears that the scotch pines are doing their bit toward holding the ditches in check. It was noted that some of the trees had made as much as twelve to fourteen inches growth in height the first season after planting. County Agent Burns says that this is a remarkable gain for small trees during their first year.

Your Newspaper.

Where do you obtain your knowledge of current events, science, politics and the greater part of your education?

From your newspaper. When your merchants need business, through what medium do they obtain it?

Your newspaper. When the community and the churches, schools, civic and welfare organizations of the community need community action and co-operation, to what do they appeal?

Your newspaper. These are some of the reasons why the newspaper is YOUR newspaper and why communities are only as strong and progressive as their newspapers. If there is one quick cure for community somnolence it is a wide-awake newspaper.

The first duty of a newspaper is to transmit to its readers the thoughts and activities of humanity at home and abroad, but the value of that other department—advertising—should be overlooked by none. The public anticipates its shopping by scanning the advertisements in the newspapers and the merchants anticipate their business by newspaper advertising. Advertising is a mutual proposition between all concerned. By a liberal use of advertising space in the home-town paper the business institutions of that place make it possible for the public to plan its shopping and make business for every day in the week. It does away with the one shopping day a week plan, and makes every week day a shopping day.—Aberdeen, South Dakota, Dispatch.

Heavy Road Trucks Need Stricter Regulations.

There certainly seems need for restriction of speed in the motor laws of the state, at least for trucks, to 20 or not over 25 miles an hour, preferably, we think, to the former. The big trucks seem to have a disposition to "hog" the roads anyway, as there is little likelihood of their being greatly damaged in coming into collision, or side-wipes, with cars, and they are less disposed to give way to lighter vehicles in the use of the highways. Their bigness and power seem to make them rather contemptuous of other vehicles.

Admitting for the sake of argument, that at present the speed limits for autos are not too great—a conclusion to which we do not agree—there is little justification for the big fellows to be allowed to pound the expensive roadbeds at 30 to 40 miles an hour, as "fast freight" carriers, and do the roads many times more damage than autos.

Besides, the trucks can not be as quickly handled as autos, and when they figure in collisions, the damage is usually great, especially in the case of the immense freight hauling trucks. It is also true, we think, that license charges are too low for them. Restriction of their speed, and an increase in licenses, would help not only the safety of the roads, but save the wear on them, and increase the revenue—all desirable results.

The Senate Breaks a Record.

The Flood Control bill passed the Senate in seventy minutes, last week, although it carried a stated appropriation of $325,000,000 and its author Senator Jones admits that before the work is finished many more millions will be needed. This is a new record for the Senate, and causes much wonderment. There were a half-dozen or more prepared addresses ready, one of which had been sent to the newspapers—and yet, the bill was left to go through without argument and not a single negative vote.

The bill was also President Coolidge's plan, with a single exception, which makes the speed record all the more remarkable in this particular time when both parties are alert for issues with which to manufacture pre-election thunder. It is more than a record-breaker, and is truly marvelous, as the bill was not only Coolidge's but largely Hoover's, in its provisions.

Just what happened, and why, such a vastly important bill was left to go by with a whoop, leaves a big question mark; and Senator Robinson, democrat, of Arkansas, cleared the way for it, and Senator Ransdall, democrat, of Louisiana, made a speech of praise for President Coolidge, declaring that he had "never seen anything like the way President Coolidge had risen to the occasion to help us."

After a few minor amendments there was almost a feverish haste to get to a vote, and Senatorial dignity and deliberation and all that sort of thing were distinctly out of order. Truly, "wonders never cease." May it be that the Senate "railroaded" this bill—carrying hundreds of millions of dollars—in order that its "investigating" committees might not be interrupted in turning out its full quota of political campaign material?

Wealth and Politics.

There is no discredit attaching to wealth, but to the ways in which it may be secured, and to what is done with it after it is secured; and when it goes into politics to be used as a power to force official preferment, it may be, and often is, a distinct danger to our country. But, merely being wealthy is often a credit, and a qualification, rather than an objection, even in politics.

For instance, men who have great financial ability and foresight for themselves, should also have it for our government. Men do not, as a rule, just happen to get rich, nor do most of them get rich by dishonest practices. Some do, but the rule is that wealthy men fairly earn their money on account of personal ability; and this means that hatred of wealth—either in politics or outside—is the stock in trade of the blatherskite.

But, some wealthy men do try to force themselves into high public honors by the use of their money. There are men who have business sense, without having the least equipment for—we will say—the Senate of the United States; and these are the sort of men who, along with their money-making, may have been playing low-down local politics, perhaps having made their money on contract work, or through being a big wheel in a political machine.

There are wealthy men with honor, and some without it. There are a few men who made their millions because they could not help it, or at least through the use of very little ability of their own; and of course there are men always hanging around men in authority, trying by bribery to buy something of value that they do not deserve to have.

Big contributions to political campaign funds are always open to suspicion, because they are apt to stand as an investment for the purpose of getting more back. They are the wolves who care little for parties, or individuals, but contribute to the most promising prospect.

Then, officialdom has made its habits and requirements so expensive that poor men can not afford to be elected to the Senate and some other offices. The saying that the Senate is a "Millionaires Club" is substantially correct. Counting the expense of nominations and elections; and life in Washington after election, a poor man has no show for the office, and many of those elected find themselves in line to be easy victims of the corruptionists because of their own need for money to keep going.

The argument that wealthy men should not hold office is all wrong; just as it would be that only poor men should hold office. Financial standing has but little to do with a man's qualifications for any position. It is the man—his ability, his character, his general fitness, that stands out above all else.

Pure and Undeified Religion.

(For the Record).
Religion is a most cheerful and happy thing to practice, but a most sad and melancholy thing to neglect. The government of God in the soul is a government which regulates, but does not enslave. If we seriously consider what Religion is, we shall find the saying of the wise King Solomon to be unexceptionally true. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

The spiritual conflict of this modern age consists in this. The spirit of God aims to convince the world that it needs Christ; the spirit of the world aims to convince it, that it can get along very well without Christ; and from what we see, and learn daily it is making great headway.

We have a newspaper in our possession telling where a preacher recently preached in the community church in New York. He said he had discarded Christian theology in favor of Science. Now we will give the reader a meaning of what he terms 'Science.' He says the New Testament, is useless; its psychology is hopeless, and its morals are out worn.

But we turn to Matt. 5:18. There we learn what the Christ says about his word being outworn. "For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Nor can his word be outworn.

He said the people "must choose between Christian theology and science. He said we don't need the Bible; the modernist has thrown all these things away. He does not need to inform the people this, they all can see this, from the wickedness prevailing daily. We need no "Science" to teach us this.

Then he says he knows that Jesus Christ was never raised from the dead. That belief was founded on hearsay and gossip of excited women and ignorant men. He said a new religion would soon exist which would have nothing to do with Christ or any creed.

We notice in a paper before us where the students of our colleges are forming themselves into clubs of the atheists faith in order to abolish belief in God and all the religion based on that belief. Now we have a full report where the Atheists have started a war on the Holy Scripture. We see no point where the New Testament is useless, but is badly needed by the whole world, and the New Testament is not damaged one iota, only what little it has received from Infidels, Atheists, and Evolutionists.

We had eighty thousand Tracts and pamphlets printed and sent to the Penal and Correctional Institutions of the U. S.—392 of these institutions. We have thousands more tracts on hand, all furnished the people everywhere, free of cost, and we pay postage on same. Address—

Most Men of Greatest Value Beyond the Age of 50.

Not enough attention is paid to the waste of the human element in our economic life. We are learning short-cuts and processes of eliminating this or that form of waste in business. But in the attitude of many individuals or corporations through which either directly or by implication workers over 60 years of age are declared no longer useful, we have a form of misguided efficiency that is wrong both in principle and practice. There may be certain isolated types of work that can be performed better by younger persons. These are forms of employment in which quickness and agility may count for more than anything else. But there are quite as many, if not more, lines of endeavor in which experience, judgment and dependability count for more than all other factors.

It has become a sort of tradition that after workers have reached a stage where they are not quite as agile and active as they were in the days of their youth, they should be set aside as so much worn out machinery. But actual observations among individuals will show that this theory, which is the antithesis of real thrift, cannot be applied in anything like the majority of cases.

A prominent American surgeon recently made the statement that 50 was the average age at which 400 of the famous men of history had done their best work but that today the leaders in various lines of activity attain the heights of proficiency about midway between 60 and 70. According to this same authority, the practice of corporations, institutions of learning and others in retiring their men at 60 means a waste of their best brains for "85% of the big things done today are the work of men past 50. There is no reason why a man who shows initiative up to the age of 60 should quit showing it after 60."

We have built up in social practice an insincere and inconsistent sympathy for the elderly worker. The majority of these men and women do not need our sympathies nor our charitable inclinations. All they need is a just attitude and a decent appraisal of their real worth.

We could with high consistency do less talking about saving money and conserving natural resources and devote more thought to the rightful conservation of the values of workers who, because of their age, are discarded long before their days of actual usefulness are over.—S. W. Straus.

Long and Short of It

The late Mrs. Mary Emery of Cincinnati, whose $5,000,000 art gallery was bequeathed to the Cincinnati Art Museum, was a generous patron of painters, poets, sculptors and musicians.

Once, at a Cincinnati tea, a clergyman praised Mrs. Emery for the pension she had bestowed on an aged novelist.

"Oh, well," she said in answer, "art is long, but artists are always short."

ON THE HONOR ROLL OF BANKS

A Comfortable Place

If you are interested in knowing of a comfortable place to live, we can tell you. "Live just inside your income." This may sound a little funny, but it is no joke. Many a man who has tried living beyond his income has landed in trouble clear up to the neck. If you are living inside your income you are on the SAFE side. If you are living far enough inside to lay up a little account at the bank, you are still safer and more comfortable.

A Two Dollar Dinner For Six

Menu

Grapefruit and Pineapple Cup

Italian Chop Suey — Spiced Cucumber Slices

Dinner Rolls Butter

Asparagus Salad

Loganberry Delight

Demi-tasse

ONE-HALF can grapefruit costs 11 cents and one small size can pineapple tid-bits costs 10 cents. Mix, serve in cocktail glasses, and top with maraschino cherry.
Ingredients for Italian Chop Suey cost 60 cents: slice one medium onion and cut one cup celery in fine strips two inches long. Sauté onion and celery in four tablespoons butter until yellow. Add one-half pound raw Hamburg steak and cook until it begins to brown. Add one cup canned tomato pulp (the juice is delicious for a breakfast drink), one cup canned corn and one-fourth cup grated cheese. Simmer until meat is tender. Add two cups cooked spaghetti. Serve as main dish with spiced cucumber slices.
Sufficient dinner rolls cost 10 cents, butter 15. Asparagus for salad 19 cents, lettuce 10 cents and mayonnaise 10 cents.
Loganberry Delight is made by lining sherbet glasses with lady-fingers, costing 20 cents. Fill glasses with canned loganberries, 19 cents. Sufficient coffee costs 6 cents. This totals $1.90 leaving a margin of 10 cents for minor ingredients.

Community Building

Consider the Trees in Highway Planning

Some years ago in improving Riverside avenue, in the town of Greenwich, Conn., a number of century-old elms were threatened in a plan to straighten out this thoroughfare. Unfettered action on the part of the citizens, who were ready to fight to the last ditch for the lives of the huge trees, each a landmark and an ornament, won the day, and the cement roadway which replaced its macadam predecessor now skirts the huge elms, whose grateful shade in the summer is a boon to all who pass that way. In the same municipality within a few months permission to cut down an oak that grew on the street boundary was refused a builder.

Long island is having its own troubles in preserving the fine trees which line highways that are marked for widening. Many whose properties border highways are wroth over plans which call for the removal of hundreds of fine trees, most of them planted by individuals who have watched their growth with solicitude and felt a pride in having done something for the communities in which they live.

The growth of a tree occupies more than the life span of man. Its destruction with ax or saw is only a matter of minutes. Those entrusted with the care or improvement of highways should consider well and exhaust every expedient before destroying something that is as quick as the elements of humanity itself and brings delight to all those whose heads are not in the clouds.

Some Suggestions as to Road Maintenance

While a few states have good laws providing for tree planting, the remainder have either indifferent ones or none at all, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1,481-F, "Planting the Roadside," just issued by the Department of Agriculture.

The traveling public has as much interest in the appearance of the road as a whole as the adjoining property holder. Furthermore, it is usually difficult to get each property holder to approve and act on a given plan. For these reasons, says the department, it is best to place the planting and subsequent care of roadside trees in the hands of a public body representing some such division as the state, county, town, township or parish, rather than smaller units.

Because of the intimate relationship between road construction and maintenance and the upkeep of the roadside, the closest co-operation between the highway department and those having the trees in charge is needed.

Suggestions relative to planning for the trees, planting and spacing them, kinds to plant, pruning, arrangement of shrubs and perennials and other phases of the work are given.

Work to Cut Fire Loss

Losses by fire in the United States constitute a direct tax of more than half a billion dollars, to say nothing of the loss of life.

Without doubt a substantial reduction in these losses is possible. Bad flues and pipes can be made safe at a negligible cost. Paper and rubbish accumulated in basements and attics, which endenger spontaneous combustion and furnish ready fuel for a fire once it is started, can be removed with just a little effort. Bonfires and camp fires can be stamped out, leaving nothing to start a conflagration. Just a little forethought and action in these directions will pay a large dividend, and one which everyone can share.

Selecting Color Schemes

In the house on a small city lot we should want to use as much yellow as possible, just as much as we should in any small dark room. For a room exposed to the south with plenty of sunshine, we should use blue, mauve or gray; while for one exposed to the cold north, yellow, golden brown or rose. Also the size of a house, the distance from a street, the size of a room or the height of ceiling would constitute important factors to be considered in our selection of color backgrounds.

Sunday School Work

One great truth should be kept constantly in the minds of our citizens. The fundamentals of our civic life are identical with the work of our churches and Sunday schools. The noble band of men and women of every faith should have substantial and ready support of our citizens. Our city would not be fit to live in were it not for our schools and churches.—Tarrant City (Ala.) Booster.

Planning for Future City

There is a wholesome emulation and rivalry among the leading cities of the country in the matter of planning and zoning, and the influence of the movement is extending to the smaller cities and many towns. In time it even may reach thousands of small communities which have vastly greater opportunities for order and beautification than they appreciate, much less endeavor to utilize.

How Many Will You Save?

If your newly-arrived chicks could talk they would say: "Do not feed us until we are 72 hours old. We are supplied with food during this period by the remaining part of the egg yolks which we absorbed into our bodies just before we were hatched. When we are 72 hours old give us a feed which will provide life and growth vitamins." There are 1592 hatcheries which say, "Feed Purina." They know what it takes to keep chicks alive and growing. NO PERHAPS about it—no maybe—Havana Ribbon will revise every estimate you ever had of the cigar-purchasing power of a nickel. Havana Ribbon stands ready to prove that a five-cent cigar, made as Bayuk makes it, can be a really good cigar; that it can give you true, mild tobacco flavor without pungent bitterness or insipid flatness.

Here's the secret: Havana Ribbon contains no under-ripe top leaves of the tobacco plant. No over-ripe bottom leaves. But only fragrant fully-ripe middle leaves, age-mellowed and blended into a roll of completely satisfying smoke enjoyment.

Try Havana Ribbon. Shove a small five-cent piece across the nearest cigar counter and see how big it is coming back—in genuine cigar value.

Cigarette Almost Did for Youthful Artist

How M. Pouishnoff, the famous pianist, made his first appearance on the concert platform makes an amusing story.

Although he was then barely five years old he played beautifully and he was billed to give a joint recital with an adult violinist.

The latter went on the platform first and played a solo. Meanwhile Pouishnoff, left alone in the artist's room, discovered that his colleague had left a half-smoked cigarette on the mantelpiece. The temptation was too great, and he smoked it.

He managed, in a sort of stupor, he says, to get through a Beethoven sonata, but at the very last chord he fell fast asleep, and had to be carried off the platform, put into a carriage and driven home.

FEESERSBURG.

March treated us to all kinds of weather: 13 clear days, 3 snows, 5 rains, one a thunder gust, and four windy days. Out of 30 days in first quarter of this year 57 were bright and clear, 19 others were not inclement, but sky overcast with clouds rather unusual for winter.

The high wind of last Friday night became alarming from 9 to 11 o'clock and daylight revealed the havoc to trees, fences, small buildings, chimneys and roofs.

Mrs. Addison McKinney was taken to Frederick Hospital, on Tuesday of last week, and operated on immediately for a very severe case of appendicitis. Her condition now is encouraging. Mr. McK. is staying with her sister, Mrs. Bettie Snare.

Mrs. John Humbert has had some relief from pain, but her foot is in a sad plight. The great toe is nearly severed from it by disease.

Little Mary Plaine, of LeGore, is spending some time in her grandfather's home, Albert Rinehart and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Addison Koons and neighbor Hannah Doodly, accompanied Russell Bohn to Baltimore, on Saturday, to see Mrs. Bohn, who hopes to return home soon.

Mrs. Emily Norris spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. Teresa Cover, in Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Walden entertained on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Daiger, of Forest Park; and Miss Braithwaite, of the City Welfare Commission of Baltimore.

George Humbert had sale of his surplus possessions, on Saturday, and exchanged the place of abode with E. L. Eyer and family, on Monday, until the new house they have rented in Littlestown, is completed, about May 1st. Friends purchased the organ at Humbert's sale and presented it to Helen Straw for her music practice; with which the little lady is well pleased.

With the death of Frederick Green, another of our familiar residents has passed on. During the 70's, Mr. Green and his brothers, with a number of employees, conducted a thriving coach business in our village, and worshipped with the Reformed congregation at Mt. Union. His wife who was Cordelia Donsifer, Woodsboro, was young, capable and full of activity. They had three sons then and were genial friends and kind neighbors.

Last Sunday was a day of good things for Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Koons. On Tuesday previous they passed their 70th wedding anniversary, and their friends remembered. The Sunday School of Mt. Union gave them a lovely Sunshine Box, of pink paper and apple blossoms, with fruits canned and dried, cake, pie, peanut butter and candy, stockings, gloves, and three envelopes with money. Other friends brought corn, flour, coffee, preserves and mince pie; and a generous supply of fresh meats, scrapple and lard. Later the neighbors supplied ice cream and music. Messrs. Dayhoff and Miller delivered the box and had a devotional service in their home; for all of which they desire to publicly express their appreciation and thanks.

Next Sunday, after Sunday School session at Mt. Union, there will be the annual re-election of officers for the ensuing year. Rev. Lowe hopes to conduct Communion Service the following Sabbath, April 15th., at 10:30 A. M.

Edith Gertrude Hill, infant daughter of Theodore and Madeline Hill, colored, died at her home in Taneytown, Tuesday evening, aged 1 year and 11 days, the cause of death being pneumonia. She is survived by her parents, a brother, Leon, and her grandfather, James F. Hill, and grandmother, Mrs. Edith Elliot, of Waynesboro. Funeral services were held this Thursday morning in charge of Rev. Joseph Little, rector of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, interment in the cemetery adjoining.

MR. WILLIAM A. SMITH.

Mr. William A. Smith died at his home west of Lineboro, on Wednesday morning, March 28, as the result of an illness following a paralytic stroke some time before. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and four children: James, William A., Harriet E., Laura Elizabeth. He was born Sept. 2, 1861, making his age 66 years, 6 months and 26 days.

The funeral was conducted at the home on Saturday, at 10:00 A. M., by the Rev. John S. Hollenbach, pastor of Manchester Reformed Church. Interment was made at Aberdeen, Md.

MRS. SARAH MYERS.

Mrs. Sarah Myers, widow of the late William Fogle, and Joshua Myers died at the home of her son, James E. Fogle, Taneytown, on Thursday morning, aged 78 years, 6 months, 15 days, from a stroke of paralysis received last Saturday.

She is survived by the following children: Charles G. Little, of Hanover; James E. Fogle and Mrs. Maurice Crebs, of Taneytown, and Mrs. Charles Harnish, of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held at the home, this Saturday, in charge of Rev. Guy P. Bready. Interment in the Lutheran cemetery.

MRS. MARY E. SLONAKER.

Mrs. Mary Slonaker (nee Rodkey), wife of Joseph R. Slonaker, 3522 Park Heights Ave., Baltimore, died at her home Wednesday, April 4, after a few hours' illness of paralysis, aged 68 years. The family formerly lived in Uniontown, Mr. S.'s native place; but have been in the city for some years.

Mrs. Slonaker is survived by her husband, one son, and several grandchildren. Funeral service will be held, at home, Saturday afternoon; burial in Hill cemetery, Uniontown. Pall-bearers: H. T. Erb, Shreeve Shriner, Harold Smelser and Nevin Hitesheiw.

MRS. JOHN W. OHLER.

Mrs. Rosa L., wife of Mr. John W. Ohler, died at her home at Bridgeport, Tuesday night, after several months illness, aged 55 years, 6 months, 29 days.

She is survived by her husband, and the following children: G. Clyde Ohler, Littlestown; Guy R., Clarence L. and Edward K., at home; Mrs. Andrew Keilholz, near Emmitsburg, and Mrs. Frank H. Ohler, near Taneytown also by a sister, Mrs. Herbert Krumrine, Littlestown, and a brother, William Stiffer, in Ohio.

Funeral services were held this Friday morning at the home, and at St. John's Lutheran Church, near Littlestown.

MR. BENJ. L. WALTZ.

Mr. Benjamin Lewis Waltz aged 72 years, 8 months, 13 days, died at the home of his son, John L. Waltz, near Uniontown, on Monday, after several months illness.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Julia Dingle, and the following children: John and Charles, near Uniontown; Herbert, of Waynesboro; Mrs. Bertha Bowersox, of York; Mrs. Eva Cartwell, of Frederick; Mrs. Mary B. Park, of Baltimore, and Mrs. James Hoffman, of Oregon. Also by three brothers and one sister; George Waltz, New York; Isaac Waltz, Florida; James Waltz, Uniontown, and Mrs. Ruth Petry, New Windsor.

Funeral services were held this Friday afternoon, at the Church of God, Uniontown, in charge of Rev. J. H. Hoch. Interment in the adjoining cemetery. The Red Men and Odd Fellows also officiated at the grave.

MR. GEORGE M. OTT.

Mr. George McClellan Ott, living along the Taneytown and Harney road, near Harney, died suddenly along Alloways creek near his home Monday night, from a heart attack, having gone to the creek with Harry Sentz to catch a mess of fish. He was apparently as well as usual during the day.

He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ott, and is survived by his wife, by his brother-in-law, Chas. E. Harner, near Taneytown, and by a number of cousins, nephews and nieces.

Funeral services were held at the home and at Harney Lutheran Church on Thursday afternoon, in charge of his pastor, Rev. L. K. Young. Interment in the Taneytown Lutheran cemetery. The A. O. K. of M. C., of Harney, conducted the services at the grave. His age was 66 years, 5 months and 11 days.

MR. ABM. M. WAYBRIGHT.

Mr. Abraham M. Waybright died at his home in Freedom township, Pa., near Harney, from paralysis following a brief illness, aged about 85 years. He was a veteran of the Civil War, Co. I. Penna. Vol. Infantry, had served as county commissioner, and was prominent in many ways in his community, in addition to being a farmer by occupation.

Surviving him are three sons and four daughters; Samuel, of Taneytown; John, at home, and Ernest of Tacoma Washington; Mrs. Harry Lockner, Gettysburg; Mrs. John Hockensmith, Taneytown; and Misses Margaret and Grace, at home; also by one sister, Mrs. Harriet Rhodes, of Gettysburg.

Funeral services will be held at the home Saturday morning, followed by regular services in Harney Lutheran Church, in charge of his pastor, Rev. L. K. Young. Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Odd Power of South American Vampire Bat

In his story of his explorations in South America, Dr. William McGovern has something to tell us about the dreaded vampire bat.

Bats are not believed to possess any saliva which could act as a local anesthetic; and yet it is a fact that they can insert their long teeth and suck out the blood of their victims without awakening them. Not a single case is known in which a sleeper has awakened while the vampires were at their work. It is also very curious that the bats never attack a person who is awake, however silent and motionless he may be.

He writes interestingly of the Amazonian medicine men.

The Indian medicine men are no doubt charlatans in many respects, but many of them are certainly possessed of really remarkable powers. They appear to know a great deal more than most Europeans about massage, and they are unquestionably acquainted with the nature and use of many strange herbs, drugs and poisons. It is also highly probable that these men are more than superficially acquainted with principles of hypnotism.

Types of Women

There are four types of women Charlie. There are the unfortunates, who have been granted no attractions, physical or otherwise. They have heaps of friends of their own sex and they live in women's clubs or institutions, and find an outlet for their emotions in religion and the love affairs of other people. Then there is the latest model, the aggressive variety, elbowing men out of the way; there is something rather attractive about them, but they know it too well. Then your foliose women, the mischief makers, often most attractive. Then the bovine variety, which makes for peace in the home and a comfortable sluggishness in the heart of man. Worthy women.—Lesley Storm in "Lady, What of Life?"

Remove Wet Garments
All of us at some time or other get caught in a rainstorm, fall into water, get our feet wet in rainy weather, etc. These occasional "soakings" are harmless, if the right thing is done afterward. Dr. R. S. Copeland says getting wet does no more harm than taking a bath, if you do not stay in the wet garments. This, he points out, is particularly true of wet shoes. His advice is: Don't stay in wet garments. Get out of them into dry clothing. If you feel chilled after exposure, it is important to restore the circulation. The best way to do that is to take a good hot bath and go to bed.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Brick Proves Durability
A chimney of brick 125 feet in height stands like a sentinel over the abandoned mining town of Belmont, near Tonopah, Nev. This chimney, erected in the boom days of the town, showed the spirit of the men who sought better living conditions in these communities that sprang up overnight. Brick was hauled from Sacramento, a distance of more than 500 miles, by means of ox teams. Withstanding the attacks of weather for 55 years, this chimney is in as good condition now as it was when erected by the gold-mad first inhabitants of the town. It gives mute testimony to the durability of common brick.

Reason for Webster's Preference for Blue

Daniel Webster went to Dartmouth college in a homespun suit, of which probably every thread was carded, spun and woven by his mother's hands from the wool of their own sheep. It was a dyed-in-the-wool suit and the color was indigo blue.

In the South butternut was used, but though the Yankee dames knew all about the uses of butternut bark, and the slate color that lay in the sumach berries and bark of white maple, and were not unacquainted with the various dyes that could be made to yield through the agency of vitriol and alum and coppers to "set" them fast, the universal standby in New England was the dye pot, put excellence, that stood in the chimney corner of every kitchen in that region.

So Webster was fitted out in indigo blue from collar to ankle. Before reaching Hanover there came on a drenching rain. The suit held its own, but it parted with enough dye to tinge Daniel blue from head to foot.

Webster had a liberal stratum of sentiment in his mental make-up, and for some reason the color of his young manhood remained his favorite wear through life. He wore blue coats to his dying day. If any one ever saw him in one of a different color the fact has not been made of record.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE GREATEST WONDERS

IF YOU had lived in the ancient times you would have journeyed, if you had had the time and money, to seven places on the shores of the eastern part of the Mediterranean in order that you might see the then Seven Wonders of the World.

You have doubtless heard them named many times. It is probable, too, that if you are past thirty you would have some trouble in repeating them offhand.

To save you the time of looking them up, they were the Pharos of Alexandria, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the Pyramids, the Tomb of Mausolus and the Great Statue of Jupiter at Olympia.

Go to some library and look up the reasons why each one of these was built. There are interesting romances and excellent and entertaining reading about every one of these creations.

After you have done that sit down and write out what you think are the most marvelous results of genius.

So that you may have a good starting point we print below the selections of a thousand men of note in this country and Europe who were invited to make a similar list. Every man voted for the seven things he thought most wonderful and when the ballots were counted these were selected, receiving the greatest number of votes in the order named: Radio, the telephone, the airplane, radium, spectrum analysis, the X-ray, the Panama canal.

These are indeed great wonders, but are they the greatest?

Poe in one of his poems refers to "the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome." A good many people delight to think that the world is going to the bow-wows, that the past is infinitely superior to the present and that they would have been much happier if they could have lived in another age and a better time.

A day's deprivation of modern conveniences of which the ancients knew nothing would be a good lesson for them. They would realize that this, after all, a pretty good world to live in, that genius was never so active nor so productive, that every day sees its creations and its advancements and that we are far ahead of the ancients in the sources of happiness.

And now to go back to the beginning, what are the Seven Wonders of the modern world?

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

WHILE the fresh maple sugar is still toothsome, try using it and the sirup in various ways. Here are two:

Nut Sandwiches.
Brown walnuts in a little butter, season with salt and add to grated maple sugar. Chop the nuts and use on buttered whole wheat bread.

A most delicious omelet may be prepared by placing a half-cupful or less of blanched almonds in a buttered omelet pan, and stir until hot, but not brown; then pour in the omelet and cook. Fold as usual and serve with a hot maple sauce poured around the omelet. This makes a delicious dessert.

Golden Frozen Pudding.

Scald a pint of milk. Beat six egg yolks until thick, add one cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt; beat again. Cook the two mixtures until smooth, cool, add a tablespoonful of vanilla and one and one-half cupfuls of cream. Freeze. Have ready one and one-half cupfuls of sultana raisins, candied cherries, pineapple and citron mixed, cover with lemon juice and let stand overnight. Stir this fruit mixture into the frozen custard and let stand for two hours to ripen. Serve with whipped cream.

Apple Cocktail.

Peel large apples and with a large potato scoop cut into small balls. Drop the balls into water with a bit of lemon juice to keep them from discoloring. Prepare a mixture of pineapple, banana, grapefruit and put into glasses. Decorate the top of each with a few apple balls. Pour over all a boiled cider slightly thickened by boiling—cool before using.

Carrot and Pineapple.

Grated carrot mixed with finely cut pineapple served on lettuce with a good mayonnaise is another good combination.
Salmon, coconut and celery with a good boiled dressing, using the fat from the salmon in making the dressing is another well-liked salad. Serve on lettuce and garnish with a spoonful of mayonnaise, sprinkled with minced chives.

THE SPRING BREEZE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

SPRING had been long on the way, but who could doubt that at last it had come?

Not the lawn sloping from the red-brick house to the avenue, for wasn't grass sprouting all over it, young and green? Not the long line of trees, for new-born leaves were shooting from every twig. Not Nora, surely, who, running back from an errand to the corner grocery, knelt beside a tuft of violets, delightfully breathing in their fragrance. Her hands reached out to gather them, then fell empty to her sides.

"You're happier where you are, darling," she murmured. "And the mistress would only scold me for wasting my time picking you, she's that cross!"

Nora's hands were slim and pretty, for all that they cooked and served Miss Brockingall's meals in the red-brick house and swept the rooms and dusted them and did a hundred things besides, her little feet flying back and forth and her voice lifted in a song as bright as her Irish smile.

Louder, however, than lawn or trees or even violets, a wandering breeze sang out that spring had come! It was a rogue of a breeze, with an insistent voice that wouldn't be silenced. It spoke of cowslips and dandelions and murmuring rivers free at last from their load of ice, and as it played with Nora's sunny hair it whispered:

"Springtime is courting time! Have you a lover, Nora, to tell you how pretty you are? Have you a lover to stroll out with in the lengthening evenings? Why haven't you a lover, Nora?"

"Ah, be still!" Nora said sharply to her own thoughts. "What would I be wantin' of a lover—sure, all they do is waste your time and break your heart afterward, so I'm told."

"Some may, some may, Nora," blurted the spring breeze. "But a tall, straight young fellow, now, in policeman's uniform, with buttons that shine in the sun—wouldn't he be the right lover for a pretty girl of eighteen?"

"I just despise a man that can only look and look and hasn't spunk enough to—" Nora's thought remained unfinished. "He wouldn't be at a loss for an opportunity if he wanted it real hard. He's been on this beat ten days."

"He's shy and may be a bit slow—those big men sometimes are," murmured the spring breeze. "But aren't his brown eyes kind and true, Nora, and his smile, isn't it pleasant? Now, how would it be if you came to his help and made an opportunity yourself?"

"Whist!" cried Nora impatiently. "The way my thoughts do run on! It must be the spring in the air!"

So the responsibility lay with the spring breeze that blew the thought into Nora's mind. She dallied with it, for all her show of indignation, and took it with her into the basement laundry, where a large boiler full of clothes awaited her manipulations. With the perseverance that marked its parent, the spring breeze, it kept repeating: "It isn't as if you were asked to do anything unbecoming a nice girl, Nora. But you know you liked him from the first and it's not everybody you like. You're choosy! Of course, instead of standing gassing so long with old Mr. Akerman way down the avenue he might—he might—but it only goes to show he's a nice boy and not hold like some. I'm thinking you'll have to help him, Nora, after all." Nora took the piled-up laundry basket in her strong young arms and carried it to the yard back of the house. The spring breeze rushed at her, almost more than a breeze now, it had grown so boisterous. "I'll help you," it boasted.

It dashed at the clothes Nora hung on the line and tossed them about violently. As she clipped a clothespin securely to a bit of muslin deeply edged with lace, her eyes caught the glint of buttons on a blue uniform walking straight up the avenue. He had just passed the Akerman house, where the old master kept a body loitering so long in conversation. If—if something light and pretty blew off this lawn in his direction he couldn't miss it and surely it would be his duty—to say nothing of his inclination, for he knew where Nora lived—to bring it straight back. Then she would say: "Oh, thank you, Mr.—Mr.—" And she would hesitate, just as if she hadn't heard his name at the corner grocery—a nice-sounding name, Robert Dale. And then he would say—and she would reply—Nora's hand stole up to the clothespin. "I'll help you, my girl!" shouted the spring breeze, grown into a fair-sized wind by this time. And it seized the frothy bit of lace and muslin and sent it flying down the avenue, following gustily to make sure it didn't turn back, blessings on it!

Just then Miss Brockingall put a frowning face at her bedroom window. "Nora!" she cried sharply. "Don't waste your time looking down the avenue. There is plenty of work waiting for you in the house. Where's my Honiton handkerchief? It slipped into the laundry bag by mistake."

"Faith, has it a name?" asked Nora, turning quickly to her mistress, for the next minute his heavy, measured footsteps would be sounding on the sidewalk, and she must show a proper degree of surprise.

"That's the name of the lace on it," snapped Miss Brockingall. "I set great store by that handkerchief. Come into the house at once."

Nora ran in, meeting her mistress on the back porch.

"Why isn't that handkerchief on the line?" asked Miss Brockingall.

Nora stood first on one small foot, then on the other. What could be keeping him? Surely the handkerchief couldn't have missed him, blowing as it must, straight in his way.

"Why don't you answer, Nora?" asked Miss Brockingall impatiently. "And what are you looking so queer about?" For a sudden, sickening thought had come to Nora. He might have been stopped at one of the other houses and the handkerchief might have been picked up by a passer-by while his back was turned. A pretty fix, and how was she to get out of it! She looked despairingly at the awning flapping in the gusty air. Threatening clouds were lowering across the sky and she shivered. Shure, something had gone wrong!

"It blew away," she confessed in a very small voice.

"Blow away! A likely story. Do you realize that the handkerchief is valuable?"

"You can keep the money out of my wages." The lit was gone from Nora's voice, for this was a serious matter. She had undertaken to help her mother pay a hospital bill and every penny counted.

"I don't know about that," snapped Miss Brockingall. "This looks suspicious to me."

Flames burnt up the tears in Nora's eyes at that. Her voice was loud as it rolled over her quick Irish tongue.

"What are you meanin'? Shure your handkerchief is down the avenue, and there I'll be findin' it in a minute."

But Miss Brockingall was at the veranda door before her. "You don't stir a foot till I've made up my mind what to do about the matter."

This certainly was a fix. If somebody had taken the handkerchief how could she ever clear herself? Nora's eyes searched the yard and roamed hopelessly to the sky. The gray clouds were scampering away, and with them went much of the gustiness, leaving merely the spring breeze in a merry mood. And if, at that very minute a pair of big feet encased in shining shoes didn't come tramp, tramping up the asphalted walk that led to the back porch! They halted now and then as their owner, a large young man whose buttons glinted on his blue uniform, searched diligently among the flowered borders by the house. Suddenly he stood up and saluted, a small white object fluttering from his big hand.

"I heard your voice," he said in a deep voice that went well with his massive build. "Might this handkerchief be the property of either of you ladies?"

He addressed Miss Brockingall, but the smile was for Nora, she knew, and she smiled back at him radiantly. "Now perhaps you'll be believing me," she said to her mistress, and without more ado followed Robert into the back yard.

"How did it happen you came across the handkerchief, Mr.—Mr.—?" she queried, carefully smoothing out a crease in her dress so as not to meet his eyes.

"My name is Robert Dale," he said, "and it's glad I am to meet you at last!"

"You knew the handkerchief belonged here?"

"No," he answered. "I must have been daydreaming, for surely it blew down the avenue. Just as I had passed the Akerman house old Mr. Akerman called me back and we had some talk together. When I left him, if I didn't see this handkerchief in the shrubs!" He hesitated, reddened and leaned toward Nora, looking up at him artlessly. "I've been wanting to know you, Miss Nora—oh, yes, I've learned your name! I might have got to meet you at the grocery store, but a fellow feels awkward with folks gawking around. Today"—he straightened, a smile of triumph on his face—"today that handkerchief seemed to say, 'Bob, here's your chance!' I decided I'd inquire if it belonged here, just to get acquainted with you. Then the wind blew right handy and I took the handkerchief from my pocket and—"

He beamed down on her, obviously proud of his stratagem. The budding flowers and grasses seemed to nod in sympathy. The only clouds in the sky now were baby white ones with which the spring breeze, mild again and balmy, was having a glorious game.

"And I—" began Nora smiling gleefully in anticipation of his surprise when he heard that she, too, had wanted to meet him. She stopped short because the spring breeze had blown a strang of hair across her mouth.

"Whist! You foolish girl!" it admonished. "Don't you know that a man likes to do his own courting?"

Nora looked up at Robert, her blue eyes deep with mystery.

"And I," she finished, "think it's the wonder you are for ideas, Robert Dale!"

Put Implicit Faith in Flower "Oracles"

Perhaps the most familiar of all ways of consulting fate by means of a flower is the pulling off of the petals. But this is not the only way. An American in England, visiting an ancient and remote country inn, one day missed her way in rambling corridors and entered by mistake the bedroom of her pretty chambermaid. The girl was there, changing her dress, and she offered presently to guide the lady back to her apartment. In the brief wait the visitor noticed something that struck her as odd. So she asked why a certain little plant had been pinned up on the wall. "Surely it will fade unless it is put in water," she said.

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but it won't," replied the girl with pride and satisfaction in her voice. "That's a pin plant and it's been growing there a week. Every bud has opened, too. It's doing fine."

It was a pretty tuft of yellow stonecrop, starred with little golden flowers. A few questions about its uses as a "pin plant," and the girl, laughing and blushing, admitted that it was customary among the girls of the village to pin a tuft of the budded plant upon their bedroom wall as an oracle of love. If it lived feebly but did not bloom, their present love affairs would come to nothing; if it withered and died, they would meet disaster in love; but if at the end of a few days the little plant, suspended by a loosely tied thread head downward from its pin, began to curve its stems upward until they stood upright and finally the tips burst into bloom—then all was well, and they might expect to marry and live happy ever after.

Lesson for April 8

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST (EASTER LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 16:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Because I live ye shall live also.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Comes to Life Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Christ Rises from the Grave.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus, Our Living Leader.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of the Resurrection.

I. The Ministry of Love (vv. 1-1).
1. By whom (v. 1). Mary Magdalene, the mother of James and Salome. They brought sweet spices with which to anoint Him.

2. When? (v. 2). Early in the morning of the first day of the week.
3. Their perplexity (vv. 3, 4). They questioned as to who should roll away the large stone from the mouth of the tomb. To their surprise they found the stone removed.

II. The Angel in the Tomb (vv. 5-8).
Jesus knew that these women would come to the sepulcher with perplexed and unbelieving hearts so He had an angel waiting there to announce to them the fact of His resurrection. Note the angel's message:

1. "Be not afraid" (v. 6).
2. "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified" (v. 6). This threefold designation with marvelous clearness shows (1) His humanity—Jesus. (2) Lowly residence—Nazareth. (3) His ominous death—crucified.

3. "He is risen; He is not here. Behold the place where they laid Him" (v. 6). These words throw light upon His birth, humility and shameful death. He who was born in lowly circumstances and suffered the shameful death on the cross, is now the conqueror of death. His resurrection gives meaning to His death. "If Christ be not risen your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. 15:17).

4. "Go your way, tell His disciples and Peter" (v. 7). As soon as it was known that Christ was risen from the dead they were to tell it to the disciples. The disciples all needed this blessed news, but Peter especially, since He had utterly denied Him.
5. "He goeth before you into Galilee, there shall ye see Him" (v. 7). Christ had told the disciples that He would rise from the dead and meet them in Galilee, but their unbelief kept them from this blessed truth.

III. The Appearances of the Risen Christ (vv. 9-14).

These appearances had as their object the restoration of the disciples from their awful failure and discouragement and convincing them without a peradventure of a doubt of Christ's resurrection. Since His resurrection was to be the central theme of apostolic preaching, it was necessary that they have a certainty of knowledge as to this matter (Acts 1:3). Without the resurrection of Christ His death would be meaningless. Out of the ten or more appearances, Mark selects three.

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 9-11). Mary's heart responded to the Savior who had graciously delivered her from demons. Her sufferings were no doubt terrible. She was first at the tomb; her devotion was amply rewarded by being first to meet the risen Lord. Though her faith was weak she went at once and told the story to the disciples.

2. To two disciples on the way to Emmaus (vv. 12, 13). Luke gives full particulars concerning this appearance (Luke 24:13-25). Jesus had walked, talked and eaten with them.
3. The eleven disciples (v. 14). Christ appeared to them while sitting at meat and reproved them for their unbelief. The fact that they steadfastly resisted the testimony that Christ had risen, and yet afterward were willing to risk their lives in the proclamation of this truth proves the genuineness of their faith.

IV. The Commission of the Risen Lord (vv. 15-18).
After the disciples were convinced of the truth of His resurrection, Christ sent them forth to "preach the gospel to every creature." What a glorious and supreme task is this. What a blessed issue to those who believe and how awful to them that believe not. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned" (v. 16).
V. The Activity of the Enthroned Christ (vv. 19, 20).
After giving the disciples their commission He ascended on high and from the unseen sphere directed their activities. Wherever they went He confirmed their word. He does the same for His disciples today.

Our Thoughts

Radium in Quantities Would Change Nature

The Biblical prophet spoke of the wilderness and the desert place "blossoming as the rose," and the agriculturist, by means of irrigation, has succeeded, within limits, in fulfilling the seer's words. But the dream of making the poles of the earth habitable and fruitful seems a vain one.

Yet a way has been suggested. It is not impossible, but highly improbable. If ever a method should be discovered of manufacturing radium, or if a method should be found of extracting radium from natural materials in great bulk, even the problem of fertilizing the poles, by making them temperate in climate, might find a solution.

So great is the heat produced by radium in proportion to its bulk that a quantity easily transported by manual labor would be sufficient to change the temperature of the polar regions. Indeed, if enough were taken there it would produce tropical conditions.

At present there is not a pound of radium collected in the whole world, and it is the most costly thing known. But the time may come when we shall be able to make radium from chemical elements in bulk, and then many things now regarded as impossible will be easy.

Found "Boss" of Home Busy Washing Dishes

A local man who frequently boasts of being "the boss around his shanty" is busy trying to make a certain group of women desist from spreading the tale of how he was "bossing" the day that they called on his wife.

On the day in question a group of about seven clubwomen decided to call on his "better half" to induce her to join a club which was in the process of formation. They went with some misgivings because the "lord and master of the establishment" had frequently stated that he was not in harmony with clubwomen and that his wife would not join such silly affairs as long as he "was boss."

As the group entered they found his wife smoking a cigaret and reading a novel. In the kitchenette they heard a clatter of dishes and as conversation became difficult with the din that came from the crockery, the wife shouted: "Oh, John, do be less noisy when you wash the dishes."—Springfield Union.

Didn't Like the Color

"I can let you have twos," lady, no more one cent stamps," said the man behind the window.

"No," replied the dreamy eyed girl, "they won't do," and she stepped aside to allow the woman who was next in line to make her purchases. She was still standing there as the woman stopped a moment to put her supply of stamps in her purse.

"I just can't make myself use two-cent stamps," confided the girl; "they're such a dreadful color they positively make me shudder and they won't go with any kind of letter paper. I suppose I'll have to go up to the next post office, but it's better than using pink stamps."—New York Sun.

Famous Scholar

Gregor Mendel, who gave to science the laws of heredity that have made his name immortal, was a monk in the monastery of Konigen-kloster, in Brunn, Austria. He began his work as a teacher in the technical school at Brunn and continued his studies at the University of Vienna. The monastery garden was his laboratory, where he observed the cycles of reproduction in plants. In 1865 he announced his discoveries before the Natural History society of Brunn, but received no recognition. In all, he grew and studied 10,000 plants, performing nearly 300 cross-fertilizations.

Bridegroom's Awful Fix

A Los Angeles bridegroom just married in a fashionable church filled with society folks discovered he had forgotten to get the license. It was an awful bad forget. The pastor immediately cut the knot he had tied, the prospective bride was hustled home by her father. Meanwhile the bridegroom was frantically canceling reservations for train and hotel accommodations in order to camp on the license bureau doorstep to complete the formalities at the earliest possible moment. And yet all he forgot was the license.—Capper's Weekly.

Benevolent Thrush

A rare instance of birds extending a helping hand, or rather beak, to youngsters other than their own, has been reported to the California ornithological journal, Candor, by Stanley G. Jewett, of Portland, Ore. A russet-backed thrush was observed to make twelve visits within four hours carrying food to a nestful of young robins. When mother robin appeared on the scene the thrush hastily jumped back from the nest and showed every evidence of fright at having been caught at its benevolent work.

Oh, Peter!

Peter was playing at Johnny's house. When it was time to go home, it started to rain. Mrs. White, however, gave Peter Johnny's raincoat and galoshes.

"Don't take so much trouble, Mrs. White," said Peter, politely.

"I'm sure your mother would do as much for Johnny," she replied.

"My mother would do more," said Peter. "She'd ask Johnny to stay to supper."

Shakespeare Had to Wait for Recognition

In reading a British review of William Shakespeare's life and works, I found many interesting statements, Jack Malone observes in the Chicago Daily News. One of these depicted the "Bard of Avon" as having no rating whatever with the arbiters of literary excellence—Bacon, Marlowe and Green. These critics ignored him utterly, refusing to publish any comments either pro or con, their studied silence attesting a desire to squelch an actor who presumed to intrude upon their particular field—literature.

This intensely interesting and gripping article asserted that the above trio were considered the "cream" of Elizabethan authors, with the power to make or break any upstart seeking to compete with them. So the "Immortal William" was suppressed, and during the next 100 years remained a dim legend. Then came a plea for his rehabilitation among authors of Pope's time. Shakespeare "fans" became more and more numerous, his dramas and verses were collected and read, and the habit was formed. And finally, 240 years following his death, Shakespeare's fame was secured for all time!

South Seas

The Pacific ocean was formerly known as the South sea, due to the fact that Vasco Nunez de Balboa, Spanish governor of Darien, first saw it in 1513 when looking southward. He named it "el Mer del Sur," or the "Sea of the South." Almost from the beginning, however, the English used the term in the plural form and applied it to all the waters of the southern hemisphere. In 1528, only 15 years after Balboa first beheld the Pacific, a man named Thorne wrote to Henry VIII as follows: "Ventil they come to thee, South Seas of the Indies Occidental." In English literature "South Seas" refers especially to that part of the Pacific ocean south of the equator. "The South Sea islands" is a general term designating the more remote and less civilized islands in that region.—Exchange.

The SANDMAN STORY

ABOUT FAIRY QUEEN

"I've had a fine journey," said the Fairy Queen, as she came back to Fairyland.

"Tell us about it, and tell us what you saw," the Fairies asked.

"First of all, I saw some lovely trees along a great avenue. They had all come out in full, and they were leaning over and meeting high in the center, and talking to each other.

"It seemed that they had started telling each other little springtime secrets early in the spring, and had gone closer together and closer together as they had listened to each other.

"I've Had a Fine Journey," Said the Fairy Queen.

"So now the lovely branches met and made a beautiful tree archway all down the avenue.

"All winter long they had looked at each other on either side of the roadway and they had said:

"When spring comes we'll have some talks!"

"Then I peeped in at a birthday party. A little girl named Lucy was nine years old.

"She had some other children at her party, and they played all kinds of games. Puss in the Corner was one favorite.

"They played the donkey game, too. There was a big sheet, and upon it was a painted donkey. Each child was blindfolded, and after having been turned around three times so as to be mixed up and to make the game harder, she was started off carrying a painted tail made of cloth which she was going to try to put on the donkey.

"The one who got nearest in putting on the tail correctly won a prize. "Then they had ice cream and a large birthday cake with Lucy's name and age printed in pink letters upon the white frosting.

"The table had a paper tablecloth upon it with all kinds of pretty pictures of little Boy Blue blowing his horn and of children with sand pails and shovels at the sea-shore. The napkins were like the tablecloth, too.

"Then there were fences made of cardboard with the same patterns, and these fences were put about the table. They were quite low.

"The colors were all blue and yellow, and Lucy wore a yellow hair ribbon, and yellow socks, and a blue sash. "Oh, they had a splendid time.

"Then I passed a great many members of the balloon family, all riding on motor cars. They looked very pretty and gay, and they were very proud as they waved a 'hello' to me as they hurried by!

"I saw some dear little pink leaves coming out, and I knew the members of the White Oak family were slowly coming along.

"I called upon a little Dicky bird, too, who belonged to a little boy known to his friends as Pine.

"Pine was very proud of Dicky and told how Dicky would sing, though really Dicky sang very little.

"But even his chirping was music and song to Pine's ears. And Pine told me of Dicky's bath-taking, and how he never failed to take a bath each morning.

"Oh, Pine boasted of Dicky, and of his bright yellow feathers. "Pine thought it was so wonderful that Dicky did everything standing on his legs.

"He sleeps that way, he eats that way, he sings that way, he takes his bath that way," Pine said.

"I saw many garden flowers—lavender tulips, and white lilacs, and lilies of the valley, and Johnny Jump-Ups, and Striped Grass and Flowering Almond bushes, and they all wished me such a polite good-day.

"Flowers have such sweet manners. I saw two dogs rub noses, too, and tell each other they were so glad to meet again.

"My journey was interesting to me because I love to see all the different creatures and flowers and people I can.

"To me there is so much that is worth while to see, and it's all so very enjoyable," the Fairy Queen ended as she waved her wand happily.

For Meditation

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

KNOWLEDGE OR WISDOM?

COMMON sense is a rare virtue. Good horse sense is worth more than rubies. The lack of it has proven disastrous to many educated persons. Education is an essential factor in the business world. It is also a necessity. The product of education is knowledge, but the discreet use of knowledge is wisdom—a gift of the gods!

Many a well-educated person falls in life for the reason that he does not know how to use the education he possesses. The more we know the worse fools we are capable of becoming. Education, when not directed into proper channels, runs riot with things. Many of the criminals, whose crimes have attracted public attention, possessed college degrees. It is not how much one knows that evaluates ability. It is how one uses what he knows. Little education and much wisdom is far better as an economic asset than a college degree and no common sense.

Dynamite in the hands of a child is a dangerous thing. So is education when not controlled by wisdom.

Wisdom is the product of experience. Knowledge is acquired from the schoolroom. Wisdom is within the grasp of every person; knowledge, the privilege of the smaller group.

"How much better is it to get wisdom than gold! and is understanding rather to be chosen than silver!" "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

ORIGIN OF BEARS

HERE is a superstition which, according to the American Folk-Lore society, is found in the Far Northeast. Perhaps the same story, or something very like it, is told in other sections of the country; very likely so for its origin lies deep in ancient mythology. The story is as follows: An old tramp-woman came to a house where there were two little children and, their parents being away, she put the children into the oven and baked them. When the parents came home and opened the oven door the children ran out in the shape of two little bears. Which accounts for the plantigrade feet of bears. The myths of Isis and Demeter are evidently responsible for this superstition. Incidents in the lives of each of these goddesses having in the course of some thousands of years suffered slight changes and adaptations.

Isis in her wanderings in search of the body of Osiris, came to the house of a certain king disguised as "a poor tramp-woman" and was engaged as nurse for the king's son. Every day, when alone with the child, Isis used to put him in the fire with the intention of gradually burning away his mortal parts and ending him with immortality. One day the king came home and caught her at it, stopped the proceedings and the child thus lost his chances of entire immortality, remaining half mortal and half a god.

In the same way Demeter, searching for her daughter Persephone, came as a "poor tramp-woman" to the house of the king of Eleusis and being given shelter was caught one day by the king baking his child in the fire with the intention of thus conferring upon it immortality. The ancestresses of the poor tramp-woman of the first story are apparent. The bear part of the story is suggested by the plantigrade feet of that animal which so strongly resemble the feet of a man. As in the cases of Demeter and Isis the baking of the children was not complete, the children were left in the anomalous condition of the children experimented upon by the "poor tramp-women" of the myths.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

(Items of news from town, or vicinity are always wanted for this column. Especially accidents, sales of real estate, fires, important happenings, visits to or from the community, social events, and all matters of general interest to those at home, and away from home.)

Curtis L. Roop and family moved, on Tuesday, to their new home on Route No. 7, Westminster.

Miss Helen Stover, of near town, was the guest of Miss Hazel Albaugh at New Midway, on Sunday.

Jack Bower spent the last week-end with his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Roop, New Windsor.

Mrs. George Gerrick, grand-daughter of Mrs. Minerva Harman, is seriously ill with plural pneumonia, in Hanover.

Mrs. Sarah J. Keefer, near town, just returned home from a week's visit among her sisters.

The exceptionally hot weather, this week, has hastened garden making and all out-door work.

Mrs. Minerva Harman, who has been visiting in Carlisle, Pa., expects to return home the week of April 8.

Mrs. Joseph Elliot was taken to St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore, on Sunday to be operated on for gall stones.

C. O. Fuss & Son, undertakers, served six funerals this week, an unusual number, two of which were on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Brown, of near town, were entertained at dinner on Sunday, at Mr. and Mrs. J. Samuel Stover.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Shirk, Mrs. John Shirk and Mrs. Louisa Hammond, spent Tuesday afternoon in Westminster.

Frank T. LeFevre and son, Franklin, of Sebring, Ohio, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Laura Reindollar and family.

Misses Vallie and Carrie Myers, entertained at dinner on Sunday, Miss Grace Spangler, of Tyrone, and Miss Anna Mae Fair, of town.

Mrs. Preston Smith received an attack of vertigo while assisting at Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hawk moving, last Thursday. She is improving.

Rev. Martin Schweitzer, of Ephrata, Pa., was a visitor in town, on Wednesday. He still likes to come back to the neighborhood that he served as pastor, where he made many friends.

Evidently, locust grape arbor posts are in demand. The six advertised in our "Special" column last week were sold within an hour after the paper came out, and there were numerous customers since.

Mr. Theodore R. Long, of Rocky Ridge, and Miss Lydia Mae Krom, of Detour, were united in marriage on Wednesday afternoon, April 4, by Rev. Guy P. Bready, at the parsonage of the Reformed Church.

Guy W. Haines, of Crisfield, paid his friends here a visit, this week. The store in which he was employed was destroyed in the recent big fire, when about 125 dwellings and business places were destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Arda Thomas, Mrs. Kathryn Thomas and R. B. Everhart, of Baltimore, spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Mary Stover and family. Mr. Everhart remained in town for a few days, at Hotel Carroll.

A trouble finder went over the town, on Thursday, to try to find the cause of interference with radio reception. We have not learned the details of his work, but understand that he has found several noise factories.

The Brotherhood of Piney Creek Presbyterian Church will hold a public meeting April 9th., at the Church, at 7:30 P. M., at which time Dr. Meade of Md. Agricultural College, and Mr. Burns, the Co. Agent, will be present to address the audience on topics interesting to the farmers of the neighborhood. All are invited.

We like to accommodate patrons who telephone "Special Notices" to our office, to be paid when "I come to town." But, so many forget, and a lot of these little charges are never paid, or at least require the cost of postage and bill sending, in order to collect. Please be as accommodating as we are, and don't "forget" to pay.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary H. Hare, widow of the late Lewis Hare, was held from the home of her brother, S. Swope Taylor, at Catonsville, on Monday morning with Mass at St. John's Catholic Church, Westminster, at 10:00 A. M. The Rev. Martin Egan officiating. Interment in the adjoining cemetery. Mrs. Hare will be remembered in Taneytown, as Miss Mamie Taylor, before marriage a frequent visitor at the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Reindollar.

Grateful to Friend for Deserved Rebuke

James Stillman, who for several years was one of the Titans of Wall street, sat in his office one day talking with a business man who had called, when it developed that some error had been made in Stillman's bank. An official was summoned and Stillman, without moving or raising his quiet voice, berated the offender in terms so harsh, with an irony so coldly insulting, and concluded in such a savage intensity of speech, that the unfortunate man trembled and beads of perspiration stood out upon his forehead. When the culprit had been dismissed, the horrified visitor spoke: "Stillman, I never in all my life heard anything so outrageous! That man holds an important position in the bank and you have insulted him before a stranger. Why—I shouldn't be surprised if he put a knife into you! A man has no right to treat another so, nor to let himself go like that. The most charitable thing I can think is that you are on the verge of a nervous breakdown and that you have no business to be in your office!" Stillman heard this outburst in a white silence, his powerful face a very mask of rage. The visitor waited a few moments, then picked up his hat and went out.

Sometime later the visitor received a card inviting him to a function at the Stillman home. He and his wife attended and received a gracious welcome. To the wife Stillman said: "Tell your husband from me—wouldn't you?—that owing to something he said to me, I am just back from the best holiday I ever had."—Anna Robeson Burr, in World's Work.

The Spring Clean-up.

The Record has frequently carried its own "spiel" along the line of Spring "cleaning up"—perhaps without much effect—so now we will use one from the Frederick News, that may be better because it comes "away from home."

There is no "sure sign" of Spring, but Spring should be a "sure sign" of the arrival of that time for the community to clean up. There is no superstition or prophesying about this clean-up sign.

When warm weather has come to stay (until cold weather returns in the Autumn) every owner of property and tenant should instinctively feel it his duty to remove the evidence of Winter's ravages and to aid and augment nature in her work of rebeautification.

Every Spring clean-up program should include disposal of Winter's accumulation of litter and decayed vegetation, repairing and repainting of buildings, and landscape gardening. Landscape gardening is no longer associated with large estates alone.

Cleanliness about the person or the home costs nothing. A community clean-up need involve no expense, except of a moderate amount of labor on the part of the householders. If there were excuses for uncleanness they were removed long ago.

What is the compensation of a community-wide clean-up campaign? It improves the general health of the community by removing deposits that are breeding places of disease germs and disease carrying insects. A clean town is a better place in which to live than one that is unsanitary and unsightly. And the best community advertising is the appearance of being "cleaned-up, painted-up and planted-up."

Child Health Day.

Maryland will unite with the rest of the country on the first day of May in the nation-wide celebration of Child Health Day. Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health is chairman of the Maryland committee which is composed of representatives of all organizations interested in the health or welfare of the children of the State—including the City and State Departments of Health and of Education; the Parent-Teacher Associations; State and local medical societies; public health nursing organizations; home demonstration groups; women's clubs; the playground Athletic League; the Federation of Labor; the State Dairy Council; the Scout organizations; the Crippled Children's League, and other child caring agencies.

"Children and May Day are naturally associated together," Dr. Knox said in announcing the appointment of the Maryland committee, "because both symbolize happiness and growth. For the children themselves, the day will be marked by special exercises in the schools and out of doors, but the principal reason for celebrating Child Health Day is to focus the attention of the grown-ups on the younger citizens of the State and on certain rights they have to health and to good care, not only for one day, but for every day in the year. And in Maryland that means good health and good care for what amounts to a great army, for the very young children and those still in school constitute about one-third of the total population of the State. Roughly speaking, that means over 550,000 out of the total estimated population of 1,660,000. A great army upon which the health and prosperity of the State will depend.

The Builders.

A builder builded a temple,
He wrought it with grace and skill;
Pillars and groins and arches
All fashioned to work his will.
And men said as they saw its beauty;
"It never shall know decay,
Great is thy skill, O Builder!
Thy fame shall endure for aye."

A teacher builded a temple,
With loving and infinite care;
Planning each arch with patience,
Laying each stone with prayer.
None praised the unceasing efforts,
None knew of the wondrous plan.
For the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eye of man.

Gone is the builder's temple,
Crumpled into the dust;
Low lies each stately pillar,
Food for consuming rust;
But the temple the teacher builded
Will last while the ages roll;
For that beautiful unseen temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

In the western part of the country, jack rabbits are rapidly increasing in numbers because wolves, coyotes, and their other natural enemies are decreasing. They are so destructive to the fields that a wholesale slaughter becomes necessary.

Must we give up the old saying that the ostrich hides its head in the sand and thinks itself safe? According to those who know, it simply crouches down as low as possible so as to hide its outline as best it can, but does not hide its head in the sand.
