WOULD RE-EXAMINE ALL AUTO DRIVERS

Aimed to Prevent Physically Unfit from Driving.

Senator John L. Myers, of Calvert County, has introduced a bill in the Senate calling for the re-examination of all holders of motor vehicle drivers' cards for the purpose of eliminating unsafe drivers after December 1, 1929. The measure provides for a fee of $1.00, and is not at all intended for a revenue measure, but simply to pay the costs of the re-examination.

The bill seems to us to be a good one, and one very natural to expect as the only means of making the highways safe from persons physically or otherwise unfit to drive. He has the following to say, in part, concerning the bill.

"I regard the bill solely as a safety measure, as a sound step toward preventing accidents. I feel certain that if it becomes a law it will fulfill this purpose and will indirectly be the means of preventing many accidents, some injuries and even some deaths.

"The real purpose of the law which requires applicants for operators' licenses to submit to a physical examination and to a test of their driving ability is to keep away from the wheels of automobiles persons who would become a menace to all who have occasion to use our streets and

"This purpose is being defeated. Hundreds of persons who were examined as long as twenty or twenty five years ago for licenses have developed disabilities which should preclude them from driving automo-biles. But there is no way that the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles can find these drivers until they figure in an accident, except by re-examination and re-registration of all motor vehicle operators.

"I personally know of three persons who after receiving operators' cards lost the use of one of their arms. However, they still drive their automobiles. Such cases are comparatively rare, but there are hundreds of drivers with impaired eyesight.

"When these persons were examined some years ago their eyesight was all right or they were examined before the law required an eye test. But since then their sight has become so impaired that they make a death machine out of every automobile they drive. That should be stopped, and that is exactly what my bill provides

SHRINER DAMAGE SUIT

Jury Found a Verdict for the Transportation Company.

The case of Chas. E. H. Shriner, George W. Shriner, Marlin L. Shriner and Alma E. Shriner for $25,000 damages vs the Western Maryland Transportation Company, in the matter of an automobile accident on May 15, at the Mrs. Sarah Leister place near Reese, on the Westminster-Baltimore road, as a result of which Mrs. Shriner died at the Maryland General Hospital, May 22, was heard before a jury in the Circuit Court for this county, Monday and Tuesday and re-sulted in a verdict for the Transpor-

Mr. and Mrs. Shriner and Mrs. George W. Shriner were on their way to Annapolis when the accident occurred. Mrs. Shriner was the only one of the three seriously hurt, and was taken into the home of Leister, after the accident, and Dr. Baer, of Westminster summoned, who after giving first aid recommended that she be taken to the Md. General Hospital.

The physician in charge at the hospital testified that for a few days she seemed to be in fair condition, but later developed acute diabetes which was the immediate cause of death. Dr. C. M. Benner and others testified to her general good health.

Mr. Shriner testified to the details of the trip, and that at the Leister farm saw his way clear for about a third of a mile, blew his horn, and endeavored to pass the truck, which he claimed was hogging the road; and when he was nearly abreast, the truck driver put out his arm as a signal and turned to the left into the private entrance to the Leister farm, the fenders and running boards of the two vehicles hooking together and over turning his car, leaving his wife jammed on the floor and his daughter-in-law on top of her. Details following the accident were given that did not materially affect the case. Mrs. George W. Shriner was talking to Mrs. Shriner at the time, and did not notice the truck until they were nearly on it. truck until they were nearly on it.

Mr. Mumford, legal examiner of the Motor Vehicle Company, gave an ac-count of the hearing before him of Mr. Shriner, following the accident, and after hearing his testimony suspended his license for 60 days. Numerous other witnesses testified for the Company, and several eye witnesses, the evidence of the most of whom appeared to demonstrate that the truck was within its right of way, and not responsible.

Guy W. Steele represented the plaintiff, and Brown and Shipley the defendant. The jury, after deliberating for about an hour, brought in a verdict for the Transportation Co.

The following communication reached our desk early in this week. As will be seen, it is a result of having turned the editorship of The Record over to "L. B. without referendum, have been passed or are in process of passing by the Legislature at the present session for Anne Arundel, Montgomery, Balti-more, Prince George and Wicomico counties.

Enough retrenchment can be effected by enlargement and consolidation of schools to make it possible to borrow the $600,000 so badly needed by our schools, and pay it off in thirty equal annual installments without materially increasing the present taxrate.

A marvelous change of sentiment is going on in Carroll County with regard to a Bond Issue for the use of our schools. It is apparent to everybody interested in the schools and our children that something must be done, and done without delay, to remedy a most deplorable situation; a situation which reflects no credit upon the citizens of Carroll County, and which the citizens of the County now seek to bring to an end. These conditions need hardly be mentioned, they are so evident. But here are some items that make up a serious indictment against present conditions; Lack of class and hall-room and play space; inadequate toilet facilities, in cases exceedingly insanitary, and lockers for the pupils' coats and- wraps; lack of equipment, especially in New Windsor, Union Bridge and Westminster schools; insufficient in-door space for play, for children cannot play out of doors when the weather is bad; classes held in basements and on concrete floors, with insufficient light and inadequate heating facilichildren housed under most deplorable conditions, unhealthy and insanitary, at the Charles Carroll in some cases the buildings are really unfit for use, and are a menace in case of fire, if a fire should occur in some of these crowded buildings, who would be to blame? And so on might run the indictment. Nineteen rooms in portable buildings, uncomfortable, temporary and unsafe costing on an average $2,000 per room or $38,000 in all, with a lasting capacity of five years, $7,600 a year for replacement. And so the indictment might continue. But Carroll County citizens now understand these conditions and intend to remedy them. The most important enterprise of institution in America. It is the op- Plaintiff. Sixty-five poultrymen of Carroll County enjoy meeting. Mr. Roy Waite of the Extension Service gives interesting talk on incubating, brooding and feeding young chicks. After his talk questions were asked which proved very helpful to all poultrymen present. For many years Carroll County has been the leading county in the State in the production of poultry. It can no longer hold this place unless the poultry producers realize the importance of the industry and begin now to standardize their begin now to standardize their poultry products and advertise them as such. The dairymen of the state have made enormous strides in the production and consumption of milk and this has only been done unified effort on the part of the dairymen who produce dairy products.

Professor Waite stressed particularly sanitary conditions for young chicks. This is the season when we are interested in starting off our chicks and our chicks and our success will depend first on the type and condition of the young bird to start with and second on the sanitary methods we employ in giving them a start.

BOARD OF EDUCATION HOLDS MEETING

Reaffirms its Action Concerning Charles Carroll School.

The Board took up a reconsideration of their former action with reference to the Charles Carroll School. After an extended discussion considering the matter from all angles, it adhered to its former opinion that it was not advisable to construct a part of the plan under consideration nor was it advisable to construct a smaller building, similar to the one that was burned away, because of the fact that it would fail to accommodate the community and would not provide for the necessary extension and consolidations.

The Superintendent reported that he had received from the Department he had received from the Department of Education a notification to the ef-fect that as the tax basis in Carroll County had increased from $35,635,-667 as of 1927 to $39,875,065 as of 1928, the State Superintendent was compelled to advise us that the equalization Fund which amounts to $19,000 to be received from the State by this County would be reduced by probably $14,000 or more, depending upon whether there is a further increase in the basis at the time when the Equalization is paid over. In view of the above, the funds of the Board of Education for the operation of the schools for the present year, 1928-1929, is depleted by the above mentioned differ-

The Superintendent also reported that the amount allowed in the budget for contributions to match the amounts raised by the various schools for educational purposes in the schools is exhausted and that it will not be possible for the Board to grant any further contributions.

The Board adjourned about noon.

The U.S. Senator, on Tuesday, passed the Jones bill by a vote of 65 to 18 increasing the maximum penal-ties for first offenders as well as hardened violators under the Volstead law to five years imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both.

The bill now goes to the House, where it will be substituted for a similar bill introduced by Representative Stalker, Republican, New York, and now on the calendar. Senator Jones said he was confident it would be enacted, and the opponents of the legislation were willing to concede that it would be, if it comes to a vote.

Taxes and Expense.

Somehow, times have so changed that we are letting the craze for luxuries and improvements have the upper-hand-and-run our business, public we do not want to deny ourselves; the gage in a general revision of the tarold ways of living are not to be iff, and he is supposed to represent knowing or caring much how we can

But, we must pay, or be dishonest. The things we want can't be had for the asking, or the picking free of charge. Paying, is about as inevit- will have considerably more to do with able as taxes, but we may not always pay in money—it may be in character, reputation, good name, loss of friends. Somehow, we pay for everything-either here, or hereafter, even though we detest paying.

Really, we make our burdens to a large extent—our financial ones whether they be public taxes, or personal debts. The automobile is likely responsible for more burdens in the way of taxes than any other one thing in the past fifty years; and the modern system of enlarged education(?) at public expense is neck and neck in the race for first place.

But with these two "new things' have come many others. We can't count them-don't want to count them -and very largely don't want to pay for many of them. We want, and about as strongly, don't want. And, the growth of the spending fever is contagious, infectious, epidemic, and progressively and habitually a sort of perpetual motion. The cry is "keep up, and go on!"

Of course, the race is likely to stop some day in a big upset—a regular wreck-and some of the victims will go to the hospitals and others to the cemeteries. This event is being staved off by "passing the buck" to others, as much as possible, borrowing from the banks, "standing off" the storekeepers, defaulting entirely in the payment of bills, and sometimes in actual chicken stealing, or something

But, until the end comes we are going on merrily with lavish public be paid some day, squeezing taxes that the prices of his products are on from new sources because "we need a lower basis than the prices of what the money," and all the time a few he must buy; therefore a tariff that folks are becoming more prosperous because they can compel payment of "their price," while the most of us are either hanging on with a good toehold, or slipping back.

The Danger of General Tariff Revision.

Senator Smoot, tariff expert, says it and private. We despise economy; is not the purpose of Congress to enthought of; we want to go, without Mr. Hoover. This may be true of the special session—likely will be true; but neither Senator Smoot nor Mr. Hoover can answer for what Congress may do at the next regular sessionconceding of course that Mr. Hoover such matters after he is President than now.

It is reasonably sure that a pretty general demand, all along the line of industries for "protection," will come which may amount to higher prices; and if this happens, and is successful, it is pretty difficult for the average observer to see how the farmer is going to be benefitted, in the end, even if he gets his protection, and better prices, if in turn he is compelled to pay out his benefits in higher costs to those who manufacture what he has to buy. The Philadelphia Ledger which may be expected to fairly know sentiment in manufacturing Pennsylvania, says;

"Changes will not be confined to farm and textile schedules. Not all rates will be lifted, but most of them will be raised. Where an industry is suffering from the pressure of foreign competition, it will get further pro-

It is probable that a few articles will vanish from the free list. When revisions are made, they will be upward. Practically every schedule will be opened for the changes that the last six years have shown as neces-

The revisions proposed are described as "conservative," except in the farm schedules. They may be too "conservative" for the Senate, which is more likely to raise than it is to

It would be interesting to know how much time is wasted in the aggregate by the people of this country. Translated into terms of dollars, it would

Noted throughout the world for their energy and capacity for hard work, Americans are nevertheless prone often to be guilty of the small vice of tardiness.

In all large business organizations tardiness among employees is one of the constant problems confronting many employers tried to enforce punctuality among employees by a system of fines and penalties. These out successfully from every standpoint. They aroused resentment among carelessness, indifference to their work and in some cases to absolute

The Old Farm Days.

A Michigan newspaperman, moved to the depths by a spell of cold weather, writes feelingly of winter life on the farm in the old days.

He pictures the farmer's son, roused in the forbidden gray of early dawn, wrenching himself from his warm bed to dress in the unspeakable chillness of an icy bedroom, stumbling downstairs, half asleep, to begin the prebreakfast chores—splitting wood, milking cows, and so on. Then he mentions the old-fashioned farm breakfast-griddlecakes, home-made sausage, fried eggs, many cups of coffee; solid appetizing food for one who has toiled in zero cold.

From that, he continues to a general discussion of winter recreations in the rural districts years ago; hunting, coasting, and the like, with healthy youngsters enjoying their isolation and spending weeks at a time without ever getting more than three of four miles away from home.

And he adds: "There aren't any farmer's boys anymore. They're all city chaps. Winter or summer, good roads and automobiles enable them to go to town easily and quickly. And when they stay at home, the radio brings them the latest jazz from the city."

The old days, remembered by some of us and made familiar to the rest of us by books, are gone. The social and economic conditions that prevailed in them are rapidly changing. We still have farms, we still have cold weather and farmer's boys still have to get up before daybreak to do the chores; but there is a different atmosphere to it all. The old isolation, with its self-sufficiency and its occasional heart-crushing loneliness, is ended.

During the last few years a good many books have been written about this. Half of them hail the changes as a great blessing; the other half bewail it as a loss of something precious and fine.

But the important thing, right now, is not analysis so much as simple recognition. The change that has come upon American farm life is only a single aspect of the vaster change that has come upon all American life, rural and urban alike. We need more than anything else to recognize this change and accept it. It may be that the old days were better than the new ones and it may not be; the big thing—the thing that we must all accustom ourselves to-is that they are gone.

No one is so lost as the man who is unable, or unwilling, to see that a time has come for readjustment to new conditions. No task that the nation faces is more pressing than the ask of recognizing its changed circumstances and devising a way of living and thinking that will enable it to make the change as beneficial as possible.—Exchange.

Good of Plants in House

The presence of plants in the house often proves a guide to the sanitary conditions existing within the domicile. If a room is so badly ventilated or dark that plants will not thrive in it, it is certainly not a healthy room for human beings. Plants are very sensitive and react quickly to any poisonous gases that might be in the The begonia is regarded as a guide to health. It was recently demonstrated when a begonia doing decorative service in a dining room was found to wilt in a few days. Being replaced by a second one, the same thing resulted, and it was suggested that there must be something wrong. a leakage of gas perhaps. An investigation being made, a tiny gas leak was discovered under the floor. The volume of gas was not sufficient to be detected by smell, and yet it was great enough to have an immediate action upon the plants.

Shoppers' Faces Snapped

To obtain natural expressions of shoppers a Berlin merchant has in his store window a camera which, with its operator, is invisible to the gazers. One picture of a girl looking longingly at a string of pearls bore the title "Covetous." Another showing a young man surreptitionsly looking at a pair of silk stockings, and evidently mak ing up his mind to go in and buy, was unlabeled Two small boys gazing at a mechanical train was charming, and equally so was that of a group of children watching a butterfly crawl up the window pane

Man Far Outnumbered

by Lesser Creatures

It is probable that few persons save naturalists ever consider the enormous amount of life other than human which exists in any locality, civilized or not, densely peopled or thinly settled. A plague of rats in London within recent years prompted an interview with a distinguished scientist, who estimated that within the area of Greater London there were 20,-000,000 rats, more than three times as many rats as people.

Sparrows undoubtedly come next in point of numbers among London's warm-blooded population, but the scientist preferred to make his estimate cover all the birds in the United Kingdom. He believed that the bird population would average 800 to the square mile. That would give a total of nearly 97,000,000. Thus the bird population outnumbers the human by something like two to one.

As for the insect population, that is quite beyond any statistician. But, allowing that each bird eats only 50 insects a day, British birds would consume more than a billion insects in a year. Yet such an estimate seems quite futile when we consider that the insect population of a single cherry tree infested with aphides was estimated by a competent authority to be 12,000,000.

Law of Gravity Not

an Obstacle to Incas

The ancient Inca fortress of Sacsahuaman is located on a mountain summit 704 feet above the city of Cuzco. Peru. which is itself 10,500 feet above sea level. It is made of huge massive stones, some of which measure 30 by 12 feet and are very thick. Though irregular in outline, they are fitted together so perfectly that a knife blade cannot be inserted between them.

How the seemingly impossible feat of getting these stones to the summit was achieved is explained by the mystics of India. The Egyptians who built the Pyramids, so the legend goes, and the ancient Incas, both knew how to suspend the law of gravity, having learned it from the mystics of the lost Atlantis.

Taken Down

The late Loie Fuller on her last American visit complained to a reporter about the conceit of movie

"The males are the worst," she said. "A young male star in a sealskin-lined overcoat, smoking a dollar and a half cigar, swaggered into his boss' office one day and said:

"'I'll tell you, boss, how I want you to feature me on the bills. I want the names of the cast printed in the usual way in rather small type, and then in giant type'-he raised his voice to a shout-'MY NAME under the word AND.'

"'Why not BUT?' said the boss."

Strange Indian Tribe

The Peel River Indians, a tribe living in the Upper Yukon country are a puzzle to ethnologists. These Indians are as black as negroes, but have long, straight hair and aquiline features. They are proud of their blood and permit no mixed marriage

Whether they are an offshoot of the Hindu race or descendants of a peo ple who came up the Mackenzie from the Arctic has never yet been established. Today the tribe numbers several hundred and is in prosperous circumstances. Like the Seminoles of Florida, however, they are vanishing because of their antipathy toward intermarrying with other Indians.

Good Reason

Although as big and as strong as the policeman who had arrested him, the man with the close-cropped hair and brutal face allowed himself to be marched toward the police station.

There had been the usual crowd in anticipation of a scrap, but it had drifted away when they saw there was nothing doing. Even the policeman admitted it was the tamest arrest he had made for many a day.

"It isn't like you to go so quietly," he remarked. "What's taken all the ginger out of you?"

The prisoner sighed. "I've got my best clothes on."

Explains Fire-Walking

The late S. P. Langley of the Smithsonian institution witnessed the firewalking ceremony in Tahiti and described it in Nature for August 22, 1921. He says that the stones used in the ceremony were tested and found to be of vesicular basalt, whose most distinctive features are its porosity and nonconductibility. He found that these stones could be heated red-hot at one end while the remaining part was comparatively cool. He was of the opinion that while the lower stones of the pit were glowing, the upper layer was fairly cool.

Dutch Mania for Work

You know the Dutch. They have a mania for work. Theirs is a land which had to be manufactured out of inclosed bits of sea and remanufactured now and then by being pumped dry. They scrub the streets as if they were plates off which to eat. And as if all this toll were but a mere trifle, they have invented a language the pronunciation of which requires more labor to the syllable than any other language to the page! -Salvador de Madarlaga in the

COW NEEDS CARE IN WINTER TIME

Much of Feed Given Animal Goes for Warmth.

Extra feed cannot be substituted for shelter for the comfortable cow is the profitable cow. When the animals are exposed to wintry winds and rains, much of the feed goes to keep the bodies warm instead of to produce

"Therefore, some effort should be made to keep the dairy cows comfortable during periods of disagreeable weather," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Car-olina State college. "Their stalls should be well lighted and properly ventilated but free from air currents. Ventilation is important but should be so arranged as to prevent the air currents from striking the cow's body This is accomplished by making the sides of the barn or cow shed tight and admitting fresh air through properly arranged windows."

Mr. Arey states that the practice of requiring the cow to wade through mud and ice some distance to get drinking water is too common and too expensive in the dairy industry. Such needless exposure chills the animal and prevents her from drinking the amount of water that she normally would consume.

Normal milk, says Mr. Arey, contains 87 per cent water and a cow producing around 30 pounds of milk daily will need from 85 to 90 pounds of water each day. She will not drink this much on a cold day unless the supply is convenient and not too cold.

The dairy cow of high producing breeds is a creature of habit. Unusual treatment makes her nervous. If she is accustomed to a regular routine of feeding and care, a change from this system will make her nervous and distrustful. She should never be run with horses or dogs nor treated roughly while being put in a barn. No other farm animal, says Mr. Arey, will give greater returns for good care than the cow and the herdsman who keeps his animals comfortable in winter will be amply repaid.

Calf Scours Prevented

by Giving Proper Feed Ordinary scours in young calves are caused by indigestion resulting from overfeeding, or feeding milk that is too cold, or feeding it in dirty pails.

When scours come on while the calf is nursing the cow it gets too much milk, or the milk of the dam is too rich, which may be the case with Jerseys. When scours occur while the calf is fed milk it is usually due to feeding too much milk or feeding it in dirty pails.

The best way to handle a case of ordinary scours is to reduce the amount of milk to about one-half the amount the calf should have, until the bowels become normal. An ounce or two of castor oil will help to clear the bowels.

If the calf is hand-fed it should have six to eight pounds of milk at a feeding, which must always be fed in clean pails. It is very essential in feeding young calves to weigh the milk at each feeding to avoid overfeeding.

When a calf gets clean, wholesome milk and is not overfed you will have very little trouble with ordinary

Dairy Hints

Oats straw is a very poor feed for dairy cows. If you can cut the corn fodder it will be eaten better by the cows than oats straw.

It is just as possible to overfeed a cow as it is to underfeed, although !! is more uncommon. One extreme is just as unprofitable as the other.

People who have been underfeeding their cows generally go to the other extreme whenever they are convince that thir present method of feeding is not correct.

The calf should receive the first milk or colostrum from its mother. Colostrum is thick, very yellow in color, and contains nearly six times the amount of protein contained in ordinary milk.

Dishcloths fail to reach the cracks and crevices where dirt and bacteria are prone to lodge; they fail to cut grease and dirt, and it is almost impossible to keep them in a sweet, sanitary condition.

Underfeeding of dairy cows, occuring especially during the winter months, is one of the most common reducers of profits for the dairy farmer. Overfeeding, however, may be just as unprofitable.

Every dairy farmer should provide himself with a milk house to be used exclusively for the handling of milk and milk products. In building a milk house, do not place it too near the stable. Make it an entirely separate building with sufficient window space. Sunlight is a good disinfectant.

The extremely cold weather covering the most of Europe, while somewhat abated, has been remarkably severe, dating farther back than temperature records have been kept. Deaths from freezing have been extremely high in number, even including many who were comfortably housed and clothed.

Temperatures have been so low as not to be registered—20° below zero being quite common—while the heaviness of snow fall and the thickness of ice represent stories almost unbe-lievable. And now, famine has fol-lowed the cold, and the scarcity of fuel is alarming. The cold has not been confined to the far north, but was almost equally severe in England, Germany, France, Austria and Hungary, and even far south- eastern Europe has been in the grip of unheard of freezing.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

For February 24th.

The Christian Endeavor Topic for Feb. 24, by Rev. Geo. W. Ports, President of the Carroll County Christian Endeavor Union.

Topic: Why is Christianity the only adequate Religion? Acts 4:8-12; John | property, to-wit:

In the Scripture lesson of Acts, it is stated, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name given under heaven among men, whereby we must be saved." ianity is the only religion which brings to the world free and complete salvation. This salvation is to be found in Christ alone. A few reasons why Christianity is the only adequate

It is the only religion which represents to its followers a present living Savior. There is no religion in all the world, except the Christian ligion, which has for its basis the death and the resurrection of its founder. There have been many martyrs who have given their lives for a cause in which they believed, but there was only one whose power enabled Him to break the bands of death, and walk about the community in which He was crucified, truly alive. This is a historical fact concerning Christ which is beyond the point of dispute.

It is the only religion which offers a solution for man's past record of sin. One may begin today to live ever so pure, but what about his past sins? Though you take much soap and wash thee with niter, yet thine inquity is marked before Me." It is only through Christ that our past sins are plotted out and the records destroyed. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as sonw." How God can take one stained by the years Kalamazoo; double shovel plow, 3-section harrow, 25-tooth; 60-tooth smoothing harrow, 3-block land roller,

The Christian religion presents the highest moral standards and furnishes the dynamic with which to reach them. the dynamic with which to reach them. Some other religions set forth splendid standards, as in the case of Mo-hammedanism, but with these come only the human influence of a human founder. With the Christian religion comes the influence of its Divine founder, and in addition this, His living power through the personnel of the Holy Spirit who lives within the heart and life of the believer. This power saves and keeps in all walks of life.

Love, is the outstanding principle of the Christianity of the Christ,not fear. Men are induced to live right-eously through the knowledge of the love of Christ. "For God so loved the world, that he gave His only begotten Son, that whosover believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life." "We love Him be-

VERYTHING ready?" called Esther as she saw her sister Minnie running swiftly along the garden path. "Ready!" repeated Minnie with a frown. "Everything's ready except for one thing-the gypsy hasn't come,"

"Oh, well," said Esther, "that doesn't make any difference. one of the girls can dress up and play gypsy for the evening. Of course, a spook party wouldn't be complete without the gypsy to provide the fun. Clara would dress up for us I know she would."

"Clara-with her big blue eyes!" scoffed Minnie. "Who ever heard of a blue-eyed gypsy? No, Clara's no good—for a gypsy. We just can't have the gypsy, I guess—and I'd counted on her providing most of the fun for the party, too.'

"What happened to the gypsy you'd hired downtown?" asked Esther.

"Ch," said Minnie with a shrug. "they told me when I talked to them at the bureau that they'd send one." "Did you see her?" demanded Esther.

Minnie shook her head. "No, they telephoned to her while I was there and told her what we'd pay and she said she absolutely would not fail us. She agreed to be here an hour agoand she hasn't come yet-say, there she is now-'

Esther looked after her sister thoughtfully. The idea of a gypsy to tell fortunes at the party had been Minnie's idea from the start. Esther had argued against the idea.

'Why, Esther, they always have witches and black cats and the telling of fortunes at spook parties-always. That's what a spook party is -spooks and lots of fun."

And now Esther, starting after her sister, Minnie, saw a slender gypsy girl dressed in the traditional red and yellow gypsy costume.

"If her skin were creamy instead of brown and if her dress were conventional she would look much like Sally," Esther remarked.

Minnie and the gypsy girl were now coming up the path. Esther gazed at them in surprise.

"But, no," Esther heard the gypsy girl say as they neared the house. "this is not the place-I-I am not the gypsy you are expecting. No,

"Now, don't talk about it," Minnie cut in hastily, "if you don't care about the money-do it, one girl for another. You see, I set my heart on having a gypsy to tell fortunes at the party and now the gypsy hasn't come.

The gypsy girl hesitated an instant and then put her hand impulsively on Minnie's arm: "I'll do it," she promised, "but I absolutely must not stav more than one hour.

Minnie thought for an instant Then she nodded. "Yes, and-thanks My party would have been spoiled for me if—why what a wonderful chain you have!"

Esther's eyes traveled down the chain about the gypsy's neck. Where had she seen that chain-or one like it before? Trying to think, she heard the girls talking on.

"What is your name?" Minnie was "Call me-Roxana," answered the gypsy girl, with a little hesitation. 'Roxana," repeated Minnie, "Roxana, it's a lively name, isn't it? Well, come and see the tent. Have you told fortunes at a party?"

Roxana stared at her a long while before replying. "I've-never-told a fortune-in-my-life!"

Then Esther watched them go down the garden path slowly and over and over in her mind she turned this queer little gypsy girl who wore the beautiful amethyst and golden chain, the gypsy girl who, contrary to gypsy tradition, had never told a

The ringing of the telephone aroused her and at the other end of the wire she was startled to hear the voice of the agency woman. "Did that gypsy girl come," asked the voice in low tones. "Why-" replied Esther, "why--no -and yes! That is, there is a gypsy girl here but she says that she was not coming here at all. That is, we waited and waited until past the time for her to be here. Then a gypsy girl walked past our place and Minnie, thinking it was the gypsy we had had coming, rushed out and stopped her."

"Did this girl give her name?" interrupted the agency woman. "Why, yes, her name is Roxana."

answered Esther. "Roxana! Well, I declare to goodness! It is the girl-the very same girl-has she-has she a-necklace on -gold set with amethysts?" The voice now had dropped to a whisper "Yes," replied Esther. "Yes, she has." "Well," said the other voice, now hard. "Don't let her get away-she stole that necklace from Sallie Marchand's grandmother-she was at the Marchand house this afternoon and later the necklace was gone."

The telephone at the other end was hung up before Esther could say another word. Now that it had been mentioned she could recall very dis tinctly having seen the elder Mrs. Marchand with her beautiful white hair piled high on her head, the golden chain with its amethysts around her neck, falling low on the laces of her gown. This pretty gypsy girl, a success.

Roxana, a thief! It seemed incredible! So erectly had she stood, so proudly had she held her dark head! So directly had her eyes looked into Esther's own eyes!

Then Esther left the telephone desk and walked heavily into the yard. This lovely young gypsy girl -a thief. The night seemed suddenly chill to Esther. She could hardly believe it and yet she had herself seen the chain around the girl's neck and there surely could not be two golden chains set with amethysts in the town of Plainwell. Not two, anyhow, of such great value. "It's getting cold out here, Minnie, too cold. We-we-take Roxana into the house." Under the clear, dark eyes of Roxana Esther felt mean. It seemed as if it was trapping her like an animal, to be ready for the officers. Yet, if the girl had stolen once might she not steal again? Who was she, Esther, to judge? Had the courts decided that people who stole must be prevented from stealing another time? In the house she put Roxana and Minnie into the study and as soon as the first guest arrived she, too, was sent there. At last all the guests had come except Sallie. Esther had been watching for her nervously. Suppose she should notice her grandmother's chain! Would she speak up, accuse this gypsy girl? Sallie was impulsive and should she do this the girl might try to jump out of the window to get away. She could not get out of any door save the one leading into the hallway for Esther had taken the precaution of locking the other three that led into the dining room, the music room and the one that led through a clothes closet into a storeroom. Esther had made up her mind to speak to Sallie but-no Sallie came! Then the doorbell rang again and Esther hurried out. There before her amazed eyes stood a gypsy girl. The low contralto voice spoke quickly: "I am late; I am sorry. My aunt-she was ill-I could not get here before. I-" she had stepped now into the open doorway. "I-you were-expecting me?" she said as she scanned Esther's face.

stammered Esther, "Why-I-" "what is your name?" "My name," said the gypsy girl proudly, "is Roxana." "Won't you go into the study? Itthe guests are in there-you can tell fortunes? The dark eyes laughed into her own: "Ah, you ask if Roxana tells fortunes? The gypsies all tell fortunes. I always make pretty fortunes for them-I tell of a diamond ring and a golden chain for the neck

-ah, then how their eyes shine!" Esther started. A golden chain for the neck! A quick look at the girl's neck showed nothing more than a string of cheap red beads. Esther did not know which gypsy girl was the one to hold. Roxana-they both seemed to be called Roxana, yet it was the other one who wore the missing chain. The gypsy was moving toward the door.

"Wait-come into the music room, if you please," Esther said hastily.

One gypsy called Roxana; another one of the same name! A curious thing that. While this idea was turning itself over and over in her mind the doorbell again rang. There stood an officer and beside him, in her furs, was Sally's grandmother, Mrs. Marchand. "I can't really believe," Mrs. Marchand said without any preliminary "that little Roxana stole that necklace.'

The officer entered the doorway with a shrug. "There can be no mistake, Mrs. Marchand. Miss Esther here has seen the necklace on her neck-on the gypsy's neck. The warrant was all that was necessary."

"But I must make sure before any arrest can be made," said Mrs. Mar chand firmly. "I-I can't believe"here she raised her voice a little-"Roxana! Roxana! Come here at once, if you please!"

And Esther, standing by heipless to explain that there were two gypsies in the house, suddenly was aware that two doors were open and in each doorway stood a pretty gypsy girl. "You called me, Mrs. Marchand."

she said in low tones. "Grandmother!" said the other one. sharply.

Mrs. Marchand stared at the latter. "Grandmother!" she repeated.

"Why-Sallie-it isn't Sallie!"

Then the girl with the golden neck lace laughed: "Oh, I gave it away, didn't I? Well, I might as well tell you all about it. You see, twelve of us started a sewing club and there being twelve months in the year we decided that as sort of initiation to the club we would each make a costume for our month. Well, my month was October and so I thought at once of a costume suitable for this occasion. That gave me a choice of gypsy or queer witch or black cat and of the three I chose gypsy as being the prettiest. I made up my mind to pretend I was a real gypsy and this afternoon I asked Roxana to come over to see if the costume was exactly right. She said it was-all except a necklace. And grandmother had let me borrow this one before and so I borrowed it again." The officer had stepped out of the front door unobserved by the girls. "It's quite all right," said the stately Mrs. Marchand. "Good night, Rox ana-both Roxanas!" And while she was bidding Esther good night they heard from the oth er room: "And three black cats with long, waving tails and long, wiry whiskers met three gypsy girls-al of the name of-Roxana-

TAVERN FAMOUS IN REVOLUTION TO GO

Diech Horse Inn Gives Way to Progress.

New York.—The relentless march of progress, until recently sparing of the older landmarks, which seemed secure in the remoter regions of Staten Island, shortly will wipe out one of the last remaining relics of Revolutionary days still standing within the limits of the city of New York.

The Black Horse tavern, at the intersection of Amboy and Richmond roads, New Dorp, Staten Island, shortly will be razed to make way for the widening of Richmond road. Condemnation proceedings will be started soon and the building will be razed when the maps are finished and the contracts awarded by the borough of Richmond.

The present owner of the faded and rambling frame structure which housed British officers during the Revolution is Mrs. Catherine C. Curry. It became her property after the death of her husband, Patrick Curry, who went to Staten Island more than forty years ago and opened a public house where more than one not too elderly resident can recall having stopped to partake of the cup that cheers. Since Volstead days the house has been maintained as a private dwelling.

Improvement Imperative.

Because the intersection at which the house stands has long been a blind corner and a peril to motorists the improvement contemplated by the city became imperative. A triangular slice of land, it will be cut into two pieces, one part being used to widen Richmond road and the other to form a small plaza.

The old tavern, portions of which have been incorporated into the present building, has been celebrated in many legendary stories of Staten Island history. So legendary are some of these stories that it has been impossible to verify them.

It was in the latter part of the Revolution that Gen. William Howe, commander of the British forces in the New York area, quartered some of his staff officers in the Black Horse. General Howe himself occupled a house across the road, known as the Rose and Crown, and it was here that on July 4, 1776, he read the Declaration of Independence.

At that time, history tells us, he remarked: "That document has been signed by very determined men."

The Rose and Crown long ago suffered the fate now destined for the Black Horse.

The appearance of the place has changed considerably since the days of '76. Still standing are three of the old rooms-the old tavern was a very small place—which now are utilized as living room, parlor and dining room. Additions have been built from time to time, among them a comparatively modern dance hall. The original wooden sign, which bore the figure of a black horse and which is now so weatherbeaten that only the faintest of markings can be discerned, is in the possession of Mrs. Curry, who has refused to part with it despite the pleas of a number of historical societies.

How It Got Its Name.

It is related that on the occasion of a review of troops by Lord Richard Howe, brother of General Howe. a staff officer mounted his handsome horse to escort his superior and that the horse took fright, dashing itself and its rider against a high rock and killing both. At that moment the house, hitherto unnamed, was christened the Black Horse by fellow officers who witnessed the tragedy.

William T. Davis, Staten Island historian, recalled that for a short period of years prior to the purchase of the building by Patrick Curry it was used as a post office, and residents of the rural districts came from near and far to receive their mail.

It is told, without verification, that Maj. John Andre, the officer delegated to assist in the treachery of Benedict Arnold, stopped at the Black Horse and executed his will there before starting out on his mission.

Custis Family Slave Will Lie in Arlington

Washington.-A place has been reserved for humble Jim Parks in the great Valhalla, where America's distinguished dead lie. Uncle Jim, an eighty-four-year-old negro, will be buried in Ailington National cemetery when he dies. There he was born.

No man, so the records show, outside of the army and navy, has been so honored in this day and generation. The War department has entered a formal order that Uncle Jim be buried in Arlington. His forebears lie there, too.

He was a slave here, the property of George Washington Parke Custis. grandson of Martha Washington and adopted son of George Washington. Then he served Col. Robert E. Lee.

Arrangement of Hair Marks Chinese Wife

It is customary in occidental lands for a married woman to wear a gold band on the third finger of her left hand. Not so in China. You know a married woman in China by the way her hair is trimmed above her brow.

Usually on the night before the wedding friends of the bride trim her hair. It is sometimes clipped and shaved, but in most cases the hair is removed with two twisted threads. These threads are rolled over the forehead with the fingers, the twist of the thread extracting the hair and giving the forehead a square appearance. If you can imagine what you would look like if your hair above the forehead were removed, leaving a clearing of, say, four inches long and one inch wide, you will have some idea of what the Chinese married woman's head is like.

After the marriage this must be done at intervals to keep the shape

Lesson for February 24 CHRISTIAN GROWTH

LESSON TEXT—John 1:40-42; Matt 16:15-18; John 21:15-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ
PRIMARY TOPIC—Growing Like Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC-Growing Like INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Growing Up—To What?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Conditions of Christian Growth.

1. Following Jesus (John 1:40).

As a result of the testimony of John the Baptist, that Jesus was the Lamo of God (v. 36), Andrew followed Jesus. The proof that he really believed is that he followed Christ. This is the first essential in the Christian life.

II. Leading Others to Christ (v. 41). As soon as Andrew had found and become acquainted with Christ, he brought his brother Peter to Christ Christian growth can only be truly realized in the giving of oneself to the winning of souls. The one who has received the gospel, the good news. cannot help but proclaim it.

III. Confessing Jesus as the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 16:15-18). The disciples had been with the Lord for several years. They had heard His wonderful words and seen His mighty works. Various opinions were extant about Him. It was now necessary for them to have a definite conception of Him. Examination came after the period of school life. As the Master Teacher, Jesus knew what it meant to the disciples to have a right conception of Himself. He knew the trying ordeal through which they would be called upon to pass as the time of his crucifixion drew near. Only as they perceived His deity would they be strong in the hour of trial. In answer to Jesus' pointed. personal question, Peter confessed to the absolute deity and Messiahship of Jesus. This conception of Christ is essential to salvation (John 20:31).

No one lacking it will ever be in terested in the winning of souls. Be sides, the denial of His deity is the supreme lie (1 John 2:22).

1. What Peter confessed (v. 16). "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." It therefore involved His Messianship and deity. This is the burning question of today. Those who have the right conception of Christ's person and mission have no trouble in the realm of science. phi losophy or ethics.

2. Christ's commendation (v. 17). He pronounced him blessed The evidence that Peter was blessed was that he was in spiritual touch with the heavenly Father. His conception of Christ was not revealed by flesh and blood.

3. Peter's blessing (v. 18). Christ declared that he should be come a foundation stone in His church. Christ Himself is the chief cornerstone on which the church is built. Christ's person and Messiah ship were confessed by Peter, and on this rock is laid the foundation of apostles and prophets (Eph 2:20) All believers are living stones of this house (I Peter 2:5).

IV. Peter's Restoration (John 21:15

Peter grievously sinned in denying the Lord, but he made confession, shedding bitter tears over his sin and folly. The Lord tenderly dealt with His erring disciple and restored him. In his restoration. Jesus brought to Peter's mind the essential qualification for his ministry. Love is the preeminent gift for Christian service. To impress upon his mind this fact He three times asked the question, "Lovest thou me?" He not only asked the question three times to show the supreme qualification for service to Him but to show that there are three classes of persons demanding His service, and that these classes need special care as well as food adapted to their state.

1. Those beginning the Christian life, babes in Christ, "Feed my lambs." The word "feed" means more than instruction. It applies to the surroundings, influences and examples.

2. The mature ones, "Feed my sheep."

This seems to mean "shepherd my sheep." The mature class of believers not only need food, but discipline. They need correction and guidance. 3. The aged Christians, "Feed My Sheep."

The word "feed" here is much the same as in the first case. This is a service greatly needed today. In many places the old people are greatly neglected. All provision is made for the young people. Love is the supreme need in service to the old folks.

The Humble Person

When men are cast down, then thou shalt say. There is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person He shall deliver the island of the innocent; and it is delivered by the pure ness of thine hands .- Joh 22:29, 30.

Living and Giving

Abundant tife atways means overflow The Christian life that is not overflowing is spiritually sick. It is dwarfed instead of being full grown. It is carnal not spiritual.

Fates Proved Unkind

to Spanish Explorer Capt. Pedro De Quiros long had been intrigued by tales of a vast continent in the southwest Pacific ocean and finally coaxed Phillip III, of Spain, to let him go in search of it. On July 27, 1605, at Callao, Peru, he drew a flourish under his signature, commissioning the captains of his two ships, and was ready to sail on "the discovery of the unknown austral regions of this South sea by the order of the king."

One of the captains presented himself, respectfully asking De Quiros to lay down a course for them to follow. "Let her go as she is," returned De Quiros grimly, "God will take us some-

In the following year they sighted one of the islands of the New Hebrides group and De Quiros, under the impression that it was his long sought land, named it La Australia de Espiritu Santo. Followed sickness and discontent, the crew mu tinied and forced a return to Mexico. But not before De Quiros had caught a glimpse of a long, mysterious coast line, that to this day some believe was the Australia of his dreams. Another expedition was organized by him in Spain but on reaching Panama he died of a fever and there he lies, buried in an unknown grave.-Detroit News.

Nest of Three Rooms Required for Stork

A three-roomed tenement is built by the hammer-headed stork for the housing of himself and family. He is a native of Africa and in his construction work utilizes enormous sticks which he fixes between the branches of a tree. Any ordinary boy could creep into the lowest compartment. From this a passage slopes up to another flat decorated with bright pebbles and bleached bones. Above this is the nursery, the walls of which are lined with mud to keep out drafts. A curious nest is the one the swiftlet builds in Borneo, and which is known to commerce as the edible nest of the Chinese gourmet. The bird builds in caverns around the coasts, and nestseekers go with torches and tear them down and export them. It is said that edible nests to the value of $1,500,000 are imported into China every year. The nest is woven from a secretion the bird produces-hence its food

Old Cities in Tiers

The Inca museum at Lima, Peru, has recently come into possession of 300 mummies of aboriginal Peruvians brought back by an expediton to the Pisco region. From these and other discoveries it would seem that there was an advanced civilization in that part of the country long before the time of Christ. Cities of different periods were found one built over the other, the earlier ones having been buried. The expeditions also returned with a great wealth of embroidered tapestries, beautifully decorated pottery, some in the shapes of animals and serpents. One of a llama design showed five toes on the forefeet instead of the present split hoof. Llama skeletons showing the same characteristic were also discovered.

Not Alone After herculean efforts against temptation the wayfarer once again found himself listening to yet another sentence to prison.

The magistrate knew the prisoner of old and admonished him thus:

"If, as you say, you want to live happily in this world, you must keep straight. Now, do you understand?" The prisoner frowned and had to admit that he was puzzled.

"I am afraid I don't, your worship," he said doubtfully. "But if you'll tell me how a man is to keep straight while he is trying to make both ends meet, I might."-London

The Scottish Race

The Scots did not originate in Ireland, but the tribe that supplied the name Scotland did.

Like all the other inhabitants of Europe, the Scots are a mixed race. When the Roman General Agricola invaded Scotland in 78 A. D. he found tribes with varied dialects, some probably speaking Gaelic and others, Celtic. the speech of the Britons. He called them all Caledonians.

The Scots came in when Rome withdrew her legions in 410 A. D. They were a tribe from Ireland who conquered a lot of territory and gave the nation its name.

Money Spent on Paint Saves on Home Upkeep

Some of us have our homes painted to make them look attractive. Some of us think that we cannot afford to. A luxury, we say-justifiable, perhaps, if any luxury is because of the recognized effect of surroundings on home life. But still a luxury.

And so, we decide, painting must wait another season. Our budget is limited. We have an improvement to make here, a repair to make there, writes Jane Stewart in the Chicago Evening Post. Thus it goes on from year to year. Little by little the house becomes run down. A change quite imperceptible in the progress, then suddenly we awake to a semi-dilapidated home, all the charm of trimness vanished.

Meanwhile we have spent money on the roof-mending a leak, of course, could not be put off. Gutter spouts, too, needed attention. Little repairs here and there seeemed to run up the bills. And we come to the conclusion that an old house is as bad as an old car with its inevitable repair bills (whose size seems to progress in geometric ratio) or, if the house be comparatively new, that cheap construction may be cheap in the beginning, but it is all too costly in the end.

If you have ever reasoned this way, stop and consider. If your house is old-yes, it may be costly to run. But a house is only as old as it looks, And paint can keep it young. As for cheap construction, it is indeed false economy. But in many cases it is the owner and not the builder who is at fault. The construction may be of the best, but there is no roof which in time will not spring leaks if its protective coating is allowed to wear away, no nail that will not rust, no siding that will not weather.

When the wood is left exposed to the weather moisture penetrates and subsequently dries out, with a resulting swelling and shrinking more quickly than those within, because they receive more moisture and dry out more rapidly. As a result, little cracks develop, making moisture penetration even easier. The surface roughens and in time the wood becomes badly weathered. Similarly, metal, if unprotected, corrodes. The roofs and gutter spouts, in need of paint, will rust and leak.

Quite aside from this physical deterioration is the depreciation of property which comes with a run-down condition. Once a house loses its touch of freshness it becomes undesirable property. The difference in price which it will bring is amazing. and the prospective seller may well consider the fact that a few hundred dollars spent for paint, inside and out. may mean the difference of a few thousand dollars in sale price.

American Tastes Rise in Residence Building

The people of the United States are increasing their expenditures for living accomodations considerably more rapidly than the population itself is growing. This is revealed by an investigation of the most recent data covering investment in new homes and apartments throughout the country, just completed by the research department of Greenbaum Sons' Investment company.

New residential construction begun in 1928 called for an outlay approximately 39 per cent greater than the amount expended for the same purpose in 1924. During the same period the population of the country gained only about 51/2 per cent.

This would indicate a distinct rise in American tastes and standards in the matter of housing, resulting in an increased demand for more up-to-date wad comfortable, and incidentally giore expensive, living quarters. It would also indicate that the American pocketbook is sufficiently well supplied to permit the indulgence of these

Itemizes Cost of Each Trade on Any Building

Following completion of a three story brick apartment building a Chicago contractor compiled a table show ing the proportions of individual costs to the total construction.

The total cost of 35 cents a cubic foot is divided, according to percentage, as follows:

Excavating 2, masonry 30, carpentry and mill work 33 1-3, roofing 1, plastering 7, plumbing 9, heating 6, electric work 1, tile work 1, sheet metal 0.5, painting and decorating 4, glazing 1. miscellaneous iron 0.5, finished hardware 1, cleaning and pointing up 0.1, electric fixtures 1, shades 0.33, screens

Approximately the same ratio applies to other buildings used for dwelling purposes, we are told.

People Hunger for Beauty.

The common people of America, although they put up with ugliness, are hungry for beauty. The real estate man has a chance to administer to a beauty-starved people by making their environment beautiful. Beauty is effective insurance against social unrest because men do not revolt against a civilization that makes their lives beautiful.

Fuel system of the new Ford has been designed for reliability and long service

THE practical value of Ford Since all adjustments are system.

The gasoline tank is built integral with the cowl and is unusually sturdy because it is made of heavy sheet steel, terne plated to prevent rust or corrosion. An additional factor of strength is the fact that it is composed of only two pieces, instead of three or four, and is electrically welded-not soldered.

Because of the location of the tank, the entire flow of gasoline is an even, natural flow-following the natural law of gravity. This is the simplest and most direct way of supplying gasoline to the carburetor without variations in pressure. The gasoline feed pipe of the new Ford is only 18 inches long and is easily accessible all

The gasoline passes from the tank to the carburetor through a filter or sediment bulb mornied on the steel dash which separates the gasoline tank from the

The carburetor is specially designed and has been built but it has a great deal to do to deliver many thousands of miles of good service.

simplicity of design is es- fixed except the needle valve pecially apparent in the fuel and idler, there is practically nothing to get out of

The choke rod on the dash acts as a primer and also as a regulator of your gasoline mixture. The new hot spot manifold insures complete vaporization of the gasoline before it enters the combustion chamber of the engine.

As a matter of fact, the fuel system of the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires very little service attention.

The filter or sediment bulb should be cleaned at regular intervals and the carburetor screen removed and washed in gasoline. Occasionally the drain plug at the bottom of the carburetor should be removed and the carburetor drained for a few seconds.

Have your Ford dealer look after these important little details for you when you have the car oiled and greased. A thorough, periodic checking up costs little.

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL Some Reporters.

Any president, or president-elect, ecomes unpopular with the newspaper reporters as soon as he stops talking to them—telling them all that he is doing and intends to do; what he thinks about everybody and everything, and in general just talks and turns out a copious supply of the commodity that the scribes send to their modity that the scribes send to their employers—the stuff that brings them their living. Mr. Hoover, for instance, have to be a regular "wind bag" to please a certain big class of reporters, whose eagerness for "copy" is almost wolfish. But, in fairness to them, it is their "job" that drives them, and not personal preference. It is the boss back in the office who clamors, for even just a little, if he can't get much, for the little can be expanded with the help of a fertile imignation and the requisite lack of conscience.

But getting away from the preference.

But, getting away from the professional reportorial classes, doesn't it come pretty natural to a lot of just common folks to act hungry reporter? Don't some of us esteem it to be the most of life's pleasure to "find out," and "report," other people's business? Aren't we continually snooping around to satisfy our hungry curiosity? And, the disposing of our ac-cumulation of treasures is fully half of the pleasure—whether we sell them or just tell them.

But we would not be without some reporters. No, they are an essential to the promotion of news and intelligence—the real ones, and surely there is no harm in being zealous and "on the job". There is just the difference between the legitimate and the illegitimate; the worthwhile and the worthless—and it's a pretty big difference.
