ACCOUNT OF A FINE TRIP TO ALASKA.

From Southern California by Steamer and Automobile.

Holtsville, Calf. Nov. 5.

DEAR EDITOR:-Enclosed please find a check for $1.50 for another year's subscription to the Record. And while I am mailing the check I will enclose a few lines in regard to our Alaska trip which we took this past Summer. Maybe you will give it space in your

A wonderful trip to the land of the Midnight Sun and to the Northern Wanderland. I have always thought of Alaska as being at the end of the world, but after all it isn't so far off. The trip we took into Alaska was called the Golden Belt Line Tour, which took us into Alaska 4,500 miles.

We sailed on the Yukon steamer from Seattle on the 17th. day of August, Sailed up the Puget Sound. through the Green Charlotte Sound where the waters were rough and a few of us were sea sick. We sailed on and on, day after day and night after night, and on through the Gulf of Alaska where we again had some excitement of sea sickness.

At the end of five days and five nights we landed at Cordova, a small town. From there we traveled over a railroad to Chitina, a half way place to the Cennecott Copper Mines. Chitina was a place of a few houses, a hotel and a rooming house and some road commission houses. When we came to Cordova they told us they would send us out on the speedster to Chitina, as there was only three of us in the party. Being late in the season, there was only the three of us taking the Golden Belt Tour. Mr. Starner, myself, and a Mrs. Holland from Texas. Well we wondered what this speedster was like. Later on we found out.

It was a 1917 model Ford car, built to run on the railroad track. We started out the next morning at half past eight on this speedster, and we speeded some, too. We were sent out a half hour ahead of the train which was a freight train with a coach and a dining coach attached. The object in sending us a half an hour ahead of the regular time, was that we would have a half an hour to view the two big Glaciers situated on the Copper river.

The glaciers are a wonderful sight to see. They are ice and snow frozen into big glaciers. The Childs glacier is one of the largest ones, running back into a ravine 72 miles and is three hundred feet high and three miles wide. The Childs glacier is on one side of the Copper river bridge and Niles on the other side. After viewing them, the train came and we were put on the train so as to get our We had a very fine dinner of chicken and its belongings. A Jap

We rode on the train while we were eating, our dinner, going along the Copper river. After a time they asked us if we wanted to ride on the Threshing, per day speedster again, and of course we did We then followed the train to Chitina. Along the railroad track were a lot of wild raspberries which attracted us. Our driver, who was a very pleasant one, asked if we wanted to stop and pick some? And all said we did, had a good mess. We arrived at Chitina about five o'clock having gone over some won-derful scene places. We stayed in Chitina over night. The next mornng we speeded away in the speedster for the Cennecott Copper Mines, arriving there in time for dinner which had been planned ahead for us. We viewed the Copper Mill, saw how the copper was separated from the ore. We couldn't go to the mines as it was two miles back among the mighty mountains, and the only way to get there was to walk, or go over in a bucket that the ore is brought over to the mill by, over a cable. There is a cable runs from the mines to the mill and these buckets are drawn over by the cable.

The working men go over in these buckets but they wouldn't take any women over that way, as the buckets have to pass over great gulches hundreds of feet deep. There is a hospital there, a postoffice and a big boarding house. The Gugginheimers, of New York, own the mines. We got back to Chitina that evening—197 miles of travel that day. That evening we walked out to see a Fox farm at Chitina, but didn't stay very long on account of the mosquitos. They swarmed around us like bees. We were glad to get inside of a building to get away from them.

The next morning we went by automobile to Fairbanks, a distance of 317 miles, over the Richardson trail. We traveled three days over this trail. We stopped over night and to eat our meals at the road houses. These road houses are very much the same as our eld taverns used to be—quite an experience. At one of these road houses where we stopped for dinner, the lady said she had failed to bake bread that morning because she was out the day before hunting for mountain sheep, and seen a bear and shot him but he got away, and that morning she was out hunting for him and neglected to bake bread for dinner.

Well we got along very well without bread. Would much rather have heard her tell her experience. She said she didn't have her rifle for shooting bears and that was why she didn't get him; she shot a mountain sheep and had the head perched up in front of the road house. All the natives take

KILLED NEAR EMMITSBURG

Autoist Loses Control of Car and Runs into Culvert.

J. H. Hollinger, Philadelphia, supervisor of the Landis Tool Co., of Waynesboro, was killed on Monday afternoon when his auto crashed into a culvert on the Emmitsburg-Frederick road, near Em There was no witness to the accident, but Harry Copenhaver, of Tan-eytown, driver of a bread wagon, reached the scene a very few minutes after the crash; and he, together with John Reuwer, of Emmitsburg, who was next to arrive, took Mr. Hollinger, out of his car, and brought him to Emmitsburg, where he died without regaining consciousness in Dr. Freeman's office.

A bunch of grapes on the seat of the car, led to the belief that while eating them Mr. Hollinger lost control of his car.

BEWARE OF STRANGERS.

Look out for stranger magazine subscription solicitors that are apt to be plying their trade at this time. Do not pay money to any of them, no matter what their scheme may be. It is also best and safest to pass by all bell-ringing salesmen who are not known. They contribute nothing to the support of town or community in the way of rents or taxes, and hardly have the right to receive business that ought to go to those who do so

Last week, citizens of Frederick parted with a lot of dollars to "salesnen" who declared that they were authorized by a local pastor to take magazine subscriptions on the payment of $1.00 down, and the balance of $2.00 later. They worked rapidly and "got away" before the police could nab them for operating without the authority claimed the authority claimed.

Some of these "salesmen" or "salesladies" may be honest enough, in a way, but all are at least operating outside of their own home communities, for profit. As a class, they should be turned down.

SOME OLD-TIME PRICES.

George Overholtzer, of town, brought to our office an account book kept by his great-grand-father, Christian Overholtzer, that dates back to 1818. It is of interest as showing the prices then prevailing for farm produce, labor, and some other items. We give the following:

FARMERS, GOOD ROADS AND AUTOMOBILES.

The following article appeared in last Sunday's Baltimore Sun. It may be of interest to farmers and others, and carry to them some new information. Anyway, it seems to represent what the American Automobile Association is thinking about.

"With twenty-three percent. of the nation's motor vehicles owned on formation."

farms, Congress could render considerable aid to the farmer by speeding up road building to enable the agricultural interests to market their products and further eliminate the isolation of rural life, the American Automobile Association declared re-

The national motoring body de-clared that an increase in the annual Federal aid appropriation from the present amount of $75,000,000 to $125,000,000 will enable the States to more quickly complete their primary highway systems and aid in the build-

"At the same time," says the statement, "the farmer has been brought in closer touch with public affairs and is taking a more active interest in demanding his rights as a citizen. An indication of this is seen in the fact that rural mail routes are now in excess of 1,270,000, while five families are served per mile with an average of 3,810 pieces of mail an average of 3,810 pieces of mail handled per mile."

The A. A. said that modern high ways have already made available to the rural resident school facilities equal to those found in cities, through consolidation of the once-famous cneroom schools; contributed to the prosperity of the farmer by enabling him to deliver his products at nearby niar-kets or sell them at his door, and lowered the cost of transporting "cash commodities."

"At the close of 1928 there were 24,493,124 motor vehicles registered in the United States, and 5,426,900 of these were on farms. Texas led the list with 362,600 farm-owned motor vehicles, while Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, New York, Minnesota and Missouri followed in the order named. It is also signifi-cant that the larger proportion of these cars are used for work in connection with the farm.

"The need for improved roads to serve the farmer is seen by the fact that at the outset of 1928 there were 43.1 percent of the farms located on unimproved dirt roads and 31.3 percent of the farms located on unimproved dirt roads. Only a cent. on improved dirt roads. Only a small percentage were on gravel or surfaced highways.

"With such a situation prevailing, Congress can hardly afford to longer ignore the need for an intersive effort to increase the progress of road building throughout the United States."

RITCHIE IN THE RACE

A Boost for His Nomination Made in Frederick.

Governor Ritchie was practically placed in the running for a fourth nomination for Governor, on Wednes-day, in Frederick, before the Junior Democratic Club of Frederick county, in a ringing speech made by E. Brook Lee, Speaker of the House for two sessions. Mr. Lee said that in a careful review of the situation in the state, he found the Governor the most potential candidate, and stated that those who felt that there should be a change were politicians anxious for greater recognition than Governor Ritchie has given them." The Baltimore Sun says, concerning the speech;

"The indorsement given Governor Ritchie by Mr. Lee was regarded as of the greatest importance in the Maryland political situation, chiefly because of the closeness of the two men, politically and personally.

It is certain the Lee speech was made with the full cognizance and approval of the Governor and it same as the first specific public indication that Mr. Ritchie aspired to the State that Mr. Ritchie aspired to the State House for another term.

Mr. Lee's speech which resembled a nominating address at a State convention, was delivered in an atmosphere friendly to the Ritchie wing of the party. The Western Maryland leaders always have been close to the Governor and Frederick county is the home of his ancestors."

The Governor, who was present.

The Governor, who was present, made a practical announcement of his candidacy by defending his administration, and challenged the Republicans to make the state roads scandals an issue in the next campaign. He said "With that as the only issue our party can run, and with that we can

Various comments for and against the Ritchie candidacy for a fourth term have been made in the Baltimore papers, but majority sentiment seems to be that the Governor can win in a primary contest.

NEW TOMATO RATE PASSED

A LINCOLN STORY.

In our Detroit letter last week, John J. Reid's reference to the Sangamon river in Illinois, reminded us of a story accredited to Lincoln, as an illustration made in one of his campaign speeches. He said that one of his political opponents reminded of his political opponents reminded strange sounds of hands. him of a little steamboat on the Sangamon river that had such a to blow it, the boat had to be stopped, as the engine did not supply steam enough to blow the whistle and run the boat at the same time.

The point made, as applying to the opponent, was that when he opened his mouth to speak, his brain stopped of applause would be suggest? acting. We should not like to say that this is the story exactly as Lincoln told it (if he did) but the stamping of feet, and whistling. How substance of it is as the writer recollects it.

might appropriately apply some pub- duce foreign "manners" in our aplic speakers who delight in disporting themselves rhetorically before a he says, by making "strange sounds long-suffering public. More running of the engine, and less blowing of the whistle might well be adopted to a greater extent than it is.

After fifty years of age, the tendency is for one not to make new Out in Missouri a dozen State chamones to compensate for the old. Of course, the older folks have their circle too; there is a warmer bond of sympathy and understanding between them than formerly-a sort of "united we stand" feeling, and these ripe friendships compensate and novelties rather than accepted for the loss of a lot of so-called popularity; besides, the accumulation of years carries along with it less desire for occupying the centre of the stage, and something of amusement that the less seasoned still care for the things of less importance in life.

There are very many in the older set whose best friends have passed on; their association is greatly missed, but the recollection of the times when they and we were "the people" of the community, constitutes a wealth that the younger set can not begin to understand, but are surely heading in the same direction. What a happy combination it would be, if the experience and mature judgment of the elderly, could be combined with the health and vigor of youth.

And, there are a few of these exceptions—a very few who make a brave effort to keep the spirit young, and succeed-some actually, while others merely succeed in being "childish," than which there is hardly any- writer from a man who has been pathing in life more pathetic-unless it be an immature specimen of wisdom that has not developed farther than smartness.

THE SAVINGS ACCOUNT.

"I have learned to look upon my savings bank account as a strong, dependable friend—the kind of friend that will stand by me if I should ever be in need. It affords me satisfaction to know that I have a good friend of this kind."

The foregoing paragraph is from a letter recently received by this tiently saving money for a number of years. Human Mineral

A large deposit of vermiculite, a recently discovered mineral, was found near Libby, Mont., by a prospector. This substance, flaky and micalike in appearance, is unique in that it exhibits human characteristics when brought into contact with heat. Upon introduction to a flame the mineral commences to twist and writhe as if making an agonized attempt to escape the burn, meanwhile giving off drops of water, apparently perspiration caused by its violent effort and the

Chinese Queue Disappearing

Many Chinese still wear the pigtail although since the establishment of the republic the number to retain this style of dressing the hair has diminished rapidly. In 1644 when the Tartar or Manchu emperors began to reign in China the people were compelled to shave the foreskull and adopt the queque as a symbol of sub jection and loyalty to their new mas ters. At first the people resented the imposition but opposition to it soon died out and the queue became the most characteristic and cherished feaare of the national dress.

Language Peculiarities

English has twenty-six alphabet letters, twenty-one for consonants and five for vowels. English has some forty-four sounds, twenty-four consonantal and twenty vocalic. To represent these forty-four sounds in speliing, English has well over 400 separate orthographic combinations, making an average of ten possible spellings per sound. Humble Cow Looked On as Evidence of Wealth

In the early centuries the cow was looked upon as a source of wealth as well as food. One of the first words for money was "pecunia," from the Greek word "pecus," meaning cattle or herd, and the first coins made in Greece and Rome were stamped with the cow's head.

Another interesting connection between cattle and gold is found in the story of the discovery of gold in California. Péople came overland by pack train, around the isthmus of Panama, and in sailing vessels around the Horn. More people meant more cows and to meet the growing demand, large numbers of cows were brought from Kentucky and England. In the early mining days these sold for $300 to $500 a head-so a cow was almost as good as a gold mine .- Kansas City Times.

GIVE PLENTY OF ROOSTING PLACE

Pullets Need Room and Fresh Air to Develop Properly.

Give the pullets plenty of roosting space and encourage them to roost early, says L. M. Hurd of the New York State College of Agriculture. Roosting helps to prevent crowding and allows the individual chicken more freedom of action and better air. Uncrowded pullets make better growth.

Clean and disinfect the houses and supply them frequently with fresh litter. Shavings, oat straw, or sand make the best covering for the floor during the summer. When more than one house is in use take care that too many pullets do not form the habit of roosting in one building. The buildings should be at least 100 feet apart to help keep the birds evenly distributed. It is not advisable to try to house more than 125 growing pullets in one colony house.

Provide good ventilation on hot nights. In addition to the regular ventilators take out the glass sash in the front of the house. To prevent possible infestation from red mites paint the perches and side walls close by with carbolineum, or spray the colony houses several times during the summer with a mixture of equal parts of crude carbolic acid and kerosene.

When there are many hatches and several weeks difference in their ages, provide each hatch with a separate range, or place the houses farther apart than for groups of the same age. Otherwise older pullets will annoy the young and prevent normal growth.

Fireless Cooker Good Idea for Egg Layers

Hens need warm water. It's cheaper for you to warm it on the fire than to make the hen warm it with expensive feed. You can save lots of trouble by insulating the water pail. You can make a sort of fireless cooker by placing the drinking vessel in a box large enough to stuff two or three inches of straw, excelsior, or torn newspapers, packed tightly below and all around the vessel.

Keep the material dry by covering it with tin, fitted closely under the top rim of the pail, and sloped slightly to the outside of the box so the spilt water will run off.

The water keeps warm several

practicable for those who make poul

A dust bath aids materially in the elimination of body lice and should be installed.

Pure-breds usually lay eggs that are more uniform in size, shape and color, and are more productive than mixed . . .

Hens should stand a lot of dry still cold, but not drafts. There should be no opening in opposite walls, not even cracks, to draw a shivery current of air through the house.

The first rule in feeding the poultry flock in the winter is to be sure to feed plenty. Hens cannot lay in cold weather unless they have enough feed to keep them fat and thus have a surplus for making eggs.

Squash and pumpkin make a good succulent feed for poultry, helping to keep the bowels in good condition.

Increase the size of your poultry house to keep pace with the size of your flock. Poultry is not city bred and does not like crowded conditions.

Moist mash often helps to get more feed into the crops-a warm. slightly moistened mash fed at noon during cold weather. Liquid skim milk or buttermilk is especially valuable for moistening the mash.

Can Scientific Breeding

Produce Men of Genius?

Human geniuses must be bred as race horses by combining "carefully selected pedigreed stock," the president of the Eugenics Research association said at a meeting of the organization in New York. Whether that is true of the future or not no one knows. It has not been true in the past.

Physical development may be so influenced, and morons may be the descendants of morons. But genius and leadership appears in so many unexpected places and persons that we are unable to draw any diagram or arrange a plan whereby we can plot their creation. One genius may come out of a family which produces others of no account. Yet the brilliant intellect and the lazy nit-wit possessed the same parents.

Eugenists may prove that certain families over several generations have produced only mental defectives, while other families have given society a high grade of superior intelligence. But there are often exceptions to uphold or break the rule.

But genius is hard to trace. We do not know why one man becomes a great leader or a wonderful engineer. It may be heredity, or environment, or education, or what? That man must continue to advance through evolution and better breeding is undoubtedly true, but that we can create a genius by planning is yet to be proven. No age has seen so many geniuses as the present, and eugenics had nothing whatever to do with the manufacture. of this wealth of brains,-Miami Her-

Europe's Longest River

The word Volga is the name of the longest river in Europe. It rises on the Valdai Plateau, south of Leningrad, former capital of Russia, and it flows in a southeasterly direction and then south across Russia, and empties into the northern part of the Caspian sea at Astrakhan. Its total length is 2,310 miles, and it drains an area of 585,000 square miles. It possesses only a slight and gradual fall, and this is excellently adapted for navigation. In spring floods the waters at certain parts are from ten to thirteen miles across. The river is icefree from 193 to 260 days each year.

Scottish Kilt

The kilt is part of the characteristic and ancient dress of the natives of the highlands of Scotland. The word means that which is girded or tucked up. It is of Scandinavian origin. The Danish word kilte, in use today, means to tuck up. The kilt of the highlander is short but has a very full skirt, belted in at the waist, and reaching to about the knees. The early kilt was not a separate garment, but merely the lower part of the plaid in which the Highlander wrapped himself, hanging down in folds below the

Letter Oddly Addressed

Every post office employee has experienced troubles with performing the work of delivering letters owing to the obscure or insufficient directions inscribed upon missives passing through their hands. Rabbit Was Traveler

The driver of a motor car in Switzerland tells the story of the astonishing speed and long-sustained effort which a rabbit is capable of. He happened to start one, which on its flight kept to the road. In order to keep up with the rabbit, the man had to speed up to 34 miles an hour, and the sturdy little creature held out for over a league before it finally jumped into a ditch by the roadside.

Public Interested in

Exterior of Buildings

Most buildings are visible from the streets, which belong to the community, and therefore the interests of the community as a whole, as regards external appearance, should not be sacrificed to the wishes of the owners of individual buildings, says Professor Wilkinson, fellow of the Royal Institue of British Architects, in "Architecture.

The interior arrangement and treatment of buildings are a matter for the owner, and will affect comparatively few people, but the external appearance will affect tens of thousands. By "external" one does not mean the facades only, but all parts which may be visible.

We know what results without control. At present we usually have a parade of aggressive affection in the way of competitive advertisement, often conceived with a deliberate striving after the unusual in order to attract attention.

Freedom from control has made our cities less pleasant places to live and work in than they need be. This freedom is a present-day characteristic of many things besides architecture, but is it a good thing? Without control we get chaos, waste and ill will. 'The freedom of the many necessitates the control of the few.

Needs of Town Library

Something of Problem A library building may be stored with all the wisdom of the ages, and yet, unless it can attract readers, it might as well close its doors. The average town library reader looks to his local library for entertainment. The tired business man is less eager in pursuit of knowledge than the bright high-school pupil. The library, liberally supported from the town treasury, must give him something for his money. It is necessary, then, to make a judicious selection among the novels of the moment, of the making of which there is no end. A story of real merit is always worth the price paid; but it often happens that books bought on the recommendation of one or another readers prove disappointing. Some libraries have had a rule that no work of fiction shall be purchased until, say, two years after the date of publication, the theory being that a story which retained its popu larity for so long must be worth having; but this rule is too severe. Many excellent stories are forgotten after six months. There seems to be no way with regard to fiction, other than to select among the best sellers as best one can.-Portland Oregonian.

Choosing a home with obvious accepted standard values, assuming that on other points it is acceptable, means that it will sell more easily-should a sale become necessary—than a home which borders on the bizarre or the "too different."

Zoning Activity Spreading

That a steadily increasing number of municipalities are taking steps to protect property values through zoning regulations, is shown in a survey just completed by the division of building and housing of the Department of Commerce.

In 1916, the survey shows, zoning regulations were in force in only eight cities. The number increased slowly until 1920, after which the progress was rapid. At the end of 1928, a toal of 754 cities, towns and villages 'n all parts of the country, having a total population in excess of 37,000,000, had regulations designed to promote construction and use of buildings so as to conserve the interests of home owners and other property holders, in conformance with the public welfare.

all know the feel of the Thanksgiving season. Our blood is tingling with the first fall frosts, and our appetite is responding to its accelerated pace in a way that reminds us of the Thanksgiving of our childhood. And the child part in all of us that always survives the years is secretly wondering just what there will be for Thanksgiving dinner. That remains a dark mystery in most wellregulated households, except for certain rumors that will leak out, but we're going to lift the curtain to reveal what we think will make a most toothsome Thanksgiving dinner. Of course there must be turkey That has been traditional ever since the Pilgrim fathers carried their arquebusses to church on Thanksgiving morning, and glanced uneasily over their shoulders for whizzing arrow shot by some hirking Indian. And there must also be cranberry sauce, and pumpkin and cider.

The Recipes

Spiced Cocktail: Drain one 8ounce can of breakfast prunes, and arrange the tiny prunes in centers of cocktail glasses. To the prune syrup add two tablespoons of sugar, two tablespoons of lemon juice, one-half cup of water and an inch stick of cimamon, and boil five minutes. Cool, and remove cinnamon. Cut out the sections of four California oranges, being careful to leave no trace of white fibre, and arrange flower-fashion around the prunes. Pour over the syrup, garnish with little yellow grapes, and chill.

Cook Italian paste in letter form in two cans of consommé and two cups of water until tender. Season rather highly with salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce. Pour in the soup, and garnish each cup with a thin slice of hard-cooked egg. Excellent cranberry sauce can be bought in cans, and its purchase in that form saves a lot of labor in the kitchen.

Novel Desserts Gingerbread and Banana Shortcake: Cream one-fourth cup of butter and one-fourth cup of sugar, and one well-beaten egg, and beat well. Add one-half teaspoon sod to one-half cup of molasses, and then add this to the first mixture Sift one and one-half cups of pastry flour, two teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of salt. Mix to a paste one teaspoon of ginger, two teaspoons of cinna mon, one-half teaspoon of allspice, one-fourth cup of boiling water and one-fourth cup of evaporated milk, and let stand five minutes. add to the original mixture alternately with the dry ingredients. Bake in a sheet in a moderate (350°) oven for thirty to thirty-five min mes. Cool slightly, then cut into new moons, using a cooky cutter of that shape, quite a large one. Temper Shortens When Age of 40 Is Reached

Are you approaching forty? Beware! Between the ages of forty and sixty ones "pet peeves" are "at peak." Savants of the international congress of psychology announce that the child, and the young man and woman, are fairly broad-minded about annoyances. Having survived such trivialities until forty, one is inclined to let go, and it is from that time until one is sixty that you should guard against becoming slave to your dislikes. A better plan would be to remove one's self from the scenes of temptation. If one dislikes mosquitoes, he should try to find a place where there aren't any. If a man, and it irks you to dance with stout ladies, crash the high school dances and sub-deb parties. If, now in the thirties, you develop murderous tendencies when the saxophone player next door tunes up, move away before forty, unless you wish to give your murder complex play. This may be bad psychology, but it's good

HOT ROLLS

Where is the person who doesn't like hot rolls? And yet knowing this to be a fact, many women never attempt making hot rolls for their families, thinking it is a difficult process. Making hot rolls is easy. Once a housewife starts making them, she will always make them. Her friends will demand them when they come a-dining, and almost over night she has a reputation for making rolls that fairly "melt in your mouth."

The recipe I am going to give you requires little kneading and handling and only a short time of mixing until ready for the oven. The secret of this quickness lies in the fact that we use soft wheat and plenty of yeast. We call them Parker House rolls, and you make them as follows:

2 cups scalded milk 6 to 7 cups soft 2 tbsp. sugar wheat flour 2 compressed yeast 1½ tsp. salt 2 tbsp. fat

Scald the milk, add the sugar, and let cool until it is lukewarm; add the yeast and stir until it is dissolved. Then beat in enough flour to make a soft batter. Add the salt and fat and stir in enough flour to make a soft dough. Place on a floured board and knead just enough to obtain a smooth dough. Place the dough in a greased bowl, cover with a cloth, and let stand until the dough is double in bulk; cut with a large biscuit cutter, grease the biscuit with melted butter, crease through center with knife, and fold one-half over the other; grease the top of each roll and place on a well greased baking sheet to rise. When the rolls double in bulk, bake in a hot Pat-That's a foine place to have it. oven (400 degrees F). These delicious rolls require only about 11/2 hours.

El Brendel *******

The odd fact about El Brendel. a new recruit to Movietone pictures, is that he has imitated Swedes on the stage so long that audiences believe he is Swedish, which is not true. El is a comic, born in Philadelphia, and is to be seen in the comedy role in "Sunny Side Up." Before becoming a star in comedy in 1921, he had experience in all manner of theatricals. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. **********************

INTERNATIONAL GOOD WILL

A FAMOUS lawyer is quoted as having made the remark that there never had been a will drawn up that he could not break. This might be considered an extravagant statement of an over confident lawyer, but it does suggest the possibility of a legal status arising in which technicalities could thwart justice. A law to be effective must not only be "stormproof" legally, but should have the support of public opinion. Some of the laws on our statute books are difficult to enforce while others are flagrantly violated for the reason that public opinion considers them unjust. Public sentiment in favor of a law is as important as its legal phraseology. When both exist no difficulty is found in law enforcement. This same fact holds true regarding international agreements such as peace compacts, covenants and treatises. Peace can never be bought nor is it possible to realize it by the mere signing of a protocol. When public opinion frankly and in no mistaken language demands the elimination of war, the reign of peace shall have already begun. One step in that direction is the removal of misunderstandings between nations. When people thoroughly understand each other much of the difficulty which causes separation and enmity is removed. An important contribution to that end has recently been made by Prime Minister | ed Capacity reached, the batter that Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, is left can be put away in the In his remarkable address before the refrigerator, and used again at lunch senate he said: "There can be no or at the light supper in the evening. war; nay, more: it is absolutely im- and, still better, at the impromptu possible, if you and we do our duty afternoon tea. in making the peace pact effective, that any section of our arms, whether land or sea or air, can ever again come into hostile conflict. Let our government any taste. send to other nations representatives of the "Will of America" for international peace and its certainty will not be far distant.

THE USEFUL WAFFLE

When in doubt, have waffles. The ingredients are staples on hand in every household. The uses of the waffle run the course of breakfast, lunch, the impromptu tea party, dinner or supper. There is no food more adapatable, none more variable in its uses, none quicker and easier of production, than the waffle.

The breakfast waffle is never wast-

JUST A PROBLEM IN

ENNIE CRAIG sat down upon the edge of her bed when she heard the doorbell ring below. Her mother went to let Joe Sherman in. There were the usual greetings between Mrs. Craig and her daughter's friend. Then, "Are you 'most ready to come down, Jennie? I guess, she'll be here in a minute Joe. Go into the parlor and wait."

Jennie continued to sit rigid upon the edge of her hard, narrow little bed. She was having a terrible fight in which her head was trying to stand ground against her heart, with as yet no perceptible possibility of winning. Until the battle was finished she couldn't go down and face Joe Sher-

She had been going with Joe Sherman for a year. She loved him. She thought he loved her. But there were hindrances to their marrying. Joe belonged to a family who lived from hand to mouth, accumulating nothing, often getting into serious difficulties through debt. Jennie had inherited a desire for thrift along with ber wavy red hair. She had saved a portion of her wages as religiously as she went to church on Sunday. Every instinct of her being was unfriendly to Joe's happy-go-luckiness. But Joe himself she adored with all the intensity of a girl's first love.

She rose at last, smoothed down her prim little figured voile, and went downstairs. Joe was walking impatiently about the parlor, looking at the family portraits on the wall, agly portraits of ugly, honest folks who of necessity would have had little in common with this big, handsome, easygoing young fellow, at sight of whom Jennie paused, her hand fluttering to her throbbing throat.

"It's raining hard. We can't go anywhere tonight," Joe said, as they sat down upon the worn sofa. "Hear that on the window! And the wind! Oh, boy! Turned my umbrella inside out. I'll have to get a new one to-

"Why not have the old one mended?" "There you go, Jennie! But you look awful pretty tonight. Your hair -well, it's so much like sunshine that it makes me forget the rain."

"It's just red hair. Red hair is common. It stands for temper and stinginess and-and a lot of other things you've no use for. We aren't suited to each other, Joe. I-1 think it's all foolishness for us to go on."

Joe looked at her sharply. "What's the idea?" he demanded. "Are you trying to tell me you-you've had enough of me? Is that it, Jennie?" He got up and stood before her, redfaced, excited. "If your folks are cutting in on what's our business-" He made a belligerant gesture.

"Oh, they're not! They let me do as I please. They trust me. It's myself. I'm to blame. I can't-1 can't-" "We'd be awfully happy," Joe mun mured, dazedly.

"Just for a li oh, what's the use? I don't dare. It isn't as if I-1 could make you over, Joe, or you me." Jennie was breaking down. If she began to cry Joe would take her in his arms and that would end it all-the wrong way. She ran out of the room.

Joe looked after her, stunned. She was gone, for good. After a moment he took his hat from the table. Underneath the hat was the box of expensive candy he had brought for Jennie and forgotten until this moment. He went out with a dreadful pain tearing his heart.

Next day she wrote a letter to Joe. Sne was rather forceful with the pen. Her letter was an explanation of all the things she felt she owed it to Joe to say. She laid all the blame on herself. She couldn't change her make-up. She wanted to be happy. Joe wanted to be happy. They could never be happy together.

Silence on Joe's part followed that letter. Jennie kept at work doggedly. Work was a blessing at a time like this. But she ate and slept so little that it was no wonder her bright color began to fade. Even her sunny hair looked dim. One night she went to the movies with another girl and saw Joe across the aisle with a girl named Pat who was not well spoken of. That took the heart out of her completely. She wanted him back if only to save him from Pat.

Three weeks passed. One night Jennie, returning to the house from an errand in the neighborhood, found a huddled figure on the front steps. "It's me. Jennie." Joe unfolded his tong length. "I've got to have a talk with you." Jennie's heart bounded. But she sat primly down beside him. She

"If you want a man that's steady going and saving and-and honest and all that. I'm going to be that man," Joe said. "I don't even ask you to take me on trial, Jennie. When I come to you again you'll know I've made good. Good-by!" This time he "Joe!" Jennie sprang to her feet, too late. She heard him thumping down the sidewalk. What had he meant? Could it be she was going to be happy yet? The promise and hope in his words thrilled her. She sank back upon the steps, buried her red head on the arm of her old brown sweater and cried for joy. After that when she met him he always gave her a grin and a wink. But he was usually in too big a hurry to stop to talk to her. He didn't come to the house. He seemed to be busy. Joe, who had had all of time and eternity to lounge through, as he had often said.

Soon she learned what Joe was up to. He had bought out a business which because it had apparently failed was to be had for a nominal sum. And new Jennie trembled for Joe's judgment. He knew nothing about job printing.

But Joe was out to succeed and win the girl he found he wanted more than anything else in the world. He worked eighteen hours a day getting the hang of his new job. He had brain and vigor, and there was need of another printery in the town.

One day Jennie picked up a handbill Joe had printed. Her eyes misted as she gazed at it, and tucked it away as if it were something sacred.

Next thing she knew Joe had a partner. Old Art Burrill, who knew more about printer's ink than almost anyone else in town but who had long ago retired, had watched Joe's method until he just felt he had to get back into the game with the boy.

When Jennie saw the name of the new firm on a plate glass window she nearly had heart failure. Joe had made good. But he wouldn't want her now-now when he could have Elsie Burrill, a girl with beauty and money. Elsie had been abroad. The boys thought her irresistible.

"Serves me right" Jennie thought sadly. "I shouldn't have been so particular. I'm not so much myself. We Craigs don't stand for anything but thrift and right living. Joe's going to the top. He won't stoop to pick me up now."

Jennie was alone the night the Craig house caught fire. She was startled by a crackling noise as she sat reading before going to bed. She opened the stair door. The chamber was ablaze.

She turned in an alarm. But there was no putting out the fire. In the midst of the furniture salvaged from the doorned building she stood wondering what dad and mom would say when they got home. Suddenly to her astonishment she saw Joe on the porch roof hacking away with an ax. The upper wall was about to cave in upon him, but he didn't see it. Neither did anybody else. It was Jennie who knew how filmsily the house was built.

Jennie leaped forward, arms outstretched.

"Joe! Jump!" she screamed. He heard her voice above the roar of the flames; he saw her in the lurid light. Obeying, he jumped-and the wall almost grazed him as it crashed. Later she stood alone with her smoke-begrimed hero. "I know where I can get a house big enough for the four of us till your folks look around a bit," Joe said. He looked tenderly down into her quivering face. "How about it, Jennie? I'll have to speak for it right

"Joe! Do you mean that you-

Joe's face was wonderful in spite of its smudge.

"If you say so we can get a license any time before four o'clock tomorrow," he said,

Remarkable Showing of Intelligence in Owls

The wisdom of owls is taken for granted, never tested by prying ornithologists, always assumed by bird lovers. Their intelligence is another matter; that is fair game for wielders of the yardstick. Spanish owls on the English estate of Sir George Courthope played havor with scientific observations that were in progress there until the observers took cognizance of the intelligence of the birds. The observers had made two apparently contradictory discoveries; that the owls killed young birds; that the diet of the owls consisted of beetles and not of young birds. In the Spectator the solution to the puzzle is given by W. Beach Thomas:

"One day in the course of the investigation of the mystery a Spanish owl was heard cackling and seen sitting on the top of a coop, proclaiming murder. It had just killed 16 small pheasant chicks. Now, the owls attack the coops not singly but in groups On this occasion three birds were especially concerned, and between them they presently carried off all the 16 dead chicks and laid them at different spots on a low-lying stretch of land that is half covert alongside a stream. The observers discovered the whereabouts of most of the 16 hodies, and kept watch in their vicinity The owls did not revisit their prey till the burying beetles began to attack the bodies. Thereafter they visited them at intervals, on each occasion devouring every discoverable beetle, often turning over the body to search them out. On no single occasion has any flesh been found in any of the several hundred owls killed on the estate; and almost every post-mortem investigation at certain dates has revealed a number of the upper wing cases of burying beetles."

This was no isolated accident. Observers watched this procedure for two seasons; a large number of owls shared in it. If this was not intelligent behavior then much of the premeditated action of man must be ascribed to some faculty other than intelligence.-New York Sun.

DIVINING BY LIVE-FOR-EVER

D ID you ever, when a child, take a leaf of live-forever—sedum Telorganizations, the stock market or an individual who has been beaten in the enhium-and squeezing it to loosen flerce competition of modern life. We the inner and outer skin, it to make it puff up like a balloon? of disobedience of fixed standards If you never did there were many thousands of other children who did and many thousands who do the same today. It is a time-honored way of finding out whether you will have a long life and be married, or the reverse. If the leaf blows up easily the answer is in favor of the long life and the marriage. Another common way of divining by live-forever is to pin two shoots of it tition. Moral fail- on the wall and let them represent a couple of young people who are "keeping company." If the shoots grow towards each other the couple will be married; if from each other they will

The Telephium was so named from Telephus, a legendary king of Mysia, the son of Hercules and Auge, or Augeia, that indiscreet priestess of Atehene. In the birth and history of Telephus love played a leading part which fact, combined with the idea of the ancients that the order of plants to which what is commonly known as live-forever belongs possessed certain medical qualities, makes it very appropriate material for divinations recredit side of their life's record. THE HIGHER PATRIOTISM

LESSON TEXT-Jonah 1:1-3; 3:1-5; 4:5-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Love for Everybody.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for Ev-

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—What Is True Patriotism?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

IC-Patriotism and Internationalism

The tesson committee has rightly suggested the entire book of Jonah as the basis of our study. The topic selected by the committee may seem a little strained. It will hardly do to call the spirit which moved Jonah to preach to the Ninevites, patriotism; rather, we should recognize it as the passion of a missionary going forth with the message of God. calling upon men to repent and turn to Him. Patriotism means love for one's country while the spirit of the missionary is passionate love for lost men of all

I. Jonan's Call and Commission (1:1, 2).

Jonah. a Jew, was called to go and preach repentance to a Gentile city. In a real sense, salvation is of the Jews. In the seed of Abraham all nations of the earth shall be blessed (Gen. 12:1, 2). The story of Jonah graphically portrays the history of Israel as a nation. God separated Israel to be the channel through which His mercy and salvation were to be carried to all the nations of the earth They, like Jonah, have been recreant to duty. Because of this God has caused them to be swallowed up by the nations, who will one day in the future spue them out upon dry ground. Palestine. After chastisement they like Jonah, will discharge their obli gation and nations will repent and turn to God.

II. Jonah's Flight From Duty (1:3) He turned his back upon God and attempted to flee from His presence. He went in the opposite direction to which he was sent. He did not believe in foreign missions. In the same way. Israel has become an apostate people. and instead of a blessing has become a burden and curse to the nations.

III. Jonah's Correction (1:4-2:10). 1. Overtaken by a storm (1:5). Trouble soon came upon the disobedient servant of God. So with the Jews, misfortune after misfortune. storm after storm have overtaken them because they turned from God. They are now tossed about by the nations. They, like Jonah, are asleep.

2. Cast overboard (1:15). In their perplexity the sailors cast lots and the lot fell upon Jonah. According to his own direction they did this. God had prepared a great fish which swallowed Jonah.

3. Jonah's deliverance (ch. 2). Jonah in his affliction turned to God and prayed (James 5:13).

God miraculously preserved him while in the belly of the fish. God has miraculously preserved Israel while in the heart of the nations. The fish could not digest Jonah, neither can the nations assimilate Israel. Jonah repented while in the fish. So Israel will repent as she goes into the great tribulation. God made the fish to vomit out Jonah. So He will at the proper time cause the nations to cast out Israel.

IV. Jonah's Commission Renewed. (3:1-10).

Although Israel has been rebellious and failed in the execution of her commission, she will repent and go forward to fulfill her commission in preaching the gospel to the nations of the earth observe.

1. The field of his ministry (v. 3). It was to be the great Gentile city Nineveh.

2. His message (v. 4).

He was instructed to "preach the preaching" which God had commissioned him to utter -- Nineveli was to be overthrown within forty days. 3. Effect upon the people of Nineveh

They repented and sued for pardon

In the time to come the Gentile na tions will repent of their sins when the gospel of the kingdom is preached unto them by the Jews.

V. Jonah's Behavior (4:1-11) 1. His displeasure (vv 1-3).

He now makes known the real rea son for his flight from duty. He knew that the gracious God would spare the people who repented.

2. God reproves Jonah (vv. 4-11). By means of the gourd God shows him his error. The closing scene affords a striking example of the patience and pity of God in contrast with the hard-heartedness of man.

Much Bacon on This Hog

The fossil skeleton of a giant hog which stood seven feet tall is mounted in Morrell hall at the University of Nebraska. The terrible pig in his prehistoric day was as high as the tallest modern motor car and had a wheel base of about 40 inches.

The fossil was dug up in Sloux county. Nebraska. Only two of the giants have ever been discovered, the other being smaller than the university's specimen. The pig, scientifically termed Dinohyus hollandi, lived during the late Oligocene or the early Miocene age, which would give him an antiquity of some 12,000,000 years .-Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Sanders meant well, but somehow he was always putting his foot in it. At a dance he was presented to a her for a dance.

"I can only spare you a one-step," she replied, "and I can't actually guarantee that, because I'm afraid my friends will be leaving before it takes place."

"Oh, how empty the room will seem when you're gone," gurgled Sanders.

Unearth Ancient Whale

The enormous skeleton of a 5,000year-old Greenland whale was found at Kistinge, near Halmstad, Sweden, by workmen digging a ditch near the seashore. A monstrous jawbone measuring about thirteen feet in length was unearthed. On account of its size it was first taken by the workmen to be a part of the hull of an ancient vessel. The bone has been examined by archeologists, who estimate the whale to have lived at the end of the Ice age, about five thousand years ago.

Where Criminals Hung

The little triangular garden at Kensington gate, London, was once known as Dead Man's green and has a somewhat gruesome history. Tradition avers that Dead Man's green, as it used to be called, was the site of the Surrey gallows, where many a highwayman and less romantic scoundrel met his doom in the Eighteenth century. Here, too, some of the Scottish followers of Prince Charlie were "hanged, drawn, and quartered" after the rebellion of 1745.

That's the Spirit!

Several women were being sent from the Home for the Aged to Yosemite for a vacation treat. One who had no godmother to pay her way sent the following note to her undertaker:

"Dear Sir: Sometime ago I deposited with you a sum of money for the cremation of my body when I die. Please return it to me so I can go to Yosemite this summer. I believe it will do me more good."-Pathfinder Magazine.

Opal Superstition

The opal has not always been regarded as an unlucky stone. The superstition regarding its bad luck began in the Fourteenth century at the time of the Black death, particularly in Venice. At that time the opal was a favorite of the Italian jewelers, but it was said that opals worn by those stricken with the disease became suddenly brilliant and that their luster departed upon the death of the owner. Thus the opal became associated with death and an object of dread.

RED CROSS HONOR FLAG GOES TO NEW HAMPSHIRE

The honor flag, given annually to the State which enrolls the greatest percentage of its population as mem ber, of the American Red Cross, went this year to New Hampshire. The de cision was so close between New Hampshire and Vermont that it hung in the balance for a time. California ranked third in the honor list and Con necticut fourth.

A final tabulation of figures of the 1928 Roll Call showed a nation-wide membership of 4,127.946. The banner rests with New Hampshire where it is nung in the State House, until the 1929 Roll Call-held between Armis tice Day and Thanksgiving Day-is completed and new figures available for the 1929 winner.

Over-Painted Bell

Much of the slang indulged in by seamen dates back to the Elizabethan period. In a little book entitled "Sea Slang," Frank Bowen traced the origin of many of these quaint terms. A seaman whose home port is Glasgow is a "boiled bell," a term of mild ridicule. The reference is to a traditional hell presented to Fort Glasgow, in which the sailors living there took such pride that they painted it so much it would not ring. They then had to boil the paint off.-Detroit News.

Inauguration Coincidences

President McKinley's first inauguration took place on the centennial of Washington's retirement from public life, a coincidence that failed to attract public attention at the time. The ceremonies attending the beginning of McKinley's second term fell on the centennial of the first inauguration of Jefferson, first President to be inaugurated at our permanent seat of government at Washington.

Two lads were visiting their aunt. The older was very neat and made no objection to the daily bath demanded of them by the fastidious aunt. The younger lad had an aversion to water and his fond aunt asked:

"Why do you always howl about bathing? Your big brother never acts like that."

"Well, he is stuck on the girls and wants to look pretty. I'm a man's man," replied the aggrieved lad.

Probably Fervent Wish

On a shore-bound train recently the Stroller sat behind a fussy old lady. The seat in front of the woman was occupied by a gentleman who had his window open.

"I wish that man would shut his window, my hair is blowing around something awful," she remarked to a woman in the seat beside her.

Cleaning Plaster Statues

When plaster statues have become dingy and dusty first give a thorough brushing and dusting. Take a good quality of white or cream colored paint and make it thin with turpentine. Apply this to the statue with great care so that no paint settles in the crevices to impair the modeling. The statue can then be kept clean by wiping carefully with a wet cloth. Many statues in the Corcoran Art gallery, Washington, are treated in this

SWISS POLICE DOGS ARE HARD ON CROOKS

Clear Up Crime Mysteries in Record Time.

Geneva.-Erno de St. Georges and Wigger are just dogs, but between the two of them, and their fellow canines of the kennels of Securitas, they have built up a reputation which has reached far beyond the borders of the cantons of Geneva and Vaud, where they are employed.

Dogs have long been used by Swiss' police in the apprehension of criminals, but it is only recently one of the police dog force attained the distinction of being accepted in court as a star witness. Before the justices of the canton of Vaud, Wigger, whose owner is M. Carlier, a gendarme, never had been guilty of perjury. Nor has a criminal against whom Wigger has testified ever been able to prove an alibi.

Wigger has made larceny so unprofitable to the petty thieves around Prilly, near Lausanne, that the almost complete absence of theft the last year has been ascribed to his sagacity by Judge Marc Collio. Over a period of a few months Wigger traced down more than twenty burglars in the canton of Vaud and then obtained their conviction. He also found many missing persons and strayed children and has recovered lost articles.

Dog Follows Scent. The most famous exploit of the police dog was the apprehension of five criminals who had raided a house whose occupant was away. M. Carlier, however, took Wigger to the scene. The dog shooped around through the pantry and cellar and halls where the burglars had prowled and then followed the scent through the garden and down the road. At a junction Wigger hesitated, started one way and then came back and went down the other fork. The police realized the party had separated, and sent the dog down one trail. which soon ended at a habitation of one of the canton's police characters. The man was arrested, and being unable to prove an alibi, eventually confessed his guilt. However, he would not reveal the identity of the other four marauders

Going back to the fork in the road, Wigger picked up the other scent and followed it to the home of another culprit. Returning to the scene of the burglary, the dog separated the five different scents and tracked each man to his retreat. All were found guilty and given jail sentences.

Picks Up Old Scent.

Another exploit of Wigger's was picking up a three-day old scent of a woman who had di appeared. The dog was taken to the home of the missing woman, allowed to smell the bed clothes and some shoes she had worn. He took to the trail in the yard and followed it to the shores of Lake Geneva. A short time later the body of the woman was recovered near the spot where Wigger had traced her footsteps

In Geneva, Erno de St. Georges. who has won many first prizes in dog shows for his perfect points, to say nothing of intelligence tests, has become famous for his exploits. Like Wigger, he is trained for police work and does the nightly rounds with the securitas.

In the majority of instances a Swiss police dog will not tackle a burgiar. but will remain content to corner him until the police arrive.

In the "tests" given young dogs who have completed their training, a most exacting procedure is followed. A dog, before he is acknowledged to be proficient, must be able to pick a certain man out of a crowd of several hundred; he must be able to "identify' a man in the "showup"

Chloroformed, Buried,

but Dog Comes Home

Sunbury, Pa.-Daniel Henry of North umberland, owner of Muggs, a collie dog, decided he did not want the ani mal any longer and employed Rob ert Allen to chloroform and bury it.

Allen tied the dog's legs together and administered enough chloroform to kill a man, he said. Taking the "hody" to the city dump, he hired a man to bury it under five feet of conashes. In a couple of hours, back came the canine as though from the dead. Muggs had regained conscious ness, worked loose the cords and re turned to its master, its tail wagging wearily.

Henry says Muggs has a home with him as long as the dog lives.

Explaining Bent Cross on Crown of Hungary

With reference to a question recently asked concerning the famous St. Stephen's crown of Hungary and the reason why the cross on top of it is bent, a Hungarian reader, B. S., writes as follows: "As a painter I painted signs which bear the Hungarian royal crown. My master told me they had a revolution in 1848 and some one buried the crown in the forest of Lakwa, southeast of Zlatica. Nobody knew of it for years until Franz Josef was to be crowned. The government sent men to look for it and by the help of a Serbian shepherd they found it with its cross bent." This story is confirmed by Henri de Wendel's book, "The Real Francis-Joseph," which states: "Before Kossuth left, he buried with his own hands the Hungarian crown, the old crown of St. Stephen, in the neighborhood of the frontier village of Orsova. When it was recovered later, the little cross on the top was found bent on one side. From this time onward the arms of Hungary have borne a crown with a

Beaver's Powerful Tail

Serves Many Purposes There is a popular belief that the beaver's tail is shaped as it is to enable him to use is as a trowel in his construction work. Scientists, however, have observed that the beaver usually carries in his fore paws the mud, rock or sticks with which he builds and that he uses the tail to steady himself, either by planting it on the ground or by waving it from side to side. In the water he uses is as a rudder and sometimes as a propeller. The beaver's tail is flat and wide. Its steering power is taxed to the limit as the beaver swims, tuglike, by the side of a pole or log that he is towing to the house, dam, or food cache. It keeps him from moving in circles. By its loud slaps on the surface of the water, the tail also serves as a "signal gun" which acts as a warning to friends or enemies.

cross bent toward the left."-Detroit

Weasel's Store

In a recent issue we mentioned a bird that provides stores for the winer. Weasels share this foresight.

When slicing a poplar at a sawmill it was found that no fewer than 44 mice had been carefully stocked, one above the other, in an ordered pile, with sand and mould between them, to form an airtight mound. These mice were in as fresh condition as if they had just been caught.

Two magpies had been placed on top of them, and a large collection of acorns filled the hollowed-out cavity to the entrance, which was just large enough for the weasel to slip inside .-London Tit-Bits.

Coconut Propagation

Coconuts are propagated differently from almost any form of fruit or nuts. The coconut, as it forms in the outer hull, is buried in the ground, and the embryo gains nourishment first from the coconut milk, and as the growth of the plant advances the white meat which we eat becomes soft and spongy and also feeds the young plant. After a certain stage of development has been reached small roots reach out into the ground, and by the time they are sufficiently long and strong enough to feed the nourishment to the plant from the earth the original coconut has entirely disintegrated.

Milton and Music

Much depends upon when and where you read a book. In the five or six impatient minutes before the dinner is quite ready, who would think of taking up the "Faerie Queene" for a stop gap, or a volume of Bishop Andrew's sermons?

Milton almost requires a solemn service of music to be played before you enter upon him. But he brings his music, to which who listens had need bring docile thoughts, and purged ears.-Lamb, in "Detached Thoughts."

Galileo's Discovery

It is recorded that Galileo was one evening in the cathedral of Pisa. The swinging of a high chandelier caught his attention, and he watched it closely as its distance of travel diminished. Suddenly he observed a significant fact -no matter how wide the arc described by the chandelier, the time consumed in one complete oscillation was always the same. From this observation came the construction of a clock, the forerunner of the modern pendulum timepieces.

Alarming Moment

Eight-year-old Barbara had spent a happy afternoon on the shores of Lake Wawasee, gathering live mussels, hitherto unknown to her. She took them up to her room, and evidently the night light that was left burning when she went to bed stimulated the captives to action, for her mother heard her calling in great alarm: "O, mother, come here! Those shells opened their mouths at me!"-Indianapolis

Finding Key of Music

Every key signature stands for two keys, a major and its relative minor. This is determined by the chords, and if in a minor key the accidental must appear to define the leading note. The last note in the bass is almost always the key note.

Mrs. Mary Garner, who suffered a stroke of paralysis several months ago, and had since been confined to her room, was taken to the home of her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Keefer, at Waynesboro, Pa., last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd, son and Marshal Founk, of Baltimore, spent the week-end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Boyd, near town. Mr. and Mrs. George Humbert, daughter Madalyn and Miss Ada Cusick, Littlestown, spent Sunday at the same place.

A delegation of men, 42 in number, members of the Taneytown Lutheran Church, attended a rally of Men's Bible Classes, at Hanover, Pa., last Sunday, in St. Matthew's Church. The main address was Dr. Leon C. Prince, Professor of History, Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.

Thursday, Nov. 28, designated by the President of the United States and the Governors of the several states as Thanksgiving Day the rural carriers will not go over their routes: the postoffice will only be open for the regular dispatch of mails; no window service during the day.--Harry L. Feeser, Postmaster.

Mrs. William H. Yingling and son, William B., of Westminster, and Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Haines, son, Glenn and daughter, Naomi, near Frizellburg, were entertained at dinner, on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Yingling. The former remained for a few days with friends in Taneytown certainly needs a well qualified Justice of the Peace and collector of claims. From the time of "Squire" Haugh, in about 1860-or perhaps before that-down until the death of John E. Davidson. Taneytown always had a J. P., and there was usually one at Harney. Apparently, men qualified for the office are not anxious for it.

Last Thursday night a surprise reception was tendered the pastor of the U. B. Church and family, at the parsonage, by members of the charge. A short program was given and an enjoyable evening spent. Everyone brought a contribution toward the eats and the table was loaded down with good things, which were enjoyed by all. About forty persons were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shanebrook and son, Lake, near Littlestown, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Stover, near town.

Mrs. Clarence Shank, near town, is very ill with pneumonia. A nurse has been secured from the Lutheran Deaconess' Home, Baltimore.

Miss Marie Little and Miss Catherine McDermit, of St. Joseph's Academy, Emmitsburg, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. David

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hiltgardner and daughters, Thelma and June, of Baltimore; Mrs. Alma Newcomer, Miss Catherine and Mildred Stull, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Grier Keilholtz.

Monday's Baltimore Sun contained a picture of the new St. Paul's M. P. Church, at Cambridge, and also one of its pastor, Rev. Thos. C. Mulligan. Mrs. Mulligan will be remembered in Taneytown as Miss Nellie Royer, of Westminster, a popular teacher in Taneytown school.

The concrete and steel bridge over the P. R. R. on Mill Road is practically completed, and the workmen left today (Friday). The cost of the bridge without approaches is about $6000. It has a 24-ft. driveway, a separate raised walk of 4-ft., or a width over all of 30-ft., and is 50-ft. long. The construction is the most fair? substantial in every respect. The approaches will be finished by the town authorities, but are not likely to be fully finished this year, unless the weather is very favorable, partly owing to the work on hand at the pumping station.

NEARLY KILLED BY GAS -DRUGGIST SAVES HER

"Gas on my stomach was so bad it nearly killed me. My druggist told me about Adlerika. The gas is gone now and I feel fine."—Mrs. A. Ademek.

Simple glycerin, buckthorn, saline, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, helps GAS on stomach in 10 minutes! Most remedies act on lower bowel only, but Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing poisonous waste you never knew was there. Rewaste you never knew was there. It lieves constipation in 2 hours. It will surprise you. Robt. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.
