TWO MORE DIGEST'S POLLS

Of Very Little Value, Considering the Unknown Facts.

The outstanding changes in The Literary Digest's 8th. poll on prohi-bition, as compared with the 7th. poll, are, that Kansas and Arkansas have been joined by North Carolina, Oklahoma and Tennessee, in a clear majority for Enforcement, over Mod-ification and Repeal; and that the total for Enforcement has forged ahead of that for Modification. Eighteen states have cast more votes for Enforcement than for Repeal. The the total for Repeal is 1,669,579, or 810,859 short of a clear majority. It would be interesting to know just how the Digest picks the voters for the poll? It published, last week, a separate poll of Digest subscrib-ers, totaling 570,656, divided as fol-lows; Enforcement 224,921; Modifica-tion 110,465; Repeal 235,270. It also published totals received from Bankers, Clergymen, Educators, Lawyers and Physicians, which in-cluded with the Digest subscribers, makes 987,421 votes. As the grand total from all sources is now 4,150,-017, this number includes 3,162,596 votes not included in the above named sources. sources.

The 9th. poll, published this week, gives the following totals; For En-forcement 1,386.216; for Modification 1,340,441; for Repeal 1,836,104. So far as pluralities are concerned, the poll shows twenty-one states for En-forcement, two for Modification, and twenty-five for Repeal. The poll of next week will close the feature, which, so far as showing active majority sentiment is concerned, is only a "feature."

DIGEST'S POLL QUESTIONED.

According to the Baltimore Sunday Sun, the Protestant ministers of Washington have raised the question of the correctness of the Digest's poll in that city. The poll showed 234 ministers out of 314 counted in the District of Columbia as favoring Repeal; 38 for Modification and only 42 for Enforcement.

The ministers thereupon arranged a count of their own which showed that out of 198 ministers counted 188 were for Enforcement, 8 for Modification and 2 not expressing an opin-ion. Of the 198 enumerated in the recount, 109 said they voted for En-forcement in the Digest's poll, or more than twice as many as the Di-gest listed for the whole District. the belief that one is none the less a Christian if he takes into account some of the thought of our nineteen centuries of the age of the world. We are no longer living in tents in the wilderness, nor wearing the garb of the Holy Land, nor getting our wisdom concerning our conduct or mode of life from the few preachers of olden times.

But, we are nonetheless living good lives and accomplishing good deeds in newer ways. Indeed, the few who attempt to hold fast solely to primitive customs, so far as the church is ficient demand for about all the work concerned, do not hold to them at all in any other way—and a man lives the most of his life going about among men, preaching as he goes. So, why should we not have churches for those who hold strongly toward baptism by immersion? For those who consider other forms of baptism sufficient? For those who enjoy the enrichments of ritual? For those who like the emotional? For those who prefer one plan of church government and those who prefer another-when all are equally conscientious in their beliefs?

So, we say, let churches combine. when it is a matter of conserving strength and perfecting a more aggressive denomination of peoples holding to harmonious views. But let there always be enough differing denominations to bring about-competition, if you please, to the end that the work of the great Master of us all be the most effectually and earnestly carried on I.et us have unity, in essentials; but liberty in non-essentials.

Caligula's Galleys

The galleys of Caligula which were restored are specimens of naval antiquity nearly one thousand nine hundred years old. Aside from the value of the galleys themselves there were objects of art and other valuable material in them. During the process of bringing these to the surface and lowering the level of the lake, an opportunity was afforded for exploring the submerged banks, which was of great archeological interest because of the magnificent Roman villas that formerly lined them.

Order Not Rescinded

Drury Lane, the great home of pantomime, used to enjoy a unique distinction among London theaters. For over a century and a half soldiers were placed on guard outside the doors during every performance. Many thought the guard constituted a recognition of old Drury's status as a Theater Royal, but actually it was set there to prevent a threatened riot one night when George II was to be present. The order not being countermanded, the guard was continued until 1894!

Famous Waltz

"The Blue Danube" waltz of Johann Strauss was first played at the Rianisalle, Vienna, on February 13, 1867. In the same season it was given at the Paris exposition, with Strauss conducting. In that autumn it was heard in London at the Covent Garden promenade concerts. At Vienna and Paris it was given in its original form, for orchestra and chorus, but in London, after some three weeks' rehearsal. Strauss decided to dispense with the chorus, so that it was performed by orchestra only.

Early American Volcano

North Carolina once prided itself on having a first-class volcano in its midst. It was Bald mountain. Things were pretty bad with Bald mountain in those days. It was acting up in the spring of 1874.

"The mutterings of Bald mountain," the paper reported on April 17, 1874, "were heard distinctly at Long's Mills, Person county, a distance of over 200 miles, on Tuesday last."-Raleigh Technological Education

The beginning of technological education may be traced back to ancient times, as is evidenced by the construction of the pyramids of Egypt, the aqueducts, military roads and fortifications of the ancient Romans. During the Middle ages there was a general lack of interest in learning of all kinds. It was principally conducted by the monks and similar religious organizations, whose interest was more in the arts than in the sciences. Technological schools were founded in the Eighteenth century. In the United States the work of Dr. Jacob Bigelow did much to further interest in technological studies. He published his "Elements in Technology" in 1829.

Valuable Outlet

In the critical years of adolescence, when the emotional nature of the young person is in evidence, music is the most valuable outlet for the surplusage of emotion-a veritable safety valve, in fact; not alone the mere passive hearing of music, but more than this, the serious study of music in its executive sense, will do more to hold to the track a youngster tingling with the higglety-pigglety emotion of that period than anything else. Parents who neglect the musical education of their children are ignoring one of the most valuable factors in character advancement.-Exchange.

Venetian Canals

Venice is built upon islands, which served as refuge for inhabitants of neighboring cities during attacks by barbarians. Its strategic advantage was so great that many fugitives remained, and the lagoons which separated the islands were the natural streets. These islands were formed from the silt and debris brought down by rivers, and the soil is an oozy mud that makes building difficult. Roadbeds would be extremely difficult to make, while canals are, obviously, easy to construct and maintain.

Death-Dealing Habits

The handshake, universal gesture of friendship, is the distributor of disease and death. It has been definitely established that typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diptheria and cholera are among the diseases which may be carried through the handshake. Experiments have shown that the seventh person removed from the original germ bearer may be infected. The danger would be greatly lessened were it not for the common habit of putting the fingers in the mouth. A group of 40 students and teachers in a library were observed during a period of a half hour. Only one person failed to carry his hand to his mouth. Thirteen members of the group were seen to moisten their fingers before turning the leaves of their books, a particularly dangerous habit.

TURKEYS RAISED IN CONFINEMENT

Better Results Secured Than Where Poults Are Free.

In times past many people felt that turkeys could not be raised in confinement but that they should have a large area over which to range. This contention has changed now, however, and in several localities turk ays have been raised in confinement with a great deal of success.

The Minnesota and Nebraska experiment stations have been among equipped with both generator and batthe leaders in investigational work in turkey production, in recent years, with some such work being done at other experiment stations in various parts of the country. At both of the stations mentioned it was found that better results could be secured if the poults were raised in confinement than if they were allowed to range over a large area, the method once followed in turkey production. In view of these findings, those who wish to go into turkey production, either on a small or large scale, are no doubt interested in the practices to be adhered to in this method of turkey raising.

The United States Department of Agriculture has found that turkey production has declined consistently since 1890, in the face of an increase | atable, and its foraging habits give it | ly reduced and voice transmission in the production of all other lines of poultry and live stock. This decrease in production cannot be attributed to a decrease in demand, for the demand has always exceeded the production, or at least, there has never been a surplus of turkeys on the market with which to contend.

This decline in turkey production can be explained almost altogether by the fact that farmers have always felt that turkeys should have unlimited range. Because of following this method of production the turkeys came in contact with the chicken yards, to the detriment of the turkey business. The disease problem among turkeys which come in contact with chickens is great enough that it has tended to cut down on production among farmers and farmers' wives who have, in the past, raised turkeys and chickens together on the same range.

In the Nebraska investigations it was found that the old method of raising the turkeys on the open range with natural hatching and brooding of mash. The pullets will continue by turkey hens was not successful. On the other hand, artificial brooding and hatching, by means of which feed and environment could be kept under the control of the producer, to be discouraged. was found to yield very good results.

Electric Brooders Are

Clean and Convenient The New York experiment station found electric brooders very satisfactory except in extremely cold weather, when this type of heat did not warm up the space in the house away from the brooder. Like electric incubators, brooders heated by electricity are clean, easy to regulate and very convenient.

Individual farm light plants extend the advantages of this electrical equipment to farms which are not located on an electric "high line." Because many farm plants are tery power, the supply of current for the incubator or brooder is constant and reliable.

Aylesbury Duck Meets

popular market duck in America. Its legs are set far back, giving an upght carriage.

While the Indian Runner is not a popular market duck on account of its small size, its flesh is tender and pala game quality that will make it in demand with epicures.

Watch Young Birds

Watch young and delicate birds very closely as they are most susceptible to the deadly roup germs. The same is true of fowls suffering from common cold or catarrh. The throat and nasal passages, being already sore and inflamed, are easily infected. Sick birds should always be isolated. They can be much more effectively treated when away from the flock and they cannot contaminate the healthier ones if the disease should prove to be contagious.

Don't Hurry Pullets

It is best not to hurry the pullets into heavy production. Allow them to come into production normally without feeding highly stimulating feeds. Fewer "blow outs" will occur when production is not forced on the start. Feed two parts of grain to one part to gain in weight and still receive enough protein to encourage the egg organs to function without interfering with growth. Any change in feed is

Telephones increase; Complaints Decrease

Increasing the number of tele phones and at the same time de creasing the number of troubles on telephones and making other improvements in the service were among the accomplishments of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies last year.

Telephones operated by these companies in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Colum bia have been increased more than 32,000 in the past year, and there are now about 629,800 in service.

Last year a subscriber's line of telephone equipment was in trouble on an average of only once in 23.7 months as compared to 21.3 months previously reported.

Reports show that telephone calls made in the territory of the Chesa peake and Potomac Telephone Com panies last year which failed of com pletion on the first attempt, due largely to busy reports and don't answers, were reduced by 2.8 per cent over the previous year. This resulted in greater satisfaction to telephone users on about 4,750,001 calls. The word "Scandinavian" is of Latin adaptation and its etymology is not certain. In a strict sense it relates only to the Scandinavian peninsula and its people, Norwegians and Swedes. The Swedish elements in Finland are also generally included.

Discoveries Put Roman Art on Higher Plane

But archeological discoveries in Italy and the Roman dominion within the last two or three decades, and the scientific comparison of Roman art with Greek and other art, and the consequent evaluation of its merits, have put Rome on a rather high plane of artistic production.

No longer is it to be believed that there was no Roman art before the time of the empire; from the fourth to the second centuries before Christ there was a large and meritorious amount of work done, both in painting and in sculpture. A fairly large piece of wall painting was found in a tomb on the Esquiline hill in Rome. It dates from the end of the fourth century B. C., and represents a group of Roman generals holding a conference. The draughtsmanship is spirited and the massing of the figures in the background is technically superb. It happens also to be the earliest-to date-example in Rome of a superposed frieze decoration. The idea may well have been derived from Ionian models, but the departures in technique are so important and so Roman that the style was believed to be native and it became the pattern which was developed into the Roman tri-

DREAMS OF WEALTH; DIES IN POVERTY

Inventor of Baby Carriage Suffers Sad Fate.

Chicago.—Practically every one of us living today "rode into the world" in a baby carriage.

It was our start in life; from its soft cushions we were given our first glimpse of the world and only the strangest imagination would ever make one regard it as a carriage of tragedy.

It gave us comfort, rest and enjoyment through those care-free days before we took up our school books and began to prepare for the responsibilities of life. In fact, nothing but the most pleasant thoughts are connected with our baby carriage age when we stop to delve deep into our memory bonnets.

Yet in thumbing back the pages of history, we find tragedy, heartaches, misery, disillusionment, poverty and death connected with it.

Built First Carriage.

This odd, ironical side of the baby carriage is depicted at the American Furniture Mart in Chicago, where a history covering the progress from its invention to the present-day development with Illustrations and comparisons, is on display.

To one Charles Burton, the first real manufacturer of perambulators, it brought a sad death after he had cherished dreams of wealth and comfort. It caused his family heartaches and privations and made of them objects of charity and pity.

Burton was an English lithographic artist who came to the United States in 1846. Shortly after his arrival in New York a son was born. Lacking the money to provide a nursemaid, Burton's consideration of his wife and child created the idea of a carriage for the new arrival.

He built a light conveyance on three wheels of sufficient strength to hold a growing baby. It created so much attention in New York that Burton abandoned his artistic career and returned to England where he began to manufacture carriages for sale.

His fame spread throughout Europe. The duke of Leinster, Queen Victoria of England, queen of Spain, Isabella II, the pasha of Egypt and other members of European royal families accepted the baby carriage and Burton's wealth appeared assured.

Poverty and Death.

Unfortunately, however, he failed to make his patent specifications complete. Imitations of cheaper makes flooded the market and Burton's income was reduced to such an extent that soon he was facing extreme poverty

His financial worries brought on sickness and after a prolonged illness he died at St. Bartholomew's "hospital of the poure."

Burton's widow and children were left destitute but because of his accomplishments they were saved from want by the help of the Lady Mayoress, the Baroness de Rothschild and others.

After Burton's death, manufacturers opened plants in all parts of the world. Many changes have been made in the styles of carriages since that time and the latest models-pneumatic tires and four-wheel brakes-would, on comparison, hardly be connected with the crude conveyances of Burton's day.

Grecian Influence on

Almost as far back as the history of Rome extends Greek influences are to be traced in the development of Roman culture. The Roman people were conservative and slow to cultivate the artistic sense. Rome had little creative genius. In her whole history she did not produce an artist such as Phidias and Praxiteles. The nature of the Roman was unusually practical and idealized power, law and profit. The Romans never created a distinctive style of architecture such as the Greeks. They borrowed their architecture from the Etruscans and the Greeks. The literary life of Rome has a profound effect upon mankind-Cicero with his orations, political and educational treatises; Caesar with his commentaries on the Gallic war: Sallust with his history of Rome; the poets Lucretius and Catullus. These poets, however, do not compare with the Iliad and Odyssey of Homer, the Greek philosophers Plato and Aristotle, Socrates, Xenophon and the orators Lyais and Isocrates.

Significance of Linked

S's in Mayoralty Chain The golden chain made of linked S's has been used by London's chief magistrate for nearly 400 years. The existing chain was bequeathed to the mayoralty in 1545 by Sir John Aleyn, who had himself been lord mayor 20 years earlier, and was worn for the first time by Sir William Laxton in 1546. Sir John Aleyn's bequest took its curious form by reason of the popularity of the "S" design in Tudor times, when, together with the Tudor rose, it was the cognizance of the royal house. But long before that the "S" was a religious symbol, at a time when the universal plety caused every piece of jewelry to convey some heavenly significance. It is the initial letter of Sanctus, or holy, which starts the hymn, "Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus," chanted by the priest in celebrating mass. From this the "S" came to be regarded as an emblem of the Savior.

Brooklyn Eagle Magazine. Not since Jenny Lind had a singer so captivated her audience. To the end of their lives many of her admirers insisted that she was the last one entitled to be called "la diva."

Twenty-five years later, in 1884, Patti again sang at the academy. To her honor a banquet was planned by a number of prominent New York men, including Judge Daly, William Steinway and Nathan Stetson. Naturally the wives of these men were expected to be present, but they virtuously refused to sit at the table with Patti, who had been divorced from her first husband, the Marquis De Caux, and married to Nicolini, the Italian tenor. Extremely embarrassed, the gentlemen sent a committee to put the case to Mme. Patti as delicately as possible, and ask her if she would consent to be the guest of themselves only. Patti consented unhesitatingly, and she was the only woman present at a party of some seventy masculine admirers, in the ballroom of the Hotel Brunswick.

Curse on Contract Breakers

Cases of real-estate purchasers failing to complete the contract under which they bought property were rare in the days of ancient Egypt, Babylon or Assyria, because they dreaded the consequences promised in the contract to the purchaser who would break it. The curse of Ninib, king of heaven and earth; of Siru, the sun god, and of Gula and Adad were but few of the afflictions assured the one who wedged out of a deal. These things were written into the contract, so that there may be no mistaking the importance of the transaction.

Ground Hog Story

The idea that if the ground hog sees his shadow on February 2 there will be six weeks more of winter, is purely a superstition, but like many superstitions it has its origin in a general truth-in this case that a mild February is apt to be followed by change and a chilly spring. Primitive peoples of the temperate zones were more familiar with the habits of hibernating animals than with the calendar, and the premature return of these animals became with them a forecast of bad weather to come.

Ancient Road Builders

The ancient Romans were great road builders and were most active between the second and fourth centuries after Christ. These roads were universally straight and varied in width from eight to fifteen feet, going over hill and valley in spite of grades. Soldiers, slaves and criminals were employed in the construction of these highways, the durability of which is shown by the fact that, in some cases, they have sustained the traffic for 2,000 years without material injury. The Roman forum is said to have been the point of convergence of 24 roads, which, with branches, had a total length of 52,904 Roman miles. The Romans are said to have learned the art of road building from the Carthaginians.

wild deer and sheep in Glacier National park are being liberally patronized this winter, according to J. R. Eakin, superintendent. The heavy snow in the mountains has left others of the animal kingdom famished, for Ranger Lee, of the Two Medicine district, reports that three weasels, one mink and many Clark's crows, "camp robbers," bluejays, magpies and other birds regularly come to his cabin for food. A large number of elk are wintering on the feed ground nearby.

Ninety-four inches of snow fell during the month of December. Fifty-five big-horn sheep now are on the feed ground at Many Glacier, with new arrivals nearly every day. West of the Continental Divide, where deer are most plentiful, up to date only 240 deer have come into five feed yards.

Ducal Right to Biscuit

Not to Be Questioned

A certain duke who had apparently a bottomless purse could not balance his accounts, or rather his steward could not. What is the use of being a duke if one has to bother about money? He had spent only what was due to his position. He was not extravagant. Oh! dear, no. He had only what a duke should have. Still, it was thought advisable to send to London for the family man of business to overhaul the household accounts.

The family man of business went down to the castle from Lincoln's Inn Fields and, after a week's work, submitted his report to the duke. Lord Willoughby de Broke tells the story in his reminiscences, "The Passing Years."

"Begging your grace's pardon," said the family man of business, "I see your grace keeps both an Italian and a French pastry cook in your grace's still room. Is not such a duplication superfluous?"

"Hang it all," exclaimed the duke, "a fellow must have a biscuit!"

Forget About "Hard Luck" Hard luck is more of a superstition than a fact. We attribute our misfortunes and failures to everything but ourselves, when they are usually due to our own laziness, shiftlessness, carelessness, or lack of foresight .--Grit

Chinese Capital Loses

Noted "Thieves' Market" The famous "thieves' market" of China's ancient capital is formally abolished in a decree issued by Gen. Chang Yin-wu, mayor of Peiping. The decree also prohibits the fairs which have been held for centuries there at dawn and after nightfall. The decree quotes a Chinese classical writer as saying that the middle of the day is the time for people to buy and sell. The "thieves' market" has been one of the most picturesque features of Peiping life for generations. To an appointed place hundreds of dealers have brought every conceivable sort of object at six o'clock in the morning, or earlier, and Chinese and foreign residents in search of bargains have been the patrons. It has been popularly supposed that a large number of the articles displayed were stolen, which accounted for their surprising cheapness.

Colonial "First Night"

In 1750, writes Garland Smith in the Brooklyn Eagle Magazine, the Colonial Sons and Dames of New York city assisted at a thrilling event, the performance, in the Nassau theater, of the first complete, honest-to-goodness opera in the Colonies, as exactly as possible according to the best English specifications.

There had been scattered productions of old English ballad-operas in America before, but never anything as elaborate as this-never a bona fide opera, with complete stage settings, and a regular plot, and all the sophistication of London society.

Trace Old Superstition

to Historic Incident Quite a few common sayings, it has been found, come down from old English ballads, while some are founded on some historical incident. The most famous of the latter perhaps is the old Scottish superstition, "Bad luck to kill spiders."

Those who have read the various stories of Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, will recall the one where it is told of the Scottish baron who, awakening one morning disheartened over Father-Not a word. I haven't seen his attempts to conquer the English and gain the throne of Scotland, saw a spider trying to fasten its web across the rafters of the building. Twice the spider tried and failed and thereupon Bruce resolved that if its third attempt should be successful, he, too, would try again to defeat the English and gain the Scottish throne. Bruce, watching the spider, saw it steeling itself for a supreme effort, the spider sprang, and succeeded in fastening its web on the rafter, and, full of courage, Bruce arose to try once again, and like the spider, succeeded. Hence, the superstition, "Bad luck to kill a spider."

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE

(Temperance Lesson.) LESSON TEXT-Matthew 22:1-22,

34-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. The second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself (22:87-39)

PRIMARY TOPIC-Jesus Teaching in the Temple. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus in the Temple. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—How to Become a Good Citizen. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—Who Is a Good Citizen?

In the previous parable, the responsibilities of the subjects of the kingdom were set before us in the light of the obligation to render to the householder the fruits of his vineyard. In this one the emphasis is placed upon the privileges and blessings of the king. Christ's kingdom is infinitely more than a system of laws and regulations to be obeyed.

I. The Marriage Feast (vv. 1-14). The benefits of the kingdom are set forth under the figure of marriage. The highest ideal of love and friendship known to the world is expressed in marriage.

1. The king's invitation despised (vv. 1-7).

The previous parable showed the attitude of the Jewish people toward the king up to the crucifixion. This one carries us beyond the cross, even to the present age of the Gentiles. The marriage feast which the king made for his son and to which he invited guests, represents the gracious offer of God to give joy and blessing to His creatures. This feast has been made in honor of his son, and is an exceeding rich one. The repeated invitations show God's earnestness in seeking to bless men. They not only neglected it, but made light of it and hurried on to their worldly business. showing their disregard for the salvation of their souls. Some did violence to the messengers of the king. even killing them. Primarily, this is a picture of the attitude of the Jews from Christ's crucifixion to the destruction of Jerusalem, but it has its counterpart in the present day.

2. The king's invitation accepted (vv. 8-10).

When those first invited refused, the king sent his servants to others, for his table must be provided with guests. The Lord's table has been prepared at infinite cost.

3. The king inspecting the guests (vv. 11-14).

As a result of this inspection, one was found without a wedding garment. Failure, therefore, to conform to the regulation of the feast was an insult to the king. The wedding garment provided for each one invited to i's table is the righted

Hidden Money Is Clew

to Aged Farmer's Death Richelieu, Canada.-Theories that

Mark Ward, seventy-two-year-old farmer, found strangled and battered to death in his bedroom recently, was murdered for a considerable sum of money he kept in the house, or following a quarrel during a drinking party, have been advanced by the provincial police in charge of the case. The case is further complicated by the fact that a man and his wife, whose present whereabouts are unknown, were engaged by Ward as servants and were supposed to be living with him at the time of his death. Ward has been a widower living by himself in the same house for the last 20 years.

From his son and friends it was learned Ward was the manufacturer and sole agent for a patent medicine, from the sale of which he was believed to have derived substantial revenue. It is estimated that the old man was worth $10,000 to $15,000, although no one knew where he kept his money. Police advance the theory that the two persons living at his house found the cache and did away with the aged farmer for this money.

Early Recreation Grounds

The earliest form of a public preserve devoted to outdoor recreation in the territory of the present United States was a city park, Boston common, acquired in 1634. The next example of public action of this kind covered a field related to that at present usually held by state agenciesthe reservation to the people for "fishing and fowling" by an ordinance of the Massachusetts Bay colony in 1641 of "great ponds," water surfaces of ten acres or more. The first state park of larger size set apart primarily for recreation was one which is now a famous national park-Yosemite. Congress ceded the valley and a mile-wide border around it to California as a state park in 1865. It was later returned to federal control.

Symbolism of Swords

Recognized in Japan In the decoration of the Japanese sword can be studied the development of the customs, folklore and history of the country. The influence of important wars, of contacts with the outside world can be traced by its changing form, while heroes, gods, symbols and articles of daily use are pictured on its carefully designed fittings.

Until late in the Nineteenth century all samurai, or military men, were allowed to wear two swords, the wakizashi and the katana. The latter, which was the longer, was used in battle and was always removed by its owner on entering a private house, as a proof of trust in the host. The wakizashi was always worn indoors and had a grimmer role. Rather than be captured in battle, or publicly executed, the samural would draw it to perform the "happy dispatch" or hara-kiri .- New York Times.

School of Adversity

Rousseau's Alma Mater Several guests at a luncheon years ago, were in heated discussion over a painting that adorned the wall. Apparently none of them knew its meaning, although it represented a scene in the mythology of Greece. Bored by the conversation, one of them turned to a waiter and insolently demanded to know the picture's meaning. To his astonishment the waiter gave it immediately.

"In what school have you studied?" asked the guest.

"In many schools, sir," replied the waiter, "but the school in which I learned most was the school of adversity. Books only have been my friends."

Ten years later all France rang with the fame of the greatest writer of his age, Jean Jacques Rousseau.-Philadelphia Ledger.

Swallows Welcomed

Of all the feathered flock that swarm to Scotland's shores in spring or early summer none is more assured of a hearty welcome than the swallow. The the liveliest satisfaction. In many country districts the inhabitants believe that a wish expressed on first sighting, a bird is certain to be fulfilled, so long as the wish is silently expressed and not confided to anyone else. It is a common belief among village maidens also that if they breathe their longing for a constant lover when they see the swallow fond hope realized before the bird departs in the autumn.

Was Great Engineer

During the Civil war James Buchanan Eads constructed iron-clad steamers and mortar boats for the United States government. He constructed the great steel-arch bridge across the Mississippi at St. Louis during the years 1867 to 1874. However, the work upon which his reputation principally rests was his deepening and fixing the channel at the mouths of the Mississippi by means of jetties, whereby the narrowed stream was Proverb Has Many Forms "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" comes from a collection of Scottish sayings found in John Ray's "Compleat Collection of English Proverbs," a book which appeared first in 1670 and which went through several editions. The original phrase, as found in Ray, is, "Better a fowl in hand nor two flying." In another form it appears in a collection by John Heywood (1546) as follows: "Better one bird in hand than ten in the wood." And there are many other early variations, one, at least, from two from the Spanish .- Exchange.

Criticism of Feminine

Dress a Generation Ago "Dress," said a health article in a woman's magazine of 1901, "is a stumbling block in the way of a first sight of it is always hailed with healthy existence for the society woman. My lady must assist by long hours of standing to be fitted. The weight of the dress often drags one down so that only the strongest can carry about the heavy materials.

"The low bodices which have become more common are a greater menace to health than almost anything. Women who wear low-necked gowns in the evening should not wear heavy, for the first time they will have their high-necked undergarments, for the contrast between their protection in the day and that of the evening is very great and they more readily take cold. The neck and shoulders should be bathed freely with cold water and with alcohol and water. . . .

"The hips should not measure over twelve inches more than the waist or five inches more than the chest without corsets. The chest expansion of the society woman will probably be one inch; it should be nearly three."-Brenda Ueland in the Saturday Evening Post.

When Lord Kitchener

Overplayed His Hand Stories about Lord Kitchener are always cropping up. Here is one which seems to be new. The civic dignitaries of a certain town wanted to make him a presentation, and decided the best thing they could give him would be a piece of china. Being aware of Kitchener's expert knowledge of china, the donors were anxlous to make sure of his approval, so they put it on the table at a lunch he attended. It was a fine and rare piece, and as soon as the great man sat down he cocked an appraising eye upon it, and at once decided he must secure it for his own collection, and secure it cheap. So he observed in his gruffest voice that the piece was not genuine . at which the dignitaries, very much depresend, took it back to the dealers! The story is told the Hebrew, two from the French, and by Mr. Compton Mackenzie in "Gallipoli Memories "

Husbands Do the Cooking

Husbands are the cooks and wives the fishers and hunters in Borotse, a province of northern Africa. Although there is a well-organized modern government, the natives still observe some curious customs. It is no unusual sight to see a woman wandering in a stream and carrying a big fish basket. When she returns home, the husband does the cooking. Then the wife sits down alone to dine, because, owing to his superior strength, a man might be tempted to take the choicest pieces before the woman gets her share. Another unwritten law is that when triplets are born, two of the babies must be killed for good luck.

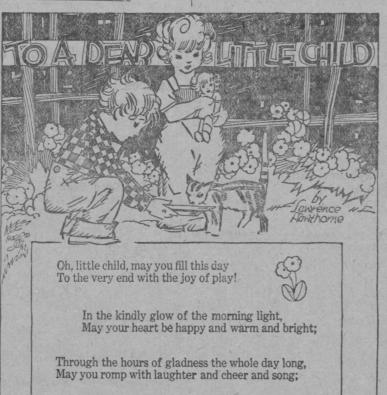

Noted Irish Patriot

James Napper Tandy was an Irish agitator, who lived from 1740 to 1803. In 1798 he went to Paris and was put in command of a vessel for an invasion of Ireland. He remained on Irish soil, however, for only eight hours and then went to Norway and to Hamburg. At the latter place he was seized and delivered to the English and upon his return to Ireland condemned to death. Bonaparte, however, brought pressure to bear in his favor and he was released. He then went to France, where he lived until his death. He was the hero of the famous ballad "The Wearing of the Green."

made to scour out its channel and clear sediment out to sea. Shortly before his death he projected a scheme for a ship railway across the isthmus of Tehauntepec in lieu of an isthumian canal.

of Christ.

II. The Wonderful Wisdom of the King (vv. 15-22, 34-40).

That which called forth this wisdom was the effort of the leaders to entrap Jesus.

The tribute money (vv. 15-22). 1. The Herodians sought to test His loyalty to the Roman government; therefore, they came to him with the subtle question, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?" For Christ to have answered "Yes" would have conveyed the impression of endorsement of the Roman government. and "No" would have brought him into conflict with the government. Christ's reply to this question is the final word on the Christian's relationship to civil government.

2. Concerning the resurrection (vv. 23-33).

The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection. To entrap Him they placed before Him a hypothetical case of a woman who had had seven husbands-as to whose wife she would be in the resurrection. The Scriptures make it clear that marriage is only for this life; that in the resurrection human beings will be as angels of God.

3. The great commandment in the law (vv. 34-40).

(1) The first commandment (vv. 34-38). "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." Supreme and undivided love to God is the first and great commandment. (2) The second commandment (vv. 39, 40). This is like the first, in that it centers in love. The measure of love to my neighbor is my self-love.

4. The question put by Christ (vv. 41-46).

The mystery of Christ being the son of David and at the same time being David's Lord put to silence all those who had sought to embarrass Him.

One Feathered Species

That Knows No Infancy The mound builders, a family of birds inhabiting Australia and certain South sea islands are unique in that the young are hatched fully feathered and able to fly and live an independent life from the moment they emerge from the eggs. These birds are called megapodes because of their large feet. Most species lay their eggs in large mounds constructed of loose soil, leaves, grass, twigs, etc. Not infrequently the mounds are 10 or 12 feet in height and contain several wagonloads of material. After the eggs are deposited they are left to hatch out by the heat of the decaying vegetable matter. The brush turkeys are the most common of the mound builders. One species of megapodes, found in the Philippines and on other islands, lays its eggs in the sand on the seashore and leaves them to be hatched by the heat of the sun.-Pathfinder Magazine.
