BRIDGE NEAR FREDERICK.

Three Men Killed and Eight are Severely Injured.

The iron bridge over the Monocacy at Frederick Junction, on the George-town pike, collapsed on Thursday afternoon, when three men were instantly killed and eight were seriously injured. The accident occurred while the bridge was undergoing repairs.

A stone truck had just entered it when the bridge broke loose from its moorings and plunged down into the swollen stream it is believed that the vibrations caused by the truck, already weakened by the repairs, caused it to break loose. All of the men were thrown into the water, those killed being caught by the iron frame

The accident occurred at 2 P M. The men were working for T. A. Ward, Baltimore, contractor, who has been engaged for two weeks in re-pairing the bridge. New flooring had been laid at the west side and the men had transferred their work to the east. They had left the new floor and were on the side of the bridge with their welding tools. As the truck, belonging to the M. J. Grove Lime Company, of Lime Kiln, entered from the south and reached the middle of the bridge the north end collapsed.

The bridge was built in 1889, and has served traffic for many years on one of the most used highways in the It is four miles southeast of Frederick, on the shortest and most traveled route between Washington

THE RURAL WOMEN'S SHORT COURSE.

About 1000 women are in attendance at the University of Maryland, College Park, this week, taking in the Rural Women's Short Course. On Thursday five were given the honors and insignia of Master Farm Homemaker: Mrs. Charles T. Kemp, Carroll county; Mrs. Henry L. Davis, Frederick county; Mrs. Wilbur Mor-ris, Kent county; Mrs. Jane E. Darby, Kemp, Montgomery county; and Mrs. Ella G. Rees, Kent county. The five were honored because of their outstanding prominence in their respective com-munities as mothers, wives and lead-

HEAVY RAIN AND STORM.

A heavy rain, accompanied by hail, and in some vicinities by storm, swept over the northern portion of this county, on Wednesday evening about 6 o'clock. The visitation appears to have been very limited in scope, and displayed cyclonic symptoms, the damage done being in widely separated neighborhoods.

The Oak Grove School house, several miles east of town, was wrecked. The roof on Howard Hyser's barn, where he lives, was completely blown off on one side. Trees were uprooted and fences blown down.

At Harvey Shorb's along the Keys-

ville road, a grain shed was blown down; farther on near Keysville, damage is reported to the farm buildings owned by Mrs. Emma Devilbiss. Hail also damaged the corn; but in this section, too, the scope of the damage

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

The Fresh Air Children are coming again this year. Mrs. Harry Ditman is County chairman. The children are sent by the New York Herald Tribune and the money to finance this movement is donated by wealthy New Yorkers. 400,000 children in the tenements of New York never see the country, unless some agency helps out. All states within a day's journey of New York City take these little waifs and give them two weeks of country air and fare.

Thirty-four children were cared for in Carroll county last year and some people who had these little visitors are entertaining the same children this year. All persons who feel they can open their hearts and homes to one or two of these little ones for two weeks will have all details given them by communicating with Mrt. Harry Ditman, Weitminster, or by their own local chairman. The names of these chairmen and the date of arrival of the children will be announced in the near future.

ATTORNEY WEANT ILL.

Attorney Edward O. Weant, of Westminster, is critically ill at his home, apparently from some affection of the brain. He was in Baltimore with his wife, on Tuesday afternoon of last week, and after arriving home ate supper, expecting to meet an engagement at Union Bridge, but was suddenly taken ill, and has since then been in a very precarious condition.

"Old Grouch," in the Baltimore Observer, says there are three-way politicians—"wet, dry, and modified."

INTERSECTION "STOP" LAW.

Differences of Opinion as to Con-structing the Law.

The difference of construction between city magistrates and state po-lice, with regard to minor traffic laws, was brought to a wider breach Thursday, when Justice Guy K. Motter ruled in People's Court that in his opinion the State law requiring motor vehicles to stop at boulevard inter-sections did not intend that all vehicles should be required to come to an absolute halt on entering such a widely-used highway as the Buckeystown road, at a place where the view was unobstructed, provided no hazard was undergone.

In stating this view, Justice Motter added that it was also the view of the two other magistrates, Justice Bowers and Bennett, whom he had consulted on the matter.

"We have concluded," he said, "that when a car is operated carefully, and no one placed in jeopardy, arrest on such charges is not justified."

All of the magistrates have ex-

All of the magistrates have expressed themselves at different times with regard to the State's inflexible construction of the stop-sign laws. When the matter was once brought to test, however, Attorney-General Thomas H. Robinson ruled that the letter of the law should be observed, leaving the judges practically without discretion.

Sergt. M. E. Katz, commander of the State Police sub-station near Frederick, says such a ruling as that of Justice Motter is contrary to the state law and that violators will certainly be arrested. He added that section 209 of the general motor vehicle laws, acts of 1929, explicitly sets forth that the State Roads Commission "is authorized and directed to designate main or traveled highways by erecting at the entrance thereto from intersecting highways, signs notifying drivers of vehicles to come to a full stop before entering or crossing such designated highways and whenever any such signs have been so erected it shall be unlawful for the operator of any vehicle to fail to stop except when traffic at such marked intersection is controlled by traffic signals or officers." Sergt. Katz added that the provisions of the law are state-wide in their effect and that no city, county or municipal sub-dision "is authorized and directed to no city, county or municipal sub-di-vision of the state have the right to make or enforce by any local ordinance or regulation any any kind.—Frederick News.

TWO BOYS SERIOUSLY HURT.

Blayne Bixler, Littlestown, and Harry Hahn, Silver Run, Md., are patients in the Hanover General Hosoital suffering from injuries sustained when the roadster in which they were riding upset near Hanover, about 150 yards south of the Clearview school-house, Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

Hahn sustained a broken collarbone, severe lacerations and contu-sions about the face and arms and probably internal injuries. Bixler also sustained lacerations and contusions about the face and arms and may be injured internally. An X-ray examination of their injuries was made at the hospital.

Bixler and Hahn were the occu-pants of the car which for some unexplained reason overturned as they were approaching Hanover. The in-jured were removed to the hospital n the ambulance of Hanover Fire Company No. 1.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd reached lower New York City, Thursday at 10:40 A. M., from which spot he sailed twenty months ago to explore South Pole regions, in which undertaking he and his party were fully successful, as everybody knows.

The welcome he received was such as only New York can give—a welcome from air, land and sea. He came by his ship, City of New York, and was accompanied by veterans of the Bay of Whales, City of New York and the supply ship, Elanor Bolling. peen as optimistis as possible; unemployment decreasing, better business in sight, etc. And now from the Fed-Fall in the general average of prices, now at the lowest level in thirteen

This reduction is admittedly due largely to a loss in the purchasing power by customers, through unemployment, and in reduced wages. Just whether these price reductions refer to wholesale prices, or to the prices of retailers, is not definitely stated.

Considering all of the loose talk, one gets a good idea of how big the world is.

The tariff bill, that has been sev-

Democrats voting for it and twenty Republicans against. And so ended another of the old battles, as they have always ended before.

President Hoover at once announced that he would sign the bill, his main reason therefor being that a continued agitation of the bill, caused by a vote, would injure business. He made it clear that the bill was not to his liking, but that its advantages promised to outweigh its disadvantages, and that the new flexible provision promised to keep the tariff away from politics and lobbying for many years to come.

Just what the effect of the bill will be for farmers and business in gen-eral, nobody knows. In the Senate it had nearly as many adversaries as advocates; and during the long wrangle over it a number of mem-bers changed their views. It is not the kind of bill that President Hoover had in mind, when he tried to limit it mainly to agriculture; but the President does not make laws, and insistence on his own views is often resented by Congress as meddlesome interference.

More than ever, the making of a tariff bill has been accompanied by partisan politics; by conflicting business interests and by class division. It is said with equal positiveness that the bill will help agriculture and that it will injure it; that it is the best tariff bill ever passed, and that it is the worst; that the Republicans are responsible for it, though

IF NOT THE 18th. AMENDMENT -WHAT?

We do not know what the wets actually mean by it, but the leaders at least profess to be opposed to the "return of the saloon." This would seem to mean some sort of laws restricting the sale of liquors, which would surely be objectionable to many. "Law enforcement" then, as now, would be opposed. Would it be easier to enforce such laws than present laws?

If the wets do not want the saloon back again, why do they not say just what they do want? We think we know why. They could not agree. There are no doubt many who would like to keep intoxicants in their homes, and would be satisfied with that. Others may want nice restaurants at which they can drop in and take a glass of beer or wine, and this would satisfy them. But, so satisfying these two classes would not satisfy the big crowd, as such restrictive laws would soon demonstrate.

The Literary Digest's poll called forth over a million votes for "modification" but the L. D. failed to define "modification" leaving it to varying minds of the voters. Had the word been clearly defined, the vote in this column would have been small.

And, the wet propaganda as a with the biggest vote for "Repeal"just repeal, and nothing else outspoken, but we suspect that, in actuality "repeal" means a return of the saloon as the first preference, for a substitute for present laws.

Honest individual effort in the use of the best we have, the best we know how, is about the limit of any man's opportunities, whether he be a writer of editorials, or an actor in some other line.

LOST OPPORTUNITIES.

We are pretty unimpressionable, these days, as to the merits of opportunities within our reach, unless they are about as plain before us as piece of money ready to be picked up. The illustration is a good one, as "easy picking" is what we want, without much work or effort on our part. Even head work-investigation, careful study, a weighing of possibilities, is often too much effort for us.

We lose more than we know by not being receptive to good advice; to opportunities presented by the available services of good men who are willing to find the time to boost worthy projects, if the people of a town, or community, will co-operate. There is hardly anything quite so costly as the failure of public sentiment to utilize the power that each community possesses, but lets go to waste because neither encouraged,nor used when offered.

Men who can do things, and who have the vision to see the necessity for them, may easily be discouraged when not accorded assistance. Most persons do not care to worry over personally trying to bring about unappreciated benefits for others, but are entirely willing to lend co-operation-a co-operation rendered valuable because of intelligence and ex-

Pure ignorance, or a sort of jealousy, often prevents us from following leaders. We try to make leaders of ourselves in many things because we may have made a success in one certain line. By pinching economy we have made a little money, therefore we think our plan of stingy finance is the only plan to follow in all other ways. We forget that our own little plans succeed because we adopt methods that, while to our own liking, are not to the liking of others. We may have succeeded because of no competition-nobody cared.

In a wider and better sense, big things can be made a success only when we take into serious consideration the desires of others and the inwhole is based on the same dodge, terests of others, and the reaction to plans by the people. Because a man saved a few thousands of dollars does not mean that he is competent to transact business concerning business concerning others, by sticking to the plans he used.

Of the half-dozen reports which the committee has rendered to the Senate only one dealt with the lobbyists who obtain money under false pretenses. One Caraway report, concerned with the political campaign activities of Senator Grundy before he entered the Senate and with Pennsylvania politics and Governor Fisher, was outrageous in its accusations and insinuations. DAWES TO THE RESCUE?

Chicago is seeking a "man of iron will" to head its war against crime, and the leader it hopes to get is none other than General Dawes, who has just returned to America on leave from his post as Ambassador to England. He has denied any intention of resigning it, although gossip had Chicago. But rumors regarding his resignation have persisted, and civic leaders believe he would look with favor upon an appeal to lead a concerted drive to clean up vicious conditions in his home city. It is reported that such an appeal will be made this week, and will stress the point that the depredations of gangdom are jeopardizing plans for the city's World Fair in 1933, a project which he has been active in promoting.

Whether or not Mr. Dawes comes to Chicago's rescue in what has been termed the city's "direct hour of need," the drive to end gangdom's rule of machine-gun, bomb and blackjack, will not lack leadership. A council of war has now been called for under the guidance of the Association of Commerce, which represents 200,-000 bankers, business and professional men. Rewards now total $55,725 for the arrest and conviction of the gunman who killed Alfred Lingle. Mock Spirits in Daytime but Fear Them at Night Night has great terrors for the inhabitants of the island of Bali, in the Dutch East Indies, because of the great number of demons (butas) prowling about in the dark. To appease these evil spirits, the mother of each home places on the doorstep, or shrine, a plaited tray filled with fruit and rice, often with a small lamp to show the way. When the demons find what they want they are supposed not to molest the people of the home. If a man has to go about by night he always carries a lighted torch and sings to keep the spirits away, as they do not like either light or music.

In the daylight, however, the natives coming to harm. On feast days they dress up and imitate the demons, mocking them. But as soon as the shadows lengthen, the clothes are returned to the temple and those who have worn them pray a little longer than usual and offer a little more food than regularly to the spirits who may come to their doorsteps .- New York

Food "on the Hoof" Not What They Looked For

Three unemployed miners having emigrated to South Africa, and not being successful in obtaining employment, decided to journey up country, where, far away from civilization, they came across an explorers' depot, fairly well stocked with food.

After a few days, when the stores had become exhausted, and all three fed up, yet very hungry, one of their number decided to go in search of food, with the avowed determination to bring back something to eat even if it were a lion. He had not sear thed far when he encountered a lion, which was also in search of food.

The lion at once bounded toward the man, who turned and sped as rapidly as humanly possible toward the hut. On nearing the hut door, which was open, he stumbled and fell, too precipitately for the lion to recover, which bounded into the hut. When the man picked himself up, he quickly pulled the hut door to, and shouted to his mates inside: "Here you are! Skin that whilst I fetch another."-London Answers.

Full Skirt Uniform of United States Soldiers

A United States sergeant of marines presides over the island of Tutuila, where he is a veritable sultan and his army is made up of a group of natives who are regularly enlisted into the service. The uniform is strikingly different from that of any other unit of the American armed forces. The full uniform for state occasions consists of a turban of bright red muslin, a sash made of the same material and color as the turban, a lava lava or skirt of blue muslin, and a white cotton undershirt. The turban and the shirt are put on first, after which the lava lava, which is about 30 inches by 60 inches, is rolled around the body at the waist, turn after turn being wrapped on so that the bottom of the skirt is about 12 inches from the ground. After this is properly adjusted, the red sash, which is about eight feet long, is rolled into place. All this is spotlessly laundered and stiffly starched and must be put on care-

First Leavened Bread?

The discovery of the art of leavening bread is attributed to Egyptians. It needs no stretch of the imagination to suppose that some attendant mixed up a batter of wheat and water, as was the custom in ancient times, and instead of immediately proceeding to dry or bake out this material, had allowed it to stand overnight. The next morning the attendant was undoubtedly alarmed to note that the batter was actively fermenting, had increased in size, was full of bubbles, and had a different taste and aroma. However, probably acting under the impulse of trying to cover up his neglect, he went ahead and baked with the fermented batter. Since leavened dough produces a much more palatapicked him to be the next Mayor of ble bread, astonishment and delight must have greeted this discovery.

They contributed $42 which was sent to the ingenious petitioner.

Clemenceau's Irony

On the day the peace treaty was signed at Versailles, Lloyd George was sitting beside Clemenceau in the great Salle des Glaces, where the ceremony took place, when he said with eyes wandering round the magnificent room: "Didn't something very important happen here once before?"

Very dryly and without turning a hair the "Tiger" replied: "Yes, it was something rather im-

Subject of Famous Painting

Briefly, the explanation of the famous painting called "The Huguenot" is as follows: By order of the duc de Guise, issued before St. Bartholomew's day, "all good Catholics" were enjoined to wear a white scarf as a distinguishing badge. The young woman pleads with her lover as she strives to fasten the symbolic white scarf, The lover will die in the morning. As one writer suggests, the picture is reminiscent of the famous line. "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not honor more."

RAPID GROWTH IN RAISING TURKEYS

Fowls Utilize Areas of Otherwise Profitless Land.

The turkey industry has made a rapid growth in Idaho in recent years, says Pren Moore, extension poultry specialist with the University of Idaho college of agriculture. It has grown since 1922, when turkeys were rather insignificant in volume, until now it has become an important industry in point of volume. The bulk of the original stock was small and of poor quality. There was very little native stock at that time which was suitable for breeding purposes. There were a few breeders in the state who had been importing good breeding stock, but the general average was of inferior quality.

The increased volume soon attracted the large produce dealers, who began bidding for the business. Grades, conforming to those in general use throughout the country, were applied. Not until then did the growers realize the value of breeding to improve the quality of the stock. The few good local breeders were unable to supply the demand for better breeding stock. Breeding stock was imported on a large scale. Some of it was of high quality while much was inferior, but most of it was an improvement over the average of the native stock. Improvement was rapid, which developed a rapidly growing interest in turkey breeding as an enterprise.

Demand for better breeding stock led to a system of accreditation simflar to that attaining such success in the poultry industry. The popularity of this accreditation work in turkey raising, says Mr. Moore, is apparent from the growing demand for the

for Turkey Success Recent findings have shown that the organism which causes blackhead in turkeys lives in the soil. Consequently if turkeys are raised on contaminated soil they can hardly escape the disease. The danger will to a large extent be averted if a three-year rotation is followed.

Experimental findings have shown that the cecal worm found in chickens is a menace to the turkey. It is believed that if the young turkeys are affected with cecal worms the injury they do to the lining of the intestinal walls is sufficient to permit the entrance of blackhead organisms into the blood stream, thus infecting the bird with the incurable disease and the one most dreaded by turkey breeders. The remedy, therefore, is to keep the young turkeys on clean ground and entirely separate from

 Poultry Hints

To get best results, chicks of no breed should be hatched after the first

If due attention is not paid to the vitamines in the ration, disappointments are in store.

The late hatched chicks are subjected to many parasites and diseases which the earlier ones escape.

Oyster shell, limestone or other limebearing material help to supply hens with the calcium they need.

The summer egg production from the early maturing pullets is just as good as from the late maturing pullets. See that the house receives no moisture because of location, and make sure that lack of ventilation does not create moisture within.

Thorough examination of the interior of the poultry house for mites and bedbugs might reveal legions of these unwelcome guests. If they are present, paint the roosts, roost supports, and rear wall with pure carbolineum.

It is almost impossible to do a good job of culling if the farm flock has been improperly fed.

Most of the heavier breeds will give better results if hatched previous to April 1. The chicks not only grow better but the pullets will start laying earlier in the fall.

Experiments have proved that chickens can be kept in confinement throughout their lives, without restricting their growth or egg producCopper Mines of Chile Worked by the Aztecs?

What is now the world's largest known copper ore deposit was worked by the prehistoric Incas, judging by remains that have been found at and near the copper mines of Chuquicamata, Chile. Within the mine, primitive tools have been found from time to time, such as stone hammers and wooden shovels, as well as mummified remains of early Indian miners, one of which is now at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. The ruins of Pucaro, an ancient fortified city destroyed by the Spaniards during their first invasion of Chile, are 25 miles from Chuquicamata. Ancient graves belonging to this prehistoric city have yielded bowls and other utensils of copper as well as bead necklaces made from brochantite and atacamite, minerals characteristic of the Chuquicamata deposits.

The Incas, reputed as pre-Columbian, America's best miners and metal workers, conquered this part of Chile about 1443, it is reliably estimated, and the old mines may, therefore, have been worked at least ninety years before the discovery of America.-Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Dates From Middle Ages One of the quaintest and most interesting festivals of Europe is the Kermis, held each year in many Dutch towns. This fete is half religious and half commercial in its origin, and in the early Middle ages was held in the market place, which usually adjoined the church. The church gave its sanction to the feasting and rejoicing natural to the harvest days. The fete is usually held in September. The religious aspect has disappeared and the Kermis itself is no longer celebrated in some towns, but in others it remains. Freaks, drink- and ing bars, cake, shops, merry-go-rounds, play booths and all the fun of the fair go until long after midnight. After the First Twenty-five Thousand Miles

THE VALUE of sound design, good materials and careful craftsmanship is especially apparent in the new Ford after the first twenty-five thousand miles. Long, continuous service emphasizes its mechanical reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

As you drive the Ford through many months and years you will develop an increasing pride in its appearance and a growing respect for the substantial worth that has been built into it. From every standpoint-in everything that goes to make a good automobile-you will know that you have made a far-seeing, satisfactory purchase.

Wherever you go, you hear enthusiastic praise of the car and this significant, oft-repeated phrase-"I'm glad I bought a Ford."

A FORD owner in New York tells of a 13.000-mile trip across the United States and back in sixty days and says "the car was extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy." A grateful father tells how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield saved his wife and children from serious injury.

To test tires, a large company drove a new Ford day and night, for an average of 500 miles every twenty-four hours. It was still giving satisfactory service after 105,000 miles.

A Ford car that had fallen into Fernan Lake was submerged for twelve days before being raised. After a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed, it was driven back to Spokane under its own power.

Many police departments have written of the special advantages of the Ford in crowded traffic because of its alert speed, acceleration, and ease of control. An increasing number of fleet owners are also purchasing the Ford because their cost figures have given conclusive proof of its economy of operation and up-keep.

In addition to important triumphs in Germany, France and Italy, the Ford won six out of seven leading places in a contest in Finland, first and second in the Rafaela races in Argentina, first and second in the run from Copenhagen-to-Paris-to-Copenhagen, three gold medals in England, first ranking in the durability test over the tortuous Amancaes road in Peru, and first place in the 1930 reliability run conducted by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden.

This contest was an exceptionally severe test of endurance and sturdy construction because it was held in the dead of winter and covered 600 miles of steady running over snow-covered country roads and mountainous hills.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC.

Topic:—"How Jesus Made Leaders of His Disciples."
Mark 3:17; 5:18-30; 6:7; Acts 1:4, 8.

Written by—Earl E. Redding, pastor of Taneytown U. B. Charge.

While it is true to a certain extent that Jesus did make leaders, and great leaders at that, yet much depended on the willingness of them to be made leaders. First of all they had to be won over to the thought and ideals of the One who called them to be His

Anyone who has a following of peoole, must appeal in such a way that there shall spring from within them a desire to become a disciple. And so we interpret the ministry of Jesus in this light and must realize the importance of this work of training leaders. We sometimes place the Sacrifice of Calvary as of Greatest importance in Christ's Life. It should hold a high place. But before that sacrifice can become what it was intended to helping the needs of humanity, first Christ must call about Him those who would in faith believe in Him and His

So Christ had to cultivate and train His Disciples, that after He gave His life a ransom, they will faithfully tell the story of salvation. The efficiency of Jesus work making leaders of His Disciples is attested to by the place that Christianity commands in history, as well as in civilization today. Due to their work and leadership was the Church established.

the Church established.

"The training of the twelve" is a subject worthy of our thought and consideration, then a personal application to us. Notice these twelve men busy at their respective occupations. Rough and uncouth were they. But after they yielded to his call. He moulded and reshaped their lives for service in His Kingdom. And on their training the future Church and the training the future Church and the Kingdom depended. What magnitude of responsibility rested here? How important to equip them for their coming "Apostleship?"

And because ever since the responsibility of the Church has been handed down from generation to genera-tion, we realize that it is being grad-ually passed upon the youth of today. And it does matter how the youth of today shall become trained to take up this great work. Ours it is to tell with fresh meaning, the plan and program of Christianity. Someone says that all the world sees of Jesus these days, is seen in His followers. Upon us therefore is passed the great interests of the Kingdom of Christ.

Just as in the past Christ trained His disciples, so He calls and trains them today. Recall briefly what hap-pended in their training for leadership and the same is essential for us ikewise. First, answer His call 'Follow Me." Secondly train in the school of prayer and daily study. Thirdly wait on Him to give us that power, The Holy Spirit, and after that it is come upon you, "Ye shall be witnesses." Let us make this verse, in closing, our prayer:

'O Jesus, Lord and Master, I give myself to thee; For thou in thy atonement, Didst give thyself for me. I own no other Master,
My heart shall be thy throne
My life I give henceforth to live
O Christ for Thee alone."

Volcano-Made Charcoal Warms Alaska People

Kodiak, Alaska.-Charcoal forests left in the wake of the ash storm from the eruption of Mt. Katmai in 1912 yielded an excellent fuel for island residents this winter.

Whole forests were buried in red hot sand and ashes and the wood turned into charcoal. Trees one foot in diameter are completely charred through. Uncovered and broken into small pieces, it is found to be acceptable fuel.

English May Festivals

In England the May festival probably reached its highest development. How thoroughly recognized the custom became in that country is illustrated by the fact that in the reign of Henry VIII the heads of the corporation of London went out into the high grounds of Kent to gather the May with the king and his queen, Catherine of Aragon, coming from their palace of Greenwich and meeting these respected dignitaries on Shooter's hill.

Employ Flame Guns to Kill Locusts by Tons

Cairo.-The Egyptian government is meeting this year's locust menace by making war on these enemies of the country. Already nearly 300 tons of locusts have been killed by flame guns in the Sinai peninsula.

So far the attempts of the swarms to reach the fertile Nile valley have been fruitless. A big battle was fought at Kantara, where the slaughter amounted to eleven tons and another big swarm was overwhelmed, like Pharaoh's host, in the Red sea,

The danger now is that swarms have been breeding in the Sinai peninsula, and the young are likely to be hatched shortly.

U. S. Women Swindled of $700,000,000 in 1929 Chicago.-Activities of women financiers were outlined today at the Executive club by Howard E. Reed, a Pittsburgh financier. He stated:

"Eighty-five per cent of all salaries in the country are spent by women. Last year feminine financiers invested $700,000,000 in fraudulent securities. It is the fault of their husbands, brothers, sons and fathers, who do not take time to teach them sound finances.

"They further purchased on the installment plan depreciated luxuries of little value to them and cut down their savings by $150,000,000."

Terrier Escapes Cougar

After Both Fall in Sea Montreal.-While angling from the shore at Sooke, near Victoria, B. C., for the giant salmon, Mr. and Mrs. John Mackenzie, of that city, were startled when a large cougar suddenly sprang from an overhanging rock and landed with outstretched claws on their fox terrier. Mrs. Mackenzie fainted. Her husband saw both animals slip from the rounded bowlder into the sea, where the dog escaped from the cougar while both were under water. The cougar swam swiftly ashore, then bolted into the brush. The dog, although badly ripped, will recover.

DRIVE AGAINST DOPE PEDDLERS PLANNED

Justice Department Seeks to Halt Traffic.

Washington, D. C .- A more determined drive against dope peddlers and smugglers is planned by the Treasury department when the burden of prohibition enforcement has been shifted to the Justice department.

Administration of the Harrison anti-narcotic act is now lodged in a small enforcement bureau which is part of the prohibition bureau, but the Williamson bill, now before the senate, excludes it from the proposed shift of the dry unit. The treasury, therefore, will retain both narcotics and the industrial alcohol permissive

"With prohibition removed from our care and placed in the Justice department, a stepping up in the narcotic enforcement is being considered," Assistant Treasury Secretary Seymour Lowman said recently.

He made it plain, however, that any material increase in enforcement work is dependent on larger appropria-

More Funds Expected.

Congress is expected to grant more funds for narcotic enforcement activity coincident with passage of the Porter bill, now in the house, providing for a separate narcotic bureau within the treasury and co-operation from the public health service in limiting legitimate drug imports to the absolute medicinal minimum.

Lowman expressed the view that a constitutional amendment prohibiting the use, sale, manufacture or transportation of drugs, just as the Eighteenth amendment forbids intoxicating liquor, would be a desirable forward movement in suppressing the illicit narcotic traffic.

Seeks Broader Powers. "We are handicapped now," Lowman explained, "because under the Harrison act, a revenue law, we are without authority to make arrests excepting for violation of the tax laws. We should be given the same police powers for drugs that the government exercises in the case of liquor law of-

Cook Given $22,000 for Lost Sense of Taste

New York .- A Supreme court jury valued a cook's senses of taste and smell at $22,500 in awarding a verdict in that amount to Pauline Goodman, forty-three, against E. Gates Barnard. While Miss Goodman was driving with her sister and her sister's child in October, 1927, a car owned by Mr. Barnard ran into the Goodman car. Several specialists testified that as a result of the accident the cook, whose skull was fractured, had lost her taste and smell.

Plenty of Generals

Prague.—According to the news-paper "Vecerni List," Czechoslovakia, a country with less than 14,000,000 inhabitants, has twice as many generals in her army as did the Hapsburg monarchy, which until the end of the World war had a population of approximately 45,000,000, there being one general in Czechoslovakia for each 400 soldiers. Earthquake Irrigates

Field in California Brawley, Calif.-An earthquake frrigated a cantaloupe field here recently when a tremblor caused small geysers to spout five inches high over the 160 acre field owned by the S. A. Gerrard company.

The water irrigated the entire field and then flooded adjacent areas before subsiding. Small sand piles were left in the wake of the unusual inundation and a beet field nearby was completely covered by new sand.

"Their engagement is broken!" sighed the sympathetic girl. "I wonder whose fault it is?"

"His," answered Miss Cayenne. "He seemed very kind."

Study of the Wild

In a general way, animal ecology is a science which seeks to give some definite form to the vast number of observations which have been accumulated during the last few hundred years by field naturalists and various other people interested in wild animals. Ecology is now concerned with reducing and co-ordinating vast available information concerning habits, life histories and numbers of the different animals, with a view to solving some of the urgent practical problems arising as a result of man's becoming civilized and interfering with the animal and plant life around him.

Menu Puzzle

One of the crew of a big liner chanced to pick up a menu card, and, seeing at the top "Table d'hote," turned to his pal and inquired:

"What does this 'ere mean, Joe?" "Well," said Joe, "it's like this 'ere. Them swells in the salon have some soup, a bit of fish, a bit of this, a bit of that, and a bit of summat else, and call it 'table dottie.' We have 'table dottie,' only we mixes it all together and calls it Irish stew!"-London An-

Tiny Photograph

The smallest photograph in the world, so tiny as to be invisible to the naked eye, was recently on "exhibition" at the Royal Photographic society in London. In the center of a little piece of glass is a minute circle; in the middle of the circle is an infinitesimal speck, which is hidden to the naked eye. Under a microscope, however, one sees a photo of Niepce, one of the inventors of photography, taken by Professor Goldberg.

Treasure at Auction.

Billings, Mont.-Harold Berryman was half ashamed of himself when he bid up to $30 to obtain two barrels of "unsight and unseen" household articles sold from the auction block. But shame was soon replaced by pride and joy when he discovered the barrels contained coined silver plates and fragile china worth at least $500.

Hen Alive After 8

Months in Haymow East Killingsley, Conn.-Otis Chase, a farmer near here, digging into the lower strata of his haymow to get feed for his stock, recently dug up a hen from the bottom of a heap of hay where it had apparently lain alive for more than eight months, since the middle of the haying season last summer. Chase said that the fowl must have been buried when the hay wagons were emptied into the mow.

Chase and his neighbors believe the hen kept alive on hayseed, but where its drinking water came from is beyond con-

DANCING KEEPS OFF OLD AGE, DAME SAYS

Octogenarian Teaches Others Youthful Steps.

Mill Valley, Calif.-For more than three-quarters of a century Mme. Harriet Foreman Emrick has danceddanced the years away, danced old age

For more than half a century she has been teaching others to danceto dance and stay young.

still dancing every day, teaching others to dance, including her two great-grandchildren. She is still youthful, graceful as a wisp of rising smoke-and happy! Still Ambitious.

For the soldiers of America in three wars, the Civil, Spanish and World wars, Mme. Emrick has danced gratis. It is her one ambition now to dance once again, for the last time in public, before what remains of the Civil war veterans, for the Spanish-American veterans and for the American Legion, all together.

She is a sweet and gracious old lady, this octogenarian, who still teaches the dance to young and old in her Mill Valley studio. She has classes every day and is assisted by her daughter, who was known to the stage as "Clarissa, the Dancer," and by her granddaughter, known as "Georgine." Her two great-grandchildren, Harvey and Helen Jean, are her regular pupils. And lest it be thought that Mme. Emrick teaches only the graceful, stately movements of bygone generations, let it be emphasized that she can tap dance with the best of them Today, at eighty, Mme. Emrick is and toddle a wicked jazz number with any of the sheiks or shebas.

Born in 1850. "The dance is a part of the religion of the body," declares Mme. Emrick. "I call myself the priestess of that religion which I originated." Mme. Emrick has trained scores who have made a mark upon the stage and ballet. She was born in Fort Madison, Iowa, in 1850. She first began to teach the dance more than fifty years ago in Portland, Ore.

CREAT ATLANTIC & PACIFIC TEA

SHE HAD A CLAIM ON THOSE BONDS

(@ by D. J. Walsh.)

TT WAS the third time that Will had been called by long distance. Twice he had answered himself. This morning Fanny answered. She heard a pleasant masculine voice asking for her husband. Was he at home? Could he be got to the phone? Fanny replied no, he wasn't, to the first question, and no, he couldn't, to the second.

"What do you want of my husband?" she inquired. Silence. "I said, what do you want of Will Cooper?" She raised her voice. Silence again. After a moment's further wait, Fanny realized that the man had rung off.

Fanny was puzzled. They had had the phone two years and to her knowledge this was the first time they had ever received a long-distance call.

When Will came home to the midday meal, Fanny told him. Will started slightly.

"Was it the same party that called you twice before?" Fanny asked. Will cleared his throat. "I couldn't say, Fanny." But he seemed pleased and flattered.

"Why don't you eat your pie? Don't it suit you?" Fanny asked wistfully. Her apple pie was her pride. Will always praised it. Now he merely tasted it, pushed back his chair and rose from the table.

"Here! Come back here!" called Fanny. "The whistle won't blow for twenty minutes yet."

Will looked embarrassed. He sat down, picked up a newspaper and appeared to read. His thin face bore a high flush. His mild blue eyes were dilated with excitement. That mysterious long-distance call! Fanny was more curious than ever. But it was no use to quiz Will.

That had always been the way with Will. She herself was the frankest little woman. She had not a secret from the man she loved. Sometimes she wondered if Will didn't feel she wasn't smart enough to understand him. All the Cooper men felt themselves superior to their women folks. They never let their wives interfere with their private affairs.

"Maybe they'd have got ahead faster if they had," Fanny reflected with a shade of bitterness. "I know one time when if Will had listened to me he'd have been in a good bit of money. When he bought that lot. He's got the lot yet, and it's cost him more than it is worth twice over in taxes and improvements. I told him the town wasn't going to build up in that direction, and it hasn't. I hope all this long-distancing don't mean anything more of that kind."

Will came home that night in a gay mood. He asked Fanny to go to the "movies." You might have thought he'd had word he was going to receive a legacy or something like that.

Next morning as Fanny stood at the sink peeling potatoes for dinner, the doorbell rang. She opened the door and saw standing before her a large, bland, finely-dressed man. His background was a long and lustrous automobile.

"Does Mr. W. J. Cooper live here?" Fanny nodded. "Is he at home?" Fanny shook her head. "Where can I find him, Miss-"

"I am Mrs. Cooper." Fanny spoke crisply. "Are you the man that called up yesterday?"

"Mr. Cooper was called up from our office, I believe. Where did you say I could find him, Mrs. Cooper?" "Are you trying to sell him some-

"My business, madam, is with Mr. Cooper. My time is valuable. If you don't feel like telling me where he is I must inquire elsewhere."

Something landed at Fanny's feetthe morning newspaper, printed in the nearest city and delivered daily to almost every resident in Westmore. Absently Fanny stopped and picked up the news sheet. Compactly folded, the headlines presented but one word to her roving glance. But that word arrested her attention to a surprising degree. She scarcely noticed the fact that the big man had turned from her and was going down the steps toward Fanny glanced rapidly down the front page. That man! He would find Will. But before he found Will there was something she must do.

Fanny grabbed her coat and put it on right over her work apron. From a bureau drawer she got a small key on a red ribbon. Out of the house she went by the back door. She ran till she reached the main street. Here she crossed, regardless of the green light which set traffic in motion. The fender of a car flipped her skirt. Heedless, she dashed on, up the steps of the bank, into the building. A word to the clerk at the window and a door opened for her as by magic. She was at the entrance of the vault. She presented her key and was handed the long, narrow safety deposit box which held a sheaf of precious bonds, the savings of years. With trembling hands Fanny removed the papers and thrust them into the bosom of her dress. As she came out of the bank a huge lustrous car turned the corner. She darted into an alley. She watched her husband and the big man enter the of the Centaurs-men-horses.

bank together. Her heart beat like a drum in her ears as she crept out of her hiding place and tore homewards, clutching the treasure that lay against her bosom. Breathless, her forehead wet with the dew of emotion and haste, Fanny went upstairs into the spare bedroom and hid the bonds between the springs and mattress of her best bed.

"There!" she panted. "I don't know what'll come of it. But-there!"

She was once more standing at the sink peeling potatoes when a lustrous car tore into the street and stopped at her door. Will burst into the kitchen. Dangling from his finger was a small key on a red ribbon, his own key to the safety deposit box.

"Fanny!" Will's voice was harsh.

"Where'd you put my bonds?"
"Your bonds?" Fanny gave him a straight look. "Our bonds, you mean. I worked just as hard for them as you did, taking boarders and all. I'm just as particular what becomes of them; maybe more so."

"I want the bonds." "Not to hand out to that scalawag, Will. Have you seen the morning paper? It says-" Will took her by the shoulder.

Fanny faced him. "Never! I've put 'em where you can't find 'em. Take your hand away. You're hurting me. Shame on you! To believe a stranger before you would your own wife!" Will drew back. The angry red in his face gave way to pallor. A moment he stood, head down, irresolute. Then he turned and went out to the

"It's all off, McKettle," he said. "My wife won't stand for it." What Mr. McKettle said then was sufficiently revealing even to credulous Will. He fairly tore the fleece from his own wolfish structure. Astonished, aghast, Will shook his fist after the lustrous automobile as it drove away bearing the wreck of his dream with it.

Will went back to Fanny and found her crying, her head on the blue enamel sink. He knelt down beside her and put his arms around her. He made painful confession-how Mr. Mc-Kettle was going to change the bonds into gilt-edge securities that would bring in six times as much as the bonds were now earning.

"It looked like easy money to me," Will said. "But you did'right, Fanny. That's as plain to me as the nose on your face."

Appeal to Elephant's

Stomach Broke "Strike" How one man, with the aid of a bucket of ale and some tomatoes, broke a strike is recounted by the London Evening Standard. For three whole days Rosie, the circus elephant, had been on strike. She refused every hundredweight of her-to leave Skegness for Mexborough, where the rest of the circus was waiting for her. After vain attempts to induce her to board a train, Mahomet was telegraphed for. Mahomet, the trainer, is Rosie's best friend. When he got the wire at Mexborough, where he had been impatiently awaiting his little friend, he caught the first train back to Skegness.

Learning that Rosie had been treated to three gallons of ale daily by a local hotel proprietor, he ordered the entrance to her railway coach to be decorated with a bucket of ale, tomatoes and the choicest seven-course dinner an elephant could wish.

At midnight, when Skegness slept, Rosie was led down to the station in secret. Chains were thrown over her, and she had a retinue of attendants worthy of Delhi durbar. When she smelt the feast awaiting her in the coach she walked in without a murmur, dined, slept and was whisked away by the first train next morning. So ended the biggest laugh of the Skegness season.

Early Postmasters-General Samuel Osgood was the first postmaster-general, appointed by Washington in 1789, after the Constitution was adopted. The first postmaster-general in America, however, was Andrew Hamilton, appointed in Colonial days, in 1691. He was succeeded by his son, John Hamilton. Following him, there were four postmasters-general, then in 1753 the American colonies were divided into two postal districts, with a postmaster-general for each. Benjamin Franklin served as one of these from 1753 to 1774. In July, 1775, the Continental congress made Franklin again postmaster-general, and he served until the following year.

Engraving Ancient Art Engraving dates back to the ancients, but the first authentic engraving of which there is any record was that of St. Christopher, 1423. Baron de Reiffenberg claims to have found an earlier one, dated 1418, and a manuscript discovered in the middle of the Eighteenth century gives reason for believing that the art was known as early as 1306 in England, but there has been too much controversy concerning those prior to St. Christopher to accredit the earlier ones.

The Horse in History

Anittas, the first Hittite who took the title of "Great King" after he had conquered any number of other little kings, first brought the tamed and domesticated horse up to the doors of Europe, where the Greeks were already gathering. So Cortes astonished the Mexican Indians with his soldiers on horseback, and they thought man and horse one new monstrous animal. The Greeks, too, kept the legend

When Washington Sought

Mount Vernon Steward Excerpts from a letter from George Washington to Samuel Frauncis follows: "As no other person can judge better of the qualifications necessary to constitute a good housekeeper, or household steward, than yourself, for a family which has a good deal of company, and wishes to entertain them in plain, but genteel style, I take the liberty of asking you, if there is any such one within your reach whom you think could be induced to come to me on reasonable wages. I would rather have a man than a woman, but either will do, if they can be recommended for their honesty, sobriety and knowledge of their profession; which, in one word, is to relieve Mrs. Washington from the drudgery of ordering, and seeing the table properly covered, and things economically used. Nothing more, therefore, needs be said, to inform you of a character that would suit me, than what is already mentioned. The wages I now give to a man, who is about to leave me in order to get married (under which circumstances he would not suit me), is about $100 per annum, but if one who understands the business perfectly, and stands fair in all other respects, I would go as far as $125." Washington's diary indicates that he found it necessary to pay Richard Burnet £40 a year as steward. This was about $200.

New Hampshire Citizen

Surely Was Primitive "Primitive!" exclaimed the New Hampshire man. "Primitive! Say, there was a man in our town-died five years ago-that couldn't read nor write. He made up his mind his boys were going to have a schooling, though, and sent the fust one off one day, with an almanac. The boy came home and brought back the almanac, said the teacher told him he'd have to have a primer.

"The old man says 'You go back to that teacher and tell her that when she's learned ye all there is in this almanac, I'll buy ye a primer."

"He was primitive," allowed the vis-"Say, one time he went into the store here, and he says to the man: 'See here! I'm tired of buyin' an almanac every year. Can't ye sell me one of these leather-covered almanacs, one that'll last me.'

"Well, the storekeeper knew him and knew he couldn't read. So he sold him a leather-covered Testament. "'Thar,' Oliver says, 'thar ye be. That's the kind of almanac I've wanted a long time.' And he went off home satisfied."-Boston Globe.

Italian Bridegroom

Changes Mind at Altar

Rome, Italy.-A young couple, Giuseppe Barnaba and Teresa Marianni presented themselves before the civil marriage officer at the nearby summer resort of Nettuno to get married.

The marriage officer formulated the usual question to the bridegroom, "Are you willing to take Teresa Marianni as your lawful wife?"

To the great surprise of those present the bridegroom hesitated for a moment, then grew red in the face and stammered, "No."

The marriage officer, thinking the young man had misunderstood, repeated the question, whereupon Barnaba uttered three vehement "Nos" in succession, and dashed out of the office. The bride-to-be collapsed. The defaulting bridegroom has offered no explanation of his strange conduct.

Build Highway Around

Immense Buried Meteor Seattle, Wash.-Meteors, flashing

through space to the enjoyment of park bench lovers may be things of beauty, but on earth, in the middle of a proposed highway site, engineers decided they were nothing less than a nuisance.

Work on the new Tacoma highway progressed rapidly until crews came upon a huge boulder. They tried to dig it up, but at a depth of 14 feet with no end in sight, decided that it would be impossible. Dynamite would not jar the huge rock. The best drills would not dent it.

So the road was built to curve around the rock.

Highway engineers and geologists said they believed the rock was a meteor.

Ain't It th' Deuce?

The shipwrecked tourist had had terrible experiences on South Sea islands, so on this occasion he did not relish his fate. Faint with fatigue he dragged himself toward the distant voices. At last he caught a glimpse of the party-they were sitting in a circle on the sand and holding objects, unrecognizable at the distance, close to their noses.

"This is some hand!" snorted one. "Aw, rats!" came the raucous voice of another. "I only pulled a couple o' bones from that pot."

"Wot yuh grippin' for?" grated a third. "Yuh don't expect more'n a pair o' bones from a pair o' queens, do yuh!"

The tourist rolled over on the sand and just before he breathed his last he gasped: "Cannibals again!" - Pathfinder

Sundew Gets Nitrogen

From Captured Insects The sundew is a plant that takes its nitrogen any way it can get it. If the ground does not provide it, it reaches up into the air and helps itself through the medium of flies and other insects which are unfortunate enough to come in contact with its leaves.

The leaves are covered with tiny, hairlike processes, each of which is capped with a drop of honeylike substance that glistens in the sunlighthence the name, sundew.

Insects are lured and retained by this sticky substance, and while the victim struggles to free himself, other "honeydew" laden "hairs" bend over, clasp, completely envelop and soon smother it to death.

Certain juices are secreted by those hairs, which digest the prey so that it can be used by the plant. When the digestion is completed the ensnaring hairs bend back and permit the remains to be blown away.

The question in most people's minds at this point is: "Does the plant have voluntary control over these ensnaring hairs?" Some scientists credit the plant with a highly developed nervous system, but most believe the process is a mechanical one.

Plants bend toward the sun. One of the factors causing this movement is the loss of water from the cells on the exposed side, causing those cells to shrink and allowing the plant to bend in that direction. Possibly a chemical substance given off by the insect causes a shrinkage of the cells closest to the insect, thus making the hairs bend in that direction.

Condensed History of Mankind for Monarch The history of mankind was once told, according to a story credited to the Talmud, in but seven words. The Talmud tale recounts the wish of an ancient king for the history of mankind. He summoned his wise men to go out into the world and bring him the essence of knowledge as man knew it. They returned in ten years with twenty camels loaded with manuscripts. Aghast at such a tremendous amount of material he ordered them to bring him a briefer account and they went out and returned with one camel weighed down with volumes. Again, still unsatisfied, he sent them forth and they came back with but one book, a thick volume containing hundreds of pages.

"But I have no time to read this," the king rebuked them, "is there not one among you who can give me, in a few words, what I wish?"

"Sire," said an old sage, "there is but this: 'Man is born, he lives, he

IC-The Great Commission.

The Empty Sepulchre (vv. 1-7). The earthquake (vv. 1-4). This occurred when the glorious angel descended from heaven to roll the stone away from the tomb. This work of the angel was not to allow Jesus to escape, but to show that the tomb was empty. Christ needed not even the help of the angel, for He came forth from the grave by His own power as the seal of His atoning work on the cross (Rom. 1:4). The open tomb and the angel sitting upon the stone with calm dignity, is a graphic picture of Christ's triumph over the devil, and the terror of the keepers is a sample of what all of Christ's enemies shall one day experience when He comes in glory to reign as King.

2. The angel's message to the women (vv. 5-7).

(1) Fear not (v. 5). While the enemies had occasion to fear, these women who loved the Lord received good news from the empty tomb. The empty tomb puts an end forever to all doubts and fears. Let every teacher endeavor to show the greatness of the fact that the tomb was empty, for it shows that we have a living Christ. The resurrection of Christ should be the major theme of those who give out the Christian message. (2) "Come, see" (v. 6). The angel told the women that the Lord had risen and invited them to see the place where He lay. The Lord made special effort to convince the disciples of the reality of His resurrection. He remained with them for forty days, giving them many "infallible proofs." (3) "Go quickly" (v. 7). Having seen for themselves, their responsibility was to go and tell the message. Experience is necessary before testimony. They were to go quickly to the disciples with the message, assured that the Lord would go before and meet them.

II. The Risen Lord Meets the Women (vv. 8-10).

The women quickly obeyed the command of the angel, and were running to bring word to the disciples. Jesus met them on the way. Those who have an experimental knowledge of Christ should go speedily to tell others of it. When they saw Jesus-that He was really the Lord-they worshiped Him.

III. Paying Money to Circulate a Lie (vv. 11-15).

That Jesus arose from the dead could not be denied even by the Sanhedrin. They saw only one way out of the difficulty; that was to bribe the keepers to tell a lie. They had paid money for His betrayal-now they paid more money to circulate a lie about His resurrection. This shows the wonderful power that money has over the lives and consciences of men. It not only induces people to lie, but it even muzzles the mouths of some teachers and

IV. The King's Great Commission (vv. 16-20).

The royal authority (v. 18). By virtue of His divine authority,

He issued this command to the disciples. In order to prepare them for the reception of this command, He declared unto them that all power in heaven and earth had been given unto

The commission itself (vv. 19, 20).

It consists of three parts. (1) Go teach all nations. This is the first and primary business of the disciple. This command has been issued to all disciples by the risen and mighty Lord. (2) Baptize them in the name of the triune God. \ Those who have become disciples of the Lord should receive the rite which signifies that relationship to Him. (3) Teach them to observe all of Christ's commandments (v. 20). Those who have become Christ's disciples should be taught conformity to His will.

3. The available power (v. 2). Those who obey Christ in carrying out this commission shall enjoy His abiding presence.

There are plenty of cuts across corners that one can make in life, in education, in business, in politics, in religion. But there is really no short cut to any promised land.-Edgar Whitaker Work, D. D.

Points of Interest on the "Road to Mandalay" A few points of interest along the auto road to Mandalay, gleaned from an article in the magazine Fortune, read as follows:

With a population of approximately 300,000,000 India has some 125,000 motor cars-about one car for every small town or big village.

India's Satan is Black Yama, and Mohammedans consider green an unlucky color. Therefore black cars and green cars are unpopular.

Elephants have caused many auto accidents, but now wear tail-lights, and -like tail-lighted London bobbiespossess a high visibility.

Indian rajahs love spotlights, thus princely cars may carry ten or a dozen lamps.

Religious pilgrimages stimulate traffic, so also does the Hindu taboo upon a man's marriage with a girl from his home town.

But it is considered unlucky to travel east on Monday, north on Tuesday or Wednesday, south on Thursday, west on Friday or Saturday. Evil days for starting journneys are Tuesday, presaging fire at home; Saturday, foreshadowing loss by thieves; Sunday, portending sickness. Misfortune results from payments or deliveries on Tuesday or Saturday, and all bargaining, buying, selling and paying are suspended at Vishagadi, the poisonous hour of the day.

Poison Arrows of Indians

The bureau of ethnology says that the arrow poison used by the Indians was of vegetal and animal origin. Among the vegetal poisons there were sap of the yucca angustifolia, a preparation of aconite and a plant called Mago, the milk of which was poison. Some tribes, such as the Shonshoni and Bannock Indians, obtained a deer and caused it to be bitten by a rattlesnake. The deer was then killed and allowed to putrify. Then the arrows were dipped into the matter.-Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Humane

Jack spent his holidays shopping with his aunt and was fascinated by the crowds, many of whom carried bright unabrellas. On reaching home hat night, he remarked: "Aunty, I want a flannel ambrella."

"A fannel umbrella! But why?" "To boys its rib. warm." he said.

SOMETHING SQUIRMS

IMMORTALITY

66 TF A man die shall he live again?" This has been the universal quest. Job of old asked this question, so did the philosophers and the poets. Every person has at some time wonderedwhat comes after death. The philosopher, Fisk, said there must be something worth while in the world to come, for surely this wonderful human being would not have been made just for the purpose of tumbling it down. Even the Indian buried in the grave with the departed one the dog and gun, that the loved one happy in the unseen hunting was his conception of heaven. The poet. Byron, who immortality o'er-sweeps—all pains, L. A. Barrett. all tears, all time, all fears and all peals-Like the eternal thunders of the deep-Into my ears this truth: Thou livest forever." Tennyson wrote: "Thou wilt not leave us in the dust-Thou madest man, he knows not why-He thinks he was not made to die-And Thou hast made him; Thou art just." Shakespeare's last will convinces us that he believed in immortality-"I commend my soul into the hands of God to be made perfect in the life everlasting." Many ask for definite proofs of immortality. Frankly there are none. No one ever came back to tell us what it is like or where it is. Science is powerless if asked for evidences produced from its laboratories. The evidences lie within one's thinking and feeling. Cicero argued that there must be an immortality of life or why should we so greatly desire it. Whence the desire if it has no foundation in fact? What is death? What causes it? The answer is simple enough-breaking down of the bodily tissues. When the organs of the body no longer function death results, regardless of what causes the breakdown. It is the same law as in all nature. The body dies just like all material substances die. Death does not destroy the spiritual realities. Love, goodness, integrity, in shortcharacter are not of the body and are not dependent upon it. Building up the character, or personality, as some call it, is the most important thing in the world.

The stars shall fade away, the sun

grow dim with age
And nature sink in years;
But thou, O, Soul, shaft flourish in immortal youth
Unhurt amid the war of elements

Women Become Silent Sex

Women of England, especially professional women, have acquired a new virtue-silence. Newcomers into the profession are outdoing the men in their desire for professional etiquette and refuse to advertise. Many people have declared that successful professional women are less "human" than successful professional men. It is claimed that they suffer from a "superiority complex" and a sort of "divine right of queens," hemming themselves in impenetrable barriers of silence and self-importance.

ELOPEMENT OF PAIR NIPPED BY FORGERY

Find Pathway of Romance Is Not Rosy.

Sioux Falls, S. D.-Alvin Krouse and Mrs. Olga Lossow, elopers from Minneapolis, did not find the pathway of their romance a rosy one, for both now occupy cells in the state penitentiary in Sioux Falls.

They were sentenced to indeterminate terms, not to exceed five years each, for forgery, when they pleaded guilty before Judge John T. Medin in Circuit court here. Krouse was sentenced first, and when it came time for the woman she asked that she be given the same sentence. "I ask this," she told the court, "because I want to get out at the same time he does." Alvin Krouse and Mrs. Lossow and her husband were neighbors in Min-

After eloping from Minneapolis they came direct to Garretson, near Sioux Falls, where the parents of the woman reside. She had been married to Lossow after leaving home and her parents had never seen Lossow. This made it easy for the plans of the elopers, for to her parents she represented Krouse to be Lossow.

After thus deceiving her parents Mrs. Lossow prevailed upon them to accompany herself and Krouse to a Garretson bank to identify Krouse as Lossow, so he could cash the $300 certificate of deposit which was in Mr. Lossow's name. In order to get the $300 from the bank Krouse forged the name of Lossow to the certificate.

Forgery Discovered. Soon after obtaining the money the elopers left the home of the women's parents and went East. When the forgery became known and officers sought to trail the elopers it was learned that they had gone from Garretson to the region north of Superior, Wis.

For some time all trace of them was lost. Then Krouse and the woman appeared at Superior, where officers saw them and recognized them as the elopers wanted in Sioux Falls for for-

Nature's Artistry Seen in Odd Marble Markings

Hammond, Ind .- The uncanny handicraft of nature, wrought in marble as no human hand could trace it, has turned the lobby of the First Trust and Savings bank in Hammond into an art gallery which vies with famous salons in interest to those attracted.

The soft artistry of a master craftsman shows up in two sections of the lobby-yet not until countless centuries after the work was completed by its creator was it exposed to the view of man.

On the smooth surface of an Italian marble counter ledge at the rear of the lebby appears a delicate tracing of the human heart-so near perfection in detail that it has dumbfounded anatomists. The left and right ventricles are depicted in exactness of outline, the lower organs of the heart are easily discernible, and the exterior form is a replica of the shape that this organ presents in medical photographs.

In another and more secluded spotas though nature had somehow contrived still to hide her etchings-a perfectly shaped man's head stares out from a wall vault in the basement.

Live Exhibit.

The American Museum of Natural History, a vast and impressive hall of dead things, has one live exhibitsnakes. Everything else is as extinct as the dinosaur exhibit. A few live snakes are no great trouble to a well organized museum, but the Natural History museum has been greatly upset. A garter snake decided to have a family, and brought 24 troublesome children into being. The infants were something like moths; they got into everything. They seeped out of their own enclosures, and some of the best minds of the museum have been sorely taxed in hunting the babies down. They aren't sure that all have been captured yet. Nobody is greatly worried, though, for garter snakes are quite harmless.

Roof Scene.

As I sit in my office, I can see, on the rooftop across the street, a man practicing a speech. He is ineffectually trying to hide himself behind a chimney. He is holding a copy of the speech in one hand, and wildly gesticulating with the other. Others in my building have noticed him, and one of the onlookers yells applause. "Yea-a-a!" The speaker turns, and grins. "I've got to make it tomorrow night," he yells. "Want to hear me?" . . .

"Witch Finder" Haled to Court by His Dupes

Germany is doubtless an extremely modern country, yet not quite as progressive as might be surmised. At present the Criminal court of a small place in Mecklenburg has to decide a medieval witch trial.

For several years the small village on the Baltic has been pursued by evil fortune. Cattle have died and the harvests destroyed by storms. The peasants could not explain all these ills except by the belief in witchcraft.

They therefore engaged the services of a renowned wizard of Rostock, who, for considerable remuneration, promised to exorcise the malignant witch. Panic struck the poor peasants when, after weird incantations, an old woman was really found in a small wood and declared by the omnipotent wizard to be the baleful witch.

Mere chance later disclosed that the old woman had been carefully brought along by the wizard on his motor cycle. The peasants recognized that they had been duped and, proving themselves fairly modern after all, went to court to sue the wizard.

Abundant Proof That

Animals Change Color Though many an animal in the Arctic regions will change its coat to white for the winter months, there are few animals who turn gray, as human beings do, from old age. Animals are, however, susceptible to fright and shock, and this may cause their hair or fur to change to white, just as in the case of human beings. Domestic pets are naturally more susceptible to this than animals who are used to fending for themselves in the wild. The black coat of a dog will sometimes turn practically white if the dog has a fit or falls victim to a very bad bout of distemper. Cats are not immune from shock. Horses' coats often seem to change quite appreciably in color, but this may be only & matter of clipping. A horse that has been turned out for some time and then brought in to be clipped will become a light fawn color after the operation, when before it he seemed a dark chestnut. You wouldn't know he was the same horse!

Old Roman Road in England

The old Fosse way, which is to be reopened in its Warwickshire section. is the early English name for the Roman road that ran from Lincoln to Exeter, writes "Looker On" in the London Daily Chronicle. Practically the whole of the original Roman line is still in use, although in parts it has dwindled to a lane.

From Lincoln its course may be traced through Newark and Leicester to High Cross, where it is intersected by another famous Roman road, Watling street, at a point known as the "center of England." Then it proceeds through Cirencester and Bath to the half-forgotten Roman encampment of Ilchester, though the road itself is here in fine condition. After Ilchester, the Fosse way crosses the hills near Chard into Devonshire and then enters Exeter.

Too Much for Bobbie

Bobbie, not yet two years old, the adored of a circle of relatives, every one of whom insists on calling him an individual name which he must recite many times a day, met a new aunt. After she had heard the list and seen his busy pranks she said: "Well, you're my little incorrigible." Bobbie looked uncertain but stored the word away for future need.

Next day he was called on for his recital. "Bobbie is Gannie's what?"
"Man." "Aunt Vi's what?" "Lazybones." "Daddy's what?" "Humbug." "And Aunt Marcia's what?" With a brilliant smile and his southern accent he answered triumphantly: "Co'nbread."-Indianapolis News.

THE KEY FEEDS

Some day we probably will make The Key Feeds better than they are now. But that will be when science has developed better methods of producing feed, such as better ingredients and better machinery.

But with the methods avaliable today, we cannot make The Key Feeds any better than we are now.

They are just as good, as feed can be made - and we can give you reference from several old customers who fed the first tons.
