EVANGELISTIC SERVICES.

The union open air meeting held this week in Flickinger's grove, near Taneytown, have been well attended, each night. This Friday night, evangelist Rev. John H. Gonso will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The house on the rock, and the house on the sand." On Saturday night, the topic will be "The great white throne, and judgment."

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the topic will be "Eternal Ways," at 7:30, "The Passion of Christ." The Taneytown band will give a sacred concert in the afternoon. On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 31, the sermon will be by Rev. E. E. Redding, Taneytown. Music by Bair's Station orchestra. Speakers for other services will be announced later.

THURMONT CLARION TAKES NEW QUARTERS.

The Thurmont Clarion Company, that recently changed management, enlarged the size of the Clarion and ncreased the facilities of its office, has fittingly completed its enlarged plant by moving into new quarters—the first floor of the Odd Fellows' building, on East Main St., H. O. Miller is Managing Editor, and Parmelee D. Erving, Business Manager. We ex-tend our heartiest felicitation on these evidences of business progress.

ARRESTED AT FAIR

Charged with Violations of the Volstead Act.

Two arrests were made at the Fair last week, on the charge of boot-leg-ging. The first was Earl Wagner, of ging. The first was Earl Wagner, of Union Bridge, on Thursday, who pleaded guilty before Justice Benson, and in default of $200. fine was committed to the county jail.

On Friday, Sheriff Fowble, arrested Mrs. Fannie Katz, of Baltimore county, on the charge of selling something in cocoa-cola bottles that smelled and tasted like whiskey. It was sold for Mrs. Katz's husband is said to be Sergeant M. E. Katz, of the State police force, who was stationed at the Fair Ground all week.

At the hearing on Thursday, before Justice Benson, Mrs. Katz was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $200.00. An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court that will assemble in November. November.

MUST BE VACCINATED?

Only a few days more of the 1930 vacation and when the schools open for another term, some of the most important of the travellers along the public highways will be the five and six-year-olds, just starting on the road to the three R's.

Parents of these prospective first-graders are reminded by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, of the Maryland law, which will not permit a child to be enrolled in school unless he has been successfully vaccinated against smallpox. "The family physician is expected to vaccinate every baby or young child under his care," Dr. Riley said, "and the parents should see that "The comparative freedom Maryland has had from smallpox, has been brought about largely through the intelligent co-operation of parents, physicians and teachers with the health departments of Baltimore City and the State, in carrying out the provisions of the vaccination law. CARROLL COUNTY FAIR CLOSED SATURDAY.

The Events Fully as Successful as could be Expected.

Friday was Childrens' Day at the Fair, with about 1500 of the youngsters present. Otherwise, it was about normal Friday, with races and Hippodrome attractions, and dancing at night. Exhibitors commenced removing their goods in the afternoon, especially the live stock. The mule derby was again an attraction, especially for the little area. cially for the little ones.

On Saturday, the only events were automobile races, five of which were automobile races, five of which were run. By evening, the grounds were practically deserted by every exhibit and feature, and the 33rd. Fair had taken its place in history.

With the exception of Thursday, when there was a big shortage, the attendance was about normal. As stoted in last issue the management.

stated in last issue, the management is to be congratulated on meeting with the success it did. The conditions during the past two months, and up to and after the Fair, were the worst possible for any event of this kind. Not only the heat, drought and short crops, but the spirit of the people—all were unfavorable to the Fair. It could not be otherwise, and it was nobody's fault.

The following acted as judges. Cattle and Swine department, Dr. DeVoe Meade, University of Maryland; poultry, Prof. Raper, University of Maryland; farm and garden products, Prof. Schwidt University of Maryland: Schmidt, University of Maryland; canning products, Miss Margaret Me-Pheeters, University of Maryland; clothing, Miss Florence Mason, home

Burns; farm and garden products, John N. Starr; household department, Charles W. Klee, assisted by Mrs. H. A. Allison; home-makers' club exhibits, Miss Agnes Slindee.

FORMER JUDGE BOND DEAD.

Former Judge James A. C. Bond, one of the most widely known lawyers in Maryland, died at his home in Westminster, last Sunday morning. He had been in failing health for some time. He would have been 86 years of age on Sept. 2, next.

He was a graduate of Princeton, and commenced the practice of law in Westminster in 1868. In May 1890 he was appointed associate Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, and served until 1891, when he again resumed the practice of law. In 1899 he was appointed Chief Judge of the Fifth Circuit by Gov. Lowndes, but when

NO DROUGHT THERE.

The Apopka Chief, published in Apopka, Florida, in reproducing our recent editorial, "Where was the Rain"—which might have more properly been headed "Where is the rain"

"The question as it relates to Maryland and the other parched sections of the country, is one for the scientist to ponder over. So far as Florida is concerned we have had our normal rainfall and more and here things are green and growing. We have cooling breezes, too, so that our people keep quite comfortable while other sections of the country are drying up. We have 5,000 lakes and they are all full to the brim. Florida has been particularly blessed and favored during the drouth period elsewhere. Her people are sincerely sorry for those who suffer and wish they might share with them the comforts that come to us. In the mean-time "where was the rain" that ought to have moistened the country's great central section?"

PINCHOT THE NOMINEE.

Four Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, on Wednesday, ended months of litigation and uncertainty over who is the Republican nominee for Governor in Pennsylvania, by declaring that Gifford Pinchot is en titled to the nomination, by a plurality of about 20,000 votes. The decission declared that the perforation of ballots in Luzerne county was with-out justification, the Court nevertheless declined to reverse the decision of the county court declaring the ballots legal.

VAN LEAR BLACK DROWNED.

NO MORE ROADS THIS YEAR Federal Road Fund Will be Used Next Year.

The Federal road fund of $121,875,-000, which is to be made available Sept. 1, instead of January 1, and of which Maryland will receive $1,051,-714, will not likely be used in this state, this year. As the Federal fund must be matched by the states, dollar for dollar, Maryland will not be in position to use any of the fund this year, as only $5000 remains unalloted in the hands of the State Roads Commission. But, it is claimed that by a transfer of funds from one departtransfer of funds from one department to another, more money could be made available.

It is the custom in Maryland to cease road work on Nov. 15, because of weather conditions; therefore it would seem possible for contracts to be let in time for considerable road construction. However, it is doubtful whether the building of more roads this year would greatly help the farmers. Such work is done by contract, estimates being made by the contractors for labor at certain figures. tors for labor at certain figures. Farther South, perhaps road-build-ing might be engaged in with advantage, during the winter, to the laboring classes; but even so, the percentage of financial relief to actual farmers, would seem to be very small.

GUERNSEY FIELD DAY.

The Guernsey breeders of Carroll county, in co-operation with the State Extension Service, conducted the largest field day ever held in Western Maryland on last Saturday, Aug. 16th., on the Herbert Geatty farm, near New Windsor. More than 75 head of animals were shown, and all head of animals were shown, and all cattle were in unsual shape. All of the seventeen classes were filled with outstanding individuals making it extremely difficult for the judge, Joe Broadhurst of the American Guernsey Cattle Club, to place them. Guernsey admirers from all sections of the state were there to participate in the

THE GENERAL DROUGHT CONDITIONS.

Government Agencies Considering Relief Measure.

The great drought, still unbroken over a large portion of the country, has almost ceased to be marked by big head-lines in the press; possibly be-cause the damage to crops has been done, and even the most copious rains now could not benefit much except possibly the pastures, and a very lit-tle late vegetation. The main good of rains now will be to the water sup-ply, which in, itself is an extremely serious proposition.

Some sections have been visited by heavy rains—particularly in the middle west. Main interest now is in figuring the extent of loss, and in methods for financial relief, as they may be arrived at through the Presimay be arrived at through the Fresident's National Drought Relief Committee, which is made up, as follows; Secretary of Agriculture Hyde; Paul Butor, chairman Farm Loan Board; Roy A. Young, governor Federal Reserve Board; Ogden L. Mills, under Secretary of the Treasury; Harry N. Robinson, chairman First National Robinson, chairman First National Bank, Los Angeles, Cal.; Chairman Legge, of the Barm Board; Jno. Barton Payne, Red Cross representative, and R. H. Ashton, president Ameri-can Railway Association.

These are supplemented by Governors of states, and State and County Relief Committees. To date, about 300 counties have been seriously affected. The general committee will not begin to function until state and county committees have been completed, and a detailed survey is presented, but has commenced energetically to consider the financial problems involved. These sections reported to be the hardest hit include most of Ohio, New York, Minnesota, much of Montana, western Tennessee, southern Arkansas, northern Louisiana, and most of Oklahoma and Texas. The live stock situation is extremely critical in Mon-

DROUGHT MAY KILL PESTS.

It is pretty generally conceded that the severe heat and drought of this summer, are apt to prove beneficial next year in less blight, beetles, bugs, caterpillars, and all kinds of vegetation pests. That the same agencies that killed vegetation will also have a discouraging influence—if not actually kill—the pests that thrived on vegetation. If this be true, the losses from the heat and drought this year, will not be without some compensation.

FARM RELIEF CONFERENCE

Called by Governor Ritchie to Estimate Drought Losses.

Gov. Ritchie has called a conference en Farm Relief, to be held this Friday morning, in the rooms of the Public Service Commission, Baltimore. Reports will be heard from many sections of the state, and relief suggestions made. The Governor explained that he had not called the meeting earlier because he considered it advisable to await recommendations from the Maryland Farmers' Marketing Board.

In many localities dry weather has practically ended the usefulness of summer gardens, at least for the time being, and some have passed the stage from which they may be expected to recover. It must be remembered, the horit-

CATHOLICS WHO SERVE LIQUOR ARE CONDEMNED.

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, which held its Fiftyninth annual convention at Westfield, Mass., last week, adopted the following resolution:

"This union condemns the propaganda which not only encourages lawlessness among youth, but instills in them a conviction that alcohol drinking is a comparatively harmless form of amusement and good-fellowship.

"It laments the bad example set by the drinking habits of many parents and condemns the lack of moral courage shown by hosts and hostesses in many Catholic homes on the occa-sions of wedding or other social festivities, in offering intoxicating beverages to guests.

NEWSPAPER IS DIFFERENT.

A mistaken idea with some people is that the newspaper is an individual preposition. If they don't like the editor, they feel they must knock the paper and stand in the way of its success whenever possible. They do not realize that the local paper is just as much a part of the community as the schools, churches or anything else. The newspaper is different from any other business, it is a community affair. It is for service to the people and not for any individual.
You may not like the editor and the editor may not love you any too well editor may not love you any too well—but the paper he is responsible for does just as much for you as the service rendered others. There is nothing personal with it, it is here for a purpose and that purpose is to do what good it can in every way it can in the purpose to the service of these and the greater the support of those and the greater the support of those it undertakes to serve the better service it can render. It takes the people to make a good newspaper and without the help of the people no one can run a successful paper. It requires money to operate any kind of the people and the support of the people and the people are the people business—even the churches, and the papers are no exceptions and for this reason, they must have the financial support of the business interest as well as the good will.

well as the good will.

Few newspaper publishers make more than a comfortable living and scarcely one is reported wealthy from money made in the newspaper business. They deserve to be trusted and the results of the r to be understood by the people—it is the editor and not the plant that makes a newspaper useful in a com-munity, though a liberal patronage is necessary if the paper is to be a credit to the town.—Westfield, New Jersey,

A REPEATED WAIL.

The Baltimore Evening Sun that seems to have a decided propensity for finding things to criticise—things that it knows so well how to improve -has again relieved its outraged sense of justice by pointing out that Baltimore City has only half, or less than half, the representation it ought to have in the legislature. That "Calvert county inhabitants," for instance, "have five times as much say in the government of the state as have the residents of Baltimore city.

Note that Calvert countians are mere "inhabitants" while Baltimoreans are "residents"-a fine distinction, that. And the editorial writer goes on to recite the companion lament that "Though Baltimore City contains less than half of the population of the state, last year it paid about two-thirds of all the State taxes collected." All of which is just too bad; but, there are others.

For instance, Maryland has two United States Senators, while the great state of New York has but two. Just think of it—only 1,625,279 persons in the little state of Maryland, while New York City alone has considerably over twice as many. And little Delaware, with less population than the city of Baltimore, has two United States Senators, while Baltimore does not have one that it can call its very own.

If the Evening Sun could have its way about it, Baltimore city and its voting power in the legislature would run the whole state; which, according to the Sun would be strictly the proper thing; so, evidently those who originated the present plan of representation made a mighty poor job of

PAY OF LEGISLATORS.

One of the Amendments to the State Constitution that will come behigh costs, is wholly inadequate, and that ought to make our laws. The says; pay for the President of the Senate and for the Speaker of the House is $8.00 per day.

But, those who sponsored the amendment calling for $15.00 per day for members, and $25.00 per day for the presiding officers, made a big mistake that will likely result in the sure defeat of the amendment. Had the amounts been raised to $10.00 and $15.00 per day, respectively, fairness would have unquestionably been on the side of the increases. As it is, the effort looks like a "grab game" without consideration for the tax-

It is true that there are candidates for the legislature even at the low pay. There are always a comparatively few qualified men whose other business connections may permit them to serve, during January, February and March, at $5.00 per day, and a little extra mileage, and some may be willing to make a sacrifice, merely for the honor, or the experience, connected with a legislative session; but the extremely inadequate pay situation is a dangerous one to maintain, because the very best men in the state are none to good to act as legislators for the whole people.

We do not know that votes are ever bought, in the Maryland legislation. We do not know that any of the men who are elected could be bought. But, by paying such small salaries we are inviting both buyer and seller to operate in a way that is not at all a new one, under certain circumstances and conditions.

TAXES AND THE PEOPLE.

A legislature is to be elected in November, and it will operate in Annapolis from January to March 30th. There is where a considerable portion portunities to make large appropriations of interest to tax-payers.

The point we want to make, is, that one-tenth ever takes practical action to reduce the burden, because, perabout it, or perhaps because they actually want the improvements that are represented by the taxes.

We cannot have low taxes and high cost improvements at the same time. We must make up our minds to that: so, if we know just what we do not want, and do not want to help pay for, we must make our wishes known in a very positive concrete form, and serve the notice on those who start the movement toward high taxes. If we can not do this, complaint of taxes is unavailing.

Our governments are rarely inefficient and wasteful-our experience with the old State Roads Commission was an exception to the rule. We do not have much trouble with bond issues, because they are uusually subject to a referendum, and voted down, right or wrong; and Amendments to the Constitution are usually voted down in the same manner.

But there are some very expensive plans that are not subject to a referendum, because they are included in continuing state laws, or in the Constitution, and not brought up for amendment in the Constitutional way. Or, they may be matters brought up in the regular way in the form of "bills to be acted on. Apparently, here in Maryland, vest a great amount of authority in the hands of the party in power, and "home rule" so far the smaller jurisdictions are concerned, is not extensively exercised.

If "the people" do not have the power to regulate expenses, then we do not have government by "the people," so this is the question that we should be concerned about; and first of all, it will be wise to carefully consider the qualifications of those whom we send to Annapolis this winter to represent us. And after they are sent, it will be up to us to keep them informed of what the tax-payers back home are thinking of money-spending propositions.

There is this difficulty, of course, that stands in between tax-payers and money-spenders at Annapolis-and that is, that a very large portion of the voters-perhaps near one-halfare either not tax-payers, or nearly so, and their votes count equally with those who pay the most taxes. So, taking every phase of the question, taxes are difficult to regulate by popular vote, so whenever the chance ararrives to effectually and wisely use individual influence for lower taxes, it should be used.

PRESIDENT HOOVER IN ACTION.

By almost general drought relief, be given a better consent, we think, voters will agree chance to show what he can do in the that $5.00 per day, in these days of former field-especially as Congress is not in session. The Philadelphia especially for the class of members | Ledger, commenting on the situation,

> "The conference at the White House between President Hoover and the Governors or other representatives of drought-stricken States served a double purpose. It enabled these States to add their own estimates of the damage caused by abnormal dry weather to the data collected by the Department of Agriculture. It also enabled them to offer concrete suggestions for extending relief, in line with the President's desire that the States take the leader-ship in this work, with the Federal Government co-operating in every

> The program for relief is rapidly taking shape. It includes the reduction of rail rates for transporting feed to stricken districts or hauling cattle away to be fed, the extension of liberal credit to farmers and the opening up of work on roads and public buildings to meet rural unemployment due to crop failures. Some steps may also be taken to prevent profiteering in food supplies. Representative La Guardia has made the practical suggestion that the prices paid at points of production be wide-ly published at selling points to guard > against unjustified increases. President Hoover's decision to forego his trip to the West and remain in Washington to give drought relief his personal attention will be particularly gratifying to the country. This is the eighth emergency relief task which he has directed, and the special talent which he has always displayed in attracting co-operation along effi-cient lines is needed in the present

PRICES OF MEATS.

With meats selling at lower levels today than they have for a number of years, and exhaustive experimental work now under way at the University of Maryland, at College Park, and other state universities and colleges to improve the quality of meat, the consumer is placed in an especially advantageous position, in the opinion of Prof. W. E. Hunt of the animal husbandry department at the University of Maryland, who attended the annual conference of co-operators in a national study of meat quality and

The study, whch was launched 1924 upon the suggestion of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, is looked upon as one of the greatest ment of live steam applied at 255 depieces of co-operative research work of its kind ever undertaken, accord-ing to E. W. Sheets of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who is secretary of the project. "It is covering the subject thoroughly from all angles," he said. "There are studies concerned with breeding, feeding, age, sex, slaughtering and cutting, color and texture of the meat, grade, and on down the line to the actual cooking. The cooking experiments, in fact, have developed into one of the most portant phases of the study. Hundreds of samples from experimental animals have been cooked, much the work being done in the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. HOW TELEPHONE POLES ARE MADE AND TREATED.

Conserve the timber. The enormous demands made on the forests of the United States is a subject of vital interest to many people. So serious is the timber shortage considered by telephone companies that much time and effort is being given to conserva-tion by prolonging the life of poles. The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies operating in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia and other associated companies of the Bell System now maintain about 415,500 miles of pole line, which is equivalent to more than 16,600,000 poles. Notwithstanding the rapid increase in the use of cable which now provides the greater part of the telephone wire lines, a large part of which are in underground cable, there is a constantly increasing demand for poles.

Telephone enginners, realizing the importance of this branch of conservation, are extending their scientific accomplishments by preserving the life of poles used in constructing and maintaining telephone lines. Knowing that untreated telephone poles have an average normal life of about fifteen years, while the physical life of treated poles will be many years longer, the Bell System companies are now using treated poles almost exclusively. Last year the associated Bell telephone companies used about 1,400,000 poles in constructing new lines and in replacements. Of these poles 753,000 were treated for their full length, 533,000 butt-treated and the remainder, 114,000 were untreated. During the year 17,401 miles of pole line utilizing 996,000 poles were added to the telephone system.

Of the two types of poles used by telephone companies in the eastern part of the country, chestnut and pine predominate. Chestnut poles are given butt treatment, while pine poles are creosoted for their entire length.

The long-leaf pine which is found extensively in the southern states, has proven the most suitable for treatment and for pole uses. To meet the age-old factors of supply and demand, pole treating plants have been set up in the sections in which the kinds of poles are found. Butt-treating plants for chestnut poles are now being operated in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. Plants for creosoting pine poles in their entirety are also found extensively throughout the south.

In eight southern states there are now ten creosoting plants, all of which are supplying immense quantities of creosote products to the Bell Tele-phone System. In the aggregate these plants represent investments totaling millions of dollars, according to F. A. Meuhleck, engineer of the Western Electric Company, in the current issue of the Western Electric News. In an article, "Jet black poles," Mr. Meuhleck describes the operation of producing treated poles from the first inspection made in the woods to the point where they are unloaded from cars ready for distribution along the telephone lines. In a word picture he describes some of the numerous proposition and the production of the numerous production and the production of the numerous production and the production of the numerous production of the numero ous operations necessary to develop the pine tree into a usable and necessary part of telephone plant.

Beginning in the logging woods, the trees are looked over and such as are suitable for poles are designated to be cut. After the pole is cut, workmen saw off the top of the tree which then becomes a potential pole. Other workmen remove the bark, after which the inspector makes his meas urements and crayons the proper classification for future use. The pole is then snaked by team or tractor to loading platfrom for shipment to the creosoting plant. In some cases where rivers with sufficient water are available, the poles are made into huge rafts which are floated to the

After the truck loads of poles have been run into the cylinders or vats, the doors are closed, the vats are made airtight, and the treatment begrees Fahrenheit for a period of six hours. An inspector, who is constant-ly on the job, checks the recording gauges of the cylinders to see that the proper amount of pressure is being applied, then rechecks the gauges when the vacuum pump is operating, which makes the poles bleed and give off their sap moisture.

The poles are then given an air compressor treatment. Following this comes the oil treatment. This process includes the pumping of hot creosote oil into the chamber against what may be an air pressure of thirty or even fifty pounds per square inch. In a short time, according to Mr. Muehleck, the overflow pipe may indicate that the cylinder is full of creosote. The pump, however, continues to force in more oil. Obviously this pressure preservation is being absorbed by the wood. As the pressures mount to the proper degree the oil pump is cut off and the free oil in the cylinder is drained back into a storage tank. The poles are then given a vacuum pump treatment which not only cleans off the poles, but recovers the excess oil from wood cells. The cylinder is then vented to the atmosphere which completes the treatment. After remov ing the bolts which open the cylinder door, the jet black treated poles are pulled out and transported to railroad cars for loading. The poles are then shipped to destination where they will be distributed by motor trucks along the line of which they will shortly become a necessary part of the world's great communication system—the telephone line.

Hosiery of Mixed Color Fad of Centuries Ago

The bright-colored hose worn in the Fourteenth century roused the ire of even Chaucer, who declares that "the wrapping of their hose which are deported of two colors, white and red, white and black, or black and red and white and blue, make the wearers seem as though the Fire of St. Anthony or other such mischance had cankered and consumed one-half of their bodies."

The fashion of wearing two colors, "which rendered uncertain the fellowship of the legs," continued in spite of the ridicule and satire of the poets and chroniclers, until the middle of the Sixteenth century.

The long hose or herlots worn by persons of quality at the time were made of the finest cloth or velvet, and there is record of Henry III ordering three pairs for his sister Isabella, which were to be of velvet embroidered with gold. Knitted stockings, or, as they were originally called, stocking hose, were introduced into Britain in the Sixteenth century, and those of silk were considered such a luxury that they were thought a present fit for a king, so we find Sir Thomas Gresham presenting a pair of long Spanish silk hose to Edward VI.

Burial at Arlington The secretary of war has the power to authorize the burial of a woman beside her husband in a separate grave in Arlington National cemetery provided the husband was a commissioned officer. In the case of enlisted men, if a widow desires to be buried with her husband arrangements must be made with the War department to have the grave made deep enough so that a second casket can be placed upon that of the soldier; in other words, the soldier and his widow must be buried in the same grave. There would be no question that a former President of the United States, who was technically commander-in-chief of the army and navy, would be regardas as a commissioned officer, although actually President Taft was a civilian

Hints For Homemakers By Jane Rogers

To give an unusually delicious flavor to your summer beverages, add to a base of sweetened lemonade, tart jellies of different varieties, beaten until syrupy. The brightly colored jellies are as valuable for their color effects as they are for the distinctive flavors they impart. Two or three teaspoons to a large glass is about the right proportion.

When hanging recently washed curtains, if you have a trying time running the rod through the hem, put a thimble on the end of the rod. Then you'll have no trouble getting it through, even though the hem is stiff and stuck together. Best of all, you'll eliminate the risk of tearing delicate fabrics.

Bridal Bouquets

It is impossible to state when flowers were first used at a wedding, since this is a very ancient custom. Orange blossoms were worn and carried by brides from the earliest times, as they portend luck and happiness. Spenser and Milton were of the opinion that the orange was the golden apple presented to Jupiter by Juno on her wedding day. It was customary for the Anglo-Saxon bride to give her friends small knots and ribbons to wear or carry on the wedding day. This custom still survives in the bouquet of the bridesmaids.

Weighing Sand

According to the federal and state laws a bushel of sand weighs 130 pounds in most, of the states; in Pennsylvania the weight is 100 pounds to a bushel. And a cubic yard of sand contains 2,600 pounds.

Marks' Mechanical Engineers handbook gives the weight of dry, loose sand and gravel as 90 to 105 pounds per cubic foot; sand and gravel dry and packed, 100 to 120 pounds; sand and gravel wet, 118 to 120 pounds.

Mildew stains when very fresh, may sometimes be washed out with soap and water, or bleached in the sun. The growth of mildew is at first on the surface of materials that have been allowed to become damp, but in a short time these molds penetrate the fiber and injure it, and are almost impossible to eradicate. Soaking the stains in sour milk overnight and placing in the sun without rinsing, will sometimes help. Slight stains are sometimes removed by moistening I hereby announce my candidacy them with lemon juice and salt and for the Democratic nomination for County Commissioners of Carroll used as a bleach will take out mildew stains on white cotton or linen but stains on the standard st should never be used on silk or wool. Chemicals are also used at times. Mildew on shoes may be wiped off as soon as detected, and the shoes washed with soap and warm water, and well dried. Stuff the shoes with soft crumpled paper or dry oats, and dry in a warm, but not hot place.

WHY WE ACT FROM IMPULSE

MAN hurries to get out of the A MAN nurries to get and path of a speeding automobile into the impulsively. He jumps into the stream to save a drowning person impulsively. A woman might buy a hat or marry a man impulsively.

Acting from impulse has come to represent every motive of conduct that is not thought out or learned. An impulse act is one that almost does itself and is on the way before we know it.

One great advantage of acting from impulse is that it saves time and energy and the nerve-racking moments of hesitation and doubt, of whether or not one should or should not go

Impulse is the oldest of motives. Man acted from impulse long before he developed the ability to think, And even though he is able to think, the process is irksome and tires him out. Impulse is so much easier and

We act from impulse because there was a time when we had nothing else to act from and not infrequently we hark back to this primitive state in situations requiring quick decisions or when the thinking apparatus becomes confused and ceases to func-

We act from impulse because we have inherited reaction patterns called instincts which are ready-made incentives to conduct. Action motivated by impulse is strong because it dates back to the very beginning of human life. It is effective because it is based on the experience of the race.

Acting from impulse is faulty only in so far as it fails to comply with the rapidly changing modern limitations placed on the individual by society. But in the long run we could not get along without so strong and persistent and effective and ever present push to do what we do.

SPIRITS AND BROOMS

PLACE a broom across the door and if any of your departed friends bake in muffin tins. wish to speak with you their spirits will be free to come and go as long as the broom remains in position. The exact place which the broom occupies in folklore is a difficult problem and as yet appears not to have been satisfactorily solved. The underlying primitive idea which animates the current superstitions regarding this household implement seems to still be undiscovered. The broom's place in sympathetic magic is clear enough—the act of sweeping being a physical act which causes a corresponding operation against enemies, trouble, etc. But in that it is act and not the implement that figures.

The relation of the broom to the world of spirits is vaguely defined; the current superstitions and the present beliefs of savages being often of a seemingly contradictory nature. For instance brooms are supposed to be a protection against witches yet witches ride broomsticks on their nocturnal escapades. But both among savage tribes and in many current superstitions brooms are regarded as having an intimate relationship with disembodied spirits which fact points to some primitive conception now undiscovered-perhaps lost forever in the darkness of time. It is this relationship which, in the superstition under discussion, causes a broom placed across the threshold to be an invitation to the spirits of dead friends to enter and hold converse with the

VARIOUS GOOD THINGS

THERE are so many delightful I dishes to be made with apples, from soup to desserts and confections.

Apple Pancakes With Maple Sugar. Take two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, two eggs, one tablespoonful of melted butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one cupful of grated tart apple, one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk. Mix all together and cook as usual. Stack the cakes buttered and sprinkled with maple sugar. Serve hot, cut like layer cake.

Toast a la King.

Take one cupful of sliced mushrooms, one tablespoonful of flour, onehalf cupful of peas, three hard-cooked eggs (chopped), one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one pimento, salt, pepper, two tomatoes. Dip the sliced tomatoes into french dressing and place on buttered toast; cover with the sauce prepared from the above ingredients and sprinkle the toast around the edge with finely minced parsley; top with a sprig.

Ham and Noodle Scallop. Boil noodles in beef stock, place in three layers with ham between. Cover with one cupful of milk, add bits of butter and bake 20 minutes.

Hamburg Sandwiches.
Take one pound of hamburger, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of parsley (minced). Cook until smooth and hot and serve on fresh buttered toast.

Spanish Beans.

Soak overnight one pint of navy beans and cook in the same water until tender and the skins slip off. Turn into a bean pot or casserole with one cupful of tomato, one chopped onion, one small green pepper and one pimento, all chopped; add three tablespoonfuls of molasses and one tablespoonful of mustard with two-thirds of a cupful of diced salt pork. Bake for three hours.

Corn and Rice Biscuit.

Take one cupful of boiled rice, one cupful of corn meal, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter, two eggs. Mix and

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS By H. IRVING KING

STORMS AND DEATH

IT IS a worldwide and very ancient superstition that if anyone is dangerously ill-so dangerously that life and death hang in the balance—if a storm arises the sick person will die bygone age. during the storm's continuance. One instinctively thinks of the death of Napoleon amid the great storm which | the dining table. shook the crags of St. Helena or of other historic instances of fiery spirits passing amid the warring of the elements. Primitive man saw in all natural phenomena something related to his own spiritual being. Groping in a world of mysteries, himself not the least mysterious of things, he linked his destiny to stars and storms, to moon and sun and growing trees and plants. For him there were no boundaries between the visible and the invisible worlds. And seeking in all things for a cause it was most natural that, in the sweeping of the midnight blasts, he should hear Odin hunting with his train and in the howling of the tempest evil spirits waging destruction, or disembodied souls calling to souls still in the flesh. Among many savage peoples today a storm is still thought to be caused by some malign spiritual being and they seek to exorcise the "stormfiend" by various rites and incantations. Among other peoples living in a primitive state it is the spirits of the dead which manifest themselves in a storm. Both these conceptions were common to our primitive ancestors and it can be readily seen how, in the course of the ages, they should have consolidated and shaped themselves into the superstition that a soul wavering in its earthly tenement should be swept away on the wings of a tempest. Old Military Organization

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston had for its first commander Capt. Robert Keayne. The organization was formed on March 13, 1638 or 1639, under its first name of Military Company of the Massachusetts. Captain Keayne was formerly of the London company of the same title. The Boston company claims to be an off-shoot of the older one. The necessity of a watch and military training in Massachusetts was coincident with the settlement of the

ABOUT THE PARTY

NARS. CUCUMBER GREEN, whose IVI real name was Margaret, but whose pretend name was Mrs. Cucumber Green, as probably you all know, had had a party.

little express cart Allie cuddled up in her mother's arms in the bed by Number Four Green Lane. Back of the bed, or rather at the side of the bed toward the wall, was a quite wide space. This was called, by Mrs. Cucumber Green, Number Four Green Lane. This was the make-believe street in which she lived. When she walked along this space, up to the end where the back wall was, she pretended she was at the market. Then she would talk to make-believe shopkeepers and buy all sorts of make-believe things for housekeeping. The wall paper was a very gay one and there were figures on the wall paper she pretended were people who were her neighbors. The street was called after the Green family who had always lived there. All the make-believe Greens, Mrs. Cucumber said, had always lived in the same place.

Here Mrs. Cucumber Green kept her toys. Number Four Green Lane was a very busy section, I can tell you.

Now that the party was all over it had been such a success and it would be something they could talk about with pride and joy and happy remembrances for some time.

Of course Mrs. Cucumber Green would give other parties, as she had always given a good many parties and was fond of entertaining. Allie was fond of entertaining, too. She enjoyed speaking to all the guests. Mrs. Cucumber Green changed her voice to speak for Allie. That made it easy. In a squeaky little voice Mrs. Cucumber Green would say: "Yes, I'm Allie. Of course I remember you. And you remember me,

"Yes, they all say I've grown, though I can't see it myself. "Do take your hat and coat off, won't you? You won't feel the good of them when you go out if you don't.

"Ah, yes, that's better. Now you'll be more comfortable and you won't catch cold when you go out." Allie was a good talker as you can see. But now they were in bed and soon they would be asleep.

How Allie did cuddle up in her mother's arms. Her mother held her very close. "Oh, my darling, darling, darling Allie Baa," she said. "You looked so sweet today with all your clean, clean clothes. How nice it was to have all clean clothes, even your stockings and worsted slippers were clean for the occasion.

"You look so wonderful, wonderful, my darling Allie Baa." Allie Baa snuggled even a little closer. It was so nice to hear her mother's sweet words of praise. "Oh, muvvie dear," Allie said, in her dear little squeaky voice, "what a lovely day we had." And Mrs. Cucumber Green answered: "I'm so glad, my darling, and we shall have more lovely days." Then Mrs. Cucumber Green's eyes slowly closed and for a little while Allie was wide awake.

She turned ever so slightly in her mother's arms-not enough so as to disturb her-just a very little bit. Then she looked at her mother whose eyes were closed, sleeping so beautifully. "What a lucky rag doll I am," she said to herself, "to have such a good,

good mother." (Copyright.)

NORA AND THE BUTTERFLY FLOWER

(@ by D. J. Walsh.)

ORA hurried along the sunny street, a demure smile on her Nora had a job in sight. Not a position nor a connection nor a contact. Just a nice, comfortable, steady job.

At the florist shop she hesitated a moment, smiled in response to the smile of the clerk looking out of the flower-filled window. Nora had exactly one 25-cent piece in her purse. To spend that on a flower for her coat would have seemed to a prosaic person the wildest sort of folly. But Nora was Irish and gay and happy-golucky. More than that, she loved flowers and had always managed, thus far in her art career, to stop in at least every day at this very florist shop for a flower of some kind or other. Indeed, she knew the clerk so well that she called her Hattie and the clerk called her, in turn, Nora.

"A flower for a quarter, Hattie, my pretty!" she said gaily, turning in at the narrow doorway.

"A flower for a quarter, is it?" the clerk asked cheerfully. "And would ye be having, now an orchid maybe or a box of long-stemmed roses-

"That short-stemmed pink bud right there, my fair lass, and do ye be quick about it, for I've a job in sight and I've no mind to lose me chances for a bit o' blarney with ye this morning, ma'am!" laughed Nora, making a deep curtsy and handing over her quarter.

On in the sun again, the rose on her coat, she was even prettier and brighter looking than before. If she felt stunned and amazed when she entered the reception room of the rising young author she hid her disappointment very successfully.

The reception room, by actual count, had 47 girls sitting there, a pathetic eagerness to please on every face.

After a twenty-minute wait, during which time six other applicants straggled in timidly, Ralph Henderson Brooks came from his inner office. He looked about in dismay, ran his fingers through his black hair, which had one white streak through the side of it, and then, uncertainly, let his eyes go over each girl there.

"I-I am really at a loss as to the proper method of interviewing you," he murmured. "I might take you alphabetically or in the order in which you came here or-oh, I don't know. "You, if you please, you come in first," he said to Nora. Swiftly Nora rose and followed him into his office.

"What I want is some one to illustrate my material," he said. "I am a writer, not an artist. I know what a quick, flashing smile at her, "but it has to be done on paper before I know whether or not it will do. A great portion of it is to be daily stories. syndicated, and the illustrations must be with each story when they leave my office there. Suppose you do a picture right now-call it-" He paused to consult a sketched-out story before him on the desk. "Call it Butterfly Flower," he said. "That's what I'll do-I'll let each of the girls out there draw a sketch by that title and then-then, maybe I can sort of 'weed 'em out,' as one might say."

Nora, utterly amazed, found herself sitting in the corner of his office and opening her sketchbooks. Butterfly flower! Whatever in the world was a butterfly flower? She had books at home that would probably give her the information but here-here there was nothing. She glanced down at the rose on her coat, a worried little frown etching itself between her eyebrows. She wanted this job more than she had wanted anything for a long, long time.

In the first place, she needed the income from it; in the second place, she wanted to get into some steady art work rather than the free-lance work she had been doing; and thirdly, she liked, oh, ever so much, the looks of this young author with his white-streaked black hair.

Her eyes still on the rose she began to smile. With a long step she reached the telephone, looked for a moment in the book and called a number. "Hattie, my pretty," she said in low tones, "and what would a butterfly flower be like-do you know?" "Is this Nora?" came Hattie's crisp tones. "Just a moment-mmm, here it is-heart's ease, Nora. Anything

"Not a thing in the world except—thanks a lot," said Nora smilingly.

"You'll please all write your names and telephone numbers on your sketches," suggested Mr. Brooks a few moments later. "Just leave them on the corner of this desk and I'll let you know." He vanished from the room and Nora, sniffing gently at her rose, sketched rapidly.

One by one the girls began to lay their sketches on the desk. One by one they left the reception room. The ringing of the telephone recalled the young author immediately.

When he had finished his call he glanced over the sketches rapidly. "My soul!" he muttered. "Will you 9696969696969696969699 look at this! Eh, there, ao you know what a butterfly flower is, Miss-

> "Nora Rooney," said Nora demurely. "Oh, yes, a butterfly flower is heart's ease, Mr. Brooks." "And you knew this-when I asked you to draw it?' he pursued. Nora hesitated. To say yes might mean clinching the job. Nora hated to lie. "W-well," she said hesitantly, a little smile creeping in and out of the corners of her mouth, "no, I didn't. I have a friend, though, where I buy a flower every day and so I telephoned to her and asked.'

"Well, let's see the sketch," he said enthusiastically. "Yes, sir, good sketch—exactly what I meant—and you've got a head on you, too. If you don't know you can find out what you need to find out, eh? Fine! If we can get down to terms that are right for both of us we're all set."

And they did get down to terms that amazed Nora. Her eyes fell on the sketches of flowers in the shape of butterflies glutching long or short stems as the artists had imagined they might look. "But how in the world did he ever single you out to go in for the first interview when your name begins with 'R,' and he didn't know even that much about you when you went in? And the room was already full when you got there?" said the amazed Hattie when Nora stopped in to tell her all about it.

"Wait, wait," laughed Nora. "I-I asked him that after I had the job and it seems that I was the only one wearing a flower, and he likes flowers. So he picked me to come in. Oh, some of the others had what he calls 'false flowers'-you know, cloth and ribbon. But he doesn't like those."

"And I take it he liked you as well as the rose?" asked Hattie shrewdly. But at that Nora only smiled-demurely-and dropped her long eyelashes in a mysterious fashion that meant-yes!

Rapid Development of

Far North Civilization The far northern outpost bearing the curious name of The Pas has appeared in the news occasionally as the home of some doughty musher, charioteer of a dog team across the frozen wastes of the old Hudson bay territory. One pictured a few rough shacks and a few fur-clad dwellers of mixed race. That may have been true in the past, but the opening up of the mine fields of the North and the construction of the Hudson bay railway have wrought changes. The Pas is now a considerable settlement, boasting, among other evidences of advanced civilization, an enterprising daily newspaper, the Northern Mail.

It is from an illustrated progress number of the Northern Mail that one gets some facts and figures that tell their own story. The public schools have an enrollment of 773, while the Dominion business college and the separate school are running night classes. There are a dozen modern schools in the area, all well attended. The mining recorder's office showed receipts for the year of $112,-000, while the local branch of the iquor commission showed a profit of $133,257. That is progress.

The Far North is not really such a forbidding place. The thermometer registers 40 below in winter, but the residents do not mind. Outdoor construction work goes on all the same in The Pas. There is no interruption. The development of this region is one of the signs of the great change which has taken place in the last ten years. The Pas will be an important station on the new Hudson bay route, whether that becomes part of a new ocean highway or merely serve local demands. The place will probably look out for a new name. Let us hope it won't find one.-Boston Herald.

Puzzled by Own Writing

Jules Janin, French writer, was famous for his abominable handwriting. One day a friend who received a letter from him managed with great pains and patience to gather that it was on some matter of importance, but could not decipher sufficient to understand what the matter was, so he decided to take a cab and drive to Janin's house

"Ah," said Janin, "it is you! So you have read my letter?"

"Not at all!" replied the visitor. "I have just received it, and have come to ask you to read it to me.' "Oh!" cried Janin, hopelessly. Then with a sigh of resignation, he said: "Very well, I will try!"

THE FINNISH NOPPLE

SWARMS of nopples swoop down over the Finnish fiords to feed on the schools of finnan haddies. Having no nose, the nopple is about the only creature outside of a Finn that can eat a finnan haddie, which has an odor like a thirteen-year-old lutefisk. To build its nest, the nopple collects several discarded auto tires and arranges them in an equilateral triangle with the acute angle down. Having bisected this by long division, it lays three eggs, from which hatch seven young nopples in time for the next finnan haddie school.

This nopple looking over the coconut trees along the coast for a nesting place has a peanut body and a filbert head. Split almond kernel wings and popped popcorn topknot add considerably to its appearance. The legs are toothpicks, with popcorn toes firmly imbedded in a wad of chewing gum. ........ PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH

KNOW a man who drives a mile each day to the ice house because it is twenty cents a hundred cheaper than ice delivered. And he boasts of his frugality. Evidently he does not figure in the price of gasoline, the wear and tear on his car, the chances of scratching his fine sedan or of wetting the carpet by the melting ice, the time that it takes to go after the ice and the fact that frequently he forgets to go at all and the family is left without ice over Sunday or a holiday. This man is penny wise and pound foolish and doesn't know it. The same is true of the head of a large concern who spends his valuable time cutting the envelopes of all his letters into sheets of paper to use as scribbling paper and thinks he is economizing. For a few cents he could buy all the scratch paper he is likely to use in

There is no end to illustrations of how we are all penny wise and pound foolish in some matters. The reason is that we are short sighted. We see only the immediate. The small saving looks big to us because it is concrete and definite. We lose sight of the greater losses we encounter because they are removed in time and space and because they are abstract.

We are penny wise and pound foolish for want of knowledge, self-deceptive habits of thrift, false notions of economy, lack of ability to think the matter through or to figure out in exact terms just where the saving, if any, comes in.

The person who is penny wise and pound foolish is the last one in the world to realize that he needs the services of an efficiency expert, for he is all the while congratulating himself on his wisdom and efficiency.

Perhaps what we lose in money by being penny wise and pound foolish is made up to us in the elation of self-deception

SUSPICION AND MISTRUST

WILL you please write something about the evil and the danger of suspictousness?" urged a correspondent.

"I have just had the most humiliating experience through being suspicious of my maid. It wasn't with regard to her honesty, but in the matter of her intentions for the summer. We are not going away for the summer, and although she definitely assured me that she was staying, my mother had suspected for some time that she would leave us to go with people who would take her to a summer resort.

"So long did mother keep harping on this that I began to see in the girl's every move a trick or a scheme to leave me when I needed her most. Naturally this affected my attitude toward the girl, which caused friction, and when something concrete occurred that made me practically certain I taxed her with it-and found that we were entirely mistaken.

There were perfectly simple explanations for every act that we had misinterpreted, and through our suspicion invested with ulterior motives. Absolutely innocent, routine matters we had colored black for ourselves by looking at them through suspicionsooted glasses.

"Can you imagine how cheap I felt in the presence of that girl?"

There is nothing that could be added to strengthen the lesson that is in that letter, except perhaps to say that mistrust is a boomerang. Just as confidence will bind to you even a person whose loyalty may be wavering, so through suspicion and mistrust you are certain to lose the loyalty of even the most faithful, whether they be employees or friends.

The woman who wrongly suspected her maid has not only the waste of her nervous energy to charge against this. Suspicion is more expensive than that. By her strained attitude toward the girl, engendered by her suspicion, she gave her a grievance. And by expressing the suspicion she robbed herself of the affection and loyalty of her employee.

Dahlia Cultivation

Dahlia history commences in 1791, when Cavanilles, the director of the Botanic garden of Madrid, Spain, described the flowering of a set of dahlia roots received in 1789 from Vicente Cervantes of Mexico. Dahlias first reached England in 1789 through the igency of the Marchioness of Bute This had little effect on the history of the plant, however, as all these plants perished from a lack of proper understanding of their needs. They were re-introduced successfully in 1804 through the interest of Lady Holland.

JONATHAN AND DAVID: A NOBLE FRIENDSHIP

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 18:1-4; 20: 14-17, 32, 34, 41, 42; II Samuel 1:17-27. GOLDEN TEXT—A man that hath friends must show himself friendly and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two True Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and Jona-than, Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-

IC—Finding Worthy Friends, YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Friend Who Does Not Fail.

The friendship of David and Jonathan has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival Worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince, heir to the throne according to hereditary rights. David was heir by divine choice and arrangement. Jonathan knew this and magnanimously waived his natural personal rights in favor of the one he knew God had chosen.

1. Friendship Established Between David and Jonathan (I Sam. 18:1-4). 1. Love at sight (vv. 1, 2).

Following the interview of Saul and David, after the victory over Goliath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. He loved David as his own soul. While there was mutual love, this pleasing trait stands out more prominently in Jonathan than in David.

2. A covenant established (vv. 3, 4). The bringing of David into Saul's home gave opportunity for expression of love between Jonathan and David. This love resulted in the establishment of a covenant between them. Following this love covenant, Jonathan stripped himself of his court Tobe and his equipment and gave them to David. This act was a virtual abdication of the throne to

II. Jonathan Defended David Against Saul's Frenzy (I Sam. 19:1-7).

David went into the battle with Goliath out of zeal for God and true religion, not for personal glory, but it turned out as always, that because he Put God first, God honored him. On David's return from victory over the Philistines, according to oriental custom, he was met by a triumphal chorus of women of all the cities of Israel, chanting praises to him for his victory over their enemy. They ascribed more praise and honor to David than to Saul. To hear sung the Praises of a shepherd boy as surpassing his own was too much for Saul. It aroused murderous envy which had been slumbering in his heart and moved him to attempt twice to kill David. This is not an imaginary sin. Its counterpart may be found in many of our own hearts. The only cure for this dreadful evil is to put God first to think more of him and our duty to him than our reputation before men. In Saul's third attempt to kill David, Jonathan defended him before his father, from whom he secured the oath that David should not be slain. III. Jonathan Revealed to David Saul's Murderous Attempt (I Sam.

20:30-40). The beginning of the new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting at which all the members of the family were expected to be present (v. 5). David's excuse for being absent was that he might go home to attend the Yearly sacrifice of his family. The annual feast was more important than the monthly feast. Matters were now 80 serious that Jonathan and David renewed the covenant between them. In this renewal the terms were broadened beyond the life of Jonathan (vv. 14, 15). Saul's anger was now so fierce that for Jonathan to be found in David's company was most danger-Ous, so he cleverly planned a sign by which he could make known to David Sami's attitude and purpose. True friendship is proven in warning those Who are exposed to danger.

Concerning friendships, observe: 1. It should be made while both Parties are young. This is the time when hearts are capable of being knit together.

2. Real friends are few. Great care should be exercised in the formation of friendships, for while loving everybody, it is possible to have only a few friends.

3. Both parties must be God-fearing. David and Jonathan both recognized their obligation to the Lord, and that his help was essential to the welfare of both

IV. David Mourns for Jonathan (II Sam. 1:17-27).

When David learned of Jonathan's death he sincerely mourned, remembering his undying loyalty and his personal worth.

Love Is the Conqueror

Love alone in this world is the conqueror; by love alone can the nations of the world be brought into the paths peace; to pursue and to attain love is to pursue the one thing needful to attain the only thing in the world. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin.

God's Presence or Absence I think I can say, through grace, that God's presence or absence alone distinguishes places to me.—William Boy Really Father of Man, Says This Writer Boys are really fathers of their dad if the latter are conscientious parents, according to Frederic Van de Water, in Woman's Home Companion.

Fathers begin, he explains, by assuming a saintly attitude to impress the youth by example, but they soon find that the youngsters are catching them in the very things they preach

"As months march past I find myself dissembling less," says the writer. "Besides expurgating my speech and standing when women enter, I have acquired other virtues. I fold my napkin after each meal. I am polite over the telephone. I am dressed in time for breakfast. I hang up my overcoat and I wipe out the tub after my bath. My son does few of these things without prompting, but, anyway, he will not be able to say that he observed his father in a similar

"By the time he is twenty he will be pretty much like other men of his age. I have no illusions in that direc-But I am certain of one thing: By the time he is twenty I shall be a well-bred, well-groomed, tolerant, diligent man and I shall have him to thank for it."

World Always Set to

Give Welcome to Joke In these days of modern rapid transportation nothing travels faster and farther than a new joke. Its appearance is as welcome as the birth of an heir in an old-fashioned kingdom, and it is started on a dizzy circulation that sweeps the whole country in concentric rings and then flies off at a tangent to the farthest confines of the jest to the Barbary states and

The new joke, perhaps, comes out modestly and timidly in a newspaper or magazine. It is quickly seized and reproduced by a thousand more. It next appears in radio programs; it is sandwiched in the "talkies"; it passes on to the vaudeville stage, and after it is supposed to have jumped the ocean it fools its old friends by turning up in the daily comic strips. Of course, it never gets away from the afterdinner speakers. There is nothing so much in demand as bright new jokes-the common property of alland there is never overproduction. He is a real benefactor of humanity who contributes to the world a good joke. -Logansport Pharos-Tribune.

Rich Richard

After all these years it is revealed that Ben Franklin-who said it was hard for an empty sack to stand on end, and a stitch in time saves nine, and "early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy and wealthy and wise," did not abide by his own recommendations. The sly Ben by no means invariably turned in at 9 o'clock and out at 4. He liked to sit up with the boys-and girls-as well as any one, making merry far into the night.

He did follow the "Poor Richard" precepts in youth, however-and they worked. Early to bed and early to rise made him healthy and wealthy first, and then wise e and see the fireworks afterward .-Exchange.

Has Been Postponed

The daughter of the house arrived home one night looking very sad.

"Whatever's the matter?" asked her

"Oh, I thought John loved me," the girl explained, "but now I know he's not going to propose-at least not for some time.'

"Why, how do you know?" asked her mother.

"Because he sent me a big box of stationery with my initials monogrammed on it-and there's enough to last me for six months."

Daughter Taken for Debts

One of the scandals of Lobola is the fact that if a man gets into debt his creditor can take away his daughter in payment. Many girls thus taken are mere children. They become the man's slaves until they are marriageable, when they join his wives. From babyhood almost they learn to regard him as their future lord. Their life is indescribable. South Africa, together with 55 other nations, agreed to abolish slavery, but the "debt children" seem to be overlooked, for the custom prevails.

First British Battleship

The British battleship, called Great Harry, is said to be the first ship which, strictly speaking, belonged to the royal navy. It was built in 1488 and had three masts and as late as the year 1545 was the only ship of that build in the English fleet. It is stated that she was accidentally burned at Woolwich in 1553. She was built during the reign of Henry VII and was probably called the Great Harry for his nickname, which was

U. S. Geological Survey

Resumes Its Work Again

Washington.-With the arrival of spring the United States geological survey has resumed field operations. Some 250 parties, ranging in size from one geologist to surveying groups of six or seven men, will be dispatched from Washington within the next month.

This year economies in transportation are being affected through concentrating the geological survey's fleet of automobiles near headquarters. Already 30 cars loaded with engineers and instruments have left Washington bound for Kentucky, Virginia, New York and other nearby

Preparing for the season's research, the division of field equipment of the geological survey is one of the busiest units in the government service at this time of the year.

Here the instruments of geologists and engineers, some of them worth several thousand dollars apiece, are undergoing repairs. A 17 jewel watch is like a mechanical toy to some of these instruments, adjustments of which are often computed in millionths of an inch.

Rail Officials Seeking Lost Montana Village

Miles City, Mont.-Lost: The community of Linniberton, last seen on the Milwaukee railroad line in 1910. If found please notify W. N. Ross, district freight and passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul

Officials of the railroad are curious about this illusory lost hamlet which, apparently, was located on the Milwaukee line somewhere in Montana. In fact, they have pictures purporting to be Linniberton showing a group of Indians before a general merchan-

But where is it now? Certainly it isn't on a map and nobody seems to know just where it was located or what happened to it. In short, it's a ghost town worthy of the name, for its disappearance has been complete.

Licorice Water Has Value

For generations nonalcoholic drinks made from water infusions of licorice root or paste have been popular throughout southern Europe. This sounds much like the anemic concoction of our childhood days, "lickerish water," which was carried around in a bottle and shaken at frequent intervals to make it froth. This mixture of licorice root, water and sugar, so beloved of children, really has medicinal value, for the virtue of licorice as a tonic and blood purifier has been long recognized. In many factories of France, especially in the iron and steel mills, it is given to workers for drinking purposes instead of plain water.

Lawmakers' Resignations

A member of the senate or of the house of representatives resigns by transmitting a letter of resignation either directly to the executive of his state or to the presiding officer of the house of congress of which he is a member. In the house the usual practice is to transmit the letter of resignation directly to the governor, at the same time notifying the speaker of the house of the action. When a member resigns directly to the senate or to the house the body to which the resigning member belongs orders its presiding officer to inform the governor of the state of the resignation,

No People of History

Unfamiliar With Rings

Rings were not always used to decorate the fingers, and in suitable forms at different times, they were worn as anklets, armlets and necklaces; on the toes and fingers; in the ears and nose, writes Frank H. Vizetelly, editor of the New Standard dictionary. To this day, the nose-ring, the ear-ring, and the toe-ring are worn in Far Eastern lands. Porcelain finger-rings were worn by the poorer class of Egyptians. Such as have been preserved in the British museum, London, are of extreme beauty. Some are of blue porcelain with a band of not more than oneeighth of an inch in thickness, yet small as they are they bear two impressions.

From Egypt and the East rings were introduced to Greece, where they were worn by all free men as insignia of office or for ornament. From the Greeks the Romans adopted the custom, but by them rings were worn more as luxuries, and became very common. To so great an excess did the Romans carry this practice that they had summer rings and winter rings, the former being heavier and thicker than the latter. Roman gems were sought and highly valued for mystic virtues attributed to them.

Order Pressure Cooking for United States Army

Washington.-Adaptation of the pressure cooking system to the army's rolling kitchens, to shorten the time required for preparing the meals of doughboys on the march, was ordered as an experiment by Maj. Gen. Stephen O. Fuqua, chief of the infantry. The army has always experienced considerable difficulty in feeding troops on the march.

Cannot Prevent "Peeping"

Nashville, Tenn.-However undesirable the condition may seem there is no law in Tennessee to prevent curious persons from peeping in windows, the state Supreme court recently held in reversing a conviction of J. L. Deboard, Newport.

Unconscious Helpers

A minister in Scotland recently related that once, somewhat tired, he was slowly climbing a steep hill, when all at once he heard a boy practicing on his kettledrum. He was playing a march, and, almost unconsciously, the weary climber quickened his pace, and kept in time with the rat-tat-tat of the drum. He was helped by the boy, yet the boy knew nothing of it. That thought, said the speaker, greatly encouraged him; for often, like the prophet, workers get discouraged, and think they have labored in vain, whereas it may be that their example and efforts have, unknown to them, helped many a struggling brother and sister along the path of truth and right.—Exchange.

"Well, Martin," said the country squire to his ex-footman, who had left a year before to join the navy and had returned on leave, "how do you like your new life?"

"Fine, sir," replied the sailor. "That's good," said the man's previous master.

Tit-Bits.

"Yes, sir, it's a grand life. Once upon a time I didn't think much of the sea, though," the sailor explained, "but now I see that the water's the finest thing in the world. For instance, if there was no water in the world not one of us would learn to swim, and then look what a lot of people would be drowned."-London

Elixir of Life

"No one need die-discovery of the true Elixir of Life"-was the colorful language used to introduce to the public of the nineties a new patent medicine, which was described further as "a miracle of modern pathological science and ultimate triumph of medical research and investigation-a remedy found at last which, if applied properly, will effectively prevent decay of the tissues, renew the brain, blood. bone and body, and produce a miraculous prolongation of life."-Detroit

IT'S WISE TO CHEVROLET CHOOSE A SIX

Announcing a new production record

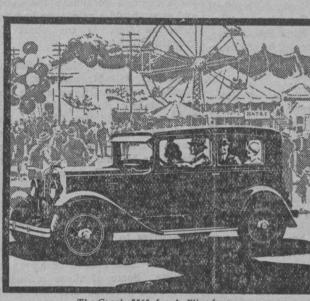

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobilesnearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price-

-the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder engine-the comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis-and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And

THE KEY FEEDS

If there were a law against too strong a statement in advertising, and if we stated here the whole truth about the quality of the ingredients, we blend into THE KEY FEEDS, we would almost certainly be fined or put in jail.

We know that the first time we sell a feeder, he has to depend upon his faith in what we tell him.

The next time we sell him, he buys in the light of his actual knowledge of our FEEDS. It is the second sale that we are after.

Quality so dependable and uniform that price is a secondary consideration. This is the main reason for the constantly increasing popularity of THE KEY FEEDS.

REV. HEIMER GRANTED DIVORCE

Rev. Peter E. Heimer, former pastor of the Thurmont Reformed Charge was granted a partial divorce from his wife, on Monday, but without alimony. The decision was handed down by Judges Urner and Newman, in the asset that was pending for in the case that was pending for a

The testimony of Mrs. Heimer alleging inhuman treatment, to which there was but little corroborative evidence, was discredited. The Court de-clined to settle the financial disputes involved in the case.

The suit was started by Mrs. Heimer in 1929, when she asked alimony.

Rev. Heimer entered a case suit for divorce in 1930, asking absolute divorce, on the ground of desertion.

A good law not enforced is like an unperformed promise.
