WORLD'S SERIES RESULTS -22-Responsible for the Yankee Victory.

Last Sunday the New York "Yankees" of the American League defeated the Cincinnati "Reds" of the National League and in so doing won four games in a row, and the fourth consecutive world's series championship. Notwithstanding the four wins all of the scores were close and the last game required ten innings. The Yankees won mainly because our former well known citizens, spent a short while in town, on Monday.

of home runs. As home run hitters represent but a very small percentage of the players in a league, it seems unfair that the few should be so prominent in determing results, especially considering the scoring by runners already on the bases.

It would be fairer, we think, to amend the rules by making any ball batted outside of the field a foul strike on which no play can be made. This would practically eliminate home runs, but it would be all-around fair, and would not injure the popularity of the game.

A rule that is already in force, back of 1st. and 3rd. base foul lines, should logically be in force all around the field, and no play should be made when the ball is outside of it.

If the suggested new rule should be considered too radical, it would at least be a step in the right direction to allow a batter to be entitled to a run on a ball batted out of the ground but not permit the advancement of any base runners.

We think baseball of the professional class, is beginning to need popularizing, but the continued per-petuation of a "murderer's row" is not one of the ways to bring this

RAINSTORM POURS FISHES FROM THE SKY.

Mrs. John Shirk received the following clipping from her daughter, Mrs. Edna Shirk Ladney, who lives in Buffalo, N. Y., and makes the statement that this is a true fish story, as she saw them herself.

"Although persons who commented that it rained cats and dogs in Buffalo, were wrong, it did rain fishes—hundreds of 'em—during the thunderstorm early last evening. From one inch to two inches in length, the fishes poured out of the heavens to cover the pavements in front of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Terminal in lower Main Street, They appeared to be minnows, scooped up first representative from Hampstead the heavy blow from parts unown and transported through the sky to be dumped on Buffalo.

Frank Thompson, porter at the terminal, declared the fishes covered the pavement from curb to curb. Thompson scooped up a handful of them as proof that it had rained fishes in Buffalo. Auto tires soon ground the rest into practically noth-

MODERN HEATING METHODS ENCOURAGE PESTS.

The advent of cooler fall weather brings no relief in the war against household pests. The even heating of modern homes gives comfort not only to its human inhabitants, also to clothes moths, carpet beetles, cockroaches, silver fish, and other pests that once were frozen out of the chilly clothes closets and storage

The housewife who values her woolen clothes and furs must protect them the year round against insect attack. Frequent brushing, sunning, and airing during the winter, as well as scrupulous cleaning of all cracks and corners of closets and other storage places, will do much to save clothes from damage. Wool sweaters, socks, als for October. or other garments that are even slightly soiled need constant attention because they are particularly appetizing to moths. Clothes that are rarely worn should be cleaned and packed in moth-proof containers. Napthalene or paradichlorobenzene flakes give added protection to stored

Cleanliness is not only cheap and effective protection against clothes moths and carpet beetles but also against kitchen insects.

The small, active, greyish, scale-covered insects known as silver fish from Westminster. thrive best in damp, warm basements but cause serious injury anywhere in the house. They feed upon paper and wallpaper, bookbindings, starchy or sweet food, and to some extent on fabrics especially rayon, and on starched clothing or curtains. The cheapest weapon against them is a poison bait made of oatmeal, white arsenic, sugar, salt, and water to moisten. But this bait must be kept away from children and pets. Pyre-thrum powder dusted or blown into silver fish haunts is also helpful. So is kerosene spray or a spray made by dissolving paradichlorobenezene in carbon tetrachloride.

CARROLL COUNTY CAN NOT BUILD ITS ROADS

Judge Parke Dismissed the Plea of Commissioners.

Judge Parke, on Tuesday, decided against the suit made by the County Commissioners for the return of the county's share of the gasoline tax, to be used by the Commissioners for the maintenances of county roads; the contention being that the Com-missioners had complied with the law by notifying the Roads Commission that the county wanted to operate its own system.

The decision was based wholly on the laws as they stand, and gave the opinion that if Carroll County wants to take over the roads of the county, doing must come through new legislation.

The Roads Commission contended that the clause on which the county based its claim for its prorata share of the gasoline tax was superseded by an earlier clause that stated specifically that Carroll was one of the counties in which administration of the roads would be by the state.

COUNTY WELFARE BOARD INFORMATION.

The County Welfare Board at its meeting on October 4, reorganized with the following: Chairman, J. Keller Smith; Vice-Chairman, Dr. Charles R. Foutz; Secretary, Herbert G. Englar.

Mr. Paul Walsh, Hampstead was welcomed as a new member and the to serve on the Board since organization in August, 1935. The retiring member whom Mr. Walsh succeeds is Frank P. Alexander, Keymar, who served a term of three years acting as secretary for the past two years. Mr. Alexander was untiring in his efforts to carry out the work of Welfare Program for Carroll County and was a part of several committees whose time and attention were given to studying and formulating policies which have been adopted permanently by the county organization.

The most important matter considered by the Board on Wednesday pertained to the groups which will benefit by the general or emergency relief fund. Effective October 1 this particular form of assistance will be matched by State funds and will be used for the most part for needy unemployables who can not meet requirements for WPA and have not reached the age limit for old age assistance. It was decided that a part of the fund shall be used for short term projects provided it will include persons in need who can not be included on WPA because of a shortage of

A CHRISTMAS APPEAL

For Chinese "Brownies" Living in Shanghai.

The following letter was received by The Record, this week from Rev. H. G. C. Hallock, Shanghai, China. This is a mission to which The Record has been sending small contributions each year for a long while, some of which have been handed in.

We again offer our services to those who care to, and feel able, to contribute to this cause. Considering the length of time that is required to send money to China, all gifts should be handed in, not later than November 10th.

His brother, to whom he refers, is a Presbyterian minister. Cash may also be sent to him at Rochester, N.

Day by day anxiety comes to them, not knowing what a day may bring forth. We do wish to bring a bright spot into their lives on Christmas. Do not send toys to me, they break easily, postage is expensive, customs dues are cruel. Do not send money to me. It might never reach me through the guards but please do send your contribution to my brother, Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D., 10 Livingston Park, Rochester, N. A trade pact this week between England and Russia has aroused considerable interest. Under it, England would sell rubber and tin to Russia, in exchange for much needed timber. This is believed not to be a very popular pact, from the German viewpoint. Russian sources claim full mastery of the North Sea both on the surface and by submarines, while England claims to have sunk more German craft than has so far been lost by England, and that its new air force has been largely increased.

Lord Chamberlain has told the British Parliament that Britain can not accept any Hitler peace, and that the German Furrer's word is worth-

The indications are that German forces will go to war in earnest on the Western front very soon, as its so-called peace offers have been rejected by England and France. It is believed that the first main efforts will be from the air, and possibly within a week.

MOTOR VEHICLE DEATHS SHOW SMALL INCREASE.

The monthly report of the Safety Department of the office of the Motor Vehicles Department of Maryland shows that for the first nine months of his year, 8 more deaths have resulted from motor vehicle accidents than for the corresponding period last year, or 297 for 1939.

There were 15 pedestrians killed during the month, five of which were children. Of this number 1 was playing in roadway, 2 stepping from in front or behind vehicle, 1 crossing at intersection, no signal, and 1 cross. intersection, no signal, and 1 crossing not at intersection. Of the adult pedestrians killed, 2 walking in road, left side against traffic, 5 walking in road, right side with traffic, 1 stepping from in front or behind vehicle, and 2 crossing not at intersection. According to our summary 15 or 41% were pedestrians, 15 or 41% were passengers, 1 or 2% was riding a bicycle, and 6 or 16% were the op-erators themselves. Nearly all of the accidents occurred during clear weather on dry roads, and a majority on straight, concrete constructed roads. No day of the week was free from fatal accidents, with Sunday in the lead with 9. Passenger cars with apparently no defects head the list, with operating too fast for conditions by the operators, who in a majority were white, normal condition, between the ages (20-29) with 5 years or more experience, and a resident of the Counties of this State. There were 3 hit and run cases during the month of September.

Baltimore City is charged with 9

accidents resulting in 9 deaths, with 24 accidents resulting in 28 deaths in the counties. -22-

GAS TAX PAID BY MOTORISTS.

October 9th .- Motorists of Maryland paid record gasoline taxes during the month of August of this year according to a statement of gasoline tax receipts issued today by J. Millard Tawes, Comptroller of the State of Maryland. The statement showed that motorists consumed 27,346,gallons of gasoline and paid the State of Maryland $1,093,844.84.

When asked to comment on this huge collection of gasoline taxes, Comptroller Tawes replied as follows: "I am happy to announce that we have collected this month the greatest amount of gasoline tax which has been received by this department since the imposition of the gasoline tax.

This record payment by the motorists of well over $1,000,000 convinces me that with the complete cessation of diversion as brought about by this Administration, Maryland motorists can look forward to a new deal in highways. Another remarkable thing about this huge collection which should prove interesting to the Maryland motorists is the fact that this money was collected at an administrative expense of less than $3,000."

"The gasoline tax department of the Comptroller's Office receives an annual allowance of $34,000. The very small amount needed by the State to collect the gasoline tax is made possible by the complete collection of gasoline taxes by the petroleum industry of Maryland."-Press Release.

MARYLAND SENATORS TO HEAR DELEGATIONS.

Senators Tydings and Radcliffe have agreed upon a plan to get the views of Marylanders alone, regarding neutrality legislation. They have been besieged by requests to see del-egations and individuals, and with and petitions for and against repeal. As acceding to all requests would be impossible the Senators have decided to hold a public meeting, at 10:30 next Monday morning in the Caucus room of the Senate office building, and give a formal hearing. They request that the two sides will organize in advance, and select spokesmen in order that the fortyfive minutes of time accorded to each may be utilized in an orderly manner.

Random Thoughts

ANTIQUES.

What are they? Are they rare prices of old furniture of fine wood and workmanship, and fine old glass, silverware and pottery; or are they just old out-of-date pieces of furniture of cheap material when new? Because something is very old, in itself hardly stands for much actual value.

There is a difference between an antique, and a relic. The latter is properly something left, or some memorial, of an age or person. We should say that pieces of furniture from our old homeparents, grand-parents, etc., are And there is an understandable sentiment favorable to owning and preserving them as

But, we cannot understand how this sentiment, under the name of "antiques," applies very strongly to those who buy these old relics from other families.

There are exceptional cases, no doubt, in which the name and reputation of the maker is widely known—for instance, an "Eli Bentley" clock, especially when the clock is still keeping good Buying antiques as a "fad" somehow seems to us as applying to those who have plenty of money to spend, in order to possess something to talk about but get very little value in service from.

FROM C. O. CLEMSON, ATT'Y, ON VARIOUS TOPICS.

You will be surprised, when I tell you that not until today, when my copy of The Times, of Westminster, was handed to me by the postman about 2:00 P. M., did I know that you had honored me by the publication of my letter to you about two weeks age citizen by legious writing long in your copy of The Times, what our mutual friend, H. Peyton Gorsuch had to say about you and about me. I have wanted you to write some time, one of your forceful and direct editorials, on the subject of the average citiden by legions writing long letters of advice, instructions and suggestions to the members of the House of Representatives and to the members of the United States Senate, always "propaganda" back of those letters and as a rule the society or the organized group is not made

This question was a matter of a very interesting exchange of views, last Sunday night in Washington, D. C., when Mrs. Clemson and I were the tioned in our beginning have served that ever have been hatched have guests for about six hours at dinner and afterward, before an open hearth fire, in the George Washington Inn, adjacent to the House office building, managed and operated by Harry Bond and Gladys (Vanderford) Bond, whom you may know. Mrs. Bond was the only daughter of the late Charles E. Vanderford, who with his brother owned and edited and manbrother owned and edited and managed the Democratic Advocate of Westminster, in those days when it was a fine newspaper and well served this community.

I have known Senator Radcliffe since about the year 1896, which was the middle of my experience as a stu-dent at Western Maryland College, there I graduated in 1898. I met Radcliffe in Cambridge. He was then an interesting, quiet young man, the Principal of the Cambridge High School, not much of a High School. He said the other evening here, speaking about the thousands of letters that come to him and to Senator Tydings, many of them telling him of how to vote on this question of neutrality, "Does any man need to wonder how I am likely to vote, when he shall remember that I have one child, an only son, now a student at Princeton University, aged twenty one years; a boy in good health, not strong enough to be a member of the football team, but quite fit to be excellent Cannon-fodder for Adolph Hitler's shock troops"? I repeat, does any one need to wonder. He said that in Washington, even in the Senate and among the members of the army and the navy, whose busside which commands the greatest ically. This war will close and 'peace' iness is preparing to fight and to be resources, not in men and materials will come with exhaustion, but it armed, men know just as little now, about the situation in Europe, as the average man, who reads and who listens to the radio, might be found to know, here in Westminster or in Taneytown (the latter I add). This makes clear how difficult it is for a member of the House of Representa-tives and for the members of the U. Senate at this time to be able to see into the future.

We talked on at length. Senator Radcliffe had spoken at the Armory here at the opening of the Independent Grocer's Food Show. Before that time I had been with him and some other men at a delightful dinner, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis Reese, in Westminster. I had kept Radcliffe, while at the dinner table, telling us, as far as it was right and proper for him to speak, what he had learned about the war situation in Europe. I think you would have been much pleased with him if you had heard the very conservative and the very intelligent way in which he spoke It is true that he could add very little to what you already know and to what most of the people at the table already knew, nevertheless, it is interesting to hear a man speak freely, when you know that he is one of that small number of 96 U.S. Senators, upon whose shoulders at this time is the responsibility for the future for-eign policy of U. S. A. This letter has rambled on, far afield from the thought with which I began and yet I love to write in this way, just talking freely to a man to whom I like to speak, and speaking freely because that is the privilege of friendship. This is the way that I spend many hours with H. Peyton Gorsuch. I like it so much, when you say something nine about him I know say something nice about him. I know full well that his life journey is well on the way toward the setting Sun and yet, I know that you will agree with me, that such a man will leave behind him an influence for good, that will endure for many years after him. I have lived close to him and been much in his confidence, ever since I came to the Bar in the year 1902 I seek his company, ask his advice and respect his judg-ment. No man of higher principles has ever lived here, during my whole life time, as a member of the Bar, during which time I have met many

He says that he does not deserve it but we know that he does deserve it and because he is so modest is all the more reason why it is right for you to say these nice things about him often, for all too soon the time will come when he himself will not be able to hear and to read what is said about him. I do like to see men give flowers to each other, as they deserve them, as they meet and pass each other on the broad highway of life, for after all we do not pass this way again and we must not make the mistake of forgetting these little acts of kindnesses, so many of which you have done and so many kind words that you have said about many peo-ple. This will be the best monument that can be erected to you.

Before it shall be too late, I am anxious to see you and H. Peyton Gorsuch put together your two heads and make your contributions to the Historical Society of Carroll County, for the information and for the benefit and encouragement of future generations, contributions, such as you shall select and determine upon, and the like of which no other men can match. Miner Dies Half Mile From Water In Death Valley

Body Found With His Arms Imbedded in the Sand Digging for Water.

SAN BERNARDINO, CALIF.-By a faint line of footprints circling crazily for 20 miles over the hot sand of the Mojave desert authorities traced the agonizing end of Bill Hyatt, 62-year-old miner.

Hyatt's body was found with his arms embedded to the elbows in the blistering sand. Apparently he had been deranged by thirst and the heat (the normal desert temperature is 120 degrees) and had been digging bare-handed for water. Across the next sand dune, half a mile away, was a water hole.

Hyatt had been visiting his sister in Los Angeles and was returning to his job at the Telegraph mines, about 250 miles in the interior. Crossing the desert the rear axle of his automobile broke and he started out on foot for help.

Desolate Region.

The hike began on a side road near the south tip of blazing Death valley. It is one of the hottest and most desolate regions in the country. A stubby growth of mesquite and cacti peppers the ground between stretches of sand dunes, bare floors of hot rock and white alkali lakes. Red cliffs shimmer in the heat and mirages of cool lakes, mountains and green valleys rise out of the super-heated air to confuse the traveler.

The temperature was above 120 degrees when Hyatt climbed out of his broken-down car. Had he waited quietly in the automobile and conserved his water, he would have been saved by the men who found his body later.

For several miles Hyatt's tracks were straight beside the road. Then they began to waver. Ten miles from the car, was his discarded canteen, empty. From then on, the tracks were a record of Hyatt's agony under the blazing desert sun.

Wanders in Circles. The tracks alternately dragged from exhaustion, and sprinted from a thirst-driven haste. Beside his trail lay pulled-up mesquite bushes. Hyatt apparently had tried to suck moisture from their withered roots.

Then the tracks began to wander in circles. Hyatt was shown to have fallen down, then got up and struggled on. Veteran men of the desert said his last two miles had been torture. Each time he fell, he tried to dig in the sand with his hands for water. The wanderings brought him near Saratoga springs, but just the other side of a sand dune from sight of this water hole, he fell for the last time. His 20-mile hike was half a mile too simit.

Two other miners, R. E. Graph and R. M. Davis, came across his broken-down car and hurried along his tracks. Coroner's deputies brought the body to Barstow, Calif.

London Plans 'Youth City'

For Visiting Young People "Youth movements" are playing a steadily growing part in the lives of many countries, but in none so great a part as in the Englishment of the problems. speaking nations. Keen interest is now being shown in an ambitious project recently launched to create a "city of youth" in London which would form the focal point of all youth organizations in the British foundation. The plan is to build a "city" at a total cost of about $5,000,000, with its own theater, library, dining and common rooms and with various dormitory blocks. The foundation is intended to serve first and foremost boys and girls of student age from all parts of the empire who may visit London for study purposes and holiday tours. Suitable accommodation for such visitors is woefully scarce in London now, and the new "youth city" plan would solve the problem of how to house thousands of young people every year at a cost within the reach of far more parents than is at present the

The "city" will also provide accommodation for people from within Great Britain who would otherwise not have a chance of visiting the educational treasures of the capital, such as museums and art galleries, while it will be possible, too, to open the "city" to groups of visiting students from foreign countries. The impression of London that these young people would take back to their own homes would probably mean much in the sphere of international relations in years to

Reflected Glare Removed

From Illuminating Unit Providing illumination free from reflected glare, a new type of lighting unit was demonstrated recently. It was a desk lamp so arranged that light from an ordinary bulb was passed through a sheet of transparent material, to remove the light waves that cause reflected glare, says Popular Mechanics. Those waves or vibrations of light useful for seeing were not affected, but the waves ordinarily reflected as white specular light or glare were eliminated. The effect on the printed page was a startling clarity of detail unobscured by reflections.

With glare eliminated, other lighting problems may be solved. Intensities can be increased to desired levels without the otherwise proportionate increase in reflected glare frowned upon by optical authorities. The light source may be placed directly in front of the reader, thus assuring even distribution of light across the page without concern as to reflections. While the reader has no sense of brightness with polarized illumination, much higher intensities can be main-

Glare, according to optical experts, impairs the visual function because it bleaches out the visual purple faster than it can be regenerated by the numan system.

Cats Called Destructive

According to the National Wildlife federation, the animals most destructive to wildlife on the farm are three that make their home with man—the cat, the rat and the dog. There has been so much said about the harm done by cats that progressive farmers no longer tolerate stray cats about their property. Without counting any other loss from cats, the destruction of insecteating birds calls for the most rigorous control of this persistent prowler of the fields. Studies of hunting cats show that they follow regular routes, so that if one is seen it can usually be captured by setting a trap in the locality. Various forms of box traps are effective, since the cat is not a trap-shy animal. No estimate can be made of the damage done by rats at a distance from dwellings. In warm weather, rats take to the fields and marshes and are completely "wild." They are almost as fond of water as muskrats, and swim and dive about as well as their valuable relatives.

Melodeon an Ancient Instrument

Melodeons go far back in the centuries for their origin. Indeed a shepherd boy blowing through a bit of willow created the first organ. But as late as the early 1800s this tuneful little instrument, often in a beautiful rosewood case with quaint beading and lyre-shaped ends, was exceedingly popular. The melodeon is a reed instrument. The tone is produced through bellows operated by pedals, one serving to create a vacuum through which the air rushes and in its course passing through the reeds, the other producing the swell.

Black and White Not Colors For all practical purposes black and white are colors, but technically speaking, they are not. Colors are produced by the difference in length of light waves. The longer waves are seen as red, those a little shorter as orange, and so on. The shortest light waves visible appear as violet. A black object is one that absorbs all, or nearly all the light waves, and a white object is one that reflects all, or nearly all the light waves.

English Prison Issues

Books to All Inmates

Wandsworth prison in England has 800 inmates, mostly of "low mentality"; only 21/2 per cent of them have what is called "very good education"-that is, of the secondary school standard. A prisoner of university training is "exceptional." Apart from textbooks used for classes, the prison library consists of 15,000 volumes; the book stacks are supervised by the chaplain and a dozen inmates help him. A correspondent of the London Times describes the manner in which the books are issued:

On entering the prison each prisoner receives two books in addition to his religious books, one standard fiction and one educational. After four weeks an additional book is issued, and after a further eight weeks each man gets four books a week. In addition to these, a prisoner may at any time obtain one or more technical volumes.

Among the books most in demand are those of Edgar Wallace, Sinclair Lewis and W. J. Locke. In one habit library patrons in jail do not differ from library patrons out of jail, for there is a tendency to mutilate and disfigure books. The men who do this are usually shortterm prisoners who seem to delight in creating disorder. Bibles are often mutilated, and an interesting fact is that from one out of every two or three Bibles the last few chap ters of Revelation are missing. The psychologists may have a word for

After a man has been in the prison for three months he may obtain a large notebook and pencil. Many ask for these, but nine out of ten men abandon note making after using two or three pages of their books. Prisoners attending classes may have evercise books, atlases, and the like in their cells, and it is not unusual to see 10 or 20 books on a cell shelf. This evidence of interest must not be too readily accepted as final; many men think 'the extent of their learning and knowledge can be measured by the number of books in their possession." A prisoner condemned to death may have any book or periodical, and if he wishes may play chess with a warder. However, this is not compulsory on the prisoner. The type of book called for by prisoners is improving.

Divorcee Pleads With Governor to Decide Her Name

Wants to Marry Again and Finds Two Names Are Embarrassing.

HOLLYWOOD.—Nancy Pierson Brooks Macy Brill, who says she is known by two names in two states— and finds it "embarrassing"—wants the help of Governor Culbert L. Olson to settle things so she can marry again.

For two years she said she has been known in California as Mrs. Macy and as Mrs. Brill in Nevada and elsewhere. So she is asking Governor Olson for help in determining to whom she is married and what her legal name is. She has petitioned for action on an appeal from the annulment which William Hunsaker Brill III, wealthy young sportsman, obtained of their Yuma marriage nearly two years ago. The appeal has been in the courts for more than 18 months.

She Got a Divorce. Mrs. Brill in 1934 married Henry Macy III, scion of the New York department store family. The following year she went to Reno, Nev., established residence and obtained a divorce from Macy who did not contest the decree, but who had an attorney present to insure its valid-

In March, 1937, after a whirlwind courtship, Mrs. Brill married Brill. Shortly after the marriage Brill filed suit for annulment of the marriage on the dual grounds that he was intoxicated at the time the ceremony was performed and that Mrs. Brill's divorce from her previous husband was invalid.

Judge Edward Henderson, after having the case under advisement for several months, granted Brill the annulment on the grounds that Mrs. Brill had not been a bona fide resident of Nevada at the time she divorced Macy.

Court Takes No Action. Mrs. Brill said her attorneys then filed an appeal with the state supreme court challenging the right of a California judge to rule on the validity of her Reno divorce. Mrs. Brill continued: "There has been no action on my case since then, and I want to know who I am.

"It is very embarrassing and humiliating not to know my own name. Some people call me Mrs. Macy and others call me Mrs. Brill and I don't know which name to use or how to get out of this difficulty."

Find Lost Boy, Unhurt and Happy

Wandered for Three Days in Dense Minnesota Woods.

LAPORTE, MINN.-Russell Jensen, a sturdy six-year-old youngster, calmly told of his experiences while lost for three days in the dense timber and thickets of Paul Bunyan forest. He said he had an exciting time watching planes searching for him and hadn't even been hungry.

Two National Guardsmen, members of a company that had been aiding in the search with 500 volunteers, two planes and bloodhounds found him, only a mile and a half from a summer cottage from which he disappeared.

He was plodding along, his face smeared with berries, on the abandoned "Old Blue" trail between Akeley and Benedict, near Lake Kabekona. Surprisingly he was headed in the direction of his home. Guardsmen James Wall and Bud Potter found him, in good spirits, with his clothing intact.

The guardsmen took him to the cottage where his mother who had collapsed under the strain of his disappearance, was being treated by Dr. O. S. Ringle. The doctor examined the boy and said the only mark on his 45-pound body was a small scratch, probably received while he wandered through the thick under-

The boy's family had nearly abandoned hope he would be found alive. He wandered away from a group of children Monday morning while his father, Curtis Jensen of Albert Lea, Minn., was fishing. Soon he became lost in the forest, named after Paul Bunyan, a mythical character of great strength and genius in the tales of north woods lumbermen.

The youngster said he had eaten raspberries and blueberries during his three days of wandering and had obtained water from springs.

"I slept on the ground when I felt like it," he told Ringle. "I had the most fun watching those air-planes flying around. One was orange. The other one was blue."

Food as Fuel to Keep Body Going

Starches, Sugars, Fats Needed in Moderation

By EDITH M. BARBER

E VERY one talks so glibly today about minerals and vitamins! From this conversation it might be gathered that calories, for instance, had lost their importance. When mentioned it is apt to be with the idea of avoiding them in order to reduce weight.

Of course, the fact is that all of us need every day a goodly number of calories just to keep the body going and an extra supply for all our activities. The word calorie is merely a measure of energy which is produced when food in combination with oxygen is burned by the body engine to provide fuel and energy. Foods which we depend upon particularly for fuel are starches, sugars and fats. If any protein, or rather the animo acids which result from the digestion of protein remains, after the body has taken all it needs to repair tissues, the extra amount may be used as

Cereals provide us with fuel at low cost and are valued particularly for this reason, although our bodies make use of the protein which they contain. Cereals, whether they are taken in the forms of bread or breakfast food, or paste, of which macaroni and noodles are examples, are readily digested. Whole grains also contribute certain minerals and vitamins. They also furnish roughage which is generally an aid to digestion.

Baked Polenta.

3 tablespoons olive oil 1/4 cup minced onion ½ cup minced green peppers ½ cup minced pimientoes

2 cups tomatoes 1 teaspoon salt

l teaspoon sugar 1 bay leaf 6 cloves

4 cups hot wheat cereal or cornmeal mush cereal

1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese or ½ cup grated American cheese Heat oil. Cook the onion, peppers and pimientoes in the olive oil for about three minutes. Add the tomatoes and seasonings and cereal. Put in a greased baking dish and cover with the grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 15 minutes until light brown. Prune Bran Bread.

1 cup bran 1 cup sour milk ½ cup prunes (soaked several hours, drained and chopped) 1 tablespoon molasses ½ cup sugar 1 cup flour

1 teaspoon baking powder 4 teaspoon salt Mix together the bran, sour milk, prunes and molasses. Add the sugar and flour which has been sifted with the soda, baking powder and salt. Put the batter into a greased can. Cover tightly and steam for three hours. Butterscotch Nut Wafers.

Drop by teaspoonfuls onto a cookie sheet greased with an unsalted fat and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit) about 15 minutes. Remove from pan after cookies have cooled half a minute. If cookies harden on the pan, return to the oven for a few minutes. Baked Beans. 1 quart small soup beans

1/2 pound salt pork Boiling water 1½ teaspoons salt

1 teaspoon mustard ½ cupful molasses Soak the beans in cold water over night. Drain, cover with fresh water and simmer until soft. Drain and place in an earthen bean pot. Bury the meat in the beans. Mix salt, mustard and molasses and add one-fourth cupful of boiling water. Pour over the beans and enough boiling water to cover. Cover and bake in a slow (250 degrees Fahrenheit) oven eight hours.

VALUE OF EDUCATION

The genius of a local man had carried him to big success in business without much aid of education He was asked to distribute the prizes at a school, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide, and made the usual speech of good counsel.

"Now, boys," he said, "always remember that education is a great thing. There's nothing like educa-Take arithmetic. Through tion. education we learn that twice two makes four, that twice six makes twelve, that seven sevens makeand then there's geography."

Sad Knowledge

Bessie, in town with her mother, caught sight of a baldheaded man. "Oh, mother," she exclaimed, 'just see that man! He hasn't a hair on his head. Isn't it sad?" "Hush," replied her mother. "He will hear you." "Oh," said Bessie, bewildered, "doesn't he know?"

CAN'T FOOL HIM

are no longer used?"

"I like to have my employees get on well together," said the boss. 'What I want is a man who'll never utter a hasty word.' The applicant smiled eagerly. "I-I I-I-I-I'm y'your m-m-m-an, b-b-b-bboss!" he said.

Sympathy Two butchers had shops next to each other and there was a great rivalry. One day the first butcher put up a notice in his window: "The king eats our sausages."

The next day the other butcher put up a notice with the words: "God save the king."

Poetic Imagination "Doesn't the delay at the telephone annoy you?" "No," said the slow-spoken person. "I kind of like silence and solitude and I never feel more alone than I do with the receiver at my ear and no sound save that of a dark distance that sighs 'Waiting.' " ANOTHER PUZZLE

Measuring Him Up "Is that man a great orator?"

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "he makes speeches that are right enjoyable to listen to, but I don't believe he's what you'd call a successful orator. He never says anything that starts a fight."

Tension

"Walking," remarked the physician, "would be good exercise for you."

"But," responded the patient, "think of the auto dodging you've got to do. Couldn't you recommend something less violent?"

TRIPLE IMPORTED

By THAYER WALDO (McClure Syndicate—WNU Service)

IBERG nibbled the end of a pencil and shook his head dolefully. "To me it don't sound so good. I'm thinking maybe Joe Dreyfuss ain't so smart to sign this Shikat woman up before any-one else even has a look."

Garrison gestured impatient dis-"Listen-if Joe says she's good, that ought to be enough. He's never bonered, has he?"

"No, but always there's a first time. Seven years now he's our European scout, and never before does he pull this kind of a stunt . . What'll we do with her, anyhow?"

"' 'Do?' Why, star her, of coursemake her the year's biggest sensation. Everything's ripe; there hasn't been a first class importation for a long time."

"Ah-but what a difference! How do you expect me to star a name our public never heard of?"

"Doesn't mean a thing. All this dame needs is a wildfire build-up. And I'm just crawling with ideas for it. Leave the whole thing to me, J. L.; you won't have a worry."
"So?" Fiberg's tone was cautious.

"Let's hear about it."
"Okay—get this: Three sheets in every big city for a month. The first one just says, 'WHY IS HUNGARY HUNGRY? — JETTA'S GONE!' Then the next week it's, WHO HAS HOLLYWOOD HYPNO-TIZED?-JETTA SHIKAT!' How's that?"

"Well, not bad-not bad. What else?"

Garrison sensed victory and grinned. "Never mind. If I told it all at once the excitement would kill you. This is a natural and I'll play it "Starting when?"

"Right now-today. But the real high pressure stuff won't begin till next Saturday when she gets in from New York. Let me meet the train and take care of her."

Fiberg shrugged his resignation and conceded: "So why not? She looks like a pink elephant on our hands. If you think you can make her useful, go

"Useful - nothing!" Garrison snorted. "Man, this is going to be a gilt-edge wow!" . . .

Ben Morris squinted through fog at the clock on the depot tower. It showed twelve past five. He shivered and began again to pace the station platform, grumbling: swell hour your rave picks to arrive-just when civilized people are hitting the hay." Garrison chuckled.

Then from far down the track came an engine whistle's thin screech. He sprang forward and seized the other's arm, shouting:

"Quick—get your stuff set up!" Unhurriedly Morris went toward a bench on which lay camera case and tripod. Anxiously the publicity man scanned the car windows as the train pulled in.

Another moment and passengers were swarming to the platform; Garrison found himself engulfed. With nothing but an instinct for the type to go on, he began a scrutiny of women's faces. Five minutes of it netted him only dirty looks. Then Morris was calling:

"Hey, Louis-your freight's up here.'

The photographer was heading for the train's front end, camera on shoulder. Garrison followed and shortly saw, ahead of Morris, a man and a woman in traveling clothes obviously of European make. The publicity man asked:

"How do you know that's her?" "Herad 'em give the name to the porter."

Hastening on, Garrison came abreast the couple as they reached the baggage car. A quick glance showed him that the woman's face was pretty and vivacious, but nothing more.

He stifled disappointment and stepped up to her, inquiring briskly: "Mademoiselle Jetta Shikat?" Eager nods and a torrent of unfamiliar language came from both. The man thrust something into Garrison's hand; it was a trunk

"What's this for?" the publicity man asked, bewildered. Again the dual cataract in foreign tongue. At last the bleak truth came to him. Neither spoke English.

Morris approached. Garrison pounced on him, saying: "For the lova mike go find me an interpreter-pronto." The other set down his camera and started back toward the depot. "Fiberg's gonna love this," jeered; "six months in school before she can even start a picture.

What a laugh!" After giving a red cap the baggage check and instructions, Garrison took a more leisurely look at Jetta Shikat, now seated with the man on a nearby bench. The exotic quality he had counted on was definitely absent. Still, there might be possibilities . . Suddenly it occurred to him that the man's presence was unexplained. Thought of what the answer might be produced a sinking sensation. A husband simply wouldn't fit the scheme of things.

He caught her eye and started making signs again, pointing from her to the man and indicating query. Seeing his meaning, she beamed happily and held up her left hand. On its fourth finger sparkled a diamond-set band. Garrison cursed softly, but returned her smile . . .

Down the platform Morris was coming, a bulky, sallow fellow in soiled apron at his side.

The publicity man went to meet

"Found him in a Hungarian restaurant down the street," Morris explained; "he'll handle your job for ten bucks."

"Sold!" said Garrison, and turning to the interpreter, went on: "First tell her who I am-here's my card—and say that all Hollywood, and Zenith studio in particular, extends her a cordial welcome. Make it sound very nice. Then tell her she and her husband will have to go to different hotels-and that needs to be very firm. Get the

The pasty-visaged man grunted assent and ambled over to the actress. In a raucous voice that never seemed to need breath-pause, he commenced to shout at her. For a moment there was no response; then, with every appearance of anger, she commenced jabbering back at him. Garrison grimaced, mutter-

"Yeah-I was afraid of that." The interpreter turned to him with an impotent gesture.

"Never mind," the publicity man snapped: "I got the drift. Tell her it's just too bad-that the American public doesn't want her to be married. Tell her this is part of her contract. Tell her-"

His words died as the woman leapt up and made a sudden dash toward the depot. Turning, he beheld a glamorous vision in picture hat and orchid gown. Just outside the station door she stood, hand on hip, a little impatient frown darkening her lovely oval face.

Wonderingly, Garrison went forward. The superb creature eyed him with disdain.

"If you're quite through," she drawled in nearly flawless English, "with my secretary and my manager, may I have them again? Sitting in this waiting-room is hardly the reception I expected."

He just stood still and stared, jaw quite slack. Then, at sound of Ben Morris' derisive snicker, he whirled on the man in the greasy apron, demanding:

"What's the idea of making me think you-

Wars of the Roses

The Wars of the Roses were a series of civil wars in England between the rival houses of York and Lancaster in the latter half of the Fifteenth century. They were so named because the badge of Lancaster was a red rose and that of York was a white rose. The House of Lancaster had obtained the throne of England in 1399. When Henry V died, he left as heir a child nine months old who proved both physically and mentally unfit. Under these circumstances Richard, duke of York, claimed the throne. The wars ended with the defeat and death of Richard III at Bosworth, August 22, 1485, and the succession of Henry VII, representing the house of Lancaster, whose marriage with a Yorkish princess, united the conflicting

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Hebrews 4:15.

Temptation is the common lot of all mankind (I Cor. 10:13). The strongest and most noble of men are subject to it; angels were tempted, and our scripture reveals that even Jesus was tempted. We recognize that Jesus was tempted as the Messiah (vv. 3, 6) and as one without sin (Heb. 4:15), but it is also true that He was tempted in all points as we are, apart from sin, and that we may learn from His temptation how we may meet and be the victors over temptation.

I. What Is Temptation?

"Temptation is seduction to evil, solicitation to wrong. It stands distinguished from trial thus: trial tests, seeks to discover the man's moral qualities or character; but temptation persuades to evil, deludes, that it may ruin. God tries; Satan tempts" (A. M. Fairbairn).

Temptation is not sin, but yielding to temptation is sin. Luther said, "We cannot keep the birds from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from building nests in our hair." Temptation comes from within, that is, from our own lusts (James 1:13, 14). Satan also tempts us (Eph. 6:11). God may permit temptation as a means of proving our faith (James 1:2, 3).

II. How Temptation Works.

It is significant that the temptations of Jesus were along the threefold line of the temptations of Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:6) and the general threefold temptation of all men, namely, the lust of the flesh, the pride of life, and the lust of the eyes (I John 2:16). These three temptations really exhaust Satan's bag of tricks, but he can dress up these three fundamental temptations with almost endless variety. He works

1. By appealing to the flesh (vv. 2, 3). He observes the normal appetites and desires of a man's body, excites them to a high degree, and then suggests an improper method of satisfying them. Hunger is normal and a sign of good health.

Jesus had fasted forty days and Satan took advantage of that fact to suggest the use of His divine power to satisfy His hunger. This would involve a denial of His entire mission on earth, namely, the redemption of man by a divine person who had become a real man.

2. By appealing to pride (vv. 5, 6). Satan misapplied Scripture to tempt Jesus to presumption on the assumption that He was exercising faith. God had promised to keep Him "in all his ways" (Ps. 91:11). To cast himself down from the temple was not one of the ways in which Christ was called to walk. Satan comes to us with the same kind of temptation. If He cannot get us to forsake faith, he tempts us to become fanatic and to proudly substitute presumption for faith.

3. By appealing to the eyes (vv. 8, 9). By showing Christ the kingdoms of the world and offering them to Him by the short-cut of a brief act of worship rather than by the way of the cross, Satan tempted Him again. Here the devil showed his true desire that man should worship him rather than God.

III. How to Meet Temptation (vv.

1. By the right use of Scripture. If Jesus needed that weapon, how can we do without it? How can we use Scripture if we do not study it and hide it in our hearts?

2. By dependence on God. Every Scripture used by Jesus honored God. We cannot fight Satan in our own strength. To attempt to do so is to fail utterly. The real victory for the Christian is to bring Satan back to the cross where Christ'won a decisive victory over him.

3. By denouncing Satan. Jesus sent him on his way. We may do the same in Jesus' name. It is always a serious error to try to argue with Satan or to engage in any discussion with him. Let us meet him with Scripture and with a "Get thee

IV. The Result.

Satan left and angels came to minister to Christ. The overcoming of temptation results in peace, victory, and blessing. This is ever so in the life of the believer. Temptation overcome makes us stronger to meet the next temptation, and also enables us to help our weaker brethren.

Framing Our Lives

Religion does not consist in the performance of certain ceremonial acts at specified times, outside which acts and times it has no place: but consists in framing our whole life, and all our acts, upon a distinct view of our position as created beings, charged by the fact of our creation, with duties both to our fellow creatures and to our Creator. -Edward Denison.

Sea Piracy Attempted

In America During 1870

Freebooters were believed to have long since vanished from American waters when a short-lived attempt to bring back the days of plunder and piracy was made on the western coast of Mexico in May,

Would-be buccaneers seized the merchant ship Forward, and followed this action by raiding the custom house at Guaymas, forcing the foreign merchants to pay them large sums of money and compelling the American consul to supply coal for the vessel.

When he learned of this outrage, Commander Low of the U.S.S. Mohican, then cruising in those waters, took immediate action. Soon a game of hide and seek began between the Americans and the elusive craft. Eventually it was learned that the raiders were in the vicinity of Boca Teacapan where they proposed to land their plunder.

Commander Low ordered a landing force of United States marines and bluejackets to proceed up the river in six boats for the purpose of bringing the marauders to terms. Forty miles, from Boca Teacapan discovered the Forward aground and heading inshore.

Immediately the marines and sailors climbed aboard without opposition and arrested six members of her crew. At this moment a boatload of pirates attempted to leave the ship, and efforts to intercept them were met with a burst of fire from the shore which killed one man and wounded several oth-

Unknown to the Americans the wily pirates had prepared a veritable ambush by landing about 170 men with artillery and rifles where they could rake the vessel from stem to stern with their fire.

Unable to release the grounded vessel or to rout the raiders with their limited forces, the naval party promptly set the ship afire and blasted it with shrapnel before returning to the Mohican, thus ending an abortive attempt to revive the profession of piracy in those

Smallest Principality Has

Wide Variety of Climate Monaco is the world's smallest principality. Its 395 acres would scarcely be considered a good sized farm in western America. But within those acres is compressed a wide variety of both climate and activity. The outdoor activities include nearly all the modern sports -along with the custom of sitting in the sunshine for an apertif at the Cafe de Paris each afternoon, even in midwinter.

Every resort along the Azure coast has its battle of flowers early each spring, and Monte Carlo is no exception. Folklore festivals, sailing regattas, and tournaments take up the time until midsummer. Those who don't go in for such things get a thrill out of strolling through the medieval streets, or climbing the steep grades, or touring the art gallery, or visiting the

But the center of everything is, and probably always will be, the The mere atmosphere of that palace of chance is melodramatic. In a funereal silence, broken only by the droning of the croupiers, the crowds follow their systems, work their good luck charms, and hang on day after day, week in and week out, in the hope of getting something for nothing.

That Traveling Pink Bollworm

The pink bollworm, described by U. S. cotton producers as a worse pest than the boll weevil, is a globetrotting insect. Recognized as a cotton enemy in the East nearly 100 years ago, its original home is believed to be India and possibly southern Asia in general. Around the beginning of the Twentieth century, it was brought to Egypt from India in large seed-cotton imports, and has since spread widely. Its present known range includes much of Africa, Siam, the Straits Settlements, China, Korea, the Philippines, Hawaii, the West Indies, and Australia. Brazil and Mexico are recent fields for the worm's depredations. In the United States Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico play unwilling hosts to the insect, with Florida's wild cotton lately added to its

More than 32,800,000 kilowatt hours of electricity a day are produced. It is Italy's sixth largest producer of electrical power and furnishes light, heat and power for factories, railroads and cities hundreds of miles around.

So clear is the desert air that the "mountains on the moon" can be seen with the naked eye at night from a desert camp only 35 miles from Cairo. Camping in the desert is popular and a hole dug in the sand is a "bed" warmer than the blanketed cots provided for those who seek the thrills of a primitive tesert camping experience.

Canada Hopes to Create

free potatoes which would mean the saving of millions of dollars in Canada are believed not to be far distant, several promising strains having been developed at the Dominion experimental station here.

"The present year will see further expansion in the development of potatoes resistant to mosaic and other diseases," said C. F. Bailey, superintendent of the station. 'Promising seedlings have been developed and we hope to have enough seed to send out to experimental stations in other parts of Canada."

The new varieties of potatoes which have been developed by the Dominion plant pathological laboratory, working in conjunction with the experimental station, will be tested exhaustively before there is any distribution.

It was said that it will be two or three years before it is possible to complete tests and development and recommend a variety to Canadian possibly 150 years old-hidden under four layers of wall paper, were uncovered in an ancient Smith

Covering the four walls of the small parlor, the paintings were done in the manner of the so-called American primitives, with stiff but attractive figures and colors, which will be fresh looking when properly

Two painted flags cross over an apple tree and a brace of doves, have 13 stars and bars each, dating the work back to early post-Revolutionary days. Most interesting panel represents a farm worker at a well, lifting an oaken bucket to his parched lips as a thirsty little blue dog looks on. The property, a two and a half story wooden colonial dwelling, is owned by Mrs. Marian J. Cooney, who was born there, unsuspecting the presence of the murals until she decided upon a new wall paper to brighten the walls.
