THE ENLARGED HIGH SCHOOL

Will be Ready for Reopening Monday, September 5th.

Extensive improvements to the local school building, which have been in progress during the spring and summer, will be finished and the building ready for use at the opening of the school year which begins on Wednesday, September 4th.

A new addition, consisting of five class-rooms and a library, and a new auditorium, has been constructed to the rear of the present building, and connected with it by hall-ways above and below. The basement of the addition will house the industrial arts department.

Besides, considerable work has been done in the old building in the way of removing and re-arranging partitions, installation of cloak rooms, etc., adding to the convenience and efficiency of its use. The former auditorium will be used by the domestic science department and as the school cafeteria. The portable buildings have been moved to the rear of the main building and placed upon permanent foundations, and will be used for special projects. The building has been arranged so that the high school rooms, except the principal's office, will be on the second floor. The elementary school will occupy the rooms on the first floor. Fessler & Wantz, of Taneytown are the contractors.

The Fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 4, at 9 o'clock in the morning. The buses will run on September 4 and thereafter on their regular schedules. Pupils, especially new pupils, may register on Tuesday afternoon, September 3, after 2 o'clock.

THRESHING MACHINE WRECKED

A threshing machine was wrecked in Frederick, on Monday night, belonging to a man named Harbaugh, of near Thurmont. The machine had just been repaired at Middletown and was being taken home.

A guy wire from a telephone pole at the corner of Sixth and Bentz St., caught the top of the machine and pulled it from its truck, completely wrecking it.

TOURS WESTERN STATES.

From Salmon Mr. Hesson went to the home of his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Hesson who live 7 miles from Salmon in a beautiful valley about a mile wide between the mountains, they having a very pretty home along the Lemhi River, where Mr. Hesson is engaged in sheep raising.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hesson are former residents of Westminster, Md., where Mrs. Hesson will be remembered as Miss Rubv Bowers. Mr. Hesson has been residing in the West for more than 31 years.

Enroute home he stopped at Challis Black Foote and Pocatello, Idaho; Ogden and Salt Lake City, Utah; Cheyenne, Wyoming; Denver, Colorado; Topeka, Kansas; Kansas City and St. Louis, Missouri; Springfield, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Dayton and Columbus, Ohio; Wheeling, West Virginia, and Pittsburgh.

Passing through the Bad Lands of North Dakota and across the deserts in the lower part of Wyoming, Utah, and Idaho. The drought was noticeable almost the entire trip and especially so west of the Mississippi river. Practically everything is dried up except where they can irrigate. Three large rivers were noticed to be completely dried up.

REINDOLLAR FAMILY HISTORY.

The Record office finished a Genealogy of the well known Reindollar family, covering seven generations, beginning with George Henrich Reinthal, or about 1768.

In this work the Editor of the Record had much excellent assistance from numerous members of the family, as he states in the Foreword; and it is believed that many outside of the family will be interested.

This History will be on sale at the family reunion, on Sunday; or it may be had at The Record office. The cost is only 50 cents. 3c extra by mail.

AN EXPLANATION.

The Record will be overcrowded for several months with a contract from the Executive Department at Annapolis that requires publication to be given in all of the counties of proposed amendments to the Constitution that will appear on the ballot to be in November, for approval or disapproval by the voters.

We shall eliminate, as much as possible, such features as seem of least importance, and will try to give, in place, more of real live matter, in order to compensate for the space required by the feature described.

We trust that our readers will be indulgent, under the circumstances.

COUNTY FAIR WAS OUTSTANDING SUCCESS.

Each Day's Attractions having been Well Patronized.

The Carroll County Fair opened on Sunday with what was likely a record-breaking attendance of 4300, on the ground, likely exceeding that of July 4, 1932 when the George Washington Bicentennial program was rendered there.

Not only was the ground packed with autos, but the fields in front, and on both sides of the road for a long distance each way on the state roads. So far as we have learned, there were no important accidents.

The occasion was well policed and the auto traffic excellently handled. The congestion on the Westminster road extended from Big Pipe Creek Park—also largely attended—and in to Taneytown where Deputy Sheriff Crebs piloted the crowd at the square. Of course, Sauble's Inn also had its usual large number of Sunday guests. A good-sized attendance at Pine-Mar Camp was also reported.

Miss Alice McNair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McNair, of near Emmitsburg, was adjudged the prettiest Frederick county farm girl at the Taneytown Fair, Tuesday night. She will represent the county in a State-wide contest at the Timonium fair next month.

The Carroll county winner was Miss Dorothy L. Henley, of Mt. Airy, who will compete along with Miss McNair, at Timonium.

Miss McNair scored a double triumph on the judging platform when she also won the junior beauty contest, intended to select entrants in the 1941 Miss America contest. The winner in the senior division was Miss Gertrude Eyer, Frederick.

The runners-up to Miss McNair in the Frederick county group were Miss Naomi Albaugh and Miss Ellis Virginia Filler, both of Walkersville. Second and third choices in the Carroll county contest were Miss Louise Mullinix, Mt. Airy, and Miss Mabel Nussbaum, Union Bridge.

Entrants in the pretty farm girl contests were bonafide residents on farms in the counties in which they competed. The winners and two runners-up in each group were presented gold compacts. Misses McNair and Henley will each receive $20 expense money for the trip to the Timonium contest.

The Fair in general was one of the best yet held, in practically all departments, with new features and attractions added, showing that the management was active in its promotion. The main officials are Geo. R. Sauble, president; G. Norman Hunter, vice-president; George E. Dodner, secretary and treasurer; Wm. J. Flohr, assist. secretary and treasurer.

The horse pulling contest was on Tuesday morning, in charge of County Agent Burns, and John E. Clark, representing the State Fair Board.

In the light weight class, under 3,000 pounds and below 16 hands high first prize went to Dudley Tennant, Street, Md.; second, Jack Horn, Jefferson, Md.; third, Roy Enfield, Forrest Hill, Md.; fourth, Joe Smith, Uniontown, Md.; fifth, Charles Eaves, Taneytown, Md.

Heavy weight class: First—Roy Enfield, Forrest Hills; second, Chas. Eaves, Taneytown; third, Joe Smith, Uniontown; fourth Messrs Tennant and Enfield, Street; fifth, Joe Smith, Uniontown.

A two-ton Ford truck was used in the pulling contest. The weight was 14½ tons for the light and 16 tons for the heavy class.

Tuesday was Children's Day at the Fair. The morning began with the opening of the midway and the exhibits. The cattle and draft horse judging took place before the grandstand in the afternoon. This brought the finest stock in the county before the spectators.

MOUNT AIRY DISTRICT

Will Hereafter have Two Voting Precincts.

Chief Judge Parke handed down a decision, on Monday, in favor of giving Mount Airy District two voting precincts, instead of one as heretofore.

A decision concerning this had been going on for some time. The opinion followed a hearing on a writ of mandamus—against an action of the Board of Election supervisors, that had at first favored the proposal but later, changed its mind.

The argument seemed to centre around the fact that prior to the last election, the registration for the entire district showed a total of only 924 votes. The Board of Election supervisors opposed the division into two precincts.

Truman B. Cash, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, stated that his committee had voted 5 for 1 against division, but later made it unanimous, largely because of the crowded condition at the polls several times during the last election.

Mr. Bushey, representing the Board of Election Supervisors was 2 to one against division, and that both himself and the election officials had not seen anybody leave the polls because of a crowded condition, although at noon and at closing time the polls were naturally somewhat crowded.

The Board of Election Supervisors have authorized an appeal to be taken.

COUNTY WELFARE BOARD.

The Carroll County Welfare Board held its monthly meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 7th. Those present were County Commissioners, Charles W. Melville, Norman H. Hess, Howard H. Wine, Frank P. Alexander, a former board member, Dr. Charles R. Foutz, L. Pearce Bowls, H. G. Englar, Mrs. J. E. Myers, Mrs. Walter A. Bower, Mrs. Margaret H. Anderson, of the State Department of Welfare, Mrs. Esther K. Brown, Miss Elinor H. Ebaugh and Miss Ruth E. Stambaugh, members of the office staff.

Preceding the business meeting Mrs. Myers gave a detailed and interesting report of the progress of the summer work camp temporarily located at the Longwell property, Westminster. Miss Ebaugh explained the investigation procedure and organization of a case record. Miss Stambaugh explained in detail how the amounts of grants for assistance are determined.

The members then discussed with Mrs. Anderson some phases of the general welfare program as directed by the State Department of Public Welfare.

Several Board Member changes were announced. Mr. Howard Wine has been appointed by the Board of County Commissioners to represent their body on the Welfare Board during the coming year. Mr. L. Pearce Bowls has been appointed to complete the unexpired second term of Mr. J. Keller Smith who after serving as chairman for almost four years recently resigned. Mrs. J. Edgar Myers, who has completed two terms and has been a valuable member since the organization of the Board in August, 1935, will retire as soon as her successor has been named.

Officers elected were as follows: Chairman, Dr. Charles R. Foutz, Vice-Chairman, H. G. Englar, Secretary, L. Pearce Bowls.

Routine business followed a part of which included the approving of seven applications for old age assistance. Names of five eligible junior workers were presented to the Board. From the eligible list one appointment will be made to fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of Mrs. Dorothy H. Dyott to the Prince George's County Welfare Board.

The meeting adjourned to meet Wednesday, September 4th.

RITCHIE DAY AT BRADDOCK HEIGHTS.

The Jeffersonian Club, of Frederick County, has arranged for a Ritchie Day Celebration, on Thursday, Aug. 29, at Vindobona, Braddock Heights, to commemorate the birthday of the late Governor Albert C. Ritchie.

The first of these celebrations was staged in Frederick last year in the form of a free Barbaque, but at a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Club, it was decided that a banquet would more fittingly commemorate this occasion, and the first of which is to be an annual affair, is now in process of arrangement.

The speakers will include the Governor of the state, Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, Representative, Wm. D. Byron, and two Democrats of a National reputation. These latter two will probably be two of the outstanding men in Congress.

The cost of this dinner will be $2.50 per plate.

THE RENNERT HOTEL TO BE A FILLING STATION.

The once well known Rennert Hotel, Baltimore, for many years a leading hotel in the city, has been sold by city authorities at about $118,000, to New York interests and is to be converted into an immense parking garage and filling station.

The city came into possession of the property some time ago because of accumulated city taxes. The entire deal has not yet been completed as it is necessary for certain actions to be taken by the City Council, that include various ordinances, but it is believed that these will be passed, and the building be disposed of, as stated.

HURRICANE IN THE SOUTH.

A hurricane along the East Coast of South Carolina and Georgia, on Monday, caused many thousands of dollars damage, and at least 27 persons were killed, mostly on St. Helena Island. Many small boats were sunk and the water-front in general was the hardest hit.

Historic Charleston suffered great damage to trees, flowers and the landscape in general. Red Cross workers are busy rendering aid, along with local authorities.

STATE'S DEFENSE PLANS EXPLAINED.

Baltimore, August 12—Maryland's plans for organizing its industries and other resources for possible use in any National emergency are stepping into high gear now, following the opening of offices of the Council of Defense and Resources in the Governor's suite in the Union Trust Building here.

In welcoming the Council to its first meeting, Governor Herbert R. O'Connor charged them with the definite responsibility of lining up every resource of the State for prompt service when needed, and under Chairman W. Frank Roberts and Executive Officer Isaac S. George, the ground work is now being laid.

He has approved a list of seven committees appointed by Chairman Roberts from among the twenty-five members of the Council and these new committees will begin functioning immediately.

Governor O'Connor has promised the full cooperation of the State in any demands of the Federal Government and he is working personally, as one of two representatives of the National Governors' Conference, with officials of the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation in lining up a program for coordinating all State and Federal activities.

WORLD WAR NEWS.

Some of the press reporters in war torn Europe have evidently been lying for some time about losses and gains. There can be no other conclusions—the figures attached to leading events vary too widely to reach any other conclusion.

There is one sure fact. Britain is fighting against heavy odds on a very large front, and unless outside aid comes is likely to meet with final defeat. The superior preparedness, rather than superior bravery of Germany, would bring this about.

The latest headlines say "200 Nazi Cities hit by British bombs." "Thousands of bomb raids batter German bases." "Nazi raids spread northward" Russia and Greece may unite against Italy.

Some of the latest headlines are: "British claim 144 Nazi war planes downed, as all of England is attacked." "Tons of explosives fall on London airport. Crowds cheer British fighters. Nazi's raid all England, etc."

Random Thoughts

GENEALOGY.

For the past month or more, as time permitted, we have been engaged in writing—with the aid of much good help—the Genealogy of a leading and well-known family. It included seven generations, widely scattered and dating back over 100 years. We would advise all who want to follow an easy job, to avoid Genealogy writing.

To the most of us, our own family and generation is enough for us to take serious thought of, and to make as creditable as possible an example to follow.

However, genealogy is also a branch of history treating of what a series of families accomplished. It is a sort of pedigree, that we generally make use of in connection with animals, in which "blood" is esteemed an important qualification.

Considering it entirely as connected with the human family, of course good work commences in our own selves, homes and habits—that which we leave behind us for the public to remember, favorably or otherwise.

The importance of good mother-ancestry, which involves the question what our young folks and parents are accomplishing along, this line.

Seals and crests, and whether we are one descended from some one who "came over in the Mayflower," are non-essentials.

If our ancestors set us good examples, we should follow them and keep up their record. If vice-versa, then we should show ourselves to be an improvement, despite handicaps.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 16, 1940.

IT WON'T STAY AWAY.

The subject of increased taxation in some form, or forms, is sure to follow our preparations for "preparedness" against war, and this is sure to include the billions of dollars that have been spent for various programs during the past four years.

It is true that the old saying "Prepare for war in time of peace" is good precautionary advice, just as we look in advance for probable depreciations and as we prepare for the cost of replacing worn-out machinery and working equipment.

The business man calls this justifiable "overhead" expense and gauges his profits to help meet these costs; or practices drastic economy in unnecessary expenses. He does not go into debt for expensive fittings, nor spend haphazard for anything.

The successful farmers are those who are good financiers. The wise young man who thinks of getting married and financing a home, does not go heavily into debt, unnecessarily.

Trying to keep up with somebody else, unless fully able to do so, is always poor business on the part of anybody—young, middle-aged or old, and the spending of a government, National, State or local should follow the same safe rules.

In fact, governmental expenditures should be more safely guarded than any others, as they take liberties with the rights of the people who can not protest except at widely separated periods. They may even be considered as violating a trust, without just cause.

Of course, governments are swayed by powerful influences, or perhaps only for the purpose of continuing a party in power, a course never in itself justifiable, as "influences" are not likely to represent "the people."

The result therefore frequently is that past expenditures must be met with new debts, and what we call "balancing the budget" is indefinitely postponed, in a sort of "the people do" way. So, we are still thinking of debt and taxes.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT EXPLAINED.

In order to banish any possible misconceptions that may exist in the minds of the voters concerning the Constitutional Amendment authorized by the 1939 session of the Legislature for submission to the electorate in November, Reuben Oppenheimer, General Chairman, and W. Clinton McSherry, Frederick attorney, State Chairman of the non-partisan citizens committee for the adoption of the People's Court Amendment, have issued the following joint statement:

"Chapter 163 of the Acts of 1939 makes a real court out of the people's Court of Baltimore City, presided over by three judges whose terms of office, in the first instance, are for two, four and six years, respectively, and who thereafter hold office for a term of eight years. After his initial term, each judge can run for election or re-election for a full term of eight years. Each judge will run against his own record. He will not have to go through any party primary, and his name will go on the ballot with no party designation and with no opposing candidate, so that the voters cast their votes for or against his continuance in office on the record he has made.

"The Amendment eliminates politics from the election of judges and from the appointment of constables and clerks. The constables and clerks are placed under the classified City Service of Baltimore. The Chief Constable is given the right and duty to supervise and direct the work of the other constables and clerks. The number of constables and clerks will be determined by the volume of business to be done and not by the number of wards in the city.

"The Amendment empowers the Legislature to establish similar People's Courts in other cities or in the counties of the State. As a practical matter, this means that any county or any city in the State which desires to have such a People's Court can, through its delegation in the State Legislature, obtain the passage of a local Act establishing such a court. The Amendment does not require the establishment of a People's Court in any city or county outside of Baltimore City, but, in effect, gives them the option to obtain such a court if they want it. The establishment of the new People's Court of Baltimore City by the Amendment does not impose any expense or taxes of any sort upon either the State or any county."

REPUBLICAN CHANCES IN THE SOUTH.

There are indications that the Republicans may try to gain a few southern states in November, as they did in 1928 when Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas went for Hoover.

The issues of the two campaigns—1928 and 1940—are very different. But, there are evidences that Texas, South Carolina, Florida and Tennessee, growing out of the results at the Chicago Convention, are sufficient to cause decided encouragement for Willkie's candidacy.

That not so long ago, he was himself a Democrat seems to bolster up his candidacy; and the back-setting of Garner is another along the same line. There is also the third-term objection that must be fought out, sooner or later, and this coming election seems a good time to measure sentiment relative to it.

South Carolina—or a section of it—has gone so far to organize a Jeffersonian Democratic party.

The fact that thousands of negroes have migrated to northern states, and are voting Democratic, can not be palatable to many southerners. And the fact that a vast amount of capital from the north is now invested in the south, opens up a new line of thought.

All of this is very speculative, but it is part of the news of the day. There is greatly too much of water and grist that go through the political mill, to justify safe betting, and some such speculations and deductions are part of the "Great Game of Politics" as Frank R. Kent calls it and incidentally, it also means the "freedom of the Press" and of speech and thought too.

That there are "old lines" Republicans who do not fancy voting for a man only two years removed from being a Democrat, is undoubted; but these are in the fix of being "all dressed up and no place to go"—except to follow McNary, vice-presidential candidate, whose Republican record is of the best.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS COOPERATE ON FREEDOM.

Just before the Havana conference opened late in July, the great Adolf Hitler, through a high Nazi official, undertook to dictate an economic and political policy to the Western Hemisphere and warned the American nations not to take any stand that would be hostile to a Germanized Europe. A week later, a program of joint administration of American colonies of conquered European countries, consolidated economic efforts and united opposition to "fifth column" activities was adopted unanimously by the conference.

Under the agreement, the nations of this hemisphere agreed to unite in defense of the status quo of colonies of European nations—created, in effect, an intercontinental Monroe Doctrine. Further, the American nations agreed to assist actively in repelling any attempt of a foreign government to transfer the ownership of any American possessions.

Observers considered it a personal triumph for Secretary of State Cordell Hull and a definite challenge to Hitler. For now the moral strength of all twenty American Republics is solidly behind the United States in its determination to prevent the spread of European totalitarianism to this hemisphere.

Major obstacle to inter-American solidarity was Argentina, which seemed loath to join in any statement or action that might prejudice the totalitarian powers of Europe, Argentina's objections disappeared as the conference proceeded, and Leopold Melo, Argentine representative, praised the proceedings.

While Germany and Italy maintained nothing of importance was accomplished, the Fascist Madrid press of Franco's totalitarian Spain admitted that it had erred in its prediction that the conference would fail. Elsewhere, the significant step forward toward Western solidarity was hailed as a diplomatic victory over Hitler—Scottish Rite Service.

WITHSTANDING THE TEST.

The decision of a group of Negro leaders at a Georgia conference to demand their rightful proportion of the burden of National Defense reflects the healthy condition of America.

While it is impossible to mathematically calculate the exact percentage of the Negro population this group represents, it is safe to say that they reflect the opinions of an overwhelming majority of the negro population of Frederick county, and perhaps the entire state of Maryland.

Regardless of color or race, when the occasion demands it, Americans will respond to the call of their country.

The negro did it in 1918 and they can be depended upon to do it again today.

It must be very discouraging to the Communist agitator to see this display of loyalty on the part of our Negro population.

But then, we cannot expect foreigners to understand the love of liberty and justice that flows in the veins of every American, be he white, black, brown, red or yellow.

We believe in America—a nation with one language and one flag—and with God's help—we intend to keep it that way.—Frederick Citizen.

WILLKIE CAMPAIGN SONG.

Tune—"Oh Susannah."
(For The Record.)
I am going to vote for Willkie, that is certain as can be,
He is a true American, and that's enough for me.
He does not aim to recreate us to an Alien mould;
He's satisfied America is true, and good as gold.

Chorus:
Willkie, Willkie, you're the man for me.
All hail to Wendell Willkie—he stands for liberty.

Oh yes, I'll vote for Willkie, for I am sure that he Stands for the Constitution—for Law and Liberty.

He'll let the Congress make the laws—no "must" laws will he take—
The Court, Congress and President a trinity shall make.

We all should vote for Willkie—rich, poor, the great the small—
He does not stand for any class—he represents them all—
The farmer leaning on his plow—the business man as well—
Mechanic, merchant, engineer—these all the story tell.

I'm going to vote for Willkie because he will restore
The Commerce that we have now lost—and then he'll add some more
He will lead back the farmer to his old prosperity,
And then we shall not have to buy from others, don't you see?

When we elect our Willkie to be our president,
Class hatreds will be banished, and all will be content—
The laborer will find his job—boon dogging will be done,
Ten Million idle men will find employment again won.

The factories will boom again, and merchant's sales mount high;
Pay envelopes will bulge big—the house-wife's tears be dry.
No tears o'er hungry children—no worry for a place
To sleep and eat and work and play—no feeling of disgrace.

Oh yes, I'll vote for Willkie, for he is sure to be
A level-headed president—a thing I long to see.
With Willkie as our president all foolishness will cease,
And when it does the citizen will live his life in peace.

Willkie, Willkie, you're the man for me;
All hail to Wendell Willkie, who stands for Liberty.

Bottle Thief's Stunt To Yield No Profit

BOSTON.—WPA Foreman Ambrose Murphy tells of a thief who went to a lot of trouble for nothing.

He says a man climbed a high fence, forced open a barred window and stole 50 empty milk bottles from a locked room on the premises.

None of the bottles was redeemable.

Long Isolation of This Family Ends

Settles Down for Normal Life After 45 Years.

EAGLE HARBOR, MICH.—Holger Johnson, whose home for the past 37 years has been a rocky, timbered island 45 miles out in Lake Superior, has moved his family here and settled down to a conventional life.

But it wasn't Johnson's idea. Uncle Sam decided to make Isle Royale a national park this summer and so the Johnson family, with a few commercial fishermen, moved inland.

Johnson reared three sons and three daughters on the island paradise, which each winter is cut off from the mainland by ice. The Johnson family each fall carried back provisions—a ton of flour, 150 pounds of butter, 30 bushels of potatoes, three or four quarters of beef and a half ton of ham.

A school teacher was sent to instruct the Johnson youngsters and each year she stayed snowed in six months. Once when their brother suffered an attack of appendicitis Vivian and Violet Johnson sent out distress calls on their "ham" radio set for a Coast Guard cutter and a physician.

When fire swept the island's forest in 1936 the Johnson girls aided with their radio, keeping continuous vigil at the dials.

When Johnson, a hunter, trapper and fisherman, was asked what he intended to do now he said:

"During the summer I'm going to take tourists out to the island and show them the sights."

Workers 84 and 81 Are Happy Razing Houses

CONNEAUT, OHIO.—C. E. Lincoln, 84, and C. I. Pease, who is 81, are perhaps the oldest housewreckers in the country.

The two men, eager to do some manual labor, finally convinced Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pease that they were the logical ones to tear down a house belonging to the couple.

"We can't take it quite as well as we used to, but we still can put in a good full day's work," Lincoln said. "Our muscles sort of complain in the morning, but we're good once we get into action!"

Pease is particularly determined to stick to the hazardous job until it is finished. While working on the roof, the old boards collapsed and he fell through the ceiling plaster and down a flight of steps. But the old man rose to his feet, dusted his clothes, adjusted his hat and went back to work.

Ghosts Of Old-Time Wild West Take Revenge On Auto Tourists

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Star, who nearly lost lives in midnight adventure in Texas plains country.

ADD to the unusual adventures that auto tourists encounter, the thriller that Mr. and Mrs. Jack Star, young Los Angeles couple, have lived through.

Star and his wife, driving from Chicago to California, were crossing the Texas Panhandle country. To escape the heat, they travelled at night. They had left Amarillo for Tucumcari, New Mexico.

Star drove and his wife dozed in the back seat. The road was straight, level and deserted. Star made himself comfortable and was sitting back, rolling along at about 65 miles an hour.

"Something loomed indistinctly in the distance," he said. "Whatever it was took up the best part of the road I couldn't even tell whether it was going away from me or not."

"Then I saw what it was. Directly ahead, filling the road, was a herd of wild horses. I snubbed the brakes—the jerk almost jolted my head off and threw my wife against the front seat."

"In the next second we were among them. The car careened off the flank of the nearest bewildered animal. It collided with another—we would have turned over if it hadn't.

"The two I hit reared and lunged straight at the car. They landed on the hood, shattered the windshield. Others whirled and closed in, lunging and kicking at wheels and fenders.

"While I was ducking hooves, my wife scrambled over into the front seat. She pulled my flashlight out of the compartment and switched it on. The frightened beasts, partially blinded, milled about the car. For a full minute they gathered themselves for the new attack. Then, quite suddenly, they left the roadway, snorting, panting and grunting.

"We just sat there and wondered if it really was all over. Our flashlight batteries were more than a year old, but they were fresh when they were put in. We think they saved our lives."

The battered car was stalled almost crosswise in the middle of Route 66, without lights. The pair set to work with the flashlight, changed a tire, connected wires ripped out of the ignition system, and got to the next town.

Rural Lads Get a Boost

Girls, if you want a husband who will help you with the dishes marry a farm boy. City boys shy away from helping their wives with housework. That was the conclusion drawn from a survey of city and country wives made by the Association of University Women, results of which were announced in Washington, D. C., recently. The survey showed 57 per cent of rural husbands help their wives with home work while but 40 per cent of the city husbands included in the survey were domestic helpmates.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

True Love: Squire Bob and Betty Weeks, whose yard up at Old Greenwich has become a bird sanctuary, told me of the cardinal whose wife, to whom he was deeply devoted, had put him in the doghouse for a reason not ascertained. After she had disappeared, the cardinal flew around voicing the most mournful sounds and ending with what sounded exactly like, "Oh, dear." When hunger drove him to the Weeks' bird cafeteria, he would eat only a seed or two and then fly away still continuing his threnody. Then the wife, hard-hearted wench, would fly from the tree in which she had been hiding and gorge herself. Just when Betty, Bob and Pop, as well as friends who dropped in, had reached a point where they felt that something had to be done to avert tragedy, the wife relented. Now all is sweetness and light and Mr. Cardinal, his heart wound healed, is getting fat.

Times Square: Frank Singiser, news commentator, coming out of the building that houses the studio with a "cat swallowed the canary" grin . . . In reality, a little while before, a fly had flown into his mouth and knocked him off the air almost a full minute . . . At five in the morning, front of a Forty-seventh street bar, a drunk, with a chip balanced precariously on his shoulder, seeking a fight . . . After a recent midnight show at the Hurricane, Al Mack, promotion wizard, reading in the original French, Hugh Panassie's "Hot Jazz" . . . Lyle Talbot and Adrian Rollini in the Piccadilly Circus Lounge, trying to identify the author of the statement, "Folks, we couldn't live without a little swing now and then—mostly then" . . . and learning later it was Louis Armstrong . . . A beggar, looking to be in his early twenties, alleging that he lost his arm in the last World war . . . and producing a discharge as proof.

Lost Motion: A member of the Russian nobility of the Czarist era is interested in an upstate barn theater. An enterprising Broadway press agent, learning that the noble had a bank roll, arranged an appointment. He was duly met at the railroad station by a uniformed chauffeur who didn't have much English. So, seeking to make a good impression, the press agent struck up a conversation in which he used all the Russian he knew—not much but enough to get by, he thought. To his surprise, the chauffeur made not the slightest response. As he left, without a contract, he learned why there had been no appreciation of his linguistic accomplishments. The chauffeur is an Italian.

Names: The foregoing reminds me of a recent experience of Frankie Masters. Learning that Myron McCormick, star of "Fight for Life," was in town on his honeymoon, Masters decided to look him up since once they had played a Chicago vaudeville engagement together. So he phoned the hotel and was put in touch with Myron McCormick. "Hello, Myron," said Masters. "I caught you today and you were swell. A great play." "What's this, a rib?" asked McCormick. "You know I wasn't in the game today." Masters had been connected not with Myron McCormick, actor, but with Myron ("Mike") McCormick of the Cincinnati Reds.

Street Scene: A young couple sitting closely together on a Riverside drive bench . . . Pedestrians now and then turn and stare back but they have eyes only for each other . . . Children playing about them do not distract them . . . The boy pulls the girl closer and for an instant their lips meet . . . A silvery-haired man pauses, then somewhat shyly slips his arm about the waist of the wrinkled and bent woman who is walking with him . . . and traffic flows by in unending and unceasing streams.

End Piece: Philip Willkie, son of Wendell L. Willkie, who failed to graduate from Princeton, finally found a job. He staged the Polish wedding at a benefit at the Promenade cafe. His pay? $500,000. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Fabric Off Plane Wings
Makes Meal for a Horse
CAMBRIDGE, OHIO.—A horse, kicked around long enough by technological unemployment among his species, grounded Henry Kachel, an aviator, who landed in a pasture near here.
Next morning he found the horse had eaten much of the fabric of the plane's wings and fuselage. Possibly he liked the flavor of banana oil used in doping the fabric.

The house, 8 by 10 feet, has brick walls, a concrete floor, an asbestos shingled roof, and is well insulated.

Russ Station 2 Miles From U.S.

Is Planned for Scientific Research, Including Weather Study.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A new Russian "Arctic station" is being established on Big Diomed island, in Bering strait between the mainland of Alaska and the mainland of Siberia, according to news reports from Moscow. "Arctic stations" have been set up at various points in the Soviet Union's far-flung icy domain in recent years. In May, 1937, such a station was established on the ice within 10 or 12 miles of the North pole, and later drifted southward. The various stations are announced to be set up primarily to facilitate scientific research including studies of weather.

"The new Russian station on Big Diomed island is within sight of U. S. territory," says the National Geographic society. "Big Diomed's companion island, Little Diomed, on the U. S. side of the Siberian-Alaskan boundary line through Bering strait, is only two miles southeast. But despite this short distance, it is noon Tuesday on Big Diomed when it is noon Monday on Little Diomed. This is because of a man-made 'time fence,' the International Date Line, which has been traced between the islands and on southward, dividing the Western and Eastern hemispheres.

Islands Sparsely Settled.
"The two rocky islands rise almost exactly in the middle of Bering strait, where the easternmost mainland tip of Asia is 55 miles from the westernmost tip of Alaska. In clear weather one mainland headland is visible from the other. The weather is usually misty, however, in this region just south of the Arctic circle. Heavy fogs hid the island from their Russian discoverer, Vitus Bering, when he first passed them on his way through the strait which bears his name. When he later sighted one of the islands, he gave it the name Diomed because the date, August 16 (1728) was St. Diomed's day in the church calendar.

"Little Diomed is a two-mile-long oval rock rising steeply 1,000 feet from the waters of Bering strait. Big Diomed, to the northwest across the U. S.-U. S. R. frontier, is larger, higher, and steeper. Fewer than 30 Eskimos live on Big Diomed, but the village climbing the rocky slope above the narrow boulder beach of Little Diomed has more than 100 inhabitants. In summer most of the Little Diomed Eskimos sail over to Nome, Alaska, for seasonal work.

Eskimos Live Frugally.
"The rocky surfaces of both islands are covered with dark, scaly lichens, except when summer brings blooms of blue monkshood and the walnut-sized 'Eskimo potato.' The only animal life is the host of auklets, puffins, kittiwakes, and other Arctic birds that breed on the steep slopes. Occasionally a fox or white bear roams out over the ice from the mainland. The Eskimos on both islands live frugally on fish, sea mammals, and birds, the latter caught in long-handled nets from rock blinds.

"On the trail of prehistoric Eskimo migrations, the National Geographic society and the Smithsonian institution jointly sponsored an expedition in 1936 which visited both Little and Big Diomed islands. Evidence from kitchen middens on both islands showed that this was the route by which Eskimos entered America from Asia, presumably some 2,000 years ago, bringing with them the 'Golden age' culture of what is known as the 'Old Bering sea' period of Eskimo history. It is highly probable, although not yet proved, that by this same route man first entered the American continent, by some pre-Eskimo migrations of the ancestors of the American Indians."

Racing Pigeons Serve Valiantly for R. A. F.

LONDON.—Nearly 4,000 racing pigeons were supplied during one month to operational aircraft of the royal air force coastal command through the agency of the National Pigeon service.
The pigeons are carried on coastal reconnaissance aircraft as an additional means of communication in an emergency. Of 14 messages recently sent every one reached its destination safely.
One of the most gruelling flights by these "feathered airmen" was made by a bird which was released from the neighborhood of Stavanger, Norway. Despite unusually unfavorable weather conditions, it reached home safely, having flown nearly 250 miles across the North sea.

Woodpecker Drillings
Backed Up by Bees
KINGSTON, N. C.—It might be something new in the building game, but:
Some woodpeckers came along and drilled holes in the columns of Mrs. C. Felix Harvey's home. Very soon, some bees swarmed by, spotted the holes and began storing honey inside the columns.

FEBSERSBURG.

The weather continues warm and sultry; not our preference but Aug. is going so rapidly for pity's sake don't find any fault. Festivals and family reunions are popular, but everything must give way for the Carroll Co. Fair at Taneytown this week.

Two of our young people visited Roland Forney in Gettysburg Hospital, on Saturday and found him resting easily, but badly injured from an auto accident, and much bandaged. The auto wrecks are too numerous and results serious not only to the victims but their families and friends.

Letters from some of the sick are encouraging. Both Mrs. James P. Reese, of Lutherville well known and lived throughout the Lutheran Church and Mrs. W. ing. The two young brothers sang and there was singing and guitar music by young ladies. Those who came the farthest this year were from Florida. Speaking of family reunions we are always interested in their history, and that of the Renner's who gathered at Lost Creek Community Park, McAlisterville, Pa., on July 20 should win the historical prize—as it began in 84 A. D. and carried them through crusades and wars to 1927, when the descendants can speak for themselves. But what a study and work and how remarkable to connect such a long record! Some years ago a young man came from Ohio to discover ancestors of the Angell family. We did our best to help him, but to locate a great uncle of the present generation. Not as easy as it looks.

Snowshoe Army of 1743

In Massachusetts History BOSTON.—The Finns have their ski troops, but Massachusetts made provision for a genuine snowshoe army 32 years before the Revolutionary war, according to the WPA historical records survey.

In the provincial laws of 1743, the general court delegates the "captain general" to raise 10 companies in the counties of Hampshire, Middlesex, Worcester and York, each man to provide himself "with a good pair of snowshoes, one pair of Moggisons and one Hatchett."

John Leister, returned home on Thursday, from the Frederick City Hospital.

Mrs. Wilbur Mehring, of Silver Spring, Md., spent this week with her mother, Mrs. Charles Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Biller and children, Harry Walter and Lydia Ann, of Silver Spring, Md., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Wantz. Harry Walter remained and will spend some time at the Wantz home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Martin and daughters, of Altoona, Pa.; Mrs. John Shorb and daughters, of Rocky Ridge, Md., visited their aunt, Mrs. John Baumgardner, on Monday; also Mrs. George M. Baumgardner and Mr. Kenneth Baumgardner, of Baltimore, spent Monday and Tuesday at the same place.

The new dwellings under way at one time on East Baltimore Street, shows popularity for that section, which should stir up those with lots for sale, on other streets to offer attractive prices to prospective buyers—or "get left" likely for a long time to come. Why not advertise them in our Special Notice Column?

Miss Kathryn Ridinger, Washington, in renewing her subscription to The Record says: "I, being a reader of The Carroll Record since I've been able to read, cannot express how much I appreciate and value The Record, since being here in Washington. Each week, after reading its contents I feel, as though, I've visited Taneytown and its vicinities."

COUNTY FAIR WAS OUTSTANDING SUCCESS.

The public wedding, that attracted many, was held Wednesday night, when Miss Esther Emma Morton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Morton, of Gamber, became the bride of Grover Vernon Staub, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Staub, Westminster.

The bride was given in marriage by an uncle, James Howard, wore a gown of velva ray floral white satin. A short veil was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms. The groom, bestman, ring bearer, train bearers and ushers were in full dress—white ties and tails.

Others in the wedding party were Harvina Ebaugh, Kathryn Pietsch, Loretta Howard and Goldie Morton, bridesmaids; Wilmer Staub, Edgar Cumor, George Hood and Philip Crawford, ushers; Jean Morton, flower girl; Albert Grimes, ring bearer, and Allan Ebaugh, train bearer.

Kale Mathias was soloist and Mrs. Curbin Seitz, Westminster, accompanist.

L. C. Burns, County Agent, said the dairy cat exhibit was the most extensive in the fair's history, and Dr. Joseph Vial, of the University of Maryland, said the eighty head of horses comprised the best exhibit he had judged in the State.

Burns said four cattle breeds were represented, as compared with the usual two, and that there were entries from numerous herds in each breed.

Belgian horses are entered this year for the first time, eighteen being shown.

There were fine displays in the Household Arts and Poultry buildings; and of course the supply of ham, eggs and bacon producers were there in the various breeds.

Boy Speaks First Time In 12 Years of Life

LONDON.—When for the first time in his life 12-year-old Peter Cripps spoke, after an operation had restored his power of speech, he asked for "some hot buttered toast, please."

Since his windpipe was removed when he was two, the boy has had to breathe through a rubber tube opening from the front of his neck. His efforts at speech were unintelligible. But now modern surgery has given him a real windpipe made of skin grafted from his left arm.

Indian Salesmen Roved Wide Areas In Ancient Days

Long Before Columbus' Day They Sold Cosmetics and Other Things.

TUCSON, ARIZ.—Ancient southwestern Indians probably were asking each other, "did you hear the one about the traveling salesman?" long before Columbus discovered America.

There were traveling salesmen then among the natives who sold cosmetics, live parrots, pottery, ornaments. They roamed long trails from the Pacific ocean to the great plains, from Central America to cliff dwellings of the north.

Dr. Harold S. Colton, director of the Museum of Northern Arizona, reported here that his studies disclosed regular trade routes and many articles of commerce.

Rouge Popular.

A rouge manufactured at the Grand canyon from iron oxide or red ochre was sold far and wide. After coming of the Spaniards, the cosmetic became so important that the viceroys of new Spain called a special inquiry near what is now El Paso, Texas, in 1691 to discuss means of obtaining it.

The Spanish women liked the rouge because it preserved their complexions. Every Indian in the country wanted a supply for ceremonial purposes.

Dr. Colton said the Havasupai Indians sold the rouge for the equivalent of about $5 a pound and the Hopis in turn peddled it for 25 cents a teaspoonful.

On their backs the Indian salesmen also carried, from one settlement to another, textiles, shells and even crude plastics.

Live parrots were imported from Mexico and carried 700 miles to northern Arizona, where their remains have been found in ruins of old dwellings.

Pottery in Demand.

The volume of pottery traded was enormous. Some evidently was manufactured primarily for trading purposes, as it was found over wide areas and only in small quantities at the site of its production.

In desert regions, the traders went from mountain range to mountain range so as to have water supplies, and could not have survived along the level desert routes of modern transportation.

River valleys formed natural avenues of trade, supplying not only water and easier traveling, but villages for stopping places to trade and visit.

Through all the years and the coming of the white man, the Indians have not lost their trading instinct, Dr. Colton said. They still walk long distances to obtain goods to sell or trade on their reservations.

Fumes of Kerosene Kill

Motherly Love of Ewes SWEETWATER, TEXAS.—A tale of mother love that withered at the odor of kerosene fumes was told here recently by a sheep-raiser who lost 39 lambs because of that fact.

During extremely cold weather, the owner gathered up 40 young lambs and put them in his garage, with a kerosene stove to keep them warm. The stove was faulty and reeked of smoke and kerosene and so did the lambs the next morning.

When the lambs were returned to their mothers, the ewes sniffed and turned away. None would claim her offspring. Bottle-feeding was attempted but within 24 hours 39 of the 40 lambs were dead of hunger and cold.

Indian Girl, 2, Dies Trying To Rescue Baby Sister

JENKS, OKLA.—A two-year-old Indian girl tried vainly to rescue her 10-month-old sister, but both perished as their frame home collapsed in flames.

Neighbors said they saw Natacha Lahoma Peek crawl along the floor of the burning house, dragging her baby sister, Sequoyah Ann, toward the door just before the building fell in.

The mother, Mrs. Huel Peek, was visiting a neighbor but ran home and suffered minor burns in a futile effort to enter the house.

Police Suffer Damages

Battling Two Amazons MOBILE, ALA.—A Mobile officer lost his trousers halting a fight—and another lost his $19 spectacles.

Motorcycle officers Cecil McAuley and Henry Fraelich were sent to the Negro section to break up a fight between two women. In the argumented scuffle Fraelich had his trousers torn off and McAuley's glasses were smashed.

The women were fined $25 and costs in recorder's court.

Brother and Sister Meet In Store After 40 Years

APPLETON, WIS.—A woman walked into the Morris Spector jewelry store and asked for a pair of glasses. Spector looked, blinked and decided maybe he needed a pair, too. But he didn't. The woman was his sister, Mrs. Helen Sobel of New York, whom Spector hadn't seen for 40 years.

Shelter Belt Bring-

Birds Back to Plains

WASHINGTON.—The first nationwide bird census has disclosed an unexpectedly large increase in the number of birds and other wildlife in the 11,000 miles of shelter belt trees in the Great Plains. The census taken by the forest service of the agriculture department showed increases ranging up to 500 per cent in many areas of Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

The more than 125,000,000 trees planted in the six states were intended only as windbreaks to stop the blowing of soil and to conserve moisture. But benefits from insect-destroying birds may be almost as great.

The census was taken through questionnaires sent to owners of the farms in some areas and through counts by forest service men of birds and nests in other areas. The first count was on a "sampling" basis, but a more detailed census is planned now. The forest service reported that not only have the windbreaks attracted numerous insect-eating birds, but that many small fur-bearing animals have found homes in the small forests that streak the plains.

Mileage Hints

By J. F. Winchester
Supervisor of Motor Vehicle Equipment, Esso Marketers

BASED on many years of experience the various states have enacted laws regulating motor cars and their operation. The basic purpose of these laws is to protect the public. Thus an increasing number of states require motorists to prove their ability to drive before they are granted a license to do so. Other states require that cars be inspected periodically to prove that they are mechanically fit to be on the road.

Virtually every state requires the driver to carry his automobile's registration certificate with him when his car is being used and to permit any officer of the law to examine this certificate. This proves the ownership of the car. It is also a protection to every honest driver and has resulted in authorities recovering hundreds of stolen automobiles.

Most states require a certificate of title signed under oath for each automobile registered for the first time in the state. Accompanying this title certificate must be a bill of sale signed by the person or firm selling the car. New title certificates are issued upon subsequent sale of the car.

In buying a motor car you should check its engine and serial numbers against the numbers on the bill of sale, certificate of title and old registration certificates to protect yourself against the purchase of a stolen car. If you repair your car or install a rebuilt engine with a different engine number you should so notify your state motor vehicle department. If, by chance, your car is stolen notify the police at once and if it is not recovered notify your state motor vehicle department.

These laws were placed on the statute books for your protection and for the protection of all honest motorists. It is the part of good citizenship to observe them carefully and to promote their observance generally.

Electric Range Will Provide Heat Relief in Farm Kitchen

Electrically done to a turn! And almost automatically too!

By IRA MILLER

Farm Electrification Bureau

TYPICALLY, you—the woman of the farm—must prepare nearly 1,100 meals a year and spend about one-third of your time in the kitchen performing tasks that relate directly or indirectly to the preparation and serving of food. Thus the kitchen is, in truth, the workshop of your home and, as cooking is the principal work done there, the choice of a suitable range is of major importance to your health and comfort.

Of all the fuels that can be used for cooking, none offers all the advantages of electricity which include simplicity, constant temperature, speed, safety, cleanliness, coolness and economy. Considering the last point first, in a recent test three complete meals a day for three days for four people were cooked electrically at a current cost of only 18 cents. The guesses of the audience which witnessed the tests ranged from 9 to 50 cents.

This was settled once and for all, the old bugaboo that electric cooking is only for the very well-to-do. With a modern low-priced electric range—from under $100 to about $200 (depending on the size)—and with the special low power rates available in most parts of the country, cooking with electricity is well within the financial reach of every electrified farm home.

This does not take into account the fact that, with an electric range, you need not stew and swelter over a hot stove; that you no longer need a wood box; that you have no ashes to remove; that you will not be bothered with soot, smoke and grime; and that you can actually cook more and better food in a fraction of the time required by older methods.

Cooking electrically, you no longer are a slave to your kitchen. Instead, you have freedom for other things and for rest and recreation. For, if you like, you can put the meat, vegetables and even the dessert in the oven, set the automatic time-control clock which turns the current on and off at the proper time, and go visiting, take a nap, finish your sewing or do anything else you wish. Then, at mealtime, you simply open the oven and the food is ready to serve.

It is not a difficult or highly-technical operation to cook electrically. Just use your common sense and the instruction book (with proved and tested recipes) which comes with the range. Once you've used an electric range, you'll wonder how you ever got along without one—particularly during the hot days of summer and fall.

Proposed an Ideal German Utopia Back in Year 1521

Four hundred years ago a German Franciscan named Johann Eberlin of Guenzburg wrote an idealistic constitution for the Germans, an ordinance for a sort of Utopia which he called "Welfaria."

Tender, reasonable, full of sense and tolerance, it did away with both imperial and canon law, abolished judgeships and advocacies, tolerated Jews and heathens, outlawed heresy hunting, made education compulsory for children, forbade the erection of "immoderately costly buildings" other than public edifices, abolished war for purposes of "extending or aggrandizing our land," allowed cards and dicing but only for small stakes, authorized three hours of village dancing each week, required that no business establishment employ more than three hands, and provided that every governor, from the village headman to the king, should be elected and should legislate only by the advice and with the consent of his local or national council.

Justice and sanity inform every line of this brief and simple document, this text for the governance of a rural hamlet drafted to display the world in which an individual preferred to live. And no individual, German or other, living in a German village in the year 1521, would have lived unhappily under the laws of this modest Solon.

But 1521 happened to be a culminating year in Europe. It was the year in which Luther was condemned by the Diet at Worms. The dynamite contained in more than three centuries of struggles between empire and papacy, in three centuries of exploitation of the pious Germans by a cynical and voracious episcopate, suddenly exploded in this year; and the Germans were started on a career of brutal strife and religious warfare which brought them two whole centuries of darkness and misery.

Not what the individual, Eberlin, designed and desired but what the accumulated past made necessary constituted the substance of Reformation politics; and what the then dominant stratum of German society—the princes—designed and desired determined how the political problems would be met.

Airplanes Fly Below Sea Level in Some Places

Airplanes have flown at more extreme negative altitudes than any submarine is capable of going. Except for test dives that have taken a single United States naval submarine down to a depth of 350 feet, naval submarines are seldom operated at any depth greater than necessary for getting out of sight and avoiding danger of collision with surface vessels. This is easily accomplished by cruising at a depth of from 45 to 65 feet below the surface of the sea. At any greater depths the submarine is blind; it retains vision only by keeping its periscope above water.

On the other hand, there are numerous places on earth over which aircraft have flown, or are capable of flying below sea level. In Death Valley National monument, in California, for example, aircraft are constantly landing and taking off from an airport that is 210 feet below sea level. An airplane skimming the surface of Russia's Caspian sea would be flying approximately 85 feet below sea level; and it could fly up the Volga river for several hundred miles on a course farther below sea level than naval submarines habitually cruise.

The surface of the Sea of Galilee lies farther below sea level than any naval submarine is capable of going with any hope of ever returning to the surface. But for some real "submarine" acrobatic flying, we have only to send our aircraft skimming over the Dead sea of Palestine. There, any competent aviator may start a power dive or spin at sea level, lose 1,000 feet of altitude, then resume level flight with 300 feet of negative altitude to spare!

Badger Makes Comeback

The badger is coming back as a commercially important fur-bearing animal if the reports of western Michigan trappers may be taken as a reliable indication.

A native Michigan animal, the badger has been relatively scarce in the state for the last few years, says the Detroit News. In counties bordering Lake Michigan where extensive trapping is carried on, the catch of badger has been light for at least the last 10 years. But fur buyers covering the western part of the state in 1940 found prime pelts frequent and seconds and small pelts much more numerous than on preceding trips.

Prices varied widely, depending on the size and condition of the pelt. One fur buyer established a scale ranging from 50 cents for inferior specimens to as much as $5.50 for prime large pelts.

No Chemical Shortage

No shortage of dyes and other coal-tar chemicals because of the war in Europe is expected. Whereas in 1914 the United States imported more than 90 per cent of her dyes and other coal-tar chemicals, such as medicinals, the country now imports less than 10 per cent and is in fact on an export basis. The imported items are specialty chemicals which, if necessary, can be produced here.

SAFE AND SECURE
By KARL GRAYSON
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

ANDY flung aside the magazine and gave himself over to black thoughts. In his mind's eye he could picture himself as the hero of the story he had just completed—the story of a man who, after twenty years of married life, suddenly woke up to the fact that his ambitions, his desires and longings had been stifled by a narrow, unimaginative, overbearing wife. The hero had determined to cut loose from it all; had cut loose, in fact, realized his dreams and found happiness and great success.

It occurred to Andy that his own life was not unlike that. Bess, his wife, was not unlike the wife in the story, now that he stopped to think about it. She was narrow and stupid and unimaginative. She had laughed at his schemes to do great things, been in contempt of his ambitions, never willing to let him take a chance, always insisting that they play safe and secure.

Safe and secure! The words fairly made him writhe. They had been like a shadow, like a protecting cloak, enveloping him, pressing him down, stifling him ever since he had married Bess.

Andy sat upright and pounded the arm of his chair. It was time he made a break! Time he had the courage to tell Bess exactly what he thought, and cut loose!

He was getting old. Ambition didn't burn in one's soul forever.

Bess was like the wife in the story.

She was holding him back, stifling him, robbing him of things that he wanted and needed, of life. And she had been doing it for twenty years, only he hadn't had the courage to face the facts to assert himself. But now the time had come. He stood up and reached for his hat.

It was going to be hard on Bess. She'd probably be astonished and bewildered.

She wouldn't understand, and he'd have a hard job explaining, because when you came right down to it there was nothing really wrong with Bess, nothing that you could lay your finger on or point to. She was loyal and dutiful, as wives went. She merely lacked imagination and understanding. He pictured her weeping and carrying on, and unconsciously tossed his head in a little gesture of defiance. He wouldn't weaken. Not this time.

It was five o'clock when Andy reached the house, an hour earlier than he usually arrived. The hall and living room were empty and he guessed that Bess must be upstairs dressing. He mounted to the top floor, conscious the while that his heart was beating unnaturally loud, that his hands felt clammy. Before the door of their bedroom he paused. For a split second misgivings assailed him. He brushed them impatiently aside, lifted his head and opened the door.

Bess was seated at her dressing table doing her hair. She saw him in the mirror and smiled. "Hello, darling," she said. "You're early."

Andy stood still, watching, uneasily aware of a feeling of guilt, of a dryness in his mouth. And he knew a momentary weakening. Bess, he thought vaguely, was beautiful. There was no denying that. If only she weren't so stupid and unimaginative.

He cleared his throat, and when he spoke his voice sounded unnaturally harsh. He wished he could have seemed gentler.

"Bess, I've been thinking. About you and me."

He paused, and his eyes rested on her face in the mirror.

"I—I've come to the conclusion that our marriage is—was a mistake. I mean, we're not suited to each other. I mean, we're different, Bess, in our ideas. There are certain things that I want to do and—"

He floundered. He had expected she would interrupt long before this, and the fact that she had let him go on was a trifle disconcerting. He hadn't planned any long speech.

Bess didn't turn and the expression on her face didn't change. But her eyes in the mirror were watching him.

"Isn't it rather late to discover we made a mistake, Andy?" She sounded almost casual.

Andy wet his lips.

"I suppose it is. I—I've known for a long time. I mean, I've just waked to the fact that—that—well, there are certain things I want to do that you don't approve of and—"

"So that's it?"

In the mirror Bess' lips smiled. She reached for a hairpin.

"I'm sort of cramping your style, eh, Andy? I'm a little too practical and not quite imaginative enough. It's the old story of the wife who holds back the ambitious husband."

Andy blinked.

"Why—why, yes. I guess that does about cover it."

"Very well, Andy. I love you too much to want to stand in your way. You arrange everything and I'll not hinder you."

"You mean, you won't—that is, I'm free to go to do as I like without any objection from you at all?"

"Of course, Andy, I want you to do what you think best. If you can get ahead, faster alone—well, we can still be friends and perhaps see each other occasionally. That's the only sensible way."

Just like that. No fuss, no bother, no tears, no difficulty whatever. It had been easy, too easy. Almost as if Bess had expected it. Andy turned and went out. He was too astounded to even make the pretty farewell speech he'd planned. Dazedly he picked up his hat and was halfway down the front walk when a thought struck him. A horrible, ugly, thought. It struck him with such a force that he stopped as suddenly as he would if he'd run into a stone wall. He felt suddenly numb and weak and miserable.

There was only one explanation for Bess' willingness, for her ready acquiescence to his suggestion: she wanted him to go. She wanted to get rid of him. She had stopped loving him. It was an excuse, a convenient means of suggesting the same thing to him on her own behalf. Why? The question throbbed against his brain. Why? Why? And the answer, crystal clear, came out of nowhere to torment his soul. She loved another! There was another man in her life. She had been carrying on an affair. Under his very nose. He had been stupid, blind, too bound up in thoughts of himself to notice. In a single, overpowering flood of panic he realized how horrible life would be without Bess, without her love.

Impulsively Andy turned and rushed back up the walk. He flung open the front door and bounded up the stairs two at a time. The door to their bedroom was still open, just as he had left it. Bess was still at her dressing table. She looked at him in the mirror and smiled.

Andy came slowly across the room. He stood for a moment looking down at her. Then he dropped to his knees. There was pleading in his eyes, apology, guilt. He tried to say something, but words wouldn't come. Tears appeared instead. A choking sob escaped his lips and suddenly he bent forward and laid his head in her lap.

Bess bent over him and stroked his head tenderly. Her lips rested against his hair and she pressed him to her breast. There was no need for words, for explanations. She understood and he knew that she loved him, that those tormenting thoughts were foolish and unreal. He wanted forgiveness, and knew that it would be given. A vast feeling of comfort stole over him, of contentment and security. He was back where he belonged, safe and secure once more.

Above him, Bess smiled through her tears. No need to tell him, she thought, of the torment that had entered her own soul, of the momentary misery she had experienced. No need to let him know that she had fled to the window the moment he had gone and would have called him back had he not paused there on the walk and turned of his own accord. No need at all. Let him continue to think that she was practical and without imagination. It was better that way. A great deal better.

Biting Test Best Guide For Mosquito Campaign

Mosquitoes, important both as disease carriers and as pests that make life miserable for men and for animals, vary so widely in their breeding habits that the treatment that will control one species may not be satisfactory for controlling another. By scientific study of the habits of mosquitoes, however, it is possible to devise a control program that will be effective against a group of species of similar habits.

In planning mosquito control, it is first necessary to identify the kinds that are causing the trouble. Traps have been devised for collecting mosquitoes for identification, and fine-meshed nets are also useful. But federal entomologists find it is almost essential to supplement such records to get a reliable index to the abundance of pestiferous species. They do this by baring an arm or leg in a mosquito-infested spot and collecting the attacking insects by means of a wide-mouthed killing bottle that can be moved quickly to cover the spot where an insect is biting. After a series of such tests, the mosquito specialist who knows the breeding and flight habits of the various species has information to consider practical control methods.

A recent publication on the mosquitoes of the southeastern states, by the United States department of agriculture, lists and describes 47 species of mosquitoes, of which only seven are of serious economic importance. The southern house mosquito and the yellow-fever mosquito both breed near the place where they make their attack and local cleanups can be made effective. The malaria mosquito is not likely to fly much more than a mile and the search for breeding places can be held to about that distance. Some of the salt-marsh mosquitoes are strong fliers or are carried by wind to a considerable distance, and on this account control operations usually have to be organized to include a whole county or several counties.

Any Time at All

Since all the meridians of longitude meet at the North and South poles, any time may be observed there. It is customary for explorers in the Arctic and Antarctic to use the time of the countries they represent or to use time based on that of Greenwich, England.

Locking Barn Door As Kittens Arrive

LONGVIEW, WASH. — Hugh Little, roofer at a lumbermen's hotel, always shuts the window when he takes a nap now. While Little was sleeping recently, a stray cat crawled into the room and had six kittens on the bed. When Little awoke early in the morning he found the cat and her litter snuggling atop his blankets.

Inventor Gets His Ideas While Asleep

Can Keep Busy for Years on What He Now Has.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Those strange subconscious things that buzz in your brain when you're asleep are credited by James E. Trafford for his ideas and inventions.

As a result of his napping, he avers, he has sufficient inventions in mind to keep busy for 10 years.

Trafford invents medical equipment and surgical tools. By trade he is a laboratory technician and medical orderly. Among his devices now used regularly in large hospitals are a nephrostomy hook, to drain the kidneys, and an endoscope with which the body cavity is explored.

Another Trafford success is a surgical instrument, of the suction pump variety, to drain poisonous matter from the interior of the body.

At the moment he is developing a diathermy machine—a short wave radio sending heat on radio frequencies—about the size of a pound of butter. It can be manufactured cheaply, he states, making it readily available whereas the more expensive types utilized today are relatively rare.

The 42-year-old inventor works without laboratory or technical tools. His workshop is a kitchen table in his apartment.

Labors of Hercules

The 12 tasks of great difficulty imposed on Hercules by the Argive king were as follows: "To slay the Nemean lion, kill the Lernean hydra, catch and retain the Arcadian stag, destroy the Erymanthian boar, cleanse the stables of King Augeas, destroy the cannibal birds of the Lake Stymphalis, catch captive the Cretan bull, catch the horses of the Thracian Diomedes, get possession of the girdle of Hippolyta, queen of the Amazons; take captive the oxen of the monster Geryon, get possession of the apples of the Hesperides, and bring up from the infernal regions the three-headed dog Cerberus."

Murderer Grows Fat as He Awaits Death Sentence

Strange Murder Story Comes From One of the Virgin Islands.

CHRISTIANSTED, VIRGIN ISLANDS.—In a penitentiary cell in St. Croix, growing fat from inactivity, sits Benjamin Knight, 62 years old, a native fisherman under sentence of death for murder in a case unique in American criminal law.

With the exception of a single juror—1 out of 12—all persons involved were colored. Murderer and victim, prosecutor and defense counsel, and the trial judge were Negroes, residents of a community in which the ratio of Negroes to whites is more than 10 to 1—about the proportion of the jury.

Sentence was pronounced by Judge Herman E. Moore, born in Mississippi; a Chicago attorney for 18 years, and for five years an assistant commissioner of the Illinois Commerce commission, who says that as far as he knows, he is the first Negro judge in the history of the United States to impose the death penalty.

Moore was appointed to the federal district court of the Virgin Islands last January 4 and one of the first cases that confronted him was that of Knight, who is called Bobo. Knight was charged with the slaying of Henry James, a plantation worker.

Others Involved.

There were three more principals in the case—all native Crucians (residents of St. Croix) and all American citizens. They were James' wife, Berta, a girl, Daphne Noughton, 15, who was reared by James and his wife, and Knight's son, George, a young man in his twenties. George, the islanders said, was "sweet on Daphne."

Henry James lost his job last summer and the Knights got him another on the Anguilla estate, St. Croix island. Shortly after the Jameses were installed, George and Daphne took a room to themselves and lived together. Bobo built a fish trap for Daphne and set it out at sea along with his own traps.

James often was idle and he talked to neighbors about the relationship he believed existed between his wife, Berta, and the elder Knight. He declared James had "scandalized" his name. He then fatally attacked James with a wooden fish pot marker and with stones.

Case Quickly Solved.

James' body was found by cane cutters the morning after the murder. Police solved the case a week later.

The jury found Knight guilty of first degree murder. Its verdict was: "We the jury find the defendant to be guilty of murder in the first degree, as charged, and recommend that his punishment be death." Sentence was passed by Judge Moore on March 28. He set June 17 as the date Knight was to be hanged.

The execution was stayed, however, pending an appeal to the third circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia. Knight is considered to have two chances for his life. One hinges on a possible upset of the verdict by the higher court. The other rests in the chance, that, even though the judgment were affirmed, the sentence might be commuted to life imprisonment by the appeals court.

This is regarded as a strong probability. Robert Morss Lovett, former professor emeritus of English at the University of Chicago, who is acting governor of the Virgin islands, is a foe of capital punishment, and it has been abolished on one of the islands, St. Thomas.

Girls Told Toe Wiggling

Will Step Up Efficiency

BOSTON.—Wiggle your toes, girls, if you want to increase your efficiency.

Dr. Thomas T. Boyd, speaking at a convention of the Massachusetts Academy of Podiatry, said that if housewives and salesgirls would take off their shoes and stockings and wiggle their toes, their efficiency would rise by about 50 per cent. There is no special way to do it, he said; just wiggle. "It does for the toes what a deep breath of invigorating air does for the lungs."

Dr. Boyd also pleaded with women to wear lower heels to avoid "serious stomach ailments and looking like leaning towers of Pisa."

Armless Angler Floats

To Safety From Plunge

WAPAKONETA, OHIO.—Al Wine-miller, armless as result of a hunting accident, used his muscles and his head to save himself from drowning in near-by Indian lake.

Standing up in a boat, Wine-miller lost his balance and tumbled into the water, attired in a heavy hunting coat. He quick-wittedly managed to float on his back until his fishing companions rescued him.

It Killed the Horse

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Motor sputtering, an airplane made an emergency landing in a field not far from where Old Joe, a work horse, was standing. Old Joe swung his head slowly, looked fearfully at the plane, and fell dead.

Safely Banked

It is nobody's business how you spend your money, but if you are wise you will make it your business to bank part of it regularly before it is gone for good—others' good, not yours.

Pity the Poor Penny!

His lot is a sad one. Many folks won't even stoop to pick him up if he falls. When a thing is of little use, people say "it's not even worth a cent." He is indeed scorned and maligned.

It's time the penny got a break. He really is important. Many successful savers, knowing full well that ten pennies make a dime, ten dimes a dollar, etc., keep track of every cent.

The old saying is still very true, that if you take care of your pennies, the dollars will take care of themselves. So don't let small sums trickle away; put them, instead, in this bank.
