Bill Before Legislature to Turn Them Back to County.

There are two bills before the legislature for the return of the roads of Carroll County to the County Commissioners. As yet, we have no report on the progress of these bills, but as there is no opposition on the part of either Senator, or four Commissioners, courtesy very often pre-vails and such bills are passed.

Neither does politics seem to enter are Democrats, the Board of Com-missioners is also divided, Melville and Hess being Republicans, and Wine, of Manchester, is a Democrat. One attempt was made at the session of 1939, was defeated.

The argument is, that county road maintenance would result in greatly lower cost, and at the same time result in greater public convenience.

The president read a letter of thanks from the Home-makers' Club for the recent contribution of the Club to the Library Fund.

The program was in charge of the Citizenship Committee, Prof. Milton Terry, chairman. The theme of the program was "Patriotism" as suggested by the proximity of the anniversary dates of the birth of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington. Prof. Terry in his address listed and evaluated the qualities of patriotism as they are exemplified in the lives and public service of Lincoln and Washington.

He said that a proper observance of these birthday anniversaries calls for a re-covenant to the principles of patriotic duty and responsibility, and a re-statement of what patriotism is. It is much easier to define what patriotism is not than to define what it is, especially because patriotism means so many different things to different people. One of the very evident manifestations of non-patriotism is lack of toleration resulting from muddled thinking. A muddled think-er is a dangerous citizen, to be classed with the saboteur or the fifth columnist. In the absence of clear thinking about public situations and public problems, it is so easy to class one in authority as a dictator. Prof. Terry recalled some of the decisions of Washington and Lincoln in public affairs which brought upon them the accusation of being dictators. These great patriots, however, regarded in the light of another and a later genbrated their 55th. wedding anniver- eration, are justified in the minds of Monday. Guests were Mr. and Mrs.

A STORMY FIGHT FOR CUT IN THE BUDGET.

Statements made that require careful thought.

Annapolis, Feb. 17—The taxpayers fight for a State Budget cut is getting the close attention of the General Assembly as organizations throughout the State have passed economy resolutions and as letters and wires demanding a budget cut pour into the Capitol.

Senator Dudley G. Roe. Chairman

Senator Dudley G. Roe, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is holding a special hearing before committee Tuesday night for Baltimore taxpayers who are asking a reduction of the all-time high State Budget now before the Legislature.

Representatives of taxpayers organizations from several counties appeared at a similar hearing before the Senate Finance Committee on Feb 11. At this hearing Senator Roe remarked that it was the first time in the Legislature such a group had come to Annapolis without wanting something for themselves and that they were performing a patriotic service which taxpayers should have started long ago.

The taxpayers are pointing out the tremendous strain the cost of rearmament will impose on the economy of the State of Maryland. Maryland's share of a 50 billion dollar defense program, they estimate, would be $750,000,000, or $411 per capita, or $1,692 per family. In this emergency they say, sound business prudence in-dicates the necessity of cutting State expenses, but notwithstanding this, the proposed State Budget contemplates spending $6,000,000 more than during the last Biennium. In addition, a $4,000,000 bond issue is pro-

Various county meetings have opposed it. Another one will be held at Frederick on February 22. Carroll County will take action against the proposed increased spending Feb. 27 at a meeting sponsored by the Citizens' Progressive Association of Westminster. On the Eastern Shore intense activity by taxpayers has brought pledges for economy from several of their Legislators already.

There is the diagnosis and the cure.

For generations numerous special roups have demanded special legislation and appropriations, each one seeing only its own particular desire and forgetful of the total cost to all

The more prominent one is as a leading citizen, the greater his or her responsibility is to live an upright, useful life; for no one can avoid exerting a certain amount of influence within their community.

OUR LEGISLATURES.

The government of Maryland is through a Senate and House of Delegates, elected every four years for two terms of two years each. One Senator and four members of the House of Delegates. This is the nearest we can come to a pure democracy without the use of more frequent elections at great expense to the taxpayers. This Senate and House so constituted is what we call our Legislature—each body being subject to certain practices and parliamentary

It might be a good plan to require wanted new laws to be widely circulated several months before the assembling of the legislature; but in the absence of any such law there is no satisfactory manner in which such information might be circulated as an Britain-unless when the war is over

GREEKS AND TURKS.

There is an old saying "when Greek meets Greek, then comes a tug of war" and this reputation has been kept up in the war between Greece and Italy.

And this calls to mind another common saying "Fight like a Turk," following Turkish officials that they were ready for war with the "Nazi", German forces.

SOBRIETY IN THE SWISS ARMY.

The following, clipped from The American Issue, is quite worth reading, as well as adopting, not only by armies but by individuals. The article was reproduced from the Ontario, Canada, Temperance Advocate. It should be read and carefully considered by young men everywhere.

"To the youth of the country: Among the scourges that humanity has invented for her own destruction some are brutal: war invasion. There are others which insinuate them-selves craftily under the appearance of pleasure and which, once installed exert ravages all the more dangerous that their cause is more difficult to extirpate. Alcoholism is one of these.

The defense of the country will be incomplete unless we put our youth on guard against all abuse of strong drink. A people which allows alcoholism to penetrate into its midst attacks its own substance and undermines its own vital force.

"Young Swiss! Sobriety is for you a national duty no less than a matter of personal dignity. It is you who will put your stamp on our country of tomorrow, it is you who will have to maintain her independence. Strive therefore to preserve all your energies for her service. It is an affair of honor and of self-discipline."

PEACE AIMS.

The United States is taking a big ica could withdraw if the Court be- job at hand. came too dangerous.

Today Americans are seeing that they must co-operate to resist lawlessness either before or after war starts. It is only common sense to think a bit about what kind of cooperation is going to follow the immediate step of the lend-lease bill.

Thinking about peace aims is eminently in order. Even such questions as Senator Warren Austin, of Vermont is asking about how an area of safety is going to be "established for British-American ideas, economy and spirituality." News reports have put the emphasis in Mr. Austin's statement on British peace aims; while he is reminding Britain that her co-operation with America has not always been quite perfect, he is also concerned that Americans should be thinking about their own aims. To a good many Americans such self-examination appears not only more graceful but more useful.

They fully appreciate Mr. Churchill's reasons for saying that Britains ties as habits before much advancefirst aim is survival. They are convinced that the patterns of a new democracy are already forming both in Britain and on the Continent. Many of the British people are giving any time they can spare from for a better world. Probably a more general outline of such a peace may become as useful as Wilson's Foured peoples an inspiring alternative to the Nazis "new order."

Buck Deer Kills Another,

Then Pays With Own Life WATERTON, COLO.—Death came to the victor as well as the vanquished in a fight between two big buck deer in a dense forest above the Platte river canyon.

From a battleground high in the mountains, the winner had dragged the dead loser, their antlers locked in the death grip, down to level ground along the Platte in his attempt to rid himself of the carcass. It was there that Brakeman R. H. Eshe and other members of a freight train crew came upon the scene.

The buck was moving slowly along the bank with his head lowered. Every few yards he would stop and shake his head in an effort to free himself.

The crew stopped the train and started toward the buck to separate the tangled antlers. But when the buck saw the crew approaching, he plunged over the bank into the river. The weight of the dead deer pulled him under water in a deep

Coordination Is Needed For Long Golf Drives

A beginner at golf usually bends his body during the stroke. It is a natural impulse, for the powerful muscles of the back are normally used to augment the strength of the arms. In consequence, he either swings down, as though trying to drive a pick into the ground, or swings up as though lifting a bushel of potatoes into a wagon. And usually he is inclined to argue against

"But I have to get power some " he is likely to expostulate.

"You don't need power in this," the teacher will explain patiently. "You have a long club, which first of all calls for accuracy. In the next place the weight of the clubhead is enough in relation to the weight of the ball so that its own momentum at impact is a major factor. A long drive comes largely from the last instant speed of the club-head.

"If at the moment of impact your body is turning slowly, your arms moving a little faster on that base, and your wrists snapping the club forward on top of that, the speed will be the sum of all three-like a flea jumping forward on the head of a man running forward on the top of a moving freight train."

One could apply this to many things, but the application which occurs to us at the moment is industrial good will. If a superintendent plans wisely, a foreman drives ahead vigorously, and there is underneath this a basis of plant cooperation and good will, the sum total of efficient output may be surprising. Just jerking on any one of the three is likely to slice into the

Medical Research Aided By Electron Microscope

One form of electron tube does for the eye what the telephone does for the ear. That phototube, as it is called, can take the light reflected by a man's face, change it into a current of electricity, send the current over a wire or through space, and change it back again into an image of a face.

Suppose the image were that of a germ, and that it were magnified millions of times. Wouldn't that give us the most powerful of microscopes? Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin, the scientist who gave us television as we know it today, thinks so, and bas built an experimental instrument which, when it is perfected, will enable science to penetrate still more deeply into the unknown of the infinitely small.

The potentialities of such an invention surpass prediction. For example, there are about 20 diseases caused by viruses-among them infantile paralysis, smallpox, chickenpox, the common cold, typhus, rabies, measles, mumps and encephalitis (the so-called sleeping sickness). What are these viruses? Nobody knows. If they are germs skillful experts can produce. What a bound medicine will make when he studies the ultramicroscopic with electron tubes!

Dogged by Hard Luck for 14 Years, Georgia Court Frees Robinson.

ATLANTA. - Walter Robinson, whose footsteps were dogged by hard luck for 14 years, while he trudged a weary trail over the United States as a fugitive from Georgia justice, has come out from behind the biggest eight-ball in his harassed career. The climax to one of the strangest stories of all time took place in the Fulton county superior courtroom here when Robinson was scheduled to stand trial before Judge John D. Humphries on a charge of assault with intent to murder and another charge of burglary. In 1926 Robinson was indicted on a charge of attempting to murder H. W. Parker with a knife, on January 28 of that year. Also, he was accused by the grand jury of burglarizing the North boulevard residence of Tom Nance, on January 27,

This trouble sent Robinson out onthe roads over the United States on a dodge and year after year rolled by with tough breaks marking every road he took. It seemed that nothing good ever happened to him and Lady Luck was a wench whose frowning face met him at every

Early this fall, the peak of his tough breaks cracked down on Robinson here in Atlanta. After 14 years of unremitting traveling, Robinson decided to come back home and, with his little bundle of clothes tightly tied up with a string, he confidently walked into a Decatur street rooming house, where he expected to find an old friend. Without looking at the room door, Robinson walked in—and came face to face with the man he was charged with nearly slicing to pieces with the knife 14 years ago. Five minutes later, Robinson was in the jail he had been dodging those 14 years. Had Robinson looked at the door he entered in the rooming house, he would have seen in large chalked letters the name of H. W. Parker, the cause of all his trouble.

In jail, Robinson shrugged his shoulders and moaned:

Just call me "Eight-Ball" Parker, remembering a promise he had made years ago to his mother to see that Robinson was prosecuted, boasted then that he would see that Robinson got a nice long Refuses to Prosecute.

After waiting all these years for the revenge he had promised his mother on her deathbed, Parker decided he could not go through with it. He showed up the morning of the trial and told the solicitor general he would not prosecute and that, so far as he was concerned, the incident was closed. And the state was unable to locate Tom Nance, the man whose home Robinson was charged with having robbed.

At last, the frown of Lady Luck switched to a beaming smile for old 'Eight Ball."

Judge Humphries, at the request of the solicitor general and Parker. wrote "nolle-prossed" across the face of the two 1926 indictments against Walter ("Eight-Ball") Rob-

The clock of life is wound but once, And no man has the power To tell just when the hands will stop At late or early hour.

God saw the road was getting rough The hills were hard to climb So be gently closed his loving eyes And whispered "Peace be Thine."

On the river a pale boatman hastened He heard the soft dip of his oar; Then from earth and sorrow he bore him Across to that beautiful shore. His devoted WIFE, and daughter VERGIE.

If Nigerian Hubby Gets Balky, Wife Cuts Food Supply

Men Wear Crowns and Pass Laws, but the Women Control Larder.

COLUMBUS. — Woman's age-old responsibility for feeding her family has been turned into a weapon of authority in one of Africa's largest tribes, according to Dr. Jack Harris, sociology instructor at Ohio State university.

Dr. Harris recently returned from a 14-month study of the Ibo tribe in Nigeria, West Africa, with its population of 4,000,000.

He found that the men wear the crowns and pass laws but the women-by their control of the food supply-exercise supreme veto power. When a husband proves recalcitrant his food supply is cut in half. Mr. Ibo usually surrenders when the first hunger pangs begin; otherwise he arranges to buy his food from some other woman in the tribe.

Experts at Ridicule.

The tribal women have other ways of gaining their ends-including ridicule, strikes, boycotts and curses.

One incident reported by Dr. Harris happened when the women found a rule adopted by the men not to their liking. The entire feminine population left the village, taking all the children, with the exception of babies in the nursing stage.

For a day and a half the men fed the crying infants, cooked, carried water, brought in firewood and performed the other tasks usually allocated to women, before being brought to their knees.

To the victors they gave goats as peace offerings and formal and informal apologies.

Dr. Harris witnessed a quaint custom known as "sitting upon a man." If a man offends a group of women they march in a body to his compound and remain to sing songs of ridicule until he apologizes.

Must Pay for Wives.

The Iboes, reported Dr. Harris, use a variation of the modern installment plan in their matchmaking. Girls are promised in mar-riage while still infants and the contract is fulfilled when the final installment is paid.

The men contract to pay anywhere from $10 to $50 for a wife. Because a husband is unwilling to lose his investment, he tries hard to please his wife or wives (some men have as many as 14). Wives who are displeased with their husbands leave and refuse to return, charging mistreatment.

Only if the wife marries again does the husband receive full repayment on his investment.

Dr. Harris, the only American ever to study the tribe, made a report of his studies entitled "The Position of Women in Nigerian Society" to the New York Academy of Science.

Excess of Men Falls in Nation

Shrinking by 100,000 a Year And Should Vanish by '55, Census Bureau Notes.

WASHINGTON.—The excess of males over females in the United States is being reduced, according to the census bureau, at the rate of nearly 100,000 a year.

In about 15 years, according to the census table, the United States should join the majority of nations in showing a female majority. The excess of female population in Germany in 1937 was nearly 1,800,000, in France about 1,500,000 and in England nearly 1,700,000.

The United States, along with other new lands like Canada and Australia, has consistently had a male majority. In 1920, the excess of males was 2,090,242. In 1930 it had fallen to 1,499,114. Preponderantly male immigration contributed to retain the male majority status but, during the last decade, immigration has ceased to be an important fac-

Peak Reached in 1910.

The peak of male excess population over female in the United States was reached in 1910, when it was 2,692,288. The excess had consistently increased with every decade except that between 1860 and 1870, when Civil war losses reduced the male excess from 727,087 to 428,759.

Although 105 to 106 males are born to every 100 female births, the higher death rate among males is offsetting this fact. The trend toward a female majority is being materially aided by the fact that women now live three years longer than men.

Average death records of the census bureau covering the last five years show that deaths among males exceeded deaths among females by 155,559 per year (787,881 male deaths to 632,322 female). To offset this annual male deficit, partially, there has been during the same five years an average of 56,770 male births in excess of female. Eliminating the effects of immigration, therefore, the annual approach to a point of feminine majority is 98,789.

Heart Disease Takes Toll. Heart disease takes 47,073 more males than females annually; automobile accidents take 19,732 more males; influenza and pneumonia, 17,168; suicides, 10,172 (14,529 male to 4,357 female); tuberculosis, 9,694; congenital malformations and diseases of infancy, 9,488, and nephritis, 7,427. The common killers in which the deaths of females exceed those of males, with average annual excess, are cancer and tumors, 10,818; and diabetes, 6,862. Maternal deaths average 12,000 annually. The one common killer which seems to show no sex favoritism is cerebral hemorrhage, embolism and thrombosis, which annually takes approximately 110,000, with only 300 more females than

Loss of males as a result of war has not been an important factor affecting sex balance in the United States. Total war losses through 150 years are not much greater than the excess deaths of males over females from accidents alone in 10 years. In fact, war losses of males, averaged through 150 years, do not approach the present male excess over female losses from suicides alone.

Diseases of the heart are now taking a toll in three years equal to war losses of 150 years.

Termites Eat $700 Bonus Bonds, but Owner Collects

NEVADA CITY, CALIF,-When Henry Lewis, war veteran, went to look for $700 in bonus bonds he had packed away, he found that termites had destroyed them. Brushing up what fragments of paper remained, he mailed them to Washington. Officials were able to identify the bonds and sent Lewis their full face value plus interest.

Lights Necessitate

More Poultry Feed Poultrymen should remember that artificial lights stimulate egg production only because they encourage greater feed consumption and that more grain should be provided when lights are used, advises J. C. Taylor, associate extension poultryman at Rutgers university.

If the amount of grain fed is increased two to four pounds per 100 birds a day so that about 14 or 16 pounds are consumed daily it will be easier for laying birds to maintain good body weight. When the limit has been reached in the amount of grain the birds will eat, a flushing mash of ground oats, ground yellow corn and milk may be fed to further aid in the maintenance of body weight o'cl ook oo will

By MEREDITH SCHOLL (Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

LESCA PAINE is a famous writer. Her name is fea-I tured in all the leading magazines of the country.

Glesca cannot attribute her achievements to any mysterious or inherited gift. Her fame is the result of hard work and study, of constant, tireless plugging, and the will to write over heart-rending discouragement. In short, Glesca is no natural-born genius, no worker of miracles; her rewards are just and well-earned.

Some few months ago the people of Glesca's home town held a reception in her honor. Among those present was one Alice Merle, a newcomer to Hamstead, a woman of some social prominence—and also a writer. Unfortunately, however, she has acquired no fame, has had little success with her literary efforts. And she is inclined to be somewhat bitter about her fate.

Despite the recognized fame of the guest of honor, Alice's regard for Glesca was somewhat skeptical. She was, in fact, heard to remark that Glesca had doubtlessly won her reputation through some sort of drag and was now trading upon the selling power of her name. She even went so far as to suggest that Glesca's stuff wasn't so good, when you compared it with real literature, and

"You actually thought the story was good?" asked Alice.

she probably wouldn't know a good story if she saw one. Of course, Alice in no way betrayed this skepticism when Glesca was within earshot. In fact she was, on the contrary, quite gushy and complimentary.

However, as the evening progressed and honor after honor was heaped on the smiling Glesca, one watching Alice's face would have noticed that skepticism and bitterness were becoming more and more in evidence.

It was toward the end of the evening that Alice succeeded in getting Glesca alone in a secluded part of the hall.

Said Alice, "My dear, I think your work is wonderful! Really! I believe I've read about everything you've had published. And now, my dear. would it be asking too much if I requested a favor?"

Glesca, though certain of the nature of the request, could do naught but smile and nod her head and hope that Alice was about to request a favor somewhat different from the usual run of favors requested of famous authors. But she was doomed to disappointment.

"My dear, I knew you wouldn't refuse. So sweet of you. The favor is really nothing much. It concerns a story I have just completed. It occurs to me that it has some merit. yet I really would appreciate your professional advice before submitting it. Would you mind?"

Ordinarily Glesca would have refused. But the situation was a little different from ordinary. In the first place, Alice was a fellow-townswoman, her hostess, in a manner of speaking. And in the second place, Glesca saw in Alice's eyes a look that was slightly baffling. The look somehow resembled a challenge. And so Glesca agreed to read Alice's manuscript, though she regretted her decision a moment after it was made. The script came to Glesca's hand on the day following, neatly typed, with Alice's name on the by-line. Glesca glanced over the first page with casual indifference. But as she delved into page two she suddenly sat upright in her chair and read on with renewed interest. At the conclusion of the story Glesca found herself amazed and somewhat puzzled. The story was-actuallya well-done piece of work. It merited publication. It was, in fact, not the assortment of jargon that she had expected.

Glesca carefully folded the script, tucked it in her handbag, caught up a hat and headed for the house of Alice received her guest gracious-They sat down together in the sitting room and looked at each other closely.

"My dear," said Glesca, "I have a confession to make. When I agreed to read your script I expected to find trash. I-I almost hoped I would. Believe me, I was tremendously surprised. It wasn't the sort of thing I expected to find "You actually thought the story was good?" asked Alice.

"I thought it was fine! Splendid! There is no reason at all why you can't place it with one of the better magazines. In fact, if you are willing, I'll handle the placing of it for

Alice looked thoughtful. She gazed through the window. She studied the floor. And at length her eyes came to dwell upon the kind, smiling and friendly countenance of Glesca.

Said Alice: "My dear, you have been honest and fair with me. I, too, have a confession to make. I feel guilty and ashamed. The story that I gave you to read was not written by me. I don't know who the author is. I clipped it haphazardly from a magazine and typed it off before coming to the reception. You see, heretofore I have misunderstood famous authors. I had made the remark that your stuff wasn't so good compared with that of real literary geniuses, and that you probably wouldn't know a good story if you saw one—and I wanted to prove that I was right."

Glesca smiled, a gracious smile. "Thank you for telling me. I'm so glad you decided it was the best thing for you to do. For, you see, I knew all the time that your story was a re-write, and, I'm ashamed to admit, I led you on, hoping you'd let me try and place it for you. I'm so glad it turned out this way. Now, I'm sure we can be the best of friends."

Alice was frankly aghast!

"You knew it all the time! How wonderful! Now I'm positive that I was wrong in remarking that you couldn't tell a good story from a bad one. My dear, I'm thrilled!"

"In a way," said Glesca, "I'm thrilled, too. For you see, the story you clipped haphazardly from the magazine happened to be one of my stories!"

Film Sound Trickery Gives Way to Reality

Studio sound departments no longer can be classified under the heading of magic. The time was when trickery had to be resorted to in almost every effect. Today, sounds, like everything else in a picture, de-pend on realism. If a landslide is wanted, sound engineers go out and create one for their microphones. If it's the buzz of a mosquito, that's what it really is. Sometimes, when sounds are required to be unusual for certain effects, magic comes in. But, nothing is too great to be tackled, nothing too small to take

In the early days the micro-phone could not be moved and, if actors moved, there was a microphone at various places and the actor was cautioned not to move from one mike before he had finished a speech or to start talking until he got directly under or in front of another. Mikes were hidden in bouquets, in lamps, under tables, just about everywhere.

Ten years have done a lot to sound recording and the story of the progress is too technical to interest the layman. Today, the microphone does move, on the end of a swinging Sound progress has made many things possible. Not so long ago it was necessary to have special cartridges for gun shots; they made much smoke but little sound because sound valves might be shattered by the explosion. Today, a cannon shoots off under a mike with no ill effects.

But difficulties also have arisen, most of which have been licked for years. Long ago it was learned that deadening a window sill with blotting paper prevents rain falling on it from "popping." Silk has a tendency to crackle, so it's usually lined with linen. Newspapers must be dampened or they'll rustle too loudly. Typewriters must have soft rollers for keys to strike. It is now a strict rule that every extra have rubber heels. Actors have been known to ruin scenes merely because of jingling coins in their pockets. And, in orchestral recordings, in productions like "Strike Up the Band," conductors have caused strange disturbances by swishing their slender batons too vigorously in crescendo passages. All simple problems, but they keep cropping up. Sometimes they take hours to

These observations were recently made by Douglas Shearer, director of recording for M.G.M.

Uses His Head

Down the long road raced the valiant horseman spurring his steed to ever greater effort. He was bringing the news from Ghent to Aix. He was the Spartan youth racing from Thermopylae to Athens. He was the heroic young officer carrying a message to Garcia. He was, wrapped up in one individual, all the great romantic bearers of tidings-not forgetting Paul Revere.

More specifically, however, he was Robert Rafel, Western Union messenger No. 297, running pell mell down the corridor on the first floor of the Chicago Daily News building.

And, as he burst through the Madison street door, Robert crashed head first through a large sheet of plate glass that workmen were preparing to place in a second-story window. When he emerged from the resulting daze, the youth found he had suffered only a slight cut on one arm. H. Eisenscimel, chief of the glazing crew, congratulated Robert on his escape and pointed out that the glass, 6 feet 6 inches by 9 feet 10 inches, was worth about $100.

Whatever you wish from your family, a special Peach Cake for dinner will help win it. For righthand aid on this dessert, try the new self-rising flour now on the market. The new product has lots of advantages over the old self-rising flour, because action is slowed so that by the time your cake is mixed, the baking powder is only starting to work. Thus, you lose none of the "risin" power.

Here is the recipe to try with the new flour:

Cream 7 tablespoons or a scant ½ cup fat. Add ¾ cup sugar. Cream until sugar has dissolved. Add 1 egg and stir in thoroughly (do not beat). Add 1/2 cup milk and 11/2 cups self-rising flour alternately. Add 1 teaspoon extract. Pour into a greased and floured cake pan, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Whip 1 pint whipping cream and add 1/4 cup sugar. Split the cake. Spread lower half with 1 cup crushed peaches and half the whipping cream. Add top layer, and pile with another cup of crushed peaches and remaining cream. Garnish with peach slices.

Woman Has Ships' 'Ghosts' as Hobby

North Carolina Home Filled With Relics of Sea.

NAG HEAD, N. C .- Mrs. Rida Hollowell, a smiling little woman with white hair, lives with a hundred ghosts, but all of them are friendly. To look at Mrs. Hollowell, one would think that water colors or china painting might be her hobby, but as a matter of fact, she is more interested in shipwrecks than anything else. And it is the "ghosts" of these sunken ships she collects.

For years she has lived on this wreck-strewn coast, the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," and has combed a hundred miles of beach for relics from broken ships. Her collection is unsurpassed.

The Hollowell cottage, known as "The Wreckage," contains at least one relic of every major shipwreck that has occurred from Norfolk, Va., to Ocracoke since the battleship Huron broke up on the Diamond Shoals

In addition, there are hundreds of items from wrecks all over the Atlantic which eventually are washed ashore in this section of the Carolina outer banks.

The outside of the cottage is covered with the nameplates taken from wrecked ships. All the steps to the porch were used at sea. There is even a rope ladder running to the second floor, "just in case the boys want to slip away for a late date," Mrs. Hollowell explains.

The walls of the cottage are covered with flags, maps and guns. Every corner has its quota of souvenirs, including ships' medicine chests, and visiting doctors spend hours pouring over their contents. Logbooks and ship's papers delight historians.

Feeding Dry Cows

If in poor condition a dry cow may need as much as 10 to 12 pounds grain per day to put her in good condition so that she will milk heavy during her next lactation. A high producing cow cannot maintain her body weight with the feed she can eat, so it is highly important that we put her in good condition when she freshens, says E. H. Hanson, University of Minnesota. The farm population of the United States on January 1, 1940, was 32,-245,000, the largest in 24 years. It was close to the 1916 all-time high record of 32,530,000.

JESUS CALLS TO PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 18:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lord, teach us to pray.
—Luke 11:1.

Imitations may be so clever as to cause us to marvel, but to the one who knows the real thing, they are "just imitations." Particularly is that true in the realm of the spiritual. Make-believe faith in God fools only the hypocrite and those who know as little as he does of real Christianity. Prayer is undoubtedly the greatest privilege of the Christian, put-ting him and his life in touch with the omnipotence of God. But it must be real prayer, not just some formal exercise which masquerades under the name of prayer. We combine the two parables of our lesson to contrast prevailing prayer and powerless prayer.

I. Prevailing Prayer. The prayer which really lays hold upon God and brings results must be the expression of a life of prayer. It is no occasional effort brought about by a great need or a deep sorrow. We must pray

1. Without Ceasing (v. 1). Jesus had just been talking of the trying days which were to come (Luke 17:26-30). To stand fast for Christ in a day when almost all the influences are against such faith, a man needs real prayer or he will surely

To pray constantly is not necessarily to be saying the words of prayer, but is the outreach of the life toward God, the setting of our minds on things above. That we can and may do at all times and in all places.

2. With Assurance (vv. 2-9). If an unjust judge will respond just to escape the constant plea of a widow, we may rest assured that God, who is just and looks upon His people in loving-kindness, will not fail to respond to their plea. He says, "Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3).

3. In Humility (vv. 13, 14). come to God, not to demand, but to humbly plead the blood of Jesus That was what the publican did. When he said, "Lord, be merciful," he used the word "propitiated," which refers to the mercy seat on which the blood was sprinkled as a propitiation for sin (see Exod. 25:17, 18, 21; Heb. 9:5; Lev. 16:5). Such a plea brought salvation to the repentant sinner.

II. Powerless Prayer.

We use the word prayer here in the broad sense, for strictly speaking there is no such thing as prayer without power. Men call it prayer, but it accomplishes nothing because it is offered

1. In Self-sufficiency (vv. 9, 11). Those who trust "in themselves" will naturally do what the Pharisee did; he "prayed with himself." "He had an intellectual conviction, but that does not make a contact with God. Hell is full of intellectual conviction. God? Oh, yes. But he was so occupied with himself he could not get away from himself" (Mor-

2. With Boastful Pride (vv. 9, 11, 12). Despising others, the Pharisee boasted of his own fine character and good works. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble" (James 4:6). It is proper that a man should live uprightly. but if it only makes him self-righteous it becomes a barrier between him and God (Luke 18:14).

3. For the Sake of Publicity (v. 11, cf. v. 13). While the publican hung his head and stood afar off to offer his prayer, the Pharisee apparently took a prominent place and spoke with a loud voice. Jesus described that kind of prayers in Matthew 6:5 as just putting on a publicity "stunt." When men had seen them pray, the transaction was fin-They had not been in touch with God at all.

The result of the two prayers is so well described by Dr. J. Campbell Morgan that we quote his words: "Two men at prayer. One, eloquently, in phrases circling round his own personality with which he was pre-eminently pleased. The other, hating his sin, and grasping out after the infinite and tender compassion of God to operate for him.

. . . The man who justified him-self remained unjustified. The man who sought the compassion of God went back to his house justified."

There Is Another Life

I cannot believe, and cannot be brought to believe, that the purpose of our creation is fulfilled by our short existence here. To me the existence of another world is a necessary supplement of this, to adjust its inequalities, and imbue it with moral significance.—Thurlow Weed.

'Emerald Isle' of Ireland Noted for Green Foliage

Among the islands of the world, Ireland ranks high in public interest It is not the largest but it is the homeland of the Irish people and that has set it apart in the minds

Ireland is nearly the same size as the State of Maine. It is not much more than one-third as large as the nearby island of Great Brit-

If Ireland had as many people per square mile as Great Britain, it would have a population of more than 16,000,000. As it is, the population is less than 4,500,000.

An old name for Ireland is "Emerald Isle." This name refers to the fact that the island is extremely rich in plant life, with green grass, shrubs, and trees. An emerald is green, and so is Ireland. An Irish poet, Dr. William Drennan, is believed to have been the first to use the term "Emerald Isle," when he composed a poem about a century and a half ago.

Other names for Ireland are "Erin" and "Eire." They are two forms of the same name.

"Eire" is pronounced "Aireh." It is used as an official name for the part of Ireland formerly known as the Irish Free State. It includes all of Ireland except six counties in the

At the start of the European war, Eire declared herself "neutral." Northern Ireland, on the other hand, stood by Great Britain from the outbreak of warfare. The people were firmly for the British in their fight against Hitler.

Eliminate Elasticity

Through Improved Process An improved process for the finishing of viscose rayon fabrics, which is expected further to stimulate the steady expansion of the use of rayon in the apparel field, has been developed. The new development, which involves the control of elasticity in rayon much in the same manner as sanforizing controls the shrinkage of cotton textiles, will be made available to rayon finishers

The elimination of extreme elasticity in rayon is based on a chemical formula and application of the process to the finishing of viscose fabrics does not require additional machinery. This feature, and the fact that both rayon finishers and consumers have desired some development which would eliminate both the shrinking and stretching characteristics of rayon apparel, likely will result in a substantial demand for the process.

While it is generally recognized that sanforizing as applied to cotton is still on the upgrade, the increasing tendency to substitute rayon for cotton was beginning to have a retarding effect. It is estimated that upwards of two-thirds of the cotton mills employing the sanforizing process have, in recent years, substituted, in varying proportion of capacity, the weaving of rayon for cot-

Grouping Unit Furniture

In the first place, an interesting grouping of unit furniture against long wall frequently provides a center of interest in a room that is without an architectural focal point. And it invariably presents an opportunity for fresh and different arrangements of furniture. For by making full use of all the wall areas it immediately opens up the central floor space and makes the room seem larger and less crowded. A large rectangular room with windows across one end and two long walls to contend with, is difficult to give distinction to, but you can succeed by using long, low tiers of unit shelves opposite each other along both long walls. The shelves of the unit pieces may be filled with books which lend a deeply glowing color accent. You could arrange a collection of antique art objects along the top to add greater distinc-

Automobile Sickness Recent authorities of nausea resulting from prolonged automobile riding have led some authorities to believe that frequently such carsickness results from ocular fatigue, reports the Better Vision institute.

When an automobile is moving rapidly, objects flit in and out of one's line of vision. If the eye mechanism is in balance and functions easily, the images formed on each retina are transformed simultaneously to the brain, where they fuse properly. In the case of muscular or other unbalance in the seeing mechanism, considerable strain is placed upon the eyes to bring about the adjustment needed to obtain a simultaneous recording in the brain of the images supplied by both eyes. It is believed, says the institute, that the efforts to make those adjustments cause fatigue that often results in nausea.

History Moved, Not Man

Alexander Scheffer lived from birth to death within an area of three blocks in the town of Schafferstown, Pa., and still was a resident of four different counties. He was born in Chester county, married in Lancaster county, died in Dauphin county and was buried in Lebanor county. The territory in which he lived was subdivided from 1712 t 1786, thus accounting to the changes, historical researchers sa

New Aircraft Shell Sensitive

Can Be Exploded by Force Of Heavy Rain, Army Experts Say.

WASHINGTON .- The army has developed an aircraft cannon shell that is so sensitive it can be exploded by the force of heavy rain, war department officials said.

Ordnance technicians, it also was learned, have developed a version of the famous French 75 mm. field gun, which can be mounted on heavy bombers. Experiments with it, including firing from the air, were started more than six months

Both experiments are part of the army's attempt to increase the fire power of combat planes. That need has been demonstrated by the war in Europe in which all types of fighting planes have become increasinginvulnerable to machine gun fire by the use of heavier armor and self-sealing fuel tanks.

Two other proposals for increasing fire power are being studied and may be incorporated in standard specifications in the near future.

One is a plan to mount two 20 mm. and one 37 mm. cannon on pursuit planes. The other is to equip fighters with six heavy .50 caliber machine guns instead of eight .30 caliber machine guns, the armament said to be carried by British pursuit planes.

Explodes in Wing. OV

The highly sensitive explosive shell for 37 mm. aircraft cannon, war department sources said, is a major development in air armament. Until recently the United States air corps and those of Great Britain and Germany, one source said, have been unable to develop a fuse fast enough to explode aircraft cannon shells before they pass through a target plane. As a result, ordinary projectiles, similar to a rifle bullet, have been widely

A "dead" projectile is destructive if it hits a vital spot on enemy planes, the motor, gas tank, bomb rack or crew quarters, but it will pass comparatively harmlessly through a wing. An explosive shell, however, blows out enough surface wherever it hits to bring a plane down in most cases.

The ultimate objective of both the army and European belligerents is a time fuse that will explode aircraft cannon shells "in the vicinity" of the target like anti-aircraft and artillery shells.

The great speed of planes carrying cannon and the target planes, and the fact that the range is not fixed have been apparently insurmountable obstacles in the search for an aircraft cannon time fuse.

Marshall Explains Cannon. Experimental firing of big 75's from heavy bombers was first disclosed by Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, in testimony before a house appropriations committee on the preparedness program. Since then, army sources disclosed, a special recoil mechanism and a shorter barrel have been developed to make the gun more suitable for aircraft mounting.

Use of 75's on bombers has not been extensive, these sources said, because the weight of the gun and mounting, more than a ton, cuts both speed of the plane and the weight of the bomb load.

Air corps and ordnance experts are now studying the practicability of installing three cannon on pursuit planes but there have been no indications a mounting design for this project has been developed.

1914 Assault Drives Aged Man to Police

DENVER .- William Kearse, 67, of Denver, is "a little curious" to know a man he struck on the head with hammer in 1914 survived.

He told Detective Henry Genty he attacked the man in Detroit and then escaped by jumping into the Detroit river.

"I've worried some and I'm a little curious after 26 years," explained Kearse, who was jailed pending a check with Detroit cffi-

John Doe Sentenced, Concealing Identity

PHILADELPHIA. - Police have John Doe locked up.

He refused to move or talk. He maintained his silence at the police station and even refused food. So they gave him the name of John Doe and sentenced him to three months in the house of correction.

'Enough's Enough,' Wife Declares After 60 Years

MONTREAL.—There's a limit to everything, Mrs. Pierre Riendeau, 79 years old, told a court when she asked a legal separation from her 86-year-old husband. The judge asked how long the couple had been married. 'Sixty years," she answered. "Why are you seeking a separation after all that time?" the court

"Enough's enough," she said. The court agreed to hear the suit.

Beauty Is Not Necessary For Success in Movies

If you are hard to photograph, young woman, the chances are you would make a good motion picture

That is, being hard to photograph is the first step. You'll have to have talent, you'll have to study, and you'll have a lot of other chores to do. But you can rest assured, right from the beginning, if you haven't one of those even, regular and perfectly beautiful muggs, that you have a chance.

The authority for this statement is Charles Lang, A. S. C. Lang is a head photographer at Paramount studios.

"After 20 years with cameras," Lang says, "I've come to the conclusion that young girls who have beautiful, regular features, although photograph wonderfully, haven't much chance to get any where in films.

"The girls who do get ahead have character in their faces. Some aren't beautiful. In fact, some have very homely features which make them extremely difficult to photograph. But they do have a quality above and beyond beauty-something that stands out.'

Lang, who left the University of California to photograph players and has been at it ever since, asserts that the girl who looks like everyone else, although she is beautiful, doesn't have a chance.

"From the standpoint of the cameraman and the lens," he explains, "a face must have something to 'sell'—something which makes it unique, and different, and unusual. Girls with a common, ordinary va-riety of beauty should stay out of Hollywood. They're just too, too lovely to mean anything in front of a camera."

Dog Aids Mounted Police

By Finding Liquor Cache Not only do the Mounties get their men, but they've trained their dogs to get them, too. This was revealed for the first time in Canadian legal history when Constable E. Moore of the R. C. M. P. introduced Happy Black Lux, a handsome police dog, as his princi-pal "witness" in a liquor case in Regina, Sask.

The evidence, it might be said, was as clean as a hound's tooth. The constable, it must be admitted, did most of the talking, but the dog's actions did the rest

Moore told how the dog uncovered some bottles, one containing liquor, in the mangers of a barn on the farm of Christ Hamann. Hamann was found guilty and fined $50 and

The constable described how the dogs were trained to help the Mount-He related how Happy Black Lux was taken to the vicinity of Hamann's farm, under suspicion of harboring liquor, and "commanded" to make a search.

Before sending him off on a chase, Moore said, he lets the dog smell a vial of liquor containing either home brew or straight alcohol, depending on whatever the Mountie expects to find.

The dog is then released with the command: "Go find him, Happy Black Lux."

Insects' Eyes More Sensitive Eyes of some insects are much more sensitive to ultra-violet light rays than are human eyes, reports the Better Vision institute. In an experiment sunlight was passed through a quartz prism so that infrared rays fell on one area, and ultraviolet rays fell upon another area. To human eyes the red area was light, but the ultra-violet area was A nest of ants was disturbed and the ant eggs were distributed over both areas under the prism. The ants hurriedly carried the eggs out of the ultra-violet into the red area. This indicated that ultraviolet rays are visible to ants, but that infra-red rays are relatively

Always a First Time
The old clock in the tower of the New York city hall stopped at 5:221/2 p. m. one day recently for the first time since it was electrified 10 years ago. Most affected by the stoppage were the old men in the City Hall park, many of whom measure their slowly dwindling lives by the moving hour hand of the city hall clock. The clock in the mayor's room on the second floor of the same building stopped at the same time, having been cut in on the same circuit that controls the outer clock. There was considerable speculation as to what might have caused the stoppage, but the answer wasn't known until the next day when repairs were made.

Women Past 40

"The woman more than 40 years old has a struggle when thrown on her own resources," reports Miss Mary V. Robinson of Washington, public information director of the Women's Bureau of Public Employ-. . Try as we may to believe otherwise, there is still discrimination on jobs on the basis of sex . . . " A survey described by Miss Robinson suggests that older women-who often have had college training before marriage-are excellent tutors for children; may serve as companions or as expert shoppers; may direct parties; may do "fancy" cooking at homes or develop jobs in hotels and other large organizations.

Defend Our Defenders!

Demon rum is a fifth columnist who can rot the heart of a nation's moral and physical rearmament, leaving it weakened when the need for strength is greatest! These words aren't just idle speech-making, but are the considered verdict of many scientific, religious, and social service leaders who by a life-time of study know the human and economic costs resulting from widespread use of a narcotic drink.

During the World War sale of all alcoholic beverages was forbidden on military property, certain vice conditions were forbidden in camp areas, and sale of alcoholic beverages to those in military uniforms was forbidden. As the present defense effort gained momentum Demon Rum was back in the army in the guise of 3.2 beer. He also was permitted in many naval stations in the same disguise, although all alcoholic beverages are prohibited aboard ship. Recalling the historic connections between liquor and social vice, national welfare groups, led by the W.C.T.U., have opened a movement designed to dry up and clean up military camps and camp areas.

Sweep It Out Because of the immediate demand for helping the conscript army and the military effort, their program not only seeks elimination of beer from camps but cleansing of the surrounding communities from liquor and commercial vice, not particularly as a social reform now but as a plain common sense effort for national de-

Faced by a powerful, vocal liquor traffic and by a public inertia in moral matters which brought repeal, these social welfare leaders face a tremendous job-but they are going ahead with it!

Chemists May Introduce More Maple Ingredients

BURLINGTON, VT .- Spurred by a greater public demand for maple sap by-products other than maple syrup, chemists are conducting a search for more maple ingredients to put on the market. Work has already begun on pure maple jellya maple concentrate that would be free from sugar for use in ice cream and candy manufacture. Other expected developments are the improvement of granulated maple sugar and the use of maple syrup for curing hams and bacon.

Hole inket Brings

Red Face to Montreal Man MONTREAL.—Police would not reveal his name, but one of St. James street's better known financiers had a hole in his pocket that caused no little embarrassment. He went into one of the banks to deposit money, but it was missing. A hurried call to headquarters brought two radio cars, sirens screaming to the scene. He demonstrated how he shoved his wallet with $1,500 into an inner coat pocket-"like this." Then, he paused, got red in the face, pushed his hand and arms right down through the pocket into the lining and came out with the wallet.

Imperial Muffins for the Week-End Guests

for breakfast when guests arrive this week-end?

Starting with the fruit, why not have sliced honeydew with sweet, red cherries scattered over it and over the plate—for appeal, you know. Or serve chilled, fresh apricots and seedless grapes on glass plates (on grape leaves, if you have them). Follow with eggs baked in bacon rings. And for this, simply ring muffin cups with bacon, drop in the egg, bake until the egg is set, and there you are, pretty and easy. It's taken for granted you'll make plenty of hot coffee.

You can use your favorite muffin recipe with the new, self-rising flour, omitting both baking powder and salt. But for your aid, here is one that's foolproof. Remember, as with all muffins, to work fast and mix ingredients only enough to blend

Dog Tale: While in New York on business E. T. H. Shaffer of Walterboro, S. C., told of the good turn done for him by Ted, his huge St. Bernard. Mr. Shaffer, well known as a lecturer, has extensive realestate holdings in his home town and, accompanied by the ever-faithful Ted, goes out on rent-collecting rounds the fifteenth of each month. Recently he was drafted by the Lafayette Highway association (U.S. 15A) to tour the country on a goodwill campaign. Mr. Shaffer was not averse to making the trip but there was the matter of rent collections while he was away. On his return, however, he found that his worry had been unfounded. Ted, sensing his duty, had made the complete rounds on the fifteenth and, thanks to the reminder by the St. Bernard, most of the tenants had taken their payments to the Shaffer home.

. . . Durable: Various reports having reached them as to what he was doing in Sing Sing, friends of Joseph A. Ruddy, former physical examiner of the civil service commission, made inquiries and were not at all surprised to find that Ruddy was keeping the guards and other prison employees in condition by coaching them in handball. Ruddy, sentenced in October to from one to two years for taking illegal fees from candidates for examinations, has been an athlete all his life. In 27 years of competition, he piled up 1,650 points for the New York Athletic club. He holds 800 swimming medals and, in various competitions, he, with his two sons and two daughters, has won 1,500 swimming championships. And that Joe Ruddy at 62 is still active in sports was no surprise either. His grandfather rode in a St. Patrick's day parade in Ireland when he was 104, 1::

Relief: The medical and surgical supply committee maintains a messenger service, which calls at the homes of those who wish to make medical donations for shipment to emergency hospitals in England. Recently, while Mrs. Millicent Rogers Balcom, executive secretary, was at her desk, a young voice on the telephone requested that a messenger be sent immediately to a certain address. Shortly afterward a messenger arrived at the place and rang the bell. A little girl, a package in her hand, opened the door. "Here, take this before Mommy comes home," she said. "It's very good cod liver oil."

End Piece: Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, Bing Crosby's song-writing team, work and relax together in perfect harmony-except for one thing. In most instances these patients slept in the same rooms with the other inmates, used the same bathing and toilet facilities, ate at the same tables, and received the same attentions as the others. Rarely was their laundry and bed linen changed more than once a week. In some instances only every two weeks

The proposed hospitals are designed to care for such individuals. They would provide a place for the aged who are chronically ill, but also for children who suffer from incurable or chronic sicknesses. The patients cared for in these State Hospitals would receive constant medical and nursing care and attention and not ust periodic visits from the County Health Officer. Each county would have the privilege of sending patients to these hospitals at a cost of the county of 75c per day. This is slightly less than per day. This is slightly less than the cost of maintaining the same peron at our County Home. No patient would be admitted who could pay the cost of proper hospital care elsewhere I am glad to state that this Bill will probably be passed. New Idea for Propelling

Planes in Water Advanced GREAT FALLS, MONT.—Glenn S. Berg of Fortine, Mont., a hamlet of 50 population near the Canadian border, claims to have invented a method of propelling airplanes that "will drive a plane forward, backward, up and down," and permit it to

'travel in water at great speed." Berg, who says the versatile motor is his fourth invention, has of-fered it to the government.

"My system will drive a plane forward, backward, up, down," Berg said, "and it allows planes to land on compression after motor failures. I am not trying to work out a system of control so the plane will stand still in air. My plane will travel in water at great speed."
